Wilmington, Charlotte and Greensboro Highs Form Quadrangular Meet With First Year Men.

Time schedule and a number of special features were announced here yesterday for the Carolina-Georgia Tech and Carolina freshmen - Wilmington, Charlotte and Greensboro high track meets to be held here Saturday afternoon.

The field events, varsity and freshman, will begin promptly at 2:30 o'clock and run through 4 o'clock. The track events will begin at 3 o'clock and continue through 4:30 o'clock.

The varsity meet between Carolina and Georgia Tech will see the introduction of several features never before used in a dual meet in the south. Starting blocks will be used for the first time in the spring events to make the races between such stars as Ed Hamm, Tech's southern champion, and Charlie Farmer, Carolina's sophomore phenom, even faster.

A mile relay between Tech, who finished second, and Carolina, who finished third in the mile relay at the southern indoor championships, will be run off for the first time in a southern dual meet.

All contestants, varsity and freshman, will wear numbers on their backs, so that spectators can keep up with the winners in each event.

The whole round of events in both varsity and freshman events will be run off on strict time schedule so as to offer a continuous panorama of action, and all details will be broadcast to spectators in the stands.

Georgia Tech, led by such stars as Hamm and Graydon, has one of the greatest galaxies of stars in the Southern Conference this year. Carolina hasn't lost a dual meet in eight seasons. A contest between the two ancient rivals promises an interesting track feast.

Good performances are expected likewise in the freshman meet. The Carolina frosh have the makings of a strong team this year, while Wilmington, Greensboro and Charlotte high regularly set the pace in North Carolina high school track.

FINALS OF TENNIS TOURNEY TODAY

Yeomans Meets Merritt For Varsity Honors; Grant Meets Hines In Freshman Division.

The varsity and freshman tennis tournaments will be brought to a close this afternoon on the University courts. The freshman finals will be held at 2:30 and the varsity meet will follow immediately afterwards.

Hines and Grant, finalists in the freshman division, met for the title last fall, which Hines won after several hard-fought sets. This is the second meeting for the two southern amateur champions, Grant representing the senior and Hines the junior division.

Yeomans and Hendlin will meet for the varsity honors. Yeomans defeated E. K. Graham in the semi-finals the first of the week. The match between Hendlin and Merritt was probably the closest of any of the semi-finals. Hendlin won in straight deuced sets, 7-5, 7-5.

BATTERS HOLDING A FAIR AVERAGE

Tar Heels Get 29 Base Hits, Including 4 Doubles and 3 Triples Out of 99 Times At Bat.

A compilation of statistics for the first three games of the season show that the Carolina team batting average is .293. Out of 99 time at bat the Tar Heel sluggers have cracked out 29 base hits, including 4 doubles and 3 triples.

Carolina's moundsmen seem to disprove the old idea that pitchers are weak hitters. Longest heads the list with a perfect average of one time at bat and one hit for a percentage of 1.000. Wright got three out of four and Fleming two out of four times at bat. Tom and Paul Edwards have both seen mound service but have no legal at bats scored against them; so the batting average for the Carolina pitching staff is .750 for three opening games of this season.

Obie Davis, outfielder, has been most consistent in turning his times at bat into base blows. Out of 7 legal times at bat he has poled out five safeties, for a percentage of .714.

The complete batting average for all players who have seen action in the Springfield and Cornell games follows:

Player	G	AB	H	PCT
Longest	2	1	1	1.000
Wright	2	4	3	.750
Davis	3	7	5	.714
Fleming	2	4	2	.500

Warren Completes Training for Bout

Add Warren, foremost of the University's alumni engaged in professional boxing, wound up his training in the Tin Can and left Tuesday afternoon for Wilmington, where he will take on "Big Boy" Roper of Indianapolis, Ind., in a ten-rounder at the academy of music Friday night.

The bout is regarded as an important step in Add's "comeback" campaign, begun recently in New York with a victory over Buck Weaver, sensational Kansan, and followed up by his decision over Sid Terris, another former student here, in a bout held on March 20 in Wilson.

Add appeared to be in fine shape in his recent work outs in the Tin Can. He says he feels that he is in better shape than he was for the Terris match and is raring to go.

Little is known about Roper except that he is no setup and should provide tough opposition for the Tar Heel battler. He has not such an impressive record as Warren, but holds a decision over "Big Boy" Peterson, whom Carnera bowled over in one round with such impressive style in the Italian's first American bout.

SIDELIGHTS
by Sports Editor

A recent issue of the Old Gold and Black, collegiate newspaper of Wake Forest College, recently carried an interesting account on its sports page concerning the tiddly-winks championship of Wake Forest. Since the Tar Heel sports world seems to be so rapidly accepting new sports such as "Doug," fencing, ping pong, midget golf and soccer, why not adopt tiddly-winks? For the furtherance of this splendid pastime which can be played in both fair and foul weather, we present excerpts from the account of the match.

"'Firpo' Hipps, halfback and pugilist extraordinary, staged a great rally in the last minute of play to make sensational flips of his last two buttons and thus gain for himself the title of tiddly-winks champion of Wake Forest College, winning over his aspiring opponents, Lanning, star pitcher; Ty Jones, basketball captain, and Roy Kinsey, track ace. The exciting game which decided the tiddly-winks championship of the college took place on the floor of the local gym in the first 'night game' of this nature.

"'Timekeeper' Utley, as usual, called the game exactly on time at 8 o'clock. The four players wearing rompers, gathered at the center of the gym and squatted down on the floor in a circle around the tiddly-wink pot."

"Kinsey, being the first to play, took a pot shot, but was wild and his pink button jumped over the bowl, settling down fully 13 inches from the goal. Kinsey was strong on his tiddle that time, but too weak with his wink. Hipps played next, but displayed bad form when his button went straight up and came down to rest again in its original position.

"Jones then brought his red man up to the firing position, and, holding his tiddler carefully in his left hand, pressed the edge of the button with such accuracy that it made a perfect arc as it passed through the air to land squarely in the center of the pot. The outburst of applause following this great exhibition of form brought a faint smile of pride to the otherwise philosophical face.

"In the middle of the fourth quarter a substitution was made, 'Pete' Sawyer for Kinsey, when Roy had to be taken out of the game due to the pain resulting when he cut the tip of his fingernail while making a difficult tiddle.

"Hipps returned to his old form when a telegram was received (C. O. D.) from his co-ed friend at N. C. State College, wishing him success and stating she was leaving for Wake Forest immediately, since the State College boys didn't appreciate her presence there. On his next go 'Firpo' flipped his lavender-colored button into the bowl with such force that the glass was completely shattered. Dr. Hubert Poteat graciously offered a new pot from his own private tiddly-wink set which he carries with him everywhere. The game was resumed and Hipps again tiddled a perfect shot to sink his last button and win the game.

"Governor Max Gardner presented the trophy, a new Chrysler '77' sport roadster."

Baseball Team Leaves For Two Game Series At Athens With University Of Georgia

Fourteen Players With Coach Ashemore and Manager Sickles Leave for Week-end Games

BULLDOGS HEAVY HITTERS

Rosthein, and Downes Lead Georgians In Slugging; Tar Heels In Good Shape.

The Carolina baseball squad left here yesterday for a jaunt into Peachland for games today and Saturday at Athens with the University of Georgia.

Fourteen players made the trip, along with Coach Jim Ashmore and Manager Art Sickles. They were Captain Maus, catcher; Fleming, Wright and Longest, pitchers; Jackson, Rand, Whitehead, Lufty and Johnson, infielders; and Davis, Sher, McKinney, Blythe and House, outfielders.

The Georgia games will be the third and fourth of the week for the Tar Heels, and will put them to a severe test.

Georgia, led by such slugging football stars as Rothstein, Downes, and others, has proved a tough club for early season foes, and the Tar Heel mound forces are in none too good shape.

Auburn Wright, the other veteran on the Tar Heel pitching force, was hit freely by Cornell, but may round into form on this southern jaunt. Cecil Longest, the other pitcher being taken along, is a rookie but has considerable steam and stuff and will undoubtedly get his baptism of fire.

The rest of the club is in good shape. Captain Maus at the backstop heads a snappy infield that shows a veteran at every post but first and has been showing splendidly in four opening games.

Of the outfielders, Sher, McKinney and House bat from the right side, and Davis and Blythe from the left, so that Coach Jim Ashmore will probably shift his gardeners with Georgia's hurlers. Blythe and Davis, both rookies have been coming out especially fast and are being counted on heavily.

The game which was to have been played with Washington and Lee yesterday was called off on account of rain.

GOLFERS PREPPING FOR NEXT WEEK'S SERIES OF GAMES

The varsity golf team is working hard to be in top form for its three matches next week, during which it will oppose William and Mary on Wednesday, Wake Forest on Friday, and Duke on Saturday. All of these meets will be staged on the Hope Valley course, Carolina's home grounds.

Several challenge matches are being played to determine places on the team. Notable among the changes which have taken place as a result of these is Luther Stewart's 7-6 victory over Ben Goodes which puts Stewart in third place.

As warming-up practice for the intercollegiate meets the varsity will take on the freshmen golfers Monday and Tuesday. The frosh, with such stars as Adams, Laxton and others, promise spirited competition.

The varsity lineup at present is as follows:

1. Meade Willis
2. Charlie Chatham (C)
3. Luther Stewart
4. Ben Goodes
5. June Adams
6. Willis Henderson

The freshman team remains unchanged, and matches will be played off among them this week for positions. The following is the present frosh ranking:

1. Joe Adams
2. Fred Laxton
3. Raymond Chatham
4. Billy O'Brien
5. "Doc" Ballenger

MORE GIRLS THAN BOYS ENTERED IN DEBATE CONTEST

Reports which have been received at the central office here from participating schools of the high school debating union of North Carolina indicate that the stage is set for the state-wide high school debating contest tonight.

Seven hundred and seventy-six student debaters representing 194 high schools in 79 counties will discuss the question in the triangular debates on Friday evening as to whether North Carolina should adopt the proposed constitutional amendment which would authorize the General Assembly to classify property for purposes of taxation.

The high schools which win both sides in the triangular contests will send their teams to Chapel Hill to take part on April 17 and 18 in the final contest for the Aycock Memorial Cup.

Girls will outnumber boys as contestants in Friday's high school debates, it was stated today. Returns which have been tabulated from 180 out of the total 194 participating high schools show that these 180 schools will be represented by 381 girls and 339 boys.

GEORGE ARLISS IN "THE GREEN GODDESS" AT THE CAROLINA TODAY

Despite the fact that he wears a monocle, and has for many years during his long stage career, George Arliss, star of "The Green Goddess" which shows at the Carolina theatre today, is a very modest man as to clothes.

This is all the more remarkable because Arliss' father, a most delightful gentleman, was known as one of the most fastidious dressers in the Bloomsbury district of London. He nearly always appeared in a topper and morning coat, and his one peculiarity was that he always carried another topcoat carelessly thrown over his right shoulder.

"They called him 'The Duke of Bloomsbury,'" said Arliss, "because he was so well dressed. I was never able to learn why he carried the other topcoat, but my suspicion was that it was because he had a worn or torn place on the right shoulder of the coat he was wearing!"

Bloomsbury, where Arliss was born, was one of the most respectable sections of London. His father, quite a character, started three newspapers at various times, any one of which might have been a success had his father had the ability to carry any project through. But the old gentleman was the kind of a person who had tremendous enthusiasm for a time, and then lost all interest.

He always wore a monocle, as Arliss does now, whether in a character role in pictures or on the stage, or in real life. Arliss enjoys it, not because he is making a show, but because it is as ordinary to him as it would be to the average American boy to see his father wearing spectacles while reading the evening newspaper.

"The Green Goddess" is Mr. Arliss' first Vitaphone production for Warner Bros. It is a new version of the famous stage play in which this star made such a big hit. Assisting him in the Vitaphone production are such notable players as Alice Joyce, H. B. Warner, Ralph Forbes and Nigel de Brulier. Al Green directed and Julien Josephson wrote the screen play from the original by William Archer.

Friday afternoon and evening the final contests in play production for county and city high schools and junior colleges will be held.

A business meeting of the association, and technical discussions of matters of royalties, make-up, and model making will make up the program for Saturday morning.

Saturday afternoon's performance will feature the final contest in original plays for the city high schools, to be staged at 3 o'clock. Immediately following, Lenoir Rhyne College will give a performance followed by a costume revue conducted by Miss Elba Henninger of Greensboro College.

Guest performances by the Playlikers of Greensboro and the Carolina Playmakers, following a director's supper at 6 o'clock, will wind up the program.

Professor Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, will announce the winners in all the contests and present the awards at 10 o'clock, to close the festival.

Student Body Will Elect Officers Today

tual concern among students, the action of the student council as an arbitrary rather than an equity court, and the support of the proposed Student Federation of North Carolina.

Alexander summarized his aims with this significant statement: "In closing, let me say that I enter this race in the election tomorrow with a full and profound appreciation of the importance of the office for which I am running, with a realization of its responsibilities, and with the resolve to do my level best to represent each and every member of the student body to the best of my ability, and with the most careful interest in the rights of every individual on the campus."

Interest in the election has grown steadily since the reopening of the University in March. However, that this year would witness a bitter fight was in evidence since early in February. Circulars have been distributed stating qualifications of candidates and many meetings have been conducted in the dormitories.

groups, free to carry on the duties of the important office as would seem right to me and the best counsel I could secure, I consented to accept their support and buck the un-buckable machine that had controlled politics.

In such a role, I am the opposition candidate, proud of the confidence such leaders have expressed in me, glad to place my name before the student electorate, and hopeful that the best interests of that student body will be served. My principles, I think, are right, and I shall not lose even if I am defeated—because the student body shall at least have had a right to decide which men it will take for its officers.

II.

It is my view that platforms with meaningless planks are useless and fraudulent. My second question then is brief as to answer.

Generally, I intend, if elected, to devote my time, ability and efforts unstintingly in working for the best interests of the student body and the University.

Specifically, our honor system will be the basis of my policy. Nothing else should be the foundation for student government at the University.

This is our greatest tradition and one of the greatest things in our University.

I do not think a set constitution, laying down all offenses and penalties, and setting out rights and duties, necessary or desirable. Carolina men know the gentleman's code and can live up to such code without a rulebook.

The honor offenses are cheating, stealing and lying. No self-respecting person indulges in these things, and for those who do, the gate should ever be wide open for them to take a speedy departure. These offenses are personal and individual, and the remedy for them is clear.

And for them I shall try to get the faculty to give complete authority to the student council. Your own body should be able to try you for anything you may do, and it alone should have this power.

Of social offenses the most common are drinking, gambling and hazing. All three are on the decline, I am thankful to observe, and can be treated justly according to the circumstances of each case as a matter of routine and without great difficulty.

That, in brief, is my stand. One thing more. If I win, I go into office a free man, under pledges to no one, so that I may thus be entire free and able to do honorably what the majority of student opinion demands.

Sincerely,

nical mastery of her instrument and an unusual stage presence. She has always had a strong sense of rhythm. When barely a year old she instantly recognized little tunes that were tapped for her, by their rhythmic content alone. When a little past two years of age she began to discover melodies and harmonies for herself. She never traced melodies with one finger but always used both hands and played the complete harmonies, an unfailing test of inherent musicianship.

At the second Asheville Musical Festival in 1921 when she was 12 years old, Miss Pugh was soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra, playing the Concerto in G minor, by Mendelssohn. A Metropolitan critic, Mr. Pierre V. R. Key wrote, "She began the Concerto with a quiet assurance which reflects a deal of charm and which conveyed to her auditors the child's consciousness of being able to perform her task. There was disclosed a fine sense of time and rhythm, a clean technique adequate for the music she undertook to play and her musical taste was that of one who has the element of restraint." The account written for Musical America by another critic says, "She revealed unexpected poise in so young an artist and in the final presto movement, the player rose to a well-proportioned climax."

'Red' Greene Elected President Student Body

Yarborough Chosen To Edit Tar Heel

WINS OVER JOE JONES BY MARGIN 1132 TO 631 VOTES

Rises To Editorship After Serving As Managing Editor For Present Year.

Will Yarborough, for three years an active and untiring member of the Tar Heel staff, justified the opinion of the majority of the Tar Heel workers by receiving a tremendous majority over his competitor for the position of editor of the daily paper.

Much interest in this particular office was demonstrated because of the candidates and their platforms. Joe Jones, who stressed the fact that he was a non-fraternity man and that he had decided writing ability, was nevertheless defeated by Will, who was nominated by a vote of 33 to 15 by the men who had worked with him for the past year or more.

The campus undoubtedly agreed with the men who were in the position to know for it elected him to the important position to the tune of 1132 votes against 635—a clear majority of 497, more than one fifth of the entire student body at the University.

The University certainly realized that the man who had been the star reporter during his freshman year, sports editor and managing editor during his sophomore year and managing editor of the first Daily Tar Heel that had ever been published deserved to be promoted to the position of editor. The congratulations and cordial goodwishes that Will Yarborough has received since the eventful occurrences of yesterday are expressive of the esteem in which he is held. And his promises and statements as to the further good management of the paper may well be relied upon by those who know his past work.

Esther Metzenthin Receives European Travel Fellowship

Dr. E. C. Metzenthin received an official notification yesterday that his daughter, Esther, has been awarded a traveling fellowship to be used in Europe. At present she is teaching and doing graduate work at Bryn Mawr College, Pennsylvania. This fellowship will enable her to spend a whole year at German universities.

She intends to embark from New York on the first of June for Rotterdam, and thence she is to proceed to Muechen, where she will take part in the summer school for foreigners. After traveling through southern Germany and Austria, she will work at the University of Boun on the Rhine from November 1, 1930 to July 31, 1931, dividing her time between research work in medical manuscripts and studying the social and religious conditions in post-war Germany.

Patterson, Brown, And Henry Class Presidents

Manning, Vice-President; Vaughan, Secretary; Baucom, Treasurer; and Albright Student Councilman Senior Class; Rollins, Weeks, Farris, And Uzzell Elected In Junior Class; Newland, McCampbell, Jones, and Barnes, Frosh Winners.

H. N. "Pat" Patterson, of High Point, present business manager of the Buccaneer, and student councilman, was elected by a vote of 271 to that of Chuck Erickson's 128. Patterson succeeds "Red" Greene as president of the senior class. Ike Manning overwhelmed Bert Haywood for the vice-presidency by 247 to 140. Evan Vaughan slept contentedly last night as secretary of the senior class, for he received 213 votes while Alan Marshall received but 173. Cliff Baucom commenced his duties as treasurer of the class of '31 while Branch Paxton graciously submitted to defeat. The result was Baucom, 237; Paxton, 148. As student councilman from that august body, the senior class, Mayne Albright won by 220 over Harris' 181.

Theron Brown is now the president of the junior class and Willard Slusser was second to Theron by a vote of 223 to 182. Charles Rollins is content with the 204 ballots that were cast in his favor as against the 188 that T. Alexander drew. Heywood Weeks is looking impatiently to the day when he can commence his duties as secretary of the class and Clyde Andrews has put away such ideas for the final score was Weeks, 237; Andrews, 147. As treasurer, Jack Farris, with 236 votes, beat B. B. Gentry, 153. Bill Uzzell is now student councilman for the junior class, having beaten Thomas Follin by a 260-127 vote.

In the sophomore election, there were, of course, many more votes cast, as the freshmen have not experienced the same viccissitudes of life as the upper classmen. Thus it is not surprising that Stud Henry beat Bob Barnett for the presidency of the sophomore class by a vote of 367-135. Erwin Walker was defeated by H. T. Newland for the position of vice-president by a 333-159 result. Mark M. Jones is the first secretary of the class of '33, having completely defeated Earel Beale by 298-193. John Mac Campbell is to be the hard-working treasurer because of the 327 votes he received against the 164 of Clyde Cantrell. And Harper Barnes is the new student councilman, for he had 352 votes at the end of the day to Tom Davis' 148.

Yesterday's Election Unique Event In University History

(By Frank J. Manheim)

Characterized as the most closely contested election ever held here, the balloting of the University's students for campus officials held the spotlight throughout yesterday. Beginning with a handful of voters at 9 o'clock in the morning and reaching the heights during chapel period and the early afternoon hours, the 1930 election was one that will be long remembered by all those who took part in it—even to the disinterested freshman who was so bewildered by the hordes of new found friends, who besieged him and pleaded for his unimportant vote, that he hoped the president's chair would be ultimately filled by Frank Connor, Addison Graham or "Red Alexander.

The usually empty space in front of the Y. M. C. A. was the scene of a milling, excited crowd, seemingly surrounded on all sides by motor cars. Small groups would occasionally break up to button-hole unsuspecting, innocent men who were approaching the polls with the idea of God, my country, and my fraternity. Frenzied lieutenants of graduate students in praetical politics came driving up in cars, filled with people never known before or to be known after this momentuous day.

Even the co-eds did their bit for the candidates. Several of them were busy on the "front line" in the "Y" and they were more than successful in procuring the votes of many absent minded girls who were so forgetful as to go through almost all the day without knowing just why the 4th of April was a red-letter day.

The line of voters was the center of a concentrated attack. The left flank of the aggressive army consisted almost wholly of pamphleteers, handbill distributors and carriers of the various lineups. The left flank was made up of good speakers and "friends" who approached each and every man on the line-up and pleaded with him in a serious hushed-tone to vote for the man, or the party. The center comprised a group of bashful campaigners who did nothing but occasionally inquire if anyone wanted campaign literature. They eventually disapperaed as the line grew longer.

The public at large was highly amused by the bitter handbill war which was carried on by several of the leading contestants. Opprobrium and insults were piled dhigh upon one another, not to mention insinuations and biting innuendoes Those spectators with a peculiar sense of humor might have been regaled to hear of the courses that political winds took during the day. More than one man's life in the University was considerably altered by yesterday's occurences.

All in all, it was a highly successful election. Candidates

278 STUDENTS ON HONOR ROLL FOR WINTER QUARTER

Thirty-Two Students Fete Of Making All "A's"; 132 Students From Arts College On List.

G. K. G. Henry announced yesterday that 278 students comprise the honor roll for the winter quarter 1930.

The school of liberal arts led with 132 on the roll. The school of education was second with 44; the commerce school followed with 40; engineering had 33 and applied science had 29. This list compares with last figures as follows: for the winter quarter of 1929, when 270 students made the honor roll, the school of liberal arts led with 148; the school of education was next with 39; commerce followed with 37; applied sciences and engineering had 23 apiece.

The freshman class had the greatest number of honor students amidst its ranks—90. The juniors had 85 while the seniors and sophomores trailed behind with 58 and 54 respectively. These figures do not suffer by a comparison with last year's figures for the same period. The freshmen of 1929 had 63 honored colleagues while the juniors had 68 and the sophomores, who are the last this year led the rest last year with 81, and the seniors were the lo wscorers with 58.

Thirty-two proud people, 19 of them A. B. students, 5 of them in applied science, 4 in engineering, 2 in commerce and 2 in education had their names engraved upon the coveted list of those who made "A's" on all courses for the past quarter. Again the freshmen preceded all other appellations. There were 14 of this type, and 8 sophomores, 7 juniors and 3 seniors. The names of these singularly talented people are:

B. H. Barnes, W. Eugene Barnes, A. Benjamin, T. B. Douglass, J. C. Eagles, Miss Elizabeth Edwards, Miss Dorothy Fooshe, C. W. Goldston, S. L. Hirsch, K. J. Kjellesvig, F. H. Koch, Jr., F. B. Record Number Of Votes Cast In Most Sensational Election In Many Years

Dunn Wins Over Kincaid For Yackety Yack Editorship; Williams New Editor Magazine; Wheary To Edit Comic.

HAMER IS "Y" PRESIDENT

Sam Gorham Is "Y" Vice-President, Finch Chosen Secretary, And F. M. James Is Treasurer.

(By Frank J. Manheim)

The most sensational and dramatic election that the University has ever experienced closed yesterday afternoon with an all-time record vote of approximately 1800 ballots. The unprecedented excitement caused by a feverish effort during the week preceding yesterday's election resulted in a tremendous interest and active participation by a great majority of the student body. The successful candidates won by great majorities.

"Red" Greene, who was a candidate with Marion Alexander for the coveted office of president of the student body, polled 1123 votes to his opponent's 641. This caused great surprise in many parts of the campus for it was felt throughout yesterday that the most seriously and narrowly contested office would be that which "Red" Greene now holds.

The position of editor of the Daily Tar Heel was awarded by a vast majority to Will Yarborough who received 1132 votes as compared to Joe Jones' 635. Two more ballots were cast for this office than for that of president of the student body.

Williams Magazine Editor

J. C. "Red" Williams' election by 1003 votes to Chace's 251 and Curtis' 489 was an unexpected turn in the day. The editorship of the Carolina Magazine was the cause of more "mudslinging" and "yellow" handbills on the part of the opposition than have ever been seen.

Clyde Dunn continued what some day may be referred to as the great massacre of 1930 and went into office as editor of the Yackety Yack with a vote of 1055 as against 638 for Douglas Kincaid.

The friends of Kermit Wheary celebrated his overwhelming defeat of Gil Pearson for editorship of the Buccaneer. The final result was Wheary, 1001; Pearson, 715.

Ed Hamer succeeded in carrying the presidency of the Y. M. C. A. with a vote of 1141, beating Claude Farrell by a 560 majority. Hamer's assistant will be Sam Gorham who received 1002 votes for the vice-presidency of the Y over the 723 received by Ellis Fysal. As secretary, Harry Finch will be able to rest secure knowing that 973 of the students cast their ballots for him rather than for John Miller, who received 699.

James Leads Ticket

F. M. "Pardner" James received the greatest number of votes of any candidate, 1178, and his opponent received but 526. He was candidate for the office of treasurer of the Y.

List-Taker Notice

Taxpayers are reminded of the state law requiring all persons to appear before the list-taker of the township and give a true list of property, real and personal, before May 1st, by C. P. Hinshaw, list-taker for Chapel Hill township, and G. W. Ray, tax supervisor.

PLANS FOR VISIT OF CANADIAN ARE BEING PREPARED

International Relations Club To Be Organized Here Monday Night For Visit Sir Herbert Ames.

Sir Herbet Ames, distinguished lecturer on international relations, will visit the University under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. While here he will lecture Friday and Saturday on International problems and will conduct round table discussions on the subjects of his lectures.

Preparations for his visit are being made by a group headed by Ray Farris. The committee plans to organize an international relations club at the University with initial action to be taken Monday night at a meeting in 214 Saunders at 7:30 o'clock. Members of the committee are Fleming Wily, Red Greene, Marion Alexander, Travis Brown, Will Yarborough, John Lang, Bob Graham and Mac Gray.

Sir Herbert has had long and varied experience in public service. For eight years he was a member of the Montreal City Council. He represented his native city, Montreal, in the Dominion Parliament for seventeen years. During the World War Sir Herbert was Honorary Secretary General of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, which distributed nearly $50,000,000 for the support of wives and dependent relatives of Canadian soldiers.

From 1919 to 1926 he was financial director of the League of Nations Secretariat. Since that time he has been lecturing in all of the Canadian colleges and in over thirty American educational institutions.

Metzenthin To Speak At United Church At 7:30 Sunday Evening

Dr. E. C. Metzenthin of the German department is to talk tomorrow evening in the United Church at 7:30 p. m. upon the subject, "The Religious Conflict of Post War Europe."

The World War was the cause of a very serious religious conflict. As a result of the war, Protestantism seems to be tottering on the brink of a new and deep chasm—oblivion. The situation is serious enough to govern the political policies of a number of countries. Dr. Metzenthin is to discuss the present condition and the probable outcome of this conflict.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I have been guided by one principle—always given everybody an even break.—John McCooey.

The Aftermath Of Elections

More than a score of unsuccessful candidates in yesterday's elections and hundreds of their loyal followers are bitterly despondent this morning, while their more fortunate rivals are jubilant with the warm glow of victory. Although most of the members of the two factions are exhibiting the moderation in victory or defeat which is the mark of a high intellect and a strong will, a few of the fortunate are proving themselves unworthy of their new offices by pompously strutting about in the glory of their newly-stimulated self-conceit. And some of the losers are exhibiting an equal lack of the qualities of a real man by pouring out a torrent of bitter recrimination against their successful opponents.

Most campus and class offices are nothing more than mere names, empty honors which are regarded lightly by all except those who hold them. Those who seek them for the sake of spurious and vainglorious titles benefit nothing by success in their intrigues to gain the offices they covet. These shallow honors, if they are sought after insincerely, serve to do nothing more than swell the conceit of their possessors and and render them obnoxious to their fellows. There are, of course, student offices which offer opportunities for genuine service and self-improvement. But they are few indeed.

Bitter feelings inevitably arise in the course of elections as closely contested as those of yesterday. Sometimes this bitterness is allowed to smoulder and burst forth into deep and unreasoning hatred. But the man is a fool indeed who allows political prejudices to interfere with his friendships, or even to create dislike toward his acquaintances. The elections are over, and it will be better for all concerned if they are immediately forgotten.

There is no reason why any man should be highly elated over his election or despondent over his defeat. Two or three years from now no one will know whether he won or lost, and a half-dozen years later he himself will have forgotten. The only really important thing about student elections from a personal viewpoint is that the candidate earn for himself the satisfaction of having made a clean and valiant fight; that is worth a dozen campus offices.

Simulating Sunlight

A NEW ERA OF LIGHTING

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of popular Research Narratives, which includes tales of discovery, invention and research. They are published in the Daily Tar Heel through the courtesy of the Engineering Foundation and the Williams and Wilkins company.

From the primitive pine-knot to the most powerful searchlight the production of artificial light has had a single purpose—to enable eyes to see. In recent years certain electric arcs which, owing to their complexity, had been almost completely displaced by the simpler filament lamps, were resurrected for another single purpose—health maintenance. Now we are on the threshold of combining these two to fulfill the dual purpose of lighting for health as well as for seeing.

In this artificial world (material civilization) which is the result of man's declaration of independence from Nature, the opportunity of light-production has been to duplicate and to improve upon Nature's lighting. Much of this has been accomplished in recent years. However, scientific discoveries during the present century have revealed certain properties of sunlight, heretofore only suspected or instinctively recognized. In other words, invisible ultra-violet radiation has been found effective in the cure of disease and the maintenance of health. Naturally, the producer of artificial light set about to obtain these benefits from artificial sources.

In many respects radiation in relation to life and health is in the twilight zone of knowledge. As a consequence, quackery has flourished and extravagant claims have been made. The public has been bombarded with advertisements for many types of "health" lamp. From all this confusion it is possible to separate a few sound facts which are sufficient encouragement to proceed with the production and utilization of a safe and effective substitute for midsummer sunlight. The cure of disease is the function of the medical profession, but no one has a monopoly upon the maintenance of health. Proper food, exercise and hygiene are beneficial, but they require personal effort. If the health benefit of sunlight can be dispensed along with artificial lighting, those millions of persons who need it most will automatically receive it while as oblivious to it as they are outdoors.

The electric arcs emit much of the desirable radiation and naturally they have assumed the new role of therapeutic devices. Those characteristics which lost for them most of the lighting fields still militate against their adoption in the new era of lighting for health and seeing. The tungsten filament at high temperatures emits sufficient desirable ultra-violet radiation to produce beneficial results. It is probable that the filament lamp will eventually be used for the dual purpose under discussion. Meanwhile, popular demand and the present state of knowledge insist upon a more powerful source of ultra-violet radiation.

Recently, the General Electric Company has developed the "Sunlight" lamp, a mercury arc between tungsten electrodes which operates in parallel with a tungsten filament. The bulb is of special glass and contains pure argon gas and some mercury. It operates as simply as any filament lamp but is essentially a low-voltage device. For alternating current a transformer makes it possible to use this lamp.

The present demand is for artificial sunlight of approximately the same effectiveness as mid-summer sunlight. The intensity of illumination outdoors on clear summer days is as high as 7000 to 9500 foot-candles. Artificial lighting intensities are only a fraction of 100 foot-candles. An intensity of 200 foot-candles at night seems like an excessive amount. Therefore, if an artificial sunlight is to be as effective at 200 foot-candles as natural sunlight is at 8000 foot-candles, it must have forty times as much desirable ultra-violet radiation per foot-candle as midsummer sunlight. Only two expedients are available: (1) extending the short-wave limit as far as possible without sacrificing safety, and (2) concentrating relatively more ultra-violet energy of the desirable wave lengths than in the spectrum of sunlight.

Both these expedients have been utilized in the new Sunlight lamp. The practical limit of transparency of the bulb (near 2800 A°) is safe for the eyes, if the same caution is exercised as in exposure to sunlight. This lamp supplies an adequate quantity of antirachitic radiation and when used in a proper reflector produces, at a distance of three feet, the same degree of erythema (reddening of the human skin) in a given time as midsummer sunlight does.

This new development provides a simple, safe and effective substitute for midsummer sunlight, its characteristics being those demanded in the general application of artificial light. Naturally the initial application is in a "home-treatment" equipment, in fields where health is of dominant interest — nurseries, gymnasiums, playrooms. A good deal of foundational knowledge is already available for entering the field of general lighting, but many unanswered questions remain. Spreading over the whole is the impressive logic pertaining to sunlight as an environmental factor during the evolution of life-processes since the first living matter evolved. It is difficult to imagine how life and health of living things could escape the need of solar radiation or its equivalent. This logic and certain established facts are beckoning to a new era of lighting which is upon the threshold of our indoor world.

YESTERDAY'S ELECTION

were elected, certain "vested interests" were represented, many a student's career flowered and opened in full bloom, the students had a large and exciting day and the student council worked all day and part of the evening. Indeed, the many little complaints and petty harsh comments were lost in the general approbation that was received by student elections.

Sartorial Sway
By
Beau Gent

We wish to commend and show our appreciation and thanx for the vein in which the criticism of our column of causerie was written. The letter—which appeared a few days ago in the Open Forum column—was quite different from the usual, asinine, vituperative missive that we generally receive. We also wish to elucidate four salient points:

1. That while we advocate "correctness' we cannot instill, or inspire, in anyone a taste for elegance or smartness in apparel. (That we ourself do not possess it to any superfluous degree, we recognize and genuinely regret).

2. That the sources of our sartorial knowledge are observation, retentiveness of detail, a sincere interest in the matter, and, last but not least, periodic letters from some of the foremost men's establishments in the country.

3. That if the critic can afford only one pair of shoes he should wear his necessary limited wardrobe as gracefully as he is able to. Surely he does not hope to be well dressed with his limited means? Therefore, it is presupposed that he does not—cannot—dress well. Then, I am not concerned with him; it is for those who are able and inclined to dress well, that we labor. We endeavor to indicate what is proper and what is not. We merely point out. Whether or not you do, whether or not you can offord to be influenced by our suggestions is not our concern. There are those who are and can. We advise; you are at liberty to do as you choose, or are forced by circumstances, to do.

4. That we have never implied an immunity to error in dress. We claim, however—and with justification—that because of our experience—limited though it may be in comparison to some—we are not guilty of crude, fundamental sartorial misdemeanors.

Sport togs are coming to the fore and if the growing craze for things that are sporting continues, men will soon be neglecting their ordinary clothes for suits which are indicative of their favorite sport—which may be no more active than sitting on a frat house veranda and sipping legal or illegal lemonades.

Manufacturers are catering more and more to the sporting tendency in the modern man. And there is no excuse for no having a sport suit, so practical have they become. If you have some odd coats in your wardrobe, this new movement is a god-send to you. Odd jackets —tweed, flannel, or cheviot— can be combined with contrasting trousers and help to form an outfit that is considered "spiffy" by sojourners from the south.

A four-piece suit is another means by which the average man can manage to always have a sport suit on tap. The new four-piecers have knickers that have an over plaid or check to follow out the idea of mixed suits. Then again, you can always manage to combine your knickers—or, if you like, a sweater.

Flannel trousers are a good investment. They can be worn at this time of the year with heavier jackets and later, during the summer, with a cool linen or tropical worsted jacket, or a blazer, or any of the various sport jackets that are being put out.

Some time ago, we evinced some interest in a few radical turns of fashion that we surreptitiously swiped while we were in Palm Beach. Among other things we said we admired pastel shades in flannel trousers. We then received no less—so help us—than fourteen letters which described us as at least a sissy. And asterisks were not used in a further and more complete description of us.

Now, to our amusement—we were, at the time, chagrined at our lack of manliness—most of the colleges in the south and east have adopted these flannels. As we said before, they are not to be sniffed at. They may be green, and light blue, but they are good-looking. A jacket of one color with trousers of the same color but a few shades lighter is the best bet and the smartest looking.

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Saturday, April 5—Highways to Happiness. (Read Matthew 16:21-27). Key verse: "He that loseth his life . . . shall find it."

Meditation: To lose one's life is not to throw it away, but to give it away. Life is too valuable to be sold at any price. We do not sell our most precious possessions. If we part with these we give them away. Life's best rewards come as we invest ourselves without thought of gain in some great cause or in the welfare of human beings. A story was recently told me of a wealthy man who offered his services to a hospital board saying, "I have spent enough time and effort in making money and in getting things for myself. I should like now to have the pleasure of doing something for nothing." The way to the enjoyment of life is: something for somebody for nothing.

Prayer: Deliver us, O God, from the self-centered life. Lead us forth from solicitous and anxious thoughts of self to the wider fields of service. In Christ, thou hast shown us the way; help us to walk in it, for His sake, Amen.

SIDELIGHTS
by
Sports Editor

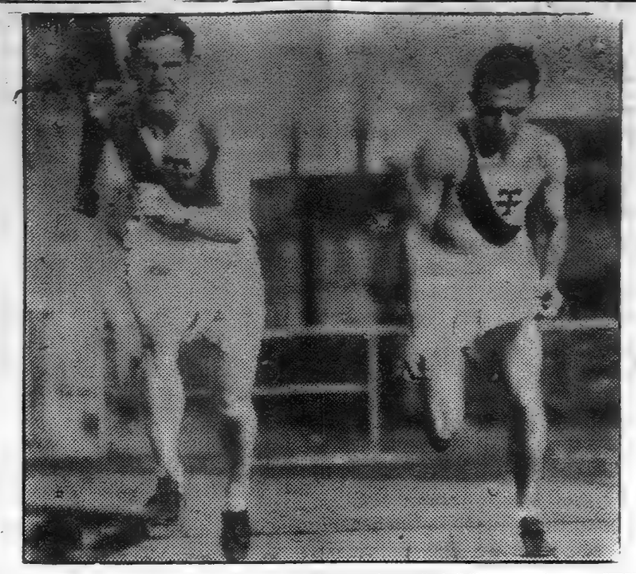
The track meet will hold the interest of the majority of the sports world today. Carolina will meet the first real test of the season when Georgia Tech arrives for the meet this afternoon. The Techmen are doped as having one of the strongest teams in the Southern Conference.

Ed Hamm is the most outstanding Techman on the entry list and as he was the high scorer in the recent indoor track meet he is favored to duplicate the feat tomorrow. The Tar Heels are presenting strong men against him. Dave Neiman and Theron Brown will be his strongest Tar Heel opponents in the broad jump.

In the 100 and 220 yard dash he will be pushed hard for honors. Farmer, Gay and Slusser will be the leading candidates for honors in the sprints in opposition to Hamm's performances. Farmer beat Hamm by a few inches in the recent indoor meet, and he is noted for his slow starts. In the 60 yard dash indoors, Farmer came close to the world's indoor record, and he is favored to win the 100 in the outdoor meet. Slusser, a ten-second and football man, will run Hamm a close race also.

Graydon, another outstanding Techman, will be a strong candidate for individual honors. His distance in the javelin throw seems to assure him of a first in this event, but Brown of Carolina will run him a close second.

The Tar Heels' most outstanding event will probably be the pole vault. Brodie Arnold, holder of the Southern Conference indoor record of 12 feet 7 inches, will lead the Tar Heels in this event. In addition to Arnold, the pole vaulters will include such star performers as Neiman, Dry, Smith and Ruble. Neiman topped Cowper in several meets last year and it is rumored that the fight for first will be between these two men. It is hard to determine the positions that Smith, Dry and Ruble will take in this meet, but Georgia Tech has no exceptional representative to present. It is also rumored that Coach Bob Fetzer is counting upon the vaulters for at least 8 points in the total score.



Perry, Slusser, Reid and Stafford will represent the Tar Heel cinderpathmen in the hurdles. Perry's specialty is the highs, although he runs the lows also. Reid, Slusser and Stafford specialize in the lows. Reid, a sophomore, is reported as being the favorite in this event, while Stafford is a veteran winner in the low hurdles.

It is an unusual thing for the freshman tennis team to represent Carolina in the North and South tennis tournament at Pinehurst. The freshmen have been showing unusual ability in this department recently and will probably represent Carolina as well as the varsity could. The representatives will probably be chosen from the following: Grant, Hines, Wright, Barnett and Abels. Four of these will be chosen to make the trip to Pinehurst on the 14th of this month. The varsity is detained because of meets with Alabama and Davidson, and the North Carolina intercollegiate tennis tournament. Yeomans, Hendlin, Merritt and Graham are the first four ranking varsity players.

The cost of keeping the United States delegation to the Naval Conference in London is about the same as that required to keep one cruiser—a small one—in service.

Wardlaw's Band Is Popular With Radio Audiences Of State

The weekly radio engagements on the Mebane Royal King of Sleep hour has made Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra one of the best known bands on the air in North Carolina as well as surrounding states. Letters, telegrams and verbal comments of praise have been given to this organization throughout their engagement with radio station WPTF, which will terminate April 7.

This orchestra has some star musicians and a personality as a whole that puts dances over in fine style.

TRACKMEN READY FOR MEET WITH TECH'S JACKETS

Georgia Tech With Galaxy of Stars Will Attempt Assault On Carolina's Eight-Year Record.

EMERSON FIELD SATURDAY

Georgia Tech's numerous track luminaries converged on Chapel Hill yesterday, and things were all set for this afternoon's important meet between Carolina and the Jackets, scheduled to get under way on Emerson field at 2:30 o'clock.

The Tech-Tar Heel contest is to be accompanied by a quadrangular meet between the Carolina freshmen and the high school teams of Charlotte, Wilmington and Greensboro, to make a grand track pageant.

The Tar Heels, despite 11 lettermen and a strong team that includes such stars as Farmer, Arnold, Neiman, Barkley, Baucom and Lowry, are doped to run a serious risk of breaking their enviable record of no losses in dual meets for eight years.

Tech will present a well-rounded team with especial strength concentrated in Ed Hamm, who holds southern records in the 100, 220 and broad jump; Doug Graydon, sophomore, who has thrown the javelin 205 feet; Asbury, Reed and Chrisfield, distance stars; and Harvey and Williams, hurdlers.

An especial feature is expected in the dashes between Hamm of Tech and Farmer of Carolina. Hamm, also a world champion broadjumper, holds southern records for both dashes. Farmer, the Tar Heels' sophomore phenom, beat him out by a hair's distance in the recent southern indoor championships.

Good performances are likewise expected in the frosh-high school meet. Greensboro, Charlotte and Wilmington regularly set the pace in North Carolina high school track, and the Tar Babies will match against these a strong team with such outstanding performers as Drane, Mitchem, Jones, Hamilton, Jensen, Davis, Stafford, Martindale, Newland, Collins and Chandler.

The meet, which will be run off on definite two-hour time schedule to insure a continuous panorama of action, will be announced over Western Electric equipment, and will show the introduction of many other features, designed to make the meet more enjoyable to spectators.

Tar Heel entries will be chosen from the following: 100-yard dash, Farmer, Slusser and Case; 220-yard dash, Farmer, Slusser, Case and Gay; 440-yard run, Weil, Nims and Garrett; 880-yard run, Weil, Nims and Garrett; 880-yard run, Hamer, Nims and Barkley; mile run, Lowry, Phoenix and Barkley; two-mile run, Baucom, Wrenn and Farris; high hurdles, Perry, Stafford, Reid and Goodwin; low hurdles, Perry, Stafford, Slusser and Reid.

Pole vault, Arnold, Ruble, Neiman, Smith and Dry; high jump, Bagby, Schulenberger, Parsons, Owens, Johnson; broad jump, Neiman, Reid, Brown, Johnson, Stafford; shot put, Adkins, Brown and Gilbreath; discus, Brown, Dameron, Thompson and Adkins; javelin, Brown, Remsen, Parsons and Poole.

Chapel Hill To Get Comparatively Low Lighting Gas Rate

A survey of rates and practices of distributors of illuminating gas in other cities of North Carolina, now being conducted by John M. Foushee, city manager of Chapel Hill, reveals the interesting fact that the village, with a promised cash rate of $1.70 per thousand feet, and a net rate of $1.80, will be favored when gas has been installed here, with the lowest price at which the commodity is sold in any other town in the state of its size.

Greensboro, for example, pays $1.80 without the 10 cents discount promised here. High Point and Burlington pay $1.95 and $2.10 per thousand cubic feet, respectively.

Foushee's investigations in Greensboro reveal that while the price of electricity for cooking is much lower in Chapel Hill than in Greensboro, the lighting rate here is much higher. Greensboro electricity, for lighting, scales from eight cents per kilowatt hour downward, while the local rate is from ten cents downward.

Kyser's Band Coming South Again In June

Kay Kyser and his popular band of former collegians, who got their start here at the University and have since won fame in many sections of the country, are to head back south again soon.

They are now playing at the Bamboo Garden, a popular resort near Cleveland, Ohio, where they are on contract until June 28, but by special arrangement with the Garden management they are going to spend the month of June in the south and will play for the annual June German at Rocky Mount.

Kyser's next Victor record is to be released on Friday of this week. The tunes are "Rainy Weather (Kay Kyser and Banks Corwin, composers) and "Just a Haven Is Heaven With You." The former is sung by Benny Cash, and the latter by a trio.

The weekly radio schedule of the orchestra which broadcasts from Station WHK (1390) now is: 6 to 6:30 and 12 to 12:30 on Mondays and Wednesdays; 12 to 12:30 on Thursdays and Fridays; and on Saturdays from 12:30 to 1 p.m., 7 to 7:30 p.m., and 1 to 2 a.m. (the latter being a special request program).

Track Notice

The track and field meet with Georgia Tech this afternoon should be the most spectacular dual meet ever staged on Emerson field.

We are making every possible effort to care for the interest of the spectators by

1. Numbering the contestants.

2. Providing a copy of the entries showing the name and number of each contestant.

3. Conducting the meet on a definite time schedule.

4. Installing loud speakers so that the spectators can be informed of every detail of the meet. Special features and the score will be announced throughout the meet.

Please cooperate with us by remaining in the stands. We owe this courtesy to our guests, Georgia Tech, and to our own team. If you could only realize that the whole meet can be followed best from the stands this request would not be necessary.

Only officials and contestants will be allowed on the field.

Five Cases Handled By Faculty Committee

In a recent report, W. F. Prouty, chairman of the executive committee, announced five cases of violation of the University honor system which have been dealt with by the committee during the past quarter.

Case No. 5: Three second-year pharmacy students suspended for winter quarter for cheating in connection with a quiz in Chemistry 41, held on December 11, 1929. Action taken January 3, 1930.

Cases Nos. 6 and 7 were preliminary investigations by a sub-committee cooperating with the instructor and administrative officers concerned, which resulted in the finding that the facts did not warrant the bringing of charges. One was a supposed case of cheating and the other one of supposed student misconduct.

Case No. 8: A second-year college student was suspended for the balance of the winter quarter for cheating in connection with a geology 1 quiz held on February 1, 1930. Action taken on February 4, 1930. The student confessed.

Case No. 9: A commerce freshman was suspended for the balance of the winter quarter for cheating in connection with a Spanish 2 quiz held on January 31, 1930. Action taken on February 11, 1930. The student confessed.

G. T. Schwenning Talks Before North Carolina Club About Paternalism

The wisdom of the widespread conception of paternalism in industry as evil was questioned by Professor G. T. Schwenning in a lecture on "What Is Paternalism?" at the regular weekly meeting of the North Carolina club in Bingham hall.

Professor Schwenning, a member of the school of commerce faculty, has done extensive research of late in mill villages in this country and in Europe and China.

To Professor Schwenning the policy of paternalism on the part of industrial leaders is not as degrading as it is generally pictured to be. He finds that "many of the conclusions of the critics of paternalism are not based on careful analysis and can lead only to misunderstanding and confusion."

"What is surprising in a study of this industrial problem," he continued, "is its summary condemnation and dismissal. In view of its alleged magnitude and the gravity of the evils attributed to it, there exists a surprising paucity of factual material on paternalism. What literature we have on the subject is fragmentary, mostly condemnatory, and wholly inadequate as an analysis of the various aspects of the problem."

Professor Schwenning pointed out that the system is held to be wrong on the grounds that it degrades those who become the object of such charity, that it is carried on from ulterior motives, and that it is undemocratic.

"A review of the economic and social environment in which the southern cotton mill villages developed makes it reasonably clear that southern paternalism is not entirely a device cunningly designed by the management for the subjugation of labor," Professor Schwenning said.

Pledges Come To Blows As One Destroys Others Bills

Having been so full of politics, after hearing nothing but that for the past three weeks, two pledges of rival "frame-ups" came to blows yesterday morning on this old question—politics. Both of the pugilists, it seemed, were so full of "horse-play," initiation, and politics that their nerves were on the raw edge. Each had been thoroughly instructed, probably, not to let anything be said in his presence against any of the candidates that his "frame-up" was putting up, nor to let any destruction, whatsoever, come to the posters that had been tacked in the dormitories and other public places by his side.

It was also apparent that neither of the two fighters were at all interested in the political campaign that has been taking place. Each seemed to have the idea that it was his duty, as a pledge of a fraternity in one of the "frame-ups," to see to it that no destruction, verbal or physical, come to any of the nominees of his side in this campus-wde campaign. This idea of duty, combined with the physical and mental strain (more of the former) that each of the pledges had been undergoing during this week of "horse-play" and initiation by his fraternity, had much to do with the bringing about of the fistic dual that later took place.

The scrap began when one of the nerve-wrecked, "forced-to-be" political pledges attempted to destroy the poster of the other's party.

"Let that poster alone!" shouted one of the pledges to the other who was tearing the political card.

"You make me!" exclaimed the offender as he continued his destruction. "These men are not worth two cents," yelled the destroyer. But before he could complete his sentence the fight was on. In no time a battle royal ensued, with all of the political enthusiasts, standing near, taking sides in the combat. The battling finally was stopped; but not until the political poster in question had been torn into bits and after many bruises were felt by all those taking part.

HELEN PUGH TO OFFER RECITAL

Talented Young Pianist To Appear In Methodist Church At 8:30 O'clock Monday.

Helen Pugh will give a recital in the Methodist church Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock under the auspices of the student entertainment committee. She is a brilliant young musician who was born in Asheville and has received practically all of her musical training in this state.

Although she is only 22 years old, Miss Pugh has been heard and commended in the highest fashion by the great musicians of the day. When she was a child Walter Damrosch expressed himself in no uncertain terms as to her undoubted musical gifts. Josef Hofmann, one of the best of living pianists, said, "That child will develop into one of the great musicians." Another great pianist, Percy Grainger, expressed his opinion, "Her art is the kind that endures."

Mrs. Crosby Adams of Montreat has been her patroness for a number of years.

Of her appearance as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra when she was only 12 years old, a critic said, "She brought to her work a command of technical resources, an unfailing technical and musical concept, a maturity of interpretation and a poise and security that made one marvel that she should be playing with a symphony orchestra of the first rank as though it were quite an everyday experience. . . . Her encores, like the Concerto, were given with consummate skill. Her very ease of playing confounds one. There are no extraneous motions. The music literally flows from her fingers."

"Red" Greene Is Elected President Of Student Body

Burgess Whitehead walked away with the office of the presidency of the Athletic Association with a vote of 1130 against Jim Magner's 609. Henry House will work diligently as vice-president of the Athletic Association, finding time, nevertheless, to sympathize with Jimmy Maus who received but 658 of the 1739 votes cast for that office.

The Debate Council's two offices were filled by close voting. Bill Speight had 854 votes and Beatty Rector had 911. The unfortunate contestants received the following: G. P. Carr, 755; Roscoe Fisher, 811.

The Publications Union Board will have as its student members next year the following: K. C. Ramsay (1075), Holmes 'Chink' Davis (979) and E. C. Daniel, Jr., (1001).

The ballots were counted last evening by the student council with the aid of responsible campus leaders and it was not until late in the night that they finished their exacting and tiring work of counting the votes accurately. Members of the various political parties were present at the tabulating in order to preclude any possibility of an after-thought on part of the defeated contestants to the effect that votes were not properly counted.

ARTHUR C. NASH WILL LEAVE HILL FOR WASHINGTON

University Architect Has Served Here Since 1922; Designed Eight Major Buildings On Campus.

Arthur C. Nash, the University architect, will leave Chapel Hill at the end of the summer to live in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Nash is retiring from the firm of Atwood and Nash, Inc., architects and engineers, but he will continue to be associated with Mr. Atwood in a consulting capacity.

Mr. Nash came here eight years ago, in 1922. This was the year after the legislature had provided funds for the expansion of the University, and building operations were under way. But the most important structures that have risen here in the last decade were designed by Mr. Nash. The new Library, the woman's building, the Graham Memorial, the Carolina Inn, the Kenan Stadium, the reconstructed South building, the dormitories to the east of the campus, and the later classroom buildings—all these are monuments to his skill, his artistic sense, and his good taste.

Buildings of his design outside the campus include several fraternity houses and homes in the village. In Raleigh the revenue building, the fairground building, and the additions at Peace Institute were constructed from his plans, and he also planned the renovation of the state capitol.

The sentiments of the community are appropriately expressed by the Chapel Hill Weekly, which says:

"The University and the village owe a great debt to Mr. Nash. His ability as an architect has been only part of his contribution to the community. His 'feel' for the traditions and atmosphere of the place, his devotion to the ideal of harmony between the old and the new, the sympathy and understanding he has brought to bear upon every one of his projects, and his unfailing courtesy and kindliness have won the admiration and goodwill of all who know him. Chapel Hill honors him both for his achievements as an architect and his character as a man."

JITNEY PLAYERS TO APPEAR HERE

Widely Known Actors Will Present Two Plays in Playmaker Theatre April 14 And 15.

The Jitney Players, often referred to as the "most unusual theatre in America," will appear in Chapel Hill Monday and Tuesday, April 14 and 15, to present Shepperd Strudwick in "A Trip to Scarborough" and "The Wonder."

Shepperd Strudwick, formerly with the Carolina Playmakers, was one of the most outstanding actors in that group during the time he was with them.

The Jitney Players are coming to Chapel Hill under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers, and the performances will be staged in the Playmaker theatre. The shows will cost $1 each for everybody except season ticket holders, who will be allowed to see both performances for $1.50.

CAROLINA CO-EDS BEG STICKERS, ASK 'DATES' WITH HARVARD MEN

Letters Addressed To "Handsomest," "Best Sport," Etc., Delivered At Random By The Yard Postman.

(From Boston Herald)

There is no end apparently to the audacity of co-eds of a certain North Carolina college in collecting college "stickers," and incidentally in corresponding with Harvard men. So much the Rover learned when he perused the contents of several letters written by the co-eds to such as "Mr. Harvard's Handsomest," "Mr. Harvard's Best Sport," "Mr. Harvard's Best Athlete," "Mr. Harvard's Best Dancer," and other "Mr. Harvard's So and So."

In reading such letters the Rover was somewhat taken aback. He could scarcely believe his eyes were reading the thoughts expressed on the handwritten pages, but he wasn't "seeing things," of that he is very certain.

These North Carolina co-eds addressed their contemporaries at Cambridge expressing the wish that the Harvard students would see fit to comport themselves as gentlemen and scholars and reward the writers with stickers. The stickers requested are those that may be seen almost any day on the windshields of automobiles and "collegiate phords" parked in the vicinity of Harvard square.

"Dates" Are Arranged

But these girl-student-writers don't stop at requesting stickers; they go right on and suggest that any time the certain Harvard man is in the region of a certain town, usually in North Carolina, he must be sure to get in touch by telephone or otherwise with the writer. Rewards in the form of "dates" are promised by the assumingly-fair co-eds. In fact, the Rover noted, the letters go to some length to arrange for the contemplated meetings.

One young lady who described herself as blond, five-feet-four, and "considered attractive by her mates," wrote to "Mr. Harvard's Handsomest," that she had a collection of college stickers which included all the best known institutions of learning, excepting Harvard.

"It seems to me," she wrote in a pretty hand, "that Harvard's prestige is somewhat to be questioned by anyone who views my collection, and finds Harvard's sticker among the missing."

She appeals to his "college spirit" to relieve the situation.

Another young lady (the name is signed, and apparently authentic) states in a letter to "Harvard's Best Sport," that she understands from what she has been able to gather that Harvard men are generally considered good sports. Then she goes on to ask him not to disappoint her by refusing to send the requested sticker. "At

E. G. HOEFFER TO ATTEND MEETING

Mechanical Engineering Head Leaves Today For A. S. M. E. Convention In Washington This Week.

E. G. Hoeffer, head of the department of mechanical engineering, will attend the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers which will be held in Washington Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The series of meetings celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Society will begin in New York Saturday. A meeting is being held today at Stevens Institute in Hoboken, and the three concluding meetings will be held in Washington the first of this week.

This celebration will review the past 50 years of engineering achievements and will bring together the world's outstanding men in engineering. It will aim to cultivate bonds between the nations on the basis of engineering accomplishments.

At the meetings at Washington a series of 16 papers will be presented, each summarizing and evaluating the influence of engineering upon cultural, social, economic and political life. Each of the papers will also visualize the future of the engineers place in the promotion of the common welfare in one of the 16 selected geographical divisions of the world.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoeffer will drive to Washington Sunday and will probably return to Chapel Hill on Thursday.

Also in conjunction with the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the society, a "birthday party" will be held in Raleigh Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Raleigh Section of the society and the Raleigh Engineers' Club. The student sections of the society at both Carolina and State have been invited to attend this meeting.

Flower Show Group Makes Preparations

The committees in charge of the flower show to be held here May 1 held a meeting Wednesday night for the purpose of making further arrangements about the show. The president of the committees, Mrs. H. R. Totten, particularly urged that the chairmen in charge of the different sections find out how much floor space each section will require, as this is very important in making preparations.

UNIVERSITY MEN RECEIVE INJURIES IN BAD COLLISION

Six Students Are Principals In Serious Wreck On Raleigh Road Saturday Morning.

President Ray Farris reported to the Daily Tar Heel yesterday that six University students had been injured in an automobile wreck which occured three miles from Chapel Hill while the men were on their way to Raleigh early Saturday morning.

John Idol, Red Greene, Pat Patterson, and Bill Bliss returning from a short ride they had made, discovered that a Ford coupe driven by Bobby Deese of Lumberton, also a student at the University, had been run into by a Chrysler Imperial roadster driven by Larry Flynn. The five other men with Flynn were Joe Anderson, John Wilkinson, J. D. McNairy, Al Lansford, and Glenn Holder. Two unidentified men riding with Deese, and who were uninjured, were sent together with Holder and Lansford, the latter two being only slightly injured, in a car which was hailed as it was passing on the way to Chapel Hill.

Red Greene and Patterson carried McNairy and Flynn to Watts Hospital in Durham, while Idol and Bliss waited with Anderson and Wilkinson for Greene to return to the scene of the accident with a Durham ambulance.

Dr. Foy Roberson was called into consultation at the hospital and reported that Wilkinson was not seriously hurt, that J. D. McNairy had sustained a fractured leg and a concussion of the brain, that Larry Flynn had suffered a punctured intestine, which was operated upon shortly afterward, and that Joe Anderson had received a fractured skull.

Wilkinson will return to Chapel Hill today. Although both Anderson and Flynn had regained consciousness late yesterday afternoon, Anderson's condition was reported the more serious of the two. Flynn is reported as having "a good chance to recover." McNairy had not regained consciousness at 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon. No

Collegiate and professional education is gradually shifting from Old World traditions to New World conditions.—W. J. Cooper.

A Judicious Act By The Danville City Fathers

Yesterday the unusual spectacle of motorcycle officers conducting a labor parade through metropolitan areas was presented at Danville. Employees of the local cotton mills marched through the streets in protest against recent reductions in wages by the mill owners and in approval of efforts of American Federation of Labor officials to organize a textile workers' union in Danville.

During the past several months municipal and state governments in the South have attempted on many occasions to prevent public demonstrations by cotton mill workers. Even the "Inalienable rights" of free speech and peacable assembly have been violated in many cases. But the city fathers of Danville did not attempt to prevent the parade of protesting mill workers; on the contrary, they ordered traffic squads to clear the way for the marching laborites.

Americans, especially the laboring classes, are quick to resent what they consider impositions upon their rights. Frequently this resentment flares up in the form of forcible opposition, and the bloody history of textile labor troubles during the past two years in the South is attributable to a marked degree to the dictatorial tactics of civil authorities. But the action of the Danville city officials yesterday was a step in the right direction. Other governmental agencies should follow their example, for violations of the right of peaceful assemblage, or even the more questionable right of peaceful public demonstration, are as dangerous as they are deplorable.

A Bird In The Hand.

(H. J. G.)

Within a day of elections, according to reports, framing and lining-up of candidates for the fight for offices next year is taking place. Whether or not this is a healthy indication of political affairs on the campus is a debatable question.

Undoubtedly, the haste of the party leaders to snatch all aailable political material was caused by the bitterness of the fight this year. Although to one not conversant with the trend of the elections the returns may seem to indicate that the fight was one-sided, nevertheless the pre-election contest was as hot and close as can be reasonably safe on a campus.

Framing a year in advance will tend to make campus offices a political reward instead of a trust. Officers bandied about by party leaders intent only on "carrying the campus" and thus proving the possession of political power are not worth much.

Yet, bad or good, lining-up now shows that the campus is awake. There is no lethargy when candidates lay their plans a year in advance and then work through the year. And as for the leaders, their motto seems to have something to do with ornithology and palmistry. There is no other reasonable explanation for the sudden activity and gobbling up of all in sight who may possibly be considered for an office next year.

Pen Points

By H. J. Galland

Successful candidates are not the only winners in the election. Consider the printshop, which handled the ballots and the numerous sheets in favor of one ticket or another—and don't forget the bootlegger!

Hopeful politicians and poll workers supplied intending voters with everything desired in the way of cigarettes, cigars, dopes, and other aids to making up of doubtful minds. The only thing they neglected was pencils with which to do the voting.

All ballots were marked at the top with a rubber stamp as a means of identification. The stamp was pretty faint, but it looked like a young monkey trying to write, and having trouble. Is there someone in the Student Council with a sense of humor?

The most crying need of the day around the Y was a good, old-fashioned, long, hatpin. Any politician who supplied them would have carried the day, for they would have been invaluable in pushing through the crowd of vote-getters trying to make up the mind of everyone in sight headed toward the voting booth.

Druggists in town reported an extra large sale of cigars, of all things. No one of them seemed to be able to figure out why the students were suddenly buying stogies in such quantities.

Betting the night before the election was high and very wide. There was much confidence on both sides, and apparently limitless resources of wealth. Few of the bets offered were taken up, and as the day waned, the enthusiasm of the bettors died down. Not much money has changed hands, according to all reports.

The election of a President of the University has been completely lost sight of in the last few days. It is to be hoped that the Board of Trustees will not do or receive any mudslinging, apparently a popular mode of conducting elections in these parts.

Professional nightowls have been busy. Between the hours of 9 and 12 at night they have been hooting through the dormitories with much gusto. The costume of one night-time worker deserves mention. He was tastefully attired in a pair of pajamas of a subdued color, a pair of brown slippers, a large and luxurious brown woolen overcoat, a derby hat, and a large cigar cocked at an angle of 45 degrees.

The box-office of the Carolina theatre seems to be somewhat partisan. Efforts to post the ticket of one of the parties met with no success, whereupon the other party descended upon the cashier with a ticket of its own, and was received with sympathy.

The Tar Heel office was practically deserted all afternoon. The erstwhile scribes were busy with other matters in other quarters, most of them either running for offices or being violently partisan.

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Sunday, April 6: Self Expression and Responsibility. (Read Genesis 4:3-11) Key Verse: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Meditation: In the Hebrew story of creation, the first man born raised the question of human responsibility. "Am I my brother's keeper?" The mood of today is to answer, No. We do not want anybody to be our keeper. Each must accept the responsibility and hazards of shaping his own life. Everyone is jealous, and should be, of his own prerogatives. No man can be any other man's conscience. Each man must express his own life. But he lives with other men who possess each an equal right. We must live together with mutual regard and concern. We call this method of living together, brotherhood. I am not my brother's keeper but I am my brother's brother. My life is bound up with his.

Prayer: "Help us, O Lord, clearly to perceive that to receive, and to have, imposes the obligation to give and to share. Help us to measure our responsibilities by our privileges. Enable us not only to see and sympathize with human need all about us, but in the strength of a deep consecration to meet and alleviate it. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Carolina Trackmen Win Over Tech 104 To 27

Varsity Sprinters And Fieldmen Take Thirteen Of Fifteen First Places

Charlie Farmer Bests Ed Hamm in 100 and 220.

FAST TIMES MARK MEET

Barkley And Farmer Tie For High Scoring Honors; Mile Relay Team Misses Record One Second.

Setting a fast pace in every event and taking 13 of 15 first places, a well-balanced University track team overwhelmed Georgia Tech here yesterday afternoon by a score that was a decided upset—104 to 27.

The Tar Heels dropped first places only in the broad jump, in which Tech presented the world champion Ed Hamm, and in the javelin in which Tech presented the sophomore Doug Graydon, who threw 192 feet 4 inches yesterday, and who has thrown 205 feet, far better than the southern record of 193 feet 8¼ inches.

Fast times and good performances marked the varsity meet, although no records were broken. The real feature proved to be the two sprints in which Charlie Farmer, Tar Heel sophomore ace, twice beat Ed Hamm, southern champion in the 100 and 220, both times by a margin of slightly better than three yards.

Minor Barkley, Tar Heel distance star, turned in fast times for first places in both the half mile and mile, and a tie with Farmer for high scoring honors.

Farmer also ran anchor man on the Tar Heel relay team, which finished a fast mile, nearly a third of a lap ahead of Tech, in 3 minutes 28 seconds, just one second slower than the University record.

Summary:

100-yard dash—Farmer (C), Hamm (T), Slusser (C). Time, 10 seconds.

220-yard dash—Farmer (C), Hamm (T), Gay (C). Time, 21.8 seconds.

TAR HEELS FACE SEVEN EVENTS AT HOME THIS WEEK

Baseball, Track, Golf, And Tennis Players To See Action In Chapel Hill.

Seven home events feature a big week's program ahead for University of North Carolina athletic teams.

The tennis stars will start the week off Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the annual Varsity-Frosh meeting. History has never yet shown the Frosh victors, but such freshman stars as Bryan Grant and Wilmer Hines, first ranking Senior and Junior stars, respectively, in the South, are expected to give the varsity a great fight.

The varsity nine will unlimber its big bats here Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, taking on Maryland in its first Tri-State League game of the year.

Two events grace the Chapel Hill program for Wednesday afternoon. The Freshman nine will parade its star hurlers against Winston-Salem High, and the varsity trackmen will carry on against Duke, the team that is conceded the best chance of breaking the Tar Heels' record of eight consecutive State titles.

The varsity golfers will also see action Wednesday, meeting William and Mary on the nearby Hope Valley Country Club course. The other home events will be golf matches with Wake Forest Friday and Duke Saturday over the Hope Valley course.

Tar Heel teams will also see action in three engagements away from home.

Beginning their annual Northern trip, the varsity nine will face Maryland at College Park Friday and Virginia at Charlottesville Saturday in two more games that count in both Tri-State League and Southern Conference standings.

The varsity trackmen will participate in the classic Georgia Tech Relays at Atlanta on Saturday in the third foreign engagement.

Carolina Wins 6-4

Carolina won the second game of the two game series with Georgia 6-4 at Athens yesterday. Details of the contest were not available at time of going to press, but it is understood that Wright did the mound work for the Tar Heels.

Carolina Co-Eds Beg Stickers, Ask Dates With Harvard Men

least," she continues, "favor me with the courtesy of an answer to this letter."

From what the Rover could learn after an extensive cross-examination of recipients of these request-notes, Harvard men are not prone to answer the fair co-eds of the North Carolina college. At least none was willing to say that he did. Some of them blushed when the Rover asked this pointed question, and on this alone he is tempted to believe that not all Harvard students tell the Press the truth—all of the time. He admits, however, that he has no proof upon which to base this opinion.

Longs For Poetry

One correspondent who uses the address of a dormitory in this North Carolina institution remarks that she appreciates above all things a love for poetry. "I have heard it said," she comments, "that Harvard men are noted for their quotations of verse as answers to rhetorical questions. I know that I would like to hear such retorts, for they show a superior mentality, and practical application of poetry."

Another confesses that her list of men friends is sadly lacking in a single Harvard man, student or graduate, and that she realizes she is missing something. Then she suggests that perhaps she may be fortunate enough some day to meet the young man to whom she is writing.

"If you may ever come to W—(the Rover omits the name of the town in deference to her feelings), I do hope that you may see fit to look me up. I would be delighted to meet you, and promise that I shall do whatever I can to make your visit a pleasant one."

As far as the Rover could find out there is not the least bit of jealousy among the students as to whom such letters are delivered. The Rover took a good look at the recipient of a letter addressed to "Mr. Harvard's Handsomest" and concluded that there were at least other students in the university who could outstrip him in a men's beauty contest. Some one told the Rover that a letter addressed to "Mr. Harvard's Best Sport" was delivered, on suggestion of the dorm porter, to the one student in the building who complained to him most often that there was "never any hot water in the wash room."

"Bull-Thrower" Gets One

Some may deduce that the Yard letter-carrier has enough duties without considering to whom he will deliver such epistles, but such is not the case. Mr. Postman, when one of these letters happens to be in his sack, shows it to the several dormitory porters and asks them to suggest the student to whom it shall be delivered. Invariably it is reported, the letter is never returned to the sender, marked "No such person at address given below."

But it is a matter of record that there was plenty of noise when a certain non-letterman was handed a letter to "Mr. Harvard's Best Athlete" with the remark: "Bull-throwers are athletes, aren't they?"

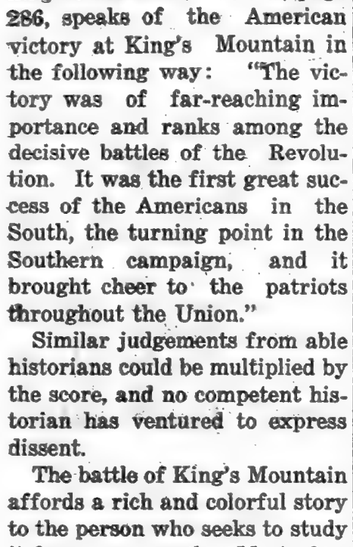
A new room for private parties is being added to the Carolina Inn. It will cover the space now devoted to the pergola west of the dining room.

Battle Of King's Mountain Turning Tide Of Revolution

Was The Decisive Victory That Won The Seal Of Independence For The Colonies; Sesquicentennial To Be Celebrated Next October.



(By John A. Lang)

The significance of the Battle of King's Mountain in the winning of the American independence can scarcely be overestimated. In every important sense it was a crisis in the history of the Revolutionary War. Coming at the time when it did, the victory from this battle sent a thrill of new courage throughout the whole country. Thomas Jefferson, in referring to the Battle of King's Mountain, said: "It was the joyful annunciation of that turn in the tide of our success that terminated the Revolutionary War with the seal of independence."

A hundred years after Jefferson made this statement, Theodore Roosevelt in his "The Winning of the West," Vol. II, page 286, speaks of the American victory at King's Mountain in the following way: "The victory was of far-reaching importance and ranks among the decisive battles of the Revolution. It was the first great success of the Americans in the South, the turning point in the Southern campaign, and it brought cheer to the patriots throughout the Union."

Similar judgements from able historians could be multiplied by the score, and no competent historian has ventured to express dissent.

The battle of King's Mountain affords a rich and colorful story to the person who seeks to study it from every angle. Most of us today are most particularly interested in studying the activities of the American soldiers in this battle. We are getting ready to celebrate the sesquicentennial date of this great battle. Thousands of people from all over this country, particularly from the southern states, are preparing to meet together on the memorial battleground of King's Mountain in October of this year to do honor and to pay respect to the American heroes who fought and bravely died there that their posterity might forever enjoy the blessings of liberty and self-government. It is therefore only natural that we should desire at this time to know more about these American heroes of King's Mountain who commendably bore the brunt of this fierce and bloody struggle. In knowing more about these patriots, we shall be more able to ascertain and appreciate their share in this battle which greatly helped us in our struggle for independence.

Study of Commanders

The most effective way to study the character of the American soldiers at King's Mountain is through the study of their commanders and leaders, and it is to the study of these American commanders and leaders that this essay is devoted. Before taking up individually each one of the most important American commanders at King's Mountain, it is necessary to point out some characteristics which were generally common to all of the American commanders and soldiers that took part in this battle.

These men, who conceived and set on foot this effective stand against British oppression, were members of a frontier community only a few thousand strong. Their own homes were in constant danger of attack from the Cherokee Indians, a fierce and valorous nation who were in close league with the British and hung like a storm cloud upon the western skirts of the settlements.

These frontiersmen did not wait until the enemy was at their own doors, but they took the offensive and went in search of the enemy, thus making common cause with all the colonies. It seemed as though nothing could overcome their courageous nature and determined willpower. They marched twelve full days over one of the roughest routes ever traveled by a mounted army, right straight across both the Appalachians and the Blue Ridge. For the last two days of their march, these frontiersmen pushed onward through a pouring rain and were out of their saddles only once, and then for but an hour.

Achieved Signal Victory

At the end of this strenuous ride, they, tired almost to exhaustion, threw themselves against a foe numerically as strong as themselves, securely posted, well drilled, and commanded by one of the bravest and most accomplished officers in the British army.

The undaunted driving-power of the American frontiersmen led them to achieve at King's Mountain, within a little more than an hour, one of the most signal victories of the whole Revolution, in which they killed, wounded or captured nearly every one of their British antagonists.

If there be any citizen of the United States whose blood does not flow a little faster at the recital of these courageous accomplishments, he is not to be envied. These accomplishments could never have been brought about by those American frontiersmen had it not been for their fearless, valorous, and liberty-loving characteristics and natures.

The American commanders at King's Mountain possessed these characteristics to such an extent that they became the means by which the success of the American cause in this battle was insured. These commanders left their families utterly exposed to the ferocious Cherokee Indians and traveled over the frontier regions, summoning the frontiersmen to follow them.

Result of Much Planning

It is about such heroes that we should wish to know more. These men, who made possible this great American victory, are often times permitted to occupy no great place in our store of knowledge. We are too prone to think of this victory at King's Mountain as the product of a military effort that had no previous planning or forethought. Many of us have not yet realized that it was through the effective planning and preparation on the part of the American commanders at King's Mountain that the American victory was won there on October 7, 1780.

It is, therefore, entirely befitting at this time upon the eve of our great celebration at King's Mountain that we should look into the story of the lives of these commanders. In doing this, we shall get the proper perspective upon their lives and be better able to ascertain the various movements and forces that accentuated their actions and influenced their characters. We shall take up each one of these commanders individually in order that we may be able to acquaint ourselves better with their personalities.

Isaac Shelby

Probably no one commander had any more to do with the success of the American cause at King's Mountain than did Isaac Shelby. Shelby's persistent courage and great influence over men contributed largely to this American victory. Born December 11, 1750, in Frederick County, Maryland, Isaac Shelby was employed until 21 years of age farming and herding for his father, Captain Evan Shelby.

In 1771 Isaac removed with other members of his family to the Holston region in southwestern Virginia. It was in this region that Isaac Shelby shared the customary experiences and adventures of a pioneer and frontiersman. He served as a lieutenant in a company of Fincastle troops, of which his father was captain, in Lord Dunmore's War and fought valiantly in the Battle of Point Pleasant in this war.

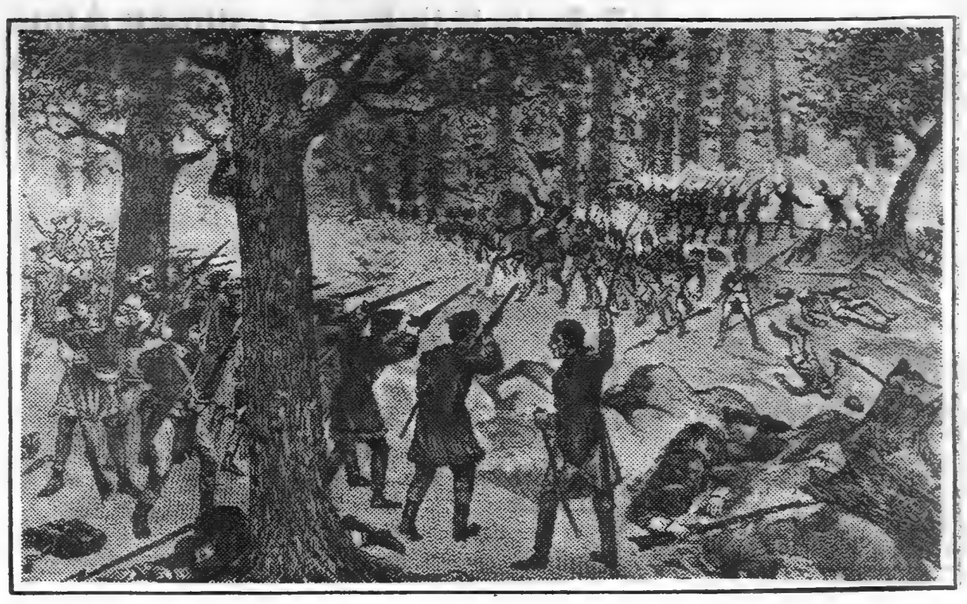
For nearly a year following this war, Shelby explored, located, and surveyed lands in Kentucky. In July, 1776, while yet in Kentucky, he was appointed captain of a company of minute men by the committee of safety in Virginia. Shelby discharged his duties so effectively that Governor Patrick Henry, of Virginia, appointed him in 1777 as a commissary of supplies for an extensive body of militia guarding the frontier posts.

Finds Himself a Tar Heel

In 1778 Shelby was engaged in the commissary department, providing supplies for the Continental army and for an expedition, by way of Pittsburgh, against northwestern Indians. He rendered similar service in 1779.

In the fall of the same year, Shelby was commissioned a major by Governor Thomas Jefferson, in the escort of guards to the commissioners for establishing the boundary line between Virginia and North Carolina. By the extension of this line Shelby's residence was found to be in North Carolina, and shortly afterwards he was appointed by Governor Caswell, of North Carolina, a colonel of the new county of Sullivan which is now in the state of Tennessee.

Isaac Shelby was largely responsible for the American victory in the Battle of Musgrove's Mills, August 18, 1780, and during this same summer captured a formidable Tory stronghold on the Pacolet River.



Played Important Role

Colonel Isaac Shelby's part in the Battle of King's Mountain was a most important one. In his home on the frontier of North Carolina, Shelby had received a message from Colonel Charles McDowell, of Burke County, begging him to furnish all the aid he could towards checking the British who were over-running the three southern states. In a few days, Shelby crossed the Alleghanies with two hundred mounted riflemen. On came Shelby with his men, and their valor and patriotism were shown in every encounter with the enemy on the way to King's Mountain. By their actions, Shelby and his men reassured the struggling patriots that the British leaders could not ride roughshod over the American people.

Shelby's efforts in prosecuting the King's Mountain expedition, his magnanimity in securing the appointment of Colonel Campbell to the chief command, and his heroic work at that critical period were of the greatest importance to his country.

The Legislature of North Carolina passed a vote of thanks to Colonel Shelby and his good services and directed that an elegant sword should be presented to him. Afterwards, Shelby joined his forces with those of General Greene and continued to contribute valuable service to the American cause until the end of the war. In 1783 he moved to Kentucky where he had a long and distinguished career serving as a legislator, governor and military leader. Isaac Shelby's eventful career came to a close on July 18, 1826, at his Kentucky home, "Traveler's Rest," in Lincoln County, Kentucky.

Reproduction Of Famous Battle

Alumni Day Program Is Set For Commencement

Reunion Committee of General Alumni Association Meets During Week End.

ARRANGE PROGRAM

The program for Alumni Day of Commencement will in general follow that of last year. This decision was made by the reunion committee of the General Alumni Association, meeting at the Carolina Inn during the week-end.

Dr. Hubert Haywood of Raleigh presided at the meeting of the reunion committee, and officers of eight of the 11 classes scheduled to reunite this June were present. Dr. Haywood, chief alumni commencement marshal, is a member of the class of 1905, which observes its quarter-century reunion June 9.

Dormitory rooms will be assigned alumni who return for commencement. The central alumni office is caring for these arrangements. Headquarters will be established at the Y, or, possibly, if the weather permits, near the Well.

The main events of Alumni Day will include a meeting of the alumni in Gerrard hall at 10:30, presided over by Judge Francis D. Winston; the alumni luncheon at 1 o'clock in Swain hall; class reunion suppers at 6 o'clock; President Chase's reception, and the annual alumni ball probably in the Tin Can at 9 o'clock. This latter event has generally been held in Swain hall, but there are plans now to change both the alumni ball and the commencement dances to the Tin Can.

Eleven University classes will observe reunions. These are 1880, holding its 50th year reunion; 1895, '96, '98; 1905, celebrating its 25th year out; 1914, '15, '16, '17; and 1929, coming back for its first year gathering. The president of the class of 1880 has reported that at least six of that class's nine living graduates are planning to be back in Chapel Hill for the reunion.

Those attending the meeting of the committee here Saturday evening were: Dr. Haywood; Dr. R. E. Coker, '96, Chapel Hill; Lawrence MacRae, '97, Greensboro; R. H. Lewis, '98, Oxford; W. T. Shore, '05, Charlotte; Oscar Leach, '14, Raleigh; G. Wallace Smith, '16, Chapel Hill; H. G. Baity, '17, Chapel Hill; Bowman Gray, Jr., '29, Winston-Salem; and G. E. "Bo" Shepard, '29, Chapel Hill. Those from the University who attended the Saturday meeting were: C. T. Woollen, R. B. House, W. S. Bernard, F. A. Grisette, and Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary.

Hinshaw Issues Capias

A capias warrant for the return of Luther Alston to Chapel Hill recorder's court was issued by Judge C. P. Hinshaw Monday when the negro failed to appear to answer a charge of public drunkenness.

Luther came to the attention of the public for the first time about a year ago, when, after having been sentenced to a month on the roads by J. T. Harris, local justice of the peace, the prisoner asked permission to pray. The negro prayed so fervently and so long and so eloquently that Justice Harris reconsidered and allowed him to go free.

Executive Committee Senior Class To Meet

Red Greene, president of the senior class, announced last night that there would be a meeting of the Executive Committee of the class tonight at 9 o'clock on the second floor of the Y. M. C. A. All members of the committee are urged to be present as it is very important.

DR. WILSON TO BE ENTERTAINED BY ANTON LANG

University Librarian Is Notified That He Will Be Guest Of Famous Passion Play Actor This Summer.

Several years ago the University village experienced a mild sensation when a band of Hopi Indians from out West came to Chapel Hill for a performance and became so fond of Professor Fred Koch, guiding genius of the Carolina Playmakers, that without further ado they elected him honorary chief of ther tribe.

Now along comes Dr. Louis Wilson, University librarian, and goes Chief Koch one better. For, believe it or not, Dr. Wilson is to be entertained in the home of Herr Anton Lang, the Christus of the famous Oberammergau Passion Play, when he visits Germany this coming summer.

It is not exactly a formal invitation that Dr. Wilson has received from the famous Lang, but it serves the same purpose. It happened this way: The village of Oberammergau is so small that most of the visitors who go there to see the great Passion Play, which is given only once every ten years, are entertained in the private homes of the natives. It is the custom. The company that booked for Dr. Wilson for his European itenary notified him several days ago that during his stay there he would be the guest of Anton Lang. Naturally he was immensely pleased, but he is at a loss to offer an explanation as to why it should have fallen to his lot to be placed in such good company. He is going to be the last to raise a row about his predicament, however, and he has already half-way promised to do an article on the famous Lang from the close-up point of view.

Since the first of the year Dr. Wilson has been enjoying a much deserved leave of absence. He and members of his family spent the months of January, February, and March in Florida. Today he left for Now York, and tomorrow night he will sail for Naples aboard the Italian steamship Roma. He will be away until August, during which time he plans to visit Italy, Switzerland, Germany, France, Belgium, Holland, and England.

While abroad Dr. Wilson expects to visit the principal libraries of Europe. He especially looks forward to a visit to the Vatican library at Rome, which is being reorganized along American lines under the direction of Dr. W. W. Bishop, librarian of the University of Michigan. As

Y GETTING READY FOR BLUE RIDGE

Campaign To Be Waged Shortly For Delegates To Summer Camp.

The Blue Ridge Conference, which is to be held June 14-23, was the main subject of discussion at the meetings of the Y cabinets last night. Grady Leonard spoke to the freshman group about the conference, H. F. Comer to the sophomore cabinet and President Jimmie Williams to the junior-senior cabinet.

After the program of the freshmen had opened with short devotional exercises, E. R. Rankin of the extension division, asked for volunteers to act as sceretaries of debate sections at the high school debates that are to be held here next Thursday and Friday. Grady Leonard then made a short talk on the Blue Ridge Conference. "Besides the sports, fine speeches, good eats, and vocational guidance that one will find at this conference, the greatest part of the program is the contact with students from other schools in the south," stated Mr. Leonard.

Jimmie Williams, president of the Y, spoke to the junior-senior group on this same subject. He urged that as many members as possible try to plan this trip in their summer vacation. Many advantages of the conference were pointed out by the president. The cabinet also held a discussion of the North Carolina Conference for Social Service which is to meet April 13, 14, and 15 in Charlotte. For the first time a student section is to be introduced into this conference.

Sentence prayers opened the program of the sophomore cabinet. Jack Dungan, president of the group, then called on H. F. Comer to talk to the cabinet on the Blue Ridge Conference. Quite a few students indicated their desire to go to this conference, and it is hoped by the Y authorities that a large delegation can be sent to the conference from the University. F. M. James served as chairman of the meeting, following a new plan inaugurated by the president.

Magazine Editor

J. C. Williams, who won a heavy majority for the editorship of the Carolina Magazine in Friday's elections, has served the Magazine as book editor and the Daily Tar Heel as reporter, columnist, and assistant-editor. Williams is also president of the Debate Council, ex-president of the Di Senate, winner of the Bingham and Wright medals, and has represented the University in 11 intercollegiate debates.

CAMPUS IS MOWED

As the students went to their eight-thirty classes this morning they were greeted by the sound of self-propelling lawn mowers which have been silent since last autumn. Two negroes under the direction of Mr. Alf Pickard were piloting the machines over the beautiful stretch of campus between Old South building and the Library.

Mr. Pickard says that it will take the two men about one week to cover the entire campus. These men followed by others whose job it is to take a small hand scythe and cut all the bunches and sprigs of grass left by the machines. They cut around the trees and buildings where it is impossible to carry the machines. The grass is left on the ground after it is cut. No pushing and pulling of lawn mowers, no raking and carting away of grass after it is cut—these should make lawn mowing a pleasure at Carolina.

Visitor Is Fined

Ernest Hicks, a visitor in Chapel Hill, paid $5 and costs to Chapel Hill recorder's court Monday upon his conviction of public drunkenness. Hicks had been so boisterously intoxicated when arrested that four men were required to convey him to the jail.

Former Carolina Student Wins Prominent Diplomatic Position

Being the second alumnus of the Universiity of North Carolina to be appointed to a prominent diplomatic office since President Hoover's election, the Hon. Gilchrist Baker Stockton, of Jacksonville, Florida, has recently been chosen to represent the United States as minister to Austria.

The new consul was born in Jacksonville in 1890 and lived there during his early education. He entered the University of North Carolina in 1909 as a member of the class of 1913. However his stay on the campus lasted only one year, and he finished his college courses at Princeton, whence he graduated in 1914, with the honors of Phi Beta Kappa. He was a Rhodes scholar from the state of Florida, and obtained his law degree and Master of Arts at Oxford.

In 1915 he was appointed to a membership in the Commission of Relief to Belgium, of which Hoover was then chairman. Later he was appointed special assistant to Walter Hines Page, representing the United States in matters concerning war in London.

When the United States entered the war, he enlisted in the Navy and served as a lieutenant of the Junior Grade of the Naval Reserve Corps. Later he was appointed aide to Admiral W. S. Sims, in command of U. S. ships in foreign waters. In this capacity he served until the end of the war.

In 1919 he went to Vienna with the American Relief Expedition, being appointed chief of the Mission to Austria, which office accompained the task of feeding 300,000 children every day. He remained at this post until 1920.

Due to the merits of his activities in Europe, he has received the Gold Cross of Honor for the Order of Merit of the Austrian Republic, the degree of Chevalier of the Crown of Belgium, the Medal of Salvator from the city of Vienna, and also honorary medals from the cities of St. Quentin and Lille in France.

ANNUAL CONTEST IN JOURNALISM CLOSES JUNE 1

Rankin Announces Journalism Contests for North Carolina High Schools.

The seventh annual contests in journalism for North Carolina high highs, conducted under the auspices of the extension division of the University, were announced yesterday by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the committee in charge of the contests.

These contests are known as the Hume Cup high school newspaper contest, so named in honor of the late Dr. Thomas Hume, for a number of years head of the English department of the University, and the annual high school magazine contest. They were inaugurated by the extension division in the hope that through them excellence of attainment in the field of high school journalism might be encouraged in North Carolina high schools.

Schools which plan to enter their publications in the contests should send their files for the year 1929-30 to the central committee at the University by June 1, 1930.

In all cases, according to the announcement, the publications submitted are to have been edited by students and to have appeared at least eight times during the year. There is no objection to some degree of faculty supervision.

In the case o the newspaper contest, the school winning the Hume Cup the greatest number of times in ten years is to keep it as a permanent possession; while the school winning the magazine award is to receive as a permanent possession a trophy cup presented by the University extension division.

The judges in making their decision will consider news values, editorial values, and the general make-up and typographical appearance of the publications entered in the contests.

Winners of the magazine and newspaper contests, respectively, in the past were Raleigh and Greensboro in 1924; Asheville and Durham in 1925; and Greensboro for both magazine and newspaper contests in 1926, 1927, 1928, and of the Hume Cup in 1929.

The committee in charge of the contests is composed of N. W. Walker, chairman, E. R. Rankin, secretary; Addison Hibbard, L. R. Wilson, O. J. Coffin and R. W. Madry.

Both the famous producers and the equally well-known director, when asked for minute details about this spectacular performance, were reluctant to talk further at present but have promised this journal a series of exclusive interviews and news releases. Meanwhile, your correspondent was able to discover among the cast are the following stars:

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

All wish to be learned, but no one is willing to pay the price.—Juvenal.

Tar Heel Topics

London dispatches are to the effect that the "crisis of crises" has been reached in the naval disarmament conference. In other words, the delegates seem to have gotten themselves into a critical mess.

Chinese bandits are holding fifty school children for ransom. If the Chinese school kids are anything like their American contemporaries, the bandits have something besides ransom money to worry about.

Latest additions to the University resignation list: Dr. Vilbrandt and A. C. Nash. Speaking in baseball parlance, the University seems to be developing into a first-rate bush league outfit for the development of big time profs.

"Carolina Students in Spiritual Election"—headline in Saturday's News and Observer. We suspect that somebody's trying to give us a dirty dig or poke a bit of sarcasm our way, but we'll be darn if we can decide which it is.

Istanbul Sells Her Secrets

A considerable decline in the stock of "dime novel" publishing concerns should follow the announcement that the imperial harem of the seraglio palace of the Ottoman sultans at Istanbul was thrown open yesterday to tourists and other sensation seekers at two bits per. It is an interesting commentary on dominance of modern materialism and commercialism that the city of Istanbul, once the royal dispenser of terror and mystery, to a romance-loving world, is selling the last of her secrets.

For four and a half centuries a veil of mystery and romance has been closely drawn about this portion of the seraglio palace. It was the most jealously guarded corner of the magnificient palace and of the vast Ottoman empire. Hundreds of fierce eunuchs within, thousands of heavily-armed soldiers without, huge walls and heavy bronze gates inviolate the mystery of the imperial harem. Hack writers and more competent literary men made capital in every language of the appeal to the popular imagination provided by accounts of the sultans and dowagers who passed their lives within the walls of the royal harem.

Those of a romantic turn of mind will deplore the passing of the last of the royal harems as another evidence that the world is fast becoming prosaic, with little remaining of the mysterious and exciting aspects of life. But more optimistically practical men will hail the opening of the ancient stronghold of Asiatic luxury and voluptuousness to the curious at 25 cents as an indication that the dollar, franc and pound are becoming worthy of the sobriquet of almighty. But that does not necessarily mean that life is becoming any the less romantic, mysterious or attractive.

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Tuesday, April 8.—"The Wisdom of Duty." (Read Romans 15:1-9.) Memory verse: "Bear ye one another's burdens."

Meditation: Many people do not like the word duty. A friend remarked recently: I hate the word duty. I have heard it all my life. I wish I might never hear it again." "Duty" meant to him a line of conduct demanded by somebody else—a load laid upon him from outside, without his consent. Duty is not something that others require of us. It is something that we require of ourselves. It is a line of conduct that we must pursue toward others if we are going to arrive at ourselves. It is the road to that sense of inner satisfaction that is, perhaps, to a normal person the best indication that he is realizing his true relation to his fellow men. Regarded in this way duty is not irksome bondage but the road to life.

Prayer: "As neglected duties come now to mind, help us to go back and faithfully discharge them, lest we stand at last condemned before thee, and lose beyond recall the joy of having done Thy will upon earth, to make heaven about us." Amen.

Lingle Will Deliver Baccalaureate Sermon

Rev. Walter Lee Lingle, president of Davidson College, has been selected to deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the University graduates on Sunday, June 8, as a part of the regular commencement exercises.

Rev. Lingle received the office of president of Davidson College this past year. Formerly he was president of the General Assembly Training School for Lay Workers at Richmond, Va., also holding a position on the faculty board at the Faculty Union Theological Seminary in the same city.

Negroes Go To Roads

William McRay, colored, charged Jack Williams, sometimes known as Jack Hargraves, with assault upon him with a deadly weapon. In another case on the docket of the local recorder's court Monday, Jack had a similar charge against William.

Both were given two months on the county roads, to be suspended upon payment of costs and good behavior for a year.

WHOOPEE QUEEN ROLE FOR MARIE PREVOST

Marie Prevost, who essays the role of a "whoopee queen" in the Tiffany all-talking production, "Party Girl," now showing at the Carolina theatre, is one of the small group of outstanding stars of the silver screen, including Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels and Phyllis Haver, who originally began their careers as bathing beauties in Mack Sennett comedies.

Like her sister stars, however, Miss Prevost was far too talented to be wasted on two-reelers. She essayed her first featured role opposite Charlie Ray in "The Old Swimmin' Hole," several years ago, and after that appeared in a number of notable productions, including "The Beautiful and the Damned," "Tarnish," "Kiss Me Again," "The Marriage Circle," and "The Dark Swan."

Fans will no doubt remember the brilliant characterization given by Miss Prevost in Cecil B. DeMille's sensational picture, "The Godless Girl," in which she had an outstanding role. Another recent production of the dark-eyed Canadian player was opposite William Boyd in "The Flying Fool," released several months ago.

Marie Prevost's hobby is pets. At her home in Beverly Hills she has a St. Bernard dog, a Police dog, a pair of fox terriers, a pair of Cairn terriers, two gigantic Persian cats—each with its individual kennel.

Beats Up Wife

Lee Baldwin, colored, who hauls coal for the University, has his troubles. Recently returned from several months on the road, he saw his wife coming from the home of William Austin, colored.

Upon her admission that William had been pinch-hitting as husband during his absence, Lee Lee proceeded to tear off her clothing and chastise her. The next day he repeated his punishment, and on the next day he appeared in court, not only upon the charge of assault, but on another, public drunkenness, as well.

Judge Hinshaw assessed him with $2.50 and costs for drunkenness, and with costs for the assault charge.

Lee expressed willingness to continue living with his wife, and she with him, but Lee insisted that their residence be in Durham, away from the tempting home of William Austin.

Royster at Wake Forest

A Tribute from His Former Roommate, Charles U. Harris

The writer knew James Finch Royster in his boyhood days in Raleigh, and at Wake Forest College roomed with him. The news of his death was a great shock.

In his youth at Wake Forest he was known as Jimmie Royster. To his friends he was a marvel. He was courageous. He was absolutely loyal to his friends. He was interested in all college activities. He was president of the Euzelian Literary Society; played a splendid game of tennis, and caught on the college baseball team in his senior year, 1900. He made the team despite the handicap that he could not "peg" to second—overcoming this by perfecting a first bounce throw that got the runner.

He was one of the three most distinguished students in college—the other two being Joe Adams, now of the Cornell English faculty, brother of Winston Adams, late of the Charlotte Observer, and Harry Trantham, a Rhodes scholar, who is teaching somewhere in the South now.

Royster's ability to think, to grasp, and to learn, caused his fellow students to look upon him in awe and wonder. His love was the English course, under the late Dr. Benjamin F. Sledd. His marks in this and parallel courses were nearly always perfect. He loved Chaucer, Matthew Arnold, Poe, and Shelley. He had a profound respect amounting almost to a reverence for Shakespeare. He wrote for the Wake Forest Student an article on Shelley that was too deep for his classmates and which caused favorable comment among scholars over the country. He finished his college course in three years—and as a sideline completed the law course.

Sometimes Royster attempted to appear hard-boiled, and free from sentiment or emotion, but he could not do this successfully, because deeply ingrained in his nature were the tenderest emotions and sentiments. The friends of his at Wake Forest numbered the entire faculty and student body.

To them his death brings deep grief.

Charles U. Harris.

Injured Students Show Improvement

Reports from Watts hospital state that Larry Flynn, J. D. McNairy, Jr., and J. C. Anderson, University students who were injured Friday night, are all getting along nicely at present. They were injured when Flynn's car ran into that driven by Bobby Deese on the Nelson road. Flynn suffered internal injuries, while McNairy and Anderson received head injuries. Glenn Holder, John Wilkinson and Al Lansford, occupants of Flynn's car, received minor bruises and cuts but were not detained at the hospital.

UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA GIVES RALEIGH CONCERT

The University Band appeared Sunday afternoon before a small but appreciative audience at the City Auditorium, Raleigh.

The concert, a full and interesting one, was under the auspices of the Wake county Alumni Association of the University.

In addition to the band numbers, T. S. McCorkle, director, rendered a violin selection accompanied by his wife, and Charles H. White, Jr., student leader, gave a cornet solo.

Under the same auspices and in the same place, the University orchestra will give a concert on Sunday, April 27.

38 HIGH SCHOOLS IN DEBATING FINALS

Thirty-eight North Carolina high schools had reported last night to E. R. Rankin, secretary of the High School Debating Union, that they won both sides in the triangular debates held over the state Friday night and would send teams to Chapel Hill for the finals on April 17 and 18.

Secretary Rankin said a number of schools had not yet reported.

The schools debated the query, "Should North Carolina adopt the preposed constitutional amendment authorizing the classification of property for taxation?"

The following 38 schools reported they won both sides: Altamahaw - Casipee, Aurelian Springs Ayden, Benvenue, Black Creek, Bonlee, Bragtown, Chowan, Como, Copeland, Elizabeth City, Gibson, Glen Alpine, Goldsboro, Granite Falls, Greensboro, Griffith, Harris, Hendersonville, Hollie, Leggett, Lumberton, Marshville, Morven, Newport, Paw Creek, Pikeville, Randleman, Roseboro, Scotland Neck, Tarboro, Troy, Wakelon, Washington Collegiate Institute, Weaverville, Weeksville, Wilkesboro, Woodland-Olney.

Suspended Sentence Given Tubercular

Button Norwood, Jr., 25, colored, who has tuberculosis and recently spent several months in a sanitarium, was arrested a few minutes before convention of the local recorder's court Monday when he was found with two half-gallon jars of whiskey in his old automobile.

Denying that he ever sold whiskey, Button alleged that, although his physician had not prescribed it, he had found it beneficial to his health.

Button testified that $15 in one-dollar bills found in his pocket, had been sent him by his wife, who works in New York and sends money to him for his support.

"Two months on the road," said Judge C. P. Hinshaw, "but since you're sick, we'll suspend it on condition that, for 60 days, you do not set foot in Chapel Hill. And I have my opinion of a man who'll let his wife work for his support, and then spend the money for whiskey."

Esperanto Club To Continue Classes

In the last few meetings of the Friends of Esperanto, the question of the combination of regular classes was discussed. All present voted against discontinuation, and asked the instructor to conduct, as usual, a class every Tuesday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock during the month of April.

Accordingly, the class will meet today at 5 o'clock in order to continue the reading and translation of a short story written in Esperanto. Any one interested in this international language is welcome. Meeting place is 109 Saunders hall.

Student Marries

Jonathan W. Jackson, University student from Hendersonville, returned to Chapel Hill Sunday with his wife, the former Miss Carolina Farnum of Orangeburg, S. C. Mrs. Jackson has been living with her parents since the announcement of the marriage in December. At present, the couple are at home at the Carolina Inn.

Mr. Jackson is well known here as a star halfback on the freshman football team. He is the son of Brownlow Jackson, former chairman of the state republican committee and United States Marshall at Hendersonville.

Uuiversity Nine Plays Maryland Here Today

First Tri-State League Game For Tar Heels On Emerson Field This Afternoon.

FLEMING LIKELY TO HURL

Carolina Has Won Three and Lost Two This Season; Maryland Playing North Carolina Teams This Week.

The Tar Heel nine meets Maryland on Emerson field at 4 o'clock this afternoon in its one home game of the week. This game will open the Tri-State league season for the Tar Heels, defending champs, and Coach Jim Ashmore will probably send his veteran hurler Frank Fleming and his strongest club against the invaders. A previous Tri-State League game was scheduled with Washington and Lee but was rained out.

In early games the Tar Heels have taken one from Springfield and split a brace of games each with Cornell and Georgia, for three victories and two losses.

The Tar Heels have played splendid ball afield in these opening games, but hitting has been decidedly below the high level that carried Carolina to its Tri-State title last year.

Coach Jim Ashmore continued to stress this important department of play in yesterday's staff workout, and Tar Heel fans are hoping the Carolina nine will find its old batting eye this afternoon.

The probable lineup for the home team was announced this morning as follows: Fleming, p; Captain Maus, c; Jackson, 1b; Rand, 2b; Whitehead, ss; Lufty, 3b; Davis, lf; Sher, cf; and McKinney, Blythe or House, rf.

Freshmen To Play Winston Wednesday

The Carolina freshman baseball team will play the Winston Salem High baseball team here Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock.

The Tar Babies started off their season with a 26-5 victory over Darlington Preparatory school last Saturday afternoon, in which they showed unusual strength at bat as well as some very classy fielding.

Griffith will probably be Coach Cerney's choice for mound duty, with Peacock behind the plate. Cerney expects to use as many players as possible in order to get a better line on the ability of the 40 promising candidates still remaining on the squad.

Dekes Win 13-4

Rallying in the last inning to get 9 runs, the Dekes overwhelmed Phi Alpha yesterday afternoon, 13 to 4. The Phi Alpha team was greatly handicapped by having only six men on the field. Newcombe, D. K. E. pitcher, allowed only two hits, but walks and errors enabled Phi Alpha to get four runs.

SPORT RAMBLES

Roulhac Hamilton

The track team has started out to show that it means business as far as maintaining its perfect dual meet record of the last eight years. An exhibition meet against State and a regularly scheduled meet against Georgia Tech both resulted in overwhelming victories for the Tar Heels. The lop-sided score against Tech was a startling surprise, but may be partially explained by the fact that several Tech stars were injured early in the week. Tomorrow the team meets Duke and is doped to continue their long winning streak.

The Purdue Exponent calls our attention to a discovery of Robert Edgren, well-known syndicate sports writer. It seems that Mr. Edgren, while browsing among some ancient records, ran across that of Mr. George Seward, an American sprinter who did most of his running around 1840. Edgren says that in 1840 Seward ran the 100-yard dash in 9¼ seconds from a standing start, the crouching start being an unknown aid to sprinters of that day. His record was one-fourth of a second faster than Charley Paddock's best time (made from a crouching start) and .15 second faster than George Simpson's world's record, made recently from a crouching start and starting blocks. In another race in which he and his competitor moved from ten yards behind the actual starting line, Seward ran the 100 yards in 9 seconds flat. Which is fairly good time.

From the University of Denver comes the news that Mr. Speedy McCue, instructor of swimming, has run into difficulties with his life-saving class which he conducts for the benefit of the co-eds. The previous training of the young ladies, according to Mr. McCue, has been insufficient for his purposes. Said "Speedy," having unsuccessfully attempted to teach the fair damsels something of the art of rescuing, "I supposed that this class was familiar enough with anatomy to get my meaning when I told you to seize the victim by the chin. If you don't know what a chin is try the nose. Almost any hold is better than the strangle." We had just about made up our minds to suggest that the University make some provision for swimming teams for both men and women, but now we realize that we must find out the extent of the anatomical knowledge of the co-eds before going any farther. They must at least be able to differentiate between the chin and the neck before they can receive proper instruction.

Salvador, Central America, has a nine-man baseball team. This figure includes the substitutes. In the Central Olympic games, Salvador met Mexico for the title and the catcher was hurt. As a baseball team can't operate without a catcher Salvador was forced to forfeit the game. We don't know which team objected most strenuously to the forfeit—it eliminated any chance Salvador had of capturing the championship, but Mexico was leading by 22 runs. Maybe the Mexicans wanted to continue the slaughter.

Intramural competition threatens to demand all the time of the participants. Baseball, tennis and boxing are all under way and the ancient and popular game of horseshoes will soon join them. They all take lots of time, but the interest shown in them indicates that they must be worthwhile.

TRACKMEN RECEIVE CAROLINA PASSES

Members of the track team who have scored as many as eleven points will receive passes to the Carolina theatre according to an announcement by E. C. Smith, manager. Five men, Charlie Farmer, Theron Brown, Minor Barkley, Dave Neima and Bill Perry, have scored that number in the first two meets. The manager also stated that he will continue the practice during the coming season.

Carr Defeats Mangum

Carr defeated Mangum yesterday 8-4. The outstanding feature was the pitching of Saunders for Carr, while Abel, Froneberger, Robbins and Witkin led the hitting. Mangum used two pitchers; Grindstaff, coming in cold in the second, pulled out of a bad hole.

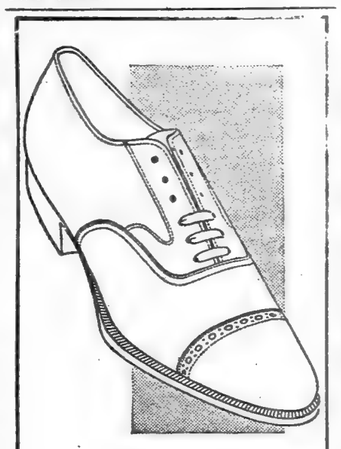
Trackmen Meet Duke

The Tar Heel track team, which upset Georgia Tech Saturday by the score of 104 to 27, will engage Duke tomorrow at 4 o'clock on Emerson field in its third dual meet of the season.

Duke went down in defeat before the Generals of Washington and Lee, Southern Conference indoor champions, 80-46 in a meet held March 29, taking only three of 14 first places. Simon, Duke miler, showed his usual form in taking first place in that event and is counted on to give Barkley stiff competition when they meet tomorrow afternoon. Freeman, high-jumper, and Heizer, two-miler, were the other two Duke stars winning their events.



Rekers To Race Here

When the Tar Heel track team meets the strong Penn State team in dual meet here on April 19, one of the visiting stars to watch will be Paul Rekers, distance ace. Rekers is both a cross country and track star, and will probably be seen in the two-mile race in the meet here. He ran the two-mile in 9:26 1-5 in his first time out, and lowered the intercollegiate record in his last start from 9:30 4-5 to 9.22 4-5.

Johnny Henderson, captain of last year's cross-country and track teams, has credit for running this distance the fastest it has been run in the south, 9:38.1, which comparison gives some idea of what may be expected in the Penn State test.

Vilbrandt Accepts Position At State University Of Iowa

Will Become Head Of The Department of Chemical Engineering At Western School; Continues Duties Here Until September First.

Dr. Frank C. Vilbrandt has resigned to accept a position at Iowa State University. He will continue his instruction here until September 1 when he will begin his work at Iowa State.

Dr. Vilbrandt came to the University in 1921 to take the position of professor of industrial chemistry. This position he held until 1927 when he was made head of the department of chemical engineering. In the nine years that he has been here he has carried out the following researches: floating equilibrium, sulfur dioxide oxidation sodium for potassium compounds, North Carolina shales and shale oils, low temperature distillation of coal, North Carolina coals, refining of fish oils, emulsions, electro-plating, North Carolina brick clays, cotton classifications, reclaiming crank-case oils, lubricating oils studies, insecticides, synthetic plastics, road tars and emulsions, cotton mercerization, synthetic methanol, grinding economics, mixing studies, shrimp waste utilization, vitamins in shrimp oil, iodine compounds in shrimp, rayon, industrial wastes, cotton seed and cotton seed oil, and corrosion due to aerated waters. In his private researches Dr. Vilbrandt has formulated the composition for the Nu-Shine leather polishes, which are made in Reidsville. He has also discovered a method by which he can make artificial rubber.

At Iowa State he will fill the position of head of the department of chemical engineering and director of senior and graduate research. Of the 6,500 students at Iowa State 223 are taking chemical engineering while a much larger number are taking other courses in chemistry. The chemicial engineering students have a separate building as large as Venable hall. Dr. Vilbrandt will confine his research at Iowa State to agricultural wastes.

Dr. Vilbrandt received his A. B. from Ohio State University in 1915, his A. M. in 1916 and his Ph. D. in 1919, both from Ohio State. Before coming to the University he had taught at Ohio State University from 1917 to 1921. He is a member of Alpha Chi Sigma, Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, Phi Lambda Upsilon, American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Institution of Chemical Engineering, Elisha Mitchell Society.

The department of chemical engineering has made much progress under Dr. Vilbrandt, and there is deep regret at the loss of him.

Eastman To Give Away Kodaks During Year

Rochester, N. Y., April 6.—A plan to give away more than half a million cameras to children whose twelfth birthday falls in 1930 was announced today by the Eastman Kodak company through its founder, George Eastman.

The gifts are to mark the 50th anniversary of the first photographic patent granted to Mr. Eastman. Five hundred thousand of the cameras are to go to children in the United States and "a further number" to Canadian children.

The children, the announcement said, have only to go with a parent or guardian to their local photographic dealer between May 1 and June 1 to receive the gifts. Each camera will be supplied with one roll of film.

ENGINEERS GET RESEARCH AWARD

Chemical Foundation Awards University Thousand Dollars For Research Work.

Because of its activity in sanitary engineering research, the School of Engineering has received from the Chemical Foundation, a grant of one thousand dollars to be used for research work on sewage and industrial waste.

The work to be done under this grant will probably begin about the first of June, and will consist of research work on the treatment of textile plant wastes. The research will be done in an effort to find a suitable means for treating waste from textile mills so that it may be discharged into waterways and sewers.

The sanitary engineering department of the school of engineering has already done some work in this field, for several years ago under a grant from the city of Durham a suitable treatment for the waste from mills was worked out.

The research to be done under the grant will be done in cooperation with the North Carolina state Board of Health and the North Carolina Association of Textile Chemists and Colorists. On the advisory board of the groups directing the activities of the fund, will be several representatives of the textile industry in the state.

The importance of a study of a proper treatment of textile wastes is becoming more important as the industry is expanding in this and other states. Already the polution of streams by the discharge of wastes has become a serious problem.

The proper treatment for textile wastes that are discharged into municipal sewage lines has also become a problem of some importance, and the work to be done under this grant is directly connected to a problem which is constantly growing larger.

The University of North Carolina is the only southern institution to receive a grant from the Chemical Foundation, and it is one of a very few in the entire country to receive such aid. The award of this grant to the University was made because of the record of the sanitary engineering department in research work on sewage.

For three years studies have been made of the effect of chlorine upon sewage. These studies have been made possible by a grant of the Chlorine Institute of New York. Studies have also been made of the treatment of the sewage of Chapel Hill, which has a very high grease content, because of the lack of industrial plants and the large number of boarding houses and restaurants.

The Chemical Foundation, which is making the grant is a publicity and propaganda organization of all the chemical interests in the United States. It sponsors research work, and keeps the work of the chemical engineer before the public so that it may better become acquainted with this work.

LEONARD RAISES CHICKS

In the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love while an older man's fancy usually turns to thoughts of gardening, but Mr. Grady Leonard is an exception to both rules. He is thinking of entering the poultry business. He stated yesterday morning that he was having the house built now, but that he has not bought any chickens as yet.

RALEIGH MAN IS INJURED MONDAY

William Guess Receives Fractured Skull When Automobile Collides On Nelson Road.

William Guess, 28, Raleigh merchant, received a fractured skull and several painful body bruises in an automobile collision on the Raleigh road about two miles from Chapel Hill early Monday morning. The driver of the other car, a Bell Telephone engineer, whose name is unknown, received many cuts on the face, requiring a large number of stitches. Both were brought to the University infirmary and were given first-aid treatment by Dr. Abernethy.

The accident occurred about 6:30 Monday morning. Guess, who had spent the week-end on the campus, visiting friends, was returning to Raleigh. He was removed from the infirmary to Rex hospital in Raleigh, where a report late yesterday afternoon gave his condition as fair.

Standard Oil Man To Interview Seniors

The Standard Oil Company of New York will have a representative in Chapel Hiil on April 16 to interview seniors who are interested either in their foreign or domestic service. Information describing in detail the proposition which this company offers is available at the office of the bureau of vocational information, 204 South building. Students who would like to get this information or who are interested in interviewing the representative concerning employment are urged to see Henry Johnston as soon as possible. It is probable that the Standard Oil man will not have time to interview all of the men who make application.

Character Saves Him

"Good character" saved Sank Mack, colored employee of a local undertaking establishment, several dollars in recorder's court Monday morning.

Mack had been arrested for public drunkenness, and, when he had plead guilty, a member of the local police department arose with a defense that Sank was generally a most law abiding man. Another officer did likewise.

"These officers seem to think you're all right, Sank," said the judge. "They don't usually defend any one they've arrested. I'll let you off with $2.50 and costs."

203 Registered In Engineering School

The total number of students registered in the school of engineering for the spring quarter, as announced by Dean G. M. Braune yesterday, is 205.

This number indicates a decrease in registration from the winter quarter registration of 228 which is comparable to the decrease of the winter quarter registration from that of the fall quarter.

The student registration of the school is made up of the following number in each class: 77 freshmen, 41 sophomores, 47 juniors, 39 seniors, and 8 graduate students.

Since the fall quarter the number of students registered in the School of Engineering has fallen from 248 to the present number of 205. Of the total decrease in registration, freshmen discontinuing work in this school accounted for 27. Members of the sophomore class not re-registering in the school made up the other 16. There were no juniors or seniors who discontinued their scholastic work.

When commenting on the registration figures Dean Braune stated that the apparently high student mortality rate in the School of Engineering is nothing unusual, for all technical schools have the same conditions. Many students enter the engineering school not knowing what it is like, and as soon as they find that they are not fitted for the work, they change to another branch of the University. It is interesting to note that the entire group of students failing to re-register for engineering courses were of the lower two classes, and that every junior and senior has remained in the school the entire year.

DEBATE TEAM IN THREE CONTESTS

To Meet Maryland, Northwestern, and Boston University Within Next Month.

The latter part of the present month and the early part of May will see the Carolina debaters engaging in three intercollegiate contests. Three queries will be used.

Bill Speight and McB. Fleming-Jones leave Thursday night for College Park, Maryland, where they will debate the University of Maryland's representatives on "Resolved, that the principle of the chain store is detrimental to the best interests of the American public." The local team will uphold the negative.

Carolina will be represented against Northwestern here April 15 by Billy Uzzell and John Wilkinson. The chain store question will again be used. The visitors will uphold the negative.

J. C. Williams, J. M. Baley, and G. P. Carr will journey to Boston early in May to debate Boston University's forensic aggregation on "Resolved, that the nations of the world should adopt some plan of complete disarmament of all forces, except those which are needed for police purposes." The Carolina team will debate the negative.

RECTOR DELIVERS INAUGURAL TALK

President For Spring Quarter Is Installed By Dialectic Senate.

The Dialectic Senate started off the quarter with a well attended meeting last night, the feature of which was the inaugural addres s of President Beatty Rector. Giving a brief history of the founding and of the early years of the senate, he cited the names of famous men who have been affiliated in the past with it, mentioning those of William R. Davie, James K. Polk and William R. Kenan. Emphasis was placed upon the prestige and position of importance which the senate held in former times. Turning then to present conditions, President Rector deplored the lack of interest and participation in the activities of the organization. "What we need, Senators, is not merely organization, but vitalization," emphatically declared the president, and illustrated the statement with references to Lincoln's Gettysburg address. He informed the senate of a visit, made in accordance with the constitution, to the graves of former Di Senators, and told of inspiration which had there come to him. He appealed to each Senator to cooperate to the fullest extent in the undertakings of the organization.

In outlining the work for the present quarter, President Rector gave three aims to be attained: the fulfillment of the constitution and its requirements, hanging of an additional number of pictures on the senate walls, and hearty cooperation with the Phi Assembly in carrying out any and all projects. He proposed the making of the hall and of the activities so attractive that non-members will be anxious to seek admittance. Emphasis was placed not upon how

Sir Herbert Ames Comes Here Tomorrow To Deliver Series Of Lectures On World Peace

Ex-Financial Director of League of Nations To Speak Before General Public And International Relations Club Thursday Through Saturday; First Address Tomorrow At 4 O'clock.

(By K. C. Ramsay)

Sir Herbert Ames, ex-financial director of the League of Nations Secretariat and prominent member of the Canadian Parliament for many years, comes to Chapel Hill tomorrow to deliver a series of addresses and conduct forums on subjects pertaining to the League of Nations and international peace. He is brought here under the auspices of the International Relations Club of the University and will be in the village through Saturday.

His first address will be in Gerrard hall at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon before the International Relations Club and all others interested. "The Promise of Peace" is the subject for the first lecture. In this address Sir Herbert will discuss the Paris Conference, the origin of the league, analysis of the league covenant, and the duties of the league. The address will be illustrated by maps, charts and diagrams.

SIR HERBERT AMES

Public Lecture Thursday

Sir Herbert Ames will deliver his first address to the general public in Gerrard hall tomorrow night at 8 o'clock on "The Changing Spirit of Europe, 1919-1929." The speaker has made a very thorough study of the social and economic conditions of Europe in the past few years and is thoroughly familiar with "the changing spirit."

"The Machinery of the League of Nations" will be his subject at a meeting of the International Relations Club Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Sir Herbert will outline the organization of the league assembly, the league council, the auxiliary organizations, and the permanent secretarial in this address.

The second public address by Sir Herbert will be in Gerrard hall Friday night at 8 o'clock on "Will the Present Machinery Prevent War?" In this address the speaker will discuss alliances for outlawing war.

"The Fulfillment of the Promise" is the subject to be discussed before the International Relations club on Saturday morning at 10:30 in Gerrard hall. Sir Herbert will outline the first ten years of the league's work in this address, and show how it has prevented wars, saved nations from financial collapse, and removed century-old causes of international friction.

In addition to these public speeches Sir Herbert Ames will address several of the classes in history and government on Friday morning. The international relations club wants it understood that the public is cordially

Laurinburg Alumni Will Hold Banquet

An alumni banquet, culminating an intensive alumni rally in Scotland county, will be held in Laurinburg Friday, April 11. All the University alumni in Scotland county are expected to attend, coming mostly from the towns of Laurinburg, Laurel Hill, and Gibson. Also, Robert M. Hardee, chairman of the arrangements of the affair, will invite the alumni from Rockingham, Maxton, and Hamlet.

Dr. W. S. Bernard, and Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, will represent the University among the speakers of the evening.

Another alumni meeting was held yesterday in Statesville, and one will be held in Marion today. These two meetings are held in the interest of the Alumni Loyalty Fund.

Orchestra At Georgia

Carolina was well represented at the University of Georgia last week end. While the baseball team was entertaining on the diamond the Carolina Tar Heels, University orchestra, were playing for the German Club spring dances. The University musicians followed Jack Crawford, Weidemeyer, and other well known orchestras, and, according to the president of the Pan Hellenic council, were equally satisfactory. The Tar Heel orchestra will play for the Grail dance here this week end.

Dog Owners Pay Costs

Louis Sherfesee and Frank Chamberlain were each assessed with costs of an action taken against them last week as a result of the Chapel Hill dog ordinance, at Monday's session of the recorder's court.

Both were charged with allowing dogs to run about without muzzles and each of them pleading guilty, was assessed $5.80.

Sherfesee possessed what the arresting officer called "a little bittie dog," and claimed that he had been unable to purchase a muzzle small enough.

Chamberlain owned an aged and genial collie who had learned to remove a muzzle his master had purchased for him. Insisting that his collie was the most harmless of dogs, Chamberlain testified that his pet had been inoculated against rabies.

The Chapel Hill dog ordinance, providing for a fine of $50 to be levied against the owners of unmuzzled dogs, had been unenforced for some time until a large police dog owned by a local druggist, caused much trouble by biting children. Police are determined that there shall be no recurrence.

Notice

There will be a meeting in 103 Bingham hall Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock for those seniors in the department of economics and commerce who intend to take the senior examination in the spring quarter.

DRAMA FESTIVAL OPENS THURSDAY

Complete Program Is Announced By F. H. Koch, Director, And Miss Strobach.

The complete program for the seventh Drama Festival, which includes several changes from the original announcement, was released yesterday by Professor F. H. Koch, director, and Miss Nettina Strobach, state representative, of the Extension Division.

The Festival is to open Thursday, April 10, and continue thru Saturday, April 12. There are far more entries this year than last and the program will be larger than any held before.

Special events will be an invitation performance Thursday night by the Wayne Community Players of William Royall's "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder," recently selected to represent North Carolina in the national dramatic contest, and lectures by such well-konwn playwrights as Paul Green and Barret H. Clark.

Another special feature of the program for the week will be a special exhibit of costumes, stage models, posters and programs, submitted by the various members of the Carolina Dramatic Association. The exhibition will be placed in room 7, South Building. The doors will be open before the morning session, and between the programs.

The final preliminaries for county schools will be held at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, April 10, to be followed by registration of delegates at 4:30. The program will begin with the presentation, at 8 o'clock, of three original plays—Mrs. C. H. Griffith's "The Elopement," played by the Seaboard Woman's Club; Lucy Gaylord's "The Seventh Wave," by the Lenoir-Rhyne Playmakers; and William Royall's "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder."

The greater part of Friday's program will be taken up by an Institute on the problems and tendencies of the Little Theatre movement, which will feature a directors' and students' conference. Discussions will be led by such authorities as Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers; W. R. Wunsch, of the Asheville Little Theatre; Luther Greene, of the Universi-

Dr. Prouty Tells Of Work During Summer At Sigma Xi Meeting

In his talk before the Sigma Xi scientific society recently, Dr. W. F. Prouty told of work which he carries on during summer and recess periods concerning the nature and relation of the various Triassic deposits of eastern United States and of the Durham Basin in particular. He pointed out that, with the exception of slightly different types of sediments and structure, the great similarity in regard to the general characteristics warrant the conclusion that all are structurally related and have a similar geological history. He pointed out that structures to be found in rock formations are traceable to sediments and disintegration of radio active minerals in the Piedmont area during the late Paleozoic time. Later cooling and settling brought about shrinkage and block-faulting.

Dr. Prouty also summarized results of recent studies of Serpentine (marble) deposits in Maryland and Pennsylvania. The source of the silica found in the mineralization of the serpentine wall rock was concluded to be hydro-thermal alteration from active vein solutions.

Average Of 350,000 Gallons Of Water Used Daily In Chapel Hill

Outside of air, water is probably the most extravagantly used of the common resources of nature, but no freshman who finds that there is no hot water when he comes to take a bath after a workout in the gym would believe that there are twelve million two hundred and fifty gallons of this commodity used at Chapel Hill per month. The records kept at the filtering plant show a daily average of three hundred and eighty-six thousand gallons for last month while the preceding month the average was four hundred thirty-seven gallons per day. This difference is caused by the absence of the students during the spring holidays. So the freshman whose mother used to have such a hard time getting him to wash his ears during his grammar and high school days can now tell her that he not only helps to use something over twelve million gallons of water per month but that he often has to raise a row in order to get as much as he likes, of hot water especially.

As the water enters the filtering plant, a mixture of alum and lime is added which causes the dirt particles, silt, and much of the bacteria in the water to sink to the bottom of the great tanks where it is allowed to stand for settling. The monthly average of the amount of chemicals used is: alum, one thousand five hundred and forty pounds; lime, three hundred and fifty pounds. There is also a small amount of chlorine used. After the settling process the water is filtered and practically all of the dirt, bacteria, and discoloration is taken out of it. In one of the rooms of the plant there is a machine which somewhat resembles an old-fashioned water cooler, a glass jar turned bottom

MATERIALS FOR STOCK COMPANY PURCHASED HERE

Imperial Stock Company Believes In Buying At Home; To Produce "Thorns and Orange Blossoms."

In accordance with their established policy of patronizing local resources as fully as possible, Paul Green and Wilbur Daniel Steele, producers for the Imperial Stock Company of the sensational stage play "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," will not go outside Chapel Hill for either set or costume materials if they can possibly avoid it. This production, announced in the Tar Heel yesterday, will be presented on May 2 at the Playmaker Theatre, through the courtesy of Frederick Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers and leading exponent of folk drama in America.

The all-star cast, directed by Howard Mumford Jones, will be costumed in the dress of the period—the early 1880's, and as the play has four superbly dramatic acts, likewise calling for much ingenious adherence to the interiors of the period, the announcement of this patriotic policy will do much towards popularizing the Imperial Stock Company in Chapel Hill.

Mrs. Paul Green is assisting her husband in superintending the construction of the flats from good Chapel Hill pine, while Mrs. W. F. Prouty and Mrs. P. C. Farrar, in charge of costumes, will exploit the well-stocked shelves of Andrews-Henninger for the many yards of cloth needed both for costumes and drops.

Rehearsals are taking place nightly, and lovers of the drama are eagerly awaiting the date of the production—May 2.

McCarthy Talks At Sigma Xi Meeting

The following summary by Dr. G. R. McCarthy incorporates the substance of an address made recently before the Sigma Xi scientific society.

A preliminary study of the Atlantic Coastal Sands based upon about 120 specimens collected along the outer beaches from the northern end of Long Island to Cape Look Out has shown several interesting features. In all cases the average size of the sand particles decreased southward from each of the chief breaks in the coast line, i. e., New York Harbor, Delaware Bay, and Chesapeake Bay. The coarsest sands are found a short distance south of these openings, the sands growing progressively finer as one moves southward along the coast. It was also noted that in the immediate vicinity of each of these breaks in the coastline the sands were coarser than slightly farther away, the gradual decrease in size mentioned above not being in evidence for 10 to 20 miles.

This latter feature is explained as an effect of the scour of the tidal currents sweeping in and out of the bays, the finer materials being washed away first, leaving the coarser sands behind. The gradual increase southward was interpreted as an effect of the shore currents which move southward along the Atlantic coast, the moving sands being worn smaller in pro-

An A. B. In The Drama

During the past few years the University of North Carolina has become one of the most publicized institutions in the country. Probably the graduate school has attracted more national attention than any other single phase of the numerous activities here, although football and the development of the drama through the work of the Playmakers have played important parts in focusing favorable attention upon the University.

Professor Koch and his associates have done some notable work, but they have been under decided handicaps in several respects. The potentialities for development of the drama on the foundations laid here are almost without limit; the work at present in this field, although remarkable in view of the limited facilities for its performance, is inconsiderable in comparison to that which might be carried on under more favorable conditions.

At present University students interested in the drama must specialize in English or some other subject. They have no opportunity to take courses in the drama except as electives. Required courses must be fitted into their schedules, and the electives, in which they are primarily interested, must be taken, if at all, during periods which are not already occupied. Hence there is very little incentive for the undergraduate to develop a keen interest in all aspects of the drama, including background and creative work.

A notable experiment is being carried out at Harvard, where a group of alumni under the leadership of Walter Pritchard Eaton have established a School of Drama. Over a hundred students are enrolled in the three courses, which are non-credit. Mr. Eaton is one of the foremost dramatic critics in the country; he is one of the three judges who award the Pulitzer prize in the drama every year. Kenneth MacGowan, famous critic and playwright, is associated with Mr. Eaton in conducting the School of Drama at Cambridge. The success which has attended the school in its first year of existence is an indication of the keen interest of American undergraduates in the drama when they are given proper incentive and direction. Every year the importance of the drama in providing Americans with a means of expression and worth-while entertainment is increasing, and the University should take the leadership in this section of the country in the field of dramatic training.

If establishment of a School of Drama at the University is not feasible at present, an A. B. in Drama under the direction of the Liberal Arts School should be provided. A similar A. B. is now given in journalism, which enables the student to specialize in all departments of newspaper training, with a broad background of courses which will be of particular value in his field.

An A. B. in the Drama would enable the student to specialize in dramatic literature and in the creative work of playwriting and producing. He would be provided with opportunity and incentive to master the technique of the dramatic medium, acquiring a broad cultural background in addition.

Readers' Opinions

A SUGGESTION TO THE POLITICIANS

Editor of the Tar Heel:

Since the campus has now assumed a calm atmosphere after the turmoil of elections, and the energetic politicians are lounging lazily back in easy chairs blowing rings of smoke from large juicy cigars while formulating their schemes for next year's campaign, there is one suggestion that I would like to make. It is simply this: please select an editor for the Literary Supplement of the Almighty Daily Tar Heel.

Of all the offices recently acquired by the politicians, the only one which is not filled justly is that of the Editorship of the Carolina Magazine. It is a verified fact that the new editor is quite incapable of handling the job. Every one who knows him realizes how he misrepresents facts, re-hashes editorials, and writes foolish rhymes (which he wants published).

The Magazine will, more than likely, fall below the laughable standard set by the nationally known Buccaneer, but let us cooperate next year and put in a man who will bring the Magazine to the heights which its former editors have succeeded in maintaining.

A Student.

IN THE WAKE OF NEWS

Jack Dungan

The Student Body, the master of us all, has gone to the polls and given us instructions for another year, and I should say, in no uncertain terms.

When almost eighty percent of all students registered for the spring quarter go to the effort of running the gauntlet of feverish and desperate politicians in order to cast their ballots for one man or another, it can be said with just pride that the college is still the cradle of democracy.

Our congratulations to all candidates no matter which side they were elected by. The campaign was the hottest one we have ever witnessed. Animosity and even hatred may have been engendering during the past four months. THE THING TO REMEMBER IS: THE ELECTION IS QUITE OVER—LET'S SMOKE THE PIPE OF PEACE FOR THE NEXT FEW MONTHS AT LEAST.

Professors affirm that this is about the most hectic year that they can remember during the past decade, with the possible exception of the year that a certain Sid Chappell was president of the student body. Looking respectively at the past few months:

1. The fall developed an "almost" Southern Champion Grid Team.
2. The Tar Heel became a Daily.
3. The Magazine changed its form and plan.
4. Memorial Hall "gave up its ghosts."
5. The new Library was dedicated.
6. State Federation of Students proposed.
7. The lowly Frosh beat the Sophs in a snow fight.
8. A young student disappeared under very mysterious circumstances.
9. An all-time record student body vote was tallied during the hottest campaign on record.
10. Two major serious wrecks occurred within forty-eight hours of one another. Three students and a graduate are in a serious condition.
11. Bobby Deese may leave school!

Rocky Mount and Wilmington are two towns in these United States that know how to entertain guests. Talk about your good old Carolinian hospitality, these two cities have it. Shieks Wofford Humphreys, Jack Connolly, Johnnie Miller, and Fred Laxton, whose time is occupied principally in giving the little girls a little song, have petitioned Postmaster Herndon to employ an extra clerk in order to speed up the handling of their fan mail received from these two places.

What we would like to know is, "Who is called this meeting?" and if so "does they really know anything about who is going to be the next president of the University?" One of the defeated candidates for office running on the rising sophomore ballot has "the inside dope, see." And it is all settled according to him that a high school junior in Greensboro high school will be the president of the student body here in 1935. That would be framing!

Piano Recital By Helen Pugh Monday Evening Pleasing Many

Youthful Asheville Artist Possesses Remarkable Ability, Technical Ease, And True Understanding; Answers With Several Encores.

Helen Pugh, in her concert here Monday evening in the Methodist church, proved to a large audience that she is a real musician capable of playing any selection with a technical ease and true understanding.

The young musician from Asheville, who has been hailed as a genius all her life, plays the piano with an assurance and skill remarkable anywhere. The audience thoroughly approved of her and gave her repeated encores during the evening, to which she responded several times. In the whole recital there was disclosed a fine sense of time and rhythm and a more than adequate technique.

Miss Pugh was perhaps at her best in the well-known Hungarian Rhapsody, Number 12, of Liszt. Of the encores Brahm's Cradle Song, which was played with a sympathy such as is seldom found in more mature artists, was the best liked.

The program was arranged in three divisions. The first part included selections from Scarlatti, Gluck-Brahms, Mendelssohn, and Chopin. The delicate waltz rhythm that Miss Pugh introduced into the Chopin selections was decidedly pleasing and so subtly done that when she had finished one could not help feeling "So there!"

The second division of the program introduced two numbers from Liszt, two from Bridge, and one from Gruenfeld. It was through Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12" particularly that Miss Pugh's technique was displayed. One feels that Liszt himself—that master of artistic execution—would have nodded approval.

The final selection, which was preceded and followed by encores, was an arrangement of Strauss' "By the Beautiful Blue Danube"; namely, Concert Arabesque, Schulz-Evler.

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Wednesday, April 9.—Interrelated Lives. (Read Romans 14:1-7.) Key verse: "None of us liveth to himself."

Meditation: The opening sentence of David Copperfield runs—"Whether I shall turn out to be the hero of my own life, or whether that office shall belong to anybody else, these pages must show." The story leaves the impression that David furnished the deciding factor in the making of his own life. But he had much help in the shaping of his career. There were his aunt, Peggotty, Mr. Peggotty, Mr. Wickford, Agnes and the rest. There is no such thing as a self-made man. We are continually making each other. Other people have helped to make us. Their lives have entered into our lives. Because they lived we live also. No man can keep his life to himself. This was why Jesus said—"For their sakes I sanctify myself."

Prayer: We bless thee that we are set amid this rich brotherhood of interrelated life with its mysterious power to quicken and uplift. Make us willing to pay the due price for what we get by putting forth our own life in wholesome good will. Amen.

Lufty Leads Varsity Nine To 7-2 Win Over Maryland

Tri-State Champions Score First Victory In League.

NAP GETS HOME RUN

(By Jack Bessen)

Led by the great batting of Nap Lufty, who had a single, double, triple and home run to his credit, the Tar Heels inaugurated their tri-state schedule with a 7-2 win over the Maryland Old Liners yesterday at Emerson.

Carolina garnered their runs in the first and sixth innings by bunching their hits.

In the first inning Sher walked, Whitehead lined to right, Maus got life on an error by Gaylor, Old Line third baseman, and then came the first of Lufty's clouts, a screaming line drive to left field, which was good for a double. This hit drove in Sher and Maus. Blythe sacrificed Lufty to third and then Nap rode home on House's single to right center.

The Old Liners made their first run in the fifth when Berger lined a terrific drive to right center for the first home run on Emerson field this year.

The Tar Heels buried the visitors under a flurry of runs in the sixth when they garnered four runs as a result of four hits. Jackson tripled and counted on Fleming's sacrifice fly to center field. Sher beat out a hard hit grounder to the second baseman for a hit. Whitehead singled to right center sending Sher to third. On a roller to the pitcher by Jimmy Maus, Sher was thrown out at the plate. Maus advanced to second on an error by the second baseman and Whitehead scored. Lufty then poled a home run to center for his third hit scoring Maus in front of him.

From then on both teams were held scoreless until the ninth when the visitors pushed over a run on two infield hits, a fielder's choice and a stolen base.

The most outstanding player was Nap Lufty. By his prowess at the bat Nap drove in four runs and scored two himself. Lufty's homer was the first home run to the credit of a Carolina player this year. In the field Nap also acquitted himself well, handling many difficult chances without a flaw, his two errors being the result of poor throws.

Frank Fleming started the game and hurled steady, heady ball allowing the visitors one run and three hits in seven innings. Shields, a rookie pitcher, who succeeded Fleming also pitched well, allowing one run and three hits in two innings.

Cronin supplied the fielding gem of the game with a beautiful one hand running catch of Jack-

Frosh Will Meet Winston Here Today

The Tar Baby diamond squad will play the Winston-Salem high school team on Emerson field here at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon.

The Twin City highs usually put out an excellent team and are said to be as good this year as ever. The result of the Frosh-Darlington game is not to be taken as an indication of what will happen in the game with Winston or other high schools and freshman teams to be met this season.

The game showed up several glaring faults, especially in baserunning and sliding, which Coach Cerney has been working hard to correct.

A pair of orioles have been known to nest in the same tree 33 years.

SIDELIGHTS

by
Sports Editor

THE TRACK MEET THIS AFternoon will find a number of Carolina men up against old rivals. Duke presents strong men in the distance runs and they are expected to push the Tar Heels hard in this department. Barkley, Tar Heel cross country captain last season, and Simon, stellar Blue Devil distance star, will probably furnish a close race this year. In the meet in Durham last year Barkley was nosed out by a fraction in this run. Baucom, 1930 Tar Heel cross-country captain and Heizer, of Duke, will furnish close competition in the two-mile run. The Duke stars set fast paces to win the two events in the recent meet with Washington and Lee's southern indoor champs, and Barkley and Baucom did likewise in Carolina's recent win over Georgia Tech.

THE VAULTERS are being counted upon for at least two places in the pole vault this afternoon. Both Arnold and Neiman cleared 12 feet in the recent meet with Tech, and Smith, Dry, and Ruble also placed. Dry placed in the meet in Durham last year. In the meet with the Yellow Jackets the Tar Heels missed making a clean sweep of this event by a bare 1-2 point.

THE HIGH JUMP has been won by Bagby in all of the recent Tar Heel meets, in addition to his bid for first place in the S. I. C. indoor meet. However, a high jump duel is expected this afternoon between Bagby and Freeman, of Duke, who is one of the few four event men in the south. Freeman has placed first in all Duke's meets this season.

FOLLOWERS OF THE RElay team are doping out the Tar Heels' chances of lowering the southern record in the mile-relay. Weil, Gay, Captain Nims, and Farmer, came within one second of the University record in the Tech meet last Saturday when they turned in a 3:29 mile. Vanderbilt set the present relay record for the southern conference of 3:23 in 1926.

THERON BROWN, Tar Heel sophomore, has bettered the southern record for the discus in practice throws, and came within six and a fraction feet of that record in the recent meet with Georgia Tech. Theron also throws the shot, and broad jumps.

FARMER'S WIN OVER Hamm knocked the ruler from two of his thrones. Eddie Hamm has ruled over the southern sprinters for several years, and holds records in the 100 and 220 yard dash, in addition to his world's record for the broad jump.

THE SOPHOMORES seem to be monopolizing the honors on the Tar Heel track team this year, and promise even better for the future. Farmer, Brown, Slusser, Reid, Weil, Case, Smith, Ruble, Phoenix, Farris, Parsons, Remsen, and Johnson are all sophomores and hold prominent positions on the squad.

Boxing Notice

There is one bout which remains to be run off in the intramural boxing tournament. This bout will be between Watkins, frosh trackman, representing Ruffin, and Holderness, D. K. E., for the 145 pound Championship. The bout was postponed because of the large number of entries in the 145 pound class.

TRACKMEN READY FOR DUKE CLASH THIS AFTERNOON

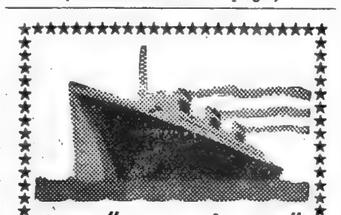
Fresh From 104 to 27 Win Over Tech, Tar Heels To Defend 8-Year Record of No Defeats In Dual Meets.

EMERSON FIELD 4 O'CLOCK

The flying Tar Heel trackmen, who upset the dope here Saturday by defeating Georgia Tech by 104 to 27, are to meet Duke's Blue Devils on Emerson field here this afternoon at 4 o'clock in what should be another feature meet.

The Dukemen, handicapped by lack of veterans, dropped an opening meet to Washington and Lee's Southern Conference indoor champions, but have a potentially strong team that is expected to show much more stuff against the Tar Heels.

Especial features are expected in the distance runs. Duke will bring in the persons of Simon and Heizer, who won the mile and two-mile over Washington and Lee's best men, two of the south's finest distance stars.



Carolina will present its own strength in these events, for Barkley and Lowry placed first and second in the mile against Georgia Tech, and Baucom and Wrenn finished one-two in the two-mile.

Fans will also be especially interested in the work of Freeman, Duke ace, who is one of the few four-event stars in the south; of Charlie Farmer, Tar Heel soph, who twice outsprinted Hamm, Georgia Tech's southern champ; and of Theron Brown, Tar Heel sophomore, who threw the discus better than 120 feet against Georgia Tech, and who is conceded an excellent chance of topping the 136 feet 6¼ inch southern record.

The Tar Heel trackmen are in good shape for this important test, and will send 11 lettermen and all their young stars against the Dukemen. The Carolina team has held the state title eight years running, and will also be risking a record of no defeats in dual meets over an eight-year period.

The following is the order of events and the tentative en-

BOXING PRELIMS RUN OFF BEFORE LARGE AUDIENCE

Intramural Bouts Marked By Antics of Inexperienced Contestants; Allen Referees Like Magnolia.

(By Hugh Wilson)

The preliminary bouts of the intramural boxing tournament were run off Monday night in the Tin Can before a crowd of two hundred, continually rocking with laughter at the weird antics of the inexperienced contestants and other amusing incidents. One contestant, knocked down but only slightly hurt, forgot to get up at nine, and, upon jumping up at ten, was counted out by the swift moving index finger of Archie Allen, who gave a good imitation of Lou Magnolia's style. The footwork displayed was of weird and varied type, varying from the leaping, dancing, whirling, fawn-like antics of one boxer to the elephantine plodding displayed by another. Archie Allen, as referee, contributed to the fun by counting like Lou Magnolia, of Sharkey-Scott fame, and by emulating Dave Barry, of the famous Chicago "long count." However, the "second Tunney" lost the decision to the not so unfortunate "second Dempsey." There were some very close and well-fought bouts run off in spite of the fun.

Fine sportsmanship was the rule throughout, especially in one of the 145-pound bouts. Holderness, D.K.E., accidentally fouled White, Phi Gamma Delta, but White refused to win on a foul and the bout was postponed.

The officiating was done in a manner deserving of a great deal of praise. Few professional referees could have handled the bouts better than Archie Allen and Harry Sheffield, who alternated at judging and refereeing. Allen, Sheffield, Goodridge, and Schnell, boxing manager, alternated at judging and did not

He has studied social and economic conditions in many parts of the world and has written several volumes concerning this subject, as well as some books on the work of the league.

JITNEY PLAYERS ARE TO PERFORM HERE NEXT WEEK

Shepperd Strudwick, Ex-Playmaker Will Star in Troupe's Production April 14-15.

The Jitney Players will present Sheridan's "A Trip to Scarborough" and Mrs. Centleaver's "The Wonder" in Chapel Hill, Monday and Tuesday, April 14 and 15, under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers. The troupe is starring Shepperd Strudwick, a member of the Playmaker organization during his undergraduate days at this university.

The Jitney Players are in their seventh season and have been characterized "the most unusual theatre in America." The group, which is modeled after the manner of the traveling troupes who helped create the drama in Europe during renaissance times, travels about the countryside in trucks. They have given performances in New York, Boston, Buffalo, Bridgeport and many cities in the New England states. This will be their first trip to this vicinity.

Since 1910 no first-class professional group has presented plays in Chapel Hill, the Shakespeare Players, appearing here recently in "Julius Caesar," being the only professional Shakespearean troupe which has appeared at the University in 20 years.

Remaining for five weeks at the Cherry Lane Theatre in New York, they were received with enthusiasm by the critics. The dramatic critic of the New York World said of them: "Their courage and enthusiasm and the picturesque nature of their venture have won for them a conspicuous place in the none too picturesque pattern of our theatrical scene."

"A Trip to Scarborough" was first presented in London at the Drury Lane Theatre in 1777, where its clearly defined satire of the society of the time won it considerable popularity. As now presented it is aided by music and occasional songs. Howard Barnes of the New York Herald-Tribune said of David Elliott, who took the part of Lord Foppington: "He captures the full flavor of eighteenth century artificial drama in his characterization."

Slade Presents Paper

At the meeting of the mathematics seminar Wednesday afternoon, J. J. Slade, instructor in mathematics, completed a series of three papers that he has presented on the general subject of coordinate systems.

The papers which Mr. Slade has presented have been discussions of the material covered in a mathematical thesis which he is writing on the topic of coordinate systems.

Assembly for Chain Stores

In its regular weekly meeting, members of the Philanthropic Assembly defeated the proposed bill: "Resolved, That the principle of the chain store is detrimental to the best interests of the American public." The assembly also voted that it favored the appointment of Judge John J. Parker to the U. S. supreme court.

The time of meeting was changed from 7:15 to 7:30.

History Of League Of Nations Is Exhibited In Y. M. C. A.

Display Is Forerunner of Visit Being Made Here This Week-End By Sir Herbert Ames, Internationally Known Advocate of the League.

In connection with the visit here today of Sir Herbert Ames, ex-financial director of the League of Nations Secretariat, an exhibit has been prepared in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. illustrating the organization and work of the league. The display which was printed by the information section of the League Secretariat, is made up of a group of 28 well illustrated posters, suspended from a wire around the wall of the entrance to the Y.

According to this history of the League, the organization was largely inspired by a statement from former President Woodrow Wilson, writing on world peace, when he declared that "a general association of nations must be formed under specific covenants for the purpose of affording mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike."

As the descriptive posters have it, the plans and purposes of the League are just as they were originally conceived by Mr. Wilson. These things, along with its system of organization and its fields of endeavor, are illustrated in the Y exhibit which is divided into the following sections, each subject requiring one or more full sheets for its complete discussion:

The covenant of the League, its comparative membership, its central organizations which consists of an assembly, a council, and a permanent secretariat, the associate organizations of the League, a group of six pictures of the presidents of the assembly, and an enumeration of the membership of the council, during the past few years.

A description of the work and personnel of the secretariat, descriptions of the work of the League in the fields of political activity, administration minorities, finance, economics, communication and transit, disarmaments, mandates, health, social questions, refugees, and intellectual cooperation.

There are also sections devoted to the work which League has accomplished with its peace treaties movement, its library, its budget (with which Sir Herbert has been connected), and its information section which distributes news of the affairs of the League to the press and direct to the public.

More elaborate discussions of the League of Nations will be given by Sir Herbert on his various public appearances here until Saturday. His first address in Chapel Hill will be before the International Relations Club, which is sponsoring his visit

SOPHOMORES WILL GIVE HOP FRIDAY

Regular Class Dance Will Be Held in Bynum Gymnasium Tomorrow Night.

Larry Johnson, president of the sophomore class, announced recently that the annual sophomore hop will be held tomorrow night in Bynum gymnasium.

At a meeting of the class held last Tuesday morning in Gerrard hall, President Johnson was elected to lead the dance. Ward Thompson and Lynn Wilder were selected to assist him.

The "Blue Devils" of Duke University have been engaged to play for the dance. Reports concerning this orchestra are to the effect that it is one of the best in the field of college bands.

Due to the diminutive size of the treasury at the present time, a small assessment will be charged each of those attending. According to the dance committee, a small number of upperclassmen will be admitted provided they bring girls with them. Tickets for the dance will be issued at the door.

Rather elaborate preparations for the dance are being made. However, informal dress will be allowed in order that the dance "may be completely enjoyed."

Two other dances are also on tap for the week-end. The Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity will have a dance Friday night at the Carolina Inn, and the Grail will have an affair Saturday night in the gym.

Members of the dance committee urge that the entire class take part in its dance tomorrow night. Many girls are expected for the week-end and the dance is expected to shatter all records of previous brilliancy and enjoyment of sophomore social events.

STATE Y'S WILL HOLD CONVENTION

Guilford To Be Official Hosts To College Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s

A joint meeting of the state Y.M.C.A.'s and Y.W.C.A.'s is to be held at Guilford College April 26, 27 and 28. This meeting which is held annually after the spring elections, is attended by the four retiring and the four newly-elected officiers from the several college and university Y associations in the state.

For three days these Y officers, in a well-planned program, discuss the diifferent problems of the several Y organizations. These discussions are divided into two divisions. In one division are the sets of retiring officers, who gather and exchange their experiences of the past year. The year's work is summed up and recommendations are handed down to the incoming officers. The work is then formally turned over to the new set of officers.

The other division, composed of the newly-elected officers, takes this summary from the other group along with the retiring group's recommendations, and plan the new year's work.

Last year this meeting was held at Salem College and was attended by officers from practically every college or university Y in the state. A bid will be put up at this meeting this year by the local Y for the meeting to be held here next year.

Fire Extinguished

The Chapel Hill fire department responded to an alarm from the local postoffice Tuesday, and were able quickly to extinguish a blaze that threatened a car belonging to W. S. Wilmoth. Damage was slight.

NEW 'CONTACTER' IS EMPLOYED BY IMPERIAL STOCK

Mrs. H. M. Jones Chosen By Directors to Publicize Next Production, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms."

Chapel Hill has now another product of this complex civilization in its midst—a publicity agent, public relations counsellor or any other euphemistic title that may cover the sins of a press agent.

Comfortably officed in the Alumni building, in a room which was once part of the University Press, Mrs. Howard Mumford Jones spends her busy days in writing careful, praiseworthy and praising articles, notices and news items of Thorns and Orange Blossoms, the play that is to be presented by Paul Green and Wilbur Daniel Steele and to be directed by H. M. Jones, member of the English department here.

The readers of the Tar Heel may have noticed the consistent and interesting stories that have appeared all this week about the forthcoming drama. Today's article is a mute attribute to the abilities of Mrs. Jones as a "contact" person. She spared no trouble in having Thorns and Orange Blossoms brought before the distinguished eyes of the noted visitors. And there is a campus-wide hope that she will be able to have Sir Herbert Ames see a rehearsal of the play so that every one will be able to read just what the famous member of the League of Nations thinks of the play, as well as the director and actors.

There is more to being a good Ivy Lee than strikes the reader's eye. It is not only necessary to apply the rules of good writing to what is known as "blurbs" but it is just as essential to be a good reporter and carefully arrange, as well as obtain, facts and figures for the press, or in this instance the Daily Tar Heel.

Indeed, it is an important position. Mrs. Jones can make or break people. For instance, the director of this play was virtually unknown until this morning, when the Chapel Hill journals will carry the opinion of Miss Susan Glaspell, the well-known playwright and authority, who suggested to Wilbur Daniel Steele that Mr. Jones be employed for the professional stage. Who knows but that this news item will reach New York and actually "make" the director. Had not Mrs. Jones been observantly noting each word and comma of Miss Glaspell's,

Grail Dance

The Order of the Grail will offer another of its dances in the gymnasium from nine to twelve o'clock Saturday night. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Alex Mendenhall and his Tar Heel Boys.

In accordance with the new Grail policy a desk will be placed in the lobby of the Y Friday for the sale of tickets to all those who will not be bringing girls. All those who plan to attend the affair are urged by the Grail officers to purchase their tickets early.

An unusual number of girls are expected to attend this particular dance.

Freshman Chapel Meets Again Today

The first freshman chapel for the spring quarter will be held this morning. Seat assignment cards have been mailed to all freshmen. The attendance for this class has so declined that Mr. Bradshaw finds it possible to seat all freshmen in the hall at one time.

Announcement as to further chapel programs will be made this morning. Those who have not received a card should get in touch with one of the chapel monitors at Gerrard hall at 10:23 this morning.

Moorer Unfound Yet

A radio announcement at 7 o'clock last Sunday night stated that Morgan P. Moorer, missing University freshman, was believed to have been seen near Charlottesville, Va., leading a stray cat by a string. This report was later tracked down and found to be without foundation.

Although the search has reached nation-wide proportions, no trace has been found of Moorer, who disappeared from the campus more than a month ago.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The folly of others is ever most rediculous to those who are themselves most foolish.—Goldsmith.

An Emissary of Peace Visits the University

A few months ago the peace dove seemed to be in a fair way of becoming a triumphant bird. Indications were that the London naval disarmament conference would actually do a job of disarming, and American entrance into the world court was practically assured. Adherence of the United States to the court already was diplomatically provided for. Everybody agreed for once that universal peace was desired, and a willingness to provide means for assuring it was expressed on all sides.

But at present the peace dove is running into a bit of tough going. The London conference has gone on the rocks, temporarily at least. There are plenty of indications that the five powers represented will not get together upon any real armament-reduction or limitation agreement. The dove may have grabbed a bigger claw-full than it can handle; even its world-court talon grip seems to be slipping.

Sir Herbert Ames' addresses here today, tomorrow and Saturday will be particularly timely in view of the rather unexpected turn in world affairs recently. He is a genuine emissary of peace, and his experience as financial director of the League of Nations secretariat qualifies him as an expert on the activities of the League and on international peace. His addresses will probably throw some light on the problem of how the world may go about the job of outlawing war, which is especially perplexing just now. At any rate, his audiences are assured of hearing interesting and highly valuable discussions.

A statesman's school has been founded at Princeton University.

The Voice Of the People

One of the commonest characteristics of mankind is the inability to see things in the light of reason. To apply common sense and careful consideration to questions and problems of paramount importance seems beyond the power of the majority of people. The world is quick to decide and quicker to be persuaded; when once its decision has been reached nothing will change it apparently. This trait leads to partisanship and the evils of democracy therefrom.

In elections especially does the average man betray hiimself in this respect. Political parties can be looked upon, in one way at least, as an outgrowth of dogmatic reasoning; voting a "straight ticket" is an expression of man's unshakeable belief in his own opinions. Those individuals who claim to be Democrats and who yet can be convinced that the Republican candidate is the superior, may justly claim to be regarded as exceptional, for the petty souled and narrow minded remained intrenched in the rut of their own bigoted and stupid party "loyalty" purely from—well, what? Can one call it prejudice? Conservatism? Or mental laziness?

Unfortunately, this deplorable tendency is usually the result of environment. Of course, the average person is naturally loath to surrender his opinions on a subject, regardless; it is gall to anyone to have his lack of judgement shown up. But aside from the psychological reasons one can attribute to this, or perhaps in explanation of the psychological reasons, there remains the fact that tendencies of this sort are bred in the bone. It is the natural thing for human beings when children to follow in the footsteps of parents in questions of religion, politics, education, and other such complexities of existence, but the parents' opinions too often become dogmatic assertions. The children grow up, and the tale is the same wiith the next generation.

It is not putting the right value upon democracy for the Republican father to teach his son to abhor the Democrats, to follow unswervingly in the paths set by the party leaders, blinding himself to sane debate and cogitation about the matter. But the Democrats do the same where their influence iis felt. And the Communist says nothing to his child of the good done by capital; he mentions philanthropy with scorn and casts opprobrium on public spirited figures. Capitalists' sons learn that all labor movements are of a violent nature and that all socialist agitation is "red."

So the world seems to go on, a big mob cut up into smaller ones, and each division convinced its principles, its leaders, its opinions are right, and all openly and arrantly contemptuous of the policies of each other. If one of these cliques is not capable of formulating its own ideas, then it displays an alarming readiness to accept second hand ones. Until more individualism and more sane intelligence is shown on the part of the body of the people, in matters of politics and government, at least, then the much boasted voice of the people will not have been displayed to the best advantage in the affairs with which it is concerned.—R. H.

An argument is going on between officials as to whether or not there is need for more territory for the activities of West Point Military Academy. It is proposed to add 17,000 acres to the campus. County officials object to this because of the loss of taxes it would incur.

The Campus

By Joe Jones

We read yesterday in the papers that the Dialectic Senate started off the quarter with a well-attended meeting, the feature of which was the inaugural address of the new president, Beatty Rector.

President Rector, speaking like an orator of a day that is gone, reminded his fellow-members of the important role the Dialectic Senate once played on the campus. He harked back to a time when the membership of the Senate included half the student enrollment of the University, when it was able to bury its dead in the Chapel Hill cemetery under a costly headstone with pomp and ceremony.

He mentioned such names as Polk, Davie, and Kenan in reminding his audience of the glory that was once the Di Senate's.

The new president closed his speech by calling upon the members to gird themselves for a bringing back of this old greatness. He deplored the present lack of interest and participation in the society, and said, "What we need, Senators, is not merely organization, but vitalization."

He illustrated this statement with references to Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Although we aren't willfully pessimistic, we fear that President Rector's valiant call to arms will prove to be a voice lifted up in vain. The two literary societies on the campus are not dead, but they certainly appear to be in their dotage. And we doubt exceedingly if they can find anything like a youth-restoring elixir in this generation.

Such terms as 'Dialectic Senate' and 'Philanthropic Assembly' have somehow ceased to fit into the college man's lexicon. Not only at Carolina, but in the colleges at large, the silver tongue is tarnished, and the popularity of debating is fallen upon evil days.

We admire your spirit and your courage, Mr. Rector, but we fear you are the champion of a doomed cause.

Daily Prayer

Grant, O God, that the supreme prayer of our lives may not be that we be learned, rich, famous or powerful. Grant that we may realize that he is greatest among us who is servant unto us and that we may recall that in the last a little child will lead us all. Also grant that we may see that the paths of power, fame, and glory, alike, all lead but to the same inevitable end. Therefore, grant, O God, that we may simply be radiant. Help us radiate: health, cheerfulness, calm courage, and good will; to live without: hate, whim, jealousy, envy, or fear. Help us to be: simple, honest, frank, natural, clean in mind and clean in body, unaffected, to say, "I do not know," if it be so, and to meet all men on an absolute equality, to face any obstacle and meet every difficulty unabashed and unafraid. And grant, O God, that we may realize that rest is rust and that real life is in love, laughter and work. Finally grant, O God, that we may realize that work is a blessing and that the reward which life holds out for work is not idleness, nor rest, nor immunity from work, but increased capacity, greater difficulties, more work. This we ask in Christ Jesus' name. Amen.

CHACE REPLIES TO ATTACK ON WILLIAMS

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

In my estimation, and in, I am sure, that of all other thinking students, such a letter as that undersigned by "A Student" in yesterday's Tar Heel was in obvious bad taste. I regret that politics can be carried to such an extent on this campus as to make possible such a bitter attitude when it can have no constructive consequence. Sour grapes is not a healthy diet for defeat, however it may have seemed to come, and I, for one, regret nothing. The most constructive attitude with which to face the future is to "devleop Carolina's best" by making full and frequent use of the material at hand and to forget past differences in a mutual desire to improve a condition we have all helped to create. Any other sentiment would be futile and childish.

I regret the necessity for these words and thank the editor for his cooperation.

RICHARD A. CHACE.

MR. WILLIAMS DEFENDED

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Since the campus has "now assumed a calm atmosphere after the turmoil of elections, and energetic politicians are lounging lazily back in easy chairs browing rings of smoke from large, juicy cigars while formulating their schemes for next year's campaign," there is absolutely no reason why anyone should begin to rake around in the muck and mud which was rotten even before the elections.

If one thousand supposedly intelligent students can be blindfolded and led to vote for a man who is entirely unfitted for the position to which they elect him they deserve no more than they get. Personally I believe that if the majority can invariably select the right man for every other office they can be trusted to fill the editorship of the Carolina Magazine.

As to the kind of verse that Mr. Williams writes, in glancing through some of the back copies of the Magazine, I found some typical eamples of the kind of stuff that is usually printed in the supplement:

". . . Stark summers born of emptiness have fled
Since first they cried to me 'love not!' And truth
Came late, and with it came a dull regret.
'Love not.' I heard. My arms are empty yet."
"But then—come back to me, I'll still be here, Hoping, praying—and waiting for you dear."

Why not the following? It rimes at least:

"Warm sunshine lost,
Upon my brow;
My thoughts tossed—
Nothing matters now."

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Thursday, April 10—A Hero's World. (Read Joshua 1:1-9.) Key verse: "Be strong and of good courage."

Meditation: The promise of "good success" is made only to the strong. Only the courageous can come to terms with life. Brave people only can feel at home in this world and rejoice in life, for this is a hero's world. It is not amiable or indulgent; it coddles no one. The timid and those who are afraid of struggle and wounds find life difficult. It is these who are the pessimists. The end of creation seems to be the making of great souls. This world is fitted to make souls of that sort. It is to the courageous heart that God promises his strength.

Prayer: Grant, O Father, that this day we may take our full share in the world's work and hazards. Help us to be faithful in those useful things that are difficult and trying, and accept them as a challenge to our souls. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Miss Pugh Played Too Mechanically Reviewer Declares

(By Milton Greenblatt)

Miss Helen Pugh, appearing as a symphony in pink, gave a recital in the Methodist church Monday night. Her performance was not nearly so charming as her appearance. For the young lady has a tendency to play very rapidly, very vigorously and rather mechanically.

The A Minor Sonata of Scarlatti opened the concert. This was played decently enough, except that the forte passages were so blurred that little was discernible. Then followed the Gavotte from "Iphigenia in Aulis," by Gluck-Brahms. One must say about this piece that there was little of Gluck's charm and daintiness left when Brahms finished the arrangement.

The trite and vapid Hunting Song of Mendelssohn, from the "Songs Without Words," was played furiously and fast. Then came the Chopin Waltz in A Flat—Opus 34, No. 1, and the Polonaise, Opus 53, both pieces that are played much too often. Miss Pugh played the Waltz as though it were a polonaise, and the polonaise as though it were a waltz. As an encore Chopin's Butterfly Etude was played.

The most successful piece of the program was the Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12. This suited Miss Pugh's playing best. Her dynamics were good, and all the glory and bombast of Liszt were displayed by the pianist.

CLIFF EDWARDS CALLS PUBLIC 'SONG CRITICAL'

"The days when a song could be put over by sheer force of money spent for advertising are gone forever," is the opinion of Cliff Edwards, the former vaudeville and musical comedy star who is now making a hit in talking pictures.

"When I first came into the singing game," said "Ukelele Ike," who will be seen today at the Carolina theatre in a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer singing picture entitled "Lord Byron of Broadway," "song publishing companies could get away with murder, if they had enough money to spend. The song market was comparatively dormant, and the public were in frame of mind where they would accept almost anything as good, if you shouted loud enough. In other words, their critical faculties were more or less undeveloped.

"Today, however, it is absolutely impossible to fool the public. The output of popular songs, due to radio and talkie demands, is perhaps six times what it was ten years ago. With this wealth to choose from, the public has become very critical. A song has to be mighty good to get by in these days of extraordinary competition."

A professional pipe lighter has been employed at Glasgow, Scotland, to keep street laborers from wasting time. His sole duty is to refill and light the men's pipes as fast as they go out. His job was established by an efficiency expert.

Bagby Leaps Over 6 Feet To Beat Record As Team Defeats Duke Cindermen

Carolina Trackmen Keep Slate Clean by Downing Blue Devils 96 to 29.

SIMON GETS FIRST PLACE

Duke Star Gets Devil's Only First Place By Taking Two-Mile Race; Bagby High Jumps 6 Feet 1-2 Inch.

With George Bagby setting a new University high-jump record and every performer coming through in good style, the Tar Heel track team turned back Duke here yesterday afternoon by a score of 96 1-3 to 29 2-3.

Bagby, who broke the only record of the day, jumped 6 feet ¼ inch, to break a University record of 5 feet ½ inch that had stood since R. G. Ambrose set it back in 1925.

The Tar Heels took 13 of 14 first places, Charlie Farmer and Theron Brown, both sophomores, taking two firsts apiece to set the pace for the Tar Heels. Farmer was first in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, and Brown placed first in the discus and javelin.

Simon, state champion two-miler, took Duke's one first place in a race that proved easy for the veteran, the Tar Heel coaches using their best men in the half-mile and mile, and almost conceding the two-mile to Simon. The Tar Heels made a clean sweep of all three places in the half- mile, the mile and the 220-yard low hurdles.

100-yard dash—Farmer (C), Gay (C), Cook (D). Time, 10 seconds.

220-yard dash—Farmer (C), Slusser (C), Hicks (D). Time, 21.8 seconds.

440-yard run—Gay (C), Nims (C) and Weil (C). Time, 50.8 seconds.

880-yard run—Barkley (C), Garrett (C), Hamer (C). Time 2:0.2.

120-yard high hurdles—Perry (C), Freeman (D), Reid (C). Time, 16 seconds.

220-yard low hurdles—Slusser (C), Perry (C), Stafford (C). Time, 25 seconds.

Two-mile run—Simon (D), Flinton (D), Farris (C). Time, 10:21.

Pole vault—Arnold (C), Turner (D), and Sharpe (D), Ruble (C), and Dry (C) tied for third. Height, 11 feet 10 inches.

Shot put—Adkins (C), Brown (C), Webster (D). Distance 41 feet ¾ inch.

Discus—Brown (C), Dameron (C), Webster (D). Distance, 128 feet 6 inches.

High jump — Bagby (C), Freeman (D), and Owens (C), Johnson (C), and Roberts (D) tied for third. Height, 6 feet ¼ inch (new University record).

Broad jump—Neiman (C), Johnson (C), Freeman (D). Distance 22 feet 4 inches.

Javelin—Brown (C), Keegan (D), McLarty (D). Distance, 164 feet 6 inches.

Monograms Passed On

Monogram awards passed on by the athletic council Tuesday night will not be announced for a few days due to a further consideration of several members of the squads, C. T. Woollen, secretary of the council, announced yesterday. Basketball, boxing and wrestling teams will receive the monograms for work in seasons just finished.

Prehistoric remains of kangaroos, the size of elephants, have been found.

Intramural Wrestling Will Begin April 15

Coach Quinlan wishes all men who expect to enter the intramural wrestling tournament April 15 to report to Peyton Abbott, freshman wrestling coach, at the Tin Can Thursday afternoon for practice. There are only about ten days left to get in the proper physical condition to do one's self justice in a meet of this kind, says Coach Abbott. Practice will be held at four o'clock every afternoon except Sunday until the tournament begins. Coach Abbott will be assisted in getting the contestants into shape by several varsity men.

Coach Quinlan urges as many men to come out for this tournament as possibile. The team which has the most entries will receive the 25 intramural competition points; the winning team will receive 50 intramural points; the individual winner in each class will receive a gold medal and, in addition, 25 intramural points for his team and the man who wins second place will gain 15 intramural points for his team.

In addition to these inducements, Coach Quinlan points out that this will offer everyone who competes a good way of breaking into the wrestling game.

Engineering Group To Elect Officers

At the regular meeting of the William Cain student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers to be held Thursday evening the annual election of officers to serve during the next year will be held. In addition to the election of officers, Rankin White, a member of the society, will give a short talk.

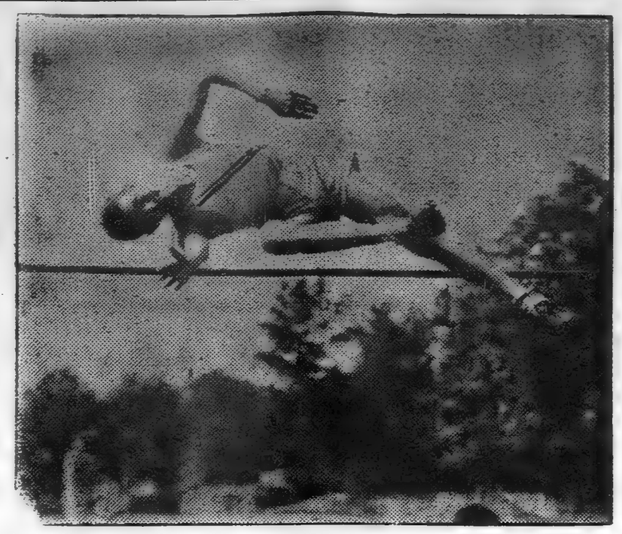
The meeting Thursday, which is the second of the society this quarter, will be held at 7:30 in room 319 Phillips hall. At the last meeting of the society, which was held two weeks ago, a moving picture, "The Story of Rail Steel," was shown. This picture illustrated all the processes used in transforming worn-out railroad rails into concrete reinforming bars.

At the meetings held during the first two quarters of the year, several illustrated lectures that had been prepared by the national office of the society, were presented by student members of the local chapter.

During the remainder of this school year the society hopes that it will be able to hear several talks on engineering work and thus continue the series of such talks begun last fall.

Because of the election of officers to serve during the next school year, a full attendance is requested at this meeting, and as an additional inducement, the present officers announce that refreshments will be served Thursday evening.

Scientist Lectures



R. H. Hutchinson, secretary of the Anti-Venum Institute of America, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "Modern Remedies for Snakebite Poison" Friday evening at 8 o'clock in Pharmacy hall.

The lecture by Mr. Hutchinson is under the auspices of the University branch of the American Pharmaceutical Association.

Tennis Meet Today

The varsity-freshman tennis meet, which was postponed Monday on account of rain, will be played off this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Breaks High Jump Record

George Bagby, University high jumper, set a new University record in the high jump yesterday against Duke. He jumped 6 feet one-half inch.

TAR HEEL NINE LEAVES TONIGHT ON WEEK'S TOUR

All Games Will Count in Tri-State League Standings; To Meet Maryland There Tomorrow.

The Tri-State League championship Tar Heel nine will leave Chapel Hill tonight on its annual northern tour, which will send the Carolina team against five strong conference foes in six days and make or mar Tar Heel chances for another Tri-State title.

The Carolinians will play five games through Virginia and Maryland. The first will be with Maryland at College Park Friday afternoon. Engagements will follow with Virginia Saturday, Washington and Lee Monday, V.M.I. Tuesday, and V.P.I. Wednesday.

Five games in six days make a hard schedule for any college club, and the test will be even harder for the Tar Heels due to lack of veteran pitchers. Frank Fleming and Auburn Wright can be counted as veterans, but Coach Jim Ashmore will probably have to use his rookies Longest, Hinton and Edwards in at least three of the five games.

All the games will count in the Tri-State League standings, in which the Tar Heels maintained a perfect record last year, and also in the standings of the southern conference.

The Tar Heel infield and outfield forces are in good shape, so that Coach Ashmore will be able to command the services of his best men. If the pitchers come through, things should go well.

Sigma Zeta Wins 10-1

Behind the steady hurling of Parks, the Sigma Zeta baseball team defeated the team from Delta Tau Delta by the score of 10-1. The performance of Parks, pitching for Sigma Zeta, was the high light of the game, as he struck out twelve men and allowed but one hit during the entire game. Wheary did good work in the box for Delta Tau Delta, but in the closing innings of the game he was unable to prevent a deluge of hits and was replaced by Small who pitched the last inning without allowing a hit.

Intramural Boxing

A slugging Delta Kappa Epsilon team, well coached by "Big Bill" Koenig, varsity heavyweight boxer and star football tackle, clinched the championship of the intramural boxing tournament when it placed two men first, with Holderness still remaining in the finals of the 145-pound class, scoring ten points already with a possibility of five more if Holderness wins his bout with Watkins this afternoon and with a certainty of at least three if he loses, while Ruffin, the Dekes' nearest competitor, has scored but six points and can score but eleven if Watkins wins and nine if he loses. Bartley in the unlimited class and Parsons in the 175-pound class were the Deke champions crowned Tuesday night.

The other individual champions are: 115-pound class, Boren, Alpha Lambda Tau; 125-pound class, Todd, Sigma Phi Sigma; 135-pound class, Shuford, "J"; 160-pound class, Kaufman, "I."

Members of the varsity boxing squad who assisted "Bo" Shepard in running off the tournament are: Archie Allen and Harry Sheffield, who did work as referees; Goodridge, Allen, Davis and Sheffield, who judged the bouts; and Evan Vaughan, who was in charge of running off the bouts as well as announcing them.

In the 115-pound class, Boren, Alpha Lambda Tau, used a rushing, slugging attack, putting his man down for a count of nine in the second round and winning handily.

In the 125-pound class, Todd, Sigma Phi Sigma, boxed carefully in the first two rounds to ward off the wild rushes of Mowery, Ruffin, and stepped out enough in the third round to draw the match. In the extra round, Todd piled up enough points to win easily.

In the 135-pound class, Shuford, "J" dormitory, put on a third round rally after losing the early rounds, jabbing a left to the head and a right to the body a score of times to receive a draw. He kept up these tactics in the next round to win the decision.

The finals of the 145-pound class were again postponed, due to the fact that Watkins had to run in the frosh time trials yesterday. The bout will be held at 4 o'clock today in the Tin Can between Watkins, Ruffin, and Holderness, D. K. E.

The 160-pound class, with Whitely of Old West and Al Kaufman of "I" tying up in a rough and tumble slugging match which had the crowd yelling throughout the match, furnished perhaps the most interesting fight of the evening while it lasted. Both men rushed from their corners at the opening bell and began to slug for all they were worth. Just before the end of the first round, Kaufman got over a left hook that floored Whitely, but the bell rang at the count of six and the end was postponed another round. Kaufman tore into Whitely at the start of the second round and soon had his man reeling around the ring and the fight was stopped. Kaufman showed up like a fine prospect for the varsity squad next year, but has decided to enter the Richmond Dental School and will not be available.

In the 175-pound final, Hubbard, Phi Gamma Delta, was forced to forfeit to Parsons, D. K. E., because of a broken hand suffered in the preliminaries.

In the unlimited class, Bartley, D. K. E., rushed his lighter opponent, Auman of Manly, around the ring to score a well-earned victory.

STRONG FACULTY FOR LAW SCHOOL

Two Supreme Court Judges of State and Four Nationally Known Professors to Instruct At Summer Session.

Two North Carolina Supreme Court Justices and four visiting professors of national reputation will join with regular professors in making up a strong faculty for this year's summer school of law at the University.

Faculty, curriculum and dates for the summer term were announced today by Dean Charles T. McCormick.

The first term will run from June 17 to July 26, and the second term from July 28 to September 2.

The outside authorities who have been engaged on the faculty are W. J. Brogden and George W. Connor, of the North Carolina Supreme Court; Prof. Armistead M. Dobie, of the University of Virginia; Profs. James M. Landis and William E. McCurdy, of Harvard; and Prof. Oliver S. Rundell, of the University of Wiisconsin.

Profs. M. S. Breckenridge, Fred B. McCall and R. H. Wettach are the regular professors who will stay over for the summer school.

Courses to be taught include Code Pleading and Practice, Federal Procedure, Quasi Contracts, Introduction to Procedure, Torts, Constitutional Law, Future Interests, Domestic Relations, and Personal Property.

The University summer law school, which enjoys wide popularity, enables students to take their law training in two years, by attending two regular and three summer sessions.

Engagement of prominent outside authorities follows out the Uniiversity policy of building a summer law faculty which combines distinguished representatives of the local bench with outstanding visiting professors and representatives of the local faculty.

Justices Brogden and Connor are outstanding authorities on North Carolina Pleading and Constitutional Law, which they will teach.

Of the visiting professors, Professors McCurdy and Dobie are both authorities in their respective fields and have written textbooks on the subjects they will teach here, "Domestic Relations," and "Federal Procedure," respectively.

Of the others, Professor Rundell is acting dean at Wisconsin and has taught in summer sessions at Chicago, Columbia and Stanford Universities, and Professor Landis, who will teach "Quasi Contracts," is a former secretary to Justice Brandis of the United States Supreme Court and co-author with Professor Frankfurter of "The Business of the Supreme Court."

CAROLINA THEATRE PLANNING BENEFIT

Next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 the University band will give a 45-minute concert at the Carolina theatre, followed by the picture, "Close Harmony."

The program is presented by E. C. Smith, theatre manager. There will be a silver offering at the door, the entire proceeds of which will go to the band. The musical selections will be chosen from numbers the band has been using on recent tours.

Recent criticisms of concerts have referred to the band as an orchestra without a string section. It is not brassy nor does it stick to football music, but plays symphonic selections as quiet and harmonic as any orchestra. In this respect the band has done pioneer work in this section.

Forsyth County Notice

All of those students who graduated from the county schools of Forsyth are requested to meet in the old library building, room 3, Friday evening, April 11, 7:30. The purpose of the meeting is to formulate committees to make plans for entertaining on April 24, a delegation of high school seniors from Forsyth who are visiting Carolina on that date. Please meet with us and lets make their visit a pleasant one.

Dr. Child Talks To Scientific Society

The regular bi-monthly meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was held Tuesday night at 7:30 in Phillips hall. The speakers at the meeting were J. W. Lasley, Jr., of the math department and C. M. Child of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Lasley gave a very interesting talk on "Some Conics Associated With a Plane Curve." He illustrated his talk with blackboard diagrams. Dr. Child of the University of Chicago, who is teaching at Duke University during this semester, spoke on "Some Recent Experiments in Transplantation." He told of some of his experiments in which the grafting of extremely small parts of one animal into another of the same species or even of a different kind led to the production of additional heads where they were not supposed to grow. Through the extensive reorganization of the host animal, that it, the animal into which the tissue was introduced, many strange forms were obtained. Through ingenious grafting experiments certain worms are led to develop heads at the tail-end in addition to the one already maintained at the head-end. While some of the experiments described resulted in bizarre forms, Dr. Child's emphasis was not upon the spectacular aspects but upon the underlying principles of physiology and development as illustrated and clarified by such experiments.

Dr. R. E. Coker, president of the local chapter of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society, has done some recent research in this field and also in fish life. He is the author of "Studies of Common Fishes of the Mississippi River at Keokuk," which was published recently by the United States Bureau of Fisheries.

Kiwanians Starting Co-Operative Idea

The Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club held its regular weekly meeting Tuesday night in the basement of the Methodist church at 7 o'clock. The Chapel Hill high school debating team gave a debate on the question of a new amendment to the constitution of the United States for the purpose of classifying property for taxation. Carroll and Foerster took the negative against Previtt and Mosher who took the affirmative side of the question. The debate was handled skillfully by both sides and furnished plenty of material for thought on this subject.

The club voted to sponsor a movement that would interest the clubs in the college students from their home town. This movement is for the purpose of securing financial aid for the students who need it. John Umstead was appointed chairman of the committee to work out the details of such a movement and to present their plans to the other clubs of the state.

PHYSICS CLASS OBSERVES STARS

Astronomy Students Look at Celestial Bodies Through Telescope in Physics Department.

The first of a series of evening meetings of students taking physics 14, the cultural course in astronomy, was held recently when about 20 members of the class made observations of Jupiter, the moon, and several stars through the small telescope of the physics department.

In addition to making observations of Jupiter, which is the brightest object in the sky at present, the group was able to observe an eclipse of one of the seven moons belonging to this planet.

The class will hold other observation periods at irregular intervals during the quarter, one being held sometime this week so that observations may be made on the moon before it becomes entirely full.

At these evening meetings, the class is receiving instruction in the names and positions of some of the larger stars and the more prominent constellations.

The registration for this course, which was at one time probably the most popular on the campus, is at present about 50. The course, which is being taught in a non-mathematical manner, is a freshman-sophomore elective, but several upperclassmen are taking it for the cultural knowledge to be obtained from it.

The course is under the direction of Dr. Karl H. Fussler, who did astronomical work at the Kirkwood Observatory and afterward taught astronomy at the U. S. Shipping Board School of Navigation in Philadelphia during the World War.

Graduate Is Honored

John McGalliard, resident of Chapel Hill who graduated with the class of '25, has been awarded the coveted Sheldon Fellowship in English from Harvard University, according to a letter received here yesterday by his sister, Miss Kathryn McGalliard, a student of the local high school.

The Sheldon Fellowship, for the year 1930-31, pays all the expenses of its holder during a year's travel and study in Europe, beginning in June.

McGalliard, when in attendance here, was active in literary affairs and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

here. This lecture will be given at Gerrard hall at four o'clock this afternoon, and is open to the public. His subject at this time will be "The Promise of Peace," a talk illustrated with numerous maps, charts and diagrams.

His first address to the general public will be made on the subject "The Changing Spirit of Europe, 1919-1929" in Gerrard hall at eight o'clock.

Again at four o'clock on Friday he will address the Relations Club on "The Machinery of the League of Nations."

Another public speech at eight o'clock is entitled "Will the Present Machinery Prevent War?"

Then, on Saturday morning at 10:30, the Relations Club will hear him on "The Fulfillment of the Promise." All of this last group of three talks will be given in Gerrard hall.

the director's big opportunity may have been lost.

The job of public relations counsellor is an ungrateful one. It is seen that Mrs. Jones has the reputation of all those associated with the play in her hands—she has virtually the success of the drama upon her own shoulders. If it fails, it is said that it did not receive sufficient publicity; if it succeeds, a dinner is to be held on the stage for the director and the cast, and if lucky, the publicity director may receive one toast. Yet with all this responsibility, it is a paradox that she who disseminates more news and information has none printed about herself. But the Tar Heel, in recognition of the incomparable abilities of Chapel Hill's first resident female publicity agent has, with this article, brought Justice to bear upon all those people are sgaring in the unfoldment of that thrilling, touching drama Thorns and Orange Blossoms—or, as Mrs. Jones would say it, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms, which will have its premier May 2, in the Playmaker Theatre, H. Encouraging the long distance habit

An interesting example of organization is the development of long distance telephone business. Men and women of the Bell System made this service worthy, and the public has recognized this by its greatly increased usage.

The Bell Laboratories improved the quality of sound transmission by modifying existing apparatus and designing new. Western Electric manufactured the necessary equipment of the highest standards. Operating telephone companies, working with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, shortened the time for completing calls and reduced the rates.

In all a coordinated work, bringing together many and varied activities, and typical of the way in which telephone service is constantly being made a better tool for the nation's needs.

Dr. Henderson Completes New Book On Prominent Figures Of Modern World

University Professor Includes Ford in "Contemporary Immortals," Which Is Now In Process of Being Published.

COMMITTEE SELECTS MEN

(By John Patric)

At the request of Dr. Archibald Henderson, some time ago, ten eminent Americans were asked to submit lists of the 12 living individuals whom they regarded as greatest, and their answers are the basis for Henderson's new book, "Contemporary Immortals," now in the hands of his publishers, D. Appleton and Co.

The "committee of ten" comprised a psychologist, a philosopher, a critic, a journalist, a belles-lettres, an historian, a churchman, a statesman, a scientist and a college president. They selected (with the deciding vote in several ties cast by Henderson himself) the following: Edison, Mussolini, Einstein, Shaw, Ford, Paderewski, Kipling, Mme. Curie, Clemenceau, Jane Addams, Orville Wright and Marconi.

Several influences were responsible for the production of the work, according to an interesting "introductory" by the author. He speaks of plebiscites conducted by French literary journals, of Kipling's statement that the world, so far, has produced but "15 immortal writers," and of Nicholas Murray Butler's recent remark that the world at present had no great men, but is marked by sheer mediocrity.

"People of these times seem not very bold about appraising and estimating the greatness of contemporary figures," says Henderson, "and I determined to do so, not, however, allowing my book to be a cheap 'ex-cathedra' attempt, on the part of one man, but the vote of many."

Significant in the answers received by Dr. Henderson is the large number of individuals and lack of agreement in answers submitted by his committee of ten. Mary Austin, for example, is not sure of comparative values, in other countries, since she

JITNEY PLAYERS WILL PERFORM HERE ON MONDAY

Shepperd Strudwick, Former Playmaker, With Group Which Plays Here for Two Days.

The Jitney Players, a professional troupe of actors who will present "A Trip to Scarborough" and "The Wonder" at the Playmaker theatre Monday and Tuesday, are starring Shepperd Strudwick, Jr., in Sheridan's play.

Strudwick graduated from this University where he was prominent in activities in 1928, finishing his college career in three years. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Golden Fleece, and D. K. E. social fraternity. He is a native of Hillsboro.

During his undergraduate days here Strudwick played prominent roles in Playmaker productions. His first appearance with the Playmakers was as the creator of the title role in William Macmillan's "A Carolina Pierrot." His next part was that of Percinet in Rostand's "The Romancers." He next attempted the part of the bashful lover Marlowe in Goldsmith's classic comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer." His activities with the group were not limited to acting. He assisted in the directing of several plays and acted as costume and property manager on tours.

After his graduation Mr. Strudwick went to New York, securing his first part there in Coburn's revival of the Chinese fantasy "The Yellow Jacket." When Alexander Kirkland who had been playing the juvenile lead, left to take a part with the Theatre Guild, Strudwick was asked to fill his place. He has also appeared in "Under the Gaslight." During the past summer he played leading roles with the Surrey Players in their summer theatre in Surrey, Me.

Unusual interest has been created on the campus with the announcement of the sophomore hop, to be given tonight at Bynum gymnasium. The dance will start promptly at 9 o'clock and the first five girls on the floor will receive boxes of candy. Tickets will be on sale all this afternoon at the Y. M. C. A., and all upperclassmen are advised to buy their tickets now, since they are going fast and no upperclassmen will be allowed to buy tickets at the door.

Invitations have been sent to the officers of the sophomore classes at Duke University and at N. C. State College, thus furthering the idea of cooperation between the schools of the state. From all reports, the campus will be flooded with a bevy of girls from Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, and with the added attraction of the Grail dance on Saturday night, the week-end promises to be an important event in the spring social season. Johnny Cooper, Haywood Weeks, and Edward Yarborough compose the dance committee and have charge of ticket sales. The price of tickets will be $1 and will be on sale all afternoon at the Y.

The dance, due to universal demand, will be informal. The Duke "Blue Devils" will provide the music. Sophomores will get their tickets at the door, and upperclassmen at the Y.

Chase's Successor Must Be Good Money-Raiser According To An Editorial In The Alumni Review

Regardless of all other fine qualities that he may possess, the next president of the University must be a good money-raiser or he will be right much of a failure in the opinion of the Alumni Review, the official magazine of the General Alumni Association, of which Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders is editor.

The current issue of the Review carries a long editorial dealing with the qualifications of a successor to Dr. Harry W. Chase.

The editorial has struck a responsive chord in Chapel Hill. Almost every week of late one has read the announcement that some outstanding member of the faculty has resigned in order to accept a position at some other institution. These men are not leaving Chapel Hill because they have been offered just several hundred dollars more than they are getting here but because they have been offered salaries that in some instances have doubled what they are getting here. Nobody could blame them.

President Chase has constantly stressed the necessity of increases in faculty salaries, if the best men are to be retained. His last report pointed out that Virginia now pays her full professors $6,000, whereas here the limit is $4,500.

"We do not mean that the new University president need be a beggar, who always holds to the alumni the outstretched palm." the Alumni Review editorial says in part. "But the fact faces us that the University must have, to continue her development and keep pace with other institutions of this section, more funds than she now receives.

"As President Chase indicated in his last report a general raise in faculty salaries is urgent at this time. North Carolinians cannot afford to permit conditions to continue in her University that, when matched against conditions at other institutions in this section, may result in the disintegration of her faculty.

"The new leader of the University should appreciate the requirement of his job, and be fitted by nature and initiative to inspire a flow of funds not only from the state but also from private sources."

League Of Nations Bringing Europe 'Changed Spirit' Says Sir Herbert Ames In Speech

Noted Canadian Points Out Influence of League of Europe During Past Ten Years.

WILL SPEAK AGAIN TODAY

To Be Heard On "Will the Present Machinery Prevent War?" Tonight; Discussed League Covenant Yesterday Afternoon.

(By K. C. Ramsay)

Europe of 1919, a continent of fears, distrust and a general lack of faith, has changed to the Europe of 1930, a continent with amicable relations of nations prevalent, and this change has been effected through the work of the League of Nations, declared Sir Herbert Ames, noted Canadian, in an address last night in Gerrard hall on "The Changing Spirit of Europe, 1919-1929." This was the first of two public addresses that he will make while in Chapel Hill.

Sir Herbert will speak to classes in history and government this morning, address the International Relations Club in Gerrard hall this afternoon at 4 o'clock and deliver his second public lecture in Gerrard hall tonight at 8 o'clock.

In his address last night Sir Herbert Ames traced the history of the League of Nations from its organization in 1920 to the present time. Germany wanted to join the league at its first meeting but was not allowed to do so until she had proven herself worthy. During the first few years of the league's history little could be accomplished, stated Sir Herbert, because the members failed to send their leading diplomats and the league was laboring under an obvious handicap.

The Locarno Peace Pacts

The Geneva Protocol of 1925 was the first step toward a big peace move by the league. This protocol provided that all members of the league would send their armies and navies to any part of the globe if any nation were attacked, but England

Leonard Announces Additional Jobs for Self-Help Students

The nice balmy spring weather we have had for the last few days is bearing fruit for the self-help students in the form of an increasing number of jobs to be filled. Mr. Grady Leonard, self-help secretary, says that he is getting an increasing number of calls every day and that if the fair weather holds out he will need all the men that he can get. He said that any boys who want to work in the afternoons should get in touch with the Y, and they will be almost sure to get a job. Most of the calls are for house cleaning and gardening.

GEORGE HOWE TO TALK IN ALABAMA

Latin Professor Speaker at Celebration of 2,000th Anniversary of Birth of Virgil.

Dr. George Howe, head of the department of classical languages and literature in the University, has left for Montgomery, Alabama, where he will address the Alabama State Association of Teachers at their annual Virgil celebration.

The occasion is the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of the great Latin poet, Virgil. Similar celebrations are being held all over the world in commemoration of the great poet.

Dr. Howe, who has written several books on classical subjects and is a constant contributor to the classical periodicals, is being frequently called on to give addresses at these celebrations. His recent address on "The Humanity of Virgil" at the meeting in Raleigh of the North Carolina Teachers Association attracted so much attention that he has received many invitations to deliver simi-

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 the University band will appear at the Carolina theatre under the auspices of E. C. Smith, theatre manager.

A 45-minute concert by the band will be followed by the picture, "Close Harmony," which deals with a young musician attempting to start a home-town band. It has never before been shown in Chapel Hill.

A silver offering will be taken at the door, purely for those expenses of the band which are not subsidized by the University. From the fund gained Sunday, annual awards will be purchased for those completing their third year in the band. This is the only recognition received by members of the organization.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

People get from life what they expect to get, nothing more nor less.—Eleanor Mercein.

Almost Criminal Negligence

In the Readers' Opinions column of this issue appears a communication from the assistant librarian of the University protesting against abuses of the new library building by thoughtless students. He reports that some students, probably no more than a small percentage of the student body, are defacing the building.

The library plant is one of the finest public structures in the state. Indeed, there are many who believe that the new University library building combines beauty and utility to a greater extent than any other public building in North Carolina. It is unfortunate that a few students should thoughtlessly diminish the attractiveness of one of the University's most valuable possessions.

It is essential that the library provide pleasant and appropriate surroundings for study. Excellent facilities for research and study are now available at the library, but the building itself must be maintained in the best of condition if an atmosphere conducive to close application is to prevail.

At present the library building is being defaced in a variety of ways. Ink is carelessly spilled from fountain pens on the floors; even the marble pavement of the main entrance hall and the pillars are not immune from this treatment. Students are inclined to display their exuberance of physical energy in peculiar ways, but skating on marble floors is more destructive than enjoyable. An indelible record of the sporting proclivities of Carolina's most irrepressible is contained in a series of unsightly scratches on the library floors.

For some reason, it seems to be comfortable for some students to lean against the library walls and prop up their feet against the plaster, leaving heel prints upon the white expanse. One of the greatest sources of damage to the floors is the inclination on the part of a number of students to grind out cigarette butts on them. Whenever a cigarette butt is carelessly tossed upon the floor it leaves a brown stain. Sand jars have been placed in the main entry for the depositing of lighted cigarettes inadvertently brought into the building, but some students do not seem to realize their purpose.

All of the state institutions are handicapped by inadequate budgets because of business conditions. University authorities have been forced to practice rigid economy, this economy is reflected in the janatorial force, which is inadequate for proper care of the library. Under these conditions, careless defacing of the library is almost criminal negligence. A little thoughtful consideration will convince any student that he should safeguard the interests of himself and all other University men, present and future, by cooperating in keeping the library in the best possible condition.

On Outgrowing Things

Youngsters outgrow their little Lord Fauntleroy suits and long curls and at a prescribed time they don their first pair of long trousers and decorate their upper lip with what might seem to be an erstwhile curl. That is an example of individual progression. Also, we find big sister discarding an article of clothing absolutely devoid of tears, stains or rips and for such an impractical reason as that of changing styles. That can be classified as mass progression. But, regardless of what one terms the trend of the day or the influence of change, it is a tendency which can no more be controlled than (to use a popular example) a well-organized and air-tight campus political frame-up. Times will change, clothes and organizations will grow old or out of date and interest in said articles and obsessions will fade. Much has been said of the glamour of the past but that glamour assumes a jaded and dull mantle in the face of the startling qualities and popularity of the "latest wrinkle."

Every college and university makes age and tradition an excuse for holding to wornout customs, clubs and policies. North Carolina is not immune from the obsession. In most cases it is merely an example of misdirected energy. It seems a waste of enthusiasm—even though it is doctored enthusiasm—to expend time and effort in trying to revive and rejuvenate a dying precedent or reestablish a wornout club which fits into the present scheme of things about as well as the bustle and basque fit into the wardrobe of mi-lady who is influenced by Chanel or Louis Boulanger.

The recent agitation and speech -making concerning the "revitalization" of the Di Senate is an example of misplaced value in college activity. The best excuse for the refostering of the organization, as presented in the President's speech not long ago, is the fact of its age, its former members and its past prestige. Debating and the forwarding of the practice is its only claim to existence today. While debating is not by any manner of means obsolete today, it certainly does not enjoy the popularity it enjoyed at the time of the organization of the Di Senate. If the Senate really desires to accomplish its present end, it will have to provide some adequate excuse for doing so. An adequate excuse is one over which modern University students can get excited. It can scarcely be said to be founded on the activities and fads of our grandfathers and grandmothers.

Readers' Opinions

EPIDEMIC OF THIEVERY BREAKS OUT IN LIBRARY

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

An epidemic of petty thievery is assailing the library. I hope that a statement of the results of such thefts will bring them to an end.

Two of the locked coat-hooks in the main coat-room have been put out of commission by the removal of the keys. One key probably graces the collection of a souvenir-hunter since the coat hook has been locked without any coat in it.

The other case is somewhat more excusable. Here the person who carried off the key has locked into the coat-hook a pathetic note in which he announces the loss of a pair of gloves from the pocket of the coat carefully locked up and calls down maledictions on the rascal. In taking this means of posting his notice, however, he is incapacitating one coat-hook until he returns the key. The library would rather give him a thumb-tack. It is perhaps worse than useless to suggest that the gloves might have been locked up with the coat, but somebody may profit by the sad example.

Three rods have disappeared from the card catalog. The purpose of these rods is to prevent the thousand-odd cards in a drawer from cascading out if the drawer is inadvertently dropped, as may happen.

All this equipment is replaceable, but at a cost to the library which is trying to operate to the best advantage of its users on an abbreviated budget. The library can function satisfactorily as a library without this particular and expensive type of coat-hook. The library administration, however, is aware of the annoyance and inconvenience to students who lose coats from its coat-room and has taken this means of preventing such loss. Nevertheless, it cannot go to the expense and trouble of replacing this equipment made useless by thoughtless students.

I hope this equipment will be returned—anonymously, if preferred—and that such losses will not be repeated.

Yours truly,
DONALD CONEY,
Assistant Librarian.

Daily Prayer

Help us to realize, O God, that the proper not only is never great in his own country but also never great in his own time. Help us to see that the man who is anybody and who does anything is surely going to be criticized, vilified, and misunderstood. Help us to see that this is part of the penalty for greatness, every great man understanding it and understanding too, that it is no proof of greatness. Help us also to realize, O God, that the final proof of greatness lies in being able to endure contumely to the end without resentment. This we ask in Christ Jesus' name. Amen.

TO BE FRANK

By Frank Manheim

In yesterday afternoon's address before the International Relations Club, Sir Herbert Ames suggested that the Central Powers were guilty of starting the war. We do not hold this opinion and we hereby give Dr. Metzenthin full support in his contentions. . . . It would be interesting to hear a debate between the two gentlemen.

Readers of the London Mercury and other foreign periodicals may have noticed advertisements of the Virginia Quarterly Review in which it was said that by reading the Review a true knowledge of America would result. We suggest that those Englishmen and others who are interested in "knowing" America read True Story magazine and the Saturday Evening Post. All America reads those—aswellasthebuccaneer.

We cannot wait for the production of Thorns and Orange Blossoms. That's our platform—less dirty politics and more good fun and plays for the campus. After all, as an alumnus was saying the other day, there is quite a lot of room on the Hill for an inspired reformer to do away with the pretty sordid affairs that are connected with elections. Judge Parker, who has been appointed to the Supreme Court, is said to have been one of the best politicians the campus has ever seen. Yet we can point to Gaston Means, the only catch in that being that he was not interested in politics while at the University.

This column never started out with the idea that it would become a "Your Health and Mine" sort of business, but read the following:

Dear Fizz:

You seem to know so much about drinks, what do you do for the feeling the day after the night before?

Sincerely,
J. L. P. (signed)

Our answer to this is to repeat the warning of Master Isaac Judaeus who did say, "It is unpossyble for them that drinketh overmoche water in theyr youth to come to ye aege that God ordained them." This is the only thing we know of to comfort you, J. L. P., but there are many remedies that wiser people know.

Latest odds on the weather as reported by Lloyd's Chapel Hill representative are 6-1 against a rainfall during the next five days.

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Friday, April 11: Search for the Way. (Read Psalm 25:4-14). Key Verse: "Show me Thy ways, O Lord. Teach me Thy paths."

Meditation: To come to terms with the universe one must find its laws and obey them. It is no less true in moral and spiritual realms than in physical nature. "No man can serve two masters," but every man must serve one, or his life has no peace. Lord Byron yearns for a freedom

". . . which ages have not yet subdued
In man—to have no master save his mood."

But one's mood is a cruel and whimsical master. We know with Huxley that "A man's worst difficulties begin when he is able to do as he likes." "There is no freedom in mere freedom." The man who recognizes no authority is a ship without a port. No normal man is really happy unless there is something which he feels he must serve with all his heart and mind and soul.

Prayer: Enlarge our souls and deepen our lives, O God. Break the spell that holds us in bondage to things we touch and see. Give us that sense of the invisible and eternal that makes us citizens of the Universe. Amen.

JITNEY PLAYERS WILL PERFORM HERE MONDAY

During the past season, in addition to playing leads with the Jitney Players, he appeared in the New York cast of Barrie's famous play, "What Every Woman Knows."

David Elliott, talented actor, will play the part of Lord Foppington in the production. Mr. Elliott has been acclaimed by dramatic critics over the country as a remarkable actor.

The play was presented last Thursday in Richmond. The critic of the Richmond Times-Dispatch says of the presentation: "Of the performance, in entirety it is on par with a first-grade stock company with two notable exceptions. David Elliott and Ada Cafagna . . . come close to walking off with the show. Mr. Elliott, in truth, wouldn't look at all bad in the troupe of Mrs. Fiske. He plays with a nicety of poise and a delicacy of characterization that will make his 'Lord Foppington' a fellow to be remembered."

The Jitney Players were organized seven years ago, traveling about the northern summer resorts by truck. Now the company is permanently established and during the winter seasons appears in auditoriums.

The staging of the productions is patterned after the manner of the originals. Even the songs of the original are given with accompaniment on an instrument that resembles a harpsichord.

The group will also present "The Wonder," a comedy by Suzanne Centlivre, first produced at the Drury Lane theatre in London in 1714. This play is supposed to have added to David Garrick's reputation when he revived it almost half a century later.

FRESHMAN CHAPEL HELD FIRST TIME OF QUARTER

The first meeting of chapel for the spring quarter was held yesterday morning. Explanation of seating arrangement and announcement of the chapel schedule for this quarter were made. Arrangements have been made to seat the entire class in one meeting, and seat assignments have been mailed to every one. The large number who have found the seating arrangement confusing should remember that row R, S and T are in the balcony, X, Y and Z in front near the platform, and W in the back of the hall.

Chapel will meet this quarter on Monday of each week. There will consequently be only a few remaining meetings during the year, but the freshmen are required to attend these.

Tennis Players To Meet Davis Team Tomorrow

University Team To Play Ranking National Players On Pinehurst Club Courts

Grant, Hines, Yeomans, Wright And Merritt Will Compose Carolina Team.

TO FACE FAMOUS STARS

Doeg, Lott, Allison, Van Rhyne Form American Team; Van Rhyne and Allison Wimbledon, Doubles Champions; Grant Southern Senior Title-Holder.

A select Carolina tennis team, composed of star varsity and freshman netmen, is slated to take on the American Davis Cup team on the Pinehurst country club courts at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The Davis Cup team, which has come to this state to participate in the annual North and South tourney at Pinehurst, is composed of John Doeg, third ranking singles player of the United States, George Lott, fourth ranking player, Wilmer Allison, fifth, and John Van Ryn sixth. Van Ryn and Allison are considered the foremost doubles team in this country and abroad. Playing together last year they won the Wimbledon doubles title and the Davis Cup matches. The Wimbledon title is considered the highest tennis honor attainable, and the holders of the Wimbledon cup are unofficially recognized as first ranking players in international tennis circles.

The individual pairings for the Carolina and Davis Cup matches will be made by mutual agreement between Coach Kenfield of the University and the temporary captain of the Davis Cup team, who will be appointed by the members of the team sometime before the match.

Ed Yeomans and Bill Merritt, varsity netmen, and Bryan Grant, Wilmer Hines and Lenoir Wright, number one, two and three freshmen, will make up Carolina's team in the match. Yeomans, who won the South Atlantic prep school title while in high school at Washington, D. C., three years ago, is No. one man on the varsity squad; Bill Merritt, who is playing his last year with Carolina, is captain of the varisty. Grant, number one freshman player, holds the southern amateur title; Hines captured the southern junior title last season and Wright annexed the prep school title for this state last year.

Grant, Hines, and Yeomans play the three singles matches and Hines and Grant will compose one of the doubles team. Two doubles matches will be played, but the second one has not been determined upon as yet, according to Mr. Kenfield. Merritt and either Wright or Yeomans will be teamed for the doubles.

Besides taking on the Davis Cup team, Carolina's net stars will get a taste of real tournament play in the North and South tournament which is to begin Monday.

Senior Dance To Be At Gymnasium May 16

The dance committee for the senior class announced yesterday that its annual ball would be held Friday night, May 16, in Bynum gymnasium. Several fraternities are planning to hold houseparties that week-end as the Grail has scheduled its last dance of the quarter for May 17.

FRESHMAN NINE BEATS WINSTON

Griffith Does Mound Work for Tar Babies With Fine Results.

The Carolina freshman baseball team defeated the Winston-Salem highs on the frosh field Wednesday by a score of 9 to 7. The Tar Babies were far superior in their attack, getting 13 hits, many of them for extra bases, to their opponent's six; on defense they were not so hot, giving Griffith, Tar Baby pitcher, very spotty support. The brand of pitching displayed by Griffith, already sought after by one or two league clubs, was of the first calibre. In spite of sloppy support, he allowed the hardhitting Camel City men but six hits and struck out ten men. In addition to this, he cracked out two singles and a double out of four times at bat to snatch the starring honors of the day. Riddle of Carolina also did good stickwork, garnering three singles out of three official "at bats," while Peacock performed capably behind the plate.

Carter, who lashed out a terrific drive to centerfield for a home run with two men on base, and Voss, first baseman, who made a double, triple and single out of four times at bat were outstanding players for Winston-Salem.

Team	R	H	E
Carolina	9	13	2
Winston-Salem	7	6	4

Batteries: for Carolina, Griffith and Peacock; for Winston-Salem, Smith, Clodfelter and Carter.

Sigma Phi Sigma Loses To Lambda Chi Alpha

Bob Bullock, veteran Lambda Chi Alpha pitcher, held Sigma Phi Sigma to one hit and no runs yesterday afternoon while his teammates were piling up 13 runs out of 9 hits and numerous errors and free bases. Bullock has pitched his fraternity to the campus championship once before and was in fine shape yesterday.

Wins Decision

Holderness, D.K.E., won the judges' decision from Watkins, Ruffin, in the finals of the 145 pound class in the Tin Can yesterday afternoon. Though Watkins put up a good fight, he was outclassed by Holderness, who floored him for counts of eight, one and two in the second round and counts of one, two and one in the third.

This gives the Dekes the championship with 15 points. Ruffin was second with six; "J," "I," Alpha Lambda Tau, and Sigma Phi Sigma came next with five each, followed by New Dorms, Zeta Psi, Old West, Phi Gamma Delta and Manly with three each.

The officials for yesterday's bout were: referee, Rosenfeld; judges, Schnell and Coach Rowe; timekeeper, "Bo" Shepard.

Old West Wins

Old West rallied in the last inning yesterday to get two runs and defeat Lewis ("J") 8-7. The scoring was close throughout, "J" taking the lead in the second and holding it till the fifth.

GOLFERS OPPOSE DEACONS TODAY

Matches Will Be Played Over Hope Valley Course; Meet Duke Tomorrow.

Captain Charlie Chatham will lead the state championship Tar Heel golfers against Wake Forest today and Duke Saturday, both matches to be played over the Hope Valley Country Club course midway between here and Durham.

The Tar Heel outfit is undefeated for the season, and is virtually the same in personnel as the team that won the state title for Carolina last year.

Meade Willis, state college champion; Captain Chatham, June Adams and Luther Stewart were all regulars on that team. The 1930 outfit is stronger by virtue of several outstanding youngsters on whom Coach John Kenfield can draw. Of these, Ben Goodes is giving the veterans an especially hard run for their posts.

Track Stars Leave For Atlanta Relays

Coach R. A. Fetzer and Track Manager J. J. Alexander will leave Chapel Hill this afternoon with 15 of the most outstanding varsity track stars and four of the most promising freshman runners for the Tech Relays to be held in Atlanta, Ga., tomorrow.

In this meet the Tar Heels will oppose such men as Hamm, Georgia Tech's world champion broad jumper and Southern Conference record holder in the 100 and 220-yard dashes; Young, Georgia two-miler who won that event in the recent conference indoor meet; Linzey, Maryland half-miler; and many others of equal calibre. Of special interest to track fans will be the contest between Hamm and Farmer in the sprints. Farmer defeated Hamm in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes in the dual meet with Tech held here last Saturday, and bids fair to lower the conference records in these two events. If the weather is favorable tomorrow, it is very probable that several records will be bettered.

Coach Bob is taking the following men with him for the different events:

One-mile and half-mile relays, Nims, Gay, Slusser, Stafford, Weil and Farmer.

Four-mile relay, Baucom, Barkley, Lowry, Phoenix.

100-yard dash: Farmer.

High jump: Bagby.

Discus and javelin: Brown.

Broad jump: Neiman.

Pole vault: Arnold and Neiman.

Hurdles: Perry, Slusser, Stafford.

Freshman two-mile relay: Mitchem, Jones, Jensen, Watkins.

Delta Sigma Phi Loses

The A. T. O. baseball team defeated the Delta Sigma Phi team ten to three yesterday afternoon in one of the most interesting games played this season. Griffin did the mound duty for the winning A. T. O. team, and did some splendid pitching. Johnston went the whole game for Delta Sigma Phi. Numerous errors on the part of the Delta Sigma Phi accounted for several of the A. T. O.'s runs.

Senior Notice

All seniors who have not made application for a degree, and who are planning to graduate in June, are requested to see Dean Hibbard as soon as possible.

Goodridge Elected Captain Of Boxers

Noah Goodridge, of New York City, a rising senior, was elected to succeed Archie Allen as captain of the University of North Carolina boxing team for next year at a meeting of the team last night.

Goodridge has been a member of the varsity squad for the last two years, during which he has fought a total of 22 fights, winning 19. Two of the three fights that Goodridge has lost were finals in the southern conference tournament, both of which he dropped to Phil O'Connell, captain of the Florida squad.

At the meeting of the Athletic Council Tuesday night Clarence Weeks was appointed manager for the 1931 season, Phil Alston and Huber O'Donnell being named as his assistants.

Frosh Netmen Win Over Varsity Team

The freshman tennis team showed excellent form yesterday afternoon in defeating the varsity racqueteers 3-2 in the singles and 2-1 in the doubles matches in a practice meet held as a preliminary to the match with the Davis Cup players Saturday.

In the singles; Grant (F) won over Yeomans (V) 6-4, 6-8, 6-3. Hines (F) defeated Hendlin (V) 6-0, 6-1. Wright (F) beat Merritt (V) 10-8, 6-1. Graham (V) won from Abels (F) 6-1, 3-6, 6-3. Baggs (V) defeated Burnett (F) 6-2, 9-7.

In the doubles Hines and Wright (F) beat Merritt and Yeomans (V) 6-4, 7-5. Grant and Abels (F) won over Graham and Hendlin (V) 7-5, 7-5. Baggs and Liskin (V) defeated Burnett and McKee (F) 6-2, 5-7, 6-1.

Golfers Win

Retaining an unblemished record for the present season, the University golfers handed the club toters from William and Mary a severe defeat by 12-6 on the Hope Valley golf course yesterday.

The Tar Heel drivers captured three of the four single matches and broke even in the two double matches. The end of the morning round of single matches found the local putters in the lead by 9-3.

Driving far and straight, Luther Stewart, hefty golfer, defeated Mallouney, semifinalist in the southern collegiate tournament last year, in one of the best matches of the meet.

Carolina	W. and M.
Chatham (½)	lost Wilcox (2½)
Willis (3)	won Groven
Stewart (3)	Mallouney
Goodes (2½)	Weidemayer (½)

Boxers Wanted

Coach Crayton Rowe urges all men interested in trying out for next year's boxing team report today at the Tin Can at 4 o'clock for spring practice. Barely half a dozen answered the call for practice yesterday, and a well attended spring practice is necessary to the success of the boxing team next year in its first season as a major sport.

Athletes Get Passes

Following the plan recently inaugurated by E. Carrington Smith, Jr., manager of the Carolina theatre, the athletes who score more than 11 points in track meets will receive passes to the theatre. The men who have earned passes so far are: Adkins, Bagby, Baucom, Slusser, Alexander, Mgr., and five others.

BASEBALL TEAM PLAYS MARYLAND FIRST ON TOUR

Tar Heels Have Four Wins Against Two Losses for Season's Play.

With a team batting average of .261 and a season record of four wins to two losses, the Tar Heel nine was off yesterday for College Park, Md., where a game with Maryland this afternoon will open Carolina's annual five-game swing through Virginia and Maryland.

The Tar Heels, champions of the Tri-State League last season, will see action against five Tri-State teams in six days, so that this northern trip will make or mar their chances for another title. Following the Maryland game, the Carolina nine meets Virginia Saturday, Washington and Lee Monday, V. M. I. Tuesday and V. P. I. Wednesday.

Coach Jim Ashmore took a squad of 15 players that included Pitchers Wright, Fleming, Longest and Shields; Catchers Maus, and Kushner; Infielders Jackson, Rand, Whitehead and Lufty; and Outfielders Davis, House, Sher, Blythe and Paxton.

Official batting averages and other statistics for the six games played to date were released by the official scorer yesterday. The team is hitting at a .261 clip, having gotten 49 hits in 188 trips to the plate. In six games opponents have outhit the Tar Heels by 58 to 49, but by keeping hits scattered and by fielding steadily, the Tar Heels have had the better of the scoring by 43 to 34, and have made their runs count for four wins against two losses.

Nap Lufty, slugging third baseman and former captain, is leading the players at bat, with 8 hits for 18 tries and a .444 average. Other leaders who have played in two games or more are Davis, outfielder, 385; Wright and Fleming, pitchers, and Sher and Branch outfielders, tied at .333; and Captain Maus, catcher, 304.

G. H. Paulsen Honored At Birthday Dinner

G. H. Paulsen, head of the University Laundry and proprietor of the Carolina Smoke Shop, who is affectionately known to Carolina students as just plain "Dean" Paulsen, was the guest of honor at a dinner party given at his home recently by Mrs. Paulsen. It was his 53rd birthday.

Virtually all members of the Carolina coaching staff were present, along with a number of other University officials. Dr. Eric A. Abernethy, University physician, was toastmaster.

Junior Notice

President Hudson of the junior class announces that the following are to serve on a committee for the junior dance: Artie Marpet, Clyde Dunn, Tom Craig, Will Yarborough, Mayne Albright, and Obie Davis, and that there will be a meeting of this committee tonight at 7 o'clock at the S.A.E. house.

New Dorms vs. Grimes

With Moore pitching air-tight ball, New Dorms shut Grimes out 20 to 0 yesterday afternoon. Grimes could not stop the heavy hitting of the New Dorms team with relief pitchers, although they used every available man. Hunter got the only homer of the afternoon. The Grimes batters were not able to connect squarely with the hooks that Moore seemed to have on the ball, and were unable to push over any tallies.

Intramural Wrestlers

Coach Peyton Abbot announces that the intramural wrestling tournament will not be held April 15, as stated in yesterday's Tar Heel, but will be held about April 19 or 20, after about ten days' practice.

The number of men who reported yesterday was insufficient to make the tournament a success, and it is hoped that many more candidates will report to Coach Abbot at the Tin Can today.

League of Nations Brought Change To Europe Says Ames

would not ratify anything so general. Sir Austin Chamberlain, England's foreign minister, favored a regional agreement along such lines, however, and the Locarno Peace Pacts followed. These pacts were to create powerful means of obtaining peace, if Germany were admitted to the league so that the Locarno treaties could become binding.

Every one favored the admission of Germany at once, and also favored giving Germany a permanent seat on the council. It takes a unanimous vote to gain a seat on the council, however, and Brazil insisted on having a seat if one was given to Germany. This kept Germany out of the league at the meeting in the spring of 1926, for Germany would not enter without getting a chair on the council.

Germany Admitted to League

During the summer of 1926 in Geneva much anxiety existed, according to Sir Herbert, for Germany's cause was to come up again in the fall. When the fall meeting came Brazil did not send representatives. They would not vote against Germany again, but they did not want to vote for her. Naturally the seat on the council and full membership in the league was at last obtained by Germany.

The initiation of Germany into the "family of nations" was held on September 10, the anniversary of the battle of the Marne, and noteworthy speeches of friendship were made by Stressman of Germany and Briand of France. Sir Herbert read extracts of their statements.

Many people doubt the sincerity of the words which were exchanged at that meeting, but, according to Sir Herbert, one must go no further than to the diplomatic relations of France and Germany for the past few years and see what has been done.

Briand and Stressman, shortly after the admission of Germany, had dinner together in a small Swiss inn and discussed the situation very frankly in a heart-to-heart talk, "the new diplomacy," as Sir Herbert calls it.

Since that time the settlement concerning the occupation of the Rhine has been made, reparation plans have been approved, and many commercial treaties have been executed between the once age-old enemies.

Sir Herbert in closing also emphasized that Franco-German amity has not only been effected but that "heart-to-heart" talks have been held all over Europe. He cited as illustrations the agreements between Greece and Bulgaria, Germany and Poland, Italy and Austria, and stated that something over 90 treaties for settlement of disputes by arbitration have filed at the league's offices in Geneva during the past few years.

Discusses League Covenant

In his address before the International Relations Club yesterday afternoon in Gerrard hall Sir Herbert Ames gave an explanation of the League of Nations Covenant, and stated how he entered upon his work in the league. He gave up a political career in Canada to become the first financial director of the secretariat at Geneva and served until the end of 1926.

The first eight articles of the covenant state the qualifications for membership in the league, and provide for the administration of league affairs.

Article ten, considered by Woodrow Wilson to be the heart of the covenant, is the one which is the cause of the United States' failure to join the league. Article ten states that all members of the league will respect the rights, boundaries, etc., of other states, and will unite to see that all other states do the same. Article eleven continues along the same lines by giving the council power to act at once should an aggressive act be made. Dr. Stressman was of the opinion that these two clauses with the ones immediately following could have prevented the great war had they been in effect in 1914.

Articles 12-15 provide for settlement of disputes by such agents as the World Court and League Council. If the League Council cannot successfully settle an argument in nine months, the states involved are at liberty to go to war, but must not fight before that time. It is believed that after so long a wait the war antagonism would have died down.

Section 16 provides for a boycott, commercially and socially, on any state which is the aggressor in military action. This point has caused the London Parley to meet with difficulty since the United States would not be bound to boycott a state which the league declared boycotted. Many states do not want to reduce their armaments when such a condition is possible.

Section 18 states that all treaties involving any member of the league must be filed with the league or it will not be valid. Something over 2000 treaties have been filed at Geneva since the formation of the league.

Section 23 calls for action to provide for means of International cooperation by better trade and commercial agreements, international control of disease, fighting traffic of opium and other drugs, and countless other similar steps to promote amity.

Sir Herbert quoted William E. Rappar, international lawyer, as believing the league to be three in one. Rappar's leagues are (1) an organization to guarantee the integrity of states, (2) an organization to provide for settling of disputes without war, and (3) an organization to provide means of international cooperation.

At the end of the address Sir Herbert gave the audience the privilege of asking questions and looking at maps, and documents concerning the work of the league.

Important Staff Meeting Today

There will be a brief meeting of all Tar Heel reporters this morning at chapel period. It is absolutely necessary that all reporters attend this meeting as important announcements will be made.

The regular meeting will be held Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. Reassignment of beats will be made and those not attending will be dropped unless excused by the editor or the managing editor in advance.

William Cain Club Selects Officers

The annual election of officers of the William Cain student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers was held at the regular meeting of the society last night in Phillips hall.

The officers chosen were Rankin White, president; George Quinn, vice-president; and "Chuck" Erickson, treasurer.

The secretary, who is usually a member of the sophomore class, was not chosen. This office will be filled by a committee made up of the newly elected officers and the retiring president, Charles Waddell.

DRAMA FESTIVAL GETS UNDERWAY

senting Booth Tarkington's "The Travellers," was winner over the Whiteville Dramatic Club, which staged "Submerged," by Cottman and Shaw. The winner will meet the Derita High School Club Friday night in the final contest for county high schools.

The cast for "The Travelers" was made up of Elwood Seal, John Gay, Nicholas Grant, Paul Bradley, Thomas Midyette, Eugene Boone, Miss Elizabeth Boone, Miss Dorothy Bennett, Miss Lillian Collier, and Miss Anne Joyner, all of Jackson.

Those playing in "Submerged" were John Burns, James Pittman, Samuel Winesette, Earl Butler, Jimmy Culls, and J. M. Formyduval.

Last night's program consisted of a group of three original plays, featuring the invitation performance by the Wayne Community Players of William Royall's "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder," the play recently chosen to represent North Carolina in the national Little Theatre contest in New York.

The other two original plays were Lucy Gaylord's "The Seventh Wave," given by the Lenoir-Rhyne Playmakers, and C. H. Griffin's "The Elopement," by the Seaboard Women's Club.

Today's program includes the final contests in play production for county and city high schools and junior colleges, a guest performance by the Carolina Playmakers, a series of lectures by leading dramatic authorities, and a conference for dramatic directors.

The program will be opened at 10:30 o'clock with an address by Prof. Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, whose subject will be "A New American Theatre." The festival will continue through tomorrow night.

Henderson Completes Book On 'Immortals'

"goes abroad infrequently, and knows but three European languages besides English." She names Sidney Howard, "contesting soon, for first place among the dramatists with Eugene O'Neill," and C. K. Ogden, philosopher, author of "The Meaning of Meaning," who will, she says, "not likely be recognized at his full worth during his lifetime, but will open the door to clear thinking." She names Sinclair Lewis, Robert Frost and Carl Sandburg in literature, and Pavlova, Jannings and Chaplin as greatest in their fields.

Upton Sinclair, who calls Trotsky the "greatest living statesman" and Coolidge the "greatest living fake," believes that "modern reputations are so much a matter of newspaper puffery and predatory self-interest, that it is impossible for me to judge. . . . How can I say who is the greatest industrialist, inventor or financier? All these types of persons are necessarily tied up with the capitalistic system and get their greatness under that system, and it is impossible for me to separate the useful elements in them from the vicious."

The latest book of North Carolina's versatile educator promises to be characteristic of the man who is, at one and the same time himself a mathematician, historian, essayist, and biographer of such widely different figures as Shaw, Mark Twain and Daniel Boone. Mrs. Archibald Henderson, however, has not the "intimations" of her husband concerning the twelve characters of his book. She has her own name for the volume: "Temporary Immortals."

Grail Tickets On Sale at Y Today

Tickets for the Grail dance Saturday for those who do not take girls will be on sale at the Y. M. C. A. from 9:30 to 2 o'clock today, according to Red Greene, treasurer. Many girls are expected to be present at the Grail as there are two dances on Friday night, the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity staging a dance at the Carolina Inn and the sophomore class holding its annual hop in Bynum Gym. There are also several house parties being held this week-end.

Snake Bite Remedies To Be Demonstrated

The University branch of the American Pharmaceutical Association has arranged for an illustrated lecture on the modern remedies for snake bite poisoning to be given here in Pharmacy hall at 8 o'clock this evening.

Motion pictures and lantern slides for the lecture are to be provided by the Antivenin Institute of America, a division of the Mulford Biological Laboratories in Philadelphia.

The motion picture will show the principal poisonous snakes of the United States in action. They include the highland moccasin, cotton-mouth moccasin, and various species of rattlesnakes. The characteristic habits, markings, and geographical distribution will be shown. Experts will show how the snakes are captured, how the venom is secreted through the fangs, and how the poison is collected for use in preparing a curative serum. The manufacture of the serum and its use in treating snakebite poisoning will be briefly reviewed.

The purpose of this lecture is to bring before the students of the University and their friends among Boy Scout officials and citizens of nearby towns the new work which has been going on for the past two and a half years and the success attained in producing an anti-snakebite serum which is effective against the poisonous snakes of this country.

Physicians will have an opportunity to get first-hand information concerning the case reports which have been collected over a period of two years by the institute, and pharmacists will have the opportunity to ask many questions concerning this new serum which will help them in their service as distributors.

Scout executives and scoutmasters in this immediate territory are especially invited to make arrangements for the members of their troops to see the pictures, it being pointed out that the hiking season is on and that every boy should know the poisonous snakes and the treatment for their bites.

lar addresses. While in Alabama he will also speak to the Alabama State Woman's College.

Dr. Howe's interest in the classics came about in a rather unusual way. His father died when he was just a boy and his uncle, Woodrow Wilson, then President of Princeton, took him into his home, educated him, and guided his early career. Dr. Wilson, himself a great lover of the classics, urged his nephew to make Latin his major study, and sent him to Germany after his graduation from Princeton to take his doctorate. Dr. Howe specialized in Latin there. On his return to America it was largely through Dr. Wilson's influence that Dr. Howe was elected Professor of Latin at the University of North Carolina. Dr. Howe later was appointed head of the Latin department and dean of the college of liberal arts, resigning the latter position several years ago in order to be able to devote more time to classical research and writing.

PRICE IS CHOSEN PRESIDENT THIRD YEAR LAW CLASS

Mac Gray President Second Year Class In Election Held Yesterday.

Charles Price, of Salisbury, was unopposed for the presidency of the third year law class in the elections held yesterday at the law school. Mac Gray of Statesville, was named president of the second year class for the coming year.

Martin Kellogg of Sunbury was elected vice-president of the third year group with Carlisle Smith, of Asheville, secretary-treasurer. W. T. Covington, of Raeford, will be vice-president of the second year class and Paul Boucher, of Damascus, Va., is to be secretary-treasurer.

Price received his A. B. degree with the class of 1928, and entered the law school the following year. In his undergraduate days he was chairman of the executive committee of the senior class. As a sophomore he became a protege of Taylor Bledsoe in the campus political campaign of 1926 and has since then been an active leader in University politics, climaxing his career with the landslide of last week.

Mac Gray graduated with the class in 1929, receiving the A. B. degree. He is a member of Golden Fleece, Phi Beta Kappa, and was President of the Y. M. C. A. during his senior year. During his first year in the law school he has been on the honor roll, and is on the Law Review.

EDGERTON WINS FRENCH CONTEST

215 Students Take Part In Tests; 19 Receive Honorable Mention.

William Benbow Edgerton of the Greensboro senior high school, was yesterday announced as the winner of the fifth annual French contests conducted by the extension division and department of romance languages of the University.

A total of 215 students from 117 schools, representing every section in the state, took part in the contest, which was held March 14. Each school sent its three best papers to the University committee of judges, of which Dr. T. J. Wilson, III, was chairman.

Nineteen other high school students were given honorable mention in recognition of the excellence shown in their tests while 15 high schools were given "special commendation" for the high average of their three papers.

The purpose of the tests, which consisted mostly of composition and translation, was to stimulate interest in the study of French.

Although the highest award, a trophy cup to be presented on the occasion of the final debate for the Aycock Cup here next week, went to a boy, it is interesting to note that most of the 19 receiving honorable mention were girls. The 19 are:

James Combs, Mount Airy; Grace Graves, Grainger high school, Kinston; Janie Allgood, Roxboro; Mildred Downs, Lenoir; Maine Vogely, Boyden high school, Salisbury; Genoise

PROF. KOCH SAYS LITTLE THEATRES ARE ON UPGRADE

Seven Thousand High Schools Now Fostering Interest In Little Theatres.

The Little Theatre movement, which is devoted primarily to the development of native drama, is sweeping the country and the time is not far off when there will be a great national theatre of the people of which Broadway will be only a part, Frederick H. Koch, professor of dramatic literature and director of the Carolina Playmakers of the University, declared here yesterday in an address before the seventh annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association.

Substantiating his point, Professor Koch asserted that of the 72,000 high schools in America, 7,000 have definite courses in play production and playwriting, with an average of 50 students for each course. In 6,000 other high schools one or more plays are produced by the students each year, he said.

"This means," Professor Koch declared, "that there are hundreds of thousands of young actors, writers, designers, and stage hands producing plays for an American audience that runs into the millions. It also means the creation of a new audience for the next generation.

"There are 18,000 Little Theatre groups in America, and, according to Kenneth Macgowan, who has investigated for the Carnegie Foundation, there are five theatres outside of New York City which are better equipped for dramatic production than any theatre on Broadway."

In recognition of the importance of this movement a great many leading educational institutions are today awarding degrees in the drama, Professor

UNIVERSITY BAND TO GIVE CONCERT

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 the University band under the direction of T. Smith McCorkle will give a symphonic concert in the Carolina theatre.

The band has received very favorable comments in local papers of the communities where it has recently appeared. Tomorrow's program will be chosen from the same repertoire that its recent concerts comprise.

E. Carrington Smith, through his donation of the theatre for the occasion, has provided a hall with excellent acoustics, which will enhance the effect of the band.

Following the 45 minute concert, the picture, "Close Harmony" will be shown. A silver offering at the door will be taken in order to secure necessary funds for the band.

To Entertain S. A. E.'s

Members of the S. A. E. fraternity will be entertained by Manager E. C. Smith of the Carolina theatre at the 7 o'clock show this evening. All members must accompany their president. This is in keeping with the policy of the theatre management.

Senior Notice

SIR HERBERT FOR LEAGUE BECAUSE PREVENTS WARS

Last League of Nations Lectures Scheduled For Tonight In Murphey Hall.

In two lectures yesterday afternoon and night in Gerrard hall Sir Herbert Ames outlined the present machinery of the League of Nations and the ways in which this machinery acts in its tremendous task of preventing war. Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock he gave a detailed account of the League's organization.

Last night Sir Herbert listed the past successes of the League in settling disputes and averting war, particularly in the dispute between Holland and Finland and in the Graeco-Bulgarian crisis. In the latter case Greek soldiers had actually invaded Bulgarian territory to collect by force an indemnity which she claimed when the League intervened and brought the two nations to a peaceable settlement of their differences.

Sir Herbert very frankly discussed the European attitude toward the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact, which was heralded in this country as a great step toward outlawing war. The Europeans feel, he said, that this pact will guarantee security against war, only if it will cause the United States to sanction League actions and give its support to League policies.

He listed the barricades to war which now exist as the following: (1) the Covenant of the League of Nations, (2) the famous Locarno Treaties, (3) the Kellogg-Briand Pact, and (4) the intangible influence which the League exerts through its bringing together representatives from all over the world and through the numerous summer visitors to Geneva. Two projects now being developed which will be of great importance in the prevention of war are a multilateral arbitration treaty which all nations can sign, and compulsory arbitration by the World Court in disputed cases. Both these undertakings have the support of the majority of the League members.

In closing, Sir Herbert said that the outlook for the future success of the League of Nations was hopeful.

The series of lectures will be closed tonight in Murphey hall with an illustrated lecture showing the workings of the League.

PHI SIGMA KAPPA GIVES FORMAL DANCE AT INN

Members of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity entertained at a formal dance in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn last night from 9:30 until 1 o'clock. Russ Bolen and his Brunswick recording orchestra of Cleveland played for the affair.

Decorations for the ballroom were in magenta and silver, the fraternity colors. A fraternity figure and a grand march were the cotillion features of the dance. "Dink" Fowler, with Miss Martha White of Norfolk led both professionals.

The fraternity is also having a house party this week-end in connection with the dance. Their visitors include a number of girls from South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

Playmakers Begin Work On Shakespeare's Play

Miss Lois Buell Will Take Part Of Juliet, and Howard Bailey Will Lead As Romeo; To Be Produced In Forest Theatre May 16-17.

The Carolina Playmakers, under the direction of Elmer Hall, have begun the rehearsals of their spring production, Shakespeare's tragedy of love, Romeo and Juliet. The play will be produced in the Forest Theatre May 16 and 17. The rehearsals at the Forest Theatre began last Tuesday afternoon. Among the members of the cast are quite a number of the best known of the Playmakers, such as Professor Koch, Eveland Davies, Howard Bailey and Margaret Vale.

Miss Lois Buell, who will play the part of Juliet, is a professional actress who has been with the Repertory Theatre of Boston for the last two years. The Repertory Theatre closed its season about the first of the year so Miss Buell came to Chapel Hill in order to play the part of Juliet in the Playmaker production of this famous play.

There are seventeen changes of scene in the play, but due to a unique arrangement of the stage there will be only one intermission, which will be about the middle of the play. This will give the actors, and the audience as well, a chance to rest. The stage will be divided into three parts, each of which will be a complete stage in itself. While one is being used the others are

TWO PLAYS WILL BE PRODUCED BY JITNEY PLAYERS

"A Trip To Scarborough" Is To Be Staged For First Time In America.

"The Wonder," one of the plays which the Jitney Players will present at the Playmaker theatre Monday and Tuesday, was written by Mrs. Centlivre early in the eighteenth century and was produced at the Drury Lane theatre in 1714.

The story is one of a harsh father who insists that his beautiful daughter marry a man of his choice, regardless of her wishes. The daughter, preferring death to this state of affairs, hurls herself from her chamber window, only to land in the arms of a young British soldier. This daughter has a friend who is also the daughter of a merciless father, and with this friend she seeks refuge. This creates a misunderstanding between her friend and her friend's suitor. Other characters become involved, but the affair ends happily in the third act.

The principal roles in this play are filled by Richard Skinner, Harrison Dowd, Francesca Bruning, Ada Cafagna, Douglas Rowland and Alice Keating. Miss Keating and her husband, the late Bushnell Cheyney, founded the Jitney Players seven years ago.

The other play which the troupe will present, "A Trip to Scarborough," was written by Richard Brinsley Sheridan and was produced at Drury Lane in 1777. The play is representative of the period. Shepperd Strudwick will take the role of "Tom Fashion" in this play.

The Jitney Players are said to be producing this play for the first time in America. "A Trip to Scarborough" was first done by Sir John van Brugh. Tickets for the performances may be obtained at the Students' Supply Store.

DEBATING TEAMS MEET NEXT WEEK

Fifty-Five High Schools To Compete Here For Aycock Memorial Cup April 18.

SPORTS ALSO FEATURED

Secretary E. R. Rankin of the high school debating union yesterday announced that two more schools, Winton and Bethel high schools, have reported that they will come to Chapel Hill next week for the finals of the statewide contests. This makes a total of fifty-five schools competing for the state championships. The winning debating team will receive the Aycock memorial cup. The subject to be discussed in each of the preliminary and final debates is: "Resolved, That North Carolina should adopt the proposed constitutional amendment, authorizing the classification of property for taxation. This query was decided upon for this year's contest by the central committee of the High School Debating union.

In addition to the debating contest, a track meet and a tennis tournament will be held. Many entries have been received for the track meet which will take place Friday afternoon, April 18, at Emerson field. The tennis tournament, which will be under the direction of Coach Kenfield, will be held on Thursday and finished up on Friday.

The high school representatives will arrive in Chapel Hill on Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning. Thursday will witness the preliminaries of the tournament and the debating contest. On Friday the track meet will be held

Every man has a lurking wish to appear considerable in his native place.—Johnson.

Problems Of The Editor

Editing a newspaper is not the most pleasurable and profitable means of wasting one's afternoons and evenings while in college—not by any freakish flight of fancy. While it has its attractive points, such as they are, the editor's job entails innumerable irksome tasks and responsibilities, in addition to the more pleasant duties of editorial writing.

No newspaper editor, amateur or professional, can hope to please more than a small majority of his readers. Indeed, the editor who attempts to make himself and his writings agreeable to all factions and viewpoints is nothing more than a pusillanimous fence-straddler; he isn't worth what it costs to keep him in typewriter ribbons.

Popularity-seekers do not make good newspaper editors. But no one likes to accept reproach and censure which results from the sins of commission or omission of others. Even the sin-scarred head of the average newspaper editor does not deserve all the blame that is heaped upon it—and the college newspaper editor is no exception. Whenever a trivial article fails to appear or does not receive as much prominence as someone thinks it deserves, the long-suffering editor is in for some more fire and brimstone. Every detail of make-up, every written line is held to his direct responsibility.

But the most perplexing of all problems—and the one which creates the most disturbance—with which the newspaper editor is confronted is that presented by communications submitted for publication in the Open Forum or Readers' Opinions columns. If one of these communications is not published, the editor is accused of discrimination. Even though the manuscript itself be libelous in the extreme, unfair in its accusations against other persons or organizations and unsubstantiated in its statements, the editor is declared to be the spineless creature of "big business," the protector of vested interests or mere slave of petty personal animosities.

An unfair attack upon the newly-elected editor of the Carolina Magazine, which appeared in the Readers' Opinions columns of the Tar Heel this week, is a case in point. In accordance with its announced policy of printing all contributions to the Readers' Opinions columns, so long as they are within the bounds of decency, the letter was published, although we considered it highly unfair and unsportsmanlike.

In the hope of reducing the number of such communications in the future, we have decided to print no Readers' Opinions letters except those which the authors are willing to acknowledge in print. Hereafter correct names of the authors will be printed with all Readers' Opinions letters. In this manner we hope to solve one of the most vexatious problems which we have encountered.

The High-Schoolegians Are Coming

Not long ago many of us were at this time of the year making our first bow in Chapel Hill. From all over the state we converged here as a mob of high school students—debaters, public speakers, trackmen. We were greener than college freshmen. We looked upon the natives of the campus with considerable awe, envious of their halo of collegiate nonchalance.

But our reverence for the collegians didn't hinder us from asking them for direction in getting about the campus. And the way each one answered played a part in our first impression of the University. If a couple fellows replied to our innocent questions a bit crabbedly, as if they resented being bothered by anyone who didn't know the way to Murphey Hall, we felt sort of empty-hearted about things in general, and about the University in particular. The campus lost some of its charm for us. It even left an unpleasant taste on our tongues.

If our questions were answered in an obliging manner, if we were made to feel easy and at home, we couldn't help thinking that this must be a pretty good old place to go to school. We went away with a long-remembered warmth for the University.

Next week several score high school debaters are coming to town. For many it will be their first trip to Chapel Hill. Most of them, as the scholastic pick of North Carolina's secondary schools, will be highly desirable as potential Carolina students. Next week for a few days they will be callow fledglings in our collegiate rookery, just as we ourselves once were. The way we treat them, the idea they get of us, may either make or break their good opinion of Carolina. Let's make them feel easy and at home.—J. J.

The Ames Lectures

Since 1919—in fact since the very day on which Wilson offered his Fourteenth Point—the League of Nations has been a subject of much discussion in this country. Propaganda, both pro and con, has had its effect in practically every community. Certain pacifists of the extreme type have, by their indiscreet utterances, caused many people to take a somewhat skeptical attitude towards the League as an effective means of establishing permanent peace. Likewise unyielding militarists have gained many friends for the League.

But as a rule those whose views are so extreme know little about the League itself. All that the average person knows about the organization, and why the United States should or should not enter, are those facts and interpretations which have been gained from reading the newspapers. All too many who express opinions about the League are ignorant of the real facts, the aims, and the workings of that organization.

There is at present one among us (we almost said stranger in our midst, but by this time those who have already heard him feel that they know him will) who knows the facts about the League of Nations, one who has taken an active interest in it since its foundation. Sir Herbert Ames, as treasurer of the League for seven years has had a rare opportunity to study its causes and consequences, and it is as a man who has had first-hand experience that we welcome him here. He has information which is necessary to all who are interested in world peace, and he is well qualified to speak on the subject he has chosen. Sir Herbert Ames's lectures are indeed a real opportunity for the student.

The Red Man

By J. C. Williams

Chest Regalia

Happier than if inheriting a kingdom, numerous freshmen are now laying aside their pledge buttons for glittering, bejeweled pins. With the badge of the particular fraternity which chose him last fall on his chest, the freshman proclaims to the campus the fact that he is entitled to enjoy all the privileges of full-fledged fraternity life. His very god is the gilded heifer of Baal.

We venture to predict that some day a premium will be placed on intellect; and moral fibre will count for more than the mere jangle of "the old man's" shekels. Then fraternities, even in the eyes of conservatives, will take on a new role—a role of greater significance in collegiate life.

Already they come—scores of posters which tell how to make easy money during the summer. Nearly every bulletin board on the campus has some "easy money" poster on it. There's no use to talk about hard times when responsible companies will guarantee college students two hundred dollars per summer. After reading several posters, we are prone to conclude that times aren't so hard after all. One must allow, however, for the high power methods of the poster-writer and the representatives of companies who are seeking young men to work for them.

The other day while strolling past a conspicuous board, the following inscription wandered into the aura of our gaze: "If you want to make not less than $300 for the summer, see ....." Upon passing the same spot half an hour later, we noticed that the poster had been changed to read: "If you want to make not more than $3.00 for the summer, see ....." The truth of the matter probably lay between the two extremes.

A Lick In Time

We understand from recent issues of this paper that ambitious politicians are already engaged in the task of "framing up" the campus for next year, the contention being that "the early bird catches the worm." Although we don't doubt the truth of this old saying, we are inclined to believe that perhaps even the worm is not avaliable yet.

History Repeats Itself

The flaming collegiate youth of the Roaring Forties drank great quantities of eggnog and sang all manner of sentimental songs to young ladies at midnight, while the old folks looked on with alarm. A look into old newspaper files acquaints us with history's repetition of the perplexities of crabbed age over the licentiousness of youth. A century ago our elders worried over our sins. Today they are vexed in similar fashion. But we are nothing more than duplicates of our fathers, grandfathers, and great-grandfathers. The tides of criticism which shower down upon the youth of every generation are destined to accomplish little in any age. If given time we, modern youth, will come out all right and will settle down in time to criticize the generation following us.

The Di Senate Again

Again the venerable Di Senate is a subject of controversy. In his inaugural address Tuesday night, President Rector reviewed the history of the Senate in an attempt to explain the present lack of interest in the work of the organization. Just as each president for the last several years has done, he lamented the fact that the hall is no longer filled to overflowing each Tuesday night. The idea underlying such remarks is a good one; but each incoming president seems not to realize that the Di Senate is no longer supposed to furnish a get-together medium for the campus. Its function is a limited one; namely, to train students of the University in the noble arts of public speaking and argumentation. Since there are very few students here who are interested in public speaking, there is no reason for believing that the hall should be filled. The presence of disinterested persons would hamper the meeting, rather than improve it.

Vocabulary Acceleration

'Tis an interesting thing to notice the changes in the average girl's vocabulary after she's been in college a few months and joined herself to most of the essentials. Even a random glance at one's letters will show that she has a crush on someone, or that she is thrilled to extinction about something all the time. Occasional dates overpower her with joy — heavy dates, blind dates, hot dates, cold dates, pop dates, darling dates, and otherwise. Walking up and down College Avenue is an unrivalled pleasure, and anybody who comes along and picks her up is just too sweet for words. One cannot read a line of such a letter without discovring that its writer is annihilated with pleasure about something.

Moreover, there's always so much to do, like taking a hike, or going over to the gym, counting the days before holidays, or even attending lectures. The Queen's English is strained a bit but manages to stand the pressure.

We take great pleasure here in announcing the very apparent change in the name of our column. 'Tis merely an old friend in a new dress.

Gastonia Gazette Reviews Book On The Situation In Cotton Mills

An unusually pertinent review of "Some Southern Cotton Mill Workers and Their Villages" by Jennings J. Rhyne appeared in the Gastonia Daily Gazette for the past Wednesday. The remarks from this critic are of particular interest since they reflect a direct reaction to the book from the scene of recent labor troubles.

Furthermore, the author of this treatise is a native of Gastonia, and is thus in a position to analyze and clearly define the nature and causes for much of the agitation there. Because of the fact that the material for the book was prepared before the recent outbreak in Gastonia, the statements therein made are impartial and free from prejudice.

As the reviewer from Gastonia says, "Rhyne's book is one of the most even-tempered and unbiased books on the southern cotton mill workers that has been published recently. The author gives nothing more than the facts as he finds them in a careful study of 500 families of cotton mill workers in the south."

As to the labor disorders of the past year the Gazette remarks that "only slight mention of these disturbances, by way of an additional preface, is made," indicating the impartiality of the author's views.

The following are some statistical observations made in the book, according to the review, which are of particular interest:

"Most of the labor of the southern cotton mill is drafted from the tenant farmer class . . . and a majority of them are only slightly educated, marry young, and live as long as anybody else.

"Mr. Rhyne finds no co-relation between cotton mill work and juvenile delinquency, illegitimate births, death rate, insanity or crime.

"The cotton mill family is on the average smaller than the generally accepted average family of five for this country. The mill worker's family averages slightly over four.

"The average education of mill workers was about four grades or thereabouts, and four college graduates were found among the 500 families."

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Saturday, April 12.—Facing Difficulty. (Read Psalm 27.) Key verse: "Be of good courage and the Lord will strengthen thine heart."

Meditation: One must have the mental and moral courage to face facts honestly and without flinching. One must see his antagonist squarely if he is to take his full measure. Fear to know facts often makes the facts seem more terrible than they are. Fear is a fog, that makes specters out of lamp posts. It is sometimes desirable that one should admit unpleasant facts to others. Confession gives outlet to strong emotion that otherwise turns in and may often accumulate dangerously. Better tell a friend your trouble than to break, in trying to cover it up and to carry it by yourself. True pride that will not burden another should not degenerate into false pride that will not admit difficulty. Courage to face facts alone and with others is the surest way to discover adequate resources with which to meet them.

Prayer: O God, we desire above all else to be honest with thee, with ourselves and with others. Give us sense and courage to look life in the face and to stand before facts without evasion. Deliver us from false pride and self-pity and give us the calm of those who put their trust in thee, the living God. Amen.

Alumni Program

Committee Arranges Schedule of Events for Reunion Day

The program for Alumni day at commencement was fixed by the committee on class reunions Saturday evening at the Carolina Inn. Monday, June 9, is the day on which the campus will be turned over to the alumni.

The association will meet at 10:30 A. M. in Gerrard hall. This gathering will be followed by the Alumni luncheon in Swain hall. The class reunion suppers will be held at 6 o'clock that evening, and the day's program will end with the President's reception and Alumni ball in the Tin Can.

The presidents of the reuniting classes will make short talks at the morning meeting.

Contest With Penn State Features Sport Card

Track And Tennis Squads To See Plenty Of Action

Rekers of Two-Mile Fame Will Be Here For Meet; Netmen To Meet Alabama Tuesday, Davidson Wednesday.

An intersectional track meet with Penn State and the annual North Carolina collegiate tennis tournament will feature a full home schedule for University athletic teams during the coming week. Track and tennis headline the card.

Friday brings another annual North Carolina high school championship track meet to Chapel Hill, and Saturday will bring the much anticipated Carolina-Penn State meet, easily the biggest intersectional track contest to be held in the south this year.

The tennis schedule pits the Tar Heels against Alabama here Tuesday, against Davidson here Wednesday, and against the state's best collegians here Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the annual North Carolina collegiate tennis tournament.

The baseball team will play one home engagement, meeting V. M. I. here Saturday afternoon, but will be campaigning in Virginia on its annual northern tour during all the first part of the week. On this trip the Tar Heel nine will play Washington and Lee at Lexington Monday, V. M. I. at Lexington Tuesday and V. P. I. at Blacksburg Wednesday.

The varsity golfers will play one engagement, meeting Georgia Tech at Atlanta on Saturday.

The freshman teams have several dates to fill likewise. The Tar Baby tennis team will begin play Monday in the North-South tourney at Pinehurst. Tentative engagements, to be announced later, are carded for the Tar Baby baseball, track and golf teams.

The Carolina-Penn State meet on Saturday is attracting especial interest. The Lions, coached by the former Tar Heel Nate Cartmell, regularly have one of the strongest track teams in the country and will bring a great list of stars to Chapel Hill, headed by Paul Rekers, I. C. A. A. A. A. two-mile champ. Their meet with the Tar Heels, unbeaten in dual meets for eight years, should be interesting.

The state tennis tourney is also attracting wide interest. The Tar Heels won both singles and doubles last year, and, with a team of two veterans and some promising sophomores, will be striving to duplicate that 1929 feat.

Freshman Golfers Meet Greensboro

The freshman golf team will journey to Greensboro this week-end for a match this afternoon with Greensboro high.

The 1930 Tar Babies constitute the strongest freshman golfing quartet ever developed here, and play the State Championship Tar Heel varsity on virtually even terms.

They are undefeated for the season, and number among their victories a win over the strong Charlotte high team, which had previously beaten the N. C. State varsity.

Against Greensboro high the Tar Babies will probably line up as follows: Joe Adams, number one; Fred Laxton, number two; Raymond Chatham, number three; and Billy O'Brien, number four, with Doc Ballenger, as alternate.

DORMITORY BALL FINISHES SECOND SUCCESSFUL WEEK

New Dorms - Grimes Fight Proves To Be Most One-Sided Affair Of Past Seven Days.

In spite of a wealth of other attractions the second week of intramural baseball was a success. There were few forfeits and a real interest was shown by both fraternity and dormitory teams in the face of muddy fields and late games.

The most one-sided game was New Dorms' 20-0 victory over Grimes. Moore, New Dorms pitcher, has a baffling delivery and the Grimes team was unable to connect with his curves. Grimes was unable to locate an effective pitcher and the hard-hitting New Dorms aggregation took advantage of the situation.

Several pitchers who appear to have the goods came forth this week. Besides Moore, Newcombe, D. K. E. freshman; Parks, Sigma Zeta; Bullock, Lambda Chi Alpha; and Johnson, Sigma Chi, were outstanding. Newcombe held the Phi Alpha team to two hits and four runs while his own team knocked off 13 scores. Parks pitched his team to a 10-1 victory over Delta Tau Delta. Kermit Wheary, editor-elect of the Buccaneer, was in the box for Delta Tau Delta. Bob Bullock, mathematics instructor in the University, shut out Sigma Phi Sigma Thursday afternoon. The Lambda Chis, with Bullock pitching, won the campus intramural baseball championship two years ago, and they seem to have a hitting bunch again this year. Amos Johnson pitched a varsity class of ball against the Zeta Psis Friday. Besides Johnson, the Sigma Chis have Ned Lipscomb and Dave Henry, both hard-hitters. S. A. E. has a good pitcher in June Adams and a lineup that can hit. They defeated Tau Epsilon Phi 9-1 Wednesday. The closest game of the week was between Old West and Lewis ("J"), when Old West made a fifth inning rally and came out with the long end of an 8-7 score. A. T. O. and Carr also won their games, A. T. O. beating Delta Sigma Phi 10-3, and Carr doubling the score on Mangum 8-4.

Certain teams seem to be outstanding at the present time, but only two weeks of the season are gone, and anything may happen yet. Teams that have lost games need not feel at all discouraged. Dormitory managers should take note that games are scheduled at 4 and 5 o'clock sharp and that two successive forfeits render a team ineligible.

Sigma Chi Wins

Sigma Chi overwhelmed Zeta Psi yesterday afternoon 15-4. The game was called after half of the fourth on account of darkness. Amos Johnson, Sigma Chi, pitched a good brand of ball, holding Zeta Psi to one run till the fourth inning.

TAR HEEL TENNIS TEAM WILL FILL TOUGH SCHEDULE

To Compete In Fifteen Dual Matches With State And Southern Tournaments.

The Tar Heel tennis team, winner of both singles and doubles in last year's State tournament, will plunge into the midst of a tough season schedule on Tuesday, when Alabama brings its raqueteers to Chapel Hill.

The day following the Tar Heels will begin a three-day quest of honors in the State tournament, and from there on it will be one hard match after another.

The complete schedule, announced today, shows 15 dual matches, 10 against Southern Conference foes, plus participation in State and Southern tournaments.

An especial feature is the long Southern trip, beginning with Davidson on May 6, on which the Tar Heels will meet in order Davidson, Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Sewanee, Georgia Tech, Alabama, Tulane and L. S. U., winding up at the Southern Conference Tournament May 15, 16, and 17.

Captain Bill Merritt, who paired with Shapiro to win the State doubles crown last year, will lead the 1930 team. Ed Yeomans, State singles champ last year, is the only other letterman.

Coach John Kenfield will have to build his team around these veterans, drawing from a trio of sophomores, Hinkey Hendlin, Ed Graham and Phil Liskin, who played a 1-2-3 on the Frosh last year, and from last season's reserves.

The season schedule follows:
April 15—Alabama, here.
April 16—Davidson, here.
April 17, 18, 19—State Tourney, here.
April 21—Johns Hopkins, here.
April 24—Duke, there.
April 25—Wake Forest, here.
May 3—Wake Forest, here.
May 6—Davidson, there.
May 7—Tennessee, there.
May 8—Vanderbilt, there.
May 9—Sewanee, there.
May 10—Georgia Tech, there.
May 12—Alabama, there.
May 13—Tulane, there.
May 14—L. S. U., there.
May 15, 16, 17—Southern Conference.
May 20—Duke, here.

Relay Men Leave

A strong Tar Heel delegation of 19 performers left tonight for Atlanta to enter the annual Georgia Tech Relays tomorrow.

The 15 varsity entries, accompanied by Coach Bob Fetzer, and Manager Johnston Alexander, were Weil, Gay, Nims, Farmer, Lowery, Barkley, Phoenix, Baucom, Arnold, Neiman, Bagby, Brown, Perry, Stafford, and Slusser. Freshman entries making the trip were: Jensen, Jones, Watkins and Mitcham, who will run in the freshman relays.

The Tar Heels will enter teams in the half mile, mile and four mile relays, and will also enter in individual events, Farmer sprinter; Arnod, vaulter; Neiman, vaulter and broadjumper; Brown, discus; and Perry, Stafford and Slusser, hurdlers.

The 1930 Tar Heels, heirs to a Carolina track record of no defeats in dual meets for eight years, have beaten Georgia Tech by 104 to 27 and Duke by 96-29 and give promise of being one of the strongest teams at the Tech Relays.

CAROLINA GOLFERS MEET DUKE TODAY

Carolina Golfers will meet Duke over the nearby Hope Valley Country Club course this afternoon in the third contest of the week for the State championship Tar Heels.

The Tar Heel quartet will probably consist of Captain Charlie Chatham; Meade Willis, individual State champion; and Luther Stewart, veterans; and Ben Goodes, a newcomer, playing in the place of the veteran June Adams, who has been kept out of early meets by scholastic work as a law student.

PREYER COMING HERE MONDAY TO DELIVER SPEECH

Vice-President of Vick Company Will Address Juniors and Seniors on Career After College.

A. T. Preyer, vice-president and personal executive of the Vick Chemical Company of Greensboro, will speak in Bingham hall Monday evening on the subject "After College—What?" Mr. Preyer is speaking on the campus under the auspices of the University branch of the Taylor Society.

In his talk Monday evening, which should prove of interest to members of the senior and junior classes, Mr. Preyer will discuss the problem facing the college man who enters business after a four-year period of university or college preparation.

Mr. Preyer will discuss what it is that management and industry expect from the college graduate, and what the college man has to offer toward meeting these requirements.

When a college graduate enters industry he receives a terrific shock, because of the difference between the atmosphere of the work he is entering and what Mr. Preyer chooses to call "the artificial atmosphere of the colleges." During the course of his talk the speaker will discuss the shock which the graduate receives, and will offer suggestions as to how the student may prepare for the shock and how he may accept it so that it will be least confusing.

The Vick Chemical Company has for several years taken college men into its ranks, and at the present time there is a tendency for a larger proportion of these men to be graduates of the University.

During the winter quarter, the class in industrial management, taught by Professor G. T. Schwenning of the commerce school, visited the plant of the company in Greensboro. Several members of the faculty also made this inspection trip.

The Meeting Monday evening will begin promptly at 7 o'clock and will be over at 8. The officers of the Taylor Society extend an invitation to all who are interested to come to hear Mr. Preyer discuss a problem which will face all college men when they finish their work at the University.

Alumnus Is Honored

Gilchrest B. Stockton, of Jacksonville, Fla., a prominent University alumnus, has been appointed to represent the United States as Minister to Austria. He is the second alumnus of the University to be appointed to prominent diplomatic offices since the election of President Hoover, the other being John Motley Morehead, who was appointed Minister to Sweden.

Old East Wins

Aycock defeated Old East yesterday afternoon by a last minute rally that netted four runs and won the ball game 7 to 6.

Smith, a pinch hitter, was the man of the hour for Aycock. With three men on base he drove a screaming liner far over the center fielder's head to end a hard fought and very close battle.

Both Wall, pitching for Aycock, and Jackson, pitching for Old East, played a good brand of baseball, and neither one seemed to have much edge over the other. Heavy hitting was the outstanding performance of the afternoon, S. Wall and Smith both getting home runs for Aycock, while Sutton came through with a four bagger for Old East. Few errors marked the play of both teams.

The Lineup:

Aycock (7)	Old East (6)
S. Wall 1b (2)	Daniels 1b
Howe 2b. (1)	Carpenter 2b.
B. Hooks 3b (1)	Underwood 3b
L. Hooks ss (1)	Sutton ss (1)
Bray lf	Midgett lf (3)
Strickland cf	Sipe cf
King rf	Wilson rf
Bernstein c (1)	McCombs c (2)

TAR HEEL GOLF TEAM

The Carolina golf team unlimbered its best and biggest clubs today and administered an 18-0 drubbing to the Wake Forest golfers.

The match was played over the nearby Hope Valley Country Club course, and kept the Tar Heels' season record clean.

The Tar Heels played consistently good golf. Captain Chatham, Willis, Stewart and Goodes played the singles in the morning, and Dave Craig, Julian Fenner, June Adams and Flem Wiley played the afternoon's doubles.

Edwards, Taylor, Sawyer and Watson were the Wake Forest players.

How Now, George?

Denver—(IP)—A school girl's conception of George Washington in a twentieth century atmosphere so startled officials of a private school here that she was placed under suspension for a week.

With other members of her class she was told to write what would happen if the father of his country should visit us today.

"I dressed myself as I thought a girl of my age would dress in those demure times," wrote the thirteen-year-old girl, whose father is a well-known short story writer.

"I went down to Mount Vernon and asked Washington to take a walk with me. We started along the road to Alexandria.

"He did not seem to notice the marvelous inventions that were everywhere in view. An airplane passing over our head caused only moderate curiosity in him.

"A swiftly moving automobile elicited little more than a passing remark.

"We continued our stroll until we were nearly half way to Alexandria. Coming down the road was a flapper, with short skirts and bobbed hair, idly puffing a cigarette.

"And that's where I lost George."

And that's why she didn't attend classes for a week.

Maybe Princess Marie Jose is satisfied, but we wouldn't get much kick out of being the wife of the crown prince in a country where the king ranks just below the Duce.—Southern Lumberman.

FROSH RESERVES TRACK MEET TO BE HELD TODAY

All-Carolina Contest Set For Emerson Field At 3 O'clock This Afternoon.

The varsity reserves and the freshman track teams of the University will compete in a track meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock on Emerson field. The outstanding varsity stars, who accounted for 13 of 14 places against Duke, will be in Atlanta carrying Tar Heel colors in the classic Georgia Tech relays, so that the varsity and frosh will take the field on virtually even terms, with prospects of warm contests in every event.

The Tar Babies should be strongest in the dashes and hurdles. Drane is favored in the dashes, and Davis and Stafford in the hurdles should give the varsity plenty of trouble. Martindale, with a vault of 10 feet, 10 inches to his credit, should be a strong contestant in this event, but Ruble, Dry, and Smith will probably have the edge here. Johnson, reserve broad jumper, Adkins, letter shot putter, Parsons, javelin thrower, and Thompson, discus heaver, are favorites in their events, despite the presence of strong freshman contestants in each.

The coaches have been grooming the squads intensively for the meet, which will be run off on a time schedule like any regular meet. All members of the squad who did not make the Tech relays trip are expected to compete in the meet, and any candidate who is in doubt as to the event he is to enter is requested to see Coach Ranson early today about it.

The order of events and time schedule is as follows:

Track Events.
3:00 p. m.—100 yard dash.
3:05 p. m.—one mile run (only 3 laps will be run).
3:15 p. m.—120 yard high hurdles.
3:25 p. m.—220 yard dash.
3:30 p. m.—440 yard run.
3:40 p. m.—two mile run (only 6 laps will be run).
3:55 p. m.—880 yard run (only 660 yards will be run).
4:00 p. m.—220 yard low hurdles.

Field Events.
3:00 p. m.—Pole vault, high jump, shot put.
3:30 p. m.—Discus, broad jump, javelin.

Freshman Nine Plays Rocky Mount At Hill

The undefeated U. N. C. freshman nine will play Rocky Mount high school here this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Dunk McNeill, who worked good ball against Darlington prep school, will probably be on the mound for the Tar Babies, with Peacock behind the bat.

Bob Sides, who romped around the Tar Heel infield a few seasons back, is coaching the Rocky Mount team, and is reported to have a strong club.

FROSH BASEBALL TODAY

The Carolina freshman baseball team will play Rocky Mount here this afternoon. In their last game the frosh defeated the strong Winston-Salem team by the score of 9-7. Coach Cerney has as yet made no pitching selection, but it is likely that Peacock will do the catching. As many men will be used as possible.

YEARLY MEETING WOMEN'S GROUP AT GREENSBORO

N. C. C. W. Host To Council Of Administrative Women Short Time Ago.

The twelfth annual meeting of the North Carolina Council of Administrative Women in Education was held in the Curry building, North Carolina College for Women in Greensboro on Saturday, March 22, 1930.

Miss Hattie Parrott called the meeting to order at 5:00, after an informal reception of members. The president greeted the members and introduced Dr. Foust, president of N. C. C. W., who cordially extended welcome to the organization. The following points were emphasized: 1. Need of a constitution; 2. Reconstruction of aims; 3. Issuing of monthly bulletins; 4. Co-ordination with existing organization rather than duplication; 5. Program.

Miss Elliott moved that the policy of this organization be restated, namely, the advancement of women in administrative positions in Education. This motion was seconded and passed.

Dr. Foust generously offered to finance the publication of the proposed bulletin; to furnish a meeting place for the organization; to provide a speaker for the meeting; and to serve a dinner to the club. The enthusiastic applause showed the appreciation of the organization for this splendid co-operation.

Miss Deberry moved that the president be instructed to appoint the committees from the lists in the year book to formulate and work out the six points discussed and furnish the members with the results of their work. This motion was seconded and carried.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, corrections of the names of the officers were made and the minutes were approved. Miss Parrott restated her faith in the future of the organization. The meeting then adjourned to the splendid buffet dinner that had been prepared by the college.

The second session of the council was held immediately after the dinner. Dr. Cook gave an interesting and instructive address on the subject, "Opportunities for Women in Education in North Carolina."

Koch said.

These Little Theatre groups are contributing not only audiences but artists for the future, for it is a noteworthy fact that most of the leading dramatists and actors come from the small towns rather than the cities, Professor Koch said.

"The spoken drama has nothing to fear from the talkies for they actually supplement and stimulate each other," he said.

Professor Koch's address opened yesterday's session. He was followed by the directors of a number of Little Theatres in the state who told of their experiences. A. L. Brandon of Rocky Mount stressed the importance of intelligent business methods in organizing and financing dramatic clubs. Professor Hubert Heffner, associate director of the Carolina Playmakers, emphasized that a reputation for presenting good plays every year was the best asset any dramatic club could possess. William Perry, professor of journalism in the Winston-Salem high school, stressed the view that original plays are most adaptable for high school productions and that students should be urged to write about situations they have first-hand knowledge about. The student's viewpoint was presented by Ed Wilde of Asheville, Anne Margaret Lee of Fayetteville, John Coggins of Swannanoa and Russell Huffman of Lenoir-Rhyne College.

Discussing "Backgrounds for Drama Teaching," Paul Green of the University emphasized that directors and teachers of the drama "should know the contemporary dramatists, the critics, and the stage."

This could best be accomplished, he pointed out, by building a large library of dramatic literature which could be made available to the whole state. In addition to extensive reading, Mr. Green stated that teachers of the drama should go to New York or some other large center at least once a year to see the latest productions there.

Luther Greene of the University of Virginia outlined what is being done in the Little Theatre field in Virginia. He said that under the auspices of a bureau of drama at the University of Virginia much interest is being stirred up throughout the state by means of playwriting contests, demonstration and radio performances, and dramatic contests.

Yesterday was the second day of the festival, and the attendance was around 150. The delegates represented dramatic clubs in all sections of the state.

W. R. Wunsch of the Asheville senior high school, who is president of the Carolina Dramatic Association, presided over the sessions.

The final contest in play production for the junior colleges was held yesterday afternoon with Louisburg and Mars Hill competing. Louisburg presented "The Neighbors," directed by Miss Evangeline Lawson, while Mars Hill presented "Marching Men," directed by Miss Bonnie Wengert.

The final contests in play production of the county and city high schools were held last night. In the county contests the Jackson Dramatic Club, which won out in the preliminary Thursday night, presented "The Travellers," a Booth Tarkington Play, while the other contestant was "Pink and Patches," given by the Derita high school.

The city schools contesting were the senior high school of Asheville, which presented "Submerged," by Cottman and Shaw, and the Ye Merrie Players of Fayetteville, who presented "Aria de Capo," by Edna St. Vincent Millay.

The winners of these contests will not be announced until just before the close of the tournament tonight.

The delegates were guests of the Carolina Playmakers yesterday afternoon at a performance of "Magnolia's Man," a play by Gertrude Wilson Coffin.

The program will continue through today. A feature of the morning session will be an address by Barrett H. Clark, dramatic critic and author of New York City, who will discuss the "Advantages of Being Provincial." The tournament contests will close tonight.

prepared for the succeeding scenes. As the action ends on one stage the lights will come on on another and the play will be practically continuous from beginning to end. Mr. Hall says that this is an arrangement that has never before been tried in Chapel Hill.

Professor Koch has turned the entire direction of the play over to Mr. Hall, and is learning his lines for the part of Mercutio along with the rest of the actors. Mr. Hall has had quite a bit of theatrical experience. He traveled season before last with Fritz Leiber and came here this season from the Repertory Theatre of Boston.

The cast for the production follows:

Escalus, B. C. Wilson; Paris, Eveland Davies; Montague and Capulet, Charles C. Elledge and Horace Ward; Romeo, Howard Bailey; Mercutio, Professor F. H. Koch; Benvolio, Harry Galland; Tybalt, Kent Creuser; Friar Laurence, Professor McKie; Balthasar, Frederick Cole; Sampson, William G. Dike; Peter, Joe Fox; Abraham, Ernest Deans; An Apothecary, Curtis Muse; Page to Paris, Robert Davis; Lady Montague, Irene Fussler; Lady Capulet, Margaret Vale; Juliet, Lois Buell; Nurse to Juliet, Nora Del Gumble; Citizens of Verona, guards, watchmen and attendants.

ZANHEISER WILL ADDRESS Y MEN MONDAY NIGHT

Representing Federal Council of Churches; Will Speak On Religious Cooperation.

Dr. Chas. Zanheiser, traveling secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, will be the speaker at a joint meeting of the three Y cabinets tomorrow night in the parlor of the Y at 7:15. Dr. Zanheiser will address the cabinets on the subject of "The Progress of Cooperation Between Religious Bodies." Immediately following his talk, the speaker will conduct a forum for all those wishing to ask questions on the subject.

Dr. Zanheiser, who has been speaking in all the larger universities and colleges in the South, has for the past two or three days been conducting seminars and delivering addresses at Duke University. After making his address here tomorrow night, he will go to Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., where he is to deliver a long series of addresses and seminars.

This meeting tomorrow will probably take the place of the usual monthly joint meeting of the three cabinets. A discussion will be conducted sometime during the meeting concerning the Blue Ridge Conference, which is to be held this summer from June 14 to 23. Plans will also be brought up in regard to the delegation that is to be sent to the North Carolina Conference for Social Service, which will meet April 13, 14, and 15 in Charlotte. For the first time in its existence this conference is to organize a student section, which is to act as a division of the conference. The presidents of the three cabinets request that all members attend this important joint meeting.

PSYCHOLOGY AND LAW SUBJECT OF DASHIELL'S TALK

Demonstration of Detection of Guilt To Be Conducted By De Wick.

A lecture by Dr. J. F. Dashiell and a demonstration of the much-discussed psychological technique of guilt detection will be the feature of an interesting program planned for the third meeting of the Pre-Law School Association, to be held in the law building Monday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Dr. Dashiell will open the program with a discussion of the relation between "Psychology and the Law." Instructor H. N. De Wick, who is specializing in experiments in guilt detection, will follow with a demonstration of the psychological technique. Dean C. T. McCormick of the law school will lead a general discussion of Dr. Dashiell's lecture and of De Wick's demonstration.

Psychology is playing an ever-increasing role in legal technique. The apparatus with which De Wick will conduct his experiment, measuring blood pressure, respiration and emotional height of the subject, has come to be almost per-

CANADIAN THINKS U. S. WILL ENTER LEAGUE FINALLY

Sir Herbert Ames Believes That United States Will Join Within Ten Years.

DISCUSSES PROHIBITION

(By K. C. Ramsay)

"I think that the United States will join the League of Nations within five or ten years," stated Sir Herbert Ames in discussing the future of the league with a small group after one of his lectures. He went on to say that the United States would never join the league because of agitation or propaganda, but that in due time would become so closely connected with the league in peace movements, that it would be a very small step for the United States to become officially a member of the League of Nations.

Several persons wanted to know something of Europe's reaction to the United States' staying out of the league after President Wilson had founded the organization. To this he replied that some even predicted the downfall of the league without the United States, and that many people severely criticized the United States Senate for its action after the work of President Wilson. Sir Herbert Ames thinks that America is not as skeptical as it was in 1920 as to the real sincerity of Europe in working for peace.

In a round-table meeting at the Carolina Inn yesterday morning Sir Herbert discussed very thoroughly the Corfu incident between Italy and Greece and pointed out that the league went through a serious crisis at that time. Italy, being one of the five large powers in the league, created a very delicate situation and the council was called upon to settle a very difficult problem. The council voted unanimously to settle by arbitration, and one of the members being an Italian caused many to fear that a decision would not be reached. Within a few weeks the matter was peace-

Ames' Last Lecture Given With Slides

After having delivered a series of lectures and forums here for the past three days, Sir Herbert Ames completed his program here last night with an illustrated lecture in Murphey hall at 7:30.

Tracing the rise and the development of the League of Nations, he showed many pictures of the organizers of the league, including Woodrow Wilson. Several views of the famous Lake Geneva were also shown. The city of Geneva, which is at one end of this lake, is the meeting place of the league.

Numerous maps were also included among the other pictures in the lecture. Most of these maps showed many of the numerous disputes that the league has settled during its existence.

Bradshaw Suggests Light Manufacturing

In an interview with Dean Francis Bradshaw Saturday afternoon a Tar Heel reporter was advised that the possibilities in the field of manufacturing in this state are practically unlimited.

Textiles and tobacco manufacturing and processing are practically the only two branches of the industry which North Carolinians have developed.

Park Mathewson, director of the division of commerce and industry in the Department of Conservation and Development at Raleigh, reports that the state of North Carolina needs diversified industries in order to avoid economic depressions in the future.

The Bureau of vocational guidance at the University here has been conducting an investigation into this field of endeavor for several months and has discovered that there is a need for the manufacture and refining within the borders of the state of asbestos fibre, auto-top material, asphaltum, alcohol, boxes, bags, buttons, bottles, brass, bolts, nuts and washers, broadcloths, cartons, coke, dynamite, glass, glue, gelatine, iron and steel, plaster of paris, lard, lumber, mica, potash, packing material, paper, sugar silks, twine, thread, veneer, wheat and carpet waste.

Dean Bradshaw says, "The opportunity for a capable graduate to start in a small way producing some of the manufactured articles for which there is a ready market in the state is as worthy of consideration as the opportunities for college graduates in the professions and in the well established corporations."

NEW YORK CRITIC ADDRESSES STATE DRAMA MEETING

Barrett Clark Enjoins Drama Enthusiasts To Be Provincial Always.

The seventh annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association ended last night with a supper for the directors at the Carolina Inn, and the final play production contest and an invitation performance at the Playmaker theatre. The festival opened Thursday afternoon with a preliminary contest and included contests, conferences and lectures Friday and Saturday.

The festival was described by the directors as the biggest thing yet done by the association. The attendance reached approximately 20 delegates from all parts of the state. Frederick Koch, president ex-officio of the dramatic association, stated that the improvement in quality of original playwriting and acting was very marked. "That young people could write plays so convincing, so beautiful as those given during the festival is uncanny," he said.

An outstanding feature of the convention was an address by Barrett H. Clark, dramatic critic and publisher, on "The Advantages of Being Provincial." Paul Green gave a discussion on "Backgrounds for Drama Teaching." Frederick Koch spoke on "Toward a New American Theatre." Elmer Hall, technical director of the Playmakers, gave an exhibit and discussion of stage scenery. He showed a model of the setting he constructed for the recent production of "Death Valley

Summer Just Around The Corner Says Weather Man

(By Beaumert Whitton)

The presence of the lawn mowers on the campus seems to indicate that spring has come, but signs are deceiving.

The truth of the matter is that summer is here, and if you happen to be the least bit doubtful, data from the weather bueau station in Chapel Hill shows that Friday old Sol pushed the temperature up to 91 and that the temperature of water exposed to the sun was 81. If that isn't swimming weather and therefore summer, what is?

Besides the fact that Friday was the hottest day this year, the low humidity did its part to convey the impression that it is actually summer. The evaporation for that day was only 1.6, while the usual evaporation shown during the previous three or four days was about 2.0.

During the first part of the week the temperature rose steadily: 65 on Monday, 70 on Tuesday, 72 on Wednesday, 81 on Thursday, and the top score of 91 on Friday. Conditions yesterday morning seemed to indicate that this rise would continue and yesterday, for which no records were available at the time this went to press, may have exceeded the maximum of the year.

A comparison of these temperatures with those of last year shows that the maximum reached Friday was higher than that of last spring on the same data. On April 11, 1929 the highest temperature recorded was 85. However, four days previously, on April 7, Chapel Hill enjoyed, or suffered a temperature of 92, which is one degree warmer than maximum of this year, which was reached Friday.

The heat of which so many complained Friday was further augmented by the lack of wind. During the entire period of 24 hours only 32 miles of wind passed the station, which is near Peabody building. This amount of wind offers quite a comparison with that of the previous day which showed 60 miles passing.

In contrast to the high temperature reached Friday, the minimum temperature of the month 50 degrees, which was recorded on the first, seems quite like winter. But this is practically nothing when compared to the temperatures reached during the winter when the temperature at Chapel Hill fell to below ten degrees.

The weather observation station at Chapel Hill is one of the regular U. S. Weather Bureau stations, and is operated under the direction of the water resources division of the State Department of Conservation and Development.

The station here has an unusual piece of apparatus which records the evaporation each day. This instrument is one of about five or six in the entire state.

Senior Invitations

J. Stacy Grant, chairman of the senior invitation committee, announced to the Daily Tar Heel yesterday that the senior invitations will commemorate the dedication of the new library this year by engraving the outline of the building on the outside of the covers, and will have a picture of President Chase.

Despite the added features, the price will be the same as last year at which time more than three thousand invitations were sold to graduating seniors.

Orders may be placed on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday at Sutton's, Patterson's and the Y. M. C. A. and with indidvidual members of the committee composed of Grant, President Greene, and "Red" Williams.

Numerous requests have already been made for these invitations and a much larger sale than ever before is expected.

JITNEY PLAYERS TO TOUR SOUTH FOR FIRST TIME

The Company Played Five Weeks At Cherry Lane Theatre In New York.

The Jitney Players will present "A Trip to Scarborough" and "The Wonder" at the Playmaker theatre tomorrow and Tuesday nights at 8:30 o'clock. Shepperd Strudwick, formerly a student actor with the Carolina Playmakers, will play the lead in Sheridan's comedy and will also have a role in "The Wonder."

Organized seven years ago by the late Bushnell Cheyney, well-known actor, the Jitney Players have presented performances throughout the New England states and are playing in this vicinity for the first time. This is the second time in over 20 years that a professional group has given such a performance at the University, the Shakespeare Players who appeared here recently in "Julius Caesar" being the first.

These pre-Victorian dramatic couriers are organized after the manner of the old strolling troupes of Renaissance Europe and travel about the countryside in trucks. All of the players have had professional experience.

"A Trip to Scarborough" is thoroughly representative of its period. It partakes of contemporary artificiality of plot and manners and the ever-fresh wit and humor of its day. The costumes which the players use are correct and the settings are sketched in with a purposeful naivete. David Elliott, who plays the part of Lord Foppington, has been accorded praise by critics over the country. Shepperd Strudwick will carry the role of Tom Fashion. Ada Cafagna will play Mrs Calico, and Loveless will be played by Harrison Dowd.

The Jitney Players stayed for over five weeks at the Cherry Lane Theatre in New York where their performances were praised by critics. Willela Waldorf in the New York Evening Post said of "A Trip to Scarborough": "The piece is as much fun as anything we have en-

COLORFUL DANCES FEATURE SOCIAL EVENTS OF WEEK

Sophomore Hop and Grail Dance Are Brilliantly Staged In Gymnasium.

Spring was well ushered in over the week-end, if such may be judged by the number of dances that were given by the social students of the University. Numerous attractive visitors of the desired sex spent the past two days on the Hill, which doubtless gave an added incentive to the much heralded spring fever, the same appearing to be very prevalent at the present time. Linen suits made their appearance for the first time this year over the week-end. Beau Gent will probably sanction this due to the extreme warmth in Chapel Hill, and the ever-increasing proximity of June.

Two dances were given Friday night, showing the confidence of both factions concerning the ever necessary girls at their respective dances. This confidence did not appear to be misplaced judging from the number that were present at each of the dances. The third dance was given last night by the Order of the Grail.

Larry Johnson, with Miss Jerry Lee of Lynchburg, Va., led the sophomores in their hop Friday evening. Ward Thompson, with Miss Mary Lillian Correll of Chapel Hill, and Lynn Wilder, with Miss Nancy Fish of Raleigh, served as assistant leaders. According to the sophs,

DI SENATE WILL THROW OUT ALL USELESS TIMBER

Motion Passed Calls For Audition of Non-Attenders Before Full Senate Tuesday Night.

According to a motion made at the last meeting of the Di Senate, all members of the senate who have not attended at least one-half of the meetings during the year will be automatically dropped from the senate's roll unless they appear next Tuesday to show cause why their names should not be struck off. This motion was made in an effort to raise the standard of attendance.

All members, who are dropped from the roll, desiring to be reinstated in the senate must appear before the group at the next meeting and present sufficient reason to the senate for the absences against them. The executive committee of the senate does not believe that the majority of the members have taken their membership in this group seriously enough, and the main purpose of the motion was to clear the senate of a lot of its dead-wood. All members of this body who do not and have not regarded their attendance as a sense of duty will not be given much consideration by the executive committee, says one of this committee.

It is hoped that many of the members will pay more attention to their attendance at the senate and will take it upon themselves to see that they are present at all the other meetings, or be able to show some excuse for not doing so.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Alter ideas and you alter the world. —H. G. Wells.

College Professors And Coaches of Athletics

Many pedants and a few real professors are inclined to scorn athletic directors as parasites upon the system of higher education. But it must be admitted that coaches exhibit personal interest in all men who come under their supervision and frequently give individual attention to each of them, which is a great deal more than can be said vast majority of college instructors.

Probably the greatest evil of the modern system of mass education is that it has eliminated to a great extent warm personal friendships between faculty and students. Far too frequently the modern college professor regards his classes as necessary evils, unpleasant routine affairs to which he devotes as little time and preparation as possible. He is preparing a book or conducting an experimental or research study; his classes are mere side-issues to these things, offering a means of earning a living while he is completing his "great work."

To this type of professor the students are uninteresting automatons, mere names on grade books. Rarely indeed does he regard them as individual human beings, interesting men and women who are attempting to gain something of real worth from his classes. They are units in that stodgy conglomeration known as a class; flunks are to be registered in the grade book opposite a certain percentage of their names, while A's will be received by a few others.

The coldly impersonal attitude exhibited by many professors toward their students is in a large measure responsible for the fact that thousands of almost illiterate men and women are graduated from American colleges and universities every year. Despite their numerous shortcomings, coaches of college athletics immensely surpass their academic brethren in at least one respect, probably the most important of all—they are genuinely interested in even the most inconsequential of their charges, and express this interest in individual attention to each man. With them coaching is the main job in life, their means of livelihood, their profession and the object of their greatest interest.

Many college professors might benefit tremendously by associating with the athletic coaches to a greater extent. Perhaps they would become imbued with more zeal and enthusiasm for their work, and thereby be transformed into real teachers rather than dull pedagogues with litte liking for their subjects and less for their students.

High School Week

That event toward which hundreds of high school students have pointed for months is now just six days distant—high school week. Nearly every high school in the state has entered debaters, linguists, and dramatists in the preliminaries which have been held here and there throughout the state. The much-talked-of trip to Chapel Hill will cap the climax of ambition for those who have been successful in the preliminaries thus far. In the eyes of the home folks and the high school population at large, those who survive the final debate preliminaries next week and are extended the right to compete for the Aycock cup will have annexed an honor which is second to none.

Those of us who have been at Carolina for one year or more know just what to expect when the high school folk journey to Chapel Hill next week, many of them to get their first glimpse of the State's great citadel of higher learning. Every classroom and hall on the campus will be taken up by the ambitious debaters whose speeches were memorized at least a month ago, and which have been rehearsed so much that they recite their "points" with a certain rhythmical cadence which cannot escape recognition. But wherein lies the fault of this condition? Simply, that these high school debaters are discussing something which is far too big for their immature minds and limited experiences. Who can expect the rank and file of high school students to discuss intelligently such matters as the League of Nations, the World Court, or the Classification of North Carolina property for Taxation? Indeed, it is quite evident that some of the debaters' high school teachers don't know any too much about topics of this caliber.

The time is almost at hand when the high school folk will be seen walking to and fro about the staid old campus of the University. Some wll appear nonchalant; others will be seen gazing in speechless wonder at the marvels of higher learning. Freshmen will be parading their newly-acquired knowledge before high school girls, with whom they were admittedly on a par a scant twelve months ago. But higher learning accomplishes wonders!

After two or three days of gruelling preliminaries the two teams to compete for the Aycock cup will be named. Many of the unsuccessful debaters will linger until the final contest. Those who survived one preliminary at Chapel Hill will brag about it before those who were so unfortunate as to be eliminated in the first round. Those who were eliminated last will tell the others that they "don't rate." Thus the chatter will run. Then the final event Friday night before hundreds of University students, townspeople, and defeated high-schoolers. One of the teams will out-recite the other, and the high school hosts will return to their several dwellings—some happy; some disappointed, but all benefited by their sojourn in the land of higher learning. Such is the course of events of that annual occurence—high school week.

We are convinced that, although there is little manifestation of real debating in the contests, high school week is one of the most advantageous institutions connected with the University. There is nothing which will do the prospective Carolina freshman more good than a few days on the campus while he is still in high school. During their stay here for the various contests the contestants get a glimpse of Carolina life while it is functioning at full speed. A previous knowledge of this sort is invaluable to the freshman when he enters in the Fall. We heartily endorse the policies and eforts of Mr. E. R. Rankin and invoke the student body to assist him in making this high school week the most succesful one yet to occur.

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Palm Sunday, April 13.—Sharing the Common Lot. (Read Ecclesiates 9:1-3.) Key verse: "All things come alike to all."

Meditation: Without accepting the belief of the author of this book that chance governs life, we may well adopt his philosophy that accepts without complaint the events that happen to all mankind. Through these experiences that are common to all we enter into the experience of the ages and share in a life that is bigger than we are. Overstreet in his "About Ourselves" thus interprets this experience: "Is it not possible that life may indeed be unduly specific? One thing after another in a bewildering succession. But through all the distressing multiplicity of our separate experience does there not run a something which is common to all ages and to all men? When we touch that common something we are made greater than our single selves. We live the common life, share the common experience."

Prayer: "O God, who has sent us to school in this strange life, and has set us tasks which test all our courage, trust and fidelity, may we not spend our days complaining of circumstances or fretting at discipline, but give ourselves to learn of life and to profit by every experience." Amen.

countered in a long time. All in all an evening in Cherry Lane just now is apt to be anything but a bore."

"The Wonder: A Woman Keeps a Secret," the second of the plays which the troupe will present, was written by Mrs. Centlivre in 1714 and was first produced at the Drury Lane Theatre. The critic of the Baltimore Evening Sun said of this play which was given in Baltimore recently; "All the players are young and likeable as actors and they tickled an amiable audience immensely. . . ."

Tickets for these performances are on sale at the Students' Supply Store.

High School week is upon us Just as certainly as Memorial hall is gone, Davie Poplar is a tree, and there have been other High School weeks in the past with invariable accompaniments, a weather forecast can be made. Drag out the old slicker and the older hat—it will rain!

Wex Malone, of song-and-dance fame, tried recently to put on a little organized dormitory singing. We can testify that it was awful, and so can Wex, for he was moved to bust right out with this, with no apologies at all to Joyce Kilmer:

O, even I can make a Clio,
But only God can make a trio!

The University band performs this afternoon at 2:30 in the Carolina Theaure. Just exactly what was Manager Smith of the theatre thinking of when he chose "Close Harmony" as the picture to follow the band's performance? Dr. Coue, at a guess.

After mentioning that we are having nice balmy spring weather these afternoons, Mr. Grady Leonard says that "any boys who want to work in the afternoons should get in touch with the Y." They should also get in touch with the Psychology department.

Just at present they are recounting the story of the boy at a very recent dance who inquired of all he met on the floor "Whoosh tha' gal who keeps trying to break on me?" They never told him.

With the Jitney Players tomorrow night comes an old friend and eminent Playmaker of not so long ago, Shepperd Strudwick. Shep is one of the crowd of Carolina students, mostly writers and actors, who have gone to New York in the last three years to make the proverbial fortune. Pen Harrison, Helen Dortch, Al Kahn, and others have played parts on Broadway with varying success. Robbins Fowler, Andy Anderson, and Joe Mitchell are among the Carolinians who have tried their hands at writing in the big village. Of them all, Shep seems to have had the most success, and he has done it on his own merits. The Playmakers and the campus at large are glad to see him again, and will probably callous a few palms tomorrow night.

Incidentally, the Jitney Players are charging a dollar to non-subscribers for the season, and half to subscribers. In our present state, we feel like sadly reproaching them for not living up to their name.

Gordon Gray, of the Grays, stops from his toil of checking Phi Bete grades long enough to admit that there's no place on earth like the boat deck of a steamer, with the moonlight on the water, and . . . No, Gordon, there isn't, but we'd rather not hear about it just now.

'YOUNG EAGLES' AT THE CAROLINA ON MONDAY

Men who laugh at death and dare everything for love feature Paramount's thrilling drama of the war aces, "Young Eagles." Charles (Buddy) Rogers is the star, the same Buddy who provided most of the romance and thrills in the daring war aviation epic, "Wings," and William ("Wings") Welman directed. "Young Eagles will be the entertainment at the Carolina theatre Monday.

While "Wings" was primarily the story of friendship between brother pilots in the American air force, "Young Eagles" immortalizes the spirit of knight errantry which existed between the opposing pilots. These intrepid warriors of the skies battled ferociously and defied death daringly, yet they always insisted on a fair victory in a fair fight. There was a spirit of good-fellowship between the opposing aces, and this spirit 'Young Eagles" captured.

Buddy is the American ace who, in a thrilling air duel, brings down the redoubtable Paul Lukas within the American lines. Buddy is assigned to convey Lukas to Paris where the secret service agents believe they can worm military secrets from him. Buddy and Lukas become good friends on the journey. In Paris, Buddy meets and falls in love with Jean Arthur. She dupes him, however; aids Lukas' escape, and leaves with him. Embittered, Buddy returns to the front. Later he meets Lukas in the air and brings his plane down in flames. Lukas tells him that Jean was working under instructions from the American secret service in Paris.

In addition to these three well-known and popular actors, the cast includes Stuart Erwin, who provided such a riot of fun as the dumb "Axel" of "Sweetie."

Frosh Trackmen Come Near To Whipping Varsity Outfit

Varsity Minus Fifteen Performers Succeeds In Beating Frosh 70-56.

FROSH WIN THREE FIRSTS

The varsity track team, minus fifteen of its best performers, defeated the freshman trackmen on Emerson field here yesterday afternoon by the score of 70 to 56. The outstanding members of the varsity crew were carrying Carolina's colors in the Georgia Tech Relays in Atlanta. While no world beating performances were turned in, the marks were unusually good, considering the absence of four of the best quarter and half milers for the freshmen, as well as the varsity stars.

Garrett, Reid, Horney, Dameron, Thompson, Fenker, Shulenberger, Owens, Smathers, Ruble, and Smith accounted for first places for the varsity, while Drane, Cordle, and Davis took firsts for the frosh. Drane, with firsts in the 100, 220, and broad jump, was high scorer of the meet.

The varsity made clean sweeps in the high jump, pole vault, 440 and javelin. The frosh took all three places in the two dashes.

The summary of the meet follows:

100 yard dash—Drane (F) first; Marland (F) second; Geiger (F) third. Time 10.6.

440 yard dash—Horney (V) first; Case (V) second. Time 54.2.

660 yard run—Hamer (V) first; Lumpkin (F) second. Time 2:8.

Half Mile run—Cordle (F) first; Hubberd (F) second; Farris (V) third. Time 7:49.

120 yard high hurdles—Reid (V) first; Davis (F) second; Goodwin (V) third. Time 16.

120 yard low hurdles—Davis (F) first; Stafford (F) second; Reid (V) third. Time 13 4-5.

High Jump—Shulenberger (V) Owens (V) and Smathers (V) all tied for first. Height 5 feet 5 inches.

Broad Jump—Drane (F) first; Fenker (V) second; Geiger (F) third. Distance 20 ft., 8 in.

Pole Vault—Smith (V) and Ruble (V) tied for first; Dry (V) third. Height 11 ft., 3 in.

Discuss—Dameron (V) first; Thompson (V) second; Davis (F) third. Distance 122 ft., 6 in.

Shot—Fenker (V) first; Philpot (F) second; Harper (F) third. Distance 34 ft., 11 in.

Javelin—Thompson (V) first; Poole (V) second; Edwards (V) third. Distance 137 ft., 6 in.

Three-Quarter mile run—Garrett (V) first; Darnell (F) second; Lumpkin (F) third. Time 3:30 2-5.

CAROLINA GOLFERS BEAT BLUE DEVILS

The University golfers continued their unbroken string of victories yesterday by taking the Duke golfers in tow 14½ to 3½ over the Hope Valley course.

Willis, Stuart and Goodes countered three points each for the Tar Heels in the morning's singles with Rendall, Buie and Taggart, while Jennings beat Captain Chatham for Duke's three points in the singles.

In the doubles, Willis and Chatham took three points from Jennings and Buie, and Goodes and Stuart won 2½ while losing ½ to Randall and Taggart.

Meade Willis, who was singles college champion of the state last year, turned in low score, with a 72 for the morning and a 75 for the afternoon, for a total of 147.

Intramural Wrestling Under Peyton Abbott

Preparation for the intramural wrestling tournament eliminations on April 23 is now in full swing, according to Director Peyton Abbott. Instruction is being given in the Tin Can every afternoon from 4 to 5:30. In these sessions the beginners learn the fundamentals of the sport under the expert supervision of Abbott. So far a good number of men have come out for the practices, but there is ample room for many more. Abbott urges all interested in learning something about wrestling and in entering the tournament to come to the afternoon practices. Only light workouts are taken on hot days and the work is enjoyable. There is plenty of time remaining before the tournament for the aspirants to learn the fundamentals of the sport.

In the event of continued hot weather the final bouts will be five minutes in length instead of ten.

Dean McCormick of the law school here and other forward-looking members of the legal profession believe that it is only a matter of time until the law will accept psychology almost completely, and take over psychology's methods of telling whether a criminal is guilty and whether a witness is telling the truth.

Mr. De Wick, who will conduct the experiment, has been specializing in such work while an instructor here, and his technique is said to be splendid. FROSH NINE DOWNS ROCKY MOUNT HIGH

While Chandler, star quarter on the frosh grid team last fall, held Rocky Mount to three scattered singles, the Tar Baby baseball team hit in the pinches to win over the Rocky Mount Highs 8-0 yesterday on Emerson field.

Croom was the star batsman of the day, getting a home run and a single out of four times at bat. Daniel and Powell also contributed to the Tar Baby runmaking with a home run and a double, respectively.

This is the third official game of the season for the Tar Babies, and their third victory. They won over Darlington Prep 26-5 and over Winston-Salem High 9-7. In each game, the Tar Baby pitchers looked like sure bets for varsity stars of the future, McNeil pitching the Darlington game, Griffith pitching that with Winston, and Chandler doing the mound work yesterday.

Score by innings:

Freshmen	211	200	20x	—8

Batteries: Rocky Mount, C. Ayers, Thomas and A. Ayers; for Carolina, Chandler and Peacock.

the dance was a tremendous success. The Blue Devils of Duke University rendered excellent music. The affair was held in the Bynum gymnasium, which was decorated very appropriately in the class colors of purple and gold. Barron Holmes and Frazier Glenn had charge of the decorating.

Ed Yarborough, Haywood Weeks and John Phil Cooper served as the committee in charge of the dance. During the course of the evening, an attractive figure was held. The figure was followed by a no-break dance composed of the members of the figure.

Phi Sigs Entertain

Also entertaining Friday evening was the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity. Invitations to the dance were sent out during the early part of the week by the members of the fraternity to their friends.

Two processionals were held. "Dink" Fowler, accompanied by Miss Martha White of Norfolk, Va., led both of these. The dance was held at the Carolina Inn, lasting from 9 until 1 o'clock. Russ Bolin and his Brunswick recording orchestra of Cleveland rendered music for the fraternity and its friends. The ballroom of the Inn was artistically decorated in the fraternity colors. Members of the fraternity wore ribbons of red and white.

This dance might easily be termed as the outstanding event of the week-end, according to the enthusiasm of those who attended. In addition to the dance, the Phi Sigma Kappas had a house party at which approximately 30 girls were present, chaperoned by Mrs. Douglas Long of Greensboro. Many alumni of the fraternity came to Chapel Hill for the week-end, as well as members of the Grail only, while the second was for all who brought girls to the dance. Alex Mendenhall and his Tar Heel Boys played.

Never before has the slow-going senate found so much to investigate, to probe. It has plagiarized the traffic officer's best line—"Hey, you! Pull over to the curb."—Duluth Herald.

University Band To Play At "Carolina"

This afternoon at 2:30 the University band will give a concert in the Carolina theatre under the direction of T. Smith McCorkle, and this will be followed by the picture, "Close Harmony," shown through the courtesy of E. C. Smith, theatre manager.

A silver offering at the door will be taken in order to secure certain funds for the band which are not subsidized by the University. From this fund annual awards for those completing their third year in the band, will be purchased. This is the only form of recognition shown to band members.

The concert will be symphonic in character, and will be chosen from the repertoire which has recently caused the band to be termed an "orchestra without the string section."

"Close Harmony" has never before been shown in Chapel Hill. It is especially appropriate in that its plot centers around a young man attempting to start a band in his home town. Nancy Carroll stars in this production.

There will be a meeting of Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity tonight at 7:30 in room 9 of the music building.

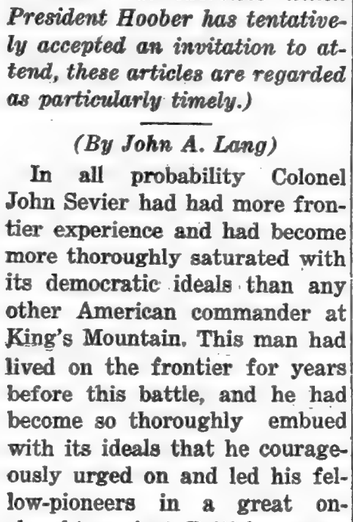
KING'S MOUNTAIN SESQUI-CENTENNIAL RECALLS FAME OF FIVE LEADERS

John Sevier, Benjamin Cleveland, Joseph Winston, Joseph McDowell and Frederick Hambright Among Those Who Performed Deeds of Glory in Historic Fight.



(Editorial Note: This is the second of a series of two articles giving biographical sketches of commanders at the Battle of Kings Mountain, a decisive conflict that turned the tide of the Revolution in favor of the Colonists. In view of the fact that the sesqui-centennial of that battle is to be celebrated on Next October 7 at exercises which President Hoober has tentatively accepted an invitation to attend, these articles are regarded as particularly timely.)

(By John A. Lang)

In all probability Colonel John Sevier had had more frontier experience and had become more thoroughly saturated with its democratic ideals than any other American commander at King's Mountain. This man had lived on the frontier for years before this battle, and he had become so thoroughly embued with its ideals that he courageously urged on and led his fellow-pioneers in a great onslaught against British oppression wherever he got a chance to strike a blow.

John Sevier was born September 23, 1745, six miles from the present town of New Market, in what is now Rockingham county, Virginia. His father, Valentine Sevier, the son of a Huguenot refugee and an English mother, had come to Virginia from London between 1730 and 1740, settling first in Culpepper county and removing then to the Valley; his mother, Joanna Goode, was the granddaughter of John Goode, who immigrated by way of Barbadoes in 1650 from England to Virginia.

After securing at Staunton the best education obtainable on the border, Sevier married in his seventeenth year Miss Sarah

JOSEPH McDOWELL

Hawkins. Sevier took some part in the French and Indian War and was appointed a militia captain by Lord Dunmore, the last Royal Governor of Virginia. After making two trips to the infant settlement on the Holston river in what is now Tennessee, Sevier moved his family there in 1773; from the day of his arrival in this section, he was a marked man. His primacy on the border for the next forty years is an indisputable fact, and his long service rendered to Tennessee, during its frontier days, is unexcelled by that of anyone else. In 1777 Sevier was made lieutenant-colonel of the Washington county militia, and full colonel, to succeed Colonel John Carter, on February 3, 1781. Between 1777 and 1793 Sevier was in thirty-five battles or skirmishes with the British and the Indians and was never once defeated. The mere list of Sevier's civil and military services would fill a page.

Never Knew Defeat

The thing that most particularly interests us here in Sevier's career is his part in the Battle of King's Mountain. It was due to Sevier's courage and driving-power that his frontier followers were found in the thickest and hottest parts of this battle. Sevier did not know what the words surrender and defeat meant, so he boldly drove his men right into the vitales of the British force and made their lines quiver and break. A fellow soldier said of Sevier's appearance during the battle: "His eyes were flames of fire, and his words were electric bolts crashing down the ranks of the enemy."

After the Battle of King's Mountain, John Sevier received a vote of thanks and a present of a sword and pistol from the legislature of North Carolina.

After the Revolution, Sevier dedicated his services to helping Tennessee become a separate state in the Union and the success of the movement was largely due to his efforts.

When the state of Tennessee was established, he was elected the first governor in 1796, and served three terms. In spite of his old age, Sevier was appointed by President Monroe in 1815 to act as United States commissioner to settle the boundary line between Georgia and the Creek territory in Alabama. He died while engaged in this work, September 24, 1815. Today, we can truthfully say of John Sevier that his long public career was one of immense sacrifice and intrepid service to his country.

Benjamin Cleveland

Colonel Benjamin Cleveland with his Wilkes county frontiersmen made it hot for the Tories at King's Mountain. Benjamin Cleveland came from a sturdy English family that migrated to Virginia from England in the early part of the eighteenth century and settled on the since famous Bull Run, in Prince William county. Benjamin Cleveland was born May 26, 1738, and while yet a young boy, moved with his father, Alexander Cleveland, to a Virginian border settlement on the Blue Run near the Orange county line of North Carolina.

At a rather early age, Cleveland married Miss Mary Graves of Orange county, North Carolina. Tradition tells us that Cleveland took an active part in the French and Indian War, but the particulars of this are lost to history. He, no doubt, in that frontier conflict became fully initiated into military life, which proved a preparatory school for his services at King's Mountain and all through the Revolution. About 1769, Cleveland removed with his father-in-law and family to North Carolina and settled near the foot of the Blue Ridge in what is now Wilkes county, North Carolina. In the summer of 1772 Cleveland made a rather adventurous trip into Kentucky. He and his party were plundered by the Cherokees and releived of their necessities. However, Cleveland and his friends managed to get back safely to North Carolina.

Active from Start of War

Benjamin Cleveland took an active part in the Revolution from the very beginning of the struggle. In the summer of 1776 he served as a captain in a scouting regiment on the western frontier of North Carolina. Cleveland rendered great service to the cause of American independence by his campaigns against the hostile Indians and Tories in western North Carolina. In March, 1778, when the new County of Wilkes was organized, Cleveland was placed at the head of the Commission of Justices and was also made Colonel of the militia. Later on in 1778, he represented his county in the House of Commons and was regarded as one of the popular leaders of the mountain region of the state.

Cleveland next served as a colonel in General Rutherford's campaign against the British in Georgia. The American forces having suffered defeat in Georgia, Cleveland returned to North Carolina to represent his county in the state Senate. In the summer of 1780, he was constantly employed in suppressing the Tory uprisings in the western part of this state.

Then followed Cleveland's King's Mountain campaign—the great service of his life—in which he commanded his regiment heroically. This commander was heard to say many times in this battle the following phrases: "Now, by God's grace, we have these Tories! the snare is subtley set; the game is bagged; we hold them safe as pheasants in a net." Besides having assigned to him, by general consent, one of Ferguson's war horses, which lived to an uncommonly old age, Cleveland carried home with him a snare-drum, to which he pointed with pride as a King's Mountain trophy, as long as he lived.

During the remaining months of the Revolution, Cleveland continued his work of driving out the Tories from the western counties of North Carolina. After the Revolution he moved to South Carolina and served as judge for a number of years in Pendleton County in this state. In his 69th year Cleveland died in October, 1806. The muse of history will not willingly let die the name and memory of Benjamin Cleveland—to all Tories the terror of terrors, and to all others, the jolly "Old Round-About" of the Yadkin.

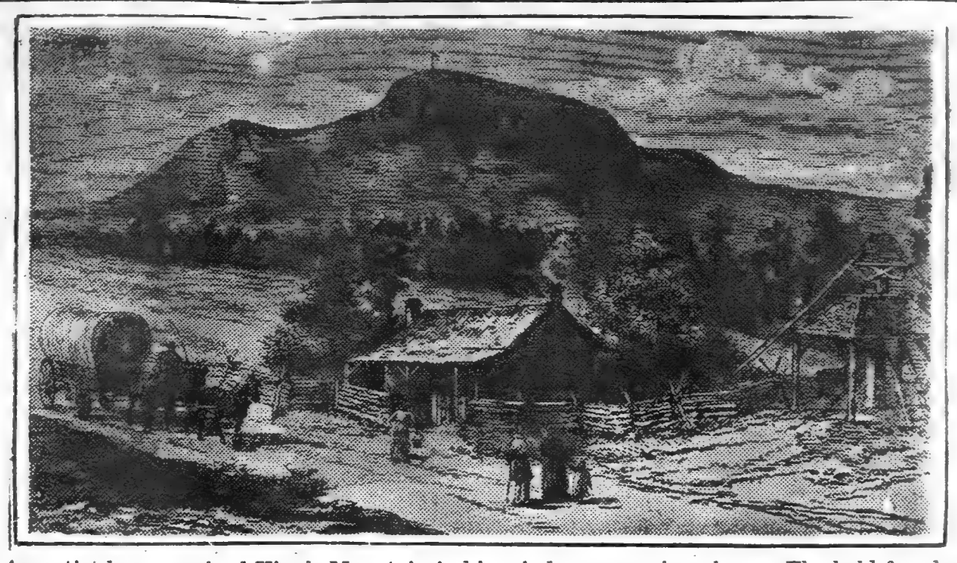
Joseph Winston

Joseph Winston was born in Louisa County, Virginia, on June 17, 1746. He received a fair education for that day, and at the age of 17, joined a company of rangers under Captain Phillips. This company was drawn into an ambuscade fight with the Indians on September 13, 1763, and was forced to give way, scattering as best it could. Young Winston received two wounds which rendered him helpless, but he managed to conceal himself until the Indians had retired. A comrade later came to his aid and carried him to a friendly frontier cabin where he recovered.

In 1769 Winston migrated to North Carolina, locating in what is now Stokes County. In 1775 he was a member of the Third Provincial Congress, which met at Hillsboro, and in February, 1776, he went on the expedition against the Scotch Tories at Moore's Creek Bridge. In this same year he was appointed Ranger of his county, Surry, and Major in the militia, serving on Rutherford's expedition against the Cherokees. In 1777 Winston was a member of the House of Commons and a Commissioner to treat with the Cherokee Indians. In 1780 he served in Colonel Davidson's expedition in pursuit of Bryans' Tories, and he was later with Cleveland against the Loyalists on New River.

Joseph Winston ably commanded a portion of the right wing at King's Mountain. His men very often testified to his courage and ability in directing his part of this campaign. For his effective services rendered in this battle, Winston was voted an elegant sword by the Legislature of North Carolina. In 1781 Winston led a party against a band of Tories. Shortly afterwards, he joined General Greene with a hundred riflemen and shared in the Battle of Guilford Courthouse. In 1792-3 and again from 1803-7 Winston represented his district in Congress. He was a Presidential elector in 1800, voting for Jefferson, and again in 1812, voting for Madison. He was chosen three times as a member of the state Senate from Surry and when Stokes County was organized, he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel and was five times elected to the state Senate. Colonel Winston died on April 21, 1815, in his 69th year. Joseph Winston was a man of stately form and commanding presence, and his part in helping this country win its independence was quite a considerable one.

Joseph McDowell



Joseph McDowell, of Scotch-Irish descent, was born at Winchester, Virginia, in 1756. Joseph McDowell's father, Joseph McDowell, Sr., moved his family into the Catawba Valley region of North Carolina about 1760. In February, 1776, Joseph, Jr., young as he was, went into the regiment of his brother, Charles McDowell. This regiment was actively engaged in helping to suppress the Scotch Tories in the Cape Fear section.

In July of this same year the Cherokees burst upon the Catawba settlements, killing 37 persons on the 10th and 11th of that month, and they also beleaguered a fort in which were Charles and Joseph McDowell. After a long fight the McDowell brothers with their nine followers beat the Indians back. Joseph by this time had become a major and served during the ensuing fall of 1776 in his brother's regiment on Rutherford's campaign against the Cherokees. In 1779 he served on the Stone expedition, and early in 1780 he was campaigning against the Tories at Ramseur's Mill.

Fought At Cowpens

After serving in the American forces at Earle's Ford on Pacolet and Musgrove's Mill, Joseph McDowell had command of the regiment of his brother at King's Mountain. As acting-commander, Joseph McDowell displayed great military ability. After this battle, he served in the American forces at Cowpens. In the spring of 1781, he fought against Cornwallis. In August, 1781, and again in March, 1782, Major Joseph McDowell led expeditions to chastise the Cherokee, and in the fall of 1782 he served in a similar campaign against the Cherokee. McDowell served in the North Carolina House of Commons five different times after the Revolution. He was a member of the United States House of Representatives from 1793 to 1795 and again between 1797 and 1791. McDowell took an active part in the debates of that body against the Alien and Sedition Laws. Joseph McDowell died from apoplexy on August 11, 1801, in the 45th year of his age. He is reputed to have been the recognized leader of the Democratic-Republican party in his section of North Carolina.

Early View of King's Mountain

An artist has conceived King's Mountain in his mind as appearing above. The bald-faced character of the peak as well as the mountain in general is apparent from this view.

CANADIAN THINKS U. S. WILL ENTER LEAGUE FINALLY

fully settled and since then the Facisti party in Italy has cooperated with the league at all times. Sir Herbert thinks that the league council's ability to come to a unanimous agreement on the countless number of problems which arise within the jurisdiction of the league speaks more favorably of the success of the league than any other point.

In discussing the finance of the league, Sir Herbert stated that it was a difficult matter to handle the various kinds of money which come to Geneva. All money is converted into its equivalent in American dollars through New York drafts, and then handled by the league on the basis of the French gold franc.

Canadian Prohibition

Sir Herbert thinks that the government distribution of liquor in Canada is working with comparative success. With the government of the dominion controlling production and export ation of whiskey and the governments in the various provinces controlling the consumption, Sir Herbert believes that they have an efficient method for enforcement. He further pointed out that managers of the dispensaries are paid on a strict salary basis so that there will be no reason for them to boost sales, and cited an instance where a manager of a dispensary had been fired for selling a greater quantity of whiskey than should have been sold in that section.

The Canadian visitor thinks that smuggling along the Canadian border will decrease now that the Canadian Parliament has passed an act forbidding the exportation of whiskey to any country where the importation of beverages is illegal.

Many other problems concerning the relations of the league with Central and South American and Scandanavian states were discussed in the round table meeting at the Carolina Inn yesterday morning.

JITNEY PLAYERS TO PRESENT "THE WONDER" TONIGHT

"A Trip to Scarborough" Presented Last Night; Conclude Engagement Here Tonight.

The Jitney Players presented Sheridan's "A Trip to Scarborough" last night at the Playmaker theatre. Shepperd Strudwick, former member of the Playmakers, starred in the role of Tom Fashion. Tonight the company will present Suzanne Centlivre's "The Wonder." The performance will be given at 8:30 in the Theatre.

"A Trip to Scarborough" was written by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. It was first produced in Drury Lane in 1777. The Jitney Players are producing it for the first time in America. The play is typical of the eighteenth century.

David Elliott, a nationally known actor, played the part of Lord Foppington. Ada Cafagna took the part of Mrs. Calico, and Harrison Dowd the part of Loveless.

The Jitney Players stage their productions after the manner of the original presentations. The costumes are correct in detail, and the eighteenth century atmosphere is carried throughout.

Bushnell Cheyney, well-known actor, organized the Jitney Players seven years ago. The company is organized after the fashion of the strolling troupes of Renaissance Europe, traveling about the country in trucks. They appeared at the Cherry Lane theatre in New York for over five weeks. Their work has received praise from eminent critics, their plays being produced by actors with professional training.

"The Wonder," which is to be produced tonight, is a comedy written by Suzanne Centlivre. It was first produced in Drury Lane in 1714. The story centers about the domestic difficulties and the love affairs of two girls who seek to escape the restrictions of their harsh fathers.

As in Shelby the Charlotte concerts will be under the auspices of the local high school music department.

The music supervisor in Shelby, Mr. Sinclair, is a former member of the Carolina band, and L. R. Sides, Charlotte superintendent, was former band director here.

DYER MEETS WITH STATE MUSIC SUPERINTENDENTS

Professor H. S. Dyer, serving in capacity of chairman for the executive committee of state music superintendents, attended a meeting in Raleigh with other committee members last Saturday.

Some of the problems discussed were the recodification of the present plan dealing with the certification for music teaching, standardization throughout the state of credit systems for school entrance study, the making uniform of courses of study outside school, and the setting of a date for next year's association meeting.

Four members of the class of 1862 attended the class reunion in 1911.

President of Davidson College To Be Commencement Speaker; Active In Church.

Dr. Walter Lee Lingle, president of Davidson College, distinguished clergyman and educator, has been secured to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the Commencement on June 8, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Lingle has long been prominently identified with educational movements. Graduating from Davidson College in 1892, he took his master's degree there the same year and his doctorate in 1906. He was graduated from the Union Theological Seminary in 1896 and ordained the same year. He did postgraduate work at the University of Chicago in 1896 and at Southwestern University in 1920.

His first pastorate was at Dalton, Ga., whence he went to Rock Hill, S. C., and then to the First Presbyterian church of Atlanta in 1907.

From 1911 to 1924 he was professor of Hebrew Language and Church History in the Union Theological Seminary. He has been president of the Presbyterian General Assembly's Training School for Lay workers since 1924.

In the field of publications and newspapers, he edited the Union Seminary Review from 1912 to 1922 and has been a constant contributor to religious periodicals. He was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Synod in North Carolina in 1915 and moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States in 1920.

Dean Of Students Speaks On Morals

That the key to success in life or any of its undertakings is character was the opinion expressed by Dean F. F. Bradshaw in speaking to the freshmen in chapel yesterday. While showing at the same time the importance of character in any activity, the dean pointed particularly to its place in business affairs.

The working value of a good character, the dean explained, depends on the fact that the man who achieves something must have the cooperation of others and that the necessary cooperation can be obtained only by the man of character. People hesitate to trust or to deal with a man who is lacking in the qualities of a good character.

In discussing the requirements for business success Mr. Bradshaw quoted a statement by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Mr. Rockefeller holds that good morals and obedience to law, as well as consideration of others and loyalty, are fundamental necessities for the business man. The man who is without them is a detriment to his firm.

Phi Meets Tonight

The resolution, "Resolved, That Josiah W. Bailey should be the Democratic nominee for the United States senate," will be discussed at the regular meeting of the Phi Assembly tonight, Bill Speight of the ways and means committee announced. Speaker Carr stated that a number of business matters will be discussed.

SOCIAL SERVICE CONFERENCE TO CLOSE TONIGHT

Governor Gardner, Dr. W. L. Poteat and Frank Graham are Among Prominent Speakers At Charlotte Meeting.

The annual meeting of the North Carolina Conference for Social Service, which has been held for the past two days in Charlotte, will come to a close tonight. Governor O. Max Gardner and David Coker of South Carolina will be the speakers at this final mass meeting tonight.

Dr. W. L. Poteat was the first speaker of the conference, speaking at the opening meeting Sunday night at 8:00. Monday morning a business meeting and a discussion were presided over by Frank Graham, president of the conference, and H. F. Comer, respectively. Dr. Elbert Russell of Duke University and Professor Wiley Sanders of the University delivered addresses during the afternoon session, and at 8:30 last night President Frank Graham delivered the annual address of the president.

The program for today will be opened with a forum led by Dr. C. C. Taylor of State College, after which will be held an important business meeting. At 1:00 a luncheon meeting is to be held at which time Kemp Battle of Rocky Mount will speak. Then at 2:30 this afternoon Clarence Poe will make an address on the subject of "Live at Home." The final mass meeting at 8:30 will conclude the program.

This conference was organized some 18 years ago by a small band of prominent men in the state for the purpose of studying some of the human problems of the commonwealth and to do all possible to remedy them. Some of the things that this group has done are to help child life, create the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, established the Juvenile courts in North Carolina, abolish flogging in the state prison, establish tubercular prison camps, and numerous other such deeds that have proven beneficial to the general welfare. At present this small group of men is a large, well-organized group composed of committees on which are men well-suited for the type of work that has been assigned to them.

For the first time in the history of the conference a student section was organized this year. Several of the larger universities and colleges in the state sent delegates to this conference. This student section is to be a separate division of the conference and will have its own problems to deal with just as the other divisions.

Eclipse Is Observed

Dr. Karl Fussler's class in Physics 14, the new astronomy course, met on Saturday night from twelve until one o'clock in order to observe the partial eclipse of the moon through the telescope on the top of Phillips hall. The eclipse when full only darkened about one tenth of the surface of the moon, but could easily be seen through the telescope and to a lesser degree with the naked eye.

There were 240 members of the University "Y" in 1911.

Senior Invitations

Orders for invitations may be placed today and Wednesday at Sutton's, Patterson's and the Y. M. C. A., with members of the committee composed of Stacy Grant, chairman, "Red" Greene, president of the class, and "Red" Williams.

Despite added features of the invitations this year the price will remain the same as last year. The invitations will commemorate the dedication of the new library.

PLAYMAKERS TO LEAVE ON TOUR

Bill Consists of Same One-Act Plays That Were Produced On Northwestern Trip.

Leaving here Friday the Carolina Playmakers will begin the third tour of the present season. This trip will carry them to many towns in the western portion of the state, and to at least one town outside the state. Their bill will as usual consist of three one-act plays, the same three that they produced on their northern tour last fall, and the southern tour during the winter.

The cast for these plays, "The No 'Count Boy" by Paul Green, Loretto Carroll Bailey's "Job's Kinfolks," and Gertrude Wilson Coffin's "Magnolia's Man," will be the same casts playing on the southern tour and practically the same as that making the northern tour.

"The No 'Count Boy" is a fantastic comedy of negro life. One of Paul Green's best works, it was awarded first prize in the National Little Theatre tournament in 1925, when produced in New York by the Dallas Little Theatre Company.

Loretto Carroll Bailey presents an episode from the life of the average mill family in "Job's Kinfolks." The play has received wide commendation, and was used as the basis for the highly praised three-act play of the same name. The author takes the leading role herself, the character of Kizzie, the grandmother, providing an excellent part for the young actress.

The manners and foibles of the early twentieth century small town are brought to the stage in Gertrude Wilson Coffin's mountain comedy "Magnolia's Man." The efforts of a spinster to obtain a husband through the mail order plan form the basis of the play, which has been produced by the Playmakers several times. The author takes the role of Mis' Tish, the laughable and philosophic village dressmaker.

Band Concert Successful

The University band appeared in concert Sunday afternoon at the Carolina theatre before an enthusiastic audience.

"Close Harmony," a Nancy Carroll production, was shown following the 45-minute concert.

A silver offering was taken at the door, the proceeds of which will be used in connection with certain band expenses.

CHAIN STORES TO BE DISCUSSED IN DEBATE TONIGHT

Uzzell and Wilkinson To Show Faults of Chains In Meet With Northwestern University.

Teams representing the University of North Carolina and Northwestern University will meet tonight at 8:30 in Gerrard hall to debate "Resolved, That the principle of the chain store is detrimental to the best interests of the American public." The Tar Heel debaters—Billy Uzzell and John Wilkinson—will uphold the affirmative side of the question. There will be no decision.

The debate tonight marks the first time that Carolina and Northwestern have met in intercollegiate rivalry in a number of years. Reports from the western university show that the visiting debaters have excellent records in the field of debating and oratory.

Carolina's team is composed of two men who are experienced debaters. Wilkinson is a veteran of three intercollegiate debates and winner of the 1927 edition of the Mary D. Wright debater's medal. Uzzell has had considerable experience both in freshman and varsity competition.

The chain store question is one which is being debated the nation over. Nearly every college and university in the United States has scheduled at least one debate on this subject. The Carolina debaters met Maryland's debaters here a few days ago on the subject of the chain store and its relation to the welfare of the American public.

On Saturday night in Gerrard hall Carolina will meet Boston University on "Resolved, That the nations of the world should adopt some plan of complete disarmament of all forces except those which are needed for police purposes."

Lieut. Col. Crosset Honored At Banquet

An informal dinner was held last night in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn in honor of Lieutenant-Colonel F. M. Crosset of New York City, who is the guest this week of the Sigma Delta fraternity. Several prominent University officials were present at this dinner, including Dean Bradshaw, Dean Hibbard, Dr. Henry, Dean Carroll, R. B. House, Mr. Heath and Dean Brown of State College, Raleigh.

Colonel Crossett, who is vice-president of the national Delta Upsilon fraternity, has traveled extensively within the last few months and has visited many of the colleges and universities in the country. He arrived here Sunday afternoon from Washington and Lee University where he was the guest of one of the fraternities there, and from here he will probably go to Duke University for a few days. His present itinerary includes a number of places to be visited yet, and extends as far as Orlando, Fla.

Wilson At Convention

Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., University registrar, is now in Memphis, Tenn., attending the annual meeting of the American Association of University Registrars. He left the University Saturday of this week.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

One has to take chances in life.—Princess Ileana.

The Judge Parker Confirmation Battle

With the subcommittee reporting favorably to the senate judiciary committee on confirmation of President Hoover's nomination of Judge John J. Parker for associate justice of the Supreme Court, supporters of the North Carolina jurist yesterday won the second major skirmish in the interesting political battle being waged over the appointment.

Opposition to Judge Parker is intense on the part of the American Federation of Labor officials and the organized negro vote. President Green of the labor forces has urged President Hoover to withdraw Judge Parker's nomination because "he has shown judicial bias against the working people of the country and that, if confirmed, he would carry to the court views and opinions hostile to labor."

A memorandum issued by the department of justice Sunday seems from this distance to have pretty effectually spiked President Green's guns. The labor prexy is basing his campaign against Judge Parker on the latter's decision in the proceedings against the United Mine Workers several years ago—the famous ,or infamous, "Yellow Dog" case. This disputed decision was a case appealed by the mine workers from a district court decision granting an injunction in the suit brought by the Red Jacket Consolidated Coal and Coke Company of West Virginia. President Green complains that Judge Parker upheld the "Yellow Dog contracts," articles of agreement between employers and employees by which the latter subscribe not to join a union while under contract.

But the department of justice memorandum has rather definitely absolved Judge Parker from charges of bias in arriving at this decision. Quoting from the memorandum: "There does not appear to be a point decided in the Red Jacket case on which Judge Parker assumed to exercise any independent judgment or opinion. In holding the contracts valid and that peaceable efforts to induce the non-union men to break them were properly enjoined, he merely quoted rulings to that effect in the Hitchman case. Nowhere are pressed or indicated any personal views about any of these questions. He had no freedom of judgment on any of them; he was bound by the decisions of the Supreme Court, which he could not refuse to follow."

The negro opposition has been practically dropped by the forces fighting the Parker confirmation. It is fortunate for the Republican party in North Carolina that this point has not been pressed — otherwise the Republicans would have stood a splendid chance of losing all of their recently-gained prestige in this state. It has been demonstrated on innumerable occasions that North Carolinians, both white and black, do not take kindly to the injection of the race issue into political controversies. And there have been no real indications that Judge Parker has ever exhibited bias against negroes in his decisions or in his statements, public or private.

North Carolinians are being treated to something which they have been denied for almost a decade—the spectacle of a native of this state engaging as the central figure in a major conflict within the Republican party ranks. The Parker political battle is a heated affair, and the fact that the judge is a resident of Asheville and an alumnus of the University makes it especially interesting hereabouts. Chapel Hillians in particular are "whooping it up" for the judge. Confirmation of his appointment would boost the stock of the administration at Washington considerably in these parts—and it could stand quite a bit of boosting.

The Exaggeration Of The Talkie

No one can deny that the vitaphone has lifted the art of the silver screen to a much higher level than it was formerly credited with. The motion pictures now put before the public are, on the average, of a considerable better standard than the old silent versions of love and intrigue and romance and adventure. One has only to mention such recent successes as "Anna Christie" and "The Taming of the Shrew" to reveal the heights of the dramatic and the comic to which the ambitious producer may now aspire; then there is the sensation of a year ago, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," the brilliant dialogue of which delighted the theatre goer who had become sated with slap stick.

But one of the outstanding weaknesses of the talkie is the gross exaggeration of which they are sometimes guilty. This is especially noticeable in the picturized scenes of the Southland, the Dixie of romance and tradition. In the scenarios dealing with life below the Mason Dixon line the energetic directors and producers have overreached themselves, and as a consequence the dialogue of these charmingly idyllic pictures of existence in the southern states is so distorted as to become laughable. Several good motion pictures and a number of mediocre ones have been ruined by the lavish use of "Ah's" and "youall's" and "suh's" in an obviously affected drawl supposed to be a life like imitation of typically slow, honeyed speech as it is spoken in the south.

Mary Pickford in "Coquette" was a little noticeable for the affectation of her speech, but the dialogue of some of the other characters was grotesque. Perhaps John Mack Brown once spoke as a native Alabaman but Hollywood has ruined him until now he sounds like the laziest and most illiterate darkie. And so it goes on, with Hollywood fondly imagining itself to be in the right; and southern audiences continue to laugh good humoredly at the indistinct mouthings with which they are being bombarded.

There is nothing like color to make any kind of production realistic, or at least in keeping with the surroundings in which it is laid. But color should by all means be authentic, and the sooner people in other sections of the country learn that there is really no appreciable difference between the speech mannerisms of the south than their own, the quicker the disillusioning process will be over and another perfectly good tradition will have been laid quietly to rest. —R. Lenten Season Daily Devotion

(Read Luke 10: 17-24) Key Verse: "I beheld Satan falling as the lightening from heaven."

Meditation: "When Faust asked Mephistophles who he was, Mephistophles replies that "he was part of a power that was always willing evil but always doing good." His efforts were constantly being defeated by the more powerful spirit of goodness that dwells in this universe. Shakespeare's tragedies are based on this idea. Giant evil deeds are always coming back upon the heads of the transgressor. Evil is never finally victorious. It has within itself the seeds of its own destruction. The moral order of the world is too much for it. There is a backbone of righteousness in the universe. The presence of evil in the world is frequently cited as an argument against faith in a righteous universe. But evil that is ever being destroyed by itself, and defeated by the power of good, becomes a mighty argument for faith.

Prayer: O thou refuge of the human spirit, help us to rest in the unclouded sense of Thy conquering righteousness. Thou art mightier than all evil. Thy strength is within and behind our feeble efforts, making our weakness a part of Thy might and a share in Thy final victory. Amen.

VIRGINIA STUDENTS STORM MOVIE SHOW

A spectacular though probably unsuccessful demonstration was carried on last Wednesday night by the students of the University of Virginia, in which a thousand or more boys paraded the streets of Charlottesville and stormed the Jefferson Theatre as a protest against admission charges to the playhouse. The crowd that blocked Main street for more than an hour and plastered the front of the theatre with eggs when they found it guarded by police, would not return to the University until they were asked to do so by President Edwin A. Alderman of the University and the theatre manager.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon Woodrow Wilson, then governor of New Jersey, by the University in 1911.

The identity of the "Copy Cat," a certain feline columnist on the N. C. C. W. Carolinian, was revealed at a banquet recently held for the members of the staff of that publication. It is reported that when tea was served instead of milk a mew was heard from one end of the table followed by the indignant protest that tea was for women and weaklings and that contented cows were the country's greatest assets.

The following is Bill's statement of his grievances: "Having noticed last week-end a young lady on the campus of the North Carolina College for Women, I approached her and asked her if she would like to take a little outing with me that night. And, as she was accompanied by two friends, out of sheer goodness of heart, I asked them along. Having obtained a favorable reply, I promised to meet them on the corner of Tate Street at 8 o'clock. I was prompt and faithful in arriving at the suggested corner, and it was not long before the trio showed up with blushes and excuses (the latter being a favorite device of that sex). They said that they would be unable to go with me owing to the fact that they were compelled to return to the campus in ten minutes, which, whether or not it was a true statement, was nevertheless a sad one as I had already set my heart on treating them to a short talk on the constancy of woman. Grieved as I was at this shattering of my hopes, I was yet more grieved when the young lady whom I especially admired made no apologies to me. Now I would like to ask you is that right? If the aforesaid young lady would like to communicate her apologies to me, I shall be glad to have her do so at any time in the near future." (paid adv.)

Trackmen Face Hardest Test Of Season In Meet With Penn State Here

Running Events Likely To Feature Intersectional Clash On Emerson Field Saturday.

NUMBER OF FEATURES

Meet Is Most Important On Tar Heel Schedule; Varsity To Seek To Keep Eight Year Dual Meet Record Clean.

Home from the Georgia Tech Relays where they set four of six new records, North Carolina's flying trackmen are working intensively in preparation for Saturday afternoon's imposing home meet with Penn State.

Penn State is obviously the toughest nut the Tar Heels will try to crack this year. The meet will be the biggest intersectional track contest in the south this spring. And to make the thing more important, the Tar Heels will be risking a record of no losses in dual meets that has gone by the boards for eight years.

At Atlanta, Charlie Farmer, Tar Heel sophomore speed merchant, set a new record of 9.8 seconds in the 100-yard dash, and Tar Heel relay teams set new records of 1:29.6 for the half-mile, 3:24.7 for the mile, and 18:28.2 for the four-mile.

Even at this early stage, it seems a sure bet that there will be a great contest between Carolina's speedsters and Penn State's outstanding distance stars.

The Lions will present a well balanced team of veterans that ranked last year as one of the best outfits in the country, but their biggest strength promises to lie in their distance men.

Paul Rekers is I. C. A. A. A. A. two-mile champion and with C. A. Meisinger, "Dick" Detwiler and others gave Penn State an unbeaten cross-country team last fall. Carolina won its fourth Southern Conference fourth consecutive Southern Conference cross-country title.

The Tar Heels who showed the way and set the pace at Atlanta—Farmer, Slusser, Gay, Nims, Weil, Stafford, Lowry, Baucom, Phoenix and Barkley—may go down in defeat, but the odds are for a great contest in every run.

The University is making special preparations to accommodate a record crowd for this meet, which will be announced over Western Electric broadcasting equipment, and which will be run off on definite time schedule with a number of features for enjoyment of spectators.

Alabama Here Today

Carolina's tennis players meet tough opposition this afternoon when they play Alabama at 3 o'clock on the Carolina courts. Alabama concludes its northern trip with the matches this afternoon. Yesterday they played Duke in Durham. Practically every member of the Alabama team played on the team last year which did not lose a dual match.

HIGH TRACK AND TENNIS CONTESTS HERE THIS WEEK

North Carolina Athletes Contest Here for Titles In Track And Tennis; Large Number Of Entries.

The 15th annual North Carolina high school tennis tourney will be held here on Thursday and Friday, and the 18th annual North Carolina high school track championships will be held here Friday, both in connection with the University's annual High School Week program.

Late entries flowing in steadily give indication of a large participation in both events. Fifteen high schools had officially entered teams for the track championships yesterday, according to announcement from E. R. Rankin, secretary of the state high school athletic association. Twelve teams had been officially entered for the tennis tourney. The total list of contestants stood just under 200.

The tennis tournament will require two days. Opening rounds will be played on Thursday with semi-finals probably Friday morning and finals Friday afternoon. The track championships will be run off entirely on Friday, field events beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning and track events at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

TAR HEELS BEAT CAVALIERS 8-5

Carolina Scores Five Runs As A Result of Shortstop's Errors.

The Tar Heel baseball team took the Virginia Cavaliers in tow last Saturday at Charlottesville 8-5 and somewhat avenged the recent 14-1 defeat at the hands of Maryland.

Five Carolina runs came as the result of errors made by the Cavalier shortstop.

The Blue and White team went one run ahead in the seventh inning when Jackson walked, Longest and Davis singled and Whitehead doubled.

The Tar Heels accounted for three more runs in the eighth when Dent muffed Lufty's pop fly, Jackson singled and Longest doubled before the inning was out.

Carolina had only one error to its credit as compared with the eight made by Virginia.

Because of the large number of trustees attending the commencement exercises in 1911, it was decided that a committee should sign the diplomas instead of all the attending trustees as had been done before.

CAROLINA WINS FIRST PLACE IN GA. TECH RELAYS

Tar Heels Lead With Five First Places; Farmer Stars For Carolina.

With Charlie Farmer racing away from the classiest field of college sprinters in the south to set a new record of 9.8 seconds in the 100 and the Carolina relay teams setting three records, the University of North Carolina delegation won first honors at the Georgia Tech Relays in Atlanta Saturday afternoon. The question in the minds of the spectators was just how far the North Carolina entry would finish in front of the nearest rival. In all events North Carolina led with five first places, while Florida was second with four. Georgia Tech, Mississippi A. & M., and Tulane each won two firsts.

The University half-mile relay team, composed of Slusser, Gay, Nims and Farmer, set a new record of 1:29.6, beating the old mark of 1:32.1 held by Florida. The Tar Heel entry also hung up a new mark in the mile relay. The team composed of Weil, Stafford, Gay and Nims set a new time of 3:24.7, as compared to the old Mississippi A. & M. time of 3:25.2. The Tar Baby two-mile relay team, composed of Watkins, Mitcham, Jones and Jensen, set a new record of 8:22 to better by 18 seconds the existing record.

Charlie Farmer ran the 100 in 9.8 in the heat and again in the finals to better the previous mark of 10 flat held jointly by four men. The ease with which he ran the dashes and the relays has been the basis of predictions on the part of officials and sports writers that the Tar Heel ace will better the best American college marks in later meets this year.

Brodie Arnold, holder of the University record in the pole vault, tied for second in this event, which was won by Munger of Florida, with a vault of 12 feet, 3¼ inches. Theron Brown, weight man and broad jumper for the Tar Heels, placed second in the discus, missing first place by about as narrow a margin as is ever seen for this event. He hurled the discus 129 feet 10¾ inches, to be nosed out for first place by Coleman of Auburn with a mark of 129 feet 11 inches. Rip Slusser placed third in the 220-yard low hurdles. DeColigny, Tulane, and Whittle of Davidson placed first and second in this event. Perry, after getting off to a bad start in the 120-yard high- hurdles, came from behind to take second. Whittle of Davidson, state champion in the hurdles, won this event, and George of Davidson was third.

Ed Hamm of Georgia Tech leaped to a new broad jump record of 24 feet 9½ inches and Sandy Sanford of Georgia broke the high jump record with a jump of 6 feet ¾ inch.

Manly Scores 16 Runs

Manly walked away with the "J" dormitory team 16 to 3 yesterday afternoon. Allison, pitching for the winning team, hurled a good game and had the "J" batters at his mercy the whole game. The game was replete with errors on both sides.

Dekes Win Another

Behind the splendid hurling of Alexander, D. K. E. defeated Phi Delta Theta 13 to 8. Thomas was the outstanding player on the Phi Delta Theta team, obtaining three of his team's eight runs. The heavy slugging of D. K. E. featured the contest.

PREYER URGES MEN TO STICK TO JOBS

"Don't be ashamed of your first job, give it your best, give more than a day's work for a day's pay, learn all you can about the job ahead, and don't be discouraged," was the substance of the advice given juniors and seniors by A. T. Preyer last night at a meeting of the Taylor society.

Mr. Preyer, who is vice-president and personnel executive of the Vick Chemical Company, spoke under the auspices of the Taylor Society on "After College—What." In his talk he discussed what industry and management expect from the college man, and how the college man can prepare himself for the shock which he will find when he begins work.

The importance of extra-curricular activities was stressed by the speaker who stated that they were of value if they were of the proper kind. He further stated that the self-help student is of particular importance to industry in that he has shown that he has done something other than spend four years in loafing at a collegiate institute.

In answering several questions which were asked after he had finished his talk, Mr. Preyer stated that many new fields, particularly in the small industries, offer great opportunities to the young man, and that whether to take employment with a small concern or with a large one is a matter of personal choice.

Mr. Leonard Seeks Accomodations For High School Week

Grady Leonard, as chairman of the entertainment committee for High School Week, wishes to ask that all students who can accommodate any of the visiting high school students in their rooms during High School Week will please call at the Y tomorrow and leave their names and addresses.

Many students will be coming up here from the "home-town," and it is Mr. Leonard's hope that if possible, these students be entertained by the members of the student body from the towns from which the visitors come. If necessary, beds can be put in the rooms of those wishing to take in some of the high schoolers. Linen for the beds, however, must be furnished by the students.

Most of the newcomers will be coming to the University for the first time, and it is the wish of the committee that the student body make these visitors feel perfectly at home. High School Week begins Wednesday, April 16, and continues throughout the week.

At the commencement exercises of 1911, 122 degrees were conferred.

COKER BEAUTIFIES CAMPUS GROUNDS

"Only Avenue of Gum Trees" Is Planted Along Route 54 from Pittsboro Road to Athletic Field.

Spring work on the beautification of the campus under the direction of the Committee on Grounds and Buildings in charge of Dr. W. C. Coker, has been completed.

Several walks through the campus and Route number 54 directly in the rear of South Campus have been lined, with hardy, fast growing, trees, intended to fill in the more sparse sections of the grounds.

The inner side of the two walks leading from Old South building to the new Library have been planted with willow oaks. Because of the nearness of these paths to the buildings, the outer edges could not be planted.

The "only avenue of Sweet Gum trees" ever seen by Dr. Coker has been planted along Route 54 from the Pittsboro road to the athletic field. This avenue has been lengthened to extend more than a mile from the athletic field by Dr. Coker himself, but the specie used were willow oaks.

Cypress trees have been placed in the back of the library and around the chemistry building. Besides these trees, several clumps of black birch have been planted in the same locality.

Shrubberies and trees planted around the campus have been furnished by the University propagating grounds in the rear of Peabody building. The black birches were transplanted from the surrounding creeks, and most of the other trees used were made available through the kindness of Dr. Coker, in donating them from his own Emerson Farm.

ZANHEISER SAYS CHURCHES SHOULD COOPERATE MORE

"Protestantism must get a new technique," stated Dr. Charles Zanheiser in a talk to a joint meeting of the three Y cabinets last night at the Y after having been introduced by Parson Moss of the local Presbyterian church.

Dr. Zanheiser, traveling secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, has been making a tour of the south, talking in the larger universities and colleges. For the past two or three days he has been at Duke, and from here he will go to Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

Continuing further on the subject of "The Progress of Cooperation Between Religious Bodies," the speaker was of the opinion that Protestantism was in grave danger in that it was now becoming a cast institution. He stated that it was working in only a few areas and was leaving the other areas untouched.

"If we must measure up to this new industrializing age, we (the churches) must get together," said Dr. Zanheiser. He stated that he was not here speaking of a union church, but rather a cooperation of all the different denominations for one common need. "This," continued the speaker, "is the only way that we are going to succeed."

He stated further that in the past most of the conversions had been made in revival meetings, but now this method does not work. To get conversions now, Dr. Zanheiser believed that it was necessary to go out and have personal talks and personal contacts with the people.

Another fault that the speaker mentioned was that the church was failing as a gospel selling agency. "It is the duty of the church to spread the gospel," he continued, "but in this it is failing."

After giving many vivid examples of some of the good work that he had seen done in some of the "slums" of Pittsburgh and New York, Dr. Zanheiser concluded his talk by answering a few questions of the cabinet members.

McCall Discusses Family Automobile

"The Family Automobile" is the title of an article by Professor Frederick B. McCall in the April issue of The North Carolina Law Review which is now being distributed. In this article are discussed the recent developments and changes in the laws fixing responsibility of the owner of an automobile while it is being operated by members of his family. The article is general in its scope and includes cases and statutes from all of the states. It shows the constantly changing state of the law in this unsettled field of litigation.

The leading article in the April issue is by Judge J. Crawford Biggs and deals with "Federal Practice and Procedure." Judge Biggs, an authority on this subject, limits his observations to the civil side of the docket, and his remarks are an especially valuable source of information upon a field or practice constantly increasing in importance.

Suggestions for a Department of Justice for North Carolina are made in a series of papers presented in the Open Court section of the issue under the heading "A Ministry of Justice." In these papers law enforcement methods in England, France, the United States and North Carolina are compared. These papers grew out of a University law school course on "The Administration of Justice."

Seventeen students contribute articles on recent decisions of the North Carolina Supreme Court, United States Supreme Court, and other courts of final jurisdiction in the southeastern portion of the United States. This includes discussion of recent decisions in the field of Air Law.

DEAD METAL LEAPS TO LIFE
at the hands of Westinghouse engineers

IT is engineering that breathes the spark of life into lifeless metal, that converts it into active machinery, that makes of it an adaptable servant. One essential ingredient of that engineering is imagination. A second is rational thinking, the object of your technical training. And the third is teamwork.

In the development of the 55,000 kw. Duke Power Turbines, teamwork extended back to the date when George Westinghouse brought the steam turbine to America. It included men who have made life studies of vibration, of blade design, of the effects of superheated steam on metals; men who know how to make huge castings, the packers who have mastered the science of shipping giant machinery. And it took in also the business men who create a market for such machinery and who cement together the many-fold activities of the Westinghouse institution.

The 55,000 kw. turbine generator units that Westinghouse built for the River Bend station of Duke Power Company are the largest in the South.

Program For Final Debate Contest Issued By Rankin

Secretary of Debating Union Announces Plans For Eighteenth Annual Contest.

TO BEGIN THURSDAY

High School Representatives To To Discuss Proposed Amendment, Authorizing Clissification of Property for Taxation.

Final touches were being added today to preparations for the welcome that is to be given 224 youthful debaters from 56 North Carolina high schools who are expected here tomorrow to take part in the final contests to determine the winner of the Aycock Cup for 1930.

The 56 schools that are entered emerged as winners in the triangular contests held in March, in which 194 schools competed.

E. R. Rankin, who is in charge of arrangements, estimates that the events will bring hundreds of visitors to Chapel Hill.

The girl debaters, who have a 115 to 109 majority over the boys this year, will be entertained in the homes of the faculty members and townspeople, while the boys will stay in the dormitories and fraternity houses.

Dean N. W. Walker will preside at a general meeting of all the contestants Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at which time the debaters will draw for one of the 14 sections into which they will be divided.

The first preliminaries leading to the final contests for the Aycock cup will get underway Thursday night at 7 o'clock. They will be held in the 14 sections in different buildings over the campus. From each of these sections the judges will select one negative and one affirmative team to participate in the semi-finals to begin at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

In the semi-finals all the affirmative teams will meet in competition, as will all the negative groups. From these two groups the judges will select a best affirmative and a best negative team to enter the final contests in Gerrard hall Friday night at 8:30 o'clock.

The 56 schools which are to send teams are Altamahaw-Ossipee, Aurelian Springs, Ayden, Benvenue, Bethel, Black Creek, Bragtown, Candler, Chowan, Como, Copeland, Creedmoor, Curry, Edward Best, Elizabeth City, Emma, Evergreen, Forest City, Gastonia, Glen Alpine, Gibson, Goldsboro, Granite Falls, Green Hope, Greensboro, Griffith, Harris, Hendersonville, Hollis, Lake Landing, Leggett, Louisburg, Lumberton, Marshville, Morven, Newport, North Brook, Old Town, Pantego, Paw Creek, Pikesville, Randleman, Rockingham, Roseboro, Rutherfordton - Spindale, Salisbury, Scotland Neck, Tarboro, Troy, Wakelon, Washington Collegiate Institute, Weaverville, Weeksville, Wilkesboro, Wilton, Woodland, Olney.

COURT ROOM BIG PSYCHOLOGY LAB

University Professor Addresses Pre-Law Association Monday Night On Personal Elements Of Trials.

"Nowhere that I know of are more psychological factors to be found than in the court room," declared Dr. J. F. Dashiell, of the psychology department, in an address before the Pre- Law Association Monday night. He pointed out the numerous personal elements to be considered in viewing the composition of the court and the participants in legal encounters. There are the two parties to the suit, with varying degrees of intelligence, bias, and tendencies, extending to the actually subnormal and insane individuals. The two counsels are likewise influential, it being said until recently that "you can't convict a hundred million dollars." Witnesses are notoriously inaccurate in their testimony, a point emphasized by Dr. Dashiell with the reading of an editorial from the Greensboro Daily News. The jury is composed of not one but twelve men with varying interests and biases. Judges pass different sentences upon identical actions, being influenced by personal preferences and prejudices.

Dr. Dashiell showed that court cases are composed of three phases: the actual maladjustment causing the case, the legal side of the question, and the psychological factors involved. In connection with the technique of psychological investigation of criminals comes the detection of lying by the psychogalvanic reaction.

At the conclusion of the talk, two members of the audience were selected to act as subject in an experiment to demonstrate the functioning of the lie-detection methods. After the experimental procedure, the audience voted as to the guilty suspect, a small majority voting correctly.

SUPREME COURT CONSIDERS STATE BAR STANDARDS

Dean McCormick Urged By State Jurists To Support Move For Higher Standards.

The proposed move to raise the standards for admission to the North Carolina Bar has been communicated to Dean C. T. McCormick and the faculty of the University of North Carolina law school and has their warmest approbation and support.

The matter will be taken up before the Supreme Court on Wednesday. Judges James S. Manning and L. R. Varser, former members of the Supreme Court, and Judge J. Crawford Biggs, as a committee of the North Carolina Bar Association, appointed by President Kenneth C. Royall, will present a motion to the Supreme Court to raise the standards.

The present standards for admission in North Carolina require no academic preparation, not even a high school education, but merely two years' study of law, which may be in an office or in a law school.

Mr. A. B. Andrews, of Raleigh, formerly President of the North Carolina Bar Association, in a report to the Association, says that North Carolina ranks 39th among the states in its requirements, and that in North Carolina doctors, engineers, dentists, and other professions and specialties all have very much higher standards for admission than lawyers.

In his statement on behalf of the law school, Dean C. T. McCormick declared that "The members of the law faculty are very hopeful that the Supreme Court will find it desirable to place the matter of admission to the legal profession on the same high plane attained by the other learned professions in this state and by the legal profession in other progressive states."

Play Of Eighteenth Century Presented Playmaker Theatre

Susan Centlivre's "The Wonder" was presented last night as the farewell presentation of the Jitney Players at the Playmaker Theatre. The principal roles in this play, originally produced at the Drury Lane Theatre in 1714, were filled by Richard Skinner, Harrison Dowd, Francesca Bruning, Ada Cafagna, Douglas Rowland, and Alice Keating, the widow of late Bushnell Cheyney, who founded the Jitney Players seven years ago.

The play was of a harsh father who insists that his beautiful daughter marry a man of his choice, regardless of her wishes. The daughter, preferring death to this sad state of affairs, hurls herself from the chamber window, only to land in the arms of a young British officer. This daughter has a friend who is the daughter of a merciless father, and with this friend she seeks refuge. This creates a misunderstanding between her friend and her friend's suitor. Other characters become involved and the affair is ended happily in the third act.

The costumes and scenic effects were accurate in every detail and the stage presented a faithful picture of the atmosphere and setting of the 18th century.

Entertainment Committee To Hold Straw Vote This Week

Townspeople, Faculty Members, And Students Asked To Cast Ballots For Choice of Entertainments From List of Thirty Features.

From a list of several hundred attractions which were available, the student entertainment committee has selected 30 of the most outstanding and worthwhile features for consideration by the students, faculty, and townspeople. The selected list is here printed in order that those interested in the programs may express their preference as to the entertainment which will be secured.

The committee is desirous of obtaining as large an index of opinion as possible, according to Dean Hibbard, chairman of the committee, and he urges that numerous and carefully considered preferences be registered. Cost, variety and scheduling are factors to be considered in the final decisions as to the program, and there is consequently a possibility that the features receiving the highest votes may not be included. Yet first consideration will be given the suggestions, either on or off this list, meeting with the most popular favor.

The members of the committee are Professor F. H. Koch, for the drama; H. S. Dyer, for music; Dean Addison Hibbard, Bill Adams and Glenn Holder, for the A. B. school; and W. R. Curtis and F. A. Jones for the school of education.

Personnel of the committee for next year is to be announced soon.

Students Asked To House High School Visitors In Dorms

Grady Leonard announced yesterday afternoon that there were quite a number of visiting high school boys who had not been placed in a room, and said that any boys who could possibly make room for an extra occupant in their dorm to call by the Y early this morning and sign up someone from their home town. If your home town is not represented take someone from somewhere else. He said that the only way that the University had of giving the visitors sleeping quarters was to place them in the rooms of those students who are willing to accept a guest for a few days. The students will not be responsible for entertaining the boy.

University Band Plays At Shelby High School

The University Band appeared last night in the Shelby high school auditorium, under the auspices of the Shelby high school music department.

Today will be spent in Charlotte where the local high school music department there has arranged for three concerts to be given by the band.

The first will be this morning at the junior high school; the second, this afternoon at 2 o'clock before the senior high school; and the final concert of the tour will be at 8 o'clock tonight, also at the senior high school.

All programs will be much like that one presented here by the band last Sunday.

NO COURT SESSION BECAUSE OF DEATH OF JUDGE'S MOTHER

Because of the death of his mother, Mrs. C. U. Hinshaw, of 418 East Harvey, Raleigh, which occurred suddenly Sunday morning, Judge C. P. Hinshaw of Chapel Hill postponed the regular Monday session of recorder's court this week. Cases on the docket will be heard next Monday.

A large number of Chapel Hillians attended the funeral of Mrs. Hinshaw Monday morning in Raleigh. She was 60 years of age.

VALENTINE TALKS ON ANIMAL SENSE

Since time immemorial, men have been speculating on the possibility of the lower animals having any degree of intelligence. However, man wishing to hold his supremacy, has been prone to discredit and take with a pinch of salt all evidence that tends to prove that they are thinking and reasoning being. Dr. J. M. Valentine, while lecturing to his nine-thirty class in zoology 2 the other morning, cited an experiment that had been made by the famous European biologist, Nussbaum, while experimenting with the Hydra, a small microscopic fresh water animal. The hydra is simply a small cylindrical sac with a mouth at one end surrounded by six or eight tentacles, and at the other a basal disk by which it attaches itself to objects in the water. The walls of its body are made up of three layers, the outside layer being the protective covering, the middle layer serving some such purpose as to hold the other two together, and the inner layer which is the digestive organs. Nussbaum was able to turn this animal wrong side out. He wished to see if the inner layer and outer layer would pass through the middle layer and assume their correct positions or whether they would change, the outer becoming the inner and the inner becoming the outer. However, the next day when he looked at it he discovered that it had done neither but had turned itself back right and was living as normal as ever. He turned it again and passed a straw through the walls of its body, making it seemingly impossible for it to right itself again. Dr. Valentine illustrated this step by taking a paper bag and passing a stick through from one side and out at the other. When Nussbaum looked at his hydra the next day he found to his surprise that in spite of the straw it had righted itself and was still living with the straw passing through its body.

Any one wishing to test his intelligence with that of the hydra can do so by flattening out a paper bag and piercing it with a stick. If he succeeds in turning the bag wrong side out or vice versa in twenty-four hours he may give himself a grade of one hundred. The hydra did not have that long in which to figure out its problem.

APRIL ISSUE OF JOURNAL APPEARS

Articles by Babcock, Coltrane, Trabue, Meyer, And Harrison Feature High School Journal.

The April issue of the High School Journal has been recently issued from the press and is being mailed to its subscribers throughout the state and nation. Its tardy appearance is due to the attendance of the majority of the members of the school of education at the recent meeting of the North Carolina Education Association at Raleigh, work on the Journal being temporarily suspended for that purpose.

The current issue contains several articles of general interest besides the special columns. In "Direct Moral Training," Mr. Lyndon Babcock discusses the failure of the public school to train scholars in "attitudes and desires" as well as in subjects, commenting in this connection on the increasing number of the nation's youth among the criminal classes. He cites as an example of the utility of character training the work in Detroit of the Pathfinders of America, functioning as an auxiliary agency to the Board of Education in that city, and explains the ways and means by which such work may be carried on.

Superintendent E. J. Coltrane sets forth the need of interpreting and relating the school to the people and emphasizes the consequent value of a continuous publicity program with this object in view. Dr. M. R. Trabue presents the results of the high school senior examination given in 668 high schools throughout the state last year, with an analysis of the data secured. Mr. S. G. Noble gives an account of the work of the National Committee on State Histories of Education during the past year and a half, in connection with the evaluation of existing state histories of education and the stimulation of the production of new histories for those states inadequately supplied. The committee has, for this latter purpose, suggested specifications for the preparation of new histories, has prepared an annotated bibliography of local materials dealing with the subject, and has sought means of promoting the publication of new texts. Mr. H. D. Myers describes the organization, extension, and the activities of the Camp Fire Girls throughout the country, and stresses the need for competent and trained leaders in this work. In "Pioneering in New Fields" Miss Margaret Harrison discusses the spread of the use of radio in rural schools.

The special departments include the Latin column, by J. M. Gwynn; the French column, by Hugo Giduz; the Science column, by C. E. Preston; the English column, by P. C. Farrar; the History column, by A. K. King; the Music column, by H. S. Dyer; Notes from the Field, by A. B. Combs; and Book Notes and Reviews.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

It is the privilege of youth not to be surprised at anything.—E. de Gramont.

College Students Agree on Prohibition

Newspaper editors and other public men throughout the state have commented upon the results of the prohibition poll conducted recently by the Daily Tar Heel. It will be recalled that 658 of the 944 who voted wanted repeal of the 18th amendment, while 564 admitted that they drink and 380 professed that they do not drink. The predominating recaction of outsiders who hav commented upon the poll is mild astonishment that "wet" sentiment is as pronounced and as frankly admitted on the University campus as the vote indicates.

Comparison of the voting in similar polls conducted at colleges throughout the country reveals a striking condemnation of prohibition. Certainly the Tar Heel poll does not reveal stronger sentiment against prohibition here than that existing among college students at other prominent American institutions. Recently the Harvard Crimson conducted a great prohibition poll in fourteen Eastern and Mid-Western colleges. Of the 24,000 students voting, 15,000 admitted that they drank; 11,006 favored modification, 5,589 were for absolute repeal and only 838 were in favor of continuing the present liquor situation. A few weeks later the New York Evening Post conducted an inquiry into sentiment on the liquor question among American college undergraduates, and reported that opposition to prohibition is even more pronounced than the Harvard Crimson poll indicates.

Considering the strong anti-prohibition sentiment evidenced by students at other colleges and universities, the University student body seems comparatively "dry." At any rate, there is strong opposition to intemperate drinking here. And there is no reason why calamity howlers should depict the University campus as a huge puddle of alcholic moisturé in an American collegiate Sahara. University of North Carolina students simply share the evidence by their fellows all over the country.

Present-day college students are candid. They call their spades; they do not evade; they are not paralyzed by over-politeness. They believe that prohibition has demonstarted that it is a colossal flop, and they make no bones about informing the world that present conditions should not be allowed to continue. They frankly are in favor of modification of the prohibition laws to a point where they can be enforced, or repeal of them altogether. And University of North Carolina students are in accord with the general consensus of opinion on campuses throughout the country on this question.

Philosophy As a Study

There is a department in the University organization in which few students are interested and with which the students as a whole are little acquainted, the department of philosophy. To say that you are taking a course in philosophy is to label yourself as an antiquated fool in the eyes of many people. It appears that the trend in modern education is away from such studies as philosophy toward the more exact sciences. The opinion of the majority seems to be that philosophy is too general and indefinite to be of any value in the scientific world of today, that it deals with ideas rather than realities.

There is perhaps something of truth in this conception. What one learns in philosophy may never enable him to sell washing machines or direct the construction of a building. However, there is one thing that philosophy accomplishes for the student probably more than any other study. It makes him think deeply. When he delves into such matters as space and time and immortality and the casmos, and reads the works of such authors as Kant, Hegel, William James,, Spinoza, John Dewey, and others, he is exercising his brain. Not only that, but the study of philosophy lays the foundation for the formation of a philosophy of life upon the basis of his own beliefs, established through careful meditation, rather than upon something he has been taught or has embraced on prejudice or hasty judgment. The formation of some philosophy of life is as necessary to a person today as it ever has been.

The course in the curriculum of the department of philosophy given under such men as Paul Green, Dr. Horace Williams, and Dr. Emery will be worth the while of the student who has the opportunity to take them.—H. B.

Decline In University

For the past few years many of the faculty members have been resigning from the University faculty to take up positions with some of the larger institutions of education. Approximately a dozen or more of the best professors have resigned from the faculty this year. Some may consider that it is a compliment to the University that it has on its faculty, men who are wanted by larger schools. Probably this is something to be proud of, but, although we do receive the compliments, we lose the "cream of the crop," so to speak, by having to give up some of our best men. If other universities and colleges think that we have fine professors, why do we not have the same opinion and keep as many of these choice men as we can?

Here we hit the big question that has been brought up here lately in regard to a quality necessary for the new president. This old money question comes up again and stares us in the face. The only way that we are going to retain all of the good men that we have is to be able to offer them higher salaries than they will receive elsewhere. It has been said before that one of the main qualities of the new president must be that he be able to raise money. He is going to have to raise enough to not only keep the prized professors that we already have, but also enough to be able to add other good ones to the faculty.

But what has this to do with any decline in the University? It just goes to show that where we were at one time able to get fine men on the teaching staff, now we must stand by and see the other institutions seize our learned and excellent professors.

Of course there still remain many good men on the faculty, but the question is, will we be able to keep them? If we continue to lose the good ones as we have been doing in the past, soon our one time excellent faculty will be so shot to pieces that it will be practically worthless.

Besides losing all of these fine professors, we are also having to give up one of the most capable presidents that we have had in a long time. Why? Among other reasons, because we are not able to pay him what he has been offered elsewhere. It is true that he is going to a larger university—and his receiving this invitation to the new job shows that others appreciate and see his fine qualities—but why is this other university larger than ours? Why is it able to take our best men? Simply because it can pay more. Here we come back again to the big job that the new president, whoever he may be, is going to have to face. This ability of being able to raise money should be one of the big factors in the choosing of our new president. Forgetting all of the good men that the University has furnished to larger jobs, the new president is going to have to go out, get money, and fill the vacancies of the professors that we have had to give up. —C. G. R.

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Meditation: It is easy to rejoice and be glad in youth. It is not so easy as one's age comes stealthily upon one. There is a common reluctance to face age. This attitude is designed to destroy the joy that age should bring. The wiser way is to accept age when it comes and find its joys. Each period of life has its own satisfactions to bring and its own contributions to make. There are greater activities than physical ones. To grow old gracefully is a sign of the youthful spirit, for that spirit is one of hopefulness. The best way to keep young, both in feeling and appearance, is to believe in the peculiar value of each successive period of life as it comes, and to look for it.

Prayer: O God of the seasons, Thou giver of days and years, we witness Thy providence in the coming of ever marvelous times in the hurrying calendar of our lives. For the fruits and colors of our own autumn days accept our thanks and may there be no sadness in our hearts at the departure of our spring and summer. Amen.

Sir Herbert Ames of H. M.'s government and the League of Notions has been here in the interests of the League and World Peace. World Peace is desirable, and fortunately the League doesn't aim to seek the abolition of wars by the mere scrapping of armies and navies, but by education. It is as foolish to expect the discontinuance of wars by the scrapping of armaments as it is to expect the discontinuance of fires by the scrapping of all fire engines and fire fighting equipment.

Miss Grace Everest of Fayetteville, a member of the Carolina Dramatic Association executive committee, rather likes Chapel Hill, and we wouldn't be missing it far by saying that there are some five or six young gallants here on the campus whose sole interest in the drama is inspired by a certain feminine influence.

The Entertainment Committee in today's paper presents a list of thirty attractions, which in its opinion are the best of a list of several hundred. They ask that the student body cast another one of these infernal straw votes to show which way the wind blows. The staff of the Daily Tar Heel casting its composite vote shows a preference for: Speakers—Richard Byrd, Darrow-Cannon debate, Joseph Wood Krutch, and Morris Fishbein; musical numbers—Lawrence Tibbett, Maier and Patterson, and the Beggars' Opera; dance numbers—Carola Goya, and Pavley Oukrainsky; dramatic numbers — Theatre Guild Repertory production of Strange Interlude.

Some of the campus pocket billiard enthusiasts are in favor of organizing intramural pool. The idea is not a bad one. Get bowling, billiards, and beer for the student body and there would not be as big migrations off the hill each week-end.

Sartorial Sway

By Beau Gent

More and more bathing suits made of less and less will be worn this year. The tendency seems to be toward the w. k. German idea of "Sonnen-Kultur."

Some of the more radical swimmers wear a mere loincloth looking pair of trunks made of flannel and two lengthy shoulder straps that are attached to a piece of silk that resembles an infant's bellyband. Nice, respectable Babbity Americans do not attempt such extremes. We predict many, many arrests for indecent exposure if this part of the country adopts the outfit. Nevertheless, they ARE comfortable and racy.

For those of you who are inclined to be a little different and who are tired of the conventional woolen or semi-woolen suits, we recommend the new gaberdine trunks. They are preferable to the flannel trunks because they shed water more readily. They come with wide bottoms, side pockets, and small pleats in the front. A spiffy combination would be gaberdine trunks and a silk tank top. These gaberdines, by the way, are equally smooth for any occasion that demands freedom of limb—such as boating, beach games, and other dampish, waterside activity.

In place of the usual beach robe—which will still be seen a great deal—there is the new beach jacket. It is made of flannel, usually white, double-breasted, and is rather short. It covers the top portion of the suit and leaves the trunks, which are generally of a darker color, uncovered. They are the smartest beach accessory this year and are much more convenient and useful than the old beach robe.

Doubtless many of us have experienced the disappointment of coming out of the water and anticipating a refreshing smoke, only to discover that we inadvertently went swimming with our cigarettes and matches tucked in our trunks or top. Cigarettes and matches just won't stand for that sort of treatment. An inventive genius has solved the problem very simply. It is a semi-rigid, water-proof, rubber cigarette case that will hang on to your trunks or top by means of a clip. It costs only one dollar and is any man's friend indeed.

Apropos of the weather. . . We are of the opinion that looks tend to influence feelings. If you're dressed coolishly you will feel cool. There is no reason for wearing a starched or pinned collar in this weather—and vests should have been discarded—except for wear in the evening—a long time ago. One of our friends seems to revel in a starched collar at present. He always appears to be sloppily dressed because the collar invariably wilts, or chokes him until his face looks red as a sunset. There is no method to such madness.

We advise that if you are unalterably in favor of galivanting around without a jacket or sweater, you at least dispense with the suspenders. A belt is much more effective and neat, and, if you fasten it lightly, can be just as cool. If, however, you think you will be in danger of losing your trousers, you'd better stick to your "eyesores." 'cause Officer Blake would not approve of the resulting scene.

DISTANCE RACES EXPECTED TO BE CLOSE WITH PENN

Tar Heels Defending Record Of No Dual Meet Defeats In Eight Years.

Contests in the distance races promise to be the big feature of the North Carolina-Penn State track meet here Saturday afternoon.

Flying Tar Heel runners have won four consecutive southern cross-country titles, have kept Tar Heel track teams unbeaten in dual meets for eight years, and last Saturday raced to four new records in the classic Georgia Tech relays at Atlanta.

Penn State, drawing from veterans one of the strongest track teams in the country last year and from an undefeated cross-country team last fall, will pit against the Tar Heels some of the greatest distance stars in the country.

One of these is none other than the famous Paul Rekers, I. C. A. A. A. A. two-mile champion. Another is C. A. Meisinger, who placed third in the two-mile in the indoor intercollegiates at New York, and ran with Rekers on the Penn State team that lifted the 4-mile relay title at last year's Penn relays.

Another is Dick Detwiler, who made the third of Penn State's invincible cross-country trio. And so on down the line.

When the team that lifted four of six new records at the Tech relays meets the pride of the north in what should easily be the season's biggest intersectional meet in the south, the fireworks should be great indeed.

The new records set by the Tar Heels at Atlanta were Farmer's 9.8 seconds mark in the 100; and new relay marks of 1:29.06 for the half-mile; 3:24.7 for the mile, and 18:28.2 for the four-mile. The runners, besides Farmer, were Slusser, Gay, Nims, Weil, Stafford, Lowry, Baucom, Phoenix and Barkley.

SIDELIGHTS

by Sports Editor

Approximately 250,000 howling fans jammed seven big league ball parks to take in the opening games. The game between the world champion Athletics and the New York Yankees, the runners-up in the American League, drew the largest crowd in the American league with an attendance of 60,000 people, while the Chicago-St. Louis game drew 65,000.

Nearly all the clubs have been greatly strengthened by rookies and via the trading route. The New York Yankees will have two new faces on the left side of the field. Dusty Cooke, a Durham boy, takes Bob Meusel's old position in left field. Bob was sent down the river with Heileman of Detroit to Cincinnati to pull up the Reds' attack. Ben Chapman will play third base, the only weak spot in the Yankee infield.

The Chicago Cubs' chances for repeating were greatly increased by the return of power to Gabby Hartnett's throwing arm, otherwise the National league champions are standing pat, as are the Athletics.

The Pittsburg Pirates will be greatly handicapped by the loss of Burleigh Grimes, one of the few remaining spitters, and the injury to Pie Traynor, baseball's premier third sacker.

The Phillies, who have been climbing steadily will still feature baseball's greatest attack and their pitching has been greatly improved.

All in all indications show that both league races will be the closest in recent years. The race in the American league will again probably revolve around the Yankees and the Athletics, but what a fight that should be. In the National league, all the clubs with the exception of the Boston Braves will be fighting fiercely for the top rung, although the Cubs are the slight favorites to repeat.

The Tar Heels certainly made a hit with the track fans in Atlanta. Four of the six new records were made by Carolina's representatives. Charlie Farmer, sophomore flash, crashed through the century to establish a new southern record of 9.8. Farmer was also greatly responsible for Carolina's record in the half mile relay. Three of the new records were set by the varsity. These were the century, half-mile relay, and the mile relay, while the Tar Baby two-mile relay team set a new record in that event. Ed Hamm, essaying his comeback campaign, set a new broad jump mark with a leap of 24 ft. 9 1-2 inches. There were no official scores kept but the Tar Heels with 5 first places led the field.

The basketball team suffered a severe setback in the Tri-State league when it dropped a double header to the Washington and Lee Generals. The scores were 10-2 and 7-6. This makes the third loss in four games that the Tar Heels have played so far. Their only victory was an 8-5 battle against the Cavaliers.

Kappa Alpha Wins

A heavy-hitting Kappa Alpha baseball team beat Kappa Sigma 8-3 yesterday in a one-sided contest. With the score standing 8-1 against it in the last inning, the Kappa Sigma team staged a rally that netted two runs but was cut short when Cole, a relief pitcher, struck out the last man with three on the bases. Morson, hurling for Kappa Alpha, allowed only three hits, while his teammates secured a total of eight.

Oliver, K. A., secured the only home-run of the day.

Annual Spring Golf Play Begins Saturday

The golf committee of the Chapel Hill Country Club is planning with the woman's social committee to make Saturday, April 19 a gala day on the golf links and in the club house. The ladies will serve tea, the golf committee is arranging to start the fourth of the spring tournaments. A handicap foursome flight tournament is planned in which the play will continue all day. The women will play their matches in the morning, starting at 9:30 o'clock and any of the male members that can arrange their foursome and prefer to play the match in the morning may do so. The winners in their particular flight will be required to play the winners in the flight below not later than next Wednesday or the match will be considered as forfeited by the committee. The names of the different players will be posted on the bulletin board as they are to be grouped Wednesday morning, with all other information pertaining to the rules. The women of the club are doing everything to make the day pleasant and the golf committee is anxious that every member come out and enter into the program of the day.

Tar Heels Lose Two Games To Generals

The Tar Heels lost a double-header baseball tilt to Washington and Lee at Lexington Monday 10-2 and 7-6.

Leigh Williams, pitching ace and star first sacker of the Generals, entered the last game in the fourth inning with the score 5-0 against him to stop the Tar Heels.

A total of six round trips were piled up in the two games with ex-captain Lufty taking two, and Whitehead one. The others went to Williams and Hanna.

Six errors in the morning game accounted for a large part of the Generals' win, while only two were made by the Tar Heels in the second game.

Frosh Lose 5-4

In a thrilling 12 inning game played on Emerson field yesterday afternoon the Duke frosh nine defeated the Tar Babies by the close score of 5-4. The Carolina first year men showed more power at the bat than did the Blue Imps, making 11 hits, three of which were home runs, to their opponents nine, but were erratic in the field and had the misfortune to make their fielding slips in the pinches.

McCaskill, who laced out four singles out of six times at bat, and Peacock, Riggs, and Ferebee, all of whom made home runs, were the main cogs in Carolina's batting attack, while Peacock and McCaskill turned in some good work afield. Coombs, a brother of the famous Earl Coombs, centerfielder of the New York Yankees, was the individual star of the day. In addition to getting two hits out of four times at bat and being walked twice, he pitched an excellent game, striking out 17 men in twelve innings, while McNeil and Scarboro, Tar Baby pitchers, could fan but 5.

Pi Kappa Phi's Win

Pi Kappa Phi defeated Sigma Delta 8 to 2 yesterday afternoon in a baseball game that was much more interesting than the score indicates. If Poole, pitching for Sigma Delta, had been given proper support the outcome would have been a different story entirely.

Slater pitched a good game of ball for Pi Kappa Phi, and with the aid of a smooth working infield had little trouble in keeping runs from crossing the plate.

GRANT FRANCHISE TO GAS COMPANY

Aldermen Vote to Allow Durham Concern to Lay Pipes Here in Chapel Hill

TOWN WILL BE CANVASSED

Last Wednesday night, the board of aldermen voted to grant a franchise to the Durham Gas Company. If a sufficient number of people here express a desire for its service, the company will proceed to lay a main from Durham to Chapel Hill and to put pipes under the streets. The work can be completed by July 15.

It all depends, however, upon the extent of the demand for gas here. Several hundred families already have electric ranges, and the University Consolidated Service Plants announced this month a reduction in the price of current. Moreover, there have been many installations of natural gas in tanks. The question is: in the face of this situation, how many citizens will sign up for gas service?

C. M. Crawford, general manager of the Durham and Raleigh gas companies (both of which are owned by the Southern Cities Utilities Company), says that the Durham concern will extend its service here if it can enroll from 275 to 300 consumers in Chapel Hill and along the route from Durham. The company's representatives are to make a survey at once to ascertain if there are that many householders who want gas.

In applying to the aldermen for a franchise Mr. Crawford said that the same rates would apply here as in Durham and Raleigh. The charge is $1.80 per 1,000 for the first 5,000 cubic feet each month, and goes down as consumption increases.

Henderson Signs To Furnish Features

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department in the University, has just accepted a contract to succeed the late Garrett P. Serviss as feature writer of articles on science for the King Features Syndicate, Inc., one of the greatest circulation combinations in the world.

Mr. Serviss was one of the leading authors and feature writers of the country. His forte was the popularization of scientific subjects and names. He knew how to treat the most complex subjects in a popular and fascinating way, and his lectures and books did much to interest the layman in astronomy. The selection of Dr. Henderson to succeed him comes as a distinct honor to the University.

Dr. Henderson's books and contributions to magazines testify to his knowledge of the extraordinary advance of physics and chemistry upon which are based most of today's wonders of science.

In announcing the series of articles, the Syndicate says: "Dr. Henderson reveals the wonders of science and nature in daily articles that have tremendous attention value and reader-interest. Authoritatively, but in a lucid language that all can understand, he reads the riddles of progress, in which everybody in this ultra-modern day is interested.

'SONG OF THE WEST' AT THE CAROLINA TODAY

Roberto Guzman, who plays one of the important roles in "Song of the West," the Warner Bros.' all-natural color, talking, singing, dancing picture, at the Carolina theatre today, has had a career equally as adventurous as that experienced by any pioneer of covered wagon days.

Guzman is a native of Mexico. Ten years ago he rose to be confidential secretary of Adolfo de la Huerta, first Provisional President of Mexico. Later de la Huerta started a revolt against Obregon, which eventually failed because the United States refused to give recognition to the revolutionists. De la Huerta fled to the United States. Guzman, who was hotly pursued, escaped in the funnel of a smokestack on a freight steamer leaving Tampico.

The Federals searched the boat for two days, but could find nothing. Then the captain, a friend of Guzman, steamed away—after having cut off the smoke in the one funnel.

De la Huerta started life as a piano player in a Mazatlan honky tonk. He met Guzman there. After the debacle de la Huerta, who also has a fine voice, came to Los Angeles and started a school for piano and voice. He persuaded Guzman, who has always been a singer, that he had a fine chance in the talkies.

As a result, Guzman won one of the principal roles in "The Desert Song," and later was cast in "Song of the West," directed by Ray Enright. John Boles, Vivienne Segal, Marie Wells, Joe E. Brown, Sam Hardy and many other notables are in the cast. "Song of the West" is an adaptation of "Rainbow" by Laurence Stallings and Oscar Hammerstein II. Vincent Youmans did the music. Ray Enright directed.

There were 99 students registered in the University summer school in 1910.

Engineering School Gets New Instrument

As an aid to research studies leading to analyses of internal stresses and strains in engineering structures, the School of Engineering has recently secured a Beggs Deformeter, a precision instrument for making analyses of structures.

This apparatus, which was invented by Professor Beggs of Princeton University, was secured by Professor T. F. Hickerson, of the department of civil engineering, through funds made available for the promotion of research at the University by a grant from the Rockefellow Foundation.

With this device, which is capable of measuring deflections in models to one-one hundred thousandth of an inch, Professor Hickerson will continue research work he has begun on continuous beam structures.

The apparatus of microscopes, gages, and numerous accesories for determining experimentally to a high degree of precision the deformation of celluloid models of any complex type of structure or machine.

With this apparatus and the models of the structures under investigation it is possible to obtain data directly without having to make the long and laborous calculations usually necessary for obtaining the desired information.

The Beggs Deformeter has been adapted by many railroads and governmental agencies for obtaining data necessary for the designing of structures. The instruments are also in use at many colleges and universities throughout the world.

The basic principle underlying the application of this apparatus to elastic models is Maxwell's principle of reciprocal deflections; meaning that there is a reciprocal relation between any two deflections and the loads producing them.

In using the instrument, a model structure is cut from celluloid. One of the supports of the model is given a small but known displacement; the model being elastic is distorted slightly as if subject to a thrust, shear or bending moment. The deflection of any point of the model is determined very accurately by means of a micrometer microscope before and after distortion.

Knowing the relation between the displacements of the two points enables one to compute readily the relation between the external loads and internal stresses.

Engineering Society To Select Officers

The election of officers of the University of North Carolina student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will be held at the regular monthly meeting Thursday evening at 7 o'clock in Phillips hall.

In addition to the election of officers, the program will include a short talk by Professor E. G. Hoeffer, head of the department of mechanical engineering, in which he will speak of the recent fiftieth anniversary meeting of the society which was held in New York and Washington.

LAWYERS PUBLISH ARTICLE BY BIGGS

Seventeen Students Contribute To April Issue of North Carolina Law Review.

Judge J. Crawford Biggs contributes the leading article in the April issue of "The North Carolina Law Review," which is now being distributed. The subject of the article, "Federal Practice and Procedure," is one upon which Judge Biggs is an authority. It is limited to practice and procedure in civil cases and the lawyers of this state will examine it with great interest and will find it to be a very valuable source of information in a field which is constantly increasing in importance.

Professor Frederick B. McCall contributes an article on "The Family Automobile," in which is discussed the recent developments in the law which aim at fixing responsibility on the owner of an automobile while being operated by members of his family. This article is general in its scope, including cases and statutes from all of the states. It shows the constantly changing state of the law in this unsettled field of litigation.

Of particular interest to North Carolina readers is the Open Court section on "A Ministry of Justice," in which descriptions of law enforcement in France, England, the United States and North Carolina are presented and suggestions are made for a department of justice in North Carolina which will unify and make more effective the enforcement of law throughout the state. Such a department would be modeled after the United States Department of Justice and include the good features of all the systems investigated. These papers grew out of a course in the Administration of Justice at the University, one meeting of which was devoted to this discussion and was attended by Attorney General Brummitt and Assistant Attorney General Nash.

The seventeen students contributed discussions on recent decisions of the North Carolina Supreme Court, United States Supreme Court, and other courts of final jurisdiction in the South Eastern portion of the United States, covering a wide range of subjects. There is a discussion in the field of Air Law of a case in which a farmer was injured by reason of his horse taking fright at a low-flying dirigible; in the field of Constitutional Law, the North Carolina Case of Murphey against Corporation Commission, involving the statute fixing the liability of stockholders in insolvent state banks. Other subjects under which cases are discussed are Bailments, Contracts, Contributory Negligence, Corporations, Evidence, Insurance, Master and Servant, Money had and received, Mortgages, Negotiable Instruments, Taxation, Wills and Workmen's Compensation.

Mr. L. P. McLendon, of the Durham Bar, contributes a laudatory review of Professor McIntosh's recent book on "North Carolina Practice and Procedure in Civil Cases." Mr. Charles W. Tillett, Jr., of the Charlotte Bar, presents an interesting review of Osborne's "Question Documents." Mangum Weeks of the Bar of Washington, D. C., reviews "The Law Library in the Capitol, Washington, D. C."

In October 1876, the University issued a pamphlet on taxidermy, that had been written by one of the University professors.

The School of Law, of the University was reopened in January 1877.

Debaters Arrive Today To Compete For Aycock Cup

Local Committee Has Completed Plans for Eighteenth Annual High School Contest.

WILL DISCUSS TAXATION

First Elimination Series To Be Held Tonight; Final Contest Friday Night in Gerrard Hall.

All the necessary arrangements for the eighteenth annual final contest of the North Carolina Debating Union, to determine the winner of the Aycock Cup for 1930, have been concluded and the arrival this afternoon of the 224 contestants is being awaited. The debate contest, under the auspices of the Di and Phi societies and the University extension division, is one of the features of High School Week, of which the other events are the fifteenth annual tennis tournament and the eighteenth annual interscholastic track meet.

The local committee which has made provisions for the debating contest includes N. W. Walker, chairman, E. R. Rankin, secretary, L. R. Wilson, D. D. Carroll, G. M. McKie, C. E. McIntosh, E. R. Hamer, R. M. Albright, J. C. Williams, G. H. Leonard, H. B. Parker, F. G. McPherson, J. E. Dungan, H. H. Hobgood, and J. H. Anderson.

The debate question is "Resolved: that North Carolina should adopt the proposed constitutional amendment, authorizing the classification of property for taxation."

Thursday's program for the debaters begins with a meeting in Gerrard hall this afternoon at 2 o'clock to draw for sections and pairings for the first preliminaries, to be run off tonight in 14 auditoriums about the campus.

In these contests the judges will select the best affirmative and best negative team from the four contesting groups.

All of the winning affirmative teams will meet in the Phi hall at nine o'clock Friday morning to speak in the semi-final contest.

The negative teams will meet in the Di hall at the same hour.

Organizations Will Observe National Music Week Here

Extensive plans are being made for the participation of various Chapel Hill organizations during national music week, which begins May 4.

H. S. Dyer, acting as president of the general music week committee, has adopted a policy of emphasizing music in all of its possibilities during this time. He has appointed an extensive committee to aid him in this venture.

Serving on this committee is a special group representing Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity; the faculty of the music department; George Lawrence, president of the community chorus; E. C. Smith, manager of the Carolina Theatre; Superintendent Hoyle of the city schools; the presidents of the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs; and the pastors of the Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal, and Presbyterian churches.

The program for the week, an extensive one, is not yet ready to be announced.

German Club Meeting

There will be a meeting of the German Club today at 1:30 o'clock according to an announcement by George Race, president. All members are urged to be present at this meeting.

BAGBY TALKS ON PSYCHO-ANALYSIS

Noted Psychologist Speaks To Commerce Fraternity on the Treatment of Mental Complexes.

"The Meaning of Psycho-Analysis" was the subject of a talk by Dr. English Bagby, of the psychology department, given at a smoker by the Delta Sigma Pi commerce fraternity Tuesday night.

"Psycho-analysis is a technique," Dr. Bagby stated, "used in treating the most common type of mental or nervous disorders. An individual may have a train of symptoms and not have the slightest idea what is the matter. All of these conditions represent a superficial form of some deeper disorder. Psycho-analysis is nothing more than the technique used to discover the real disorder."

Dr. Bagby explained that these symptoms, such as biting the hand or pulling the hair, are not simple habits like adjusting one's tie, a habit which will cease if the tie is removed, but are manifestations of a repression. The action is adopted as a distraction for the mind, and if cured will reappear in some other form, because the actual trouble has not been corrected. The patient has some problem or worry, but instead of facing it and providing for the immediate need, he represses the problem by seeking to distract his mind. "A strong personality," the speaker stated, "is one who, confronting an emergency, immediately faces it and prepares for the necessity."

Several cases illustrating the use of psycho-analysis were given by the speaker. Dr. Bagby then explained the various methods of approaching a case. The patient is placed at ease in a darkened room, for the nearer he is to sleep the more freely he will discuss intimate problems. The psycho-analysist asks simple questions covering various possible difficulties, until the patient gradually reveals some complex. Another method is the use of a list of key words. The word is mentioned and the patient is asked what it suggests to him. Dr. Bagby stated that no matter where the patient was started in his thinking he would eventually come to the problem. A third technique is that of dream interpretation. The suppressed problem will come out in dreams, usually in a highly disguised form.

Following the talk various questions were asked and points of interest discussed informally.

United Church Services

There will be a special Easter Service held at the United Church, Sunday morning at 6:30 a. m. A program of special music and talks has been arranged, and the church invites everyone to attend.

KNIGHT OPPOSES EDUCATION ONLY FOR PRIVILEGED

University Professor Writes on Values of Different Forms of Higher Education.

"An Acre in Middlesex" is the title of an article by Dr. Edgar W. Knight, professor of education here, published in the April number of the "Journal of Adult Education." The wording of the title of the article, which discusses the general subject of the value of the different forms of higher education, is derived from the famous quotation from Macaulay: "An acre in Middlesex is better than a principality in Utopia."

Dr Knight defends the present democratic operation of American colleges and universities against those critics who would change our present system into one which would concentrate its greatest efforts on the comparatively few students of superior intellect.

One outstanding privately endowed institution which is now attracting wide attention because of its radical methods of instruction was singled out by Dr. Knight as an example of the type of institution which some of the modern critics of higher institutions of learning prefer.

It is pointed out that this institution would limit its student body. It would bring student and teacher into close contact by completely abolishing the recitation system and substitute in its stead a conference plan. The fault with such a system, says Dr. Knight, is that it invites to its student body only hand-picked youth.

Another of the colleges which many modern educators advocate and which Dr. Knight sees as a violation of all that is democratic is the type which would select its students entirely from "those coming from the top ten per cent of the graduates of schools whose annual graduating classes number as many as two hundred students, "and those who can pass the intelli-

TAPPING OF TAU BETA PI TO BE HELD NEXT WEEK

Honorary Engineering Scholastic Fraternity to Tap New Men Tuesday Evening.

The annual spring tapping of Tau Beta Pi, national engineering scholastic fraternity, will be held next Tuesday evening. Professor G. M. Braune, dean of the school of engineering, will be the principal speaker at the ceremony.

Tau Beta Pi, the engineering organization similar to Phi Beta Kappa for other branches of University work, annually taps for membership in its ranks, several juniors and seniors in the school of engineering who have been outstanding in their scholastic and other work.

Recognizing as it does high scholarship, good fellowship, and other worthy characteristics, tapping and subsequent membership in Tau Beta Pi signifies to the engineer that the student who has been so honored has made an excellent record while taking engineering scholastic work.

Two tappings are held every year, one in the spring when members of the senior class and rising seniors are eligible, and one in the fall when only seniors are qualified.

The University of North Carolina chapter of Tau Beta Pi is one of two chapters in the state. Organized during the last school year, the local chapter became the Beta chapter of North Carolina, having been preceded by Alpha chapter at State College.

Last spring the fraternity tapped for membership five members of the graduating class, and several rising seniors. Last fall several more members were added. At present there are eight student members of the group and several faculty members.

The officers of the chapter announce that the tapping is open to the public and that everyone interested is extended a cordial invitation to attend.

Writer Convinced That Bummer Takes Greater Risk Than Driver

(By Jack Riley)

Who runs the risk in bumming? Some people seem to think the drivers are taking a big risk when they pick up a boy whom they do not know. The city aldermen seem to think the public in general is menaced by the traffic congestion which they claim bumming causes. I think the bummer runs as great a risk as anyone. Maybe an account of an actual experience will make you think so. This is what happened to me while bumming.

As the shades of evening drew lower and twilight heralded the approach of darkness, the wind came faster moving before it dark clouds. A heavy mist hung low over the streets and grew into a fine rain. Along the wet sidewalks which gave back the gleams from the newly lighted lamps not a sign of occupation could be seen. Chapel Hill was silent and abandoned.

A glance at the street adjoining the Carolina Inn would have revealed a single person, who, in the hope of a ride home, had remained to hail the few cars which appeared and were gone again, leaving him in despair. This person, the writer, had been joined by other students earlier in the afternoon. Each expected to leave Chapel Hill very soon, but now they had all given up hope and left me alone.

Out of the mist appeared the headlights of another automobile. "I'll try you," I decided. As the car drew nearer, I stepped out and asked if the driver was going to Sanford. The driver heard me and brought the Ford, for such it was, to an abrupt stop. Filled with hope I clutched my hand bag and opened the door. I was met with the harsh reply, "I'm going that way, don't smoke, don't talk and I'll take you." I immediately sensed a feeling of fear, for the man hadn't said that he was going all the way, but had addressed me in a harsh and cool manner. I could not ask him to stop now for outside it had begun to rain harder. The wind came quicker, increasing to a furious gale that drove the rain against the car in a wild

Seniors Will Get Another Day

Because of the large number of orders received yesterday the senior invitation committee has extended the closing time for orders until tonight. Men will be at the desks at Sutton's and Patterson's all today. The committee will take orders for personal cards at the same time.

The largest number of cards sold any member of the class to date is 72, 35 of which were leather-bound. Indications are that more invitations will be taken by this class than any previous class.

No orders will be taken after today, the committee announced, as all invitations must be engraved and delivered before commencement.

CHEM ENGINEERS ELECT OFFICERS

Ruble Will Be Next President; Fees To Be Collected at Business Office.

At the meeting of the University student branch of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers held Tuesday evening the following officers were elected to serve during the next school year: R. J. Ruble, rising senior, president; E. F. Thomas, rising senior, vice-president; T. R. Taylor, sophomore, secretary; and Adam Fisher, rising senior, treasurer.

In addition to the election of officers, the business of the meeting consisted of a discussion of whether dues for the local chapter should be collected through the business office at registration. Action was taken favoring this method of collection, and in the future a fee will be collected from all chemical engineering students at registration. This system is used by the other three student engineering societies.

The meeting of the institute Tuesday was the first business meeting of the group this quarter.

At the present time there are about 25 members of the local student branch of the institute, and the officers report that an unusual amount of interest is being shown in the work of the group.

Baptists To Hear Speakers

Dr. W. L. Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest College, and M. L. Braun will be the special speakers at the Baptist church Sunday, April 20. Dr. Poteat will speak at the morning services at 11:00 on the subject of "The Prohibition Question." At the night service M. L. Braun will deliver an illustrated lecture on China.

Good Friday Services

At the Chapel of the Cross, Good Friday will be observed by services at 10:30 a. m., 12 to 3 p. m., and 5:15 p. m.

On Easter Day, the Holy Communion will be celebrated at both 8 a. m. and 11 a. m. In the evening, at 8 p. m., a cantata will be sung by the choir, under the direction of Mr. N. O. Kennedy.

Convention Will Be Held Here May 10 To Organize State Student Federation

Action Proposed Some Time Ago Attracts Considerable Attention Throughout State.

PROGRAM ARRANGED

Purpose of Organization Is To Foster Better Understanding And Closer Acquaintance Among North Carolina Students.

Meeting around a council table in the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday and Wednesday, a group of prominent campus leaders made the first definite plans for a convention of college students here on May 10 to organize a North Carolina Federation of Students.

There were present at the meeting John A. Lang and Ray Farris, who were among the original instigators of the movement for a student federation, Will Yarborough, Mayne Albright, Ed Hamer, K. C. Ramsay, and E. C. Daniel, presided over by "Red" Greene, president of the student body.

Since there have been received here a number of letters from state schools indicating an interest in the federation—a reaction from the statements previously sent out from this school—it was planned that the meeting should clear up all points concerning the coming organization and that this detailed information be furnished to the interested officials of other schools.

A considerable part of the first meeting was taken up with an arrangement of the program for the first federation assembly. The following is the tentative schedule: 10 a. m., a meeting of the constitutional committee; 11 a. m., assembly with an address by some local faculty member and a period for the discussion of student problems; 2 p. m., another discussion period and the report of the constitutional committee; 7 p. m., a banquet with the installations of

Chain Stores Are Subject of Hotly Contested Debate

In the second home debate of the year on "Resolved, That the principle of the chain store is detrimental to the best interests of the American public," Billy Uzzell and John Wilkinson argued with the Northwestern debaters Tuesday night in Gerrard hall for fully one hour and a half. The local team, upholding the affirmative side of the query, attacked the principle of the chain store from every angle. Although no decision was rendered, the audience admitted that this was one of the most hotly contested intercollegiate debates held in Chapel Hill within recent years.

The Northwestern team, upholding the negative end of the controversy, defended the principle of the chain store, insisting that its existence in any community brought advantages to the buying public never afforded by the independent merchant. This argument was promptly met, however, by the Carolina team which contended that driving the independent merchant out of business was destructive to the very cornerstone of American democracy.

Tar Heel Topics

With this issue we sing our swan song—the only difficulties being that we couldn't sing a song if we knew one, and that we aren't exactly a swan.

This college-bred business that one hears so much about must be a four-year loaf.

Judging from the high calibre of their performances here, the Jitney Players are worthy of their name—and then some.

The court-room is a big psychology laboratory, according to Dr. Dashiell. Another reason why college students don't like court-rooms.

We learn from a recent issue of Carolina's favorite student daily that "Physics Class Observes Stars." Probably just another fraternity initiation.

Records at the University filtering plant show that an average of 400,000 gallons of water is used daily in Chapel Hill. Didn't realize that water was so popular as a chaser here.

The Curtains Are Drawn Together

With this issue we relinquish control of the Daily Tar Heel. The curtains are being drawn on our editorial act, and it is with mingled regret and relief that we pound a Tar Heel typewriter for the last time in an official capacity.

Last fall we launched the Daily Tar Heel on the first lap of its career with high hopes for its future. Our ambitions were many and our plans elaborate, but experience has taught us that a large proportion of them were more idealistic and visionary than practical. In retrospect our achievements seem pitifully meagre; we have made many mistakes in editorial judgment. On numerous occasions we have regretted that certain editorials and articles were printed in the paper, but once in print the results are inevitable and adequate correction impossible.

Like all conscientious newspaper men, embryo or otherwise, we have attempted to rectify our errors as best we might after they have been committed. We have said things which we later realized were better left unsaid, and we have failed to point out things which should have been pointed out. But we have the satisfaction of knowing that everything we have done has been intended for the best interests of the student body, of the University and of what we considered just. Sometimes our opinions have been changed by experience, and we would not pursue the same course were we to retrace our steps over the period of our editorship. But at least we have been true to what we considered right at the time.

Before we walk off the Tar Heel stage for the last time, we would like to express the commendation which our associates on the staff deserve. They have labored faithfully and well, even unto the lowliest cub reporter. Through their efforts the Daily Tar Heel has become a reality and a success. Theirs is a thankless task, and they are worthy of the highest praise.

The new editor is calling, and we must hasten to make way for him. With animosity to none and the warmest appreciation to those who have lightened our task with helpful suggestions and words of praise, we relinquish the office which we labored for three years to attain and slaved for nine long months to fulfill adequately. Our only regret is that our achievements have not been greater and our blunders less numerous. The editorship of the Tar Heel has been our chief aim in life for the past year, and it is with deep sadness that we turn it over to the guidance of another.

We have the greatest confidence in our successor, and we are sure that he will improve the paper. We have had our moments of triumph and of despair, our fun and our sorrow. We have won at times and lost at others—but we have fought to the best of our ability. The curtains rustle together as our typewriter lapses into silence.

Favors Improved Tennis Courts

A statement was made comparatively recently to the effect that the large audiences at the local theatre were due to lack of activities in which the students might participate. This stipulation is not entirely true, but its veracity in part might well cause the improvement of many assets to which the grounds of the University have fallen heir—namely, the tennis courts.

Judging by the number of students going daily to the courts, tennis has become one of the premier minor sports at Carolina. Naturally, due to the lack of courts, all of these are not able to play at the same time. But, were those unkept courts put into condition, a much larger number would be able to play.

Five courts are kept in excellent condition. These are used by the varsity players. Five more are playable. The remainder are but a mass of rough clay with nets in the centers. However, these clay patches need only the same care as the others to become courts equally as good.

The courts, it is true, are but a minor solution to the problem of idleness. Yet, is there a single factor which would prove a sufficient remedy? As can easily be seen, there is not. Consequently, each detail must be considered in the solving of this problem. And, it is not alone a problem, but a duty as well. It is an obligation of this institution to the students. Whether it is considered as large or small, it is a debt, and in consequence should be paid.—J. H. D., Jr.

Readers' Opinions

NOT UNSUCCESSFUL

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

It may interest you to know that the uprising at the University of Virginia in opposition to the charges made by the theaters in Charlottesville was not unsuccessful, as the article in this morning's Tar Heel seems to assume. At a meeting between theater and University officials, which was the result of this controversy, the former agreed to lower the rates to a standard level.

Lenten Season Daily Devotion

Thursday, April 17 — "Help Through Hope." (Read Luke 9:28-36). Key Verse: "They feared as they entered into the cloud, and a voice came out of the cloud."

Meditation: The cloud was not as fearful as the disciples thought. A voice came out of it showing that God was in it. Few situations are as dark as they at first appear to be. If we enter the situation bravely we find good in it that we had not suspected, and could not see from outside. Resources come to us in hours of crisis. Peter found the iron gate open when he got to it. Dr. Gunsaulus in his early days preached a memorable sermon on the two words: "Nevertheless — afterward." What seems catastrophe may appear far otherwise in the light of subsequent events.

Ye fearful saints, fresh courage take;
The clouds ye so much dread
Are big with mercy and shall break
In blessings on your head.

Prayer: O Thou, who lovest the strength of men and whose rewards are for the seeing eye and the path-finding spirit, inspire us to trust Thee greatly and be unafraid. In days of cloud teach us to listen for a voice that is within the cloud. Amen.

Band In Charlotte

The University band appeared three times in Charlotte yesterday under the auspices of the high school music department there.

In the morning a concert was given in the junior high school, and in the afternoon the group appeared before the senior high school. The final concert last night was also in the senior high school auditorium. All appearances were well received.

THE JITNEY PLAYERS
"A TRIP TO SCARBOROUGH"
A Play with Music
By Richard Brinsley Sheridan

Monday night a small dramatic organization, reminiscent of the strolling players of old England, came to Chapel Hill for an engagement of two days. Headed by its co-founder, Alice B. Keating, who with her husband, the late Mr. Bushnell Cheney, originated this unique group seven years ago, the Jitney Players are touring the south for the first time. Due to the fact that a former member of the Carolina Playmakers, Shepperd Strudwick, is included among the cast, their arrival was looked forward to with more than the usual anticipation which is felt for such events in our village. Alice B. Keating (Mrs. Bushnell Cheney) made a special trip here in order to appear in the theatre where her fellow actor was trained.

The excellency of the performance of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's "A Trip to Scarborough" was deserving of a packed house, but only a fair number of the local patrons were in attendance. However, the enthusiasm and appreciation of those present seemed to inspire the actors to do their best. An ovation, bespeaking honest admiration and friendship was given Shepperd Strudwick when he walked on to the still familiar boards in the role of Tom Fashion. The warmth of this early demonstration was prevalent throughout the whole of the performance. David Elliott, as Lord Foppington, gave the most outstanding and finished performance of the evening. His portrayal of the typical pre-Victorian coxcomb showed a keen understanding and sympathy for the character. His enunciation and gestures indicated the theatrical experience which he has acquired since he ran away from his home in Australia in order to join a traveling stock company. His occasional relapses into almost modern delivery in order to point a particularly good line was evidence of his insight into the reactions of an American audience. He was given a prolonged applause when he made his exit at the end of his best scene, the dressing room scene in Act I.

Mr. Strudwick, as the dashing young Tom Fashion, was an ideal juvenile hero. His acting throughout indicated the remarkable advancements which he has made over the old "Shep" whom we once saw so often on the Playmaker stage. We must digress long enough to wish him a long and continued success in his chosen field.

Had Sheridan been able to foresee that the part of Miss Hoyden was to be played by such a charming actress as Miss Ada Cafagna, we feel certain that he would have introduced the character much earlier in the play. Alice B. Keating and Harrison Dowd gave the most finished performances of the actors who carried the sub-plot, and were admirably supported by capable performers in the other parts. The graceful movements of Miss Keating gave a subtlety and charm to a character which the critics in 1777 termed "crude and licentious." Each member of the cast deserves individual notice for their work, but such is impossible; we must content ourselves with the statement that the acting of the whole cast was praiseworthy and deserving of the highest commendation accorded to any company which has appeared in Chapel Hill in a great many years.

The settings and costumes are the products of an artistic designer, whose artistry is surpassed only by his cleverness in adjusting himself to peculiar conditions under which the Jitney Players work. The direction by Arthur Sircom showed an intelligent understanding of Sheridan and of the period in which he lived. On the whole, the performance in every detail was the most excellent and entertaining which has been offered to local lovers of the theatre in many seasons.

"THE WONDER"
By Susanna Centlivre

The Jitney Players offered as their second presentation at the Playmaker theatre Susanna Centlivre's "The Wonder." The audience was much larger than the one on Monday night, undoubtedly because of the success of "A Trip to Scarborough." "The Wonder" is an ingenious comedy of the eighteenth century, the wit and charm of which is equally as popular today as when it was first presented at Drury Lane in 1714.

Shepperd Strudwick played Don Felix (the role in which Mr. Garrick closed his eminently successful career in 1776), the intensely jealous lover, with adroitness and understanding. The character was one well-suited to Mr. Strudwick since it gave him the opportunity of portraying ambidextrously the romantic admirer and the jealous lover. His sweeping strides, flashing eyes, and well modulated voice made him a convincing Iberian lover. Miss Alice B. Keating played the difficult role of Violante, the often doubted but constantly true sweetheart, in a manner pleasing to the most discriminating theatre-goer.

Mr. Harrison Dowd and Miss Francesca Bruning carried the sub-plot excellently. Mr. Dowd was especially good in his delightful asides as well as in his occasional songs. Miss Ada Cafagna in her impish characterization of Violante's none too moral maid was most amusing and Mr. Richard Skinner as Lissardo kept the audience in an uproar continuously. The riotous scene where the two maids are fighting over the compromised Lissardo would provoke laughter from the most fastidious of modern audiences. Mr. David Elliott and Mr. Harvey Fite played their roles as the planning fathers with sympathy for such unsympathetic types. If there were flaws in the remainder of the supporting cast they were hard to discern.

Entertaining as are their productions, the complete charm of the Jitney Players cannot fully be appreciated by those who have not met the members in person and realized the sincerity with which they are striving toward an artistic ideal.

Utrecht Professors Visit Herman Staab

Dr. G. C. Hirsch and Dr. W. P. Covell have been visiting Chapel Hill for the last two days, being on their way to Charlottesville to attend the meeting of the congress of the Association of American Anatomists. They were the guests of Professor and Mrs. Herman Staab.

Dr. Hirsch is professor of zoology at the University of Utrecht, Holland, and is a fraternity brother of Professor Staab. Dr. Covell is a member of the research staff of the Millbanks fund for study of infantile paralysis. They are at present from Washington University, St. Louis, where they are professors in the department of cytology.

While in Chapel Hill the two gentlemen visited the department of biology and medical science of the University. They were greatly impressed with the work and facilities here, and were delighted with the welcome they received.

Annual Net Tournament Will Start This Morning

29 Entries Here From Six Different Colleges; Yeomans Will Defend Singles Title for Carolina.

The annual North Carolina tennis tournament will get under way this morning with 29 of the state's best players, representing six different colleges and universities, here for the contest. Duke, N. C. State, Wake Forest, Lenoir-Rhyne and Davidson will attempt to wrest the singles and doubles titles from Carolina which were won in last year's tourney, and present indications point to an exciting contest.

The first round of singles will start this morning at 10 o'clock, and this afternoon a round of singles and doubles will be run off, beginning at 2 o'clock. Play will continue through Saturday, with finals coming Saturday afternoon.

Ed Yeomans, who showed up exceedingly well against the Davis Cup players at Pinehurst, and who was champion last year, will again defend the singles title. He will also be teamed with Captain Merritt in the doubles. Most of Carolina's hopes are placed on these two men, for the remainder of the Carolina entries are mostly untried rookies.

Singles favorites are Yeomans; Frank of Duke, last year's runner-up; Phillips, who is slated number 1 on the Duke team; and Captain Johnston of Davidson.

Outstanding doubles players are Yeomans and Merritt of Carolina; Johnston and Halverstadt of Davidson; Frank and Rogers, and Phillips and Meyer, of Duke.

The players are paired as follows: Yeomans, U. N. C., with Clemmer, L.-Rhyne; Rogers, Duke, with Baggs, U. N. C.; DeHines, L.-R., with Frank Fletcher, W. F.; Liskin, U. N. C., with Curtis, Duke; Fred Fletcher, W. F., with Frank, Duke; Fain, Davidson, bye.

Johnston, D., with Creech, L.-R.; Vernon, W. F., with Poe, D.; Phillips, Duke, with McLean, D.; Dubois, D., with Wilton Vipard, N.C.S.; Hendlin, N.C., with Lesley Vipard, N. C. S.; Eggleston, W. F., with Graham, U. N. C.; Halverstadt, D., with Farris, Duke; Merritt, U. N. C., with Warren, N. C. S.; Brannon, N. C. S., bye.

For the preliminaries, Yeomans of Carolina was seeded No. 1, Phillips of Duke No. 2, Halverstadt of Davidson, No. 3, and Merritt of Carolina No. 4.

Carolina 7; Davidson 2

Taking four out of six of the singles and all of the three doubles matches, Carolina scored an easy 7-2 victory over the Davidson netmen here yesterday afternoon. Every match except two went to Carolina in straight sets.

In the number one singles Yeomans (C) defeated Captain Johnston (D) 6-0, 6-2. Halverstadt (D) won from Captain Merritt (C) 3-6, 6-3, 6-0. Merritt got off to a good start, but weakened on his defense and let his man get through with the winning sets. Hendlin (C) defeated DuBose (D) 6-1, 6-1. Liskin (C) defeated Fain (D) 6-0, 6-3. Poe (D) won from Graham (C) 6-1, 6-4. Baggs (C) won from McLean (D) 6-4, 6-2.

PENN STATE TO SEND POWERFUL TRACKMEN HERE

Twenty-Two Best Stars Entered For Intersectional Meet Saturday; Baseball With V. P. I. As Doubleheader.

Penn State, one of the leading potentates of the eastern track world, will send its 22 best performers against the University here Saturday in an effort to topple the Tar Heel record of no losses in dual meets for eight years.

The Carolina-Penn State meet which will probably be the biggest intersectional track meet to be held in the south this year, will get under way at 2 o'clock, and finish at 3:45, in time for the beginning of the Carolina-V. M. I. baseball game, second event on the big doubleheader.

The Penn Staters mean business, if their entry blanks, which arrived yesterday, are to be taken seriously. With but few exceptions each of the 22 stars entered is to take part in but one event, which means, of course, that each man will be at his top form.

Of 12 men entered for the six sprints and runs from the 100-yard dash on up to the gruelling two-mile, only Darlington is to double up, and that will be in the 100 and 220 dashes, which is done ordinarily.

McDowell will double in both hurdles, Captain Mobley will do both broad jump and pole vault, Funke will double in high hurdles and broadjump, and the triple-threat star Shawley will try his hand at throwing all the weights. Otherwise it is a case of a man in each event.

The Tar Heel coaches are grooming their best stars to compete against the invaders, from the record-breaking Charlie Farmer on down to the reserves, and every indication is that the Tar Heels will be able to use full strength Saturday.

TAR HEELS LOSE THIRD STRAIGHT

Carolina Drops Game to V. M. I. 9-3; Whitehead Leads in Batting.

The Tar Heels dropped another tri-state league game when V. M. I. won a 9-3 meet Tuesday afternoon at Lexington. Carolina made its only threat in the third when it scored twice on two doubles and a single. Whitehead, Tar Heel shortstop, led the batting with three hits out of four trips to the plate.

Noble, Cadet pitching ace, relieved Williams in the fourth and held the Tar Heels to a scratch single during the remainder of the game. Biggs of V. M. I. made the only home-run of the game when he clouted out a four-base hit in the sixth. His teammate Hull added a triple in the same inning, while another Cadet, Gillespie, accounted for the other three-base hit.

Coach Ashmore used three Tar Heel hurlers in an attempt to stem the winning V. M. I. tide, but to no avail. Shields, Fleming and Longest faced the V. M. I. batters, with Shields being credited with the loss.

The five runs amassed by the Cadets in the first frame proved the margin of victory, but they bunched hits in the sixth to account for three more runs.

This was the second tri-state win of the season for V. M. I.

Speed Kings in Meet Here

Pictured above are the rival coaches and several stars who will match speed and performances when the Penn State and Carolina track teams clash here Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in what is expected to be the South's biggest intersectional test this season.

Beta Theta Pi Wins

Behind the steady pitching of Waddell, the Beta Theta Pi team shut out Sigma Phi Sigma 3-0 yesterday afternoon.

Farris pitched a good game for the losing team, although his support was not of the best. He used a fast ball that gave the Beta batters plenty of trouble.

Race knocked a home-run in the last inning with nobody on, the ball going through both the second baseman and the right fielder.

Intramural Wrestling

The intramural department announces that all entries in the coming wrestling tournament must be in by Friday night.

Athletes Win Passes

As a result of points scored in the Georgia Tech relays the following track men have received a month's pass to the Carolina theatre: Weil, Gay, Nims, Stafford and Lowry. This raises the total number of men having passes to fifteen. Those who had scored enough points before the relays to earn a pass were Arnold, Bagby, Baucom, Farmer, Barkley, Brown, Slusser, Perry, Adkins and Manager J. J. Alexander.

At this stage of the season it is necessary to score as many as 11 points in all the meets together to get a pass. As the season progresses the requirement will be raised so as to place a premium on extra effort on the part of those who may be good enough to score consistently. It is necessary to score at least three points every two meets in order to retain the pass.

SIDELIGHTS

by Sports Editor

ALL OF THE Tar Heel teams saw action last week-end, but reports of the majority of them were received too late to be published in Sunday's issue. Carolina's first place in the Tech Relays lends even more prestige to the Blue and White and raises the prospects for the meet with Penn State. The baseball team somewhat made up for its overwhelming Maryland loss, 14-1, by taking the Cavaliers in tow, 8-5.

CHARLIE FARMER featured twice in the century dash when he lowered the Tech Relay's record for that event to 9.8. The former mark of 10 had been equaled by Charlie in every Tar Heel meet this year. The Associated Press sports writer says: "Farmer, a tall, lithe runner, making his first varsity appearance this year, stepped off his trial heat in record-breaking time and repeated the performance in the finals of the century sprint against the best speedsters the south could offer. Percy Brown, Louisiana State, Southern Conference champion, and Ed Hamm, veteran Georgia Tech ace, failed to place in the final event."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS further credited Farmer for the largest share of the honors in the record-breaking victory in the half-mile relay for conference teams. Farmer carried the Blue and White from second position in this event to first. The quartet of Slusser, Gay, Nims and Farmer finished the relay in 1:29.06 as compared with the old record of 1:22.1, formerly held by Florida.

GROUNDS for a new gymnasium have been surveyed and several sites seem to be under consideration. Although no funds are available at present, officials are optimistic (rumor).

STATE'S WIN over Duke was perhaps the most outstanding event in North Carolina sport circles for the past week-end. Four home runs featured the game. Ernie Jenkins, Duke hurling ace, was credited with a loss, although only one hit was made off of him. Jenkins relieved McKeithan in the seventh when the count was tied 5-all.

The answer is— flavor!

WHY are Kellogg's Corn Flakes the most popular ready-to-eat cereal in the world? Matchless flavor is the answer!

Just pour milk or cream into a brimming bowl of these crisp and golden flakes tomorrow. An ideal dish to enjoy late at night. Delicious and easy to digest.

Ask your fraternity house steward or your favorite campus restaurant to serve Kellogg's—the original Corn Flakes.

Kellogg's CORN FLAKES

The most popular cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include ALL-BRAN, Pep Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles, and Kellogg's Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—the coffee that lets you sleep.

Di Senate Resolves To Build up Society

Unusual interest was called forth in the Di Senate Tuesday night when, in response to an appeal made by President Rector in his inaugural address, a bill was introduced which read: "Resolved, That the Di Senate is threatened with destruction and that some stimulant be created to arouse interest." To allay fears of some senators that knowledge of the senate's condition would reflect to its discredit on the campus, however, the bill was revised to read: "Resolved, That the Di Senate should undertake an immediate program of rejuvenation." Senators Williams, Dratler, and Wood ably defended the bill, which passed with little difficulty. A committee was also appointed to consider the suggestions which had been made on the floor of the senate and any others brought to their notice in this connection.

Announcement was made that on next Tuesday night the last and only initiaton meeting of the quarter will be held. It was also announced that pins of the society are now available to members upon payment of $6.

Phi Favors Bailey

At the regular meeting of the Philanthropic Assembly Tuesday night the motion "Resolved, That the Philanthropic Assembly go on record as favoring Josiah W. Bailey as the Democratic nominee for the position of United States senator from North Carolina" was carried by a large majority. The debate soon settled into a Bailey versus Simmons argument and the speaking was very heated on both sides. Frequent reference was made to the behavior of Simmons during the presidential campaign of 1928 and many condemned him for "deserting the party which had thrust greatness upon him." Reference was also made to both men's record of service in the Democratic party and, the time for the duration of the meeting having expired, a vote was taken and it was found that the assembly favored Bailey by a two-to-one majority.

Upon a motion by Representative Speight, the assembly voted to give a dance at some time during the spring quarter.

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS WILL ELECT OFFICERS

The election of officers of the University student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will be held at the regular meeting this evening at 7:15 in room 319, Phillips hall.

In addition to the business of electing officers, the program of the meeting will consist of a short illustrated talk by Professor E. G. Hoefer, head of the department of mechanical engineering, and phonographic reproductions of messages from the president and secretary of the national society to the members of the organization.

Mr. Hoeffer, who is faculty advisor of the local student branch of the society, will speak on the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the national society which was held in New York and Washington recently. Mr. Hoeffer will illustrate his talk with numerous slides showing scenes at the celebration of the golden anniversary of the founding of the society.

The phonographic messages which will be reproduced are those which were prepared by the national officers for presentation at meetings of members of the society who were unable to attend the national convention.

hall on Friday night the final debate for the Aycock Memorial Cup will be held between the two teams surviving the elimination series. Dean Addison Hibbard will preside over this meeting, assisted by E. R. Rankin as secretary. The judges are to be N. W. Walker, D. D. Carroll, C. T. McCormick, R. D. W. Connor, and H. W. Odum.

Following the speeches, the presentation of the Aycock Cup to the winning team will be made by H. H. Williams and the awarding of cups and medals to the winners in the track meet and tennis tournament will be done by R. E. House.

Upon the conclusion of the exercise in Gerrard hall the visitors will be informally entertained at a reception in the gymnasium.

As is the usual practice on such occasions, the Y.M.C.A. will serve as general headquarters and as an information bureau during High School Week. Spencer hall, the woman's building, will be used as a rest room for visiting ladies.

The 224 young speakers comprise the representations of 56 high schools. The girls, numbering 115, will be entertained in the homes of faculty members and townspeople. Fraternity houses and dormitories will provide sleeping places for the 109 boys. Plans are being made to provide boarding facilities for all the visitors in Swain hall.

gence tests of this particular institution with a grade of 90 or better. This college Dr. Knight facetiously labels Utopia college.

Such a policy, according to the article, would be in effect a return to the system of the seventeenth century when Yale and Harvard ranked their students according to their family rating: "Privilege and the rights of rank would be restored and the students would be classified, assigned cubicles in the dormitories and listed on the roll of the college, not alphabetically, nor by any other simple democratic device, but according to their intelligence quotients."

officers and any unfinished business.

According to the proposed constitution, the executive branch of the federation is to include a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and executive council, elected annually. The council is to be composed of the regular officials and three men appointed by the president.

Delegates to the federation assembly, to be elected in whatever manner is suitable to the particular institution concerned, are to be apportioned on the basis of actual student body membership as are the dues of the federation.

In order that the program might be completed with the greatest speed and facility, President Greene appointed several committees to assume certain definite responsibilities in planning the convention.

He appointed, in addition to himself, John Lang and Ray Farris on the local constitutional committee. This group, under the direction of Lang, will also see that invitations to the assembly and a letter carrying the result of this meeting are sent to all the senior colleges in the state, namely: Asheville Normal, Atlantic Christian, Catawba, Davidson, Duke, E. C. T. C., Elon, Flora McDonald, Greensboro, Guilford, Lenoir-Rhyne, Meredith, N. C. C. W., Queens, Rutherford, Salem, State, Wake Forest, and W. C. T. C.

As to the admission of junior colleges to the federation, the proposed constitution states that this matter shall be left to the discretion of the assembly.

The finance committee, as selected by Greene, is Will Yarborough and Mayne Albright.

An entertainment committee, Ed Hamer, Clyde Dunn, and E. C. Daniel, will make arrangements for receiving the visitors in addition to planning the banquet for the night session.

The convention publicity committee includes E. C. Daniels and K. C. Ramsay. Each committee has the privilege of selecting assistants for its work.

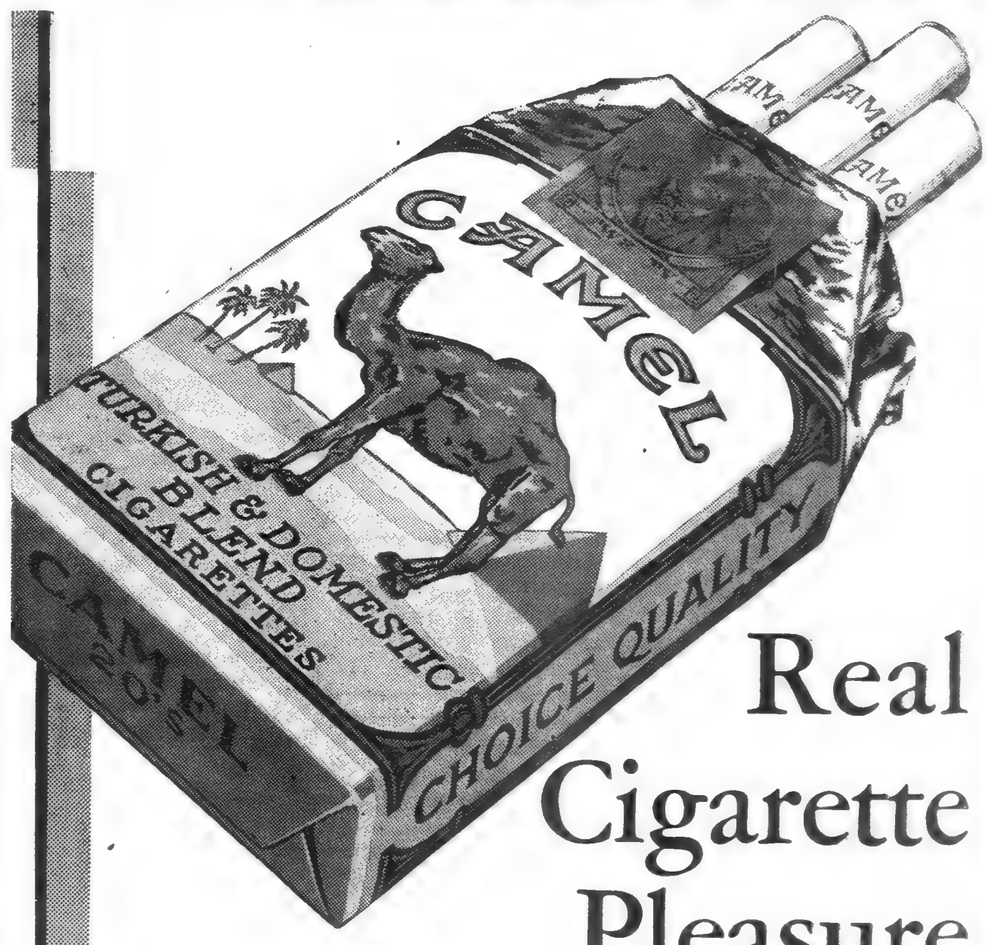
fury. The low, threatening clouds grew darker and the distant rumble of thunder came nearer and louder. The darkness was complete and the lights of the car only slightly penetrated the gloom.

After settling myself in the seat as comfortably as possible under the circumstances, I ventured to get a closer scrutiny of my companion. I beheld a man of perhaps 25 years whose features were rugged and stern: a thick brow over deep-set eyes which seemed to give forth a pearcing gleam, a low forehead deeply marked by a vivid scar which sloped from the middle to the right eye-brow, a sharp nose, and thin pale lips.

The driver spoke not a word but guided the car quickly out of town along the highway. He had hardly left the town before he gave the car plenty of speed heedless of the wet and slippery roads and sharp curves. On sped the car whipping around curves with no slackening of speed. I settled deeper into my seat expecting any minute to feel the car skid off the road and over an embankment.



Out of the mist appeared the rear light of a car ahead. I waited for the driver to slow down, but he only edged to the left and raced on. As he cleared the car, he pulled his car to the right so quickly that the tires skidded, almost turning the car around. The face of the driver showed not a sign of concern or excitement as he again sped on.

After I had calmed myself over the driver's recklessness, I noticed that the air in the car was too warm and suffocating. As I started to lower the glass in the door, the handle dropped off. I reached to find it when my hand encountered the cold butt of a revolver. I experienced a chill along the spine as I looked down to discover a large revolver and also a hunting knife protruding from the pocket of the door. With shaking fingers I again felt for the handle when the driver growled, "Find it when I stop." Nor long had I to wait, for at that moment we were entering Sanford.

The car stopped in front of the theatre, and I stepped out. A brief search produced the handle, which had lodged behind the seat. "Thanks so much for the ride," I said withdrawing. For the first time I experienced a relief which comes only after terrible suspense. But, nevertheless, I was in Sanford safe and sound.

Real Cigarette Pleasure

WHY BE SATISFIED with less smoking pleasure when for the same price you can have the luxury of Camels?

Camels stand alone. If you merely want to puff, anything will do. But if you want to know the true delight of smoking—to enjoy the mild, mellow fragrance of superbly blended Domestic and Turkish tobaccos, brought to perfection by the most scientific methods of manufacture but with none of the delicacy of its natural goodness lost or spoiled by over-treatment—then Camel is the cigarette for you.

You'll find in Camels all the exquisite enjoyment that can be packed into a smoke.

NEW STAFF WILL TAKE CHARGE OF DAILY TAR HEEL

All Selections Are Tentative, And Tryouts Will Be Held To Choose Men Best Fitted.

With this issue of the paper the tentative organization of the new staff becomes operative. Jack Dungan, who was selected managing editor by the Publications Union Board last night, assumes his official duties with the Tuesday's issue.

Three associates have been selected—B. C. Moore, J. C. Williams and K. C. Ramsay. Moore and Williams served during the past year as assistant editors while Ramsay served as city editor. Moore will head the editorial board. Instead of assistant editors, an editorial board will be selected. The members of this board will consist of J. Holmes Davis, Jr., editorial writer; Joe Jones, columnist; H. J. Galland, columnist; Frank J. Manheim, feature editor; Edna Morrisette, editorial writer; Moore Bryson, dramatic editor; Robert Hodges, editorial writer; and Henry Anderson, editorial writer.

Browning Roach is to head the sports staff and will be assisted by Jack Bessen.

The city editors will be E. C. Daniel, Jr., G. E. French, J. G. Hamilton, Jr., J. M. Little, W. A. Shulenberger, Sherman Shore and Elbert Denning.

In selecting the editorial board the editor stated that all selections were tentative, but that no new men would be added to the board until the results of tryouts now being held are announced.

Tryouts for places on the reportorial staff will begin Sunday night and continue for a week.

John Bullock To Head German Club

John Bullock of Rocky Mount was elected president of the German Club for next year at a meeting of the club members held in Gerrard hall at 1:30 o'clock yesterday. W. B. Snow of Hendersonville was named vice - president and "Stick" Skinner of Greenville assistant secretary and treasurer. Will Yarborough of Louisburg continues in his capacity as secretary and treasurer.

As formerly, little interest was taken in the election, and there was no opposition to the nominations. The new president is also president of the interfraternity council, manager of baseball, monogram club, and is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. The retiring officers are George Race, president; Julian Palmore, vice-president; and Mayne Albright, assistant secretary and treasurer.

The final dances of the German Club will be held June 10, 11 and 12 in the Tin Can. The club now has a membership of about 300. Applications for membership are made preceding each set of dances, and are passed on by an executive committee before being accepted.

STUDENTS MAKE BETTER GRADES ON FEWER CUTS

Dr. Dashiell Finds That Optional Attendance Tends To Lower Marks Made By Students.

Many have been the conjectures and opinions voiced recently in regard to the relative advantages and defects of the system of optional attendance until recently in force on the campus. Dr. Dashiell of the psychology department, becoming interested in the question, has tabulated results based on a study of the records of individuals taking Psychology I and II. He declares, however, that observation of attendance results had no subjective influence upon him in the giving of grades. The table is as follows:

Term grade:	A	B	C	D	F
Absent (I)	.8	1.3	2.3	5.1	6.5
Absent (II)	.3	1.8	2.2	4.5	4.2

There are two interpretations to be placed upon these results. The many absences may have caused the low grades, or the low-grade students are perhaps the ones prone to take too many absences.

A further interesting fact brought out by Dr. Dashiell is that, although the lecturer in the courses referred to above was lecturing definitely and exactly from a text book written by himself, the better students seem to have profited from the muchly maligned lecture system.

It is hoped that similar results may be obtained from other classes to confirm the evidence.

Engineers Visit Dam

Last Monday, under the direction of Thorndike Saville, professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering the graduate class in waterpower engineering visited the largest earth fill dam in the world.

This dam, which is near Columbia, S. C., is over 200 feet high and more than a mile and a half long. When completed it will develop 200,000 horsepower.

Dr. Henry Announces Fraternity Averages

Dr. G. K. G. Henry, assistant registrar, announced yesterday the fraternity and academic averages for the winter quarter of this year.

The fraternity average was 3.24 as compared to the average of the fall quarter, 3:32. The academic average was 3.33 as compared to 3.48 for the fall quarter. More than half of the fraternities achieved a higher than academic average for last quarter.

The ten highest fraternities are, in order: Acacia, Sigma Delta, Pi Beta Phi, Zeta Psi, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Sigma Phi, Chi Omega, Phi Kappa Delta, Sigma Nu and Pi Kappa Alpha.

The grades of professional students were not taken into account in the reckoning for the quarter's work.

Williams Addresses Mathematics Group

At a meeting of the mathematics seminar Wednesday afternoon, Professor Horace Williams, head of the department of philosophy, spoke on the relation of mathematics to philosophical and other theories.

In his talk, Professor Williams presented an analogy between three branches of mathematics and the three systems of philosophy which he has been working on for a period of ten years.

Comparing the three systems of philosophy to three branches of mathematics Mr. Williams drew an analogy between arithmetic and the philosophy of authority, geometry and the scientific system of philosophy, and algebra and the philosophical system of philosophy.

STUDENT SECTION IS ORGANIZED OF SOCIAL SERVICE

Plan Is To Establish Council In Each College and University In State.

At the North Carolina Conference for Social Service, which closed its annual meeting April 15, in Charlotte, a special student section of the conference was organized. This student section at its first meeting had a total of 54 delegates present, 14 boys and 40 girls.

Besides attending all of the meetings of the conference, the newly organized student section held sessions of its own each day. At the last meeting of the section, the group was formally organized and adopted as its name, the North Carolina Student Council for Social Progress.

The plan is that there be a council in each university and college in the state, which councils are to be composed of all students who show interest in social affairs on the campuses as well as in the state. These councils will not only be expected to promote the social welfare on the different campuses, but also to keep posted on all social matters in the state. These groups will conduct their own programs on their separate campuses and will meet annually with the larger state group.

At the last meeting of the student group the following officers were chosen: Eloise Banning, N.C.C.W., state chairman; Beverly Moore, U.N.C., vice-chairman; Christine Rosebro, Queens College, secretary; H. F. Comer, Chapel Hill, advisor.

Those delegates going from the University were: Prof. H. D. Meyer, H. F. Comer, Veverly Moore, and T. R. Karriker.

TROUPE STARTS ON TOUR TODAY

Playmakers Will Present Three One-Act Plays On Western Trip.

The Carolina Playmakers leave today for a tour of cities and towns in the western part of the state. Carrying with them the same casts that made the recent southern tour, they will produce the same plays presented on that trip. These plays are: "The No 'Count Boy" by Paul Green, "Job's Kinfolks" by Loretto Carroll Bailey, and "Magnolia's Man" by Gertrude Wilson Coffin.

"The No 'Count Boy" is a fantastic negro comedy dealing with the attempts of a colored minstrel to win a dusky maiden by his fabrications about distant and enchanting lands.

The stern struggle of a family of mill workers forms the basis of Loretto Bailey's play. Here the younger generation is fighting for release, the mother fighting a crushing system. "Truly these are Job's kinfolks."

Of a much lighter vein, "Magnolia's Man" centers about the attempts of a spinster to get a husband. The scene is laid in a mountain village back in the early days of the twentieth century. The plot provides a good deal of comedy.

The casts are as follow:

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

You can never supplant judgment by regulation, for it is only through experience that we learn.—Col. C. M. Young.

PURLOINED PARAGRAPHS

Any fat lady could tell the naval conference that attempts to reduce merely make things worse.—Washington Post.

And the funny part of it is that the Russians who favor the religionless Sunday are not addicted to golf. —South Bend Tribune.

Salutatory

"We are made of the dust, but so are the stars."

To whatever far horizons our unvoiced aspirations direct us, we know that the way is not strewn with roses. We can but set our course, and in the following of it strive to keep our vision clear.

We believe in the moral and economic stability of this State, and that in trial and emergency, as its days are, so shall its strength be.

We believe in the mission of this University—and that upon its anvil the fine metal of youth is being hammered and fashioned for service and usefulness.

We believe in the student body gathered here—that it is no group of ultra-sophisticated cynics and philanderers, but an army of recruits in training for all the high and real adventures of life.

We believe in all youth everywhere—that out of the struggles and sacrifices of each successive generation is evolved a fitter finer type, and that just now we are at the beginning of a mighty marshalling of the hosts of those who scorn all preachments of futility and defeatism, and who see in the entrenched power of evil not an invincible force to be surrendered to, but a challenge which gives sustaining and inspiring purpose to all the finer energies of heart and soul.

On High School Debating

The normally detached and disinterested person, some years removed from the high school degree, places the usual debating practice in the same category with those renditions of "I Have a Rendezvous With Death" which he was wont to deliver with spasmodic gusto and sideline prompting in the daily assembly.

Undoubtedly the practice has its good points and objectives else the costly and state-wide contests would not be urged and continued. Obviously, debating does something towards developing poise and social approach in a young person. Too, the fact that the participants enter into the project with a notable amount of enthusiasm, proves that it is not devoid of benefit or pleasure. Debating teams have been known to have been accompanied by school supporters who whooped and otherwise exercised their vocal organs almost as much as a cheering section in a football stadium. Whether it is just healthy school spirit or genuine interest in the debate cannot be exactly determined. It is a fact that men are not so easily stirred today as they were in Webster's time when that gentleman moved congress to tears with his speech in behalf of Dartmouth College when he said, "It is but a little college but there are those who love it."

More often than not a high school debater is chosen for his oratorical power rather than for his wisdom or general understanding of his subject. What he gets from the discussion is merely incidental. More often than not the team's advisor is responsible for the fine arguments advanced. The debate rarely ever works up interest in the topic under discussion. The "steam" behind his words, the effort he puts forward and times he expends on the work is almost always prompted by a sense of competition.

What has a debater to his credit after a contest? Possibly a loving cup, a pleasant trip, and a few handshakes with impressive personages added to his collection for future reference and to lend some delectable points to his conversations on his return. And what has he to his discredit? Nothing more serious than the fact that he has delayed a number of college professors from their evening meal.—R. L.

Criminal Codes

A short time ago a judge in Ohio sentenced two young women to a reformatory for terms of one to five years, and five to ten years for distributing communist literature. Although the judge expressed his sympathy for the defendants and although the law wallows a minimum sentence of one year, he considered the offense of such nature as to make severe sentences advisable.

No doubt the judge was carrying out his duty as a judiciary; for such action we comment him, though we feel that he saw his duty in a rather stern light in imposing such severe punishment. It is for the state law which prescribes such punishment that we reserve our anathema. These two women were sentenced under a criminal syndicalism law, a product of the fanaticism which followed the war. It is deplorable, though perhaps excusable, that such a law should ever have come into existence. That it should still remain is inexcusable.

In imposing the sentence the judge said: "We owe it to George Washington and Thomas Jefferson to maintain the present form of government." To our way of thinking there is something distinctly out of taste in connecting the names of Washington and Jefferson with this prosecution. This sort of thing harks back to a time which is popularly conceived as antidating the birth of the American Republic. The popular fallacy even goes so far as to assume that such practices of suppression were terminated with that beginning. Obviously the popular conception is not to be relied upon indiscriminately.

We offer no brief for communism or any other "ism," but we protest against a situation which permits fanatical groups to so raise a hue and cry against the propagation of a belief that two women must be committed to penal servitude for long terms because they peacefully distributed a pamphlet, communistic in text.—L. B.

The Campus

By Joe Jones

While watching the Jitney Players perform Monday night our enthusiasm for Sheridan, Shep Strudwick, David Elliot, and Miss Cafagna was depressed only by the fact that there were so many empty seats in the theatre. Of course everybody couldn't know beforehand what a fascinating troupe had come to town, but as we witnessed their "Trip to Scarborough" we couldn't help but feel piqued with that part of the usual Playmaker audience which should have been there to fill the vacant tiers.

We are not writing a review; we are simply agreeing with the rest of the audience that the Jitney Players gave us an evening of extraordinary enjoyment. The various scenes of the play were more like the turning pages of an enchanted picture book than anything we have seen for a long time.

Speaking personally, and sincerely, I know of no group, organization or department on the campus to which I would rather toss boquets than the Playmakers. Whenever I thank my lucky auguries that I came to Chapel Hill to school I do not fail to mention the Playmakers.

They and their work have always appealed to me as something with a soul, if anything may be said to have a soul. Their history is a romance; they are themselves dealers in dreams. Although there may be other departments of the University doing a vaster work, none other has the color and appeal of the Playmakers. Perhaps it is because the results of their handiwork grow right under our eyes.

It seems to me that whoever goes to school here without habitually attending the Playmaker Theatre performances is doing himself a wrong. I am speaking merely as a student whose only connection with the Playmakers is the season ticket I buy each fall. I am sure that hundreds of other holders of tickets feel the same way, that not to attend whatever is presented by the Playmakers is to miss part of an education at Carolina.

Horace H. Williams Is Seminar Speaker

Professor Horace H. Williams, head of the department of philosophy, will speak before the mathematics seminar this afternoon on the subject, "The Relation of Mathematics to Theories."

In his talk, Mr. Williams will discuss the relation of mathematics to all classes of theories, including those of philosophy and psychology

TO BE FRANK

By Frank Manheim

It's swell to be a college student—it gives one a great deal of time to read the periodicals and newspapers and last week there was a great deal of news and comment pertaining to what has been termed "university life."

The most interesting news item was one that received deucedly little publicity—confirming the opinion that many hold about the inefficiency of the "drys" press relations office. In the annual vote of the senior class at Columbia University, presidented by the wet Nicholas Murray Butler, the class overwhelmingly disapproved of drinking, only a little over thirty students admitting that they drink. Had there been the same vote in favor of drinking, the intrepid wet reporters would have probably sent the news broadside through the country. In the same item, it was said that those boys who resent drinking did heartily enjoy and approve "necking." Which is, well . . . .

Something closer to home by way of physical distance was the injunction that was obtained by the authorities of Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate, Tenn. Two professors and their wives and the president of the student body were mentioned in the court order, which prohibited them from "interfering further" with the operation of the University by agitating a strike among students. The strike had been called last week by those mentioned in the injunction and it resulted in the abstentation of more than 415 students from classes. The strike was entered into because four professors had been summarily dismissed when they attempted to organize an investigation and reorganization of the university with a view to raising its scholastic standing. The same day that the injunction was obtained, Belle Livingston of New York, who, when accused of running a speakeasy, retorted with "the address is really my home. It is simply that I like civilized, delightful, joyous people about. I want something of Rabelais, something of Madame de Stael, and the philosophy of "What is It?" and like spirits in my house." When acquitted of the scurrilous charge of maintaining a public nuisance, Miss Livingston cried, "Well, isn't this a silly mess? Good old freedom—let it ring."

In a widely syndicated feature article, a well known writer stated that "the clothes cleaning privilege in almost every big-shot collitch is held as a job by the star senior athlete and pays from $2,500 in the soph year up to 5 G's in the senior." All of which does not hold true here—and which necessarily leads one to believe that the University is not a "big shot collitch" or else Walter Winchell may be wrong.

In a recent what was hoped to be secret report laid before the League of Nations Welfare Committee, the writer of it (an European woman who spent some time in the principle American cities) portrayed the United States as "a country where Prohibition and the jazz age are undermining the foundations of the coming generation, a country where 50 per cent of the population has no religion and where home life is rapidly disappearing." To all of which we add our voice to the multitude's "bunk."

Debaters Chosen

The varsity debate tryout held Wednesday night in 201 Murphey hall resulted in the selection of W. W. Speight, A. V. Loenstein, and H. H. Hobgood. These men will represent the University in the second annual Carolina-Virginia radio debate, which will be broadcast from Raleigh on the night of April 25.

Speight and Loenstein were designated to deliver the two Carolina speeches, Hobgood being assigned the task of rendering the rebuttal arguments.

TOUR TO COMBINE STUDY AND TRAVEL

Unique arrangements have been made by the committee in charge of the University residential tour to France by which it is possible to join the group either as a student or as a tourist, according to announcement here yesterday.

The boat will sail from New York June 4, and will return about September 1. The itinerary includes all the places of greatest interest in western Europe. It will take members of the party to Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, and England.

During the sojourn in Germany the party will have the opportunity of seeing the regular performance of the Passion Play at Oberammergau. This performance is perhaps one of the few survivals of the old 13th century miracle play.

The period of residence will be spent in the university city of Grenoble, France, where courses may be taken for credit at the Universite de Grenoble. College credit will be given by the University of North Carolina for courses taken at Grenoble under the direction of Professor J. C. Lyons of the University of North Carolina faculty.

The tour promises study and travel under the best auspices and companionship. Information and prices may be obtained from Professor J. C. Lyons at Chapel Hill.

Good Friday, April 18, 1930. "Overcoming the World." (Read John 16:25-33).

Meditation: These words sound strange in their setting. It looked as if the world had overcome Jesus. The existing authorities had denied his teaching and now they were about to deprive Him of life. But one thing they had not done—they had not overcome His love for men. For love and faith He was willing to die. His death so vindicated God's love that it has made this day one of joyous solemnity. The cross illumines our hope, shames our doubts and renews our courage. Jesus' living faith and faithful life have made the cross a sign by which men have conquered and have overcome the world.

Prayer: Lord, teach us to overcome. Make us steadfast and immovable servants of Him whom we this day commemorate. May His faith reside in us and the spirit which led Him to the cross descend upon us and fill our hearts with love of God and men. Amen.

A NEW VERSION TO OLD MONKEY-ROPE PROBLEM IS FOUND

A member of the faculty of the mathematics department has recently received from one of his former students a new and complicated version of the old monkey, rope and weight problem, and this one has all the characteristics of the perfect "barbershop problem."

The alumnus admits that he has solved the problem, but he further states that the individual who submitted the problems to him is not yet satisfied. For this reason the problem has been submitted to the math department, which passes it on to the readers of the Tar Heel.

The problem, which is somewhat involved is, as follows: Hanging over a pulley is a rope with a weight at one end and a monkey of equal weight hangs at the other. The rope weighs 4 ounces per foot. The combined ages of the monkey and his mother are 4 years and the weight of the monkey is as many pounds as the mother is years old. The mother is twice as old as the monkey was when the mother was half as old as the monkey will be when the monkey is three times as old as the mother was when she was three times as old as the monkey was. The weight of the rope and the weight is half as much again as the difference between the weight of the weight and the weight of the weight plus the weight of the monkey. What is the length of the rope?

The professor who received the problem states that if anyone so fortunate as to obtain a solution to the problem is urged to communicate with some member of the mathematics staff.

Because some may feel that there is no possible answer to the problem, the faculty member said that there is an answer, and that it is a simple number.

150 HIGH SCHOOL TRACK MEN WILL VIE FOR HONORS

Cream Of State's Performers To Compete In Eighteenth Annual Classic; Charlotte Hi To Defend Title.

16 SCHOOLS REPRESENTED

One hundred and fifty athletes representing the cream of the state's high school performers, coming from 16 different schools, arrived here yesterday for the 18th annual North Carolina high school track championships today.

Field events are to begin at 10:45 o'clock this morning; track events come at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon. The field is regarded one of the largest and strongest to assemble for the annual meets.

Charlotte High, defending champions; Wilmington High and Greensboro high have the largest and aparently strongest delegation, and are ruling favorites.

High Point and a number of other schools, however, rate dark-horse posts and could be regarded as anything but out of the running.

Early season performances of individual high school performers indicate that several records will go down tomorrow. Among those conceded especially good chances of setting new records are Mullis, Charlotte, discus; Goodwin, Greensboro, vaulter; Nicholson, Greensboro, broad jumper; and the Asheville High mile-relay team.

The track meet will be held in connection with the activities of annual High School Week at the University. Other features are the 15th annual North Carolina high school tennis tournament, in which opening rounds were played yesterday and finals will be played tomorrow.

Students Catch Cat And Avoid Bad Luck

Sailors are notorious for their superstition. College students are equally noted for their skepticism. However, as has been said somewhere before, there are exceptions to all rules. Two of Carolina's young hopefuls were rushing home from Durham the other night about 2:30 a. m. when a black cat suddenly ran across the road before their speeding Ford. They stopped immediately and the driver dismounted and gave chase to this omen of bad luck. He ran it under the front cteps of a nearby farm house and by calling "Kitty! kitty!" and other terms known to be seducing to cats he succeeded in enticing the animal from beneath the steps. He then caught it and placed it in his car and brought it to Chapel Hill. This procedure evidently succeeded in frightening away the jinx, for the boys arrived in Chapel Hill without any serious mishap.

KIWANIANS ENTERTAINED BY YOUNG MUSIC PUPILS

The local Kiwanis club met Tuesday night for its regular weekly dinner, in the basement of the Methodist church. The program was featured by several children who are in Mrs. Williams' music school. They ranged in age from six to ten years. Several piano solos and duets were given, and they also furnished vocal music with a special quartet. Although the children were young they gave a program that the Kiwanians praised as the best rendered this year. The club will consider taking them to the intra-club meeting at Mebane in the near future.

Penn State Two-Miler

Paul Rekers (above) holds the I. C. A. A. A. A. two-mile record, and is the leader of the Penn State track stars who will meet Carolina tomorrow. Rekers is entered for the mile run, and probably will be opposed by Barkley of Carolina, former cross country captain and present holder of the high school mile record.

Carolina Loses Four Games In Succession

V. P. I. accounted for the fourth consecutive Carolina loss Wednesday afternoon when they defeated the Tar Heels 5-2 at Blacksburg.

This was the opening game of the Tri-State League for Virginia Poly.

Lufty was the only Tar Heel to record a four base clout in this game, but Hooper and Blythe, Gobblers, accounted for the two V. M. I. circuit hits.

Captain Maus led the Tar Heels in batting with two singles out of four tries.

SIDELIGHTS

by

By Jack Bessen

After one of the most disastrous northern campaigns, on which it dropped five out of six games, the Tar Heel baseball squad arrived home yesterday. The Tar Heels played six games and lost no less than five, including a double-header with the Washington and Lee Generals. Beginning with a 14-1 defeat by the Maryland Old Liners and ending with a 5-2 defeat by the V. P. I. Gobblers, the Tar Heels fell into a bad batting slump. The only time that they played their normal baseball was in the Virginia game when they batted out an 8-5 win over the Cavaliers.

The squad left last Thursday night for a game with the Old Liners at College Park Friday. Wright started the game but was soon sent to the showers under a barrage of runs. Edwards relieved Wright but was also unable to stop the hard-hitting Old Liners. The game ended 14-1.

The team then went to Charlottesville for the first of a three-game series with the Cavaliers. Led by Lufty and Whitehead, the Tar Heels pounded out an 8-5 decision.

Monday saw a doubleheader with the Generals. The first game was cancelled at Chapel Hill last week and so both games were played at Lexington. The Generals, led by Leigh Williams' hitting and pitching, took both ends, 10-2, 7-6. Again Nap Lufty's hitting featured for the Tar Heels.

The squad remained in Lexington over Monday to play the V. M. I. Keydets the following day. The starting pitcher, Shields, was sent to the showers in the first inning under a five-run barrage, and Fleming, who relieved him held the Keydets to one run while the Tar Heels were garnering two. The final score was 6-2.

The final game was played Wednesday with the V. P. I. Gobblers. Edwards started and pitched beautifully for eight innings, at the end of which the score was 2-2. Then the Tar Heels fell apart and the home team took the game 5-2. In this game Coach Jim Ashmore shifted Maus to left field and put Bob Kushner, a sophomore, behind the bat. Kushner certainly covered himself with glory, catching one beautiful game. Bob handled Edwards like a veteran, who mowed down the batters in regular order. In addition to his stellar fielding, "Kush" made one for two at bat. From now on Kushner should see plenty of action behind the bat. Kushner is only a sophomore and has two more years at Carolina; and since Captain Maus graduates this year, Carolina's receiving department will be capably taken care of by the Danville boy.

Another feature of the campaign that brought delight to Coach Ashmore's heart was the consistent hitting of Lufty and Whitehead. Nap, the team's leading hitter, was hitting in the 400's before the trip and his batting on the trip raised his average greatly. Whitehead came out of a short hitting slump and also accounted for many runs.

Charlie Farmer will vie with Rekers for individual honors in the intersectional contest with Penn State on Ememson field tomorrow. Charlie recently set a new Tech Relay record for the century dash. In addition, Farmer runs the 220 yard dash, and is anchor man on the mile and half-mile relay teams.

At one time the chemistry department was located in Person hall.

Person hall, then used for chapel, was burned on February 6, 1877.

BASEBALL GAME AND TRACK MEET HERE SATURDAY

Varsity Nine Plays V. M. I.; Track Men Meet Strong Penn State Team; Both Contests In Afternoon.

Saturday promises to be Bargain day for sport fans at Chapel Hill. The Carolina-Peen State track meet and Carolina-V. M. I. ball game were found to conflict, so University authorities generously scheduled a doubleheader for the price of one track meet at 2 o'clock and baseball game at 4 o'clock, both on Emerson field.

The Penn State entry blanks are in, and from the 22 stars Coach Nate Cartmell has selected to compete here, it seems the Tar Heels are in for a gruelling meet and stand a good chance of dropping their record of no losses in dual meets for eight years.

The 22 Penn State entries represent the cream of the Lion squad, and show at least two stars for every event, many of them outstanding record holders, such as Paul Rekers, I. C. A. A. A. A. two-mile champ.

Moreover, only one man in the track events and four in the fields will double in more than one event, so that the invading stars will be set to give everything they have in the one event in which they are to compete.

The Tar Heel spuad, which showed great form in setting four of six new records at last week's Georgia Tech Relays, is in good shape to the last man, and Coach Bob Fetzer plans to give Penn State a grand battle.

The meet will be announced over the University's broadcasting system, and will be run off with numerous other features designed for the enjoyment of the spectators.

The complete list of Penn State performers by events: Darlington, 100 and 220 dashes; Stookey, 100 yard dash; Hedinger and Flenniken, quarter-milers; Wolfe and Bacham, half-milers; Rekers and King, milers; Messinger, Detwiler and Homm, two-milers; McDowell, high and low hurdles; Fullerton, low hurdles; Funke, high hurdles and broad jump; Palmer and Hammond, high jumpers; Captain Mobley, broad jump and pole vault; Osbeck, pole vault; Shawley, shot, discuss and javelin; Fisher, shot; Musser, javelin.

Route of University Study Tour

The above map shows the itinerary of the University of North Carolina transcontinental study tour to be conducted this summer. The party will be divided into two sections. Students registered for the botany, geology and general science courses will travel with the Natural Science section, leaving Chapel Hill June 7, while those who enroll for sociology, economics, and geology will be assigned to the Social Science section and will leave one day later.

Classes will be met daily except Sunday, during the trip. In addition to the regular college work required, opportunity will be given for observation and field trips in connection with each of the courses and the usual sightseeing features. One of the buses which is to make the tour will come to Chapel Hill soon with all its equipment, in order that the students may inspect its facilities. It will be placed on the campus between Gerrard hall and the Y. M. C. A.

KODAK REPRESENTATIVE INTERVIEWS SENIORS

E. M. Billings, representative for the Eastman Kodak Company, visited the University on Monday in search of men for Eastman employment. Mr. Billings is from the personnel department and is in search of men who are willing to spend their lives in foreign countries. For positions in foreign trade work he wished to see seniors in the school of commerce who have training in Spanish and a knowledge of elementary accounting.

Sit easy in the new Super-Shorts

Buffer heel and toe hose, and garters, also by Wilson Brothers

Thousands upon thousands of college men sat up and took notice, then sat down and took it easy . . . when Super-Shorts were announced.

This ingenious improvement in underwear banished the center seam of ordinary shorts that wedges and binds. A back panel, an exclusive Wilson Brothers innovation, allows generous room for every turn and twist and tug of the body.

Companion of this exclusive comfort is smartness. The fabrics, with shirts to harmonize, will do justice to your taste, will give that inner satisfaction of being thoroughly well groomed.

Ask your Campus haberdasher for Super-Shorts in the Roosevelt and Broadmoor patterns illustrated here . . . and sit easy. Ask too about the Biltmore Blend-Suit with matching shirt of Tubize rayon and the new Wilson Brothers pajamas with the same comfort feature, the Super-Seat.

SCHWENNING TO SPEAK TO CIVIL ENGINEERS TODAY

Dean Braune and Professor Saville Also Attend Engineers' Meet In Greensboro.

Professors G. T. Schwenning, Thorndike Saville and Dean Braune are attending the spring meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Society of Civil Engineers, which is being held at Greensboro.

Mr. Schwenning, who is professor of business administration in the school of commerce, will present a paper before the group this morning on the subject "Corporate Finance and the Engineer." The talk by Mr. Schwenning is directly connected to the general topic being discussed at the meeting, Engineering Contracts and Specifications. During the two days of the meeting, papers covering every phase of the subject in which engineers would be interested will be presented.

Mr. Saville, who is professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering, is secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina section of the Society, and as such is attending the meeting.

Mr. Braune, dean of the school of engineering at the University, attended the meeting held yesterday, but did not remain for those to be held today.

SHIPS DON'T WANT COLLEGIATE BUMS

Men Planning To Work Way Across Atlantic Are In For Hard Time.

Cleveland O., April 17—(IP)—If you have tears prepare to shed them for those ambitious youths who have visions of "bumming their way" across the Atlantic this summer, for if reports are authentic, the high school and college boys planning to work their passage to the other side, when class room doors close again, are going to find themselves out of luck upon approaching the sea employment agencies.

Always considered prizes by youthful adventurers bent on making the horizon their destination, the jobs aboard sea-going ships are so scarce this Spring, according to employment bureau reports, that with white-colared shore workers, too, bidding for their places even experienced seamen are glad to take what they can get.

For that reason the employment men are not handing out jobs to unexperienced men who are just out to see the sights. Not realizing this, students are flooding the shipping and employment offices with applications. Those who can, call at the agencies in person. The others write. Practically all, however, are told that they haven't a chance unless they intend to follow the sea permanently, and then only a slim one.

This one thin hope lies in the possibility that when the great Lakes and river shipping get under way in earnest, the present over-supply of men will be lessened. Public improvement work and farming may also absorb some of the drifters. In either event the boy who aspires to go to sea will have a better chance.

AIRPLANE WILL WAGE WAR UPON LOCAL INSECTS

Aerial Attack Upon Bowling Creek With Paris Green Solution Sponsored by City.

Use of an airplane in dusting a Paris green solution onto swamps and streams near Chapel Hill to abate the mosquito nuisance, is planned by Dr. S. A. Nathan and E. W. Constable, the latter a biochemist of the North Carolina state board of health.

In making the survey of local conditions in June, 1929, Constable found that most of the mosquitoes here were surface feeders in the larvae stage, and experiments have shown that they will be poisoned by Paris green and soapstone dust spread onto the surface of the water in which they live.

Charlie Martindale of Martindale and Fritz, flying from the local airport, have signified a willingness to cooperate at virtually no cost to the city. The experiment has proven successful on a large scale elsewhere in the country.

Plans call for dusting Bowling Creek from a point one mile above the bridge on the old Hillsboro road to a mile below the bridge at the foot of Strowd's hill on the Durham road.

Some swampy areas have been drained, and steps are being taken to cope with flies. The latter, however, breed considerably in leaf mould and will be difficult to fight.

Yale Engineering Students Visitors To Zeppelin Works

Akron, O.—(IP)—Details of the ZRS4, world's largest dirigible airship, under construction for the United States Navy at the Goodyear Zeppelin Corp. hangar at the Akron Municipal Airport, were explained to 80 Yale University engineering students here recently.

As the students, who came here in a special train from Pittsburgh, inspected the 138-foot master ring girder of the new ship, which recently was raised into an upright position in the hangar, Commander Zeno Wicks explained construction details of the aerial dreadnaught, comparing it with the former naval ship, Shenandoah; the present navy ship, Los Angeles, and the German ship, Graf Zeppelin, all of which it eclipses in size and efficiency.

Y OFFICIALS TO BE INDUCTED AT MONDAY MEETING

Ed Hamer And Incoming Cabinet Will Be Inaugurated By "Parson Moss."

The annual inauguration of the newly elected Y officers will be held Monday night in the Y at the time of the usual meetings.

Jimmie Williams, the retiring president, will make a short farewell address which will be followed by a talk by Ed Hamer, the in-coming president. In his talk President-elect Hamer will outline his plans for the coming year. "Parson" Moss, of the local Presbyterian church, will conduct the induction ceremonies. The new officers will take up their positions immediately.

The retiring officers are: Jimmie Williams, president; John A. Lang, vice-president; Joe Eagles, secretary; and Ed Hamer, treasurer. The newly elected officers are: Ed Hamer, president; Sam Gorham, vice-president; Harry Finch, secretary; and F. M. James, treasurer.

All of the cabinets will meet in a joint meeting for the ceremonies, and the presidents of the different cabinets urge that all members be present at the inauguration.

Georgia Tech Gets Guggenheim Fund

Atlanta, Ga., April 18.—(IP)—Three hundred thousand dollars have been given by the Daniel Guggenheim Foundation for the Promotion of Aeronautics, to the Georgia Institute of Technology here for the establishment of an aeronautical engineering school, to be a center for such work in the south.

The gift is the last act of the fund which has given away approximately three million dollars for the promotion of flying in the United States and abroad.

Georgia Tech was picked from 27 southern educational institutions as the most logical place for the aeronautical engineering school.

Some time ago $350,000 was given by the fund to the California Institute of Technology, which was the largest single donation made by the Guggenheim fund.

HIBBARD PRESENTS CUPS TO ACADEMIC CONTEST WINNERS

Academic contest cups were awarded to the winning high schools last night by the extension division of the University in Gerrard hall at the completion of the debates. The presentation of the cups was made by Dean Addison Hibbard.

The interscholastic track championship cup was awarded Charlotte high school, which won the state title in this sport last year also; Charlotte was also victorious in the relay race event held in yesterday's track meet and was awarded a cup for that victory.

Other awards were made to Greensboro high, French contest winner, Durham high, Latin contest winner; and Albemarle, winner of the Spanish contest.

Some Negroes Are Worthy Of Praise Believes Hinshaw

"You know," said Judge C. P. Hinshaw to the writer as the former was working at his April job of taking tax reports, "this business of being judge of the recorder's court gives a fellow a wrong outlook on the negroes, and it takes something like this to right it again and show him that negroes can be as deserving of praise as some can be blamed."

"What do you mean," Judge?"

"Well, sir, here's a man just made out his tax report. Jim! Come over here."

A negro man, appearing to be about 40 years old, stepped nearer the judge. "Yessuh?"

"How old are you?"

"'Bout seventuh-two, ah reckons, boss."

"How many children have you."

"Seventeen, suh. Eight boys an' nine girls."

"Any of 'em dead?"

"Yessuh, two's daid, but seventeen's livin'."

"Ever been sick, Jim?"

'Nosuh, 'cep' when' muh ahm huht once."

"Ever been in court?"

"No suh, 'cep' ah's been a witness."

"You work over on the campus. How long you worked there?"

"Oh ah reckons evaday fo' 'bout thuhtah-two yeahs."

"Now," said the judge to me, "there's a man that's a credit to the community. He's got one of the finest little farms you ever saw—here's the tax report of what's on it. Jim used to come in to a store I ran once, on Saturday nights, with all his children, and for some of them he'd buy a nickel's worth of chewing tobacco and for the one's that didn't chew, a nickel's worth of candy. How many of your children chew, Jim?"

"Oh, 'bout half, ah reckon."

"How old do they start chewing?"

"Well, suh, muh littles' boy, he staht chewin' 'bout when he's bawn, ah reckon — de doctah said 'twan't huht—an' 'en he brothah seen de chewin', and he stahted, too. But ah don' chew none."

WIN AYCOCK TROPHY CUP

Goldsboro high's negative team was awarded the Aycock Memorial cup last night as a result of winning the judges' decision in what assumed the aspects of an all-Goldsboro affair, both negative and affirmative teams of this institution surviving the two preliminaries. This makes the first time since 1926 that two teams of the same school have been pitted against each other in the final debate, Winston-Salem high having set the precedent in that year.

The Goldsboro team, which brought the Aycock cup to its school for the first time since the inauguration of the annual debate contest in 1913, was composed of Eleanor Bizzell and Ezra Griffin. Their school-mate opponents were Edward Outlaw and Billy Crow. Individual medals were awarded to each of the four debaters by the University.

A large crowd of high school and University students were in attendance at the final debate last night, which brought to a close another successful annual high school week. Dean Addison Hibbard of the school of liberal arts presided over last night's colorful affair, and E. R.

Extra Meeting Of Tar Heel

All reporters, city-editors and editorial writers are requested to report to the managing-editor of the Daily Tar Heel between the hours of three and five o'clock this afternoon.

ENGINEERS HOLD ELECTION; HEAR TALK BY HOEFFER

Anniversary of American Society of Mechanical Engineers Observed.

At the meeting of the University student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers held Thursday evening in Phillips Hall, the following officers were elected to serve during the next school year: R. C. Plummer, rising senior, president; Frederick Knoop, rising junior, vice-president; Allen McLean, rising sophomore, secretary; and R. A. Parsley, rising senior, treasurer.

In addition to the election of officers, the program of the meeting consisted of an illustrated talk by Professor E. G. Hoeffer, head of the department of mechanical engineering, on the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the society which was held in Washington recently. Mr. Hoeffer, who attended the meetings in Washington, told of the various events at the convention and showed slides of scenes there.

Phonograph reproductions of talks by officers of the national society were presented at this meeting. These talks were especially prepared by the president and secretary of the national organization for presentation to members of the society who were unable to attend the meeting in Washington.

The fiftieth anniversary meeting of the society was held in both New York and Washington. The first two meetings were held in New York. Then the convention adjourned to Hoboken to witness a pageant representing various scenes in the history of the society, which was founded at Stevens Institute, Hoboken, in 1880.

The convention then adjourned for the week-end, and the last of the series of meetings were held in Washington. At the convention a series of abstracts of papers summarizing engineering work in 16 different geographical divisions of the world were presented. These papers not only told of present engineering work but also estimated what would be the progress of engineering work during the next few years.

"MACBETH" TO BE READ HERE SUNDAY

Professor George McKie, of the English and public speaking departments, will give a reading of Shakespeare's tragedy "Macbeth" Sunday night at 8:30 in the Playmakers Theatre.

This is the regular play reading for April, and is the sixth reading given this season under the auspices of the Playmakers. The date was placed as near as possible to the anniversary of Shakespeare's birthday, which comes on April 23.

TWO PROGRAMS SCHEDULED FOR END OF QUARTER

Only Cincinatti Chamber Orchestra May 10, and Lorado Taft May 19, 20, and 21 Remain on Entertainment List.

The Cincinnati chamber orchestra will appear here May 10 under the auspices of the student entertainment committee as the second number on the spring program.

The orchestra, under the direction of Walter Herrmann, is recognized to be one of the best in the country. It has had numerous engagements and has everywhere received the most favorable of press comments.

The committee expects that the program will be well liked since previous programs by chamber orchestras have had large and appreciative audiences here. Last year the famous Flonzaley quartet, which has now disbanded, gave a concert in Memorial hall to one of the most enthusiastic audiences that an entertainment program has ever had here. It is believed by the committee that the Cincinnati chamber orchestra will be equally well received.

In addition to the program scheduled for May 10, the committee has a lecture by Lorado Taft slated for this quarter. Mr. Taft, a sculptor who has received wide acclaim, will give three lectures, May 19, 20 and 21. He is a fluent and easy speaker who never fails to interest his audiences with his instructive and entertaining lectures. For the past several years there has been no speaker in Chapel Hill on the subject of art. Mr. Taft's stay here is therefore looked forward to eagerly by students and Chapel Hillians interested in art.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

If New Jersey is dry, so is the Passaic River.—Rev. W. R. Siegert.

Prohibition

In respect to the 18th amendment, the policy of the Daily Tar Heel and the present editorial control will differ from that of the former editor-in-chief. We favor the amendment and are unalterably opposed to any legislation or change in the organic law which would ever again legalize the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors in any part of this nation.

We may have more to say at a later date.

In All Fairness

This week is known at the University as High School Week. Those high schools throughout the state which were fortunate in winning their preliminary debate contests, and those which were large enough to have a track team, have been the guests of the University for the past three days.

We rejoice at the great interest exhibited by the high schools, and of course we welcomed them here with pleasure. We have listened to some of the debates, and we witnessed some of the track events. Collegians are inclined to be rather cynical in their attitude toward the group of which they for the most part were recently members. But once we hear their debates, and once we watch them in athletic competition, we can but realize that cynicism is no part of their creed, and it behooves us to consider them and their activities with all the earnestness and enthusiasm of an older brother aiding, advising and helping a younger.

Another point strikes us with great force. Those members of the athletic teams who win out in their events do so only upon their own initiative and ability. No one can give them strength of legs, nor power of endurance, nor speed and wind, nor conquering heart. What they do is done by them alone. But in the debates it is a different matter. The debaters come to the University with memorized speeches, written largely, and in some cases entirely, by teachers, preachers and other men of ability and experience. In such a case, the contest becomes one of community against community, of mature brain against mature brain. (We are not interested at the moment in whether or not the interest aroused in the communities throughout the state is salutary.) The debates then become chiefly a matter of presentation of material and arguments, as far as the debaters themselves are concerned. We think, therefore, that it is wrong for the debates to be judged upon the strength of the material presented in them. Rather, the debaters should be judged upon their own merits, upon their manner of argument, upon their handling of the material which has been supplied them. In other words, for the high school debates to mean anything to those who participate in them, the ability and power of those who actually debate should be the basis upon which an award is made, and not the content of the debates. Since it is impossible to prevent the debates from being written by others than the debaters themselves, we think it would actually carry out the real purpose and object of the debates for the debaters, and not the debates, to be judged, and for the award of the Aycock Cup to be made upon the merit of the debaters and not upon the merit of the debates.

Lack of Interest In Literary Societies

Many years ago membership in one of the two literary societies at the University was a cherished honor. It is true that for quite a while membership in one of these societies was compulsory, but in spite of this fact, every member was proud to say that his name was on either the Di or Phi roll. Today members also seem proud to have their names on either of the two rolls, but it seems that this pride is only exhibited during the time of elections when the more organizations a nominee belongs to, the better chance he will have in the elections. Still others join one of the groups in order to have, probably, another line by his name in the annual. Such ambitions or aims in joining are not at all in keeping with the objects of the two forensic organizations.

At one time in their existence these societies were the leading organizations on the campus. Elections could be swayed by either of the two groups; students were expelled from the University at their say, and many other such duties came under the literary groups. In other words, the literary societies were practically the student government of the University. Now, however, with the advent of numerous other organizations, the Di and Phi have lost most of their power, but they still keep their dignity and prestige which help to make membership in one of the societies such a prized possession.

Besides learning a little of how to speak on the spur of the moment, the members of these groups also learn a little about parliamentary procedure. The latter will, probably, be useless to some of the members, but to be able to speak spontaneously is an ability that many speakers crave. And it is by taking part in the meetings of one of the societies each week that one will soon be able, with hardly any fear at all, to make a talk when necessary. Of course the societies do not make a guarantee that their members will be speakers or orators in "30 days," or anything like that. But they will say that if one takes part in the meetings for a reasonable length of time, he will have an easier feeling when he is called on to make a talk.

All of these advantages were brought in in an attempt to show the students what they are missing by not joining and attending one of the societies. This is not an appeal for membership in the organizations, because one of the main troubles now is that the members have joined long enough to get their names on the roll and then have dropped out. By this new rule that was passed in the Di Senate some time ago, many of the non-attending members are going to have to start attending or else seek some other means of publicity. It is referred to as publicity, because deep down in the hearts of many members, that is the only reason that they joined.

The literary societies' halls that were at one time packed to their capacities years ago, now hardly have attendance enough to fill them. With such a large student body, it is pitiful to see just how few take interest in these forensic groups. If the students could only see what big opportunity they are letting pass, certainly an attendance and membership in the two organizations would almost double.

The Outlawing Of Student Cars

Rumor has it that the faculty is entertaining a motion prohibiting the use of cars by students.

This sentiment was undoubtedly aroused by the recent accidents in which students were injured. As a measure calculated to insure safety of the student body it is commendable. We hasten to assure the faculty that we are fully capable of caring for ourselves and, not to be disrespectful, we distinctly recall some few accidents in the ranks of our professors. Indeed, one professor, facetiously or seriously, expresses disgust with the meddlesome attitude of his colleagues and intimates that if such a measure is passed he will propose a measure prohibiting the use of cars by the faculty.

The measure is to be viewed with alarm from a personal standpoint as well as a general one as reactionary—as antithetical to our characteristic liberalism. It indicates an execrable—but admittedly spasmodic—relapse.

The sponsor of the measure undoubtedly obtained the sentiment from similar laws passed by other institutions. Yale and Princeton, the most prominent of these, adopted this ruling for the protection of their student bodies, for the preservation of their good names, and for the purpose of elevating scholastic standards.

Yale, being situated in a comparatively large city, is subject to more accidents per month than the Carolina autoists experience in the space of a year. The faculty grew tired of becoming involved with the law over students violations of traffic ordinances and they complained that car owners were below non-car owners in academic average.

Princeton adopted the ruling primarily because cars decimated the distance to the city of New York and because students were continually in trouble with the New York police force. Students were frequently involved in brawls in speakeasys and were giving the institution a black name. A secondary reason was that the race for the distinction of having the best-looking car on the campus raised the cost of a college education at Princeton to a prohibitive figure. One didn't rate if one didn't have at least a Packard.

But ours is an entirely different situation. We are not near a large city, we pride ourselves on our gentlemanly conduct at all times, we are not racing for the distinction of having the "best-looking" car, and we are on singularly friendly terms with the police force. There remains only the argument that car owners are below the average in scholastic average.

But Dean Bradshaw's office is prepared to submit statistical proof that the owners of cars are on a scholastic par with the others.

The accidents to our students are regretable, but in no wise conclusive evidence that we are in need of such a disciplinary measure as the prohibition of cars.

We even venture to suggest that if cars were prohibited and the student body forced to spend its idle hours downtown, the result would be shown in outbreaks of rowdyism—brought about by hampered freedom and lack of activity. The faculty may well consider this last; it is of primary importance.

Saturday, April 19.—"Looking Backward." (Read Proverbs 4:1-7.) Key verse: "With all thy getting, get understanding."

Meditation: Lord Haldane in his autobiography devotes his last chapter to review. He wrote at seventy-two of his satisfying philosophy: "A good deal of my work has been little known. The best I can say for myself is that I have not been slack in either thought or action and that some substantial results have emerged from time to time." "We ought never to disturb ourselves about the quantity reputed to have been ours, or about our own prominence before the public. Our duty is to work without turning our eyes to the right or to the left from the ideals which alone can light up our faith. What is ours can be no more than the best quality of which we are capable put into the effort toward the attainment of what we have set before ourselves. . . . Hesitation and unhappiness become replaced by a life that is tranquil because freed from dependence on casual ups and downs."

Prayer: "Teach us, good Lord, to serve Thee as Thou deservest; to give and not to count the cost; to fight and not to heed the wounds; to toil and not to seek for rest; to labor and not to ask for any reward, save that of knowing that we do Thy will. Amen."

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

The Prodigal Camera

After its long absence from the pages of the Daily Tar Heel, one might think that the columnist's trusty camera had been misplaced, or even stolen away; but no such unfortunate—or fortunate if you insist—mishap has taken place. Saturday's issue of this paper is the duly appointed place for "Campus Snapshot" to appear, but while the camera has been detained in the repair shop we have been using a substitute name and cut for this column.

Shades of the Past

We learned recently from reading a very old book on the subject of manners that it was considered proper in George Washington's day to eat peas with a knife and to drink tea with a saucer. We have, in fact, seen people recently who apparently think George Washington is still alive.

A Routine Matter

Once again basketball, wrestling, and boxing have given way to baseball and track. The beloved Tin Can, so lately the center of attraction, has given up its place of honor, and has resigned in favor of Emerson field. Thither the crack of the willow and the sound of the track shoe will draw us for the remainder of the quarter.

Rejuvenating the Di Senate

The columns of this paper have of late carried numerous references to the greatly-to-be-lamented listlessness of that time-honored institution, the Di Senate. Officials of that body have launched a drive which is designed to "revitalize" it. The addition of social and political functions to the forensic function of the senate is being considered seriously.

True it is that the Di of today does not compare favorably with the Di of fifty years ago; but is it not a mistake to compare the Di which we know to that of a half century ago? Since that time the Di Senate has cast off its political and social functions as other extra-curricular organizations appeared to assume them. Now its whole time is devoted to performing one single function—the forensic. In the field of forensics the Di is just as efficient as it ever was. The number of men who are interested in debating and oratory is rather small at present. This is a lamentable condition, but what good would the presence of disinterested persons do the Di Senate? The senators are all too often prone to count noses

Records in Danger

In the course of the state-wide high school championship track meet yesterday three records fell by considerable margins. Indications are that when Carolina meets Penn State this afternoon some of the existing University records will be shattered. 'Tis also probable that Carolina's record of no defeats in dual meets for the last eight years will be in danger. Yet we predict a Tar Heel victory.

'CAMEO KIRBY' SHOWING AT CAROLINA THEATRE

A study of the history of poker was made by Irving Cummings, director, before he started production on "Cameo Kirby," romantic musical drama at the Carolina theatre today.

Poker plays an important part in the story of "Cameo Kirby," which deals with a romantic phase of gambling on Mississippi River steamboats in 1850.

The game we know as poker probably had its origin in the Italian game of Il Frusso in the fifteenth century. Later it was known there as Primiera, in Spain as Primero and in France as La Prima.

Played on Mississippi River steamboats about 1830, the first game was less complicated than the modern stud poker, being played with but 20 cards. The 52 card deck was introduced about 1845. Draw poker did not make its appearance until about 1860.

J. Harold Murray, as "Cameo Kirby," wins a fortune and a plantation and a bride at stud poker. Norma Terris is co-starred with Murray.

Carolina To Face Penn State Cindermen Here Today

IMPORTANT TRACK MEET SCHEDULED THIS AFTERNOON

Baseball Game With V. M. I. On Local Diamond To Follow Event.

With Penn State already on the field, the Tar Heel track team rounded out a tough week's training in top form here this afternoon, and everything was set for tomorrow's Carolina-Penn State dual meet.

The big intersectional test will be held on Emerson field at 2 o'clock as the first half of a double program that will include also a Carolina-V. M. I. baseball game, to begin at 4 o'clock.

The Nittany Lions brought 22 performers, whose records easily indicate that they are one of the strongest Eastern teams and that tomorrow's meet will be one of the biggest features in Southern track this year.

Comparative performances indicate a tough, hard meet. The flying sophomore, Charlie Farmer, with a Southern record of 9.8 for the 100 and a performance of 21.8 for the 220 dash, gives the Tar Heels an edge in the dashes. The quarter-mile and half-mile should be anybody's races.. Rekers, conqueror of the conqueror of Paavo Nurmi, and his flying teammate Meisinger give the invaders an edge in the mile and two-mile. In the hurdles and field events, the teams stack up just about even.

Add and subtract correctly, say those who know their records, and you will deduce prospects to be for a close, tough meet, with a warm contest in every event.

An outstanding duel is expected in every event, which should result in some fine individual performances. The luminaries expected to fight it out by events, Penn State stars listed first, are Darlington and Farmer in the dashes; Hidinger and Gay, 440 yard run; Wolf and Baucom and Barkley, half-mile; Rekers and Barkley, mile; Meisinger, two-mile; McDowell and Perry, high hurdles; Fullerton and Slusser, low hurdles; Mobley and Arnold, vault; Palmer and Bagby, high jump; Mobley and Neiman, broad jump; Shawley and Brown, discus; Siegal and Brown, javelin; Shawley and Adkins, shot.

Freshman Golfers Defeat Greensboro High School 15 - 3

The Carolina freshman golf team scored a 15 to 3 victory over the Greensboro high school team yesterday in a return match played on the Hope Valley Country Club course.

The low score for the contest was 73, which was made during the afternoon round by F. M. Laxton, Jr., the number two player for the freshmen. Chester Brown, who won his place on the team only last week, proved himself well able to uphold his place by two brilliant 76's, these being the next lowest scores.

In the foursome matches played in the afternoon, Adams and Laxton defeated Newnham and Mickles 2½ to ½, while Chatham and Brown defeated Carver and Arthur 3 to 0.

The points were distributed as follows:

Carolina	Greensboro
Adams 2½	Newnham ½
Laxton 1	Mickles 2

might fit should Lady Luck favor him? There are three of them: ordinary seamen, wiper, and mess boy.

That of the ordinary seaman is considered the prize. He does manual labor, paints, and stands on lookouts. A wiper works in the engine room, cleaning up grease and painting. His job is both dirty and hot and therefore the least desirable. The mess boy waits on table and washes dishes. Any of these jobs pay $40 to $50 a month.

Compared to labor on shore, that on shipboard is easy. Most of it is of the puttering variety. Hardships are few, and due to the confinement, there are plenty of chances to read, which accounts for the many "Mercurys" that find their way to a "seaman's" bunk during summer months.

Since these green covered magazines are to be missing from Atlantic freighters this summer, perhaps there'll be more of them read in the third tourist cabin deck chairs of the big liners. The steamship men naturally hope so.

Raleigh And Hill To Contest In Tennis

Harvey Harris of Raleigh and Claude Council of Chapel Hill fought their way through the semi-finals of the 15th North Carolina high school tennis tourney here yesterday, and will meet this morning at 9:30 o'clock for the state title.

Harris beat Hanson of Wilmington 6-2, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2. Council upset the dope by eliminating Southern of Winston-Salem, defending champ, in straight sets, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

Mount Airy, Charlotte and Rockingham teams fought their way into the semi-finals in the doubles, to be played this morning, and Wilmington and Winston-Salem will fight it out for the fourth semi-finals post.

One of the senior superlatives elected at the recent smoker was "biggest ladies man." It was a close race, but the winner obviously won by a neck.

CHARLOTTE WINS INTERSCHOLASTIC TRACK MEETING

Goodwin of Greensboro Is High Scorer of Day; Mullins of Charlotte Second.

Charlotte high school, with 47 points, won the interscholastic hgih school meet here yesterday to set a record for the highest score ever made in a state high school meet, and oveshadow by 19¼ points the next highest score. Wilmington was second with 27¾ points, Greensboro third with 24¼, and High Point fourth with 16¾. Following in order were Spring Hope, 9; Raleigh, 8; Weldon, 7; Rich Square, 3; Oxford, 2; and Chapel Hill 1¼.

Blue And White Teams Will Face Worthy Foes This Week

Six Baseball Games; Track Meet With Penn State Today; Golf Tournament Is Among Events.

TENNIS ALSO IMPORTANT

Six baseball games, two track contests, three tennis matches, and a state golf tournament make up a tough schedule Carolina teams face for the coming week.

The annual Easter Monday baseball game with Davidson, to be played in Winston-Salem this year, and the V. P. I. Track meet at Blacksburg Monday will start the ball rolling, and from then on it will be tough sledding for the Tar Heel teams.

The baseball nine, pitching force shaky already, faces Davidson again at Davidson Tuesday, Georgia here Wednesday and Thursday, V. P. I. here Friday and Duke here Saturday, in a straight line of six hard games, four of which will count in the Southern Conference standings and three of which will count in the Big Five standings.

The track team will finish this afternoon's tough inter-sectional test with Penn State only to jump a train for Blacksburg to fill the Monday engagement with V. P. I. And then it will be to come back and groom the stars for the important Penn Relays carded for Saturday.

The tennis team, finishing competition in the three-day state tournament today, will face Johns Hopkins here Monday, Duke at Durham Thursday and Wake Forest here Friday.

The golfers will face but one event, but that is the annual gruelling two-day state collegiate tourney at Sedgefield Country club, Greensboro, Friday and Saturday.

Of those 12 events, exactly six are carded for Chapel Hill to make an attractive home schedule. Several other freshman contests will be announced from time to time during the week.

Golfers Will Meet Georgia Tech Today

The Tar Heel golfers left yesterday afternoon for Atlanta, Ga., where today they are to meet Georgia Tech, reported to be one of the strongest teams in the Conference.

The Tar Heels, undefeated for the year, took their strongest quartet to meet the Techmen.

This included Captain Chatham, Meade Willis, state champion last year; Luther Stewart and Ben Goodes.

Coach John Kenfield was kept from making the trip by his being in charge of the North Carolina College Net Tourney being played here.

SPORT RAMBLES

Roulhac Hamilton

Facing the hardest test of the year, the track team will defend its long dual meet record against Penn State this afternoon. We do not say that the Tar Heels will win, nor do we make any such prediction about the Pennsylvanians. As we see it, the meet is a toss up and either team has a good chance to crash through to victory.

Nate Cartwell, former University of Pennsylvania star and a member of the 1908 Olympic team is the Penn State coach. Before going to Penn State, Cartwell coached at the University of West Virginia and at several southern colleges. He has been extremely successful at Penn State and his teams have been regarded as one of the leading eastern teams for several years.

George Mobley is captain of the team. As a freshman he was a sensation in class meets, participating in half a dozen events and placing in all of them. He specializes in the broad jump and the pole vault and will take part in them this afternoon.

Paul Rekers is probably the best individual performer on the squad. He will be entered in the mile run. He was a leading cross country runner last fall and during the winter season set a new mark for the indoor two mile college run. His record, 9:22.2 is only a fifth of a second slower than the outdoor record.

Meisinger, Homm, King, and Detwiler complete the distance squad. Detwiler won the individual title in the intercollegiate cross country championship for freshmen in 1927 and, although he did not compete last year, he is rapidly regaining the form that stamped him as a great runner as a freshman. Meisinger has turned in some remarkable races at two miles and is a leading cross country performer. Homm and King are new men who are developing rapidly.

Wolfe and Bachman will be the half milers and while neither has shown anything spectacular in past performances both are experienced runners. Flenniken and Hidinger will carry the burden in the quarter mile. Both are juniors and both were regular quarter milers last season.

Stookey, Darlington, and Kennedy will divide the work in the sprints. The first two will probably run the 100 and the last will be entered in the 220. Darlington and Kennedy are sophomores.

McDowell, Fullerton, and Funke are the hurdlers, McDowell going in at both distances, with Funke at 120 and Fullerton at 220. While not actually weak in this event, the hurdles can not be regarded as one of Penn State's strong events. McDowell and Fullerton are veterans and Funke is a sophomore.

Palmer and Hammond, both new men, will represent the Lions in the high jump. Funke and Osbeck will assist Captain Mobley in the broad jump and vault. Fisher, Shawley, and Musser will take care of the weight events, the latter taking part in the shot, discus and javelin.

Dan Musser, leading spearman for the Lions will be doing double duty this week-end. Yesterday in Atlantic City he played third base against Pennsylvania. He left for Chapel Hill immediately after the game and will participate in the javelin this afternoon, returning to Atlantic City for another game on Monday. He holds the state interscholastic and the college record for the javelin.

Comparative performances give the Tar Heels an edge in the dashes, while the invaders have the odds in the distances. The middle distances, hurdles, and the field events find the teams stacking up just about even and it is in these events that the meet will probably be decided.

TENNIS MEN WIN IN SECOND DAY'S PLAY OF TOURNEY

Carolina Stars Still In Top Form; Johnston and Halverstadt of Davidson In Semi-Finals.

Carolina tennis players continued to set the pace in the annual North Carolina collegiate tourney, and in the second day's play sent four men through to the quarter-finals, to two each for Duke and Davidson.

The Carolina stars coming through matches yesterday were Yeomans, defending champ, Captain Merritt, Hendlin and Liskin. The other four survivors, who will contest in the quarter-finals at 9:15 this morning, are Frank, runner-up last year, and Phillips of Duke, and Captain Johnston and Helverstadt of Davidson.

Wetness of courts kept the collegians from getting in but one round yesterday, hence quarter-finals are scheduled this morning, semi-finals this afternoon, and finals will probably have to be postponed until Monday.

Captain Johnston and Halverstadt of Davidson fought their way into the doubles semi-finals yesterday, but the other teams got in but a match apiece, and will resume play this morning at 10 o'clock.

Favorites continued to mow down opposition yesterday, but several contenders provided unexpectedly brilliant opposition that produced several feature matches.

In one of these, Rogers of Duke, playing his top game, took three straight games from Yeomans, Carolina defending champ, before Yeomans got started, and pushed the favorite hard for a 6-8, 6-2, 6-2 win. Fain of Davidson likewise gave Frank, Duke runner-up last year, a real fight that Frank won only 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

The Frank-Johnston and Halverstadt-Merritt matches are expected to be the singles features this morning.

UNIVERSITY POLITICAL LEADERS STAND HIGH IN STATE AND NATION

James K. Polk, John J. Parker, Charles B. Aycock, Edward K. Graham, O. Max Gardner, Josephus Daniels, John Motley Morehead, G. B. Stockton, All Served As Campus "Bosses."

By H. M. WILSON

(Released by Univ. News Bureau)

To be called a good politician is nothing to fight shy of on the University of North Carolina campus these days, if you should judge by the interest taken in the recent elections held by the 2700 boys who compose the student body.

On the contrary, it would appear that being rated as a political boss has come to be one of the most cherished of campus honors. As one evidence of this fact, it may be stated that the bosses who were successful in this year's campaign confessed that they would raise no objections to a proposal to expose their likenesses to the public through the newspapers.

If you question their motives or tactics, the boys who run the political machines on the Carolina campus point with pride to the distinguished men of the state and nation who got their first training in politics here.

They will tell you, for instance, about James K. Polk, President of the United States, who was twice elected president of the Dialectic literary society and who got his first taste of politics as a student here. They will refer you to the youthful heydey of John J. Parker, who at one time or other held nearly every office on the campus while a student. They will refer you to such educational giants as the late Charles B. Aycock, the late Edward K. Graham; to such governors as the former Angus McLean and the present Max Gardner; to such newspaper publishers as Josephus Daniels, E. B. Jeffress, and George Stephens; to such Supreme Court judges as the present five—Stacy, Connor, Brogden, Clarkson and Adams; to such diplomats as John Motley Morehead and G. B. Stockton, recently appointed as ministers, respectively, to Sweden and Austria.

These and hundreds of others who will go down in the pages of history as political immortals, you will be informed by the present-day politicians, got their first start on the highway of achievement here on the Chapel Hill campus.

For several years now the students have used the Australian form of secret ballot in their voting, and they say this has made for cleaner elections.

Their professors regard these political scraps as excellent training for future citizenship.

Regular System of Training

As far back as graduates can remember student politics on the Carolina campus had been under machine control. As fast as student political dictators were graduated new ones have taken their places. Students choosing to enter campus politics find it wise to start serving the campus parties early in their freshman year. The most industrious and sagacious of the sophomores are appointed as lieutenants and "ward heelers." During the year they serve as organizers, publicity agents, intelligence men, and orators. By a gradual process of elimination the "chosen few" emerge at the end of their junior years into the charmed circle of campus political captains and generals.

The whole system is modeled after the national political scheme. The chief difference lies in the looseness of party lines. A fraternity or a group of non-fraternity men are just as likely to be in two or three line-ups in as many years. The whole system depends upon collective bargaining for its perpetuation. A group will band together and bargain with the leaders of the opposing line-ups, and usually align themselves with the party which appears to be the strongest and which promises the most.

Independents Have Little Chance

The extraordinary outcome of all the bargaining, campaigning, and electioneering is the uniform selection, with few exceptions, of the fittest officers that the student body provides. The leaders have learned from the long history of Carolina politics that the best qualified, and those who have served the University the most make the best candidates.

Candidates running independently, due to the size of the student body, have little chance of being elected, and therefore the most able and ambitious men fight for a chance to run on machine tickets.

The last decade in Carolina politics has seen seven strong men rise to the leadership of campus affairs. Back in 1921-22 Joe Erwin of Morganton, a member of the A. T. O. fraternity, joined his forces with Obie Harmon, student manager of Swain hall, University dining hall, and elected a majority of the student officers through the membership of the Di and Phi societies, the source of political power at that time. Erwin is at present a candidate for the state legislature from the Morganton district.

Some Hot Campaigns

The next year, 1922-23, with the single exception of the current year, witnessed the hottest political campaign of the last decade. The Kappa Sigs and Swain Hall "got-together" and chose Sam Cathey, a blind student, to lead them. Cathey is now prosecuting attorney for the city of Asheville. That year Taylor Bledsoe, who also came from Asheville, served in the party as a freshman. Harmon was the Raskob of the party. Cathey succeeded in electing only half of his ticket. The fight was so closely contested and so bitter that it was necessary to recount the ballots twice.

Cathey downed all opposition the next year and together with Bledsoe and Floyd Griffin succeeded in putting in all their candidates with the exception of a few men running for minor offices.

In 1924-25 Floyd Griffin inherited the mantle cast off by Cathey. Bledsoe acted as a captain. Due largely to his influence Bill Cocke of Asheville was elected president of the student body. The candidates for the major positions that year were largely unopposed.

The next year Bledsoe succeeded Griffin in the management of his party, while Mac Covington, a sophomore, together with "Shorty" Madry, a law student at the time, upset Bledsoe's plans by electing all but three of the offices. Charlie Price acted as lieutenant under Bledsoe.

Taylor Bledsoe's Machine

In 1926-27 Bledsoe inaugurated a three-year regime with Covington and Price as captains which literally swept its opposition away each year, and culminated in the uncontested election of 21 out of 31 officers before a ballot was ever dropped. Of the remaining 10 offices Bledsoe and his two captains put over nine.

Campus Political Leaders

Numerous political leaders have gotten their start in campus politics at the University of North Carolina. The two boys who acted as bosses for the successful machine in the recent campus elections are pictured above. They are Charles Price, of Salisbury, (at left), and Mac Covington, of Linden. Both are descended from politically-minded ancestors.

Then came this year and the elections on April 4. The campaigning was begun in the early fall with Mac Covington and Charlie Price as joint leaders. However, they soon struck opposition in a group, who organized what they termed an "insurgent" party and waged one of the hottest campaigns ever waged at the University on two issues; i. e., that the non-fraternity element were insufficiently represented, and that the campus would be benefitted by two parties.

Both parties went to the polls April 4 confident of scoring an unprecedented victory, but it was not the insurgent party which rode on the crest of victory that day. Mac Covington and Charlie Price, political managers par-excellence, swept the day by electing 30 out of 31 possible officers by surprisingly large majorities running from more than 500 in the case of the major officers to 150 in the case of the minor candidates.

The two leaders—Mac Covington of Linden and Charles Price of Salisbury—both are descended from politically-minded ancestors. Covington's grandfather was a sheriff of Marlboro County in South Carolina for many years. Covington's three uncles have been in politics for years. W. C. McAlister, a graduate of the University, is chairman of the state election board of the state of Oklahoma, a member of the state senate, and has twice refused to run for the governorship of the state because of health. Another uncle, A. G. McAlister, is chief justice of the supreme court of the state of Arizona.

Price and Covington

Covington has served as president of the University dormitory council for two years, president of the summer school student body last year, and debated in his undergraduate years. He is a member of the Sigma Zeta fraternity.

Charles Price is the namesake of his grandfather who successively served the state of North Carolina as president of the State Bar Association, as a captain in the Confederate army, and as speaker of the state House of Representatives. His father, Augustus Hobson Price, attended the University, and later became an assistant United States attorney, an elector at large to Republican conventions, and a referee in bankruptcy.

Price, himself, has served as chairman of the executive committee of the senior class of 1928, and has been elected president of the third year law class of the University law school for next year. He was actively connected with the Di Senate during his undergraduate years. He is a member of the Sigma Nu fraternity.

At the conclusion of the speeches Horace H. Williams, University professor, made the presentation of the Aycock cup to Goldsboro's winning team. The academic contest cups were presented to the winning schools by Dean Hibbard, while R. B. The tennis award was not made last night as the tournament has not yet been completed.

EDITOR-ELECT OF MAGAZINE NAMES NEW STAFF MEN

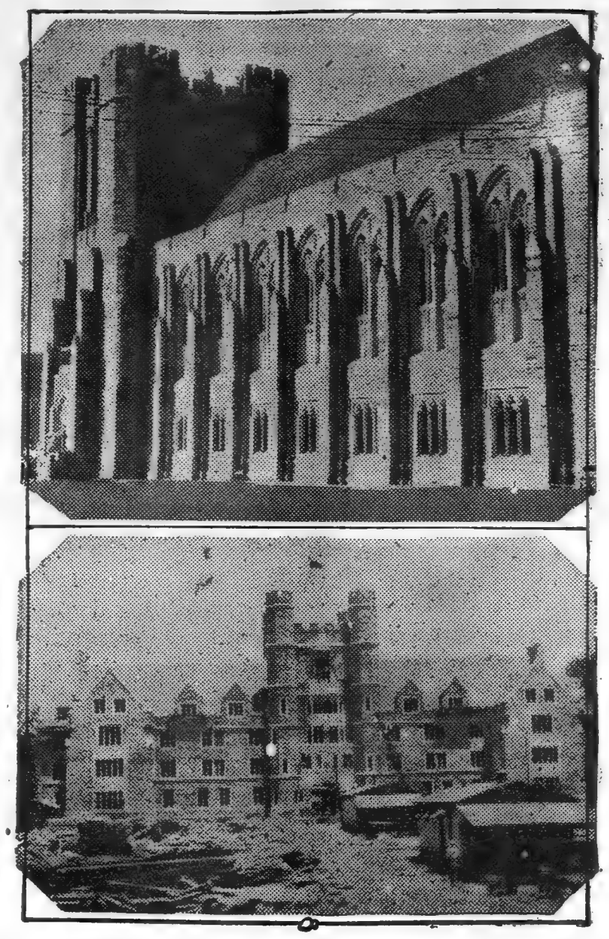
Staff Meeting Thursday; First Issue May 11; Dungan To Be Managing - Editor Magazine Also.

With the next issue of the Carolina Magazine, which will appear May 11, the tentative organization of the new staff becomes operative. Jack Dungan, the choice of the Publications Union Board, will assume his dutise as managing editor of the magazine with the issue of May 11. The associate and assistant editors will be selected by the editor at a later date, these selections being made largely upon the basis of material submitted for the issue of May 11 and the last issue of the year, which will appear May 25. The circulation manager will also be selected later.

There will absolutely be no radical changes in the magazine—except that there will be a large staff which any and all will have an opportunity to make, and that the student body will be urged to make the magazine what it wants it to be through the medium of this large and flexible staff. The format and quality of the paper will remain essentially the same.

There will be an organization meeting in the Tar Heel-Magazine offices in the basement of Alumni building Thursday evening, April 24, at 7 o'clock. At this meeting the new editor and managing editor will outline their policies for the remainder of the present collegiate year, and the seven months of next, during which the magazine will be published bi-monthly. Beginning with the organization meeting Thursday night, the magazine staff will meet once each month.

For the time being the following members of the present magazine staff are listed as members of the new editor s staff, subject to change—both addition and subtraction: Richard A. Chace, Jay Curtis, Robert Hodges, J. J. Slade, Jr., James Dawson, Dorothy Mumford, Philipp Klemens Kaufmann, Mary Marshall Dunlap, Louis V. Brooks, and Sherman Shore.



In a word, the policy of the new editor is to organize a large staff to which every person who proves his worthiness by contributions to the magazine, may become a member, and to urge the student body to make the Carolina Magazine what it wants it to be.

Infirmary List

The University infirmary attendants reported the following sick list yesterday: M. Q. Tlumblee, D. A. Nims, Hugh Overstreet and Johnny Branch.

During the commencement week in 1909, a baseball game was held between the class of 1903 and the graduating class.

New Duke Buildings

Above are shown two recent photographs of buildings being erected on the new Duke campus. With more than $80,000,000 for buildings and administration it is expected that the new Duke will be one of the foremost universities in the entire south.

Officials of the university have announced that the new campus will be occupied early next fall.

NINETY-THREE TO WIN DEGREES IN EDUCATION DEPT.

Twenty-Two Girls and Seventy-One Men Compose Largest Class To Be Graduated From School.

The largest number of seniors in the history of the University's school of education will be graduated this year, either at the regular commencement in June or at the end of the summer school in August, according to announcement by C. E. McIntosh, executive secretary of the school of education. Of these seniors, 93 in all, who expect to receive the degree A. B. in education, 22, or approximately one-fourth of the total, are girls, and 71 are men.

Several of the candidates for graduation have been absent from the University for some in the past, but have either returned to the University in time to finish their work or have obtained the required number of credits through correspondence courses. A number of members of the senior class in education, a list of which was published recently, are not candidates for the degree this year.

Local Firm Improves Cleaning Equipment

Extensive improvements have been completed by the Carolina Dry Cleaners in their office and plant equipment. The front office has been enlarged and decorated, and a sightly awning installed. New equipment in the cleaning department, including facilities for cleaning linens, has been added.

The Carolina Dry Cleaners, purchased a few months ago by Royall Brown and Bill Carbine, Carolina students, from the Hardesty brothers, have also inaugurated five-hour dry cleaning service.

UNIVERSITY TEAM TO MEET VIRGINIA IN RADIO DEBATE

To Discuss Question of Thirteen Months Calendar Over WPTF In Raleigh April 9; Will Also Debate Boston.

The last five weeks have witnessed Carolina's participation in five intercollegiate debates, two of them being held in Atlanta and two taking place in Chapel Hill. At present there are only two encounters left on the Carolina debate schedule—the Carolina-Virginia radio debate which will be broadcast from radio station WPTF in Raleigh on the night of April 25, and the Carolina-Boston encounter which will be held in Boston, May 9.

The subject of the radio debate is the much-talked-of thirteen months calendar, which is a matter of considerable concern among scientists at the present time. H. H. Hobgood, A. V. Lowenstein, and W. W. Speight will represent the University in this contest. This will be the second annual radio debate between the University of North Carolina and the University of Virginia, J. C. Williams and W. W. Speight having represented Carolina last year in the first Carolina-Virginia radio debate. The present agreement between the two universities calls for an annual radio debate between them, to be held in Richmond and some North Carolina town on alternate years.

In the last intercollegiate forensic encounter of the present year J. C. Williams, J. M. Baley and G. P. Carr will meet the debaters from Boston University, at Boston, May 9. The Tar Heel team will uphold the negative side of "Resolved, That the nations of the world should adopt some plan of complete disarmament of all forces, except

Cantata Tonight

INAUGURATION OF NEW OFFICERS TO BE HELD MONDAY

Induction of Student Body Officers Will Take Place In Gerrard Hall Tomorrow.

"Red" Greene, and other newly elected officers of the student council, will be officially inducted into office tomorrow morning, in Gerrard hall during chapel period. Although at a joint meeting of the old and the new council last Monday, "Red" Greene assumed virtual leadership of the student body, the official induction will take place tomorrow.

For many years, the official inauguration of student body officers has been marked by an inaugural address by the incoming president. And in the days when Memorial hall was the largest building on the campus, it was customary for large crowds of students to turn out to hear the address. However, with Memorial hall gone, the scene of tomorrow's ceremonies will be Gerrard hall, which, although primarily given over to freshman for their chapel exercises, will have plenty of room in the balcony and in the back for those upper classmen who may wish to hear the speeches.

The occasion of tomorrow will be the 24th inaugural. In was in 1906 that first the students were given the privilege and freedom to conduct student affairs upon their sole responsibility. It was at that time, too, that the students first filed in to Memorial hall to hear one of their own number who would henceforth be the head of the formal student government. It will be regretted by many that no larger auditorium is available, for it is well known that the speeches rendered on these occasions are of great interest to all the student body.

DENTAL STUDENTS TO HEAR MAVES ON INLAY TECHNIQUE

The fourth lecture and clinic of the 1930 postgraduate extension course for dentists, being conducted by the University extension division in cooperation with the state Dental Society, will be held at six class centers this week, it was announced here yesterday by R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension division.

Dr. T. W. Maves of Cleveland, Ohio, experienced clinician and authority on gold inlay technique, will be the instructor. Classes will be held at Greenville, Raleigh, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Charlotte and Asheville.

Other instructors who will conduct classes at a later date include Dr. Albert L. Midgley of Providence, R. I., whose subject will be "Dental Economics"; and Dr. Horace M. Davis of Baltimore, Md., who will present the subject of "Radiodentia."

In 1908 there were 58 seniors to graduate.

GREENSBORO BOY HAS DISAPPEARED FROM UNIVERSITY

Bill Pemberton Has Been Missing Since February; Parents Thought He Was In School.

Another disappearance of a University student was brought to light late this week by the arrival of Mr. T. Pemberton, of Greensboro, in search of his son, Bill. whose whereabouts has been a mystery since late in February this year.

It is a much stranger case than that of M. P. Moorer. Bill Pemberton was, as far as his parents knew, registered and in school for his third year, ever since the beginning of the Fall quarter. Yet, when Pemberton, Sr., went to make enquiries at the registrar's office and at the dean of students', no official record was on file for his son. The investigation of his father resulted in the knowledge that Bill Pemberton, although occupying a room on the third floor of Aycock dormitory, and having paid for that room, was never a student at the University, although he spent almost two quarters at Chapel Hill. His letters home led the readers of them to believe he was a regular student.

The last communication that the family in Greensboro received from the boy was late in February and although attempts had been made to get in touch with him during the intervening time it was not until a week or so ago that his absence was noted.

The roommate of Pemberton has also disappeared but there are no fears for either of their lives or minds, as in the Moorer case. The entire affair is being viewed by the fathers as a youthful gesture at freedom. When questioned last week, he appeared to be rather anxious over the matter, but taking it all in a kindly manner.

CALL ISSUED FOR NEW REPORTERS

Old and New Men Will Attend Re-Organization Meeting Tonight At Seven.

The new managing-editor announced yesterday a reorganization of the Daily Tar Heel reportorial staff to be made tonight at 7 o'clock. A call is being made for all persons who desire to become members of the staff.

It is planned to carry a staff of 60 reporters during the year. A course credit toward graduation, in addition to attractive charms, is awarded faithful reporters. An unusual background in college news reporting can be secured from Tar Heel experience.

Editor Yarborough has announced that contrary to precedent, members of the editorial board will aid the editor in "breaking-in" new reporters and serve as super-reporters on special stories.

At the meeting tonight beats will be re-assigned, and important announcements made.

Early Morning Service

The United Church conducted a sunrise service this morning at 6:30 o'clock. A male quartette and vocal music by a choir and Mrs. Conner and Miss Williams furnished music.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

It is easier to give advice than to bear sufferings manfully.—Euripides.

Carolina Needs Full-Fledged Co-Education

Comparatively speaking, co-education is a recent thing at the University of North Carolina. The "mixed student body" experiment is still in the infant stage. Even the erection of Spencer Hall is an event of the last decade. After having considered the results of the present system of partial coeducation, the writer is convinced that the University should be completely coeducational. The development of this point of view is the purpose of this writing.

At present Carolina admits only those girls who have completed enough work at other institutions to enable them to be enrolled in the junior and senior classes. Carolina must be classified, therefore, as a semi-coeducational university. Although there are many advantages of excluding girls from the freshman and sophomore classes, there seem to be many unsurmountable disadvantages which go hand in hand with such a system. The curricular requirements of Queens College, Meredith, Agnes Scott, N. C. C. W., etc., are so utterly different from those of the University of North Carolina that even those who enter here with eighteeen courses credit are usually obliged to take many freshman and sophomore courses to "get off" the required work of those two years. Such transfers are given credit for much of the work done elsewhere only for entrance purposes—the majority of such work being counted as elective, but a very appreciative amount of it not counting toward graduation at all. Clearly, the admission of girls to all four classes would eliminate this difficulty.

Looking at the matter from another angle, is there any reason why girls should not be admitted to the freshman and sophomore classes? NO, there is not one which will "hold water." Conditions here are not any more conducive to moral laxness, or other forms of degradation, than they are at the average woman's college. On the other hand, girls come here in quest of the best instruction that the state can offer them. Our contention is that they should not be denied the benefits of 4 years of this instruction. After having had two years of training at the average woman's college of this state or of the South, girls are not appreciably better fitted to cope successfully with the problems which confront them here on the campus and in the classrooms of the University. There is not enough similarity between conditions here and those surrounding the woman's colleges of the state to occasion any appreciable transfer.

It was only after a long and bitter fight that girls were admitted regularly to the University at all. Likewise, a long and bitter fight must be waged before they will be admitted to all classes on the same footing that boys are. Until such a time as this is the case, however, the University of North Carolina will not be a full-fledged coeducational institution.

The State of North Carolina is being won over to the fact that its future greatness does not lie solely in the male sex. "The hand that rocks the cradle" must not be forgotten in this grand old commonwealth. Full-fledged coeducation is the next milestone which the University must reach in its program. This change, although it will come about gradually, is a certainty. Full-fledged coeducation, once it is established here, will be "as fixed and unchangeable as the laws of the Medes and Persians."—J. C. W.

A Plea For Study

A deserted, dreary, rain-swept campus is never quite the ideal audience for any speaker, but in the matter of the shut-down of the hosiery mill at Carrboro, it matters not if the entire student body and the faculty were to carefully read this notice, for they can do nothing, absolutely nothing to prevent this stroke of ill-fortune for the 200 workers, and families of the mill.

Yet, that is not completely true. For, although readers are powerless to stay this inevitable result of over-production, they may be influenced, not merely by this one incident, but by many similar ruthless, cold, unfeeling shut-downs, to take a greater interest in the why's and wherefore's of such economic movements. And, once interested to that degree, they will in all probability, study the various practical plans that have been suggested to alter the too obviously unbalanced economic system. There, in Carrboro, the manufacturing company is faced with an all too common business problem. Over-production-low, price-operation can only be continued at a loss for an indefinite period—all these force the mill-owners to notify their workers that the mill will be shut down as soon as the stock on hand is manufactured into the finished product. The owners of that particular mill can not be blamed for anything that they have done. Nor can the workers be chided for lack of class-consciousness or "desire for their rights." Both of them are acting as they must under a certain condition in a certain system. Those people who always must "fix the blame" will be at a loss this time. Unless, of course, they blame the system. Which they should. And it is here that the student readers of student editorials could help a bit for the "peace on earth, good will to man" idea. If the students would only study the situation, carefully probe into the causes, into the history of factories and present economic institutions, there would be far less rampant speeches, acrimonious "letters to the editor" or wild statements and threats. There might result, but this is going too far, a happy solution to the whole problem of labor.

By H. J. Galland

The following is a verbatim telephone conversation between Mr. Wex Malone and another party, as reported to the columnist by Central. She claims that she remembers every word, in fact every syllable of the harrowing incident. Mr. Malone reluctantly verified the report.

Mr. Malone: (After fingering the dial zerowards furiously) Hello! Is this Long Distance? Well, I've been trying—say, suppose you get that final dab of powder on your nose and pay a little attention to this call. I want a number.—Yes? And I've got yours too.

Long Distance: Would you mind repeating the number? All right. (Sweetly) I'll call you back.

(There follows an interim of some 40 minutes, after which the phone is heard shyly ringing.)

Mr. Malone: Yes? Have you got my party? Well, I'm waiting. . . . Hello! Is that you, baby? Well, listen, I'm paying for this at the rate of two bucks a minute, so catch it, and don't talk back. This week-end is over, thank the Lord, so there's a little breathing spell from the prom-hoppers and high school children. How about a quiet little date next week on the Hill?

No? Well, there's no reason to be so cold about it. Listen, baby, you know it's been a damn hard month for me in the old law school. We've had elections there too, you know, and we've all been busy dodging mud and keeping out of frames—and I don't mean picture frames, either. Huh? Hell, gal, I wrote and told you all about it. Well, they're in now, and it ought to be over—it ought to be, but it isn't. You know, I heard (Mr. Malone's voice dropped at this point and became very confidential, so that Central missed it until Mr. Malone picked it up at this point) . . . and he was supposed to have offered his shirt, a brand new set of poker chips, and two empty pint bottles all for two votes. Yep, and he got 'em, too.

Yeh. Since you were last here, baby, Memorial Hall was destroyed, so we can't have any more of those dates in the gallery. . . . But they do say that Kenan Stadium is open these days, and nights, and that the clover is in bloom. . . . And I'm sorry you won't be able to catch the Wigue and Masque production this year, because there's no place to have it. So you won't get a chance to bust your stays laughing, as you said you did last year. But that's all right, there'll be another one along next year.

By the way, you remember that little spot we dated in in the Arboretum? Oh, the hell you don't! Well, anyway, it's all torn up now. The high school lads and lassies have been and discovered it. In fact, they were all over the place. Clever kids, too, baby, not only pretty like you, but debaters and so on. They ran the law school boys wild. Well, yes, I know they were pretty wild to begin with, but they were all cooped up so long with the books and cases that they'd gotten kind of rusty until the little gals came along.

So now you know all the news, and this is getting expensive, although I don't mind spending it on you. Come on down, kid, for a while—the fare from Asheville is only—What? Sure, I said the fare from—You're where? Nashville? Who is this, anyway? Have you been stringing me? Hello, Central! I asked for Asheville, and you . . . (At this point the receiver loudly clicked. When last seen, Mr. Malone was heading in a cloud of dust toward the telephone exchange.)

FRATS ENTERTAIN AT HOUSE PARTIES

Theta Chi and Lambda Chi Alpha Give Dances At Inn Over Week-End.

The social activities of the past week-end were limited to a group of three fraternity dances and a house party. Theta Chi entertained Friday night from 9 until 1 o'clock in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn. While, in the same room on Saturday afternoon from 4 until 7, Mr. and Mrs. Householder of Durham gave a dance honoring the guests of the Lambda Chi Alpha house party. And again on Saturday evening the Lambda Chi Alpha's were hosts to a large group of local and out-of-town people from 9 until 12.

The Inn ballroom was decorated in the University colors of blue and white for all of the dances. Music for the Theta Chi dance was furnished by Alex Mendenhall and his Tar Heel Boys, directed by Billy Arthur.

Ty Sawyer's Buccaneers played for both the afternoon and night dances on Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Householder, Dr. and Mrs. Fussler, and Dr. and Mrs. A. K. King were chaperons for these dances

The Lambda Chi's also entertained at a week-end house party in connection with their dance. The following is the list of guests: Misses Mary Ayers and Linda Connelly of Taylorsville, Grace Dean Forrester of North Wilkesboro, Dorothy Stutz and Katherine Wiley of Southern Pines, Anna Gray Watson of Louisburg, Hortense Herring of Winston Salem, Teddy Estes and Katherine Morrison of Danville, Va., Louise Harrison and Anne Rogers of Durham, Adelaide Fortune of Greensboro, Hazel Baumgartner of Belmont, Adelaide McAuley of High Point, Pete Hamer of Keysville, Va., Anne Arrowsmith of Hillsboro, Mary Stringfield of Waynesville, Courtney Peace of New York City, and Mrs. J. C. Connelly, chaperone.

Theta Chi also had a house party which included girls from many parts of North Carolina and Virginia.

Meeting of D. A. R.

The Davie Poplar chapter of D. A. R. will meet Tuesday afternoon, April 22, at half-past three, with Mrs. Irene Lee, at Spencer hall. The local chapter will have as its guests the General Davie chapter of Durham and the Caswell Nash chapter of Raleigh. Frank Graham will be the speaker.

Press Meeting at Blowing Rock

The North Carolina Press Association will hold its 1930 meeting at Blowing Rock July 23, 24, 25.

Fraternity Pledges Undergoing Last Of Horseplay This Week

"Horse-play!" What an awful feeling this word brings to the minds of a few of the unfortunate pledges that have not yet had their turn. And for those pledges that have completed their pre-initiation stunts, this word is looked upon with unpleasant memories.

Many of the noted "Greeks" have finished their performances long ago, but there still remain quite a few that have been more considerate of their freshmen by giving them time to "get in condition." There still can be seen numerous weary looking creatures, trying to get back to civilization, creeping along the many county roads leading to and from the Hill. And if anyone in a passing car would do the poor mortals the kindness to stop and pick one of them up, the driver would hear some of the weird and monotonous deeds that this sleepless lad has experienced in the past few days and nights.

Many are the queer things that the night watchman sees as he makes his rounds during the latter part of the night and early hours of the morning. Ghosts dressed in white sheets, "sleepy-eyed" freshmen looking for the "unseen eyes" that are watching them, and many other such sights are witnessed by the night owl and the watchman.

These sights are apparently not confined to the darkness of the night, for if one will be on the lookout, he will see numerous things during the course of a day that will give him a good laugh—provided he is hard-hearted enough to overlook the suffering portrayed on the face of the victim.

Other actions which do not cause so much pain to the poor "freshie" may also be witnessed. Such things as having to port two eggs around in each pocket seem to have become quite a fad with a number of the fraternities. Others seem to take great delight in making the poor, worn-out "neophytes" eat such mess as a hungry d... would turn up his nose at. A few other pitiful pre-initiates are made to walk all over Orange, Durham, and Wake counties on treasure hunts only to end the wearisome journey by finding the treasure to be a long wooden paddle that will soon be put into use.

Numerous other stages of initiation are going on, on the campus, but it would take a volume to hold the entire list. The only consolation that these meek victims have is that they will "get it back" on the others when they come in next year.

One neophyte, who was probably instructed to catch a bird before coming back to the frat house, was seen late yesterday afternoon running about the campus with a handful of salt which he was going to sprinkle on birdie's tail. Still others, probably with the same instructions, could be seen waiting longingly for a bird to come and stick his head in the cunningly set trap of a baking powder box.

Tar Heel Runners Show Dust To Penn State Cindermen

LOCAL TRACKSTERS STILL UNWHIPPED IN DUAL CLASHES

Nine Firsts Help Whip Penn Staters By Score Of 70½ To 55½.

BARKLEY BEATS REKERS

Superiority in the dashes and hurdles proved the margin by which North Carolina's flying trackmen beat Penn State here yesterday, 70½ to 55¼, to keep unbroken their enviable record of no defeats in dual meets in eight years.

Performances were consistently good, despite the wetness of the track. Minor Barkley, Tar Heel distance ace, beat Paul Rekers, Penn State star, who holds the I. C. A. A. A. A. two-mile record, in a 4:26.6 that was the feature of the meet.

The Tar Heels took nine first places. The sophomore flash, Farmer, led the parade with two firsts in the dashes, while Adkins, shot putter; Barkley, miler; Perry, high hurdler; Weil, quarter-miler; Slusser, low hurdles; and Brown, discus hurler, accounted for the others.

The Penn Staters proved strongest in the half-mile in which Bachman, Wolfe and Rekers made a clean sweep; in the two-mile in which Meisinger and Detwiler ran a great 9:48.8 tie; and in the javelin and high jump.

The meet failed to produce any new records, due to the heaviness of the track after the heavy rains, but it did produce a real contest in every event, keeping grossly interested to the last minute a crowd estimated at 3,000.

Summary:

100-yard dash—Farmer (C), Gay (C), and Stookey (P). Time, 10 seconds.

220-yard dash—Farmer (C), Slusser (C), and Kennedy (P). Time, 22 seconds.

440-yard run—Weil (C), Gay (C), and Flenniken (P). Time, 51.2 seconds.

880-yard run—Bachman (P), Wolfe (P), and Rekers (P). Time, 2:01.2.

One mile run—Barkley (C), Rekers (P), and King (P). Time, 4:26.6.

Two-mile run—Meisinger (P) and Detwiler (P) tied for first; Baucom (C). Time, 9:48.8.

120-yard high hurdles—Perry (C), McDowell (P), Reid (C). Time, 15.6 seconds.

220-yard low hurdles—Slusser (C), Perry (C), and McDowell (P). Time, 25.4 seconds.

Pole vaule—Captain Mobley (P), first; Neiman, Arnold and Ruble (C), tied for second. Height, 11 feet 7¼.

High jump—Palmer (P), first; Captain Mobley (P) and Bagby (C), tied for second. Height, 5 feet 9 inches.

Broad jump—Neiman (C), first; Funke (P), second; Johnson (C) and Captain Mobley (P), tied for third. Distance, 21 feet 8 inches.

Discus—Brown (C), Shawley (P), and Dameron (C). Distance, 132 feet 9½ inches.

Shot put—Adkins (C), Brown (C), and Fisher (P). Distance, 41 feet 1¾ inches.

Javelin—Musser (P), Shawley (P), Brown (C). Distance, 170 feet 6 5-8 inches.

In 1900 it was reported that a student could live in Chapel Hill for $150 for the school year.

SIDELIGHTS

by

By Jack Bessen

Carolina still maintained an eight-year supremacy in dual meets by defeating a strong Penn State team yesterday at Emerson field. The score was 71-55. Due to the sodden and slow condition of the field no new records were made, although several races were run in very fast time. The Nittany Lions came to Chapel Hill with the reputation of being one of the East's premier teams and yesterday one could see the reason for this.

By far the most thrilling race was that between Rekers and Barkley. At the Millrose Games last winter Rekers badly defeated Pieculewicz, conqueror of Paavo Nurmi, in the mile run, and was doped to give Carolina's best a drubbing. Barkley jumped out in front and maintained his lead until the straightaway for the finish; here the Lion passed him, but Barkley put on a final spurt which allowed him barely to nose out Rekers.

In spite of the dreary weather Emerson stadium was packed, which just goes to show the ever-increasing popularity of track in North Carolina circles. There were also many visitors from South Carolina and Virginia.

"Weasel" Neiman was pole vaulting and taking practice broad jumps at the same time, which just goes to show that you can do two things at once. Incidentally the Weasel took first in the broad jump and tied with Arnold and Ruble in the pole vault.—not a bad day's work.

It certainly was a pleasure to watch Messinger of Penn State cover the two-mile distance. Messinger, a star on Penn State's championship cross-country team, together with Detwilder, another star, literally ran away with the two-mile. Their time was 9:48.8.

New Hardware Store

Some time within the next two weeks, a new business firm will open in Chapel Hill. It is the Orange Hardware Company, to be located in the store that was occupied until recently by the Moore-Johnson Hardware Company.

The owners of the new concern are D. M. Jacobs and C. D. Kittredge. Mr. Jacobs is from Florida, and Mr. Kittredge is a native of Maine. They were formerly in the hardware business at Fort Lauderdale, Florida; and Mr. Jacobs has also traveled, representing wholesale hardware concerns over the country.

The store is being repainted inside, and numerous improvements are being made. The high shelves are to be torn down, lower ones installed, display tables put on the floor, and other changes will be made. A full line of hardware will be carried in stock.

Mother's Day

A passage from John Macy's new book, About Women: "To elevate motherhood to its true dignity, the first thing is to rid it of superstition and sentimentality. This seems to be especially desirable in America where the home-and-mother theme flourishes most rankly, where a pathetic comic festival, Mother's Day, fans filial emotion into momentary flame, to the profit of telegraph companies and vendors of candies and flowers."

WILL OPEN "BIG FIVE" SCHEDULE IN EASTER GAME

Tar Heels Play Davidson Monday At Winston-Salem In Annual Battle.

VETERANS TO GET CALL

The University baseball squad goes to Winston-Salem tomorrow for the annual and traditional Easter Monday battle with Davidson, of added significance this year because this game will open the Big Five season for the Tar Heels.

Jim Ball southpawed the Wildcats out of a hard-earned victory in last year's Easter Monday classic, but Ball is on the roster of graduated Tar Heels stars now, and any younger heads will do the pitching against Davidson Monday, probably the veteran Frank Fleming, or one of the youngsters, Shields or Longest.

Coach Jim Ashmore is taking a large squad to Winston, due to the fact that this game is only the first of a series of six that the Tar Heels face for the week, but the veterans will undoubtedly get the call against Davidson.

This seems inevitable. A disastrous trip through Virginia has practically eliminated the Tar Heels from the Tri-State League championship race. The Tar Heels won that title last year, and so could devote less attention to Big Five matters. But, with chances at another Tri-State title pretty well shot, Coach Ashmore plans to attempt the best start possible in the Big Five run.

That will probably mean an infield of Captain Maus, catcher; Jackson, first; Rand, second; Whitehead, short; and Lufty, third; and an outfield of Davis, left; Sher, center; and House, right.

The infielders are all veterans who played good ball last year and whose work is the big feature of the Tar Heel attack this season. The outfielders are younger heads, however, who have not done conspicuous work yet, and who must work hard to keep their places over such men at Blythe, McKinney, Paxton and Crouch.

Davidson, which has an impressive season record to date, will probably start Gladston, c; Goodson, 1b; McMillan, 2b; Barnhardt, ss; Parrish, 3b; Covington, lf; Miller, cf; Mathis, rf; and either Croker or McInnis, pitcher.

Nineteen Graduates

Chapel Hill High School Commencement Date Set for June 4

Nineteen members of the senior class at the Chapel Hill high school expect to be graduated this June. The date of commencement exercises has been set for June 4.

A committee was recently appointed to consider the selection of a play to be given by the class shortly before the end of school. Last year the play was given after commencement by special permission. It is hoped that the present seniors will be able to complete preparations in time to produce the play at an earlier date.

Class day exercises this year will probably be held on the day before commencement, June 3.

During 1907 about 164 self-help students earned approximately $20,000 during the school year.

MRS. CORA HARRIS PROFESSOR OF EVIL

Winterpark, Fla., April 19.—(IP)—In an academic sense, evil has been elevated to co-equal educational rank with good by Rollins College here.

Mrs. Cora Harris, novelist, who declares she "has no use for conscious goodness," has been placed in charge as the first known professor of good and evil. A rush of applicants for the revolutionary course was reported.

PROFESSOR CORA HARRIS

President Hamilton Holt dispelled any doubts about the scope of the course, however, when he made clear it anticipated no actual practice of evil.

"Rather, the class will study the history and philosophy of evil as contrasted with virtue, discussing the effects of evil in history and life."

Students in the advanced sociological groups only will be admitted to the class.

"Evil is one of the oldest classics of human nature," Mrs. Harris said. "It is taught by people morally illiterate and mentally corrupt, when it should be an important part in the education of youth.

"Evil is a dignified subject and an important part of education. It is a subject that should be taught by good people and not by evil persons."

RALEIGH WINS IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Council Of Chapel Hill Loses To Harris Of Raleigh In Interscholastic.

Despite the interference of bad weather, the 15th annual interscholastic tennis tournament was completed here yesterday, with Harvey Harris of Raleigh defeating Claude Council of Chapel Hill for the singles championship, and Winston-Salem, represented by Reid and Southern, who won the singles championship last year, defeating a hard-fighting Rockingham team composed of Dockery and Flowers.

Because of the rain and muddy courts, the matches were played on the indoor courts in the Tin Can, which hindered the players' form somewhat, due to the fact that they had had but little experience on indoor courts.

Rockingham staged a remarkable uphill fight against Charlotte in the semi-finals. At one time during the match they were trailing Jones and Grier with the set score two to one against them, the game score being four-love in favor of Charlotte, but they staged a game rally to win the set and tie the match score at two sets all. Rockingham then took the last set, six games to three, earning the right to compete in the final round against Winston-Salem, which team had previously defeated Mount Airy in their semi-final round.

Summary of singles match:

Harris, Raleigh, defeated Council, Chapel Hill, 6-3, 6-4, 6-8, 6-3.

Doubles:

Southern and Reid, Winston-Salem, defeated Lowry and Lovill, Mount Airy, 6-4, 7-5 (only two sets by mutual agreement); Dockery and Flowers, Rockingham, defeated Jones and Grier, Charlotte, 3-6, 6-3, 7-9, 7-5, 6-3; Southern and Reid defeated Dockery and Flowers, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5.

Golf Tournament

There will be a golf tournament for women on the country club course Saturday morning at half-past nine. At 1:30 in the afternoon the men will hold their tournament on the course.

In June 1908 thirty-one students of the school of medicine took the State Board examination.

In 1909 the faculty of the summer school consisted of only ten instructors.

NEW Y OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED BY PARSON MOSS

Jimmie Williams and Old Order Gives Way To President Hamer.

At a joint meeting of the Y cabinets last night the new officers of the Y were installed.

Parson W. D. Moss of the Presbyterian church read the seventeenth chapter of St. John's gospel and based his installation address on this scripture. He showed how important it was to give oneself to the truth in order to succeed in any task. He gave examples of great men in this country who owe their success to this quality. After his speech on the way to success, he gave a brief history of the Y. M. C. A. organization in America and in this University.

It was shown that the present Y building is inadequate for the needs of the student body. After having charged the out-going president, James Williams, to keep up his work, Parson Moss gave the new president, Ed Hamer, the formula to success as portrayed in the seventeenth chapter of St. John.

The ex-president emphasized the importance of the Blue Ridge

ANNUAL AWARDS FOR GRADUATES

Social Science Council Announces List of Rosenwald Fellowships; Includes Three University Graduates.

The first annual awards of fellowships to southern graduate students in the social sciences, made possible by a grant of $50,000 from the Julius Rosenwald Fund, were announced yesterday by the Social Science Research Council.

Out of 125 applicants, representing practically all the states of the south, twenty-six were chosen. Ten of the new fellows are women and sixteen are men. Five are negroes. All were chosen on a competitive basis, and will spend the next academic year at some accredited graduate school working on social science problems of special interest to the south.

"The major purpose behind these new fellowships is to attract a higher quality of scientifically trained personnel to work on important social problems facing the southern section of the country," said the announcement of the Southern Fellowships Committee, of which W. W. Alexander of Atlanta, Ga., is chairman.

"The fields represented by the fellowships include sociology, economics, government, history, psychology, and social work. It is hoped that one of the important by-products of this new series of fellowships will be to build up a more enlightened social and economic leadership in the south."

The list of 28 Rosenwald fellows includes: Miss Virginia Denton, A.B., University of Mississippi, and a graduate student here at the University.

Waller Wynne, Jr., A.B., University of Richmond; M.A., Duke University; graduate student, University of North Carolina.

And Howard W. Odum, head of the University Institute Research for Social Science.

Magazine Staff Meeting

Contrary to an announcement which appeared in Sunday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel, the new Carolina Magazine staff will not become operative until the issue of May 18. The present staff will put out the issue of May 4, the remaining issues of May 18 and June 1 being left for the new staff.

As announced, however, there will be an organization staff meeting Thursday evening in the Tar Heel-Magazine offices, at 7 o'clock. The staff will be picked largely upon the basis of material submitted for the issues of May 18 and June 1, which will be published by the new editor.

Garrett Will Speak Before Math Seminar

R. L. Garrett, graduate student in mathematics and a candidate for a master's degree, will speak on "The Reduction of Quadratic Forms to a Camonical Form" at the mathematics seminar Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Garrett is the second candidate for a master's degree to give his report. The first candidate, J. J. Slade, has already given three reports upon his subject.

WILL INVESTIGATE STATUS OF SENATE

Owing to the recent agitation in the Di senate arising out of the assertion that the senate is on the verge of extinction, president-pro-tem Medford, presiding last Tuesday night in the absence of President Rector, appointed a committee to investigate the present standing of the senate on the campus, and to draw up a list of recommendations for its improvement. This committee which is composed of Senators Dratler, Wood and Williams will make its report at the regular meeting of the senate tonight.

When the report of the committee has been heard, the senators will discuss it and make amendments accordingly. Working through this committee on reconstruction, the officials of the Di hope to accelerate the present amount of interest in its work.

Phi To Debate Co-eds

The bill coming before the Phi Assembly at its regular meeting tonight is "Resolved, That the co-eds should be admitted into the Phi Assembly with full privileges of that institution." This bill is one of five recommendations that former Speaker Lang submitted to the assembly in his final address.

The first degree of M. D. to be given at the main commencement exercises was awarded in 1909.

TAU BETA PI TO CONDUCT TAPPING SERVICES TONIGHT

Dean Braune To Deliver Address At Eight O'clock In Phillips Hall.

Tonight the robed and hooded figures of Tau Beta Pi, national honorary engineering scholastic fraternity, will stalk among those present at the annual spring tapping and pounce upon chosen members of the group, thus signifying that these men have shown scholastic excellence and character development which fits them for membership in this organization which recognizes these qualities in engineering students throughout the country.

In this impressive way, Tau Beta Pi, the engineering organization corresponding to Phi Beta Kappa, will make known to the campus those men who have been particularly successful in their work in engineering.

G. M. Braune, dean of the school of Engineering, will be the principal speaker at the tapping Tuesday evening, which will be held in Phillips Hall at 8:00 o'clock.

Twice each year, tappings are held; once in the spring when seniors and rising seniors are eligible for membership, and again in the fall, when members of the senior class alone are qualified.

The chapter of the fraternity at Carolina, Beta of North Carolina, is one of over 60 chapters in the United States. Since its organization at Lehigh University in 1885, 45 years ago, more than 16,000 engineers have been tapped for membership in the group, and many of the most prominent engineers in the country have been initiated and wear the symbol of the fraternity.

Tau Beta Pi is one of three national honorary fraternities on the campus. The other two are Phi Beta Kappa, the universally-known scholastic fraternity, and Sigma Xi, the honorary scientific research society.

Last year, with a ceremony similar to that which will be used again this year, the frater-

Senior Dance

Dave Nims, chairman of the senior dance committee, has announced that negotiations are underway with several well-known out-of-town orchestras to play for the dance on May 16. It is expected that this affair will be the most outstanding class dance of the year since it is being staged during a week-end full of social activities, including a Grail dance, several houseparties, and two tea dances. In view of this fact the members of the class of 1930 are urged to invite a large and beautiful group of girls in order to assure the success of the dance.

LOCAL FORENSIC ARTISTS VICTORS IN BOSTON TILT

One of the best intercollegiate debates of the year took place in Gerrard hall Saturday night when the Tar Heel debaters tackled the Boston University aggregation on "Resolved, That the nations of the world should adopt some plan of complete disarmament of all forces, except those which are needed for police purposes." The local team, composed of J. M. Baley, G. P. Carr and J. A. Wilkinson, upheld the affirmative side of the argument.

The Boston team stopped in Chapel Hill for a debate with the University in the course of a tour of the south which will have lasted for 16 days when it has been completed. From here they went to Gainesville for a debate with the University of Florida.

After an hour and one-half of heated argument, which seemed hotter as each succeeding speaker held forth, the Carolina team was awarded the decision. It is interesting to note that this was the first time that the Boston team had lost on the tour despite the fact that they had debated the same question a dozen times on the trip. This was also the first loss recorded against the Bostonians since the opening of the present collegiate year.

Early in May Carolina will send a team to Boston to debate the same question.

Three Celebrities Form Art Colony In Village

William Steene, Mary Graves Rees, and Mary Screven Nash Form Nucleus Of an Expanding Group of Artists—Find University Ideal Place To Work.

(By Peggy Lintner)

From somewhere there has evolved itself the vague and popular conception that art is born in that atmosphere garnished with the odor of oil paints, beefsteak and onions, wet clay, Caron's Narcisse Noir, and the subtle Arabic incense and that it is ushered into being to the tune of Chopin's nocturne in E flat. That is the exaggerated Greenwich Village art colony of O. Henry.

If Greenwich Village can lay claim to the title of artists' rendezvous of New York, Chapel Hill can without reserve lay claim to that title in North Carolina. Only recently has it been noted that the nucleus of a colony of portrait painters has distributed itself throughout the picturesque quaintness of this well known village.

So quietly and unobtrusively have these painters merged with the host of celebrities in Chapel Hill that the growth of the movement has scarcely been observed, much less mentioned. Ten years ago there was not one known or unknown portrait painter in the immediate vicinity. Today Chapel Hill boasts of three artists who are widely known for their fine work. The names of William A. Steene, Mrs. A. C. Nash and Mrs. Mary Graves Rees are fast becoming familiar to national art circles.

Why He Likes Chapel Hill

"Chapel Hill," says Mr. Steene who is a well known portrait painter in and about New York and through the south today, "is conducive to any work requiring leisure, quiet, time for observa-

SIX FRATS MAKE PLANS TO STAGE MAY FROLIC SOON

Biggest Program Of The Spring Season; To Include Three Dances.

On the week-end of May 2 and 3, six of the fraternities on the Hill are to stage probably one of the biggest dance programs of the season. This program is to consist of three large dances; two of them are to be given on Friday and Saturday nights in Bynum gymnasium and the third is to be a tea dance in the Washington-Duke hotel in Durham on Saturday afternoon.

Music for the two dances to be held in the gymnasium is to be furnished by "Jelly" Leftwich and his orchestra. So far no one has been engaged for tea dance. The committee in charge of the dances stated that although no one has yet been secured for this dance, someone will be engaged in due time and good music may be expected.

The six fraternities that are giving these dances are Beta Theta Pi, D. K. E., Sigma Nu, Sigma Chi, Phi Delta Theta and Zeta Psi. The Sigma Nu and Phi Delta Theta fraternities are the only ones that have planned so far to have house parties for

HANDBOOK WILL HAVE NEW STAFF

Six Editorial Positions To Be Filled; Staff Tryouts Tomorrow At Seven.

The first call for staff members of the Carolina Handbook was issued by the editor yesterday. All aspirants who desire to become associated with this publication should attend the 15 minute meeting of the staff which will be held in the Tar Heel office Wednesday night at seven o'clock. No previous experience in journalistic work is necessary.

The purpose in increasing the size of the editorial staff is to lessen the responsibility of the present editors, distribute the work of the publication among a larger group, and at the same time give valuable experience and training to those engaged in this work.

There are six positions open for occupancy. These include: associate, assistant, organization, town, athletic and Y. M. C. A. editors. The work consists mainly of make up, arrangement of copy, and the verification of athletic and scholastic honors, letters, numerals, etc. Next year's editor will be chosen from this group.

The Carolina Handbook is unique in size, make up, and the number of pages. In no other southern school is the Handbook as large. The majority of them are merely vest-pocket editions. The use of illustrated pictures is another distinguishing feature of the University publication.

The unusual excellency of the Carolina Handbook is verified by the fact that many northern schools have begun to edit and pattern their publications in a similar manner.

The 1930-31 edition of the Handbook, which goes to press May 15, will include ten additional pages and a new change in typography.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

For we that live to please must please to live.—Johnson.

Shall The Daily Continue?

The Daily Tar Heel is still an experiment in collegiate journalism at the University of North Carolina. Just what measure of success campus opinion accords this experiment will be determined when the student body is called upon in the near future to vote whether to continue the Daily, or to return to the old tri-weekly. The Daily Tar Heel staff is but a medium through which the student body must execute its wishes regarding the publication. We believe that this should be the case. Realizing that the students of the University voted by an impressive margin to inaugurate the daily, the present staff is confident that these same students will vote to continue it.

Although it is not the function of any member of the staff to say whether the daily has been a success or a failure, perhaps the staff knows better than anybody else that the Daily Tar Heel has been the recipient of a great deal of favorable recognition. Such college papers as the University Daily Kansan, the McGill Daily, the Oregon State Daily, and numerous college publications which are not dailies have consistently reprinted news items and editorials from the Daily Tar Heel. This is without question a marked tribute to the staff of the paper, and to the student body which voted to launch the daily experiment.

We have not the slightest intention of going into a long, detailed argument here, to point out the advantages which a daily college paper has over a tri-weekly. These have been previously pointed out in the columns of this paper and in numerous student gatherings, such as the joint meeting of the Di and Phi last spring. Suffice it to say that the Daily Tar Heel has been worked out systematically and scientifically throughout the seven and one-half months that it has been published. Great credit is due Editor Holder for his regular weekly staff meetings, at which flaws in the issues of the past week were always pointed out. Without his untiring efforts the daily would not have reached the high journalistic level that we believe it has. The present staff is eager to continue the work which Editor Holder has begun. We have made mistakes thus far which we believe can be remedied in the future. The final authority, of course, resides with the students of the University. The Daily Tar Heel is their paper—their medium of expression. When the measure is voted upon, student judgement will be at stake. Take care how you vote!

Speaking aside from the relative merits of the daily and the tri-weekly, there is a decidedly unimpressive note in the language, "return from the daily to the tri-weekly"—a retrogressive connotation which thus far has not been characteristic of the students of this university. The nation's best and most progressive colleges and universities have daily papers. The leaders in academic matters are also leaders in collegiate journalism.

Fellow student, when you vote remember that Carolina is a stronghold of liberal action—the arch-enemy of retrogression.

—J. C. W.

Protective Association Needed

There has been quite a bit of discussion on the question of the epidemic of petty thievery that was existant on the campus last spring. Steps were taken to remedy it. Agents were denied entrance to the dormitories and warnings were given to prevent another such situation in the future. However, these precautions seem to have been of no avail. A slicker, a hat, a pair of golf hose, two suits of clothes are a few of the things that have been taken from one of the dormitories on the campus. The same conditions exist in practically all of them. Light bulbs are taken from the shower rooms almost as soon as they are put in; one does not dare to leave tooth paste, soap, towels or other toilet articles in the shower rooms. They disappear almost from under the hands. We cannot deceive ourselves any longer. It is a problem that we cannot disregard without disastrous results. We tried to think that the thieves were outsiders, but that theory has miserably fallen down. The work is undoubtedly done from the inside. In many instances the doors are locked when things disappear. The library is another prolific field for the labors of these parasites. There is no question but that something must be done.

Our desire to keep such conditions under the surface has only encouraged them. If a thief knew that his punishment would be merciless and sure, he would hesitate before he took something that was not his. But, as long as he has what he probably calls a "sporting chance" his covetous spirit will be satisfied at the expense of society. Take the element of chance from stealing and stealing will stop, for a thief is a gambler at heart. To say that there is no way of outwitting these individuals, or the "ring" as it probably should be called, is to say that the brightest minds of the University are given over to stealing, which I am sure is not true.

The students owe it to themselves to band together—in spirit, if not actually—and to cooperate until this blot is entirely erased from the pages of "Carolina" history. Our attitude toward this kind of law-breaking is not what it should be. We are not interested in the slickers and coats, suits and toilet articles of other people so long as ours are safe. However, we should realize that ours are not safe as long as the present conditions exist. The officials and students of Carolina are not responsible for the presence of these people who are disgracing the institution, and none of us should feel ashamed because they are here. But, it is a disgrace and a shame for us to allow them to remain.

When a theft is discovered there should be some means of communicating it immediately to the entire student body, along with all clues that might lead to the discovery of the thief. Each of us should take a lively interest in the problem not only for the sake of a fellow school mate but for our own interest as well. It is a problem that challenges us, and is a type of the kind that we shall meet when we go out into the business world as citizens. The way that we handle it will determine to some measure the way we shall handle like problems in the future.

REMINISCENCES

From the Tar Heel Files

By Howard M. Lee

Twenty-Five Years Ago

Jacob A. Riis spoke before a large audience on "The Battle with the Slums" during chapel period. Mr. Riis was formerly a Danish immigrant, coming alone into this country at an early age and working himself up to the position referred to later by the great Theodore Roosevelt as "the most useful citizen of New York."

Uncle Bennie, aged 80, one of the most familiar and picturesque figures of Chapel Hill life passed into the great beyond. The Tar Heel told of how he wandered the streets delighting students with his imitation of cock-crowing and by his feats showing the remarkable toughness of his skull. He was known to butt the head out of barrels and even to leap high into the air and land on his head. So well was he liked that it was said that "he would play a leading part in the reunion anecdotes (heavenly) of the coming years."

The Chicago Glee Club rendered a concert in chapel.

Professor Collier Cobb conducted a party of ten University students to Cumnock where they spent several days studying geology.

Ten Years Ago This Week

The senior class decided to donate an oil painting of President Graham made at a cost of $1,500 to be placed in the new Graham Memorial building.

Hon. Robert G. Rhett, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and a resident of Charleston, S. C., delivered the annual Weil Lectures for 1920.

J. J. Parker, republican candidate for governor made a short address before the Dialectic Senate.

Five Years Ago

The University of Maryland gave Carolina its first defeat in baseball for the '25 season.

The University Y. M. C. A. announced that it had secured Allyn K. Foster, secretary of the northern Baptist Education Board, to deliver the annual Weil Lectures April 28 to 30.

The University was host to the National Conference of Deans and Advisers of Men during its seventh meeting.

The Delta Pi, local fraternity, was granted a charter by the national officers of the Theta Kappa Nu.

"Ape Lecturer Was Never Invited Here" says the Tar Heel for this week. Furthermore, Dr. Wolfgang Koehler of the University of Berlin was never written to by the University, according to Dr. Chase. A Massachusetts newspaper made the statement that the University had terminated an engagement with Koehler, but in reality he was never engaged.

Readers' Opinions

Josephus Daniels in a short note to the editor asks that the other side of the recent prohibition poll among the colleges be given a hearing, and sends along a clipping from the Springfield, Mass., Republican.

To Editor of The Republican:

Under startling headlines the wet press is advertising to the world the amazing thirst for alcohol and the drunkenness which prevail in our American colleges, and is heralding the news forth in a tone as jubilant as the voice of Floyd Gibbons in broadcasting the vote of the thirsty boys in the Literary Digest poll. . . .

The vote of the 14 institutions was tabulated as follows:

Mass. Technology, 363 for enforcement, 540 for modification, 323 for repeal; Amherst, 77 for enforcement, 285 for modification, 122 for repeal; Princeton, 209 for enforcement, 966 for modification, 675 for repeal; Purdue, 84 for enforcement, 110 for modification, 54 for repeal; Harvard, 436 for enforcement, 1555 for modification, 1018 for repeal; Pennsylvania, 731 for enforcement, 478 for modification; Pittsburgh, 509 for enforcement, 1101 for modification, 896 for repeal; Assumption College, 2 for enforcement, 52 for modification, 64 for repeal; Colgate, 170 for enforcement, 386 for modification, 84 for repeal; Michigan, 1046 for enforcement, 2966 for modification, 820 for repeal; Cornell, 387 for enforcement, 1144 for modification, 542 for repeal; Lafayette, 142 for enforcement, 240 for modification, 289 for repeal; Dartmouth, 188 for enforcement, 720 for modification, 529 for repeal; Brown, 163 for enforcement, 463 for modification, 173 for repeal. Totals, 4517 for enforcement, 11,006 for modification, 5589 for repeal.

To read these wet statistics, one might conclude that the genus homo of our American colleges had not yet proceeded far from its primordial sludge. But let us examine these statistics and some of the statements made about them. Observe, first, that no figures are given on the total enrollment in these colleges. . . . The enrollment as given for 1929 in the World Almanac:—

Mass. Tech., 2,868; Amherst, 734; Princeton, 2,488; Purdue, 3,732; Brown, 1,603; Harvard, 8,110; Penn., 12,564; Pittsburg, 12,725; Colgate, 993; Michigan, 9,529; Cornell, 5,569; Lafayette, 1,000; Dartmouth, 2,274.

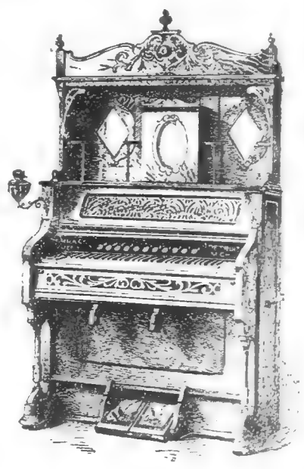
Out of an enrollment of 60,000 students for the 14 colleges listed, some 16,000 are recorded for repeal or modification. What is to be said of the 70 per cent who didn't vote? Might it not be that a sense of loyalty and a feeling that the question is one not now properly open for debate prompted many of these young men to refuse to participate in such a poll?

The North Carolina Academy of Science held its spring meeting of 1912 at the University.

LIVERY STABLE RESURRECTION TO ACCOMPANY CAROLINIAN AUTO BAN

Proposed Abolition of Student Cars Aids Liberian Buggy Owners; Organ Salesman Here; Phi Pi's Favor Faculty Measure.

(By John Patric)



An option to purchase the old Greenboro property on Franklin street has been taken by out-of-town interests, it is reported, for the purpose of establishing a livery stable, following the authoritative prediction that the ban on student-driven automobiles would go into effect on May 23rd, upon which date in 1892 occurred the first automobile casualty, in Pawtucket, R. I., that of Abilene Growley, who died of fright upon seeing her first horseless carriage.

Members of the Board of Aldermen are said to be considering enactment of legislation prohibiting the building of a livery stable within 7,000 feet of the traffic light, but one member of the board is quoted as saying that since state regulation of livery stables has been inoperative for a decade the board is powerless. A tightening up of the bumming ordinance is proposed, as an alternative, to keep Carolinians on their feet.

A prominent local garage man announces that a shipload of slightly used buggies, barouches and chaises, destined for use here, has been loaded at Monrovia, Liberia. The negro republic, he says, has recently become almost entirely motorized. Hence the low figure at which the horse-drawn equipment was purchased. "We will be in a position to offer buggies for as low as ten dollars down and five dollars per month," he said, "and we will accept motor cars in lieu of a down payment."

Enricho Dresslar, salesman for the Parlor Equipment Company of Kennebunkport, Maine, has been in Chapel Hill for the past week, taking orders for the New Model Family Organ, which, he says, is as fine a vehicle for getting young people together as the motor car ever was. The New Model Organ is equipped with a rubber hose to be attached to inflated automobile tires and thus avoid the labor of pumping the instrument. Among purchasers of the organ are eight leading fraternities.

"We are wholeheartedly in favor of the rule to abolish automobiles," said Mary Lou Ashton, president of Phi Beta Pi sorority. "We will ask our dates to take us walking in the Arboretum, contributing money saved on gasoline, tires, etc., to a 'kitty' with which we soon hope to build a new house. Our architect has announced plans providing for no less than 30 pleasant little alcoves which will be available in inclement weather for our dates."

the week-end of the dances; others will probably decide to give house-parties before the time arrives.

The "May Frolic," as these dances have been called, will probably be the biggest feature on the spring quarter dance program. Numerous smaller dances have been planned for practically every week-end throughout the quarter, but this "May Frolic" is to be the only set that will have as many as three dances.

Each of the six fraternities giving the "May Frolic" will probably have from 15 to 25 or 30 girls here for the dances, to say nothing of those girls that are already here.

So far, no definite program has been planned for the dances, but in all probability there will be no figures of any kind at any of the dances. Frazier Glenn and Baron Holmes will have charge of the decorations at all three of the dances.

Besides these three dances, there will be many others given during the rest of the quarter. The Order of the Grail has made plans for several not to mention the numerous fraternities that have made arrangements for many other featuring dances.

The "May Frolic" and the many other dances that will be given this quarter, together with the finals, will help to make this one of the fullest dance seasons in a long time. Linen suits and spring dresses have already begun to make their appearances at some of the hops held here lately and by the time that the season is here, they will have come back into their own for the remainder of the summer months.

The committee that is to have charge of these three fraternity dances is composed of Willis Henderson, Sigma Nu; Art Sickles, Sigma Chi; Charles Smith, Zeta Psi; Dail Holderness, D. K. E.; Marion Follins, Beta Theta Pi; and Moseley Fonveille, Phi Delta Theta.

nity tapped six men for membership, and again last fall several were tapped. Much speculation has arisen over who will be selected this year, but until Tuesday evening nothing will be known about who will be thus honored this spring.

Phi Alpha Delta To Give Supper Tonight

The Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity will give a supper at 7 o'clock this evening in Smith building. Gregory A. Smith, the newly elected president of the fraternity, will preside, and Professor M. T. Van Hecke of the law school faculty will make a talk. These suppers will be held once each month and will be entirely informal.

Tar Heels Open Two Game Series Here With Georgia

Three Former Football Men Star On Georgia Nine; Chandler To Face Carolina Batsmen In Mound.

The University of North Carolina baseball team meets Georgia here tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the first of four games carded for Emerson field in the four days left of this week.

Georgia will furnish the opposition again Thursday afternoon. V. P. I. will come to Chapel Hill Friday. Duke will be met on Saturday in the closing game of the week's schedule.

The Bulldogs from Peachland proved a tough club in a previous brace of games with the Tar Heels. Chandler, football star, held the Tar Heels to three hits and Georgia took the first 9-1, while the Tar Heels eked out a 6-4 win in an abbreviated second contest.

Three of the best men were stars also on the Georgia football team that robbed Carolina of an undefeated grid season last fall. These are Rothstein, fullback and first baseman; Smith, center fielder; and Chandler, pitcher.

The Tar Heels will be the better off for a day's rest made possible by cancellation of the second game of the Davidson series, and will probably send full strength against Georgia.

Coach Ashmore hasn't announced his pitching choice yet, but the rest of the line-up will probably show Maus, c; Jackson, 1b; Rand, 2b; Whitehead, ss; Lufty, 3b; Davis, lf; Sher, cf; and House, rf.

The invincible Chandler will probably be on the mound for Georgia, supported by Gorman, c; Rothstein, 1b; Davenport, 2b; McGehey, ss; Day, 3b; Hildburn, lf; Smith, cf; and Murdock, rf.

Phi Sig's Win

After previously beating Phi Gam 2-1 and Tau Epsilon Phi 12-2, Phi Sig came through again yesterday afternoon to win from pi Kappa Phi 8-2. Jimmy Teachy showed up exceptionally well on the mound for the winners, allowing only a few scattered hits throughout the game.

Phi Sig drew first blood by scoring one run in the first, a lead which was maintained until the last of the third inning, in which Pi Kappa Phi scored twice, but Phi Sig came back strong in the last inning with a barrage of hits that netted 7 runs and overcame the 2-1 lead.

Fans Look Forward

Sport fans who saw North Carolina's flying trackmen turn back Penn State here Saturday by a score of 70½ to 55½ are looking forward with much anticipation to the Carolina-Washington and Lee meet here next Monday. With strength amassed principally in the hurdles, the Generals took top honors from the Tar Heels in the first southern indoor games by a margin of two points. The Tar Heel hurdlers are much improved now, and prospects are for a great exhibition.

Two Old Friends Meet

Two old friends will meet again when Carolina and Washington and Lee stage their dual track meet here next Monday afternoon—the Tar Heel Farmer and the General Sandifer. Farmer beat Sandifer by inches in the 60-yard dash of the first southern indoor games and since that time both men have tied the southern record of 9.8 seconds for the 100-yard dash. Theirs should be a great race when they meet again.

CALLING THEM

By Jack Bessen

The Penn Relays, which will be held this Saturday at Philadelphia, will attract a larger number of star amateur athletes than any other outdoor track and field carnival of the season, including the I. C. A. A. A. and the Drake Relays. Because of the ever increasing popularity of track, the 1930 games will probably be witnessed by more people than ever before, in addition to the largest field that ever entered.

This year's games will bring together such stars as Martin and Conger and Rekers in the mile run, Ed Hamm in the broad jump, Bert Nelson in the high jump, Claude Bracy, George Simpson and Charlie Farmer in the sprints.

From noon to dusk for two days relay races will be reeled off as the 100 event list narrows down until its completion Saturday night.

Carnival records are bound to tumble in some races with Harvard's great one mile relay team of Cummings, Munroe, Hennessey and Record, indoor intercollegiate and world record holders, favored to lower the long-standing Relay record of 3:18 made in 1915 by Ted Meredith, Don Lippincott, Joe Lockwood and Frank Kaufmann.

Whether Ohio Sate will repeat with a pair of sprint victories at 440 and 880 yards in the double record-setting style that it did a year ago will again be of importance, since the renowned Simpson will be running the 110 and 220 yard anchor legs for the red-shirted Columbus (Ohio) quartet. Three of the four members of the 1929 combination have returned—Simpson, Strother and Dick Rockaway, Western Conference hurdles champion.

Penn's great all-round star, Berney Berlinger, who made the American Olympic team as a freshman, will be a prohibitive favorite to emerge the victor in the gruelling dacathlon test. Five of the nine men who finished a year ago will be back, but Big Barney, with his marked improvement every season, may accumulate another record total of points on Friday. In 1929 Berlinger won the new high carnival mark of 7,298.978 points.

If Berlinger can make decent time in the 1,500-meter run he has a fine chance to better Ken Doherty's American record of 7,784.68 points. No one who saw Berlinger stagger down the home stretch to topple over exhausted at the precise spot where the finish line was last year, can forget how much he ruined his point total by his wretched performance in that one event. Fortunately it was the final test on the decathlon program which again starts at 10 A. M. and finishes at 5:41 p. m., with only two hours respite for lunch.

The one-mile duel between Dr. Martin and Lermond will be their first meeting, since the 1,500-meter race at the last Olympic games, while Lermond was in the 5,000-meter test. But it will be the fifth between Dr. Martin and Conger and the fourth mile battle between Lermond and Conger.

As if this trio is not enough to stir up enough trouble, Orval Martin of Purdue, former Western Conference champion and a 4:15 miler, also will be in the thick of the battle with George Bullwinkle of City College in the race to speed up the early pace.

Sport Staff Meeting

There will be an important meeting of the Sport's Staff today at 3:00 p. m. Any one who does not attend will be dropped from the staff. None excused. All new men wishing reportorial jobs are asked to meet with the staff.

Davidson Game Is Second "Big Five" Contest For Frosh

The Tar Baby nine will play their second "Big Five" game with the Davidson yearlings tomorrow afternoon on the freshman field. Several men have been doing good work on the mound and as yet Coach Cerney has not picked his starting hurler.

The Davidson frosh have an unusually strong club this year, winning the majority of their games, but on the strength of the 12-inning battle with the Blue Imps, the Tar Babies should be the favorites to turn in a win.

Wednesday the Tar Babies will travel over to Riddick Field to play the State Frosh. This game was scheduled for last Thursday, but on account of the rain, was postponed.

The probable lineup for the Davidson game will be as follows: Allen 1st, Ferebee 2nd, Riggs ss, McCaskill 3rd, Dixon rf, Whitehead cf, Daniels lf, Pattisol or Peacock c, and Griffith or McNeil p.

Three Chapel Hill Organizations Plan Annual Flower Show

A combined exhibit from the Garden club, the American Home Department, and the Art Department of the Chapel Hill Community club will feature the annual Flower Show in the Tin Can here May 1, from noon until midnight.

Much interest is being shown in planning the exhibits and indications point to a highly successful show. Members of the club have been working hard to stimulate interest in the show. A large number of prizes are offered for the display of various classes of flowers. These prizes are made posible through the cooperation of merchants of Chapel Hill, Carrboro, Greensboro, and Durham, and several individuals.

Several of the prizes, including the Garden Improvement prize and the Lawn Improvement prize, will be awarded during the afternoon of the show.

Alterations Made In Co-op Schedule

A. R. Hollett, coordinator of the junior cooperative year in the school of engineering, visited Danville, Greensboro, and Charlotte the latter part of last week, interviewing executives of companies that give employment to the cooperative students about the change in schedule in the school of engineering. This change in schedule lengthens the periods of co-op work from seven to twelve weeks but cuts the number of periods from four to two.

Mr. Hollett visited the executives of the Southern Railway at Danville, Greensboro, and Charlotte; the Duke Power Company at Charlotte; R. H. Boulegney Co., Charlotte; and the City of Charlotte, where co-op students are now working.

The change in schedule, which is planned to begin next fall, affects all rising juniors in the engineering school. Besides increasing the periods from seven to twelve weeks and decreasing the number of periods from four to two, this change increases the summer school periods from two periods of eight weeks to two of twelve weeks.

University Netmen Register Victory Over Johns Hopkins

Visiting Tennis Team Fails To Take A Single Set As Tar Heels Swat Their Way To 9 - 1 Win; Largest Margin Of Victory In Recent Years.

The Carolina tennis team gained its fourth consecutive victory this season by defeating the invading Johns Hopkins netmen yesterday nine matches to none before a large gallery.

The visiting team received rather ill treatment at the hands of their hosts who sent them back to Baltimore without a single set to their credit, the Carolina men having won all their matches in straight sets. Although there are only two veterans, Captain Bill Merritt and Ed Yoemans, on this year's team, Carolina's future tennis opponents will have much to fear for the remaining four men, Hendlin, Liskin, Graham, and Baggs, have been holding up their end of the team to the satisfaction of Coach John Kenfield.

In the first match of the day, Ed Yoemans (C) easily defeated Captain Goldberg (J. H.) 6-1, 6-2. Not being in the slightest danger at any time, Yoemans casually stroked his way through the match, running Goldberg from one side of the court to the other in vain attempts to return hard drives. Yeomans is playing in top form this year, and has forced George Lott to three hard sets at Pinehurst recently, although Lott is a member of the U. S. Davis Cup team and ranks No. 3 in the country. Captain Merritt (C) found no trouble in disposing of Helmholy (J. H.) 6-2, 6-2. Helmholy was helpless against Merritt's sharp attacks, and time after time would find himself caught flat-footed on one side of the court while a well-volleyed ball sped past him on the other side.

Hendlin (C) walked away with his match against Shuger (J. H.) by the lop-sided score of 6-0, 6-0. His heavy service and deep forehand drives easily passed through the numerous holes in Shuger's defense, and the entire match was over in a scant half-hour.

Phil Liskin (C) turned in his fourth straight win this season by running through Lebour (J. H.) 6-1, 6-0. Liskin played a careful back-court game, and let his opponent make the errors. Lebour, who was playing very erratic tennis, obliged by continually knocking the balls into the net or out of bounds.

Graham (C) suffered a little competition from Tucker (J. H.) in the first set, and dropped three games. In the second set, however, Graham started lashing out with his long forehand drives, and ran out the set in short order. The final score was 6-3, 6-1.

Baggs (C) took the first set readily 6-1 from Salabes (J. H.) and had some difficulty in the second, but finally won 6-1, 6-3.

Carolina went through the doubles matches without trouble. Yeomans and Merritt, playing their usual synchronized game, rushed through Helmholy and Goldberg in short order, taking the match 6-0, 6-1.

Hendlin and Liskin, both left-handers with the racquet, bewildered Shuger and Tucker by their peculiar formation, and also gained a 6-0, 6-1 victory.

Graham and Browne, playing together for the first time, easily came out on the good side of a 6-3, 6-1 score against Lebour and Salabes.

Summaries:

Yeomans (C) defeated Captain Goldberg 6-1, 6-2; Captain Merritt (C) defeated Helmholy 6-2, 6-2; Hendlin (C) defeated Shuger 6-0, 6-0; Liskin (C) defeated Lebour 6-1, 6-0; Graham (C) defeated Tucker 6-3, 6-1; Baggs (C) defeated Salabes 6-1, 6-3; Yeomans and Merritt defeated Helmholy and Goldberg 6-0, 6-1; Hendlin and Liskin (C) defeated Shuger and Tucker 6-0, 6-1; Graham and Browne (C) defeated Lebour and Salabes 6-3, 6-1.

The team will travel to Durham tomorrow to meet the Duke team, and are the favorites to win by virtue of victories over Alabama and Davidson, both of whom have already beaten the Blue Devils this past week. The Duke frosh tennis team will play the Carolina freshmen on the Hill today. The match will be an interesting one as Grant, Hines and Wright, all southern tennis champs, will be seen in action.

Barkley Spills Dope

Minor Barkley, distance ace of the Tar Heel track forces, pulled one of the biggest upsets in southern athletics last Saturday when he outran Paul Rekers, Penn State champion, in a sensational 4:26 mile. Rekers beat Pieculewicz, conqueror of Paavo Nurmi, in the mile run at the Millrose Games, and also holds a 9:22 eastern record on the two-mile. Hard-pushed by Rekers to a finish that was won by inches, and racing over a slow and soggy track, Barkley ran the fastest mile of his life that day.

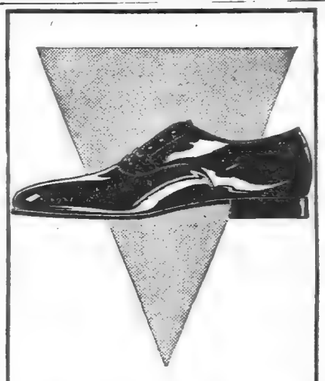
Ten Point Farmer

Charlie Farmer of the Tar Heel track forces, is about to become known as "Ten-point" Farmer. The lanky speedster, who has already done 9.8 seconds on the 100, has participated in every meet this year, and has come in first every time in the 100 and 220 dashes for a constant quota of 10 points.

Runs Greatest Race

Bill Perry, Tar Heel hurdler, ran the greatest race of his life when he beat Penn State's best men here Saturday as Carolina triumphed 70½ to 55½. Perry navigated the 120-yard high hurdles over a soggy track in 15.6 seconds and is being counted to go even below that with favorable weather and track.

The erection of Peabody Hall, the home of the school of education, was begun in 1913.



Duke Wins

Phillips and Meyers of Duke defeated De Hines and Clemmer of Lenoir-Rhyne yesterday morning in the only doubles state tourney match played yesterday on the local courts. The match was hotly contested throughout, the Duke team finally managing to earn a 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 victory. The heavy serving and fast overhead smashing of Meyers, combined with the sharp volleying of Phillips in the final set gave the Blue Devil pair the well-deserved match.

In the only singles state tourney match of the day, Ed Yeomans, winner of last year's tournament, defeated his teammate, Phil Liskin, 6-3, 6-2, and entered the semi-final round of the tourney. Yeomans played his usual smashing game, and found little difficulty in breaking through Liskin's defense at will to win the important points.

When the University opened in 1876, 112 students registered.

Three Men Injured In Auto Wreck Are Improving Rapidly

Of the three boys, Jo Anderson, Larry Flynn and J. D. McNairy, Jr., who were hurt several weeks ago in an automobile accident on the Raleigh road, Flynn is recuperating most rapidly.

At the time of the accident it was thought that McNairy was hurt least seriously of the three, although he is getting along as well as could be expected, in view of the fact that his injuries were found to be the most serious. Flynn will leave the hospital tomorrow, and Anderson is expected to be out about the first of May. McNairy's condition makes it impossible to state just when he will leave the hospital.

NEW Y OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED BY PARSON MOSS

conference to be held in June. A vocal selection was rendered the Y. M. C. A. by a quartet composed of Jack Connelly, Woffard Humphries, Fred Laxton and John Miller.

In his speech Parson Moss gave facts concerning the Y that were probably unknown to many of the members. The movement was first started in England in 1846. It was first adopted in the United States in 1860 and at this University in 1870. Twenty-five years ago the present Y building was built by funds raised by the students. Hundreds of townspeople contributed sums for the undertaking.

Since its beginning ninety years ago this movement has become the largest college organization in America. Seventy-nine thousand college students in 700 schools throughout the nation are now affiliated with the organization. Reverend Moss pointed out that the striking feature of the movement was that although the churches failed to recognize the Y. M. C. A. as a part of the church, nevertheless the Y has adherred to the church.

tion, and surcease from the distracting influences of the larger city. Too, it is attractive for its polyglot of diversely interesting people who have assembled in the university town and who hail from all the states and from many nations."

Mr. Steene is best known in New York where he has his office in the Sherwood studio. One wonders what brought him, as well as other known celebrities, to Chapel Hill. And, having come, one wonders again what may be the magnetic force which causes them to merge into the atmospheric luxury of the village and the immediate vicinity. Mr. Steene came on a commission to paint the portraits of Bowman and Gordon Gray, both students at the University of North Carolina and sons of Bowman Gray, president of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company.

Having completed the work on these two portraits, Mr. Steene found orders coming in from prominent men in and about Chapel Hill. To date he has done 16 portraits of well known local figures among whom are Archibald Henderson, the late Mrs. Joseph H. Pratt, Major William Cain, Collier Cobb, W. C. Coker, Chief Justice W. P. Stacy and Dr. William P. Few.

Conducive to Work

The Steene studio is extremely attractive and most conducive to work. It is also the family living room and so motivated to feed the imagination with its Spanish aspect, suggested by a balcony stairway from which drapes a colorful shawl, while the soft, cream-tinted stucco walls and the open fire place establish the atmosphere of home. Unlike many artists, Mr. Steene is not a bit perturbed by either light babbling voices or weighty conversation going on about him while he is at work. In a more or less preoccupied fashion, he even adds his own comment to the conversation as he deepens the sunlight creeping in through a window on his canvas.

His family consists of two daughters, Betty and Mary Ann, and his wife who was formerly a Kentuckian. Mr. Steene has borne out his generalization made in conversation for he said: "One finds it not uncommon that Northern men marry Southern women and Southern men marry Northern women."

The little girls are respectively 10 and 12 years of age and are the subjects of many of Mr. Steene's most charming paintings. His studies of them show that he knows them and their personalities to perfection. He has painted Betty, with her cropped hair smothered under a fuzzy, red beret, looking arrogantly out at the world through eager, blue eyes which are a marked contrast to the green eyes of the Manx cat which she folds in her arms. Mary Ann is caught in various poses, softly relaxed over a book, her fair hair falling away from her face and over her little shoulders.

Mr. Steene studied at the Art Students League at the National Academy of design in New York and under Colarossi and Julian in Paris. Among the places at which he exhibited are the Paris Salon, the Architectural League of America, the Academy of Fine Arts, the National Academy of Design, the Brooklyn Museum, and the Grand Central Galleries of which he is a member.

His Principal Works

Among his principal works are portraits of Governor Henry L. Whitfield, in the Governor's mansion, Jackson, Miss.; President George E. Denny, of the University of Alabama; Governor Lee M. Russell of Mississippi; Chief Justice J. R. Campbell of Jackson, Miss.; E. B. Wilson of Columbia University; James C. Egbert and John B. Pine.

Mr. Steene, while he plans to spend a goodly part of his time in Chapel Hill until his daughters reach the boarding school age, spends several months out of the year in New York where he does considerable work. Recently he completed 15 portraits of well known men for Columbia University.

"Regardless of where opportunity takes us, we will always maintain our cottage in Chapel Hill," he said.

Studio of Mary Graves Rees

A well known and widely admired figure in the local world of portrait painters is Mary de Berniere Graves who spent her childhood in Chapel Hill and returned here seven years ago from the North where she lived for a number of years while studying and practicing art.

"I enjoyed living in the North," said Miss Graves as she stirred the fire briskly and wedged a long piece of wood into the stove. "I think the people are remarkably hospitable and interesting and there are a multitude of things to do, but, having come back to Chapel Hill, I have no desire whatever to go back to live in Philadelphia or there-abouts."

Upon her return here, Miss Graves set up her studio in her mother's home where she was living. Not long after, because of the inadequacy of her first studio, she acquired the one which she occupies at present and which has undergone an interesting evolution, since she discovered it tucked away in the back yards of Chapel Hill. In her search for a new workshop, she concentrated her efforts on Baby Hollow, one of the most picturesque parts of the village. The source of that name is in some doubt. One ingenious individual suggests that the locality got its name from the fact that it was inhabited by new, young professors and their wives and a goodly number of babies.

The only available place in Baby Hollow, officially Park Place, at that time was a Mrs. Joshua Gore's barn situated between the houses fronting on East Franklin street and those fronting on Park Place. The barn could be approached only by a narrow, rustic lane. Doubtless it took a good deal of imagination to set about the task of changing a run-down barn to a plausible studio. Today the building is such that it would invite any artist to spend as many hours there in active work as does Miss Graves.

Lives in Baby Hollow

The quaintness of the place is particularly arresting. It attracts one by its location immediately and invokes a play on the imagination with such details as a rustic lantern dangling under an eave or a most congenial knocker which resounds to the taps of a small mallet hung on the door beside it. A streaked coat of green paint is the only marked change that the exterior of the erstwhile barn has undergone. But the vines and shrubbery surrounding the small building, the drawn curtains, the tiny flagged walk, and the Dutch door all lend an inexplicably unusual quality to the little hybrid structure and tend to give it an air of atmospheric isolation.

That feeling of isolation is even more pronounced from within the studio. The windows are all built up high in the walls and all save one of them are heavily curtained. The one large and uncurtained window admits the light and frames a patch of fleecy, blue sky and a cluster of treetops. Close against the window is silhouetted a crepe myrtle which, as Isabel Bowen, a fellow portrait painter from Raleigh, says, "brings to mind a delicate Japanese Print." Through the window to the south one might catch glimpses of ragged fruit trees or scraggly pines but Miss Graves prefers not to draw the curtains, for she says, "I like to look out through my large window and just see up and feel far away. "The small windows spoil the illusion because one can see passers by and the passers by can see in on you."

"My Bohemianism is only skin deep," says Miss Graves. Hence we find a notable degree of order and comfort in her built-in seats, artistically cushioned chairs, and neatly appointed kitchenette. The studio is not without a bizarre note. An old colonial kettle, the gift of an antique collector, reposes on the wood stove where it makes comfortable, purring noises. The room is characteristically a studio and is filled with a profusion of articles which have accumulated with the years and have found a fit resting place there.

Miss Graves has a considerable collection of sculptured pieces many of which were given her by Horace Williams, professor of philosophy at the University. They were used by his late wife who taught art for some time in Chapel Hill.

A number of charcoals, pastels and oils of well known people in and about Chapel Hill are distributed throughout the room. Paul Green rests on a shelf side by side with Horace Williams who rubs shoulders with a marble bust of mercury and looks for all the world like one of James Stephens' philosophers as he depicts them in his "Crock of Gold." Both men are professors of philosophy at the University of North Carolina. Paul Green is better known for his profusion of Carolina folk plays.

CAROLINA THEATRE TODAY

Among the portraits one recognizes Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department at the University; W. D. Toy, head of the German department; Collier Cobb, head of the geology department; Mrs. W. D. Toy and Mrs. Russell Potter, wives of University professors.

Hard Work Best Inspiration

Miss Graves studied in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. She spent her time between the Maryland Institute in Baltimore and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia and she studied in New York under William Chase, portrait painter and teacher, and Henry McCarter, well known illustrater. She spent some time traveling through Europe where she continued her studies.

"Art takes more perspiration than inspiration," Miss Graves replied when asked, thus justifying a comment which she made to her fellow artist, Isabel Bowen, during the course of my visit at her studio. "Don't you think I'm noble, Isabel," she asked, to work so diligently on this portrait when it's already paid for?"

"A successful artist can't wait for the spirit to move him," she continued, moving an orange vase to a vantage point. "Frequently he must work when there is little or no inspiration to do so. Anyone who has taste and who is willing to work can succeed in art."

Studio of Mrs. Arthur Nash

Mrs. Arthur Cleveland Nash is one of Chapel Hill's woman devotees to the art of portrait painting. She is the wife of A. C. Nash of Atwood and Nash, architects at the University. The Nashes make their home in Chapel Hill on a knoll overlooking the Forest theatre which is an innovation of the dramatics department at the University and which is a post of unusual beauty and riotous color during the various seasons of the year. The location is better known as Battle Park, a name of historic interest. The semi-seclusion of the setting and the natural aspect of the countryside makes it ideal for the home of one whose work requires imagination and delicacy of impression.

Callers, awaiting the appearance of Mrs. Nash and taking the opportunity of a few glimpses about her charming home, note a lovely jade green dining room hung with ancestral portraits and a reception hall and living room cognizant of an artistic and sensitive touch. The dignity of the whole and the unusual quality of detail give to the house a continental air so characteristic of Mrs. Nash herself. A sweeping glance about the large studio brings to one's line of vision many easels, tall mirrors, an antique chest, quaint chairs and stools, a lovely carved desk, an unusual studio screen of Spanish aspect nine feet high and covered with embossed leather in shades of gold, and a cheerily effective fireplace on whose mantle are several oils and a marble bust of Donatello's "Unknown Lady." There are numerous paintings in the room, some of them half hidden in the shadows. But often Mrs. Nash will show them off to her friends in so interesting a manner as to make one appreciate the personality of the subject or the mood of the narrative caught on the canvas.

Spent Much Time Abroad

Mrs. Nash, formerly Mary Screven Arnold, was born in Savannah, Ga., where she spent most of her childhood. She started her work at the Art League in New York. Later she studied under Howard Pyle and Elliot Dangerfield. She spent one whole year on military subjects, using scenes from the American Army and depicting in her work either a gripping bit of narrative or a characteristic scene. These were done in her studio in New York and were later exhibited at Knoedlers on Fifth Avenue. Upon the completion of her six military studies, she went abroad and stayed for a period of three years. She went first to Paris, then to Florence and then back to France. While in France she did academic work under Simon and Mesnard, getting her impressions from the old masters in the galleries.

During her entire two-year stay at Florence, she maintained a studio on the Lungo L'Mungnone. Here she did some of her most charming and impressive work, studying and sketching from the Rennaissance masters. For those paintings done in her studio, she used interesting types of Tuscan models. "Marvelously quaint and picturesque," they were, Mrs. Nash says, "and so utterly devoted and understanding of art and the part they play in it." Florence, as Paris, was full of diversions and distractions, but, Mrs. Nash says, "I never allowed much to interfere with my work."

Phi Literary Society Gives Membership To Co-Eds

Heated Debate Results In Most Radical Move Made In Recent Years.

UPSETS OLD PRECEDENT

The Phi Assembly last night, after heated discussion, passed a resolution admitting co-eds into the Phi Assembly with full privileges of that institution.

The representatives speaking for the resolution were McDuffie, James, Wilkinson, Neely, Kelly and Campen. The opposition was composed of Representatives Hobgood, Brown, Baldwin, Haywood, Albright and Nazareno.

The main contention of those favoring the resolution was that the co-eds had been admitted to practically every other organization on the campus, and the Phi Assembly should not entertain any objections to their becoming members.

Those opposing the admission of co-eds to the assembly contended that they had not shown any desire to enter and they should not be granted the right. Nazareno in his speech said: "You class them your equals; you forget their place."

The Phi favored a resolution submitted by Representative Speight that the assembly should hold a dance in the near future in the assembly hall.

Senator J. C. Williams from the Di informed the assembly that the Bingham debate had been decided upon. The question to be discussed in this de-

To Sell Invitations

Because of many requests for another period in which orders for senior commencement invitations may be given, the committee in charge of taking these orders has decided that it will accept orders today and tomorrow.

The committee states that this is positively the last time that invitation orders can be given, and that anyone wanting them must place his order during these two days.

There will be someone in both Patterson's and Sutton's from 1:30 to 9 o'clock on these days, and anyone wishing to place orders should do so between these hours.

DI PREPARES FOR BINGHAM DEBATE

Senators To Hold Banquet In May; Proposal For Dance Is Defeated.

At the regular meeting of the Dialectic Senate, in the Di hall last night, an enthusiastic group of senators were parties to a number of important legislative transactions.

In regard to the Bingham debate, an annual affair which is sponsored by both the Di and Phi, the senate voted to accept the following query: "Resolved, That the government of the United States should recognize the Soviet Union." The senate also agreed to take the negative side of the question. Participation in this debate is limited to members of the junior class only. Teams representing both societies will immediately be chosen.

Unanimous approval greeted Senator Dungan's motion that a committee be appointed to draw up plans for a banquet to be given at the Carolina Inn during the third week of May, that the Phi Assembly be urged to take part, and that the Honorable Josephus Daniels be invited to deliver an address upon this occasion. Senators Dratler, Dungan and Patterson were appointed to serve on this committee.

Following two amendments, the report of the improvement committee was accepted by the senate. This report included the following rule, which is now in effect: "Upon the event of two unexcused absences from Di meetings during a single quarter, the offending senator will be automatically dropped from the senate and barred from all social activities engaged in by the senate."

A motion proposed by President Rector, that in the future the vote of the senate be taken by counties, was accepted.

It was announced by President Rector that only one more initiation meeting will be held this quarter, at which time all new men will be admitted.

OIL INSTITUTE WILL SPONSOR PROJECT HERE NEXT YEAR

Chemistry Department Announces Award of Two New Fellowships By American Petroleum Institute.

Professor R. W. Bost has recently received word from the American Petroleum Institute that two new research fellowships will be sponsored by the Institute here next year. The Institute already has one fellowship in chemistry here, Mr. Miller Conn being the holder.

At present the national research council has 42 research projects in as many universities in the United States and abroad. The project at the University of North Carolina is listed as project No. 41.

The acquisition of these research fellowships places the department of chemistry at Carolina along beside that of other larger universities in this country. At present the University of North Carolina and the University of Texas are the only southern universities that have been honored with these fellowships. Some of the larger universities which have received fellowships are Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Princeton, Northwestern, Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Leland Stanford, Missouri, Penn. State, the University of Brussels in Belgium, and Charles University in Czechoslovakia.

The fellowships entitle the holder to take graduate work and to devote his whole time to research work. Eleven months each year are to be devoted to the work and one month to vacation.

In project No. 41 the "Thiophanes" are being studied. These are organic sulphur compounds which occur in petroleum and the reactions of which very little is known. A number of these compounds have been prepared in the chemistry laboratory here by Dr. Bost and Mr. Conn, and their properties are being studied at present.

The new fellowship will take up the study of the substituted "Throphanes" and the substituted "Thiophenes." As the properties are unknown, the preparation of these compounds is very laborious and time consuming. Under the present grant, however, several part-time men will be employed during the coming summer to assist in the preparation of the sulphur compounds. This will make it possible to obtain earlier results.

UNIVERSITY PROFS TO READ PAPERS AT PHYSICS MEET

Stuhlman, Whitaker, Braune and Hart, Authors of Science Papers To Be Presented at American Physical Meeting.

The physics department of the University will be represented at the spring meeting of the American Physical Society to be held in Washington April 24-26 by two papers presenting the results of research work conducted in the department during the past three years. Dr. Otto Stuhlman, who will attend this meeting as representative of the physics department, will also attend a call meeting of the National Research Council, of which he is a member, and a meeting of the National Academy of Science.

The first of the two papers from the University to be read is upon the subject of "High Frequency Electrodeless Discharge Characteristics." Its authors are Dr. Stuhlman, M. D. Whitaker, candidate for a master's degree, and M. L. Braune, candidate for a doctor's degree. The second is upon "Relative Intensities of Arc and Spark Lines of the Electrodeless Discharge in Mercury Vapor." It is a report by Dr. Stuhlman and O. P. Hart, candidate for a doctor's degree. Both of these reports are results of three years' work of Messrs. Whitaker, Braune and Hart, conducted by the physics department, and will be read together with 106 other such papers, representing work in all parts of the country.

New Council Has Executive Meeting

The new student council met in its first regular executive meeting last night. President Red Greene presided. Bob Graham, senior, was elected from the old council to serve on the new council for the coming term. Graham will be back next year to enter the law school. At a previous unofficial meeting Mayne Albright, senior representative, was elected secretary.

The present membership of the council is: Red Greene, president; Mayne Albright, senior representative, secretary; Scott Benton, representative from the law school; L. G. Barefoot, representative from the pharmacy school; Bob Graham, representative from the old council; Bill Uzzell, junior representative; and Harper Barnes, sophomore representative. The representative from the medical school will be elected this week, and the council will be officially installed Monday morning in chapel, along with the other new officers.

Tau Beta Phi Taps Seven For Membership In Group

Merritt, Pittana, Hayes, Thompson, Parsley, Quinn, and Bryan Are Honored In Ceremony.

DEAN BRAUNE SPEAKS

With its solemn and very impressive ceremony, Tau Beta Pi, national engineering scholastic fraternity, last night tapped seven outstanding men in the school of engineering for membership in this organization which recognizes superior character development and unusual scholastic ability.

Pittana, a senior transferred to the University in 1928 from the University of Sicily, Italy, and C. P. Hayes, George Thompson, Aubrey Parsley, G. J. Quinn, and Norman L. Bryan, all juniors in the school of engineering.

In an address before the tapping ceremony, G. M. Braune, dean of the school of engineering and a member of the fraternity, briefly outlined the history of Tau Beta Pi since its organization at Lehigh in 1885 and discussed the importance of the group and the meaning that Tau Beta Pi has for the engineering graduate who has been a member.

At the ceremony last night only four of the men selected were tapped; telegrams notifying them of their election were sent to Parsley, Quinn, and

MISSING CAROLINA STUDENT LOCATED

Bill Pemberton Returns Home After Two Months Of Wandering.

One of the mysteries arising from the recent disappearance of two students from the University was explained yesterday by a report received from the parents of Bill Pemberton of Greensboro that Bill, who disappeared from the campus over two months ago, had returned home.

Mr. T. Pemberton, who was here recently in search of the missing boy, is now happy in the return of his son, while the mother of M. P. Moorer, whose more sensational disappearance occurred in March, is yet unaware of the whereabouts of the other Carolina student, whose abrupt departure caused a nationwide search.

From all appearances young Pemberton has returned home after nothing more than an extended period of wandering. Penn Harrison, of Chapel Hill, and former student at the University, has stated that on a recent trip north he saw him in Philadelphia. It is understood that New York, which held much interest for the lad, figured prominently in his wanderings. The manner of his travel is not known, but it is a matter of record that he returned penniless, and by no means proud of his adventures.

Although Pemberton did not leave Chapel Hill until February he was not registered in school last quarter. He has already begun work for his father, and will, of course, not return to school this year. He will probably register here again next fall.

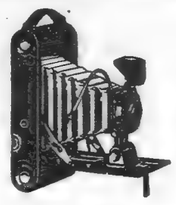
A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

If you speak insults, you will hear them also.—Plautus.

Readers' Opinions

Considerable confusion has been experienced by the editors of the Daily Tar Heel in connection with the disposition of Readers' Opinion contributions. Contributions are not limited, but are solicited from all interested in the University. However, the policy under present editorial control is to refuse consideration of any communication unless signed with both the writer's name and local address.



Personal attacks are not to be condoned. Those who wish to vent their feelings against individuals through the Daily Tar Heel must agree to publication of their names with the communication. Malicious and libelous attacks have on occasions been printed without the responsibility for these letters being fixed. This has usually happened through oversight. In order to avoid such confusion names of the writers must be signed to all communications.

The editor will reserve the right of rejecting all communications which are judged unfit for publication. This is to protect the readers and contributors to the Daily Tar Heel.

Without attempting to limit the number of contributions, those who submit contributions should retain copies as those rejected or used will be destroyed. On occasions in the past contributors have requested the return of manuscripts, and often have become indignant upon discovering that they have been destroyed.

We desire contributions for the Readers' Opinion from any interested, for it is through the columns of the Daily Tar Heel that student sentiment is expressed. We are willing to print any contributions of criticism if the writer feels that an exposure of his grievance will be of benefit; however, the policy of this publication will be to publish the names of the contributors whenever the letter is of such nature that reflections on personalities are involved.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

Signs of the Season

We have heard it said that "humanity is constitutionally lazy." After observing our fellows at this season of the year, we are convinced that this sentiment is altogether correct. In this full-fledged spring weather we have actually come to believe that indolence is by no means the greatest of evils. Springtime is no season for sitting around in gloomy dormitory cells, or for the dreary conning of petrified facts. 'Tis rather the time for such cherished pastimes as fishing, swimming, tobacco chewing, and, last but not least, rest.

In this glorious spring weather, the lazy groups that lounge around on the grass in front of the dormitories are the season's vogue. The leisurely conversation inspired by minds, which are very noticeably full of the miraculous, is denoted by the mildest word in the student terminology—"bull." These "bull" conversations usually cover the whole field of human experience. In fact, knowing how to separate "bull" from fact is one of the chief acquisitions of a college education.

Loyal Students

Observation leads us to believe that the students of this university are becoming more loyal each day. No longer are we content to wear blue and white on special occasions. At this season of the year even a stranger cannot help knowing that Carolina's colors are blue and white. Nearly every student that walks across the campus from time to time wears either a blue shirt, or a white one. Loyalty in the Nth degree, we call it!

Whither Student Interests?

Student interests and desires, in addition to being hard to classify, are hard to ascertain. The general theory applied to merchandise in Chapel Hill is that merchants carry goods which the students want. In consideration of this, we have of late been very greatly vexed by the fact that there are dolls in the show-window of the Students' Supply Store. We would appreciate some explanation of this matter, for we are afraid that the desires of our fellow students have gone off on a tangent.

A Friend Indeed

"Friendly Cafeteria to open May 1," stated this paper a few days ago. We heartily welcome the new cafeteria, since we've always wanted to eat at some establishment where the management is "Friendly." We venture to say, however, that it will not be a friendly cafeteria long if too many of the "no got money" element attempt to impose too freely upon the friendliness of the managemnt. After all, what's in a name anyhow? Friendship is, in the last analysis, a relative thing. It can't stand too much strain.

Speaking of Records

Track is among the oldest of all sports. Even in the days before the Greeks took up professional wrestling, the marathon was a regular event, relay races were common, the javelin was handled with uncanny skill, discus heaving was in vogue; and who knows but what some of those ancient athletes set records that would put our present-day champions to shame? This seems quite likely in lieu of the necessity, in those days, for keeping in perfect physical trim. Keeping fit was merely an incidental matter, owing to the dirth of vehicles of conveyance and to the popularity of the manly arts of assault and battery.

When a man said—"I think I'll run down to Athens for the week-end"—, he meant just what he said. When a first lieutenant called out—"Charge fifty paces and let them have your javelins"—, there was some tall javelin slinging going on. When a party of young Greeks happened to pass a wine shop, somebody would call out—"Last man in pays for the drinks"—; so the hundred dash came into its own. There is good reason for believing that if proper records had been kept by olympic officials in the days of Old Greece, they would stand supreme and unbroken by the feats of our present champions. Who knows?

Strange Happenings in the Phi Assembly

Time and again we have sworn off commenting upon the doings of those time-worn organizations—the Di Senate and the Phi Assembly. But occasionally such strange doings within the walls of the Phi Hall, in particular, drift within the sphere of our hearing that restraint is no longer possible. At present we have in mind the following headline which appeared in yesterday's issue of this paper, "Phi to debate coeds." Indeed, the reprsentatives seem to think that anything is debatable. We'd much rather think of debating disarmament, or immigration, or anything else. Really the subject of "coeds" would constitute a Jonah for the average debater. But one can never tell what the representatives will uncork when they get aroused and begin setting aside the constitution!

From the viewpoint of the studio visitor, there have been few more inviting sets in Hollywood than that designed for "Spring Is Here," the First National-Vitaphone picture coming to the Carolina theatre today.

With careful attention to every detail, the designers at the Burbank studios erected a ten-room house in the center of a luxuriant garden, modelled after a costly Long Island estate. Ponds, fountains, arbors, tennis courts and even a dance floor were included on the grounds surrounding the house.

Visitors were much taken by the completeness and beauty of the layout providing a background for many of the scenes of the picture that has Lawrence Gray, Bernice Claire, Alexander Gray, Louise Fazenda, Ford Sterling, Inez Courtney, Frank Albertson and other screen celebrities in the cast.

At a safe distance from the shooting of the scenes, in order that their voices might not register on the microphones, Miss Claire and her associates entertained hundreds of guests. The set, with its activity and color, resembled a July afternoon on a millionaire's Southampton estate.

A newspaper man reporting the commencement ball of 1880 stated that the affair broke up at 4:30 o'clock, "amid a perfect pandemonium of those peculiar unearthly yells in which the college boy delights and excels."

CONSTANCY WINS AYCOCK CUP FOR GOLDSBORO TEAM

Miss Bizzell Is Victorious After Third Trial for Debating Trophy.

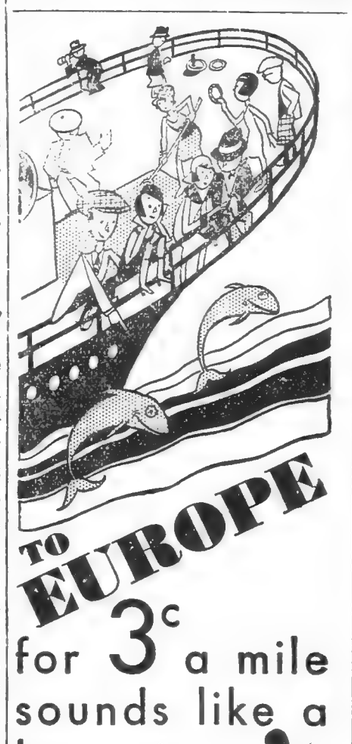
(By Marion Alexander)

A semi-finalist once, a finalist once, and now at last a champion—thus, by perseverance as well as ability, did Miss Eleanor Bizzell come to be on the Goldsboro high school team that won the Aycock Cup and the state debating title here Friday night.

Goldsboro high won its first Aycock Cup in the 18 years the contest has been held, and did it in a big way. The school placed both affirmative and negative teams in the finals for an all-Goldsboro finish.

Miss Bizzell and Ezra Griffin beat their fellow schoolmates, Edward Outlaw and Billy Crow, but it was a victory, not for the redoubtable Bizzell-Griffin debating combine, but for Goldsboro in particular and perseverance in general. Miss Bizzell and Outlaw, opponents this year, brought Goldsboro colors through to the finals last year, only to lose a heart-breakingly close contest to Roanoke Rapids.

The year before, it had been almost as disheartening. Miss Bizzell and Griffin, partners this year, lacking one vote of reaching the finals, got first honorable mention in the semi-finals.



Came another year, this one, and for Miss Bizzell and Griffin and Outlaw, it was the last chance—for all were seniors. They squared their shoulders, took on a new partner in Mr. Crow, put in the most intensive preparation under their coach, and came to Chapel Hill.

The announcement that Miss Bizzell and Griffin had won out in the semi-finals on the negative side was made at 4:30 and the results of the semi-finals on the affirmative side 30 minutes later. "We can't lose now," was the cry that went up. Profuse congratulations came rolling in from civic-minded supporters on all sides, while that portion of Goldsboro in Chapel Hill rushed pell-mell to the telegraph office to wire the rest of Goldsboro to "come on up!"

The jubilant young debaters calmed down later in the evening, and in the final debate that night put up what the old-timers who have been hearing these contests year in and year out adjudged to be one of the best debates which ever won an Aycock Cup.

Miss Bizzell and partner won, while Outlaw, the other finalist last year, lost. But there was no sorrow in the Goldsboro camp. Goldsboro had won at last, and that, after all, was the big thing.

TRACK TEAM WINS FROM V. P. I. BY SCORE OF 88 - 38

Barkley, Farmer, Bagby, Phoenix and Brown Give Carolina 12 First Places.

Despite bad weather conditions and an extremely soggy and slow track, the Tar Heel trackmen turned in several creditable performances in their meet with V. P. I. at Blacksburg Monday afternoon, which they won by a score of 88-38.

The feature of the meet was Minor Barkley, Statesville boy who covered himself with glory in the meet with Penn State on Saturday when he ran a fast 4.26 mile on a rain-soaked track to defeat Rekers, Penn State star and holder of the intercollegiate two-mile record of 9.22. Barkley first ran a thrilling 1.59.3 half mile to defeat Carter of Tech and Garrett of Carolina in the best race of the day, and then took second in the mile, which was won by Phoenix of Carolina. Charlie Farmer, as usual, continued his ten-point "habit," winning the 100 in 10.1 and the 220 in 23.5.

George Bagby did exceptionally well to win the high jump with a jump of 5 feet 11¾ inches, considering the muddy condition of the take off.

Theron Brown continued his good work in the field events, taking second in the shotput and winning the discus and javelin with throws of 128 feet 3 inches, and 169 feet 3½ inches, respectively, especially good distances on the slick grass. He amassed a total of 13 points for the day, being the high point scorer of the meet.

In all, Carolina took a total of 12 first places to V. P. I.'s 2.

Coach Bob Fetzer announced yesterday that no relay team will be sent to the Penn relays this week as had been planned. He has decided that in view of the meet with W. & L. next Monday and the proximity of the state championship meet and the Princeton meet it will be wiser to save his men for these meets in order to protect Carolina's splendid record of no defeats in dual meets for the past eight years.

Summary of V. P. I. meet:

Mile run: Phoenix (C), Barkley (C), and Miles (T). Time, 4:41.3.

CAROLINA MEETS GEORGIA TODAY ON HOME FIELD

Third Game With Bulldogs Scheduled For This Afternoon On Emerson Field.

The Tar Heel baseball team will meet Georgia in the third of the four-game series with the Bulldogs today at 4 o'clock at Emerson stadium. In the first two games of the series, played at Athens, the Tar Heels split, winning and losing one game. The Tar Heels dropped the opener 9-1, Chandler, Bulldog hurling star, limiting the Tar Heels to three hits. The second game was played in a slight drizzle, but with the Tar Heels leading 6-4 in the sixth inning, the rain poured down, necessitating a cease in hostilities.

Both teams were victorious in the games preceding this series, Frye of Georgia setting back the Blue Devils 7-6 in the opener of a double header. In the second game the Blue Devils overwhelmed the West Virginia Mountaineers 22-11.

Monday Carolina went to Winston-Salem to play Davidson, and the Tar Heels returned as victors 9-3. The Tar Heels showed a great deal of power, raking the two Davidson hurlers, Kugler and McInnis, for thirteen hits including a triple by Whitehead and doubles by Maus and Lufty. The second game with Davidson, scheduled to have been played yesterday at Davidson, was cancelled and the much needed rest will undoubtedly have the Tar Heels at their best for the Georgia series.

Three men who played such big parts in marring Carolina's attempt for a perfect record in football will be back again with the same purpose. Rothstein, whom Carolina will long remember, will be covering first base; Smith, Georgia's famous end, will be in the center garden; and Chandler will probably pitch one of the games.

Probable lineups:

For Carolina: Jackson, 1b; Whitehead, ss; Maus, c; Lufty, 3b; Sher, cf; Rand, 2b; House, lf; Davis, rf; Fleming, p.

For Georgia: Day, 3b; McGaughey, ss; Smith, cf; Rothstein, 1b; Davenport, 2b; Murdock, rf; Parish, lf; Gorman, c; Chandler or Frye, p.

Old East Beats Mangum

Old East defeated Mangum 1-0 yesterday in a game that was a pitchers' duel from the beginning until the last strike was called. Bill Suggs, pitching for Old East, allowed but two hits during the game, while Grindstaff only allowed six.

Old East's one and only run came as a result of two singles and an error.

Several rallies that came near scoring for Mangum were broken up by the splendid fielding of Sutton, second baseman for Old East.

Right Handed Lineup

The Carolina baseball team may use a straight line of nine right-handed batters against Duke when the old rivals clash here Saturday afternoon, for virtually all the Duke pitchers are portsiders, including the redoubtable Lefty Jenkins.

CAROLINA FROSH BEAT DUKE NET MEN YESTERDAY

Doubles Match Proves Most Hotly Contested On Day's Card.

Lacking the assistance of Hines and Wright, two of its best players, the Carolina freshman tennis team repulsed the visiting Duke baby racqueteers yesterday six matches to one.

The Tar Heel racquet wielders presented a well-balanced team to their opponents, and swept through the match with the loss of only one singles match which McKee dropped to Fulp 6-2, 6-2. In their only previous match this season, the Carolina team swamped Charlotte high school nine matches to none.

Howard, the flashy No. 1 Duke player, was no match for Grant, who battered his way to a 6-0, 6-1 victory. Grant simply toyed with his opponent, who was completely bewildered by the experienced tactics of the Carolina freshman.

Abels of Carolina took the first set from Clark 6-1, and then ran into some difficulty in the second, but pulled out the set 6-4. Napier and Barnett took their matches easily.

The doubles match between Barnett and McKee (C) and Clark and Fulp was the hardest fought match of the day. The home team took the first set 6-2, but had to struggle for an hour to take the final set 16-14.

The varsity tennis team travels to Durham today to take on the Duke team. Although the Carolina players are the favorites to win, the Blue Devils will have the advantage of playing on their home courts, and are expected to give the Tar Heels a tough battle.

WRESTLING BOUTS SET FOR TONIGHT

The intramural wrestling contest will be held tonight at 7:30 in the Tin Can. All men who have not participated in freshman or varsity wrestling are eligible for this meet.

Eight classes will be represented in the intramural bouts, the maximum weight of each class being 120, 130, 140, 150, 160, 170, 180 pounds, and unlimited. Each bout will last six minutes.

Weighing in of the various contestants will take place at Emerson stadium this afternoon from 3:45 to 4 o'clock. All contestants who cannot weigh in at this hour must do so at 5 o'clock. Peyton Abbott, assistant wrestling coach, will officiate at the weighing in.

Aycock Wins

With Hooks pitching air-tight baseball, Aycock (F) shut out Manly 5-0 yesterday afternoon. Aycock presented a fast-fielding ball club that had little difficulty in crushing Manly.

Allison did good work in the box for Manly, but errors proved fatal, and several of Aycock's tallies crossed the plate on account of such bobbles.

Smith was the heavy hitter on Aycock's team, securing a triple and two singles.

Rip Slusser Fast

Rip Slusser, blonde blizzard of the Tar Heel backfield forces last fall, may be even faster next season if he continues to show marked improvement that has characterized his work in track this season. Slusser beat the field again in the 220 yard low hurdles against Penn State last Saturday, and also ran second to Charlie Farmer, Tar Heel speed king, in the 220 yard dash.

Spring Wrestling

Spring practice for varsity wrestling candidates will begin Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the Tin Can. It is essential that all men intending to come out for the 1931 varsity squad attend this spring practice. Emphasis will be put on leg work.

WILD KITTENS LOSE TO TAR BABY NINE

Yesterday afternoon the Tar Babies ran over the Davidson Wild Kittens to turn in a win of 14 to 2. Riggs and Ferebee did outstanding hitting for the Tar Babies, while Mills led the Davidson nine, accounting for one of their runs with a homer in the fifth inning. Riggs connected with a hot one in the second to start the frosh hitting which did not stop until four men had crossed home plate.

Whitehead played a good game, doing good work in the field, and turning in two doubles and a single. Scarboro did the mound work, allowing only seven hits.

The lineups were Carolina: Whitehead 1b, Ferebee 2b, McGaskill 3b, Scarboro p, Pattirsol c, Riggs ss, Whitehead cf, Daniels lf, Croon rf; for Davidson: Clarke 1b, Peabody 2b, Thomason 3b, Pearce p, Whitley c, Mills ss, J. G. Morrison lf, Bradsher cf, J. D. Morrison rf.

It is expected that the Tar Babies will win over the State frosh today if their good ball playing is continued, although State has an outstanding freshman team.

VARSITY GOLFERS DEFEND TITLE AT SEDGDEFIELD MEET

Duke, State and Davidson Challenge Carolina for State Golf Laurels.

The Tar Heel golf team, state intercollegiate title holder for the past two years, will defend its laurels Saturday at the Sedgefield Country Club, Greensboro, against teams from Duke, Davidson and State. In addition to holding the team title, one of Carolina's men, Meade Willis, holds the individual title.

Duke is rumored to have a strong individual team, and this match ought to bring about much attention from the students at both universities.

Friday the Tar Heels will meet Davidson at Sedgefield. This match will be used primarily as a practice game to acquaint the teams with the Sedgefield course.

Last week Georgia Tech defeated Carolina in a very close match by the score of 9½ to 8½.

The Carolina freshmen took Greensboro high into tow last Friday to the tune of 15 to 3. From this showing Carolina may hope for a successful season from the Tar Babies.

In 1880 no gloves were worn by students playing baseball, and the hands of the first baseman were generally blue from bruises. The catcher caught the ball after a long bounce.

SIGMA PHI SIGMA TO ENTERTAIN IN DURHAM FRIDAY

Leftwich and Band To Play At Washington Duke For Fraternity.

On Friday night, May 2, the local chapter of the Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity will hold its annual spring dance at the Washington Duke hotel in Durham. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Jelly Leftwich and his University Club orchestra.

It was erroneously stated in yesterday's issue of the Tar Heel that Leftwich's band would play for the dances to be given by six other fraternities of the University on May 2 and 3, at the Carolina Inn, but it will play only for the dance to be given on May 3 in Chapel Hill because of the engagement in Durham on May 2.

The dance will be held in the large ballroom of the Washington Duke hotel, as Leftwich's band is quite popular in this section and as a large number of bids have been mailed. The leaders for the dance will be Ray Farris, Joe Carpenter, and Carl Griggs. Chaperones will be Dr. and Mrs. Harry Woodburn Chase, Dr. and Mrs. Otto Stuhlman, Dr. and Mrs. R. D. W. Connor, Dr. and Mrs. Dey, and Professor and Mrs. Hobbs.

The affair will be formal and will last from ten till two.

Jitney Troupe Still Remains On Campus

Lurking in all the hidden nooks, in all the mysterious cracks and crevices on the campus, one may expect to find one of the Jitney Players. Unobtrusively investigating every phase of University life, even going so far as to enter the sacred portals of one of our more popular rooming houses, they have been weighing pro and con the advantages of a college education.

But it is not for this purpose that they have remained. Due to a lack of booking—as a rest cure for the players— the company has decided to remain in Chapel Hill until today or tomorrow, when they will leave for either Winston-Salem or Raleigh.

According to one of the players, practically none of the company has ever gone to college, and far from regretting this fact, they seem to be of the opinion that they have learned more, they have experienced more than fours years at college is worth. In a word, they have become educated in a practical manner—they have become sophisticated. They think that most of the men they have met are merely wasting time here, loafing, so to speak, although they did not use precisely that term.

Man Faints In Chem

While looking for some news at the infirmary yesterday a Tar Heel reporter was astounded to see a group of students, assisted by Dr. Bell of the chemistry department, bring in on a stretcher a fellow student. The patient was fully conscious and alive. It was learned that he had fainted on chemistry class due to prolonged exposure to chemical fumes.

When the nurse tried to get him to go to bed, he protested violently, declaring his intention to go back to his lab work. The nurse was astonished at his continued refusal, but she knew the reason when the patient declared that it was absolutely necessary that he go to Durham to fill a date later in the afternoon.

Dr. Koch's Father Is Chapel Hill Visitor

Senior Koch Is Also Interested in Dramatics and Playwriting.

Mr. A. W. Koch, of Elmhurst, Ill., is here visiting his son, Prof. F. H. Koch. He has been a visitor in Chapel Hill before, being, as his son, interested in dramatics and playwriting.

Although Mr. Koch is 78 years old he is still young in spirit and appearance. He lives in Elmhurst, a suburb of Chicago, and every morning he catches the eight-ten train there where he is actively engaged in business, being the treasurer of an architectural firm owned by one of his sons.

Mr. Koch is an engineer and inventor on a small scale, having several patents on his inventions.

Prof. Koch plans to take his father to several plays which are to be given in the vicinity while he is here. Mr. Koch has seven children: six sons and one daughter. Three of the boys are architects and one of them an electrical engineer.

CO-ED ASSOCIATION TO ELECT OFFICERS

The regular quarterly meeting of the Woman's Association will be held at 4 o'clock today in Spencer hall.

The election of officers for next year will take place and Reeme Moore, the delegate to the conference of the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Governments held in Greensboro this past week-end, will make her report.

Important plans are to be discussed at the meeting concerning Women's Athletics, last arrangements for the spring quarter dance, on May 9, and individual vocational conferences.

Tau Beta Pi Taps Seven Men For Membership

Bryan, who at present are away on cooperative work connected with the junior year in the engineering school.

Tau Beta Pi, with more than 60 active student chapters and 16,000 graduate members, is the honorary scholastic fraternity of the engineers. It was organized at Lehigh 45 years ago, and has since expanded until there are chapters at almost all of the better engineering schools in the country.

The University chapter, Beta of North Carolina, was organized in the winter of 1928, and since then four tappings have been held, the last one last night.

Membership in Tau Beta Pi carries with it a distinct honor to the engineering student, for the members of the engineering profession who have become acquainted with the organization recognize that the men who are selected for membership possess outstanding qualities of character and scholorship.

W. D. Merritt, a graduate of the University in 1928, took graduate work at the University of Wisconsin during the year 1928-1929, and is now an instructor in Engineering at the University.

John B. Pittana, is a senior mechanical engineering student who entered the University as a transfer student from the University of Sicily. Next year Pittana will hold a fellowship from the University.

C. P. Hayes, a junior, comes from Asheville, and George Thompson, who is also a junior, is from Goldsboro.

Aubrey Parsley, who is from Wilmington, is now doing co-op work with the Caterpillar Tractor Co. in Peoria, Ill. G. J. Quinn, from East Orange, N. J. is working with State Highway Commission, Raleigh, on co-op work. Norman L. Bryan, who is at present employed by the Southern Railway at Danville, Va., is from Winter Park Florida.

This is the second tapping that the fraternity has held this year. The other was held in the fall when only seniors of the school of engineering were eligible for membership.

TRAVELING SHOW EXHIBITS BEFORE LARGE AUDIENCE

"W.N.C. Reptile Exhibition" Brings Truckload of Reptiles Here on Way North.

Chapel Hill was host for two days to a novel traveling show, the "W. N. C. Reptile Exhibition" which left this morning after a two-day run in their own collapsible theatre, set up in the front yard of Mrs. Pickens' boarding house.

The truckload of "beautyful" specimens of the rattler family and other animals of the southern climes proved to be an attraction of great popularity. After an indifferent success in the six towns in which they had played after the departure from West Palm Beach, the owners of the exhibition asserted that they were highly pleased with the response of the local natives. From Chapel Hill, they proceed to Durham, where they are to present their spectacle to the high school and Duke University. Massachusetts is the show's objective and after it spends the summer and early fall months in the north, it will return to the south by a devious western route.

The chief feature of the show was "Big Betsy," 180-year-old alligator, weighing 570 pounds and over 11 feet in length. It is said that "Betsy" was the largest alligator ever caught in Florida. However, "Big Betsy" did not carry off all the honors herself. "Little Flo," the ferocious wild-cat shared the spotlight with the phlegmatic "Betsy." And sharing the living quarters of the truck was a pelican, a nameless waif, and 10 snakes, all variations of the rattler family, including Howard, the horned rattler, a highly appreciated specimen among collectors of such animals. Of course, there was a monkey or two—it could hardly be termed a show without a monkey—but there was not a single armadillo on exhibition, unless one can term the mounted specimen an exhibition. Mr. W., the W. of "W. N. C.," explained the lack of armadillos, or tolypeutes tricincti as he called them, by stating that the "poor things committed suicide in Georgia, which is a right poor place to give away anything, even your life." Mr. W. claimed that the armadillos' philosophy was that of Patrick Henry, whose memorable oration is well known. Thus, liberty denied them, the armadillos preferred death, which came to them quickly. The exhibitors intend purchasing another armadillo by post, thus affording the tolypeutes tricinctus an opportunity to orientate himself to captivity while enjoying the freedom of the mails.

The Tar Heel's reporter was entertained by an account of how and why the "W. N. C. Reptile Exhibition" originated. The three members of the firm are all retired seamen, who, after having done their share of arduous toil, feel that their pres-

BIG CORPORATIONS AFTER UNIVERSITY TRAINED WORKERS

Standard Oil Latest To Seek Employees Here For Domestic And Foreign Service.

(By Donald Wood)

There has been talk of the declining University, due to certain professors absenting themselves in favor of places in which more money can be found and work can be done under more favorable influences. The decrease of appropriations by the state has caused some people to predict that the University will not continue its phenomenal advance of the past few years. Yet loyal North Carolinians point with pride to the fact that, despite what prevalent criticism may be, the University is still continuing to grow in the eyes of national organizations and business is eagerly seeking to employ students here and to train them for executive and sales positions in foreign and domestic fields.

As a proof of this enthusiasm over the superior type of training offered in commercial and engineering courses here, was the visit of the Standard Oil Company of New York representatives to Chapel Hill last week. Representing one of the nation's largest businesses, these men came here last Wednesday on a recruiting trip interviewing about fifty men and one co-ed. Among the men seen, however, twelve were seniors from the State College school of science and business, two were from Duke University and the rest were from Carolina. It is interesting to note that the co-ed, Mary Price, was the first girl who has ever been granted an interview by a business concern on its recruiting trip to this university.

Last year was the first time the Standard Oil Company of New York had ever come south recruiting men for its organization. At that time C. S. Lassiter, a student, was employed and he is now working for the company at one of its posts in South Carolina. This year, however, the company sent its representatives to 55 colleges and it intends to employ 40 or 50 men on its present trip. The students thus engaged go into training with the company for service in foreign and domestic fields. The domestic fields of service would include New York and the New England states. The foreign fields of service would be China, India, Japan, Turkey, Greece, the Balkan States and the Philippines.

The training course usually starts in July and lasts for

MILLER TO SPEAK TO CAIN SOCIETY

Is Chief Engineer of the State Board Of Health.

H. E. Miller, chief engineer of the state board of health, will speak at the meeting of the William Cain chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers in 319 Phillips hall tonight.

Mr. Miller's topic will probably be upon sanitary engineering as he is sanitary engineer for the state. He is also a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Although there has been no formal installation of the officers elected April 11, the new officers will take charge of the meeting. These are, Rankin White, president; George Quinn, vice-president; and "Chuck" Erickson, treasurer. The election of a secretary will be held tonight. Since this office is usually filled by a rising sophomore, freshmen are urged by officials to attend.

Fraternity Notice

The secretaries of the following fraternities are requested by the editor of the Carolina Handbook to turn in a list of their members at the Tar Heel office by Friday afternoon, if they wish to be included in next year's issue: Kappa Sigma, Acacia, Sigma Zeta, Phi Alpha Delta, Delta Theta Phi, and Phi Delta Phi. The other fraternities have already turned in their lists.

DR. HOLMES PREPARING HISTORY OF LITERATURE

Dr. Holmes is now getting into final form his new book which he expects will be published this summer. It is entitled A History of Old French Literature From the Origins to 1300. This book will be mimeographed by the Edwards Company of Michigan and will be in a bound form. The Book Exchange is arranging for the printing.

PHI DANCE WILL BE HELD MAY 10

Annual Affair to Be Largest Hop in History of the Society.

The Philanthropic Society in a joint meeting with the dance committee and the officers, yesterday afternoon set the date for its annual dance for Saturday night, May 10. The dance will be staged in the Phi hall, which is located on the fourth floor of New East building.

The Phi will offer several prizes to the first couples on the floor not later than 9:15, as the dance is scheduled to begin promptly at 9 o'clock. This idea has worked successfully at each of the Grail dances at which it has been tried.

The officers of the Dialectic senate will be guests of the Phi luring this occasion. In order to create a better feeling between the campus and the society, a limited number of tickets will be sold at the door for 75c.

According to officers of the Phi this will be the largest dance ever to be given in the history of the two literary societies, and every possible effort is being put forth by members of the Phi to make the affair the best possible. Students desiring tickets beforehand should get in touch with G. P. Carr, 11 Battle, and make reservations.

HOLMES TO MAKE EUROPEAN TOUR

Romance Professor to Make Six-Week Tour of Europe for Research Work.

Dr. Holmes, of the romance languages department, has completed his plans for his European trip this summer. He expects to leave the University the night of May 28, and to be gone six weeks. His purpose is to do research work for his edition of Du Bartas which will soon be completed and to work on a number of projects. One of the things he hopes to accomplish is to secure motion pictures to be used next year in the elementary classes. These will include some of the most famous places of Europe.

Dr. Holmes has secured passage on the Europa which makes the crossing to Southampton in four and a half days. This will only be the third trip for this speedy vessel. After landing in Southampton, Dr. Holmes will board the fast Edinburgh train, the Flying Scotsman. He will spend a day in Edinburgh and will then go to Glasgow where he will visit some of his wife's relatives. From there, his plans show that he will go to Oxford, London, Antwerp, Lyle, where he will visit Professor Meyer-Lubke, and then to Paris. On June 21 Dr. Holmes plans to attend the monthly meeting of the Linguistic Society of Paris. On July 16, he intends to sail again on the Europa though this time he will board it at Cherbourg bound for Boston. Dr. Holmes will return in time to teach in the second session of the summer school.

Among the other members of the same department who will visit Europe this summer are Messrs. A. K. Shields, W. C. Sally, and S. A. Stoudemire, who will be accompanied by his wife. Mr. Sally and Mr. Shields will spend most of their time in Spain.

DU BARTAS WORKS PUBLISHED SOON

Urban T. Holmes Editor New Edition of Famous French Author; Assisted by Lyons, Linker and Taylor.

The two-volume edition of the works of Du Bartas, which is being prepared under the editorship of Dr. Holmes, of the department of romance languages, is nearing its final form. The book is being prepared by Dr. Holmes, editor-in-chief, and by Dr. Lyons, with the assistance of Messrs. Taylor, Linker, and others. The book is a critical edition of the works of the poet with a lengthy introduction and commentaries. The introduction will be mainly the work of Dr. Holmes, although Mr. Taylor will write the chapter which deals with the influence of Du Bartas on England and America. Dr. Lyons is giving much of his attention to the notes.

The publication of the entire works of Du Bartas will be the first since 1632. The editors have been spending three years on the task. Graduate research funds from time to time have been given them to buy numerous early editions of the poet's works and others have been photostated. The University of North Carolina has one of the greatest Du Bartas collection in

Pan Hellenics to Meet

J. D. Bullock, president of the inter-fraternity council, announces that all national social fraternities are urged to elect their inter-fraternity representatives before the next meeting of the group April 29, which will be held as usual in the Coop.

The meeting has business of important executive nature which requires the presence of regularly elected representatives.

MODEL TENT IS EXHIBITED NEAR Y.M.C.A. BUILDING

Type To Be Used on Extension Tour This Summer; Trip Will Comprise Two Divisions.

A model tent and bus, such as will be used on the transcontinental study tour sponsored by the University extension division this summer, have been placed on exhibition near Gerrard hall. Each of the large weatherproof tents, which will include all modern conveniences, will house eight students.

Two motorcades will start from Chapel Hill, the natural science section leaving Saturday, June 7, and the social science section leaving Sunday, June 8. The tour will pass through 15 states, the westward route passing through Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, and California. Juarez, Carlsbad Caverns, Painted Desert, Grand Canyon, Zion National Park, Death Valley, Hollywood, Los Angeles and San Francisco will be special stops en route. The return trip will carry the caravan through Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, and Kentucky. Of special interest on the tour will be Yosemite, Reno, Salt Lake City, Yellowstone National Park, Pike's Peak and Denver.

According to a recent bulletin issued by the extension division, a choice of at least three courses will be offered in each section. The courses given in the first section will be confined to the natural sciences, geology, botany and general science. Social science courses to be given only in the second section, i.e., sociology, economics, and geography. Each student enrolled on the tour will have to take at least one course.

All interested students are urged to apply for the necessary papers and information to the extension division, 315 South building.

Saunders To Speak At Alumni Meetings

Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, will speak today in Lincolnton and tomorrow in Shelby at alumni meetings. The president of the Lincoln county club, before which Mr. Saunders will address today, is Charles R. Jonas, '25, and of the Cleveland county club, S. G. Chappell, '26. Mr. Chappell was president of the student body here in 1926-27, and Mr. Jonas held the same office in the following term.

During the school year of 1878-'79, the University tried a system of voluntary chapel attendance, but attendance was so small that compulsory attendance was again adopted.

SUN'S ECLIPSE TO BE VISIBLE HERE FOR TWO HOURS

Astronomy Class Will Observe Phenomenon; Total Obscurity Expected in West.

(By Willard Hayes)

On April 28 Chapel Hill will be treated to an annular eclipse of the sun. About 2:09 o'clock Monday afternoon the sun will begin to darken and by 3:19 o'clock, 41 or 42 per cent of the sun's surface will be obscured and about nine-tenths of its light cut off.

This eclipse will last at Chapel Hill from 2 o'clock until about 4:30, according to Dr. Karl H. Fussler, teacher of astronomy at the University. He says that the best way to observe this eclipse, for those who do not have a telescope, is to smoke a piece of glass or combine two or three kodak films and observe the sun through these. The professor said yesterday that, even though a little over 40 per cent of its surface will be covered, it will still be bright enough to prevent any effective observation with the naked eye. Dr. Fussler's class in astronomy will observe the eclipse through the telescope from the top of Phillips hall.

This eclipse, which will be only annular here, will be total for a short time in the far west. It will be one of the smallest total eclipses that the earth can experience, being only one-half mile wide. It is possible for an eclipse to have a shadow that is as much as one hundred miles wide. This one will last for only one and one-half seconds as a total eclipse. It will begin about 270 miles out in the Pacific ocean southwest of San Francisco. The path of the eclipse will pass a few miles north of San Francisco, will cross Nevada and Idaho, and will rise at the Montana state line to continue across the continent and into the Atlantic ocean as an annular eclipse. The distance that it will cover as a total eclipse will be about 1000 miles.

At Berkley, Calif., 99 per cent of the sun's surface will be covered; 99 percent at Butte, Mont.; 64 percent at Chicago; 49 percent at Washington; 58 percent at New York; 36 percent at Atlanta. Chapel Hill is about half way between Atlanta and Washington, so about 42 per cent will be covered here.

The Lick observatory of the University of California will have photographers on the ground and in planes to "shoot" the total eclipse. Some of the planes will be as high as 10,000 feet. The higher the plane is the wider the shadow cast by the moon will be and by flying in the direction that the eclipse is traveling they will be able to stay in the shadow for a much longer time. The U. S. naval observatory is computing the path and the time of the eclipse. The figures must be very accu-

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Surfeit has killed more than famine.—Theognix.

Music Week

Of interest to music lovers in the Chapel Hill community is the announcement that in connection with national music week beginning May 4 a complete program has been arranged for Chapel Hill. This program which will provide almost every type of music has been arranged by a committee representing the University and practically all organizations in Chapel Hill.

The University band and glee club will give performances, while the Carolina Theatre will present the "Rogue Song." Climaxing the week's program will be the appearance of the Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra as a part of the Student Entertainment program for the spring quarter.

Without doubt there are many who will welcome a rest from the continual blare of jazz music broadcast almost continually from practically all radio stations. It is seldom that an opportunity is presented to hear music appealing to the ear instead of the feet, for in the hurry of modern living we are prone to pass over such presentations for that of a dizzier pace.

Those who appreciate music will utilize the opportunities of May 4-10, but it is to those whose contact with music has been confined entirely to dance programs that we are appealing. Stop long enough to sit through one of the concerts. Whether pleased or displeased you will have at least given music a chance.

The Study Of Philosophy

Many have wondered just why they came to college, and numerous of their acquaintances have wondered also. Some come to participate in athletics, some to get away from the restraints exercised upon them at home, and a small minority come to get an education. But, since we are here, it should behoove us to take a certain amount of interest in the courses offered in spite of what our reason for attending this institution may be. In doing this, a variety of subjects studied will doubtlessly aid our future lives in quantities which we have no means of estimating.

Philosophy is one of those subjects which have been more or less neglected by the students of the University. Just why, it would be hard to say. The word itself suggests to many that it is mysterious. Some may even think that long hair and dirty hands are necessary in studying it. However, whatever the reasons may be, it has not been given the attention by the students that it should.

As defined, philosophy is the study of thought, and the results of thinkers who have proved their theories correct to a certain extent. One is encouraged to try to visualize life and all it contains. It does not attempt to tear down one's religion or one's ideals. On the contrary, it tends toward reenforcing them. The ultimate aim in philosophy is to find out that which is true without reservation. If ideals and beliefs must be hidden and untried, wherein lies their value? Many theories by philosophers have been denounced by a vast majority. However, this majority did little in finding out whether these theories were true or false. Yet they were philosophizing when they declared them false.

To think is to philosophize. So, it may prove advantageous to learn how to think correctly as well as with some degree of originality. In short, it is my opinion that one of the best courses now offered by the University is being slighted causelessly and most unprofitably.—H. D.

The Growing Equality Of the Co-ed

Now that the Phi Assembly has at last let down the bars of membership to include the fair sex many old timers, as well as present undergraduates, are probably asking what the state university is coming to. It requires little effort to remember the number of objections that were raised against changing Carolina to a coeducational institution when the proposition was first debated. But in spite of those numerous and violent objections the deed was done; the march of progress continued, and women were allowed to enter the university, in the junior and senior classes, anyhow. And of course they were admitted to the professional schools.

In spite of the many dire conjectures of and probably wishes for—the failure of the innovation, the co-ed has come, has stayed, and slowly but surely is conquering. The number of them is increased every year; there are two sororities on the campus and probably will be more before long. More and more is the Carolina co-ed coming into her own; there are girls on the staffs of the campus publications, and girls take part in every activity that is not too indecorous. They even have a basketball team! And now, final proof that the female of the species is getting perilously near par with the status of the long dominant male of the University campus, the Phi Assembly, august, formal, secure in its tradition and its history, proud in its claim of being the training ground of a president of the United States, to say nothing of numerous prominent lawyers and justices, says women may now enter its portals and claim equal privileges with the senators.

It is only right and only natural that southern universities should come to recognize the co-ed. She is no longer a curiosity; she is as much a part of a college of the present day as the male student. The prejudice that has existed in the east and the south against co-eds is hard to understand. Girl students in the midwestern and far western universities are never thought of with anathema; their presence on the campus is not looked upon grudgingly. They are never thought of as a subject for controversy. But on the Atlantic coast co-eds have had a hard time breaking down this prejudice. Even such urbane institutions as Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania have regarded her doubtfully, tentatively, and have finally come to accept her presence as inevitable. The south has held to her barriers as long as possible, but now they are being washed away in a flood of reasonable tolerance and a tacit acceptance of the principles of advancing feminism.—R. H.

STUDENT EXPLAINS

This column is the property of the student body. Expression of student opinion is at all times earnestly solicited, but the editor reserves the right of judging the fitness for publication of letters submitted. Under no consideration will malicious or petty attacks upon individuals, in the student body or village, be published. All communications to be printed must be signed by the writer's own name which will be used.

Editor's Note:

Alfredo Nazareno, a University student and a member of the Phi Assembly, came prominently into the limelight yesterday when his views on the question of admitting women into the assembly were published in the Daily Tar Heel.

In an interview yesterday afternoon Nazareno offered an explanation of his statements which evolved into an interesting and delightful discourse on "What Men Want in Women." His talk on this subject follows:

"The Daily Tar Heel in summarizing my speech at the Phi Assembly with regard to extending to women absolute and equal rights that the men enjoy, quoted the following: 'you class them as your equals'; 'you forgot their place.' Such two phrases are too beautiful to change, therefore I shall not try to defend myself, but only explain what I mean.

"I don't know if it is safe for any man to judge women without exposing himself to ridicule and criticism—one must judge fairly. The Spanish writers, after an exhaustive study of the nature and character of the fair sex contented themselves by asking: 'Mujer que astro eres' (woman what star art thou). They saw in women the work of God in its perfection. This is quite a contrast to what we learned from Bill Shakespeare: 'Frailty thy name is woman.'

"That same idea is not confined to Bill alone; King Solomon advised his men never to trust women—not even their wives. A certain Russian scientist studied the women of the world as he would an insect under a microscope; afterwards he published a volume entitled: 'What Do You Know about Women.' To the great surprise of the readers the book was found blank from cover to cover except the title on the front page. The professor has taken great precautions not to expose himself to the possible criticisms by answering nothing. That should have been my position.

"But those men are exceptional. The average man regards women as his opposite not his like. While she is tender and lovable, he is bold and imperious. In her being he constantly seeks perfection, perfection which she herself seeks just as anxiously in men. He likes to protect her, love her, live and die for her. No man would ask of a woman to place him on a pedestal; he would hate it; neither would he accept her protection. No sensible woman would like to live in the streets. No real woman would be happy all her life working in a business office, and living in common apartment houses. Always an average woman wants a home if she has a chance. Such ideas may be out of date, but they are still good ideas. Real men always admire her for that."

UNIVERSITY GLEE CLUB IN NORFOLK

First Performance of Spring Tour; Sing Tonight at Chowan College.

The University glee club sang the initial program of its spring tour last night in the Blair high school auditorium in Norfolk, Va.

The group of 30 singers, in addition to Professor H. S. Dyer, director, and N. O. Kennedy, pianist, left Chapel Hill by bus yesterday morning.

Last night's concert will be repeated by the club tonight, this time at Chowan College in Murfreesboro, N. C. Tomorrow the club proceeds to New Bern.

GARRETT READS PAPER TO MATHEMATICS SEMINAR

R. L. Garrett, graduate student in mathematics and a candidate for a master's degree, spoke at the mathematics seminar yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Garrett read his paper on "The Reduction of Quadratic Forms to a Camonical Form." He is the second candidate to report his thesis for a master's degree before the seminar, which is composed of the faculty of the mathematics department and candidates for degrees. J. J. Slade, the first candidate to report, has already given three readings upon his thesis.

Upon the reopening of the University after the Civil War, the seniors requested the privileges of their predecessors to have a month's vacation just before commencement.

SUMMER SCHOOL OFFERS ENGINEERS SURVEYING CLASS

The University summer school announces the inauguration of a special surveying course, to be given under the direction of the school of engineering, for land surveyors.

The course is to be conducted during the first summer session, from June 12 to July 22, and may be attended by any person interested in surveying for either the first or the last three weeks of the session or for the full six weeks by those who desire an extended course.

This is an unique offering, it is believed, in this section of the country. It is intended primarily for the benefit of county surveyors and others who wish to check up on some of the newer methods. Applicants will be accepted regardless of their previous training.

University to Lose Barker, Sally and Jennings Next Year

Next fall the romance languages department will lose three men who are here this year. Messrs. Sally, Barker and J. Jennings will go to other institutions. Mr. Barker, who is a candidate for his Ph. D. degree this spring, has received a position as assistant professor of romance languages in the University of Arizona. Mr Sally, who also is working for his doctor's degree, has several offers under consideration. Mr Jennings will become an instructor in New York University.

Tar Heels Fail To Tally In Bulldog Baseball Game

Chandler of Invading Team Proves Carolina's Nemesis in Georgia 9-0 Win.

PLAY AGAIN TODAY

Limiting the Tar Heel batters to three singles, Chandler blanked Carolina 7-0 in the opener of the second two-game series with the Georgia Bulldogs at Emerson field yesterday.

Park started on the mound for Carolina and hurled two-hit ball for four innings when four hits combined with two errors and a wild pitch scored four runs. Park was taken out and Shields took on the pitching burden. Shields pitched four innings, allowing only three hits and one run. Tommy Edwards, who replaced Shields, was hammered all over the lot, yielding two hits and two runs.

The Bulldogs had three big innings, in which they garnered all their runs—the fourth, the eighth and the ninth. Rothstein started off the fourth by beating out a hit to short. Lufty's high throw to first put Rothstein on third where he rode home on Murdock's single, which also scored Davenport. Tate singled to center, sending Murdock to third, from where he scored on Gorman's sacrifice fly to right. Chandler then singled to left to score Tate.

In the eighth Smith walked and scored on Rothstein's triple to deep center. Rothstein was caught trying to stretch the hit into a home run.

Gorman fanned to start the ninth, but Chandler walked and counted on Day's triple to right. Day counted on McGoughey's single to left.

Carolina's best bid for a score came in the eighth. With two down Jackson singled and rode to third on Whitehead's long single. Maus ended the rally by popping to the first baseman.

Potter supplied the fielding gem when, after making a nice catch in center, he made a beautiful throw to nip Davenport at the plate.

The final game of the two-game series with Georgia will be played here today.

FROSH LOSE TO STATE BY SHUTOUT

The Tar Babies lost to the N. C. State freshman baseball team 4-0 in a hard fought game yesterday afternoon. Wade did good work on the mound for the State nine, allowing only four hits.

Griffin started the game for the Carolina freshmen by pitching good ball, but was hit by Wade in the second and forced to retire to the bench. McNeill was put in and allowed only three hits the remainder of the game.

The State yearlings got off to an early start, making two runs in the first and then putting over two more in the eighth.

Whitehead led the Tar Babies in hitting, getting two of the four hits.

Negress Withdraws Charges In Court

When Lillie Burnett, ten days ago, swore out a warrant for the arrest of Charley Young, also colored, on a charge of assault, she was too badly battered to appear in court as complaining witness, and the case was postponed until this week.

Appearing in court Monday morning, arm in arm with Charley, upon whom she appeared to be on very good terms, she confessed that Charley hadn't been as rough as she first thought—that he had, in fact, only slapped her, and that she had been angry when she swore to the complaint against her friend.

Judgment was suspended upon payment of the costs. They were promptly forthcoming.

A case similar in most of its details was the State vs. James Foushee, charged with assault upon Emma Foushee with a fruit jar, and attempted strangulation. Emma asserted that there had been but little grounds for her charges and she was taxed with the costs.

Medical Alumni To Meet in Pinehurst

The medical alumni of the University will meet at a buffet luncheon at the Carolina Hotel in Pinehurst on Tuesday, April 29. The day of their meeting is the second of the North Carolina Medical Society meeting, which will be held at Pinehurst on the 28, 29 and 30 of this month.

Over one hundred are expected to be present at the luncheon. This number will make up a great part of the attendance at the larger meeting, as about one out of four practicing physicians of North Carolina attended the University medical school.

Dr. Frank C. Smith of Charlotte is president of the medical unit of the General Alumni Association and Dr. Calvert Toy of Chapel Hill is secretary.

Bellamy and Turner Alumni Directors

Hargrove Bellamy and Thomas Turner, Jr., have been elected directors of the General Alumni Association, it was announced yesterday by Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary. Mr. Bellamy is a Wilmington business man and a member of the class of 1919. Mr. Turner, of High Point, is of the class of '28.

Looking Them Over

by
Browning Roach

Not satisfied with bowling over men of his size and bigger in the squared ring, Carolina's pugilistic pride, Add Warren, has taken up bowling in a big way over at the Bull City, and is reputed to be using little mercy on the duck pins. Add modestly admits that scores of a hundred or above are not at all unusual, and his strikes in bowling are beginning to recur as frequently as his knock-out blows with the gloves.

An idea for an advertising agency: Bowl some my way.

A case of mistaken identities came to our attention recently. It seems that one of our Tar Heel week-enders was trespassing slightly upon the love rights of the local swain. Said lovelorn swain accordingly proceeded to accost the Chapel Hill lad, who by the way hails from the wide open spaces beyond the Mississippi, and to inform him that his person was non grata worth a damn, and was about to resort to physical methods of persuasion. Whereupon some bystander with a distaste for slaughter proceeded to advise the injured lover that his intended victim was a glove-slinging slugger from the U. of N. C. and that he had better wind up his feet and inject a shot of cylinder oil in his running pants before he took a swing. A change of tactics ensued and the would-be assailant worked himself into the position of a hospitable host with the parting words: "... and if there's anything more I can do for you, old man, just let me know. Drop me a card the next time you're coming down and I'll have you a place to stay."

Atlanta, the city of the spree and the home of the Rambling Wreck, comes in for our heartiest felicitations: the Atlanta Crackers have won a southern league baseball game! After going through the entire first week of the season without a victory, the Crackers took the Mobile Bears for a 12-6 ride Monday. Meanwhile the boys from the Lookout Mountain district of East Tennessee continue their hard-hitting tactics and come through with seven straight wins.

If this keeps up, Chattanooga, long known as the Boston of the south in baseball, will soon be giving rise to the slogan, "Lookout for the Lookouts."

The Yankees aren't getting such a good start in the American league. Four games played and four games lost doesn't make the kind of percentage that hangs the old pennant over the park.

Reid, after being held back by a football injury for several weeks, stepped out and took first place in the 120 high hurdles in the V. P. I. meet Monday, leaving Perry and Stafford to take second and third places. They probably left the V. P. I. hurdlers sitting on top the last hurdle.

The Tar Heel track artists are almost making a habit of holding their opponents to two first places. V. P. I. is the third team to be held to two or less first places. Not bad, Coach Bob. We're looking for a Southern Conference championship this season.

Geologists Leave

Dr. Collier Cobb and Dr. W. F. Prouty left this morning for Charlottesville, Va., where they are to present papers before the American Association of Economic Geologists.

University Day in 1878 was held on October 11, a day earlier than usual.

Tar Heels Favored To Take Southern Honors In Track

The University of North Carolina track team, Southern runners-up last year, is beginning already to look like a favorite for a Southern title this season. The team came within 2 points of a Southern indoor title, has won all dual meets by good margins, lifted four of six records at the Georgia Tech Relays, and has to its credit victories over such outstanding teams as Penn State and Georgia Tech.

Illness Keeps Nims Out of Competition

Hard luck has dogged the tracks of Dave Nims, Tar Heel track captain and star quarter-miler, who has been put out of competition by illness and injuries several times this season. On the eve of the departure of the one-mile relay team for New York, where they were to compete in the Millrose indoor games, he was taken ill with an attack of "flu." Just as he was getting into his last year's form, he developed an infected foot which kept him from competing in the Penn State and V. P. I. meets and will keep him out of the W. & L. meet next Monday and perhaps the state championship meet in Greensboro on May 2 and 3. There is a bare possibility that Nims may recover in time to get into good enough condition to run in the championship meet.

If he does not recover in time to enter, Carolina will be well represented in the quarter by Lionel Weil and Ken Gay, who won the event in the Penn State and V. P. I. meets respectively.

Fifty-five counties were represented in the summer of 1880.

Co-Ed Notice

All co-eds who wish to enter the co-ed tennis tournament are requested to report to Ida Currie at the Woman's building by 10:00 o'clock tonight.

CO-ED IS BITTEN BY NEGRO'S DOG

Miss Virginia Douglas, who lives at Spencer hall, is being treated by Dr. E. A. Abernethy for dog-bite.

Miss Douglas, while walking past the home of Rev. J. H. Caldwell, colored minister, was bitten by Caldwell's German Police dog. Health Officer S. A. Nathan, upon investigating, found the dog not only chained, but muzzled as well. He was unable to cite the dog ordinance, however, since Caldwell lives without the city limits. The dog is under observation for traces of rabies.

Norwood Apprehended

Floyd Norwood, white, employee of the University, cited to appear at Monday's session of the local recorder's court to answer a charge of assault with a gun, failed to attend court, was later apprehended and is being held under bond of $150. Judge C. P. Hinshaw is considering asking Clyde Hutchins, who had been Norwood's bondsman to the extent of fifty dollars, to forfeit this sum, unless Norwood can show good cause for his absence at court time.

Norwood is charged with having fired a revolver at Jeff Norwood, said not to be related, as the latter's automobile passed that of his blood-thirsty acquaintance.

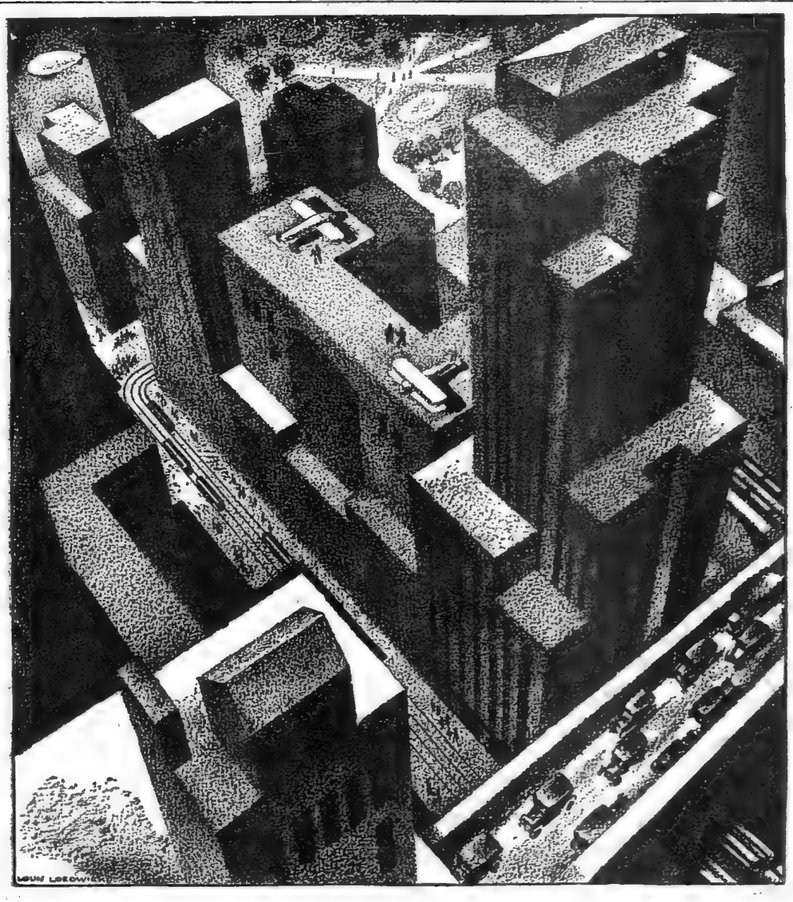
Phi Sig Takes Match

After having the match postponed for several days, Phi Sigma Kappa defeated S. A. E. 3-1 in a hotly contested tennis match yesterday afternoon. Curlee won over Saunders, Whittington defeated Waterhouse, but Andrews lost to Farley in the singles.

Curlee and Andrews defeated Farley and Waterhouse in the doubles after going to three sets.

This is the second win for Phi Sig, having defeated D. K. E. 4-1 last week.

Fire Burns Chickens



The Chapel Hill fire department was called out Tuesday night to Potters Field, colored suburb of Chapel Hill, to the scene of a chicken-house fire. About 100 young chickens were burned to death.

It is thought by the owner of the coop that some negro was relieving him of his chickens and, in his haste to get away, turned over his lantern and set fire to the house. As this paper went to press the culprit had not been caught.

Mrs. Farmers Reprimanded

Mrs. Rosa Farmers, 60, white, was charged in Monday's session of recorder's court with assaulting a small child of the neighboring Bowman family, and was ordered to refrain from further chastisement of her neighbors' children for twelve months, during which period sentence is being withheld by Judge C. P. Hinshaw.

Mrs. Farmers claimed that children living nearby had been throwing stones at her chickens. The children denied her allegation, asserting that wild pigeons had been their targets.

The telephone looks ahead

Even as you are putting through your daily telephone calls, groups of Bell Telephone experts are calculating your telephone needs for five years, ten years, twenty years from now.

It is their work to discover from all available facts—not fancies—how each state, city and community will probably grow. These facts are reduced to forecast charts, precisely as an astronomer plots the course of a comet.

Thus central offices are planned years before they are actually built. Underground and overhead lines are laid out to fit future as well as present needs. Expansion of service is provided for.

Bell System planners virtually live in the cities of the future. They play a vital part in providing the best possible telephone service for the least possible cost.

OLD MILLSTONE TAKES ITS TOLL

Grinds Faces of Poor Freshmen Assigned Herculean Task by Their Elders

STONE IS STILL UNTURNED

Last year Dr. A. T. Browne of Peabody in Nashville was visiting in Chapel Hill. He is a devout lover of flowers and has a beautiful garden adjoining his home.

About two miles out on the Durham road he spied a large millstone lying in a dry creek bed—a splendid addition for the garden. He found the farmer who owned the property and was told that he was welcome to the stone if he could move it. Dr. Browne investigated, found express rates prohibitive, and reluctantly gave up the plan of moving the thing to Nashville.

Last week Herb Browne, a son of the doctor, in school here, conceived the idea of moving the millstone to the large garden in the rear of his fraternity house. He directed freshmen to effect the transfer.

Eight, simple little freshmen sitting around the millstone drinking grape juice from a jug to strengthen them for their Herculean task were frightened by a powerful voice demanding their reason for trespassing upon private property. They responded, perhaps a little too pertly, and left the scene. The next they knew one of their number was under arrest for trespassing upon private property with intent to steal. Browne, feeling responsible for the thing, went to see the outraged farmer and apologized for any indiscretion the freshmen might have committed. He was given to understand that the only thing to appease rural wrath would be personal apologies by all of the offending freshmen—accompanied by a peace offering of two dollars each.

Apologies flowed profusely, ten dollars changed hands, and the warrant was withdrawn. Urban and rural factions are again at peace—and the millstone still lies in the dry creek-bed.—G. R.

Class of '80 Suffers Loss of Two Members

The class of 1880 has recently suffered the loss from its ranks two members, just prior to the celebration of its fiftieth anniversary, which will take place in June.

Thomas Cook Brooks of Roxboro, who died at his home on Monday of this week, and Charles Cotesworth Cobb of Dallas, Texas, whose death occurred April 5, are the deceased. Both men were lawyers, known for having taken prominent parts in the life about them. They will be missed in the celebration of the anniversary so near at hand.

The death of these two has reduced the class from nine to seven members who are yet living. These seven men who will come together here in June are: T. H. Battle, Rocky Mount; Rev. W. A. Betts, Barlow, Florida; H. E. Faison, Clinton; Ernest Haywood, Raleigh; Dr. R. B. John, Fayetteville; Robert Ransom, Hickory; and W. B. Slade, Columbus, Georgia.

At the end of the school year in 1912 the department of civil engineering was separated from the department of mathematics.

In 1912 the only member of the class of 1862 to attend the reunion of the class at commencement was J. M. McIver.

Caldwell Hall, the home of the school of medicine, was dedicated on May 8, 1912.

THESPIANS SWEAR OFF HAIRCUTTING

Cast of Romeo and Juliet Are Under Injunction To Have No More Haircuts Until Play Is Over.

(By T. L. Bright)

Sheep are shorn and even college students have closer and more haircuts in the springtime, but as far as the players in the forthcoming Playmaker production, Romeo and Juliet, the charming season of green grass and flowers is still far off. Elmer Hall, technical director of the actor group, has ordained that no aspiring Romeo or lesser theatrical luminary may have his locks clipped or cut without permission of the executives of the Forest Theatre production. A fortunate few may have the hair trimmed, but only under the guidance of a reputable authority on Elizabethan haircuts.

Those actors, who are destined to move the campus in the dramatic tragedy next month, are now easily discerned upon the campus. Half of them have fuzzy mustaches, noticed by few but carefully tended by their growers. Most of them have their flowing hair covering the back of their white collars and are often mistaken for members of a visiting House of David baseball team.

Few of the audience who will witness the spectacle in the Forest Theatre will appreciate more than the histronic ability of the thespians. It is a shame, indeed, for half the performers' battle will have been won once they master their reactions to hoots and jeers, not to mention sneering suggestions and unpleasant insinuations of fraternity brothers and erstwhile friends who feel that long hair and nebulous mustachios are signs of something or other.

WILL TRY TO AVOID THIEVERY EPIDEMIC

An effort is being made by "Red" Greene, president of the student body, and the local police force to avoid an epidemic of petty thievery such as the University experienced last spring. The Chapel Hill police have declared that they will be particularly wary during this season in an effort to minimize stealing on the campus.

As for Greene and the student councilmen, they are asking that the students cooperate with them in this move. It has been requested, accordingly, that trunks and room doors be kept locked, and that all suspicious characters and thefts be reported to the student council.

It is hoped, thus, that the recurrence of last spring's epidemic may be avoided.

Although the eclipse will be total for a strip six-tenths of a mile wide, it will be visible to the southward as an annular eclipse to a line drawn through southern Yucatan and Cuba. North of the path of totality the line of obscurity will swing far beyond the north pole into the higher longitudes of the eastern hemisphere.

the world. Dr. Holmes is going to Europe this summer to complete his research on the subject and it is expected the book will be completed late in the summer or early in the fall. The book in its printed form will not appear for at least a year due to the work required in proof reading and other details.

Guillaume de Salluste, Seur Du Bartas, was a Hugenot poet of the sixteenth century who was considered one of the greatest poets in his day. He was a native of Gascony, but his poetry was read throughout France. His work consisted chiefly of biblical epics which are not very popular today. His two most famous works are the "First Week" which tells of the world in seven days and his "Second Week" which is a history of the world since creation. The "Second Week" was never completed and but seventeen poems in this work exist.

three months. It trains men particularly in the fundamental principles of the oil business and acquaints them with every phase of it which will be useful to them. During this period of training a nominal wage is paid to the students and this salary is immediately raised when the student has completed the course and is ready to begin work in earnest for the company.

The Standard Oil representatives were particularly interested in men with an engineering background, who did not care about becoming engineers. A commercial training was also desirable for those men who desire to go into the sales end of the organization. They were especially anxious that those whom they interviewed for foreign service be representative American citizens, with qualities of leadership and organizing ability which would command the respect and admiration of the natives. Good scholarship was noted and due consideration given but such a qualification was not demanded of their prospective employees.

It is interesting to note that those who desire foreign service with this company must agree to devote their lives to this work. At least, they must intend to spend the greater part of their lives in the country they choose, for the expense of the training offered and the quality of instruction that must be given each man in training in the matter of speaking the language and becoming acquainted with the customs of the East, makes it impractical unless a man is willing to repay the company by remaining in its employ.

The difference between foreign service and domestic service of the men who complete the training course is the fact that all men going into foreign service as representatives of this company are classed as executives from the very first. The natives do all of the dirty work and it is a challenge to American leadership to be able to organize them and supervise their labor. In domestic service a man, upon the completion of the training course, would start at the very bottom working in one of the filling stations selling gas and greasing cars. After about a year of this sort of work, he would be put in charge of the filling station at which he was employed and from then on there is a steady line of advancement to a position of higher importance in the company.

This company's representatives came to Chapel Hill under the auspices of the bureau of vocational information, 204 South Building, and interviews with the men were arranged through Henry Johnston, Jr., director of that bureau. At various times throughout the year, many business concerns such as the Eastman Kodak Company, Remington Rand Business Service, Inc., Vick Chemical Company, Goodyear Rubber Company, and others, are continually sending their representatives to this university for the purpose of interviewing men who are best qualified for their particular line of work. The Standard Oil Company's visit was only an example of the attractive offers each company has for eligible University students, and it is only one of the many companies in whose eyes the University of North Carolina is growing in importance as a breeding place of future American leaders and executives.

THEATRE GUILD AND BYRD TAKE HIGHEST VOTES

Small Voting on Next Year's Entertainments; Ballot To Be Run Again Today.

According to the balloting in the recent poll held by the Student Entertainment Committee the Theatre Guild is the best liked of the 30 entertainments from which next year's program may be selected. Richard E. Byrd ran the Guild a close second with 47 votes to the Guild's 49.

The balloting was small, only 70 votes being cast. Dean Hibbard, head of the committee, believes that a larger number of students are interested in next year's entertainments than the small voting would indicate. The ballot form is therefore being run again in this morning's Tar Heel. There is a box in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. as there was on the previous balloting. Votes may also be turned in at Dean Hibbard's Office. The ballot closes tomorrow.

Of the thirty possible numbers for the program the ten leading ones in the order of their popularity are: the Theatre Guild, Richard Byrd, Lawrence Tibbitt, the Beggar's Opera, Pavley-Oukrainsky Ballet, the Ben Greet Players, Bruce Bairnsfather, Darrow-Cannon Debate, Carola Goya, Ruth Page, Russian Symphonic Choir, Spaulding, and an art exhibit.

Each voter was allowed ten votes, indicating his choice by numbering from one to ten. The same system is to be used in today's voting. The Theatre Guild got by far the larger number of first choice votes. If the Guild comes—and if the first ballot may be taken as an indication of the students' wishes in the matter, Eugene O'Neill's Strange Interlude which has aroused so much comment, favorable and unfavorable, will be presented by them. Since the original negotiations concerning Commander Byrd's lecture the cost of his coming has almost doubled. If the students and townspeople desire him to come he will be brought here however. The ten entertainments that are now leading show a well-balanced interest among the voters, music, drama, dancing, and the arts all being represented.

CAMPUS LEADERS TO MAKE TRIP TO NEARBY COLLEGES

Greene, Hamer, Farris, Lang, And Yarborough To Visit Schools In Interest of Student Federation Movement.

Red Greene announced yesterday that a delegation of campus leaders would make a trip today to State, Meredith, Wake Forest, and Duke in the interest of the student federation movement and of the student convention which has been tentatively set for May 10. Those going are Ed Hamer, Ray Farris, Ed Yarborough, Red Greene, and John Lang. The purpose of the trip is to have personal interviews with the student leaders of each of the institutions mentioned and to further make certain the success of the convention. Letters setting forth the purpose, date, and outline of the convention have already been sent to all the senior colleges of the state. Those invited to attend and send delegates to the convention are Asheville Normal, Atlantic Christian, Catawba, Davidson, Duke, E. C. T. C., Elon, Flora McDonald, Greensboro, Lenoir-Rhyne, Meredith, N. C. C. W., Queens, Rutherford, Salem, State, Wake Forest, and Western Carolina Teachers. The number of delegates from each institution will be in accordance with the enrollment.

The committees which have been appointed to provide for the convention are made up as follows: Finance, Will Yarborough and Mayne Albright; Constitution, Ray Farris, Red Greene, and John Lang; Entertainment, Ed Hamer, Clyde Dunn, and E. C. Daniel; Publicity, K. C. Ramsay, Will Yarborough, and E. C. Daniel.

This movement for a statewide federation of students, which was originated by Ray Farris and John Lang several months ago, has steadily grown until at the present definite plans for the formation of such a federation are being executed, and, from the apparent sentiment of the student leaders throughout the state, it will be a success.

GLEE CLUB WILL GIVE CONCERT HERE MAY 8

Canvass Is Taken Of Fleece Potentialities By Reporter

Correction

It was stated in yesterday's issue of the Tar Heel that the eclipse of the sun Monday would be annular and that it would cover nine-tenths of the surface of the sun. This was erroneous. Only about four tenths will be covered, and the eclipse here will be partial and not annular. An annular eclipse is caused by the passing of the moon directly across the surface of the sun, therefore, Monday's eclipse will only be annular in a path about as wide as that of the total eclipse. The area south of the path and the area north of the path will only be in partial eclipse.

Student Body and Faculty Interviewed For Preferences.

(By Edward French)

To be tapped for membership in the Order of the Golden Fleece is considered the highest honor that can come to a Carolina man. It is taken to be an indication of his outstanding achievements during the time that he is a student, in addition to being a stamp of outstanding ability or talent along several lines; namely, mental, physical and moral. A candidate's personality and his ability as a mixer are also strong considerations.

A Fleece man, theoretically at least, should embody at least a majority of these qualifications. In the past, as is inevitable in all human organizations, men have been admitted to the order who appeared to the campus mind to be undeserving of the honor, and likewise men have gone untapped about whose qualifications there seemed to be no doubt. On the whole, however, those who really deserved the distinction have been admitted to membership in the order.

It is altogether highly commendable that the members of the Fleece spend so many weeks in deliberation over those they intend to tap. A member of the order is obligated to consider each man in the entire student body regardless of prejudice or affiliation. Each Fleece member should vote on men not according to his personal reaction but according to the amount of service the man has rendered the student body as well as on a

Tar Heel Man Discovers Scandal In I Dorm Store

(By Alan Lowenstein)

Yesterday the Tar Heel sent Jim, the office boy, over to "I" dormitory to investigate alleged incompetence on the part of the managers of the dormitory store. The owners, J. C. Williams and Beatty Rector, from Asheville, gave him complete access to the secret files of the partnership.

After spending four hours in hunting through a mass of papers of all descriptions which included love letters to our red-headed Magazine editor, Di Senate inaugural addresses, chewing gum wrappers, various Paris style magazines with and without models, he came upon what looked like laundry slips and what were labeled "account of the aforementioned owed to aftermentioned for such matters as the purchase of human digestive materials." Whether the efficient managers of this store permitted the office boy to delve into the files for fear of fearless publicity unfavorable to them in the Tar Heel, or whether they were totally ignorant of what was in the files is a matter of question.

After much trouble the office boy found that the store was owed since the beginning of the winter quarter exactly $140.61 by students most of whom have moved out of the dormitory. He also found that the amount of goods sold totaled up to $140.61. By a strange coincidence, there was no account of any income whatsoever. The Tar Heel calls upon the managers of the store to declare publicly what income they have received or file a statement of bankruptcy.

Beatty Rector is now taking but one meal a day and Storekeeper Williams has been forced to cut down to two the number of shaves per quarter, due to inability to buy shaving cream.

On the other hand, the Everett inhabitants are going around very happily and seem very prosperous. They are always flushed with money as well as being continually supplied with candy and eats. Despite this display of food, their purses never seem to empty in the least. The only outward difference is the increase in pencils used in the store to mark down accounts and money owed. This, how-

Decrease Reported In Dormitory Store Sales

Nearly every dormitory store operator on the campus reports a noticeable decrease in sales this quarter. Although this is the first year that the dormitory store system has operated, business for the whole year has been very good, despite the present decline. Of the three quarters, however, the spring term has shown for its operators the least profit per month. In the fall quarter Old East netted for its operators approximately $85 per month to top the list in sales; while the managers of the store in Carr dormitory reported an estimated profit of $45 each month to trail the sales. The majority of the stores yielded a profit of $60 per month, roughly speaking. The high average for the fall quarter is attributed to the fact that most of the dormitories were fully occupied and that the novelty of the stores attracted more purchasers.

The winter quarter showed a decrease in sales of the stores as has the spring quarter so far. Steele and Old East took the lead these two terms, each reporting a gain of approximately $50 for the last month. Carr and "I" dormitories report the greatest decrease, the past month yielding their operators an estimated gain of only $10. Managers of stores in both of these dormitories give as reasons for the small profit the fact that their stores have not been operating daily as many hours as the stores in other dormitories, since business did not demand it. For the fall and winter quarters Carr depended upon the medical students for an appreciable number of customers, but this quarter the change in schedules of these students has cut off to some extent their purchases.

Several reasons for the decrease in sales have been given. The operators of stores in the two quadrangles state that quite a few boys moved to fraternity houses and to Old East, Old West, and Steele, since these dormitories are more centrally located. A number of the managers said that the students are "just plumb broke." However it is the general opinion of the operators that business will pick up since many students study harder after mid-term and consequently refresh themselves more frequently. Several managers stated that their stores were literally swamped during examination week. As the school year comes to a close more accurate results will be reported.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Jealousy does more damage to people's lives than all the deaddly sins. —Bishop F. L. Deane.

A Definite Federation

Early in May there will assemble here representatives of nearly every institution in North Carolina requiring a four-year course to begin organization of a North Carolina Student Federation. Preliminary plans have been drawn and invitations mailed to other institutions asking representation at the meeting to be held here May 10.

From the interest manifested to date the organization meeting will see the actual birth of a movement destined to have considerable influence in student circles in North Carolina. Essentially the student bodies are the same elsewhere as here. We all face the same problems and the method of discussing these is with others confronted with the same problems.

But of greater benefit will be the impetus such an organization would give to better relationship between neighboring institutions. While so-called "love feasts" may have temporary results, a permanent organization is needed to insure a continuance of peaceful relationship.

Too much credit cannot be given to John Lang, Red Greene and Ray Farris for the work they have done to cover the skeleton of a student federation with permanent flesh.

The Federation Movement Gains Impetus

For several months now a group of Carolina students have been advocating the formation of a State Federation of Students. Members of the local federation club are today visiting the federation groups which have been organized at Wake Forest, State, and Duke in the effort to secure organzied support for their idea. It now appears that the efforts of the local club will be crowned with success when it meets here May 10, with representatives from nearly every major college in the state to discuss the problem of intercollegiate relationships in North Carolina and to organize, if possible, a state-wide federation in the interests of fostering good will among all the colleges of the commonwealth.

The movement for a federation of students comes in recognition of problems arising out of the great acceleration of intercollegiate rivalry which the last decade has witnessed in the state. The comparatively recent intense expansion of collegiate education in North Carolina has undoubtedly given rise to mass education evils which are highly analogous to those which have accompanied the rather recent widespread industrialization of the state. We believe that the proposed federation of students would eliminate much of the strife and bitterness which, although it is in the infant stage as yet, is beginning to crop out. This is particularly applicable to Carolina-Duke relations. The proximity of the two universities, when coupled with the fact that Duke is growing by leaps and bounds and is threatening the pinnacle of supremacy which Carolina has occupied for a long number of years, cannot conceivably breed any condition other than that of over-emphasized rivalry. Over-emphasized rivalry always results in bitterness and hatred. We believe that a state-wide federation of students, holding regular meetings to which each college member sends representatives, will accomplish much toward solving the problems of bitterness which are bound to accrue from the Duke-Carolina situation and others similar to it.

The chief virtue of the proposed federation is that it will substitute organized, official action for the customary mass action of the student bodies concerned in any particular controversy. For quite a while the need for some medium through which to systematically thrash out the problems of intercollegiate rivalry has been apparent in this state. We believe that the proposed student federation is the desired medium. The success of the recent joint meeting of the Carolina and Duke literary societies substantiates this conclusion. The meetings of the federation would be essentially similar to this joint meeting of the literary societies of Duke and Carolina. The chief apparent difference is that more colleges would be represented. There is good reason for believing that this factor would heighten the good accomplished by the federation meetings, rather than lessen it. It is generally conceded by the student bodies of Carolina and Duke that the joint meeting of the literary societies in Chapel Hill accomplished much toward bringing about a feeling of mutual interests between them. Proceding from this premise, the writer feels no hesitancy in advancing the idea that the state-wide student federation which it is hoped will be organized here May 10 will establish and guarantee the continuance of mutual aims among the collegiate institutions of the state.

We call upon the Carolina student body to rally to the support of the student federation movement.

A Co-ed "Tells Them So"

Since I predicted several of the winners in the various track events correctly, and being a woman I could not help but try a "I told you so" story. Oh, I know that I missed more than I guessed but then I did get a few right and they are the ones I'm "blowing about." What does it matter if I made a few mistakes and hurt a lot of folks' feelings because I didn't think they would win? I do well to remember who was victorious at all when there was the nicest looking man in front of me—one that I had never seen before and a girl near the front had on the duckiest ensemble I ever saw. Well, I spent most of my time planning one just like it except mine was to be a little different around the neck when I heard the man announcing to the world in general that Rip Slusser won the low hurdles. I deserted my imaginary sewing at a very crucial place long enough to turn to my companion and say, "I told you so!"

So the meet progressed, in spite of the soggy track and whenever I found that I had made a mistake I very quickly remarked that "It's too bad that it rained" or else, "Wonder why so many out-of-state people ventured forth?" and once I said quickly, when an embarrassing moment rolled round, "I wonder who the man in the beret might happen to be?" He didn't know—nor did I know why I was wrong.

I told you that Pot Adkins would put the shot all over the place and have it all over the other boys. Well, sir, he threw that thing an awful piece. Had a lot of fun watching that but I don't see why they turn around after they throw it. Guess they are afraid to look and see where it landed and want to break the news to themselves gently. After thinking it over I believe they turn before they throw—but I've filled up space. I told you that Neiman would trip himself somewhere. Yes sir, even if I said pole vault I take credit for being half right. He can certainly jump—a regular grasshopper—and the way he sails through the air would make you think someone is dangling a "Lucky instead of a sweet" before his eyes.

Even "I told you so's" get boring so I'll quit my nagging and wait until something else comes my way. It's a lot of fun predicting and remember "I told you so."—Mary Marshall Dunlap.

Talking Pictures Draw From Legitimate State

With a single exception, all the leading members of the cast of "She Couldn't Say No," the Warner Bros. and Vitaphone production which shows at the Carolina theatre today, have had extended experience on the stage.

Winnie Lightner, one of the stars of the screen drama, has for a long time been recognized as one of the few funny feminine artists appearing before the public. She has been in vaudeville for many years, appeared opposite W. C. Fields in "The Scandals," and was also seen in "Gay Paree."

Among the other stars who have had previous stage experience are Chester Morris, who first appeared when he was 15 years old, Johnny Arthur, who has spent more than 25 years before the footlights; and Tully Marshall who made his first appearance in 1883 and who has been in motion pictures for the past ten years.

The only important member of the cast who has never been on the stage is Sally Eilers, who left high school to become a screen flapper—and has been one ever since. Her first outstanding success was achieved in "The Goodbye Kiss."

ever, never seems to bother the residents of the dormitory who go about constantly happy with their appetites always satisfied. Their only complaint is that the store is not open often enough. Recently one of them has been designated to ring a large cowbell each time the store is open, which is getting more and more seldom, and that all the students of the dorm come flying like humming bees to a hive.

Beginning this quarter, the store has been open only from 11 at night to 3 in the morning. The total income so far as a result has been two campus political offices, 19 hours of bull sessions, and no money. basis of his character and ability.

Speculation always runs rife each year as to the possible Fleece men. It has become a custom for the Daily Tar Heel to present through its columns a composite opinion of students selected at random as to the men most deserving the honor.

The following list of outstanding Carolina men is the resume of the opinions of the student body as a whole as to who will be tapped. The list is not arranged in any particular order, but the most likely candidates have their honors printed.

It is of almost universal opinion that Ed Hamer, president-elect of the Y. M. C. A., should be among the first to be tapped. Hamer is a member of the Grail, Minotaurs, Epsilon Phi Delta, Cabin; is assistant editor of the Yackety Yack and a commencement marshall.

Burgess Whitehead, elected to head the athletic council at the recent election, and winner of scholastic awards offered athletes, as well as a Phi Beta Kappa man, took a high place in the recent balloting.

Will Yarborough, editor-in-chief of the Daily Tar Heel, is to be strongly considered. Since the conversion of the paper from a tri-weekly to a daily, the position of editor has become the second most important student office on the campus. Yarborough is also treasurer of the German Club, member of the Sheiks; was a freshman track man, and member of the Yackety Yack staff of 1927-28. He has served as managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel and as president of the Publications Union Board.

The student body was surprised last year that the name of Archie Allen was not included among the Fleece men tapped. Allen has been president of the athletic association, caption of the boxing team, southern bantam-weight champion of 1929, and was largely responsible for boxing being made a major sport at Carolina. He is also a member Gorgon's Head, the Daviens, Minotaurs, Cabin. He was treasurer of his junior class, a member of the executive committee, and voted the most social in the senior class this year. He is to be the commencement ball manager this year.

Hlgh scholarship almost automatically wins a place among those tapped, and Joe Eagles, who has received but one grade below A since coming to Carolina, probably will be made president of Phi Beta Kappa, is undoubtedly of Fleece caliber. He has been active in publications and was secretary of the Y. M. C. A. He is also member of the Grail and Sheiks.

Perhaps the best-liked among the athletes who will be active next year is Noah Goodridge, captain elect of the boxing team. Goodridge also a man of high character, and is a religious leader and student pastor of the Presbyterian church.

Pat Patterson, recently chosen president of the senior class and business manager of the Daily Tar Heel, stands high in student approval. His activities include business manager of the Buccaneer, Y. M. C. A. work; and he is a member of the Grail and Alpha Kappa Psi.

J. C. Williams, in addition to being editor-elect of the Carolina Magazine and associate editor of the Daily Tar Heel has a better record than any other debater on the campus; namely, no defeats in eleven encounters. He has the distinction of having won both the Bingham and Wright medals. Williams has also served as president of the Di Senate and president of the Debate Council. He is mainly responsible for the Carolina-Virginia radio debate's being made an annual affair. Williams belongs to the Epsilon Phi Delta and Tau Kappa Alpha orders.

The new editor of the Yackety Yack, Clyde Dunn, thoroughly fits the qualifications demanded by the Fleece. He is retiring president of the Publications Union Board, has been active in Y. M. C. A. work, and has a high scholastic standing.

John Bullock, retiring president of the interfraternity council, and president elect of the German Club, has been manager of baseball, and is a member of the Gorgan's Head and the Monogram Club.

Among other names prominently mentioned is that of Mayne Albright, who has been a varsity wrestler and debater. speaker pro tem of the Phi, a member of the Grail and Sheiks. and was recently elected student council representative from the senior class.

John Lang, retiring vice-president of the Y. M. C. A., speaker of the Phi, a Phi Beta Kappa man, and chief instigator and organizer of the movement to found a state federation of students, is a logical candidate for the highest campus honor.

Strud Nash, on the basis of his being captain of the football team, and for his various social activities, is considered Fleece material.

Other students most frequently mentioned for the honor include Dave Nims, Henry House. Marion Follin, Flem Wiley, Peyton Abbott, George Thompson. Dave Craig, Beverly Moore, K. C. Ramsay, Ike Manning and Aubrey Parsley.

WRESTLING BOUTS COME TO CLOSE

Interest In Intra-Mural Wrestling Continues To Grow; Some Experienced Men Take Part.

The preliminaries for the intramural wrestling tournament were held Wednesday night, the final matches for deciding the campus championship in each division being left for last night.

The number of men entering the tournament, though not very great, was sufficient to keep interest at a high pitch. Most of the contestants lacked previous experience but showed signs of having made rapid progress in the short period of training previous to the tournament. The appearance of a few more or less experienced grapplers, however, in no way decreased the spiritedness of the contests.

Summaries of the preliminary matches follow:

115 pounds: Chamberlain won time advantage over Moore (5:50); Lawson won fall over Baldwin (3:40).

125 pounds: Hine won from Willis by fall (2:00); Devereaux drew bye.

135 pounds: Williamson won from Hargrave by fall (3:31); Davis won fall over Freeman (57 seconds); Allison won fall over Williamson (2:49).

145 pounds: Waugh won fall over Follin (57 seconds); Leary won fall over Goodson (2:19); Biggers won fall over Davis (33 seconds); Biggers won fall over Waugh (2:42) in semi-final.

155 pounds: Parks won fall over Higdon (1:19); Cuthrell drew bye.

165 pounds: Only two contestants, Goodwin and Spell.

175 pounds: Leiberstein won from Williamson by time advantage (2:26); Whitner won fall over Glenn (1:36).

Unlimited: Collins won fall over Oliver (2:25); Hampton won fall over Wilson (1:03).

FROSH TRACKMEN MEET DUKE IMPS

Meet In Durham at 3:30 P. M. Tuesday; Distance Races Likely To Feature.

The Tar Baby tracksters will meet the Duke freshmen in dual meet at Duke Tuesday afternoon at 3:30. The Duke Imps will likely offer some keen competition, especially in the distance runs. Jensen, Jones, Cordle, and Hubbard will likely take care of distance runs for the Tar Babies. Drane and Gieger will probably see service in the dashes. Davis and Stafford are the hurdlers. Watkins, Mitcham, Brock and Evans will handle the quarter mile. Jensen and Jones may be shifted to the half.

In the field events, Martindale, Harold, and Shepherd will be entered in the pole vault. Newland and Hamlet in the high jump. Wornam, Davis and Lindeman in the broad jump. The freshmen are short on weight material. Davis will probably be entered in the discus, but no one else has any job sewed up in the weights. The coaches request that all freshmen who are interested in the weight events, whether they have had any track experience or not to report at Emerson field today for instructions.

CAROLINA TRACK MEN WITHDRAWN

Coaches Saving Men For W. and L. and State Championship Meets.

The University of Pennsylvania relays, which will be the nation's biggest sporting event this week-end and which will draw a record-breaking galaxy of the best sprint and distance stars of the country, will be held this year without any of Carolina's stars competing. Farmer, who had been conceded a wonderful chance of winning the dash by several prominent eastern newspapers, will also be unable to compete. All Carolina entries have been withdrawn in order to save themselves for the W. & L. meet next Monday and the state championship meet in Greensboro May 2 and 3.

FRESHMEN WHIP VISITING HI NINE

The Tar Baby baseball team defeated Danville high school 12-2 yesterday afternoon. Coach Cerney used most of the squad during the game.

Atkins pitched a good game for the first six innings, striking out nine men. Riggs led the hitting by getting a single, a double and a home run out of three tries; he was followed by Daniel who got three single out of four times up. Ferebee and Whitehead also did good work at the bat, getting two hits out of two times at bat.

Luther, who was put in as a relief pitcher in the sixth inning to finish the game for Danville, allowed the freshmen only one hit and one run. Garrett led the Danville nine's hitting by getting two hits out of three tries.

Both teams played good ball, Danville making only three errors and the frosh making none.

The next Tar Baby game will be with Greensboro high school here this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Dr. Lawson Ill

Dr. R. B. Lawson has been unable to meet his classes this week. Although not seriously ill he has been confined to his home with sciatica, but will probably be able to go back to his work Monday.

Yeomans Defaults

The matches in the state tournament of Ed Yeomans, state collegiate singles champion, were declared defaulted by Coach J. F. Kenfield, yesterday, for insubordination after the ranking player on the University team refused to obey the coach's order Wednesday.

Yeomans, according to Coach Kenfield, refused to play second man in the doubles matches Wednesday and was consequently removed from the tournament.

HENDLIN WINNER OF STATE TENNIS IN SEMI-FINALS

Only Carolina Man To Come Through To Finals.

Brushing aside both Phillips, No. 1 player on the Duke tennis team, and Haverstadt, also No. 1 man on the Davidson team, Hendlin of Carolina succeeded in reaching the final round of the state collegiate tennis tournament yesterday on the local courts before a large and enthusiastic gallery.

Hendlin displayed a fine brand of tennis in winning both his matches. In his match with Phillips, he was trailing in the first set at 5-6, and 30-40 with Phillips serving. But needing only one point to take the set, Phillips faltered, and Hendlin, taking advantage of this opportunity, ran out three straight games to take the set by 8-6. He could not be stopped in the final set, which went to him at 6-3.

In his second match of the day, the Carolina man had a hard time subduing Haverstadt to win finally by 6-4, 8-6, 1-6, 6-4. Both players tried to push the attack by rushing to the net at every opportunity, and some beautiful shots were made on both sides. But Hendlin was a little stronger than his opponent at the net, and it was this advantage, coupled with the Tar Heel player's superior serve, that finally decided the match in his favor. Hendlin is the only Carolina entry left in the singles.

Merritt of Carolina lost a close match to Haverstadt earlier in the afternoon. Both players fought for all they were worth, and it was only after a long, bitter duel that the Davidson man finally captured the match at 6-4, 11-9.

Johnston of Davidson took over Frank of Duke rather easily in two straight sets 6-2, 6-2. Johnston's service and steady driving was too much for his Duke opponent, who could not succeed in fighting off his persistent attack. Johnston meets Hendlin today to fight it out for the state singles championship.

In the only doubles match of the afternoon, Rogers and Frank of Duke succeeded in turning back Merritt and Palmore of Carolina by the score of 6-2, 5-7, 6-3. After taking the second set, the Carolina pair were leading 3-0 in the third set, but the Duke team tightened up their defense and succeeded in taking six straight games to take the set and match.

Both the singles and doubles finals will be played off this afternoon, and there are expected to be several tight matches. One of the feature doubles matches will be that between Hendlin and Liskin of Carolina and Johnston and Haverstadt of Davidson, the winner to meet one of the Duke teams for the state doubles championship.

CAROLINA WINS FROM BULLDOGS

Longest and Potter Allow Only Three Hits; No Hits Until Seventh.

With Longest hurling a three-hit game in his debut as a varsity hurler and fielding faultlessly, the Tar Heels reversed Wednesday's defeat by trimming the hard-hitting Georgia team 7-3 yesterday at Emerson field.

The victory evened the season's records, each team having won twice. Three weeks ago the Tar Heels went into Peachland for a two-game series with the Bulldogs. Chandler turned back the Tar Heels in the first game 9-1, but Carolina came back to take a six-inning battle 6-4. Wednesday Chandler continued his spell over Carolina shutting out the Tar Heels 7-0 with three hits.

Again Nap Lufty was the spark plug of the team. Nap started off the second with a long triple to right field from which he scored a moment later on Potter's single. In addition to leading the attack, he played a beautiful game around the hot corner.

Reid started on the mound for the visitors but lasted only two innings under the Tar Heel barrage. Costa, who relieved him, fared little better, pitching only three innings. Simpson, a southpaw, finished the game.

Rand walked to start the third. Longest was hit by the pitcher. Davis beat out a bunt and advanced all men. Whitehead sacrificed Rand in, and Maus' single to left counted Longest.

In the fifth Whitehead beat out an infield hit and stole second. Maus' second single scored Whitehead, and Lufty's single brought Maus across the plate.

After failing to make a hit off Longest's delivery for six innings, Georgia finally dented the rubber when Davenport walked and Murdock's drive to center, which was momentarily lost in the track hurdles, scored both men. In the ninth Davenport walked, Murdock fanned, but Tate doubled to left and Davenport came in with Georgia's last run. Simpson ended the game by fanning.

Briefs

There was plenty of "jockeying" or "riding" going on by members of both clubs, a rapid line of chatter going on continually throughout the game. The coaches at first and third and the umpire seemed to be the targets.

Yesterday's game showed a complete reversal of form on the part of the Tar Heels. Wednesday they fielded sloppily and garnered only three hits. Yesterday only one error was made and the Georgia pitchers were hammered for 12 hits.

Lufty made some sparkling pickups of hard-hit grounders to turn sure hits into another time at bat. Nap has been fielding and hitting like a leaguer.

Catfish Smith was made the goat on two pop-ups to center field. Lufty raised a high one just behind second; the second baseman, short stop and Smith all yelled "I got it." As usually is the case, no one had it. The same thing happened on Potter's pop in the same inning.

Next game will be played with Duke on Emerson field.

CAROLINA TENNIS MEN COMPLETELY OUTCLASS DUKE

Lose Only Two In Nine Matches To Blue Devils In Match Play.

Losing but one singles and one doubles match, the Carolina tennis team decisively defeated the Duke racqueteers Wednesday on the local courts seven matches to two. The Tar Heel tennis men allowed the Duke team only two matches out of the nine played, both of which were relinquished only after bitter struggles. This is the fifth victory to be gained by the Carolina team, which has not only kept its slate clean this season, but has won all its matches by overwhelming scores.

Yeomans, playing first, had little difficulty in disposing of Phillips (Duke) 6-4, 6-2. Phillips' only bid for the match came in the first set when he tied Yeomans at 4-4, but Yeomans bore down a trifle harder and ran out the set 6-4. Keeping up his fast pace, he then proceeded to run out the second set 6-2.

Hendlin (Carolina) played a fast and accurate game to beat Frank 7-5, 6-2. Frank was a finalist in last year's state collegiate tournament, and was expected by many to win this match, but Hendlin, a sophomore, showed his ability by beating him in straight sets. Frank set a fast pace in the first set and was leading the Carolina player 5-3 when Hendlin decided that his shoes were keeping him back. Having changed them for another pair, he then won four straight games to take the set 7-5. He took the second set easily 6-2.

Captain Merritt (Carolina) lost a gruelling match to Captain Myers of Duke by 3-6, 7-5, 6-3. After having dropped the first set to Merritt, Myers suddenly tightened up his defense, and by rushing to the net at every opportunity, took the last two sets.

Liskin (Carolina) managed to outsteady Rogers to win in three sets, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3. Both men refused to come to the net and fought out their match by standing on the baselines and hitting long deep drives to each other. Liskin's ground strokes were working more smoothly than his opponent's, and this finally decided the match in his favor.

Graham was threatened by Curtis (Duke) only in the early part of the match, when Curtis won the first set 6-4. Graham then settled down to play a steady game, and ran out the next two sets 6-1, 6-0. Baggs (Carolina) did not give Farris a chance to get started, and took the match quickly 6-3, 6-3. The Carolina man was hitting the ball hard, and his adversary never got going.

Hendlin and Liskin, playing first doubles for Carolina, took over Captain Myers and Phillips of Duke in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2. Hendlin's fast service and terrific overhead smashes, coupled with Liskin's hard drives and accurate lobbing, was too much for the Duke pair, who could threaten only in the first set when they led at 2-0.

Palmore replaced Yeomans in the doubles, and, teamed with Captain Merritt, ran the strong Duke pair, Rogers and Frank, to three long sets before dropping the match 6-4, 6-8, 8-6. The Carolina pair had their big chance in the last set when they led at 6-5, but Rogers and Frank succeeded in rising to the occasion, and finally took the set. The match was hotly contested throughout, and both teams played well. Palmore, number eight in tennis ranking, here replaces Yeomans after the latter's failure to follow Coach Kenfield's request to play number two in the doubles.

Graham and Browne of Carolina played well to beat Curtis and Farris of Duke 7-5, 6-3. Graham and Browne came from behind to take the first set at 7-5. They worked much better in the last set and allowed their opponents only three games.

It was stated in 1884 that the total expenses for tuition, fuel, lights, board and washing of a student in the University need not exceed $200.

CONTACT MEN TO MEET HERE NEXT YEAR IN SPRING

Bob Madry Will Be Official Host To College Publicity Men.

The American College Publicity Association, which comprises in its membership more than 150 college and university publicity directors representing leading institutions in all sections of the country, is to hold its next annual convention at the University of North Carolina.

The University's invitation to the college publicists to come to Chapel Hill next year was extended by R. W. Madry, director of the University news bureau, who has just returned from New York, where he attended this year's convention, held at New York University.

By virtue of his position as representative of the host institution, Mr. Madry was also elected to serve as convention secretary for the year. He will immediately begin laying plans for next year's meeting which will likely be held in April.

The American College Publicity Association, which until this year was known as the American Association of College News Bureaus, was organized in 1917. This is the first meeting to be scheduled for the University of North Carolina. Two years ago the convention was held at Vanderbilt University.

The new officers of the association are Earl Reed Silvers, of Rutgers University, president; Kenneth Hazlewood, of Hamline University, vice-president; and Don Cresswell of Penn State, secretary-treasurer.

Recorder Hinshaw Sentences Drunks

Pleas of Bill Sharp, law student, who defended Bynum Weaver, colored, in Monday's session of recorder's court, in an action charging public drunkenness, availed but little. Bynum admitted having been drunk, and the young lawyer's argument that his client's offense was his first, that he was a hard worker and well liked did not prevent the levying of a fine of $5 and costs.

Luther Alston, "praying negro" who once prayed himself out of a road sentence, did not fare so well Monday at the hands of Judge C. P. Hinshaw, who sentenced him to 30 days on the roads for public drunkenness, and ordered enforced a previously suspended sentence of 30 days additional. Luther was, however, given the privilege of being "hired out" by the county commissioners. This means that anyone who will pay Orange county 50 cents per day and will feed Luther for 60 days, may have his services, and thus save him from the ignominy of working on the roads.

Tip Craig, colored barber, was fined $10 and costs for drunkenness. Local officers alleged that nearly everyone found one day recently in Tip's barber shop on Franklin street showed evidence of over-indulgence in liquor.

Glee Club At Murfreesboro

Last night the University glee club gave the second of its spring tour programs at Chowan College in Murfreesboro, the first having been at Norfolk, Va., the night before.

Today the club will proceed to New Bern and will appear at the Griffin high school there tonight.

New Dorms, composed of the dormitories of Vance, Battle and Pettigrew, were built in 1912.

CO-EDS DISCUSS PLANS FOR YEAR

The meeting of the Woman's Association Wednesday afternoon at Spencer hall opened with Miss Reeme Moore's interesting report from the I. S. S. G. conference, after which the nominating committee submitted their candidates for the different offices for the Association. The final outcome was as follows: President, Reeme Moore; Vice President, Kate Graham; Secretary, Adelaide McAnally; and Treasurer, Hariet Daniels.

The house president, Sue Dent, submitted for consideration an amendment to the rule of co-eds riding as printed in the indespensible handbook. The members of the association were won over by Miss Dent's inspiring wittisms and the petition went through.

Ida Currie was elected President of the Athletic Association. It was voted to appropriate fifty dollars to be used for tennis and track this season.

Final plans for the Co-ed dance on May 9 were made. Beth Colley announced that tickets would be on sale until Tuesday and that the committee hoped to get "Jelly" Leftwich and his orchestra to play.

CAROLINA RADIO DEBATE WILL BE GIVEN TONIGHT

Making the second time in the annals of the University that the Carolina debating team has broadcast over the air, the Tar Heel rhetorical representatives will meet the University of Virginia contestants in Raleigh tonight from 7:15 to 8:15. The debate will be broadcast over station WPTF at the Sir Walter hotel.

The subject of the debate is a timely one, prominent in the League of Nations conference and with all the prominent business firms in the country, namely: "Resolved, that the thirteen month calendar should be universally adopted."

W. W. Speight will lead the local argumentative artists for the second time over the electric waves. It will be remembered that he made his debut to radio in a debate with the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, Va., last April. He will be assisted by Allan Lowenstein, a freshman, with H. H. Hobgood serving as rebuttal speaker.

TRAFFIC VIOLATORS FINED BY RECORDER

Praying Negro Fails to Pray Himself Out of Trouble.

Edwin Caldwell, colored, made a sharp turn from Franklin street, but was driving so rapidly that he ran into the yard of the negro Methodist church, whereupon he was arrested by officers John D. Blake and U. R. Rackley. He was charged with reckless driving and assessed the costs.

Mrs. T. J. Wilson, Jr., wife of the registrar of the University, was assessed with costs of an action in recorder's court Monday morning charging her with violation of a local traffic ordinance. Mrs. Wilson pleaded guilty to having parked her car in a forbidden area.

J. M. Abernethy, who gave his address as Hickory, N. C., was fined $15 and costs for reckless driving. He was apprehended last week while driving through the business district of Chapel Hill at 40 miles per hour.

Raymond Chatham, a student, secured a dismissal of a charge of parking his car at an angle of 90 degrees to the curb instead of 45 degrees required by ordinance. Chatham established the fact that he had not been driving the car when it was so parked.

JUNIUS PARKER TO ADDRESS LAW SCHOOL MEMBERS

Invitations are being mailed today by the law school to 2000 lawyers and judges of the state to attend the public lectures to be given next week by Junius Parker of New York. Mr. Parker's lectures deal with the great questions of government regulation of industry. Mr. Parker, who has been general counsel for the American Tobacco Company—the dissolution of which under the anti-trust laws was termed an attempt to "unscramble scrambled eggs"—has had a long and varied experience as a lawyer in guiding business through the dangerous channels formed by government regulations.

Three lectures will be given by Mr. Parker under the general title "Business and the State." The first will be Monday night at 8:30 at the law building, and the others at the same hour on the two following nights.

The Cercle Francais will hold its April meeting this evening at 7:30 in the Episcopal parish house. Dr. Fenley, who was in France last summer and last fall, will give a petit discours of interest to all students of French. There will be only one more meeting of the Cercle this spring. An invitation is extended to all who are interested in French, and especially spoken French, to attend these last two "reunions."

Infirmary List

The infirmary had five patients yesterday though none were seriously ill,. Dave Nams, who has been a patient for quite a while, is suffering from an infected toe which has kept him from participating in track, and T. H. Pomlinson, Jimmie Williams, L. Q. Plumblee, and Charlie Waddell are all kept in bed because of colds.

HONORARY FRAT WILL INITIATE 9 MEN TONIGHT

Tau Beta Pi, National Engineering Organization, To Hold Ceremonies At Library.

BANQUET LATER AT INN

The initiation of Tau Beta Pi, national engineering scholastic fraternity, will take place at 7:00 tonight at the library. Following this a banquet will be held at the Carolina Inn.

At the initiation tonight, nine men will receive the honor of becoming members of this organization which carries the recognition of outstanding qualities of character and scholarship. The nine men who will be initiated today are W. D. Merritt, instructor in engineering, John B. Pittana, a senior in the school of engineering, C. P. Hayes, George Thompson, Aubrey Parsley, G. J. Quinn, Norman L. Bryan, all juniors, C. P. Hayes, graduate of the school of engineering in 1925 and now vice-president of the Carolina Steel Co., and R. M. Casper, graduate of the school of engineering in 1925.

Rodman to Speak

W. S. Rodman, vice-president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineering and professor at the University of Virginia, will be the principal speaker at the banquet in the Carolina Inn. This banquet will take place at 8:30, immediately after the ceremonies at the library.

Membership in Tau Beta Pi carries with it a distinct honor for the engineering student, for the members of the engineering profession have become acquainted with the fact that the men selected for membership possess outstanding qualities of character and scholarship.

The University chapter, Beta of North Carolina, was organized in the winter of 1928, and since then there have been four tappings. The last one of these, in which the men to be initiated tonight were tapped, was held Tuesday night.

TO PRESENT OLD-FASHIONED PLAY

Green, Steele, Coffin, Jones and Others Completing Plans for Two Performances

(By Philip DeVilbiss)

Such an array of celebrities as has been gathered by The Imperial Stock Company for their production of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" at the Playmaker Theatre May 2 and 3 has seldom been seen in this vicinity. Paul Green and Wilbur Daniel Steele, leesees for the company, have declared their intention of not going out of the village for either set or costume materials. When questioned concerning the play, Mr. Green stated that he emphatically believed it would prove even more popular than "The No 'Count Boy."

"Thorns and Orange Blossoms" is a dramatization of Bertha M. Clay's internationally-known novel of that title. The all-star cast will be costumed in the dress of the period—the early 1880's. The play consists of four intensely dramatic acts and calls for ingenious adherence to the interiors of the period. Howard Mumford Jones, member of the Society

Over 600 shares of the Orange County Building and Loan stock have been sold since the opening of the twenty-first series on the first of April.

The number of shares authorized in this series is limited to 1000. Shares are issued in units of $100, and may be bought by installments as low as twenty-five cents a week. The interest begins to accrue as soon as the first installment is made. The shares are tax-free, and have yielded about seven per cent. in the past; sometimes over.

MEDICAL ALUMNI GATHER THURSDAY

Meet At Pinehurst As Part Of State Medical Society Program.

Alumni of the school of medicine in the University will hold a buffet luncheon at the Carolina hotel in Pinehurst April 29 as a part of the program of the meeting of the state Medical Society.

This luncheon is being sponsored by Dr. Frank C. Smith of Charlotte, who is president of the medical unit of the University Alumni Association, and Dr. Calvert Toy of Chapel Hill, secretary of the medical unit.

Approximately one of every four physicians practicing in North Carolina are former students of the University medical school. Many of these have signified their intention of attending the Carolina luncheon.

This would swell the attendance at the luncheon to a maximum number, for during the 40 years of the medical school's existence approximately 1300 students have matriculated. Of these, 78 per cent of the native North Carolinians have returned to serve their native state. Five hundred and fifty are now practicing medicine in this state, which is approximately 25 per cent of the active profession in North Carolina.

In the past 30 years, students of the school have headed the list in examinations by the state board of medical examiners 22 times.

Senior Notice

The Procter and Gamble Company will have a representative in Chapel Hill on Tuesday, April 29. On the next day (Wednesday, April 30), the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company will be represented here. Some time during the first week in May, the district manager of the S. H. Kress & Company will be here for his second visit this year.

Seniors who would like to have interviews with these representatives should see Henry Johnston, Jr., at 204 South building immediately.

Flower Show Opens Next Thursday

The women of Chapel Hill are busy with preparations for the Flower Show in the Tin Can next Thursday, May 1, and the University and the village are to be treated to such a display of flowers as they have never seen before. And with the flowers will be Colonial furniture, luncheon and dinner table decorations, landscapings, and garden layouts.

The show will open at 12 o'clock noon and close at midnight. The admission fee is 10 cents.

P. L. Burch, the University's superintendent of buildings, has had some of his men build a room in the west end of the building. Here will be displayed furniture of the style found in American homes of the Colonial period, and sketches done by the art department of the Community Club will adorn the tables and shelves.

Outside of the entrance of the room, in a miniature garden, Mrs. Kluttz, seated under a sunshade, will preside over the serving of lemonade and cookies.

The bleachers, where sit the spectators at basketball games and other athletic events, will be used for the display of cut flowers. But any exhibitor who so desires may bring a table or stool on which to place her flowers.

One of the exhibits takes the form of the decoration of breakfast, luncheon, and dinner tables, and there will be ten tables, maybe more, each with a full complement of linen, china, silver, and flowers.

Miss Josephine Sharkey's dancing classes will give a performance of folk dancing in the afternoon and again in the evening.

Invitations to the show have been sent by the Garden Club here to the Garden Clubs in Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro, Danville, and other communities, and so many visitors are expected.

Scores of prizes have been offered by individuals in Chapel Hill and merchants in Chapel Hill, Durham, Carrboro, and Greensboro. The following list shows the prizes to be given in each class of exhibits.

DEBATE BY AIR HELD LAST NIGHT AT STATION WPTF

Speight, Lowenstein, and Hobgood Represent University Against Virginia in Second Annual Affair.

The second annual Carolina-Virginia radio debate was broadcast last night from station WPTF, Raleigh. The query was one which is at present very prominent in League of Nations conferences and big business circles; namely, "Resolved, That the thirteen-month calendar should be universally adopted." Carolina took the affirmative side of the question and was represented by W. W. Speight, A. V. Lowenstein and H. H. Hobgood. This was Speight's second appearance in radio debating circles. Last year he paired with J. C. Williams in the first Carolina-Virginia battle of the air, which was broadcast from station WRVA, Richmond.

The thirteen-month calendar is a subject about which the average person knows very little. The radio debate of last night was designed, therefore, as an educational program. This policy was instigated last year when the question of national advertising was debated at Richmond.

The debate last night was the ninth of the year. The tenth, and last, will occur when the local forensic artists journey to Boston to engage Boston University's representatives early in May. The University will be represented in this encounter by J. M. Baley, J. C. Williams and G. P. Carr. The query which will be debated is "Resolved, That the nations of the world should adopt some plan of complete disarmament of all forces, except those which are needed for police purposes."

Phi Zeta Nu, honorary electrical engineering fraternity, announces the initiation of J. S. Kirk, of Mocksville, and R. E. Hubbard, of Clinton. The initiation took place Thursday night.

Mr. Kirk is a senior and Mr. Hubbard a junior. Phi Zeta Nu is a local scholastic fraternity for electrical engineers, founded in 1919.

ENGINEERS MOVE TO MAKE SCHOOL MORE SCHOLASTIC

Sophomores Approve Braune's Plan To Raise Standard By Increasing Course By Eight Weeks.

At a meeting of the special faculty of the School of Engineering held yesterday afternoon, changes were made in the curriculum which will make it possible to improve the scholastic content of the curriculum and to maintain a 24 week's period of contact with outside industry.

Under this plan, which will be put into operation at the beginning of summer school this year, students in the school of engineering will take two summer school periods of twelve weeks each, and the work during the junior co-operative year will be placed on a quarterly basis.

By the installation of this plan, which was approved by the sophomore engineers, the total time spent at the University during the four years required for the completion of the course will be increased eight weeks, and the scholastic content of the curriculum will be increased in proportion.

Speaking of the change, G. M. Braune, dean of the school of engineering said yesterday: "Under the new plan, the engineering curriculum of the University of North Carolina will have as much or more scholastic content than any other engineering institution in the country, and it provides in addition 24 weeks' contact with outside industry."

Two Summer Sessions

"By giving two summer sessions of 12 weeks and placing the cooperative junior year on a quarter system, it is possible to make changes which will very considerably improve the scholastic content of the entire

Advertising

We hear little of the deputation teams sent out several times each year by the University Y. M. C. A., but we feel the result of their work when the freshmen enroll in September. This medium of instructing North Carolina concerning its state University is a medium of advertising seldom emphasized. The team members make contact with prospective students and it is the impression that they make that often decides the composition of a good part of the freshman class.

There are other methods of advertising Carolina. Athletic teams will influence many, so will the glee club trips and the Playmakers performances, but their advertising is directed to specialists in their fields. But the student body is not composed entirely of athletes, singers and actors. And it is necessary that we appeal to those who will enter in September as the other part of the student body.

It is to those whom the deputation teams appeal and it is the impressions made by members of the teams which is likely to influence those just "going to college," but undecided as to where. There is much fine material in that group and Carolina should seek it, for at the University here there is certainly the opportunity for developing such material.

In order to make the correct impressions of Carolina we should send representatives of every field of activity here on deputation trips. This is not a criticism of methods employed in selecting membership of the teams, but a suggestion to those who are interested in bringing to the University the finest type of student.

Balloting and The Student

Straw votes and student balloting have become so common of late that it is small wonder that so few votes have been cast in the poll now being conducted by the Entertainment Committee. Nevertheless we do not propose to condemn the method, for it is about the best and only way of ascertaining the opinion of the mass. But it becomes effective only when it is responded to by a large group of people.

Three polls have been held recently to investigate student opinion. The prohibition ballot was successful. A significant vote was cast, and the subject of the vote provoked much comment and discussion. The ballot on the new president for the University was not quite as satisfactory. There was considerable discussion on the subject at the time, but the comment failed to produce the votes which should have been cast.

The third poll, that now being held by the Entertainment Committee, seems to be the least successful of the three. It is an indication either that the student body is indifferent to entertainment programs or that it is so well pleased with the efforts of this year's committee that it would rather trust in the committee's judgment than in its own. Aside from such a speculation, however, it is evident that the Entertainment Committee is trying to arrive at a just estimate of student opinion in formulating the program for next year. The small vote that has been cast certainly must be a cause of discouragement for that group which has provided so excellent a program during this year.

This is the last day of the poll to ascertain student opinion on entertainment. It is being conducted for the benefit of the students here, and the students owe no less than their cooperation in guaranteeing a significant ballot. Every individual who has any interest whatever in the matter should seize this last opportunity of indicating his choice. —B. M.

Radio Debating Comes Into Its Own

At last the solution to the problem of audiences for intercollegiate debates seems to have been found. That solution is the radio. People who are no longer willing to exert themselves to attend debates are quite willing to turn on the radio and listen for a time. We believe that radio debating will gradually supplant the "old order." In this program of conversation from the platform to the microphone, Carolina has taken the initial step in the South. The agreement calling for an annual Carolina-Virginia radio debate is the first in the South. We hope that other institutions will follow suit in the near future.

Not only has radio debating certain distinct advantages over the regular platform debate with its visible audience, but it solves the problem of the audience more nearly than any form of debating which has been devised thus far. We suggest that the University Debate Council strive to schedule more radio debates in future years.

—J. C. W.

More Interest In Debating Desired

Most discouraging was the attendance at the recent debate between Boston University and the University of North Carolina. Gerrard hall, which should have been packed for the occasion, contained little more than a score of people. There is no doubt that interest in debating has declined exceedingly in recent years and that this activity has been placed in the background. We now have but eight or ten active members of our debate squad.

The art of the spoken word has lost most of its glamor. We no longer have great oratorical leaders in our modern life and the brilliant oratory of Henry and others is no longer appreciated. Public speaking has come down to a mere matter of fact presentation of arguments. The fault is that of the student debaters and not of the art. For while the flowery language of the past has been discarded the public still appreciates a logical, fiery delivery of arguments on an interesting subject. They do not want to be put to sleep, they want to hear something stimulating, something of direct interest to themselves, something that will make them think and take sides one way or the other. It is the fault of the debaters themselves that students do not come to hear them. It is up to them to select interesting topics, to liven up their speeches, and to persuade each of the listeners instead of talking to the blank wall.

The students who in any way feel they have the ability to speak in public should come out for debating and do their share to reawaken interest. By this means they may also gain benefits for themselves. For debating is still a very valuable asset for future life. The man who can present clearly his arguments for something, the man who is able to win over others to his opinions, is still a dominant character in American business. —Alan Lowenstein engineering curriculum," stated Dean Braune.

Dean Braune particularly made it clear that with the new changes in the schedule of the engineering school the University offers a course with as much or more scholastic work than any other engineering school in the country, and that in addition to this 24 weeks, two full quarters, contact with outside industry is provided.

The increase of the summer work from two summer school sessions of eight weeks to two such periods of twelve weeks each, is the first change that enables an addition to the curriculum to be made. The changing of the cooperative system from periods of seven weeks as they have been during the past several years to periods of 12 weeks, will enable the juniors to obtain their work in periods corresponding to the usual University divisions of the school year.

Juniors To Take Other Courses

In addition to making it possible for the juniors to take scholastic work other than the usual co-operative studies, this system will enable them to register and pay the University fees at the same time as the non-professional students and the other engineers.

The placing of the co-operative work on a quarterly basis will also give the students longer periods of time with the firms with which they work and will decrease the number of trips from the University to the job by two.

Before the faculty decided that this new plan would be placed in operation at the opening of the first summer school session, it submitted the proposed changes to the sophomores for their approval. This was done because when the students entered, it was with the understanding that there would be two summer school sessions of eight weeks. With the approval of the second year men, who are the first to be affected, the plan will be installed in June.

The first section of co-operative students to work under the new plan will go out to their jobs when school opens in the fall. This group will be working while the other section is taking scholastic work at the University. A shift will be made at the Christmas holidays, the two groups changing places. Another change will be made at the end of the winter quarter, and the groups will again exchange places at commencement the following June.

Policy of Engineering Faculty

This latest change in the curriculum is one in complete accord with the policy of the school of engineering, which is to give the students practical contact with outside industry but to give this contact without decreasing the scholastic content of the curriculum in any way.

The special faculty of the school of engineering, which was the final group to place its approval on the plan, consists of all faculty members of the school of engineering above the rank of instructor and a representative from each department represented in the curriculum of the engineering school.

The changes in the curriculum will affect the members of the present sophomore class in that the civil engineering students will spend the first summer school session at the University and the second surveying camp, near Brevard, instead of spending the entire time there as before. The electrical and mechanical engineering students will spend twelve weeks in Chapel Hill this summer instead of the eight weeks as has been done before. The chemical engineers who have taken two full sessions of summer school work at the University every year will not be affected for they will continue to have the usual twelve weeks work here.

for the Advancement of Scandinavian Studies, and author of America and French Culture, is directing the play and will also take the role of the villain Oscar Carstone. Many will remember Mr. Jones' portrayal of the heavy-weight drunkard in "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" produced at the Playmakers Theatre two years ago.

Oscar J. Coffin, presiding officer in the Journalist's Recluse, is chairman of the finance committee and recently expressed the belief that the play would be a success, financially and otherwise. F. B. McCall, treasurer of the Company, reiterated Mr. Coffin's sentiments. Capt. Bob Sellers is in charge of the scenery and will be assisted by Margaret Steele and Elizabeth Lay Green. Adeline Denham McCall will direct music and novelities, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Adams are collectors of properties. Mrs. W. F. Prouty and Mrs. P. C. Farrar in charge of costumes, have exploited Andrews-Henninger, S. Berman, and other local concerns for sundry materials to be used during the week-end.

Bessie Jones, wife of the director, and publicity manager of The University Press, is chairman of the committee on arrangement, and Emily Slade and Vina Fenley will usher in costumes especially designed for the occasion. Mary Marshall Dunlap, in charge of tickets, has been equipped with a purse proportioned to hold an unusual number of one-dollar bills, both of the old and new variety.

The acting cast includes men and women with talents as colorful as Joseph's cloak. Mary Margaret Wray Russell, who showed promise of becoming a poetess until she veered her talents to The Carolina Magazine, will play the part of Violet Ryvers. Monica Ryvers will be portrayed by Frances Stratton. R. B. House, former International Rotarian, will take the part of Tommy Swyft. Cornelia Spencer Love, A. B., B. L. S. and Order Librarian of the local institution, will essay the role of Lady Ryvers, and Harry K. Russell of the department of English will play Lord Randolph Ryvers. Dougald MacMillan III, member of the committee on English composition is to play Sir Hubert Forrest Hay, the self-sacrificing friend. Jesse McCoy, who in regular life instructs University freshmen in English, will take the role of Thompson the butler. W. A. Olsen, who gives a course in public speaking, will demonstrate his eloquence when he appears as Louis Leob, Shylock of the pawnbrokers.

Gate receipts over and above expenses will be presented to the poor of Orange county by the munificent, and slightly less indigent, company.

Carolina Men Cinch State Title On Tennis Courts

Liskin And Hendlin Come Out Winners In State Meet

DAVIDSON-DUKE PLAYERS FIGHT HARD BUT LOSE

Hendlin Singles Champion; Liskin and Hendlin Doubles Champions.

Hendlin and Liskin, Carolina's left-handed pair, swept through the semi-finals and finals of the state collegiate tennis tournament here yesterday to capture both the singles and doubles titles.

Hendlin rushed through the entire tourney with the loss of only one set, which he dropped to Halverstadt of Davidson in a semi-finals match, while the Carolina pair succeeded in taking the doubles title without losing a single set. Hendlin and Liskin had not been doped to come through the tournament, but both men were playing at the top of their game during the past week, and they did not experience the trouble they had expected to meet.

Johnston, No. 1 player on the Davidson team, was expected to give Hendlin a stiff battle in the finals, but the Carolina man upset all the dope by trimming the Davidson player in three straight sets, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2. Dropping only one service of the entire match, Hendlin displayed an aggressive game in defeating Johnston, and allowed his opponent only four games in the three sets. Hendlin drove every ball to the deep backcourt, and never gave Johnston a chance to get started, although Johnston tried hard to force the games. Several times he needed but one point to take a game, but Hendlin's fast game was too much for him.

Playing their semi-finals match in the morning, Hendlin and Liskin took Halverstadt and Johnston of Davidson into camp by the score of 8-6, 6-0, 6-2. The Davidson couple made their greatest bid for the match in the first set when they were leading at 6-5 and 40-0 on Liskin's serve and needed only one point to take the set. But although they had three chances to make the single point, they couldn't stop the Carolina pair from winning five straight points to even the score at 6-6. Hendlin and Liskin then broke through Johnston's service, and also won Hendlin's service to win the set 8-6. Gaining confidence by their comeback, the Tar Heel players then ran off ten straight games before the Davidson men could recover sufficiently to win two games before losing the match.

Hendlin and Liskin had a harder time of it in the finals when they fought Frank and Rogers of Duke for the doubles title to win finally 6-4, 6-4, 6-2. The Duke team fought hard to gain the title, and rushed the net at every opportunity, but the Carolina pair continually lobbed over their heads, and broke up their offensive game repeatedly. Frank and Rogers had their biggest chance in the second set when they were leading at 3-1 on their service, but Frank lost his service, and Hendlin won his to tie the score at 3-3. The Blue Devil couple went into the lead again by 4-3, but dropped the next three games to lose the set at 6-4. Hendlin and Liskin finally got going in the final set, and swept their opponents off their feet, to take the set and match.

BASEBALL TEAM IS DOWN AGAIN

No Support For Wright Causes 9 - 4 Loss To V. P. I.

The V. P. I. Gobblers made a clean sweep of the season's baseball series with Carolina by clinching the second and final game 9-4 yesterday at Emerson field. Wright started the game and pitched creditably for eight innings, but the support offered by his teammates was terrible, the Tar Heels making seven errors, three of which resulted in runs.

The Gobblers sprang away to an early lead, scoring three runs in the first. Logan grounded to second. Bibb walked and advanced to second on Potter's pass ball, and scored on Rice's single to left. Rice stole second and advanced to third on Potter's error, and scored on Rule's roller to short. Two walks and a single by Hooper scored another run.

The Tar Heels came back to score two runs in the initial inning. Davis walked and stole second and scored on Whitehead's single to center. Whitehead stole second and scored on Lufty's single to right.

Frosh Tennis Stars In Virginia Tourney

Wilmer Hines and Lenoir Wright, members of the Carolina tennis team, have been in White Sulphur Springs, Virginia, since Monday where they are representing the University in the annual Mason-Dixon tournament.

They will both play in the singles matches and then pair up for the doubles.

FROSH CONTINUE TO BEAT HIGHS

The Tar Babies yesterday afternoon won over Greensboro high school 13-0 to add another game to their credit. The frosh came through without an error, which makes it the second consecutive game without an error played here this week by the freshmen.

Griffith did the mound work for the frosh, striking out nine men in the seven-inning game, while Peacock played a good game behind the bat.

Greensboro used several pitchers but none were able to stop the hitting of the Tar Babies. Daniel, Ferebee and Peacock led the hitting, all getting home runs. Riggs and Dixon also did good work at the bat, both boys getting two hits out of three times at the plate.

Coach Cerney shifted McCastill from third to first, to give him a try at that position, and he showed up so well that he may remain there. He played the post well in the last two games.

Installed As Head Of Student Council

Wednesday of this week Mary Lynn Carlson of Greensboro took office as president of the student government of Sweet Briar College, Virginia. This office is the highest one to which the student body elects, and popularity, scholarship, integrity, executive ability, and general all-round development are requirements.

Eight Intramural Wrestlers Crowned Campus Champs

SPECIAL MATCH FEATURES NIGHT

Bouts Are Held In Tin Can Thursday Night.

The intramural wrestling tournament came to a close Thursday night when the final matches for deciding the campus championship in each weight were held.

Preliminaries held Wednesday night brought to the finals men in all divisions, and most of the matches moved fast and furiously for the few minutes' run. A number of the men reaching the finals had had previous experience. Lawson, Hine, Leary, and Park especially showed skill in the winning of their matches.

The feature of the evening was the match between Whitener and Leiberstein in the 175-pound weight. These men, both being experienced, displayed considerable strength and skill. An extra period was finally necessary before Leiberstein was able to win a time decision.

The 165-pound weight, the only one in which there was not strong competition, was won by Spell by default.

Coach Quinlan has announced that varsity wrestling practice will begin immediately, and he is urging all men who entered the tournament to come out. He states that quite a bit of promising material especially in those men reaching the finals, was observed.

Summary of finals:

115 pounds: Lawson won fall over Chamberlain (3:20).

125 pounds: Hine won fall over Devereaux (3:12).

135 pounds: Allison won fall over Davis (5:29).

145 pounds: Leary won fall over Biggers (1:26).

155 pounds: Park won from Cuthrell by time advantage (5:26).

165 pounds: Spell won by default.

175 pounds: Leiberstein won from Whitener by time advantage (31 seconds).

Unlimited: Hampton won fall over Collins (57 seconds).

In 1911 Dr. Archibald Henderson was on leave of absence from the University to prosecute his studies in Europe.

At the commencement of 1878 seven degrees of bachelor of arts were conferred.

Track Practice Notice

The manager of the track team announces that a photograph will be made of the varsity track squad on Emerson field at 3 o'clock this afternoon. This picture will be used for the Yackety Yack and in connection with the State meet in Greensboro.

CAROLINA MEETS BLUE DEVIL NINE IN BIG FIVE TILT

Prospective Big League Timber To See Action As Rivals Clash Here Today.

The Carolina-Duke game here this afternoon at 3 o'clock, which is to have an important bearing on the 1930 "Big Five" title race, will probably show in action more Big League timber collegians than could be gathered from any other two college clubs in the south.

Carolina will parade Captain Jimmy Maus, catcher; Nap Lufty, third baseman; and Burgess Whitehead, shortstop, all of whom were sufficiently promising last year to be watched closely by the Big League scouts.

Duke will send into the fray Bill Werber, one of the neatest fielding shortstops seen in the south in years; Henry Kistler, powerful 200-pound slugging first baseman; and Lefty Jenkins, powerful little pitcher, on all of whom the Big League scouts have set covetous eyes.

This contest between the old rivals of the diamond promises to pack its full share of interest in other ways than in the number of stars who will play against each other.

Carolina is undefeated in the "Big Five," having played but one game, while Duke, with avowedly the strongest team in the state, has dropped a 6-5 decision to State. Whoever wins

Ways Of Collegians Have Undergone Many Changes

Diary of Late Henry A. London Reveals Many Amusing Incidents of Civil War Days At University.

(By Henry L. Anderson)

What would the University of North Carolina professor of 1930 do were he to walk into his classroom one of these bright April mornings and be greeted by three cows strolling aimlessly about the place?

Perhaps it is best to let the reader provide the answer to that question, but from the diary of the late Henry Armand London one is able to learn what one University professor, Professor Charles Phillips, did when he faced that identical situation one morning back in the Civil War days.

This and similar pranks that the collegians back in the sixties played on members of the faculty are related in interesting detail in a diary which Mr. London kept while a student at Chapel Hill before and during the first two years of the war.

The pages of this diary recall scenes and incidents of college life long ago forgotten by members of the class of '65—those men who are now passed on, and whose places in Old East, Old West and Old South are now filled at the University. New faces have filled their familiar haunts and walks, and trod places made historic by their presence. These men of the class of '65 were among the most prominent in the state in later years.

Judge Clark's Tribute

In the "N. C. Regimental Sketches" a member of this class, Hon. Walter Clark, makes many references to his classmates and their achievement in war and peace. In volume 4, page 519, is found a reference to Mr. London who, with a number of the others in his class felt the urge so strongly that they left after the first session of their senior year to join the ranks of the Confederacy. Judge Clark says of "Major" London: ". . . as gallant a soldier as ever wore the gray. Since the war he has been a leading lawyer and editor, and one of the most prominent men in the state, and now represents Chatham County in the state senate (1901)."

After the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, Mr. London (the courier who carried the last order to cease firing) and several of his comrades returned home by the "ride and tie" method. After the close of hostilities and the Confederate soldiers had returned to their homes, President Swain informed the former members of the class of '65 that he would grant diplomas to all who would return to the University and deliver orations at the approaching commencement. So in addition to William C. Prout, who was the only student of that class to continue in Chapel Hill (because of sickness), three others attended the exercises, which were in striking contrast to those of former days. The returning graduates were Henry A. London, Edward G. Prout and John R. D. Shepard, all of whom received the degree of A. B.

This commencement of '65 was the sad climax of the war period of the University. It is believed that this was the only institution of rank in the south for men or women which had commencement exercises in that terrible year of '65.

In describing this commencement, Henry A. London in a postscript to his war diary says: "The exercises were held on the afternoon of the first Thursday in June and consisted only of the orations by the four seniors, who, enveloped in the black silk gowns then always worn by the graduating orators, felt as important as any of the graduating classes of today. There was no band of musicians to inspire and stimulate their oratory, nor was the audience altogether calculated to arouse the pleasantest or most pacific feelings, for a large part of it consisted of the uninvited guests from the north—soldiers of Sherman's army."

It is worthy of note that nearly 50 years later, the remainder of the class of '65 returned to receive their diplomas at the regular commencement of 1915.

Changing Outlook On Life

In "Sea Gift," by a noted Carolina alumnus, Edwin Fuller, are found many sketches of the days in "Old Chapel Hill" at this time and reference is made to many of the incidents that are contained in Mr. London's diary. This book has often been called the "Freshman Bible" and is probably the origin of the term now applied to the freshman handbook at the University.

Henry A. London entered the University in the sophomore class on July 17, 1862. His first year ended June 4, 1863. He began his junior year July 18, 1863. A daily diary was kept until December of that year, when he seems to have discontinued it, resuming the diary on July 22, 1864, when he resumed his studies as a senior. The tone and his outlook on life shows a distinct change during his senior year, as compared with the first two years—possibly because of the deeper realization of what life meant in those desperate days. He, like many others in the University at this time, had brothers or near relatives already serving in the Confederacy—some had lost other members of the family in the conflict—and they were restrained by their parents and loved ones from rushing off to the war fields until called. At the opening of the struggle many were afraid that the war would end before they became of age, but this turned into apprehension lest the war would not cease before the age limit was reached.

University authorities made application to President Davis, of the Confederacy, to exempt from conscription the members of the junior and senior classes in order to enable them to attain the degree of bachelor of arts. With the acceptance of this application, another was sent in to exempt the lower classes also, but this was refused.

Social Life in Chapel Hill Then

The closing notes of Mr. London's diary show him as not being able to withstand the urge longer, and with his classmates, he left on November 28, 1864. This date in his diary is the last entered and he makes notes on his class, on other of his schoolmates, members of the faculty, a number of the residents of Chapel Hill, and his "girl friends." He says on this date: "Thus ends in all probability my last days at the University of North Carolina, as I leave tomorrow, and may in a few days receive orders to report at Camp Holmes and then 'off to the wars we'll go.' Hurrah for Chapel Hill."

It is interesting to catch a glimpse of the social life at the "Hill" during the war. Mr. London in referring to his diary tells us that the social life of the students during the first years of the war was made pleasant by a number of young ladies who were refugees at Chapel Hill to escape the Union armies advancing on their homes, and the students greatly enjoyed their society. The diary states that several happy marriages resulted from these acquaintances, and that it was not the fault of the students that there were not more. Owing to the small number of students and the great number of ladies the old rule forbidding freshmen to visit the ladies was relaxed, and the aspiring frosh were allowed by the condescending sophs to visit the ladies without fear of punishment.

Fare of Those Days

The author of the diary later refers to the "fare" of war days. "As an illustration of the diet of that day it may be stated that it was deemed worthy of recording in my diary that one day at dinner Miss Nancy Hilliard (of blessed memory) treated her boarders to pies made of wild muscadine grapes sweetened with sorghum. The faculty fared no better than the students and yet President Swain boasted that all grew fat on sorghum and corn bread. The sorghum of that day was the universal substitute for all kinds of sweetening and was of a very inferior quality and of a greenish color. Sorghum stews were substituted for candy boilings, and were the fashionable functions of that day, which we young folks greatly enjoyed. But the favorite feats of the students during the war were the never to be forgotten 'possum suppers. Oh, how the recollections of these appetizing 'possum suppers tantalize one's mouth. It should be stated that it was required of every negro who brought a 'possum for sale to be certain to bring its head, to show that he was not selling us a cat." . . .

Burned Tallow Candles

The question of lights was a very important one to the students who attended the University in the sixties. Electric lights had not been dreamed of even by those most visionary, and even kerosene oil could not be obtained. The ordinary light or "midnight oil" then burned by the students was a flickering tallow candle whose dim light was enough to ruin their eyes. Mr. London says: "But, to our delight, Professor Kimberly invented a process for refining or redistilling turpentine, which was a great improvement on tallow candles and was burned in lamps like kerosene oil is burned now (1895)." In honor of Professor Kimberly this refined turpentine was called "Kimberline," and was readily sold at $3.00 per gallon. This substance was sometimes known as "camphine" also.

Henry A. London

Above is a likeness of the late Henry Armand London of Pittsboro, boy soldier of the Confederacy, who wrote a diary of the University during the first two years of the Civil War. He served as boy courier for General Grimes and carried the last order at Appomattox to cease firing. The photo was taken in 1863.

The Freshman Treat

The "Freshman Treat" was quite an exciting event in college life of the sixties and was given in August of every year, during the watermelon season. A contribution was levied on every freshman and collected by a committee of sophomores who would buy several wagon loads for the treat. At an appointed hour the wagons were driven to the campus gate as fast as the lash could urge the teams, and, as each wagon dashed through the gate into the campus, some of the students eagerly awaiting them would scramble into wagons and throw the melons to the others who were running along by the side of the wagon. Mr. London says that it may well be imagined what a scramble there was and that most of the melons were broken in being pitched out, "for the students of that day were not as proficient in pitching and catching as are their more accomplished successors of this baseball and football generation."

Greeted by Three Cows

"There were some other incidents of college life of a character not to boast of, and yet the true historian must record them. As for instance, one morning when the sophomore class of 1862 went with Professor Charles Phillips from early prayers to his recitation room, on the third floor of Old South, and the door was opened, what a surprising sight met their eyes! For in the room, wistfully walking around, were three cows. Of course no one could imagine how those cows should have happened to get lost and stray up three flights of stairs and shut themselves up in that room. But possibly the mystery might yet be explained, if a certain member of that class (now a distinguished ex-member of congress — 1895) was closely questioned. It may be proper to add that Professor Phillips did not allow our class to miss that recitation, for without a word of reproach he marched us to another room, and the rushing he gave several of us was ludicrous to behold, but most painful to experience.

How Clowns Were Punished

"Another very amusing incident of college life was the 'dressing up' at one of Professor Smith's recitations. It was said to be one of the customs and requirements of every soph class that at one recitation under Professor Smith (whose good nature was often imposed upon) every member of the class should 'dress up'; that is, array himself in some grotesque and comic costume. Accordingly, early in the fall session of 1862 the soph class, one afternoon, followed this quaint custom, and every member, arrayed in some costume that rivaled a circus clown's, solemnly marched into Professor Smith's room, who, with wild-eyed astonishment gazed upon us as if we were escaped lunatics. The amusing incidents of that recitation may be better imagined than described. The result was that seven of the class were summoned before the faculty and sent home to 'rusticate' for awhile.

"Frequently public entertainments were given in the old ballroom (now the Playmaker building) for the purpose of raising funds for some patriotic purpose, as, for instance, the supplying of some hospital with more comforts for the sick and the wounded. These entertainments consisted of tableaux, charades and music, the participants being the students and the ladies of the village."

In the course of Mr. London's diary he refers to various members of the faculty by nicknames such as "Tige" (Professor Smith), "Bunk" (Governor Swain from Buncombe), "Fattie" (Dr. Thomas Phillips), "Hub" (Dr. Hubbard, Episcopal rector), "Fet" (Dr. Fetter). He also used the nicknames of his associates in many cases, while in others he merely used the initial. Names of numerous belles of Chapel Hill and other parts of North Carolina appear in his entries, and it is interesting to note that the social life of the "Hill" today is no more active than in '65, in spite of the fact that the University now numbers more than 300 co-eds among its students.

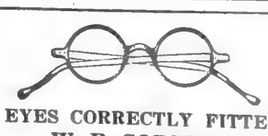
In the days of '62 the natives and townspeople of Chapel Hill seemed to be better known by the students than they are today, but it must be remembered that North Carolina society used to be much more clannish and closely bonded than it seems to be today with its more cosmopolitan population.

As Prices Were Then

A number of incidental notations in "Major" London's diary show quite a contrast to the cost of things at the University now. The war times and the losing fight of the Confederacy had boosted prices sky high, especially with the use of Confederate paper money. Among the incidental notations were: "Watermelon treat $3; washing per month $1; 'possum supper $1.50; postoffice box 25 cents; total amount spent first session $205.55; expense second session $238.75; expense third session $358.05; math every morning (except Monday) at 7 o'clock; first time ever shaved was August 6, 1864 (two years after entering college). Born March 1, 1846. Left University November 28, 1864, to enlist in army at 18 years of age."

H. E. Miller Speaks Before Cain Society

H. E. Miller, chief engineer of the State Board of Health, addressed the William Cain Society of Civil Engineers Thursday night.



Mr. Miller spoke upon filter plants and sewage disposal plants and their relation to civil engineering. He pointed out that in 1918 there were only two adequate water filter plants throughout the state; that now there are seventy-four or seventy-five. He also told of sewage disposal plants and textile waste.

Saturday will be the outstanding challenger to contest the Wolfpack for the title.

Duke will probable pitch Lefty Jenkins, a particular nemesis to the Tar Heels, and Carolina will probably retaliate by using a straight line of nine right-handed batters and Pitcher Paul Edwards, who has plenty of steam and stuff.

MELODRAMA OF EIGHTIES TO BE PRODUCED HERE

Company Of Faculty And University Persons To Produce Play May 2 and 3.

The "Imperial Stock Company," a dramatic organization made up of faculty members, will soon present "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," which will be produced for the poor relief in Orange County. The group has been working for six weeks on this play in their "studio" which is an old livery stable in Carrboro. The play will be presented in the Playmakers Theatre next Friday and Saturday May 2 and 3, at 8 o'clock in the evening. "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" is a play dramatized from the novel of the same name written by Bertha M. Clay.

The production of this play in Chapel Hill is similar to the work which Christopher Morley has been doing in Hoboken, N. J., where he has been presenting the "Black Crook," and other plays, and is similar to what is being done in London. It is a very sophisticated melodrama of the English nobility of the '90's. When the play was presented at that time, it was taken seriously and was very popular. In all, it proves very interesting work to the producers and will be very enjoyable to those who see it.

The story is that of a son of a high noble family who falls in love with a poor girl of lower society, and marries her. He tries to bring her into his home, Ryvvers Well, which is a beautiful mansion, but the Dowager Lady Ryvvers practically runs her out of the house. It is a struggle of a proud lady of high society with a poor girl of lower caste. The girl goes out into the world and meets hunger, disease, a snow-storm, the bread line, and other accompaniments of poverty. All through the play this young wife is pursued by the villian, Oscar Carstone, which is played by Mr. Howard Mumford Jones. This villian's proferred help is but ruin in disguise. The birth of a little baby under soul-moving circumstances finally helps to break the proud spirit of the Dowager Lady Ryvvers.

There will be music and circus novelties between the acts which will all help in the sentimentality. A Barbers' Quartet will sing, there will be a women's duet which will sing "The Bicycle Built for Two," and some selections will be given on mouth organs. It will all picture in a most amusing and pleasant manner the English and American stage of the '80's and is bound to be interesting to all.

The personnel of the Imperial Stock Company, the faculty group which is presenting the play is as follows: Lessees for the company, Paul Green and Wilbur Daniel Steele; Director of the play, Howard Mumford Jones; Chairman of the Finance Committee: Oscar J. Coffin; In charge of the scenery which is being painted and arranged in the "studio" in Carrboro, R. C. Sellers, assisted by Margaret Steele and Elizabeth Lay Green; Director of music and novelties, Adeline Denham McCall; Collector of properties, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Adams; In charge of costumes, Mrs. Prouty and

Tar Heel Meeting

The members of the editorial and reportorial staffs of the Daily Tar Heel will meet for a thirty minute meeting tonight in the basement of Alumni building.

Six new men will be taken on, and important announcements concerning the awarding of charms and course credits will be made. All persons who do not attend will be dropped.

MAGAZINE HEAD WILL INAUGURATE STAFF MEETINGS

New Editor To Adopt Policy Of The Tar Heel Of Weekly Meetings.

Following the example set by the Daily Tar Heel staff this collegiate year, the new Carolina Magazine staff will hold regular meetings. The first of these will occur Sunday night, May 18. The editor states that the staff will meet at 7:30 each Sunday night after the issuance of the magazine in the morning. The purpose of these meetings on alternate Sunday nights after the appearance of each issue is to unify the staff and to discuss the errors in each issue with a view to improving succeeding issues.

The new editor is particularly desirous of having several short stories submitted. No definite staff will be formulated until the second issue. The staff positions will be awarded on the bisis of material submitted for the two issues that the new editor will publish this spring. The new editorial control wishes to emphasize the fact that the Carolina Magazine is open to the entire campus for contributions, believing that this will raise the quality of the material, rather than lower it.

All contributions should be addressed to J. C. Williams, Box 710.

Ends Ten Years' Service

President Chase tomorrow will have been president of the University of North Carolina for ten years. He was inaugurated as head of the University here on April 28, 1920.

Tomorrow Chase Will Have Been President Here Decade

Monday Is Tenth Anniversary of Chase's Inauguration as President On April 28, 1920; Lowell of Harvard, Hibben of Princeton, and Dr. Mann of War Department Among Distinguished Witnesses.

(By Charles G. Rose, Jr.)

On April 28, 1920, one of the most progressive decades in the history of the University had its beginning. It was on that day in Memorial hall that Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase was inaugurated President of the University of North Carolina before approximately 2000 people.

People had journeyed from all over the state; representatives were present from practically every university and college in the south; all had gathered in Memorial hall to witness the inauguration of the ninth president of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Chase repeated his oath of office after Chief Justice Walter Clark, after which Governor Thomas W. Bickett presented the new president with the seal and charter of the University.

On the platform with President Chase were President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, President John G. Hibben of Princeton and Dr. Charles R. Mann of the war department, all of whom pledged to the new president their support.

Following the oath of office, numerous other speeches were made, pledging to President Chase support in his new office. Dr. Ivey F. Lewis, speaking for President Alderman of the University of Virginia, pledged the good wishes of the state universities of the country.

President W. L. Poteat of Wake Forest, speaking for the colleges in the state, told the new president that "we pledge to you the adventure and romance of finding the way of right in a foggy time and calling after you the strength and hope of young North Carolina."

Others who pledged their support to the University's new head official were W. N. Everette of Rockingham, who spoke as a representative of the 10,000 alumni, and Dr. Archibald Henderson, for the faculty, who pledged its support to their former colleague.

Dr. Chase, who had lived in Chapel Hill since 1910, was, prior to his election, dean of the college of liberal arts and later chairman of the faculty. Born in Massachusetts in 1883, he was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1904 with the degree of A. B., and four years later from the same college he received his M. A. degree. In 1910 he was granted the Ph. D. degree at Clark University, where he was during his last year director of a clinic for subnormal children.

Coming to the presidency just at the time when the University had begun its expansion, President Chase took up the work where the beloved E. K. Graham had left off. Since that time much advancement can be noted in every branch of the University.

In the development of the physical plant of the University, eight new dormitories for men and one for women have been erected. Saunders, Murphey, Manning, Venable and Bingham halls have all been built, besides the complete renovation of practically every old building on the campus which has put them in the class of their modern sister buildings. Then the beautiful University library, which was dedicated last October, crowned the material development of the past decade.

The University has also made much advancement in the way of athletic equipment. The Kenan Memorial Stadium has

FACULTY PLANS TO MAKE FLUNKS START STUDYING

New Measure Before Undergraduate Faculty Provides For Still Higher Scholarship.

At a meeting of the undergraduate faculty Friday a motion was introduced stating that "a student who has attended college, here or elsewhere, for as much as one academic year, must, in order to continue in the University any given quarter, have passed at least one course the preceding quarter and four courses in the two preceding quarters of his residence. (Courses passed in summer school, in interpreting this restriction, are to be excluded.)" This resolution was presented as a requirement to be added to the present regulations governing academic eligibility for sophomores, juniors and seniors. Dr. W. D. Toy, executive-secretary of the faculty, stated that this motion was made as a recommendation from the committee of deans but that it had not been adopted by the committee or voted upon by the undergraduate faculty. "The faculty is in favor of a movement of this nature tending toward higher requirements," Dean Addison Hibbard stated before the meeting. The resolution has been referred to the committee from which it originated.

Dr. Gay made the statement that Dean W. N. Walker of the school of education in his detailed report on entrance requirements of schools over the entire country emphasized the fact that the entrance requirements here belong in the class of those of universities and colleges having strict entrance requirements and also that the present requirements of the University are very much like those of the better schools of the United States. No need was cited at the meeting for any change in the present requirements here, since they compare very favorably with those of Harvard, Yale and other institutions of higher learning.

"It is a tendency of the undergraduate faculty," Dr. Toy impressed upon the Tar Heel reporter, "to make requirements of good scholarship somewhat more rigid without being extravagant. The comprehensive examination, above all other examinations on courses and which is a general quiz that does not ask mere facts, but which is intended to show that a student is able to correlate his studies in his major, is an example of this tendency." Seniors in the college of liberal arts will take their comprehensive examinations Wednesday.

The regulation requiring students to make an average of "C" on at least half of their courses has already been passed and will go into effect at the beginning of school next fall.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Law is merely one device for social control, and as such it is useful only when it works.—Dean Young B. Smith, of Columbia Law School.

University Publications

There has always been a fair amount of interest in publications at Carolina. The newspaper rarely suffers from a dearth of copy-writers, due perhaps to the large number of those who have journalistic aspirations. It is likewise true that the magazine, comic, and year-book all have an abundance of material turned in to them. The fact is that all of our publications are well supported.

But the trouble is that they are not supported well enough by those who are interested in writing. Many students come here who have intentions of entering the field of journalism after college, yet many never associate themselves with the paper. There are also many who are interested in creative writing who never contribute to the magazine. Such a situation creates an obvious problem, the problem of how these publications, the property of the student body, may better serve the ends of that body as a group of individuals.

Viewing the publications from one angle, we should regrad them as laboratories. For him who contemplates journalism as a profession there is no better workshop for him now than the campus daily. Again, there is no better opportunity for creative writing than that which the magazines offers. The annual and the comic are also splendid fields for experimental work.

The idea that these journals are workshops does not imply that only those interested professionally should associate themselves with them. Campus publications are open to all. Contributions of those interested in writing as a mere pastime or hobby are as welcome as those of students who have professional ambitions.

We believe that our publications may better serve the student body when they are responded to whole-heartedly by those who can write and by those who would gain experience in writing. —B. M.

A Suggestion For The Senior Gift

Every year the senior class of the University of North Carolina leaves to its alma mater some token of appreciation and remembrance, some gift to perpetuate the name of the class and to beautify the campus. There can be no doubt that this is a worthy custom and one which should be followed henceforth. In recent years, however, the senior classes have had considerable difficulty in thinking of a suitable gift to leave on the Carolina campus. At present our campus has practically every aid of beauty and every kind of commemorating structure that are generally found on college campuses. For a number of years, therefore, the graduating students have had to literally rack their brains for some suitable gift.

To solve this problem and to benefit Carolina in some large, worthwhile way at the same time, we suggest that the present senior class begin a fund for the completion of Graham Memorial. Not only would this plan alleviate the present very difficult task of selecting a suitable gift each year, but it would result in the completion of Graham Memorial. We can think of no nobler gift for the present senior class than the founding of such a fund. In the light of failure to secure adequate funds from external sources for the completion of the memorial, it appears that the motivating power must come from the students themselves. Not only would the class of 1930 do the University and the state a great service in founding a fund for the ultimate completion of Graham Memorial, but the class would bring upon its members a distinct honor in so doing.

That mass of brick and mortar which stands in closed silence on the western half of the campus, and which we choose to call the Graham Memorial structure, does not commemorate because of its incompleteness. It is rather a blemish and a black spot upon the life and deeds of a man who was one of the most beloved of all college presidents —Edward Kidder Graham. Of him it was said that he never left a task half-finished. Yet to him has been erected a half-finished memorial—the very token of a task left unfinished, a race half-run. Such a state of affairs reflects the height of injustice to Carolina's noble president of a generation ago.

We call upon the class of 1930 to found the fund which will ultimately result in the completion of Graham Memorial.

—J. C. W.

Engineers Discover Peculiar Material

A new material with remarkable properties, which acts either as an insulator or as a conductor, has recently been developed by engineers of the Westinghouse Electric Company. At a certain amount of voltage the material will not pass any current, but when the voltage is increased, the material readily becomes a conductor, allowing current to flow freely. These properties make this material particularly suited for use in lightning arresters.

It is thought that the perfection of this material, which is porous, opens a new era in the protection of electrical circuits against lightning.

Campus Life

Tomorrow Chase Will Have Been President Here For One Decade

been built during this period, besides the new athletic fields, tennis courts, and the Tin Can which have all been constructed in the past ten years.

Aside from the development of the University itself, expansion can be noted in the community of Chapel Hill. Churches, the Carolina Inn, faculty and townspeople's homes, fraternity houses, and the paved road and sidewalks have all been added during this Chase decade, as it has been called.

The maintenance of the University from the state has also been considerably increased. In 1919-20 the institution was receiving $217,000, whereas today its appropriation is $880,000.

From 1920 to 1930 the student enrollment has increased from 800 to 2700, and the faculty has grown from 75 to 225. The addition of the school of public welfare and the school of commerce and the reorganization of the law and engineering schools have all taken place since 1920.

Perhaps the most significant avancement of this Chase decade has been the national publicity that this institution has received. In 1920 the University was only an average state institution, but today it is spoken of by practically all of the national educators as an outstanding university. Membership in the Association of American Universities helps to show how this university is rated by other universities in the country.

It could not be said that President Chase has brought on all of this development, but it can be said that by his adapting himself to his duties, the University has been greatly helped.

President Chase has, however, brought to the University much publicity in the higher realms of education. Last year he served as president of the National Association of State Universities, and was from 1922 to 1929 secretary-treasurer for that body.

Other evidences of what the academic world thinks of him can be seen by his membership on the General Education Board, a Rockefeller foundation, and the directorship of the Julius Rosenwald Fund. And still further testimony is given by the fact that prior to his call to the University of Illinois, he had been offered the presidency of the University of Oregon, the University of Cincinnati, the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, and the Social Science Research Council of New York. It is also known that he was practically offered the presidency of the University of Michigan and that of Ohio State University.

The University of Illinois, to which Dr. Chase goes, has a student enrollment of 13,000 and a faculty of 1,200. It is larger than the University of North Carolina, N. C. State and N. C. C. W. combined, and last year it used for its maintenance expenses $7,500,000.

There are 124 fraternity and dormitory houses at the university, not to mention the $2,000,000 stadium which has a seating capacity of 70,000 people.

USE OF TECHNICOLOR ENLIVENS MOVIE FILM

The woman was feeling blue.
The man saw red.
He had a yellow streak.
He had a dark brown taste in his mouth.

Common usage has made the above terms so eloquently expressive that every child knows their meaning. Psychologists long have recognized the unusual affinity between color and the emotional state. Recently interior decorators, designers, architects, painters, manufacturers of automobiles, cereals, typewriters, cameras and other utilitarian necessities of our modern civilization have taken cognizance of the importance of color and have been employing the manifold hues of the rainbow to market their products.

The all-talking motion pictures, too, have turned definitely to color. Next year, according to Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president of Technicolor, Inc., there will be no fewer than a hundred featured movies filmed either entirely or partly in technicolor.

No Longer Novelty

But now, according to none other than Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production of the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, color has graduated from the novelty period in the movies and will be employed henceforth not only to impart added beauty but also to cause emotional and mental reactions in keeping with the spirit of the plot.

Mr. Lasky put his belief into practice in filming "The Vagabond King," a lavishly produced musical romance, starring Dennis King. This production, done completely in technicolor, is coming to the Carolina theatre Wednesday. From the opening scene to the final fadeout, color is used with the purpose of provoking in the audience a sympathetic mood in keeping with the action.

Weeks before "The Vagabond King" went into production Mrs. Natalie Kalmus, color expert of the Technicolor corporation, conferred for days with Travis Banton, the studio fashion designer, Hans Dreier, art director assigned to that film and Ludwig Berger, who has been selected as director, with the result that not a setting or piece of wardrobe was planned that did not enhance the dramatic mood.

Farley Hits Two Homers As Devils Score 14-5 Win

CAROLINA USES THREE PITCHERS

Edwards, Fleming, and Longest Fail To Halt Slugging Of Duke Batsmen.

WERBER STEALS HOME

Pounding out 14 hits off three pitchers, a hard-hitting crew of Blue Devils kept a steady stream of men crossing the plate in nearly every inning and came out of the ninth with a 14-5 lead over the Carolina nine.

Farley, slugging third baseman, found Edwards' and Longest's delivery to his liking and lifted two long flies over the center fielders' heads for easy home runs. The first round trip sock brought Rochelle and Murray in ahead of him to bring the first inning score up to five, while his other circuit clout came in the seventh and scored Rochelle again.

Every man on the Duke lineup except Dean and Jenkins was able to get to first on a base knock, with Kistler hitting three times out of five trips to the plate to lead the attack.

Werber, Blue Devil shortstop, crossed the plate four times. After getting a base on balls in the first, Murray's single over second scored him. In the fifth he took first when Lufty juggled a hard grounder through third, stole second and came home on Kistler's drive to right field. In the seventh Werber singled to left, took second on Fleming's wild pitch and scored on Kistler's single to left. In the eighth he scored his last one when he reached first on a fielder's choice, advanced to third on Kistler's third single and stole home, sliding under Potter and getting the decision in an extremely close judgment.

Jimmie Maus poled out a double and two singles out of four trips to the plate to lead the Tar Heel batsmen. No other Carolina man was able to solve Jenkins' delivery for more than one trip to first.

The Tar Heel defense was rather ragged, with a total of five errors being chalked against the team fielding percentage. Captain Jimmie Maus, versatile handler of the backstop, outfield and first-sack positions, played a brilliant game. Besides leading in hitting, Maus handled 12 chances at first without letting a one get by him.

6,000 Registered In Westinghouse Course

Approximately 6,000 students have been enrolled and are now taking the correspondence course in general illumination being conducted by the Westinghouse Lighting Institute, Grand Central Palace, New York City, which has been made available, without cost, to those interested in lighting.

Representing what is probably the largest attempt ever made for mass education in one subject by an industrial concern, the course, covering every phase of illuminating engineering, has been established to qualify employees of public utilities, manufacturers and merchants in the fundamentals of good lighting practice and the modern developments of the art.

According to the classification of students, employees of public utilities comprise nearly 75 per cent of the entire enrollment, which indicates that they realize the increasing importance of illuminating engineering. Geographically, every state in the Union is represented.

Popularity Of Lacrosse Increases

OLDEST AMERICAN GAME WAS STARTED BY INDIANS

As Colleges And Clubs Take Up Sport

As in all other athletic fields, there is a great demand for competent coaches interested in spreading the oldest and, perhaps, one of the fastest American games—lacrosse. Though originally an American game, having been played by the early Indian tribes, lacrosse has not begun to come into its own in this country until recently. Gradually, colleges in the east and south have been adopting the game as a spring sport, with the result that a large field has been opened for young men interested in spreading the game in those parts of the country where it has not yet succeeded in gaining attention.

The chief centers wherein lacrosse flourishes at present are New York and Maryland, the sport being proportionately more popular in the latter state. In both states the game is played by colleges, high schools, prep schools, as well as by many independent clubs. Already, several important leagues have been organized by these groups.

The colleges in the intercollegiate league are Brown, Colgate, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Hobart, Hopkins, Lehigh, Maryland, Navy, New York University, Penn, Penn State, Rutgers, Stevens, St. Stephens, Swarthmore, Syracuse, Union, Yale, Princeton, St. John's and Western Maryland.

Other colleges which have adopted the sport are Army, Baltimore University, Boston University, Carnegie, Delaware, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Duke, Lafayette, Massachusetts Tech, Randolph-Macon, Springfield, St. Lawrence, Virginia, Washington College, Williams, and William and Mary.

The leading teams in this sport last year were Navy, Union and St. John's, none having lost a game, while the latter school defeated an English team representing Oxford-Cambridge.

Curiously enough, while Maryland is conceded to be the stronghold of lacrosse in the United States, the Indians in that state, according to historic belief, did not play the game. The Algonquins, Iriquois, Choctaws and Onandagos were among the best of the Indian players, while the game was also popular with the Creeks in Alabama and the Cherokees in North Carolina. Though the Indians knew the game as Boggathway, the name was later changed, and named, perhaps, after some mission.

In Canada and most foreign countries lacrosse is exceedingly popular, and it is safe to predict that with the American craving for speed and excitement in sports, the game will soon find an interested public in this country.

VARSITY GOLFERS SCORE EASY WIN OVER DAVIDSON

Ben Goodes Turns In Individual Low Score With 150.

The Carolina golf team defeated the Davidson Wildcats in a match Friday by the score of 15 to 3. The Tar Heels piled up the greater part of their lead in the morning round consisting of single matches.

In the first leg of the tourney Charlie Chatham won two points from and lost one to Jack Pepper of Davidson. Luther Steward, Meade Willis and Benny Goodes annexed the maximum three points in their matches with R. D. Croom, Lewis Hart and N. C. Hodgin.

In the afternoon round, Chatham and Willis of Carolina defeated Pepper and Hart of Davidson with the best ball score of 71 to 74. Steward and Goodes of Carolina defeated Croom and Hodgin of Davidson, the winners ringing up the best ball score of 77. These doubles matches were best ball twosomes utilizing the Nassau scoring system.

Benny Goodes was the individual star of the day, chalking up a score of 150, 72 for the first 18 and 78 for the second. Jack Pepper of Davidson was just out of reach, turning up a mark of 151 with a 75 and a 76. Charlie Chatham rang up the next best, his score totaling 152, or a 74 and a 78.

Jack Pepper of Davidson created some excitement in the morning round. Coming down the home stretch like a house afire, he took a birdie two on the 16th, a par four on the 17th, and, coming in strong at the finish, took an eagle three on the long par five 18th.

With this match under their belt, the Tar Heel golfers show promise of coming through the state tournament with first honors.

The University enrollment in 1907 was 758.

BLUE AND WHITE TRACK MEN WANT REVENGE ON W. & L.

Forthcoming Meet Tomorrow Is To Be One of Most Important Of Season.

The Carolina track team will seek to revenge their defeat at the hands of Washington and Lee, suffered in the Southern Conference Indoor meet last winter, when they meet the Generals on Emerson field at 3:30 tomorrow. The first field events will begin at 3:30, and the track events, which will be run off on a ten minute schedule, will begin with the 100 yard dash at 4:00.

The Generals are one of the strongest teams that the Tar Heels will meet this year, and should give Coach Fetzer's men plenty of trouble in keeping intact their record of no defeats in dual meets for the past eight years. The Tar Heels will be handicapped by the absence of their captain, Dave Nims, star quarter miler and 220 man, who is in the Infirmary with a badly infected foot.

There should be some very closely contested events in this meet. Sandifer, W and L. star who has been high scorer in every meet in which he has competed this year, will compete in the sprints, high jump and broad jump, and is expected to give Charley Farmer quite a race. It is certain that the lanky Tar Heel speedster will have to step fast if he expects to keep up his "ten point habit of winning both the 100 and 220 in all dual meets. In the 440, Leigh Williams, star center on the basket ball team, and Conference champion last year will receive strong opposition from Weil and Gay, who won the event in the Penn State and V. P. I. meets respectively last week end. Other outstanding performers in the W. and L. aggregation are, Spears in the high hurdles, Finlenstein in the lows, Stevens in the shot, Bailey in the discus, and Sheppard and Dickey in middle distance runs.

Carolina entries are as follows:

100 yard dash—Farmer, Gay and Erickson.

220 yard dash—Farmer, Slusser, and Goodwin.

440 yard dash—Weil, Gay, and Garrett.

880 yard run—Barkley, Hamer, Horney, and Garrett.

Mile run—Barkley, Lowery, and Phoenix.

Two mile run—Baucom, Lowery, and Farris.

120 yard high hurdles—Perry, Reid, and Stafford.

220 yard low hurdles—Perry, Slusser, and Stafford.

Shot Put—Adkins, Brown, and Koenig.

Discus—Brown, Dameron, and Adkins.

Javelin—Brown, Parsons, and Remsen.

Pole Vault—Arnold, Neiman, Ruble, and Dry.

High Jump—Bagby, Johnson, Parsons, and Owens.

Broad Jump—Neiman, Johnson, and Stafford.

DAVIDSON PLAYS HERE TOMORROW

Golfers Enter Southern Tourney At Birmingham; Trackmen Take On Generals Tomorrow; State Meet Friday and Saturday.

University varsity teams face a total of six events during the coming week, headed by the southern golf tourney, state track meet, and dual track meet with Washington and Lee here tomorrow.

Four of the events will be played at home on attractive bills carded for Monday and Saturday afternoons.

Monday there will be the Carolina-Washington and Lee track meet. Saturday there will be the Carolina-Wake Forest tennis match.

The other events will be the state track meet at Greensboro during the week-end, in which the Tar Heels will defend a state title held eight straight years, a golf match with Vanderbilt at Nashville Monday, and the southern golf tourney at Birmingham the last three days of the week for the state championship Tar Heel golfers.

Especial interest is centering on the home card scheduled for Chapel Hill Monday.

The Washington and Lee trackmen, perhaps Carolina's strongest rivals for southern honors this year, nosed the Tar Heels out of a southern indoor title by two points. Superior strength in the hurdles gave the Generals that victory. The Tar Heel hurdlers have since shown great development, and Monday's meet, pitting against one another such rival stars as Farmer and Sandifer and Perry and Speer, is expected to prove a classic.

The freshman track team faces the Duke frosh at Durham Tuesday afternoon in the first of several freshman events tentatively carded, and to be announced through the week.

The number of sutdents enrolled in the University in 1879 was 290.

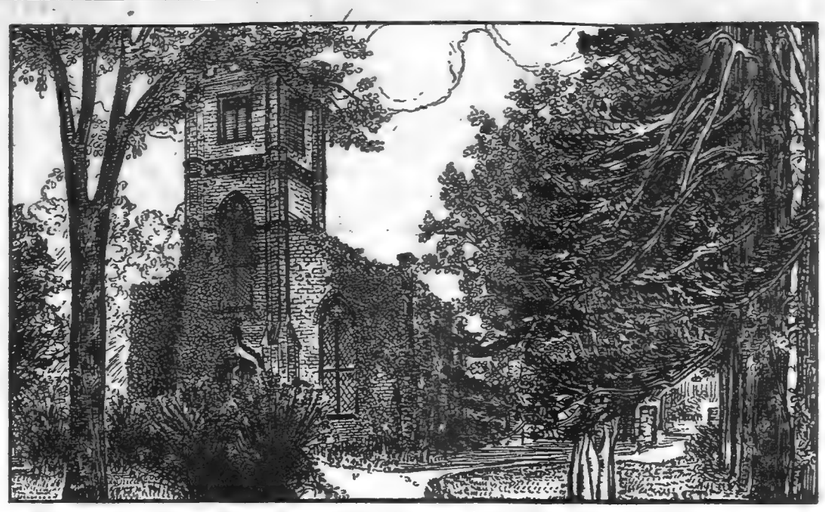
INAUGURATION OF STUDENT OFFICERS

"Red" Greene, who has unofficially taken office as president of the student body, will officially assume the duties of this position at chapel exercises Monday in Gerrard hall.



President Greene will make a short speech on his administration and on the history of the student government at the University. The members of the new student council will be introduced to the audience, and the student government will be officially handed over to the incoming regime.

While the chapel is compulsory for freshmen, all members of the student body have been urged by Dean Francis F. Bradshaw to attend the exercises.

It is customary for the incoming student body president to make a short address, and precedence will be carried on this year.

On February 12, 1879, the medical school was established by the executive committee.

Chapel Hill's Old English Architecture

Mary deB. Graves, Chapel Hill artist, has pictured the Old English beauty of the Old Episcopal church here in the village, in a pen and ink sketch.

In the days when the horse and buggy was the fastest means of travel employed by the students and modern street lights were unheard of, the men of the University used to use the steps and walks around the Old Episcopal church for their "courtin'." The building is now incorporated into a handsome new structure which, while new, has few of the traditions the old church had.

Rozzelles Celebrate Wedding Anniversary

Dr. C. Excell Rozzelle, pastor of the University Methodist church, and Mrs. Rozzelle celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary with a pretty reception at their home on East Franklin street Friday evening.

The hosts were recipients of many tokens that expressed the affection and esteem in which the couple are held. It was noticeable, however, that most of the presents were of silver and aluminum instead of the tin which is supposed to be symbolic of tenth anniversaries.

More than 200 guests called during the evening.

Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Wagstaff received the guests at the front door, and Dr. and Mrs. John W. Lasley introduced them to the receiving line, which was composed of Dr. and Mrs. Rozzelle, Mrs. Ella Rozzelle, Rev. and Mrs. Eugene Olive, Rev. and Mrs. Alfred S. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hunt of Charlotte and Frank Smith of Charlotte.

Receiving at the study door were Mr. and Mrs. T. S. McCorkle. Presiding at the register were Miss Margaret Eubanks and Ralph Shumaker. Receiving at the dining room door were Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Totten. Serving ice-cream were Mrs. H. M. Stacy and Mrs. L. R. Wilson. Receiving in the dining room were Mrs. John S. Bennett, Mrs. E. E. Peacock, Mrs. Irene Lee, Mrs. T. H. Raney, Mrs. John Hocutt and Mrs. M. W. Durham.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Munch received at the door of the living room. Mrs. Bruce Strowd presided at the punch bowl. Serving punch were Mrs. W. B. Neal, Mrs. F. P. Brooks, Mrs. Robert Clark and Miss Dorris Humphreys.

Saying good-bye to the guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Lear.

The home was beautifully decorated with dogwood, tulips, narcissi and roses. A color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in the dining room.

Rev. C. E. Rozzelle Will Preach In Charlotte

Rev. C. Excell Rozzelle will occupy the pulpit at Dilworth Methodist church in Charlotte tonight in the absence of the pastor, Rev. G. Ray Jordan, who is in Atlanta, Ga., assisting Dr. R. Z. Tyler, who is conducting a special series of evangelistic meetings at Grace Methodist church there.

Dr. Collier Cobb of the department of geology, who left for Charlottesville, Va., Tuesday morning, will be back at his desk in the geology department Monday morning. Mr. Prouty did not make the trip.

H. H. HOBGOOD IS COLLEGE ORATOR IN STATE MEET

Will Compete For State Honors At Davidson May 2

North Carolina will be represented in the national Intercollegiate oratorical contest by H. H. Hobgood of the sophomore class. The first elimination in the contest will be made May 2, at Davidson College, where the representative for this section will be chosen. If the Carolina representative wins in this regional contest, he will go to Asheville, for the elimination in the southern zone.

Colleges in 46 of the 48 states have entered competition. The contest was inaugurated and is conducted by the Better American Federation of California. It is the largest competitive forensic event in the history of the United States. More than one hundred schools are entered in the 1930 contest which were not entered in the 1929 contest.

The subject of the oration which Hobgood will deliver will be on the United States Constitution. The same subject will be used by all contestants, though each will take a different phase of the subject. Hobgood has represented the University in intercollegiate debates and also in the state oratorical contest last quarter. In high school he was awarded second place in the entire South in a similar contest.

NEW GOVERNMENT IS INDUCTED INTO OFFICE IN CHAPEL

Farris Officially Turns Over Reins To Greene In Impressive Ceremony.

At the usual weekly freshman chapel meeting yesterday morning, the new student council members were formally installed by Ray Farris, retiring president of the student body.

Before introducing the incoming council members, President Farris expressed appreciation to the student body for the support which he has received during his term of office.

Speaking on the honor system of the University, the former president stated that the system of this university stood head and shoulders above that of any other institution in the country. He was of the opinion that although much advancement had been made in the past, that there is still room for more individual cooperation on the part of the students.

"In order for this honor system to succeed," declared President Farris, "It is necessary that each student take it upon himself to report every man that is seen 'cribbing' or cheating on exams or 'quizzes.'"

The retiring president impressed upon his audience the wonderful experience that he had gotten from his term as president, and offered his entire support to the new regime which was about to take its place.

President Farris then formally turned over his duties to his successor, "Red" Greene, who introduced to the group the new councilmen who are to work during the year 1930-31. Those on the new council are: Harper Barnes of the rising sophomore class, Bill Uzzell of the rising Junior class, Mayne Albright of the rising senior class, Robert Graham of the old council, Scott Benton of the law school, Lexie Barefoot of the pharmacy school, and John Quickel of the medical school, with President "Red" Greene as chairman of the group.

The new president began his inaugural address by giving a history of the council. He explained that in 1795 a system of monitors was used in which members of the faculty would go around to the rooms of the student regularly to see if all was going well. This system was soon abolished and for some time government was in the hands of the literary societies. All members of the student body were required to join either of the two societies, and if a student was expelled from one of the societies, it meant that he was expelled from school. This method was done away with in 1904 when a revolt was made against it.

Since this time it has been customary for the presidents of each of the classes to compose the council which would have the same power that had formerly been invested in the literary societies.

Up until 1921 the president of the senior class acted as chairman of the council, but in that year a student body president was elected for the first time and he was made head of the council.

ENGINEERS' FRAT INITIATES SEVEN

W. S. Rodman Is Speaker At Banquet Following Ceremonies In Phillips Hall Saturday.

The initiation of Tau Beta Pi, national engineering scholastic fraternity, took place Saturday night in the library of the engineering school in Phillips hall. Following this, the annual banquet was held in the Carolina Inn.

Seven men were initiated into the Beta chapter of North Carolina of this organization. These men were: W. D. Merritt, John B. Pittana, C. P. Hayes, George Thompson, and G. J. Quinn, all connected at present with the University, and N. P. Hayes and R. M. Casper, graduates of the engineering school in 1925.

Two men, Aubrey Parsley and Norman L. Bryan, who were tapped last week, were not initiated Saturday night because they were away on cooperative work.

W. S. Rodman, vice-president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineering and professor at the University of Virginia, was the principal speaker at the annual banquet of Tau Beta Pi at the Carolina Inn. His address was upon the obligations of an engineer to society and his growing importance in business.

NEGRO JANITORS ENDORSE PARKER

University Dormitory Caretakers Wire Senator Overman Supporting Proposed Judicial Appointment.

The Negro Janitors Association of the University of North Carolina, which is made up of the 46 colored servants who wait on the students in dormitories, held a meeting last night and wired Senator Lee S. Overman a resolution expressing the view that Judge John J. Parker "will be fair according to law to all classes and races" and the "hope that he will be confirmed as judge of the supreme court."

Many of the darkies, all of whom signed the resolution, knew Judge Parker when he was a student here and several of them waited on him. The resolution was signed by Kennon Cheek, president of the janitors' association.

"We know Judge Parker as our friend," the resolution concluded. "We served him as a student. We have followed his career as a citizen and as a judge. Some of us voted for him for governor. We want to express our confidence in him now."

Editor Announces Handbook Staff

The staff of the next Carolina Handbook was announced yesterday by Jack Dungan, editor. One position on the staff, that of town editor, has not as yet been filled. Any one desiring to try out for this position should see the editor at once. The remainder of the staff is as follows: J. C. Harris, business manager; Ed French, associate editor; Howard M. Lee, assistant editor; E. C. Daniel, Jr., organization editor; Henry Anderson, athletic editor; and Charles G. Rose, Y. M. C. A. editor.

A detailed description of the University and of the many organizations on the campus is included in the book.

This year the staff is planning to increase the size of the Handbook by at least ten pages, and at the same time keep up the high quality of the publication.

The editor asks that any organization which failed to get recognition in last year's Handbook get in touch with him or members of the staff so as to be sure to be included in this coming issue.

ASTRONOMY CLASS WATCHES ECLIPSE

Crowd Looks On While Pictures Are Made From Roof Of Phillips.

From all parts of the campus the partial eclipse of the sun was watched yesterday afternoon. The center of observation was, however, the roof of Phillips hall where Dr. K. H. Fussler and his astronomy class were taking photographs.

Aided by his astronomy class and student-assistants of the physics department, H. H. zurBurg and W. D. Whitaker, Dr. Fussler set up a telescope and a camera on the roof of the building. During the eclipse a group of about fifty persons assembled there to watch the sun and the taking of photographs. Eight or ten pictures were taken at intervals of about three minutes.

The eclipse was quite visible to the naked eye here. About one-fourth of the sun's surface was covered during the height of the eclipse at 3:19 o'clock. It began at 2:09 p. m. and ended at 4:24. Up to the highest point of the eclipse, the weather conditions were fine, but afterward clouds passed across the sun.

Since the eclipse was only partial here, one of the most interesting features was the enormous sun spot that was visible through the telescope. It was the largest sun spot that has been noticed here in a long time. Although it was hardly discernible to the naked eye, it could be noticed very easily on the lower part of the sun through the telescope.

GRAHAM SPEAKS BEFORE N. C. CLUB

Says North Carolina Has Been Definitely Industrialized.

"Social Legislation as a Method of Social Adjustment" was the topic of Frank Graham's address to the North Carolina Club last night in Bingham hall.

Mr. Graham, who has conducted an accurate survey of social and economic conditions in this state, offered statistics which prove that North Carolina has undoubtedly become an industrial commonwealth. He furthermore showed that there is need for social and industrial adjustment, and presents four working principles for this adjustment; they are: liberty; religious, political, commercial, and industrial organization; study and analysis; and social legislation.

In his speech last night Mr. Graham said that England's rise from economic chaos to sound social legislation was a strong point in favor of this policy. He contends that due to the industrialization of North Carolina, agricultural and industrial organization is not only a necessity but a certainty.

An interesting discussion of present-day conditions in industry followed Mr. Graham's informal address.

CAMERON TO SPEAK

The student chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers will meet tonight at 7:00 in Room 201 Venable. Dr. Cameron of the department of chemistry, will speak.

Interfraternity Meet Postponed

The Tuesday meeting of the Interfraternity council will be postponed because of the fact that several fraternities have not selected their representatives.

The meeting will be held Thursday, 7:15 p. m. at the Coop. All fraternities are urged to select their representatives at their respective fraternity meeting on Wednesday nite. Both old and new men are urged to participate in this meeting.

UNIVERSITY TO BE HOST TO TYPISTS

Annual State High School Contest Scheduled For May 3.

The annual state high school typewriting contest, sponsored by the University extension division in cooperation with the North Carolina commercial contest association, will be held Saturday, May 3, in the Tin Can at 9:15 a. m.

Miss Ruth A. Ford of Winston-Salem, state manager of the North Carolina typewriting and shorthand contests, will direct the exercise.

The schools having already won out in preliminary district contests held in all sections of the state will compete for the cup awarded annually to the champions of the state. There are also various other individual honors and prizes awarded by the University. In addition to this, pens are given by the makers of the typewriter, the value of the pen being in accordance with words typed per minute.

The contest is 15 minutes in length, and for each error the typist makes, ten words will be deducted from his total. Every five strokes is counted a word.

The cities competing and the number of contestants from each are: Asheville, 19; Charlotte, 9; Durham, 12; Edenton, 3; Elkin, 2; Forest City, 3; Gastonia, 1; Greenville, 2; Kings Mountain, 3; Kinston, 1; New Bern, 5; Raleigh, 6; Roanoke Rapids, 1; Rocky Mount, 3; Rockingham, 1; Washington, 3; Wilmington, 20; Winston-Salem, 12; Rosemary, 1; Wadesboro, 1.

Glee Club Scores Hit

The University glee club, according to press reports received here, has enjoyed a highly successful tour. In New Bern, the concert was characterized as the best of its kind ever given there.

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, in regard to their April 24 performance, says: "Singing many types of music from many lands, the University of North Carolina glee club . . . captured the hearts of a large audience . . . while it marveled at the perfect tones, perfect timing and perfect beauty of the fine old classics . . . including all kinds of the fine old music, gay and light, severe and heavy."

U. S. GOVERNMENT AID TO BUSINESS PARKER CONTENDS

New Yorker Here For Lecture Series Being Sponsored By University Law School.

Delivering the first of a series of three lectures before the University law school here last night, Junius Parker, prominent New York lawyer and formerly chairman of the board of directors of the American Tobacco Company, discussed the activities of the state in aid or regulation of business with special attention to the activities of the federal government, including the protective tariff, the Federal Reserve System, and the national regulation of interstate carriers.

The general topic of Mr. Parker's lectures, which are to be continued tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in the law school building, was announced as "Business and the State."

In his lecture last night Mr. Parker advanced the view that "business reasons and business motives, more than any other, induced the making of our Constitution.

"There had been a loosely knit confederation of states, each one of which was regulating commerce and currency as it saw fit," he said. "Business was in turmoil, disorder and decay, not for want of regulation, but from over-regulation by the state."

From the foundation of our national government, he said, "it has been a cardinal and practical belief of many of our statesmen that it should encourage and give aid to certain business activities."

Mr. Parker's lecture tonight will deal with the Sherman anti-trust law, the Clayton act, and the federal trade commission act.

Accompanied by his sister, Miss Mamie Parker, Mr. Parker

Y CABINETS HEAR CONFERENCE MEN

Three Conventions Are Reported On By Retiring Delegates.

The program of the meeting of the Y cabinets last night was the challenge given the members by Mr. Comer's account of the North Carolina Conference for Social Legislation held at Charlotte on April 13 to 15. According to Mr. Comer, the people of Charlotte were surprised at the sincerity of the conference. Professor Frank Graham of the University stirred the conference with his fiery speeches against the now prevalent tendency toward profit-making only.

In his speeches he showed how the majority of people throughout the United States lived on the idea of doing only what they thought would help them. Mr. Comer threw out the challenge to the Y members to stop this attitude on this campus. The Charlotte conference was kindled by the speeches made by the noted English Socialist Sir Herbert Grey when he was at the University several months ago.

The meeting last night was conducted by F. M. James in the absence of the president, vice-president and secretary. Attention was called to the coming

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Emotion and not reason is the force which precipitates in and tilts the minds of men this way and that. —Owen Wister.

An Explanation

The position of the Daily Tar Heel in regard to publication of names in the Readers' Opinions Column seems to have been misunderstood. Letters of comment or criticism will be published as desired by the writers, but any letter of abuse will be published only above the signature of the writer. This is not an effort to curb free expression of opinion through the Daily Tar Heel but is to protect the Daily Tar Heel from becoming an organ of vituperation.

University Track Team Delivers

With its victory over Washington and Lee yesterday the Carolina track team successfully withstood the second assault recently against its eight-year record of victories in dual competition. Victories over Penn State and Washington and Lee with the accompanying record-breaking performances point to victories in the State and Southern Conference meets.

But more impressive than the track victories were the large crowds to witness the meets. Those crowds indicate a growing interest in track at the University and throughout the state. Eight years ago only a few spectators with a personal interest in competitors would turn out for a meet. That was when Coach Bob Fetzer was seeking to coax students to go out for the sport. After a few years state records began to fall and a little later the Carolina men were beating Southern records. Finally in 1926, the team repaid Coach Bob by winning its first Conference title in many years.

Again this spring Carolina seems destined to again pay tribute to Coach Bob's energy and tireless effort in behalf of track. But whether the team wins the Southern title or fails to place among the first three teams we know that to Coach Bob goes whatever praise due Carolina for its success.

The Future Of Debating

Indeed, it would require a rare prophet to predict with any appreciable amount of accuracy just what the future of debating at the University of North Carolina, or any other modern institution, will be. The debating situation here is not a peculiar one at all, but rather a typical one. All will agree that the number of Carolina students who are interested in debating is pitifully small, as compared with the crowds which once thronged Gerrard hall to witness intercollegiate forensic encounters. Some will not agree with the writer, however, in his contention that the rather limited group who are now actively engaged in forensics here manifest just as much of the competitive spirit and give just as much evidence of interest in debating as did the much larger groups of forensic enthusiasts of two generations ago. To develop this point of view and to take a glance at the future of debating as indicated by its present status is the task of this writing.

We can be very dogmatic in stating that the spoken word has lost much of its power. We can be equally positive, however, in contending that the spoken word is still supreme even though its pinnacle has been threatened time and again by the written work. As long as the spoken word "holds its own" there is little ground for thinking that debating will perish. But even at that, there is no validity in believing that debating will rise above its present status under conditions which now exist on the average campus. The Carolina campus situation with reference to the debating problem is a good index to the outlook in general. Other organizations having more of the youthful, romantic appeal have sapped the life out of debating. Although forensic activities have held their own at Carolina for the last decade, their future usefulness will be measured in terms of advancement and growth from the existing low ebb of appeal. Forces to brighten the future of debating must be external. There is no degrading factor working from within.

Although there is a great deal of disagreement as to the relative calibre of past and present debates, we believe that intercollegiate debating of the present decade compares favorably with that of past decades. The lamentable decline in forensic interest is due, therefore, to external causes, rather than to decay from within. The rank and file of students don't attend debates now, because they have football games, the movies, numerous social organizations, etc., —products of rather recent times here in Chapel Hill.

There are some who think that the growing popularity of radio debating will guarantee an acceleration of the existing interest in the noble art of argumentation. This will undoubtedly help; yet the radio cannot be counted upon to make future intercollegiate debating what it ought to be and what it once was. The eventual solution seems to lie in a change of student attitude. Debating needs to be popularized, just as other branches of intercollegiate competition have been popularized.

The writer is firmly convinced that the pendulum will swing one way or the other within the next few years—debating will either perish from the University campus or it will come into its own. Present indications—consisting of an obvious quickening of interest during the last two years and the popularizing effect which the radio is having on debating—indicate that the pendulum will swing in the direction of renewed interest and greater volume of participation on the part of the student body.

Debating is essentially an intellectual activity. Few mental exercises, if any, are more beneficial to the student. We believe that this fact, which has been overlooked in the rapid commercialization of education which the last decade has witnessed, is coming to light in the present generation of Carolina students. The pendulum has undoubtedly begun its backward swing is purely a matter of spec-debating and argumentation." Just how fast the pendulum will swing ispurely a matter of speculation, but it is the swing of the pendulum of student interests that controls the future of intercollegiate debating here and elsewhere. —J. C. W.

HOW TO MAKE A "FLORAL STILL LIFE"

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

In answer to many inquiries, Mrs. Totten, chairman of the flower show, asked me to give a statement to the press, telling how to make a "floral still life." We shall greatly appreciate your courtesy in giving us space for the following explanation.

Take a strong box, wood or strong cardboard; leave front only open; wire through two holes in top, with strong wire for hanging. Line box with dark cloth or paper to give background effect—crepe paper can be used. Lining can be pinned or glued in. Attach real or suggested frame to front of box. Gilded cardboard rope or twisted paper can suggest frame.

Place vase, basket, quaint shoe or hat, or whatever articles desired, in box, and arrange flowers therein. Advisable to choose receptacle that will hold water for flowers to keep them fresh. Name still life—as "Purple Pansies," or "An Old-Fashioned Posy," and write name of sender on back of box. Deliver to me at the Tin Can, April 30, between 4 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon, or between 7:30 and 8:30; or May 1, between 8:30 and 9:30 in the morning. Entries closed at 10 a. m. for judges' inspection.

Seven prizes offered in this exhibit—four for adults and three for children. Any person in the vicinity may enter a floral still life. Each person may enter as many as desired. All entries welcomed.

ANOTHER DEBATE IS PLANNED FOR HILL MAY 7 OR 8

The debating team of the University of North Carolina will compete with the team from University of the South on May 7, or 8, at Chapel Hill. The team representing this university will consist of McBride Fleming-Jones and W. W. Speight.

The team will uphold the affirmative side of the chain store question. This debate will be one of a series of annual debates that the teams from these universities have been having. Last year the University debated at Sewanee, Tennessee, the town in which the University of the South is located.

Dr. Urban T. Holmes of the department of romance languages of the University, will leave Chapel Hill May 20 for a six-week sojourn in Europe.

During his stay abroad Dr. Holmes plans to do some research in connection with a new edition of the poet Du Bartas which he, in collaboration with other University professors, is preparing.

It will be the first complete edition of Du Bartas since 1632, and will contain, in addition to the entire works of the poet, a lengthy introduction and commentaries which will be chiefly the work of Dr. Holmes.

He will return to the University in time to teach in the second session of the summer school.

Other members of the romance language department who will visit Europe this summer are J. C. Lyons, A. K. Shields, W. G. Salley and S. A. Stoudemire.

Education Professor Will Address Seminar

Dr. A. M. Jordan of the school of education will speak at the mathematics seminar Wednesday afternoon. Dr. Jordan's address will be upon "The Theory and Application of the Coefficient of Correlation." This is expected to be a very interesting subject for it concerns the application of mathematics to economic, social and psychological phenomena.

The honor system on examinations was installed in 1875, when the University reopened.

DURHAM SHOP TO STAGE BIG SALE

The Durham Men's Shop, Inc., located at 111 West Main street, begins this morning the greatest disposal of merchandising that it has ever attempted in the many years it has been in business in Durham. The company is offering a $75,000 business adjustment sale on nationally known merchandise for men, young men and boys at a season of the year when it is unusual for reduction to be made on this class of goods.

The store was closed all day Monday marking down the stocks and preparing for the event. This morning at 9 o'clock the store will be opened to the public in what is declared to be the greatest downfall of clothing values ever seen in this section of the state.

The Durham Men's Shop is the successor to the W. A. Slater Company and for over 30 years these two firms have been doing business at their present location. These years of service to the people of Durham and this section of the state stand behind every purchase made during the sale. According to the store, this is a wonderful opportunity for students to anticipate their needs and to completely stock their wardrobes while these prices remain.

"Strictly Unconventional" Is Example of Screen Technique

The complete freedom from mechanical limitations attained by talking pictures in just two years of life is said to be particularly well demonstrated in "Strictly Unconventional," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-talking adaptation of W. Somerset Maugham's stage hit, "The Circle," which will show today at the Carolina theatre.

In the early days of talkies, filming was held down by crude microphones which could not record sounds farther away than three feet. This meant that if a player were sitting, he could not rise in the same shot, without hitting the "mike." This, of course, made the early stories somewhat stilted and interfered greatly with that smooth flow of action which is such an asset to a good motion picture.

In "'Strictly Unconventional," however, it seems, there are no such limitations. Six characters speak separately from different parts of the room. Characters complete a difficult scene while walking between two or three rooms. They sit down, jump up suddenly, run—and their voices continue throughout. In several instances the microphone is over 20 feet from the speakers. A... always the "mike" follo... people, follows them wit... ease that picture players ... longer are "mike" cons... They can entirely forget the ... cording apparatus. It can ... low them anywhere and at ... speed. They don't need ... slow down, or break up the ... terpretations in any way.

Records Fall As Tar Heels Trounce Generals

Charlie Farmer Ties Best Southern Marks In Dashes

Carolina Takes 10 First Places To Win Over Washington and Lee and Retain 8-Year Unbeaten Record In Dual Meets.

ARNOLD VAULTS 13 FEET

In one of the most spectacular dual meets ever staged on Emerson field, the University trackmen, unbeaten in dual meets for eight years, yesterday scored a decisive 78½-47½ win over Washington and Lee's southern indoor champions. The Tar Heels took 10 of 14 first places.

Charlie Farmer, Tar Heel sophomore speed merchant, continued his sensational work and tied southern records for both 100 and 220 yards at 9.8 and 21.2 seconds. Both races were thrillers, Farmer nosing out Sandifer by a scant yard in the first after the General star had jumped out to a big lead at the gun.

A number of other feature performances were turned in. Brodie Arnold, Tar Heel vaulter, moved his own University record up to 13 feet, but on a try at bettering the southern mark of 13 feet 3 snapped his pole. Dave Neiman bettered his own University broadjump record by ½ inch, winning first with a jump of 22 feet 5¾, closely followed by Sandifer of Washington and Lee with 22 feet 5⅜. Stevens, General star, put the shot 43 feet 10, almost two feet better than the University record. In a great finish Gay of Carolina won the quarter-mile in 50.6 seconds, a mark .2 seconds better than the state mark.

The Tar Heels made a clean sweep in the vault, Arnold taking first at 13 feet, and Neiman and Ruble turning in high vaults of 12 feet 1½. The home team piled up a big lead also in the mile, two-mile and high jump.

Washington and Lee had the edge only in the two hurdle races in both of which the Generals took 6 of 9 points. Perry of Carolina was running a great

FROSH BATSMEN TO MEET STATE

The freshman nine has a busy week before it, meeting the State frosh today, Wake Forest tomorrow and Oak Ridge Friday.

The State College youngsters will invade Chapel Hill today in quest of another victory, as their slate shows that they have not lost a game so far this year. Coach Tebell and his freshmen are expected to show the Tar Babies some real fight.

The frosh lost a close game to the State nine last week, but since that time they have improved a great deal as Coach Cerney has improved the lineup considerably by changing the position of several of the players. This game is going to be one of the most outstanding for the freshmen during the season.

As yet, Coach Cerney has not announced the lineup, and probably will not until shortly before the game.

Tomorrow the Tar Babies will travel over to Wake Forest to meet the Baby Deacons. After this game they will be preparing to give the Oak Ridge nine a warm reception Friday.

The frosh so far this season have been playing good ball, several of the boys showing up well as prospects for next year's varsity.

Barney Berlinger, University of Pennsylvania star, certainly proved himself one of the country's outstanding track and field stars when he raised the decathlon record at the Penn relay carnival Friday by approximately 161 points. Barney won five of the ten events—the shot, javelin, high jump, broad jump and pole vault. He did 46 feet in the shot, 174 feet 8 inches in the javelin, 22 feet 6 inches in the broad jump, 12 feet 6 inches in the pole vaule, and 6 feet ½ inch in the high jump. Barney might have beaten the world's record if he had moved a little faster on the track—he took no better than eighth in the 1500 meters, and his time in the 400 meters, 100 meters and 110 meter hurdles were far short of the calibre of his field event records. After all, one can't do everything!

The Philadelphia Athletics, heralded as runaway victors for this year by pre-season dopesters, just couldn't seem to get started against the Washington Senators, the A's ever-present jinxes, and were shoved down into fifth place under a barrage of hits. It looks as if the Mack pitchers were working on their last year's reputation, like the Yanks did in 1929. At least, the A's won't be lonesome — the Phillies, doped as usual to have one of their "dangerous" teams, should be able to lose as many games. Meanwhile, the Senators and Giants, having won seven in a row, seem intent on forestalling any repetition of the Athletic-Cub series of 1929.

The Duke baseball team is certainly taking on an ambitious schedule this week—Penn, Villanova, Princeton, Fordham and N. Y. U. on successive days is a set-up schedule for no man's team.

At present it looks as if Carolina will have at least one Conference championship—possibly two. The trackmen continue on their winning "jag," and if past performances mean anything, several of the individual Conference winners should sport Tar Heel colors. "Ten Point" Farmer has not been defeated this year and shows no indications of slowing down. If Barkley and Arnold continue their fine performances, it's going to be difficult for any ambitious collegian to beat Carolina in the mile, half and vault. The tennis team is the other Carolina aggregation likely to win a southern title. Hendlin, Liskin, Baggs and Captain Merritt seem to be whipping everything in sight, and are expected to continue to do so.

RACQUETEERS ARE VICTORIOUS OVER WAKE FOREST MEN

Carolina Team Returns With 7-2 Victory; Return Match Schedule For Saturday.

The Carolina tennis team payed the Wake Forest Deacons a visit yesterday, and returned to Chapel Hill with a 7-2 victory under their belts.

Hendlin, newly crowned state singles champ playing number 1 for Carolina, ran through Sikes of Wake Forest 6-0, 6-1 in a fast match. Sikes showed a fast service and drive, but was not consistent enough to cope with Hendlin's steady stroking and strong net game. The Carolina player was driving to the deep backcourt and rushing the net at every opportunity, which proved to be too much for his opponent.

Captain Merritt (Carolina) had a tough match with Edleston (Wake Forest) to finally win 3-6, 6-1, 6-3. The match turned out to be a long backcourt duel, with both men hugging the base lines and reluctant to come to the net. Edleston's terrific first service and deep drives carried him through the first set which he took at 6-3. In the second set, however, Merritt got on to his opponent's shots, and took the set 6-1. The third set was a little tighter, but finally went to the Carolina man at 6-3.

Liskin Loses First

Liskin of Carolina lost his first match of the season to Vernon in a fiercely fought match by 7-5, 6-3. The Deacon player was trailing in the first set 5-2, but rallied to take five straight games and the set by 7-5. He continued his comeback, and by forcing the game, took the second set and the match.

Graham of Carolina was working fine against Carroll of Wake Forest, and trimmed his man badly by the score of 6-2, 6-0. The Carolina man outclassed his adversary in every department of the game, and the outcome of the match was never in doubt after the first set had been concluded.

Palmore (Carolina) lost a hard match to Griffin (Wake Forest) by 7-5, 4-6, 6-4. Both players tried to take the offensive in every game, and the outcome of the match was in doubt until the final point had been played. With one set apiece to their credit, both men fought

TRACK TEAM LOSES CAPTAIN NIMS FOR REST OF SEASON

The Tar Heel trackmen will probably compete in the remainder of this season's meets without the services of their captain, Dave Nims, holder of the University's 400 dash record. Nims developed a foot infection upon his return from the Tech relays, where he competed as a member of the Carolina team which set a new southern record for the one-mile relay. After a slight operation the infection seemed to diminish, and it was hoped that he might possibly compete in the state championship meet at Greensboro Saturday. However, the infection became worse and Saturday night he was removed from the infirmary and taken to Watts Hospital in Durham, where he was operated on again by Dr. Foy Roberson. His speedy recovery is expected, but it is unlikely that Nims will be able to get in shape to run again this year.

TAR HEELS WIN THIRD GOLF TITLE

Steward Leads Team To Victory; Duke Second and Davidson Third.

The Blue and White pennant of Carolina again flaunted itself victoriously in the state intercollegiate golf matches at Sedgefield Country Club, Greensboro, Saturday with a team aggregate score of 674. Carolina's nearest competitor was Duke with an aggregate score of 696, Davidson rambling in third with a score of 711.

The Tar Heels showed a well-balanced team in their endeavors at Sedgefield, Steward coming through with a score of 164, Willis with 167, Goodes with 170 and Chatham with 173. Weather conditions did not permit scores equal to those made in the Davidson match Friday.

Jack Pepper of Davidson was crowned individual state champion, turning in a low score of 160. Chatham was second in low scoring in the morning with a 79 to Pepper's 78 but fell off in the afternoon round with a 94.

The Vanderbilt match was postponed from Tuesday at Nashville, Tenn., to Wednesday at Birmingham, Ala., at the same course where the subsequent Southern Conference intercollegiate matches are to be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Vanderbilt is judged to be quite a difficult opponent, as it has beaten Georgia Tech this year, which in turn has been Carolina's only conqueror up to date. The fact that Carolina is playing Vanderbilt at Birmingham Wednesday ought to put the team in fine trim for the Southern Conference matches in which the Tar Heels are doped to place high among the leaders.

Last year's leaders of the Southern Conference intercollegiate matches were the Universities of Georgia, Alabama and Florida. As Alabama is playing on its home course, it is conceded the best chance of winning the title. Alabama incidentally possesses last year's individual champion, Sam Perry.

FRESHMAN TENNIS TEAM WINS AGAIN

The Carolina baby racqueteers rushed through the visiting Maury high school team of Norfolk, Va., here Saturday for a 6-0 win. Losing but one set in the entire team match, the Tar Baby team continued its winning streak by winning its third straight match of the season, none of the home players having much trouble in winning their matches.

Summaries: Hines (C) defeated Hughes 7-5, 6-1; Wright (C) defeated Lawless 6-2, 6-2; Abels (C) defeated Montague 6-2, 6-2; Napier (C) defeated Thayer 6-2, 6-3; Hines and Wright defeated Hughes and Montague 1-6, 6-4, 6-3; Abels and Napier defeated Lawless and Thayer 6-2, 6-1.

FROSH TRACKMEN MEET DUKE IMPS IN DURHAM TODAY

Contest Starts On Haynes Field At 3:30 P. M.; Distance Runs Likely To Feature.

The Tar Baby tracksters will meet the Duke freshmen in a dual track meet this afternoon at 3:30 on Haynes field in Durham. The Duke Imps are especially strong in the distance runs. With Jensen, Jones, Cordle, Hubbard, Watkins, Brock, and Mitcham to divide up the quarter, half, and mile between themselves, the Tar Babies should make a strong bid for honor in these events. Bray of Duke gave the baby harriers plenty of trouble in the fall, and is expected to furnish plenty of competition in the mile.

Martindale and Shepherd in the pole vault will likely hold down their event. Drane in the dashes is a favorite to win his two races. Davis and Stafford in the hurdles should be able to make trouble for the Imp hurdlers. Newland in the high jump will probably place somewhere near first.

The bus will leave Emerson field at 1:30 p. m., and the following men, who are entered in the meet, are requested by the coach to be there a little before 1:30: Brock, Collins, Davis, A. K. Donnell, Drane, Eisner, Gabriel, Geiger, Hamlet, Harrell, Hawley, Henry, D. P., Hodges, H. M., Hubbard, Jensen, Jones, M. M., Lindeman, Lumpkin, Martindale, Mitcham, Newland, Pratt, Shepherd, W. V., Stafford, C. G., Watkins, Wornam, Miller, Wilson.

Wilmer Hines and Lenoir Wright returned Friday from White Sulphur Springs, Va., where they represented the University in the annual Mason and Dixon tennis tournament.

Hines and Wright teamed up for the doubles and for their first match drew the world's champion doubles team composed of Allison and Van Ryn. The latter won in two sets, 6-1, 6-4.

In the recent Pinehurst tournament Hines and Bryan Grant succeeded in reaching match point on the world's champions but lost the match on a contested point.

FIRST TEA OF QUARTER HELD IN PARISH HOUSE

The first Episcopal tea of the spring quarter was held in the parish house Sunday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, more than 100 persons calling during the appointed hours. Mrs. Anderson acted as hostess and was assisted by Mrs. G. K. G. Henry and Mrs. Collier Cobb. Delicious tea, iced cakes and candies were served by the young ladies of the church.

The teas will be given every Sunday afternoon for the remainder of the term. The one this week will be held on the lawn in the rear of the church, the weather permitting. All students regardless of denomination are cordially invited to attend.

Due to a misunderstanding, very much regretted by the Daily Tar Heel, notice of the tea was omitted from the paper.

hard for the telling set. With the score at 4-4, Griffin succeeded in taking Palmore's service and followed with winning his own, to take the match.

Baggs of Carolina had an easy time in defeating Fletcher 6-2, 6-1. The Carolina man was too steady for Fletcher, who was continuously driving balls into the net and out of bounds.

Playing first doubles for Carolina, Hendlin and Liskin rushed through their match withElleston and Griffin for an easy 6-1, 6-1, win. The Deacon pair could not solve the defence of the southpaw team and only succeeded in breaking through to take one game in each set.

Doubles Hard

Captain Merritt and Palmore of Carolina had a harder time in beating Sikes and Vernon 7-5, 4-6, 6-4. Both teams were hitting the ball hard and consistently, and very few errors were made on either side during the match. The Carolina pair proved stronger in the pinches, and came through to take the final set after trailing at 4-3.

Graham and Browne (Carolina) were also extended to beat Fletcher and Harrell 6-4, 6-4. The Tar Heel couple were in danger several times, but always came through when they needed a point badly, and this decided the match in their favor.

The Wake Forest team will come to Chapel Hill this Saturday for a return match which will be played on the University courts.

1926 which did away with the system of having the class presidents on the council. The method adopted in 1926 was the one that is in use today. That is, each of the upper classes elects a council member to represent it. This council is at present headed by the president of the student body.

President Green stated further that before any business could be taken up by the council it is necessary that at least five of the members be present.

The new president said further that when a man is brought before the council, he is thought innocent until his guilt has been satisfactorily proved.

After explaining his plan to form a closer friendship between the universities and colleges in the state, President Greene closed by giving the two codes necessary for a good student body. These two codes were: first, the code of a gentleman; and second, the code of campus honor.

Blue Ridge conference. It was reported that ten members have decided definitely to attend, and about 15 or 20 more are seriously considering it. The University has been urged to keep up its representation of 40 members at the meetings.

At this meeting Grady Leonard gave a detailed account of the Officers Training Conference at Guilford College, appearing elsewhere in the Daily Tar Heel this morning. The group heard more about the North Carolina Conference for Social Legislation from two of the men who had attended. A report on the Greensboro cabinet meetings was rendered, it being announced that Ed Hamer had been elected to the presidency of the state cabinet of Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.'s.

Short sentence prayers were offered, after which the group was dismissed by Mr. Comer.

A native Tar Heel, born in Smithfield, he is a graduate of the University, class of 1889, but this is his first visit to Chapel Hill since 1910 when he delivered the Alumni Day address from the rostrum of Gerrard hall. Before going to New York he practiced in Durham and later in Knoxville, Tenn. He spent much of the afternoon revisiting his favorite haunts and naturally he was amazed at the changes. A number of social functions are being given in his honor.

FIRST WOMEN TO JOIN PHI TO BE "IMMORTALIZED"

Names of Wells, Douglas, and Crisfield May Go Down In History as Crusaders.

The Phi Assembly last night, in an unusual occasion, upset a century-old precedent by admitting three co-eds into membership. The co-eds who, in joining the assembly, upset the old rule are as follows: Kathrine P. Wells of Mississippi, Virginia Douglas of Guilford county and Beatrice Cresfield of Mecklenburg county.

Others initiated on this occasion included Warren F. Olmstead, J. K. Galloway, W. I. Skinner, J. C. Rawles, W. A. Withers, S. G. Morse, M. A. Simons and E. D. Fysal.

Speaker Carr announced that the bill for discussion would be postponed until the next meeting due to the lengthy initiation ceremonies and other business which was pending at this time.

In a discussion with Speaker Carr the assembly voted to change the date of the dance from May 10 to Friday evening, May 16, the dance to last from 6 to 9 o'clock. It was decided to make the affair informal and time early in the evening. Several prizes will be offered to the first three couples on the floor not later than 6:15. Tickets will be sold to students desiring them.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra.

Harold McDonald of Candor was a visitor at the meeting.

COUNCIL TAKES ACTION AGAINST CHECK OFFENSES

Jurisdiction To Be Extended To Out-of-Town Cases.

At a meeting Monday night of the new student council and J. A. Williams, who handles bad checks of University students, a new rule was passed which requires students to appear before the student council for the second bad check offense. Heretofore Williams dealt with both the first and second offenses, but from now on the new rule will bring about more stringent action toward those students who persist in violation. The old rule gave students the right of appeal after suspension whereas the new regulation necessitates the appearance of offenders before the council before suspension.

The student council has also decided to take cognizance of bad checks given by Carolina students in other towns than Chapel Hill. If a student goes to Greensboro, Durham or any other city and gives a bad check, he is required, if the check is reported, to appear before Williams for the first offense and for offenses thereafter before the council. This move has been made to protect the credit of the University students in distant cities, and also to demonstrate to merchants that students of the University of North Carolina may be expected to pay checks and to make good all those that are bad.

According to Mr. Williams, if a student does not report to him

Final Plans For Organization North Carolina Federation Of Students Completed Yesterday

Union To Be Formed Here Saturday, May 10; Colleges Of State Favor Plan And Complete Representation Expected; Carolina's Delegates Appointed.

(By K. C. Ramsay)

Final arrangements for the organization of the North Carolina Federation of Students were completed yesterday at a meeting of a student body committeed by President Greene to formulate plans. The federation is to be organized here next Saturday, May 10.

The proposed constitution calls for at least two delegates from each college with an additional delegate for each additional five hundred students. Dues to the federation shall be $6 for the first 500 students represented, and $3 for each additional 500. Meetings of the federation shall be held annually.

Lang Reports Favorably

John Lang, chairman of the constitution committee, reported on correspondence with the several colleges. During the past week a committee has been to Wake Forest, State College, Duke, Meredith, Greensboro College, N. C. State and Guilford to discuss the plans with student officials there and they all spoke favorably of the plan. While at the Y conference at Guilford during the past week-end, Lang saw many leaders from the other colleges in the state and they were all interested in the federation. Something over 30 delegates have already declared their intentions to be present May 10.

Explanatory letters containing a program of the convention and a copy of the proposed constitution were mailed to the several colleges yesterday.

Convention Program

The opening business session will be held Saturday morning, May 10, at 9:30 in Gerrard hall. At this time the proposed constitution and by-laws will be discussed, and a committee chosen to prepare the document for adoption at the afternoon session. President of the Carolina student body, Ralph Greene, will preside.

Arrangements for luncheon were not definitely arranged at yesterday's meeting, but the entertainment committee announced that they would be completed at once.

The constitution committee will report at the afternoon session, which is to begin in Gerrard hall at 2:30, and final changes before adoption will be made. Professor Frank Graham will address the body with a speech of welcome at this time.

A banquet is scheduled for the Carolina Inn Saturday evening at 6:30. The officers of the federation will be elected at this meeting. The conference will adjourn after a place for the 1931 meeting is selected.

President Greene appointed as delegates from the University to the federation Ray Farris, Will Yarborough, John Lang, K. C. Ramsay, Mayne Albright and Ed Hamer. These men are chairmen of the several sub-committees which have carried out the plans of organization. Members of the organization committee other than the above are Beatty Rector, F. M. James, H. N. Patterson, Harper Barnes, E. C. Daniel, Mac Covington and Jack Dungan.

The University Railway, from Chapel Hill to University Station, was partially built with convict labor.

Golf Notice

The Board of Governors of the golf committee of the Chapel Hill golf club wish to call to the attention of all students and non-members that it will be necessary in the future to purchase a ticket from the Book Exchange or Student Supply Store before going on the course. Tickets in the future will not be sold on the course, and no one will be allowed to play who has not complied with this rule.

SENATE REMAINS MALE SANCTUARY

Refuses To Follow Flighty Phi, Whose Membership Embraces Weaker Sex.

At the regular meeting of the Dialectic Senate last night, a bill from the Phi was presented reading, "Resolved, That co-eds should be admitted to the forensic societies at the University." The senators voted to strike the bill from the calendar, refusing even to discuss it.

The second resolution which came before the Senate was "Resolved, That Josiah W. Bailey should be the Democratic nominee from North Carolina for the United States senate." After much heated discussion, which eventually developed into an age-old Hoover-Smith controversy, the resolution was passed.

President Beatty Rector addressed the senate on parliamentary procedure and explained the duties of the sergeant-at-arms. President Rector also called for a report of the banquet committee at the next meeting.

Hugh Wilson was voted into the senate and will be initiated with a number of others at the next initiation ceremony which will be the last one this quarter.

A calendar of unusually interesting legislation is being prepared for the senate session next Tuesday night.

GLEE CLUB GIVES FINAL CONCERT AT WASHINGTON

SIX FRATS WILL GIVE COLORFUL HOPS THIS WEEK

Over a Hundred Girls Expected On Week-End House Parties.

LEFTWICH TO GIVE MUSIC

An outstanding group of fraternity dances will be held this week-end. The dances are being sponsored by the Sigma Nu, Sigma Chi, Zeta Psi, Phi Delta Theta, Beta Theta Pi, and Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternities. Formal dances will be held in the Bynum gymnasium on Friday and Saturday nights, and a dansant will be held Saturday afternoon at the Washington Duke hotel in Durham.

Jelly Leftwich and his band will play for both of the Saturday dances, while the Florida Rhythm Band, direct from a winter engagement in Florida at the Tampa Yacht Club, will play for the dance Friday night. Leftwich and his boys played for the University mid-winter dances and proved to be so popular that he has been engaged to play for these dances. The latter orchestra, one of the most famous negro orchestras in the country, has a large following due to the quality of music it is reputed to put out.

No pains are being spared to decorate the gymnasium for the affair. It will be decorated as a seaside caberet. The orchestra will be dressed as sailors, and will play from the orchestra pit which will be disguised as an old weather-beaten wharf. Around the walls many different kinds of oriental trophies will lend the atmosphere of tropic splendor.

Frazier Glenn and Baron Holmes are doing the decorating. Both of these men have established quite a reputation for themselves as decorators.

Art Sickles, Sigma Chi, will act as chairman of the dance committee, assisted by Mosely Fonveille, Phi Delta Theta, Marion Follin, Beta Theta Pi, Willis Henderson, Sigma Nu, Dail Holderness, Delta Kappa Epsilon, and Charles Lee Smith, Zeta Psi.

There will be various other means of entertaining the large number of guests that are expected. The Sigma Chi fraternity will entertain for their house guests at their house Saturday evening with a buffet supper. A twilight dance will be given from six to nine Friday night by the Thirteen Club.

A large number of girls has been invited to the 'Hill" this week-end, over 100 of them being expected from all over the country, from as far west as Montana; from as far South as Florida; and as far north as Toronto, Canada.

Without doubt the week-end of dances and house parties will be one of the outstanding social occasions of the entire year.

Sigma Nu will have as its house guests Miss Hazel Perkins of Windell, Lib Bryan of Raleigh, Betsy Coke of Richmond, Mary Hickerson, Helen White, Peter Whitehead of Wilson; Francis Shute of Monroe, Lacinda Watkins, Anna Mack Redfern of Monroe, Jeanette Ernst of Chapel Hill, Kitty Boddie of Louisburg, Jerry Lee of Lynchburg, Nancy Watts of Charlotte, Annette Tucker of Raleigh, Dova Little, Caroline Blanton of Shelby; Dit Quarles of Charlotte;

CHAPEL HILL SET FOR FLOWER SHOW

Exhibits To Be Shown Thursday From 12 M. to Midnight; Many Prizes.

The women's clubs of the village are busy this week with preparations for Chapel Hill's annual flower show to be staged in the Tin Can Thursday, May 1. The show will open at noon, and close at midnight, and indications are that the University and village will be treated to such a display of flowers as is rarely seen.

In addition to the flowers there will be exhibitions of colonial furniture, luncheon and dinner table decorations, landscapings and garden layouts.

Miss Josephine Sharkey's dancing class will give a performance of folk dancing at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8:30 in the evening.

The Tin Can will be open for potted plants and entries other than cut flowers, and dining table service on Wednesday afternoon and night. All cut flower exhibits are to be in by 10:30 Thursday morning, at which time the doors will be closed, and will remain closed until 12, while the judges cast their votes. Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt will deliver the two garden prizes just before the dancing begins in the afternoon.

Invitations to the show have been sent by the Garden Club here to clubs in Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro, Danville and other communities. The prizes are made possible by individuals of Chapel Hill and merchants in Chapel Hill, Durham, Carrboro and Greensboro.

ANTI-TRUST LAWS SECOND SUBJECT PARKER LECTURES

Clayton and Sherman Acts No Source of Special Litigation Says New Yorker.

The Sherman Anti-Trust Law, the Clayton Act, and the Federal Trade Commission Act were discussed here last night by Junius Parker, noted New York lawyer and formerly chairman of the board of directors of the American Tobacco Company, in the second of a series of three lectures before the University law school on the general subject of "Business and the State."

Discussing the two principal additions of the Clayton Act to the Sherman law; namely, the forbidding of the tying covenants in sale or lease contracts, and the forbidding of the acquisition by one corporation of stock in another if such eliminates any competition between the two, Mr. Parker expressed the view that the "Clayton Act is well on the way that the Sherman law has taken.

"It will not long be a statute in the sense that a statute of limitations is a statute, or that a statute providing for the organizing of corporations, or for the execution of wills, or for the administration of the estate of a decedent, or for the collection of revenue is a statute. It will be at least a part of our American common law—not useless by any means, but to be administered in accordance with the views of the court as to what it ought to forbid, and therefore

STRING QUARTET WILL PLAY HERE NIGHT OF MAY 10

Event Is One of Two Remaining On Entertainment Committee's List.

The Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra, a string quartet under the direction of Walter Heermann, has been definitely booked for a concert on May 10 at the Methodist church, under the auspices of the student entertainment committee.

Mr. Heerman, the conductor, is well known to the music public as a distinguished concert cellist, and is one of the outstanding men of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. He is a member of the faculty of the Cincinnati College of Music and is a prominent figure in the National High School Orchestra Camp at Interlocken, Mich.

The Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra is a concert offering of the first rank, giving programs of outstanding value and beauty. It has been highly praised by critics and the music-loving public wherever it has appeared.

The student entertainment committee has been very fortunate in securing this well-known orchestra for a concert which will, probably, be the outstanding feature on the spring program of entertainment.

It will be recalled that the world-famous Flonzali Quartet, which has now disbanded, was exceedingly popular in its appearance here last year.

The exact hour of the program will be announced at a later date.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Genius is exactly the opposite of what clever people of today think it is. It arises in great, simple persons and masters them and urges them on to ends that are beyond any that the conscious mind can aim at or attain. —Alfred Noyes.

For Safety's Sake

The drive of local police to curb operation of automobiles with improper lights should be extended to include flagrant and frequent violations of parking ordinances. These ordinances have been provided to facilitate the handling of traffic and to prevent accidents possibly with serious consequences.

On the campus and down town the problem seems to have been solved. But around the Carolina Inn observance of the signs placed at proper places is lacking. The worst violations occur in the driveway leading to the garages and to the Cafeteria. Due to the narrowness of this driveway a large sign has been placed where everyone entering is forced to see it. With both pedestrians and automobiles using the same driveway disregard of the parking sign is likely to cause accidents of a serious nature. But it seems that some of the patrons of the cafeteria either do not see the sign or choose to exercise the right of "first come, first serve."

Those who have been guilty not only of disregarding a precaution taken to prevent accidents but also to allow free access to those using the garages should take thought before deliberately parking in the driveway again. Too often a move is inaugurated to compel obedience of ordinances after a serious accident. But that is "locking the door after the horse has been stolen." We prefer an effort to observe these regulations to a campaign for strict enforcement.

A New Movement?

Rumors have been circulating throughout the student body reporting some of the University authorities as starting a movement for the abolition of automobiles at Carolina. Although of doubtful authenticity, this report has brought forth much expression of opinion.

The numerous and tragic accidents near Chapel Hill in recent years have been seen by many as a call for some action. However, no definite, rather known, move seems to have been made as yet.

If such a step is to be attempted it will undoubtedly create quite a bit of publicity in the state about Carolina—probably of a favorable nature by the parents, but otherwise with the student population. Some of the students at Carolina find automobiles a necessity rather than a luxury, as many look at it. These same students will no doubt advance strong arguments supporting such statements, which will very likely result in a few exceptions to the rule if it should be adopted.

Such an action towards isolation of the University students from the rest of the state is not new, but rather would be an amendment or supplement to the ideas of those who chose the site of the University. The present site was said to have been chosen for the state university because of its isolation, and this accounts largely for the railroad not having come any closer to Carolina than it has.

State action has barred pool tables, bar rooms, and dance halls of the old type, and now many wish to take away the automobile which they think acts as a connecting link between such pastimes. Arguments advanced by several of the supporters of such an action have centered around the raising of scholarship, lowering of expenses, improvement of school spirit, and public safety.

A decided protest would accompany attempts at the abolishment of automobiles at Carolina. If such an action is taken, more adequate means of modern entertainment must be provided the more socially inclined students who seem to be the chief offenders in the so-called abuse of the "Auto at Carolina."

No other schools of importance in North Carolina have such a rule, but Carolina has led in many movements. "It can be done" and the adoption of such a policy would probably greatly influence similar action elsewhere in the state and south. Although such action would prove highly inconvenient to a number of students at present, there are strong arguments that could be presented in favor of such a move or vice versa.

A Suggestion To Walk-Builders

Many and eloquent have been the editorials appearing from time to time in the Daily Tar Heel asking readers to refrain from walking on the grass. Yet, judging by the numerous bare and bald spots prevalent over the campus, the effect has been insignificant.

There are, as in all cases, no doubt two sides to this question. In the first place, many of the walks have been laid out as a result of the gradual appearance of paths across sodden portions of the grounds. As examples of walks begun in this fashion may be noted the one in back of Murphey, and the one from Old West toward the unfinished music building. Were it not for such clues as these unconscious expressions of public will, the walk-builders would not fully realize and provide for the necessary accommodations.

In this modern day, when beauty is secondary to efficiency and speed, it cannot be expected that an undue amount of time will be spent in following circuitous routes about the campus. If pedestrians do not adhere exactly to the areas laid out as walks, possible some of the blame may be laid to the builders of the walks. The remedy seems to lie in sacrificing our aesthetic sense on the altar of progress (?), and either erecting fences or building walks to replace the less attractive paths. —J. M. L.

Readers' Opinions

A BOOST FOR LACROSSE

Editor Daily Tar Heel:

I read with pleasure the unsigned sports write-up "Popularity of Lacrosse Increases" in your issue of April 27. Perhaps your writer would be interested in "The 'Unequaled' Thrills of Le Jeu de la Crosse," Literary Digest, June 15, 1929, p. 60, and the description of Lacrosse by Donald W. White in The Sportsman, Boston, which inspired the Digest's article. If he should be, I could supplement this material.

Except the thrills of boxing, those of Lacrosse, to my taste, are unequaled. From the spectator's viewpoint, basketball and hockey are the nearest kin to lacrosse. Psychologically the kick is pretty much the same in all three. (A difference: as lacrosse is a spring game the spectator doesn't freeze). Continuous movement on the field. No wind-ups, no hurdles—no nodes and loops; just one big loop. Usual intermission, of course. And out of doors in the spring.

A decade or so back, I suggested that Carolina take up lacrosse—the best team game played on foot. More recently, Professor Caldwell urged its adoption, in a Tar Heel of several years ago. I notice Georgia now has a team in the field. I fear the sport faded out at Virginia, where it was started, if I am not mistaken, by a classmate of mine. Maryland plays the game as a major sport.

Recent athletic developments here show the need of lacrosse. Reasons: (1) It would use our three hundred thousand dollar stadium in the most beautiful season of the year; (2) It would pay; for once it takes hold, it sells the stands out (When I was in Canada twenty-five years ago, professional lacrosse outsold professional baseball; maybe it does still); (3) The comparatively inexpensive equipment of lacrosse and the absence of a weight requirement would make it especially available for intramural sport.

Very truly yours,
John M. Booker.

Classy Field Expected For State Track Meet Saturday

POLE VAULT, 220 MARKS IN DANGER

Youngsters Will Vie With Vets In Assault On Records; No Preliminaries.

Greensboro, April 29.—The annual North Carolina college conference field and track championships here Saturday afternoon are expected to draw the strongest field of performers ever assembled in North Carolina.

The seasoned veterans who made North Carolina track history last year and the year before will be out in greater numbers than ever before. A brief glance at the summary of last year's meet, won by Carolina, and a summary glance at the rosters of the college squads of this year tends to indicate this.

Sixty places were counted in the scoring of 15 events last year. The stars who won 40 of those 60 places—two-thirds exactly—will be in this year's meet. If that isn't enough, there will be back again this year the stars who took 11 of 15 first places last year.

These first place stars who will form the veteran brigade Saturday are Gay, Carolina, sprints; Brohard, Davidson, quarter-mile; McGinn, State, half-mile; Simon, Duke, two-mile; Whittle, Davidson, high and low hurdles; Carolina mile relay team; Dupree, Wake Forest, javelin; Roberts, Duke, high jump; and Kinsey, Wake Forest, broad jump.

The preponderance of veterans back doesn't mean, however, that the veterans are going to carry the field. The sophomores have been making vigorous assaults on the ranks of the veterans in early track campaigning in North Carolina, and many are expected to surpass even the veterans in their record-shattering quest.

A few examples are easy. Charlie Farmer, Tar Heel soph, has outrun all southern sprinters in sight this spring and done as low as 9.8 on the 100 and 21.2 on the 220-dash. Theron Brown, another Tar Heel soph, has bettered the southern discus record in practice throws and might get going easily enough. Brodie Arnold, Tar Heel vaulter, is another star who has had his "coming-out" only this spring. Arnold set a new southern indoor record of 12 feet 8, six inches better than the present state record.

Several features are to be introduced at this year's meet, including a relay for football stars, a high school meet to be run off in conjunction with the varsity meet, and the announcing of the whole program, event by event, over the University's broadcasting set, to be moved to Greensboro by the courtesy of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co. The whole of both high school and varsity meets will be run off Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1:45 o'clock, on what should undoubtedly be the biggest track feature ever seen in the state.

T. E. P. Crushes S. P. E.

With Ookie Neiman striking out 11 men in five innings, T. E. P. crushed S. P. E. 17-1 yesterday in an uninteresting game. T. E. P. blasted out 14 runs in its first time at bat, enough to win two ball games.

Sam Glaberson led the victors' attack with a perfect average of 4 for 4. Hirsh, Marpet and Cohen also batted well. The losers' lone run came on Merrill's long homer.

Boxing Practice

The annual period of spring boxing training will begin at four o'clock today in the Tin Can under the supervision of Odell Sapp, freshman boxing coach for the past year. Coach Sapp announces that practice will be held every day from four o'clock until five-thirty, except on days when baseball games and track meets are held here, on which days practice will be held from three until four. As many men as can possibly report are wanted—new men as well as all of last year's freshmen and varsity squads who are not engaged at present in some other sport.

Tar Babies Continue Triumphant March

The Tar Babies yesterday afternoon downed the State yearlings 8-7 in a very close game. The State nine bunched their hits in the seventh to make six runs and tie the score, but the Tar Babies came back in the eighth and made another run to win the game.

Dixon led the Carolina nine in hitting by getting a double and a single out of four times at the plate. His double in the eighth won the game by driving Whitehead in. Dixon also did good work in the field, having more "put-outs" to his credit than any other player on either team.

Goodman led the State nine by getting a triple and a double out of three tries.

Coach Cerney used several pitchers during the game. McNeill started the game, being relieved in the seventh by Scarboro. After one inning Scarboro was relieved by Adkins.

Wade, the State pitcher, was relieved by Rudisell in the eighth.

The lineups were as follows: Carolina—McNeill, p; Peacock, c; McCaskill, 1b; Ferebee, 2b; Powell, 3b; Whitehead, cf; Dixon, rf; Daniel, lf; and Riggs, ss. For State—Wade, p; Fuller, c; Freeman, 1b; Wood, 2b; Duke, 3b; Nelms, lf; Goodman, cf; Jeffry, rf; and Morris, ss.

The freshmen will play the Baby Deacons tomorrow at Wake Forest. The game is scheduled at 4 o'clock, the team leaving Chapel Hill at 12:30.

Beta Tennis Men Win

The Beta Theta Pi No. 1 tennis team easily triumphed over Sigma Epsilon yesterday afternoon by a score of 4-1, losing one doubles match by a forfeit when it had already won the first four matches played.

Draper, Beta Theta Pi, beat Blackwood 4-2, 6-2. Potter (B) won over Harrell 6-2, 6-0. Reed (B) won over Goodwin 6-0, 6-1. Draper and Potter (B) beat Harrell and Lawrence 6-1, 6-2. Blackman and Goodwin, Sigma Epsilon, won by forfeit.

Pika Racqueteers Lose

Pi Kappa Alpha lost to Delta Tau Delta yesterday by the score of 4-1 after putting up a hard fight in the singles. The work of Owens in the singles and doubles was outstanding while Blue featured for Pi Kappa Alpha.

Owens, Delta Tau Delta, won over Holt 6-3, 9-7. Scales, Delta Tau Delta, beat Williams 6-4, 6-3. Blue, Pi Kappa Alpha, nosed out Rollins 6-4, 6-4. In the doubles Blue and McCoy bowed to Owens and Scales 6-1, 6-2. Holt and Williams forfeited to Rollins and Armfield in the other doubles match.

NUMEROUS MARKS BROKEN AT PENN

Break One World's Record, Tie Another, and Set Seven Carnival Marks.

With a record-breaking list of entries competing, the University of Pennsylvania relays turned into an orgy of record-breaking, one world's mark being lowered, one being tied, and seven of the relay carnival marks being broken.

The Lakewood high school of Cleveland set a new world's standard in the interscholastic two-mile relay when their quartet of half-milers covered the distance in 8 minutes 16 1-5 seconds.

George Simpson, Ohio State sprinter and holder of the unofficial world's record for the 100, which he made with the aid of starting blocks, repeated his performance of last year when he covered the distance in 9 3-5 seconds, equalling the official world's record. This was done without the aid of starting blocks.

The University of Pennsylvania freshmen turned in one of the outstanding performances of the meet when they won the freshman one-mile relay championship of America in 3 minutes, 19 1-5 seconds, less than a second's time slower than the 3:18 2-5 set by Harvard in the varsity one-mile relay championship race. This also broke the carnival record.

Ohio State's quartet of Simpson, world's 100-yard record holder; Rockaway, world's 220 low hurdle record holder; Richards and Strother, set a new carnival record of 1:26 4-5 for the half-mile relay.

In the class B college mile relay, Colgate set a new meet record of 3:20 2-5. This was the race in which Carolina's team of Farmer, Gay, Nims and Weil were entered but did not compete.

Swarthmore set a new meet record of 3.27 flat in the class B Middle Atlantic states college relay.

In the interacademic one-mile relay, Haverford Prep School broke the old record of 3:34 1-5 set by themselves, setting up a new record of 3:31.1-5.

Eddie Hamm, Georgia Tech star and Olympic winner, leaped 25 feet 4¼ inches to better by almost a foot the 31-year-old record set by Morris Prinstein of Syracuse. However, his jump was almost seven inches shorter than the world's record, which he holds.

In the javelin, Leonard Friedman of Geneva College threw the spear 197 feet to break the meet record.

Barney Berlinger, University of Pennsylvania star and a member of America's decathlon team in the last Olympics, broke by approximately 161 points, the meet decathlon record set by him last year, winning the decathlon broad jump with a leap of 22 feet 6 inches, the shot with a 46-foot heave, the high jump with a jump of 6 feet ½ inch, the javelin with a throw of 174 feet 8 inches, the pole vault with a vault of 12 feet 6 inches, and gaining enough points in the other events to roll up a total of 7460.608 decathlon points to 6771.938, made by Spalding of Morgan College who was his nearest competitor.

D. K. E. forfeited to Chi Psi yesterday afternoon in their scheduled tennis match.

Zeta Psi forfeited to Chi Phi in their scheduled tennis match yesterday afternoon.

Pi Kappa Alpha forfeited to Delta Tau Delta in a scheduled game.

One Day Meet Saturday

The annual state track meet in Memorial stadium in Greensboro Saturday will be run off wholly Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1:45 o'clock, on the greatest afternoon's track program ever staged in the state. Previous meets have always taken up two days. This year's meet will not only be run off in one afternoon, but to it will be added the first Civitan meet for North Carolina high schools.

Whether left-handers have an advantage over right-handers in the different fields of sports is an open question, but it remains a fact that two left-handers walked off with all the honors in this year's North Carolina college tennis tourney. Hinkey Hendlin, Carolina sophomore, won the singles, then teamed with Phil Liskin to win the doubles. Both are portsiders.

34 Events For State Meet

Addition of the state track meet in Greensboro Saturday of the Civitan meet for state high schools gives a total program for the afternoon of 15 college events, 16 high school events, and three freshman events. The meet, to be run off beginning at 1:45 o'clock, is expected to be the most sensational afternoon of track ever held in North Carolina.

President Swain at one time granted the seniors the privilege of not attending the first class after breakfast.

SCHWENNING TO SPEAK TONIGHT

Professor of Business Administration To Speak To Taylor Society On "Scientific Personnel Management."

At the regular meeting of the University of North Carolina student branch of the Taylor Society, to be held this evening at 7 o'clock in Bingham hall, G. T. Swenning, associate professor of business administration will speak on "Scientific Personnel Management."

In his talk Dr. Schwenning, who has been intensely interested in personnel work for many years, will discuss the question of whether or not modern personnel management is paternalistic. This question is one that has come to the fore during the many recent discussions of the relations between labor and industry.

Dr. Schwenning is well qualified to speak on this subject, for he was director of the industrial relations department of Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., for four years, and for several years he has spent his summers visiting different industries to obtain first-hand information concerning the labor relations in them.

During the year 1925-1926 Mr. Schwenning was abroad doing research work on labor relations in both Europe and China. This period of research work was sponsored by the Rockefellow Foundation. In addition to spending some time in European countries and in China, Dr. Schwenning spent a month at the International Labor office of the League of Nations at Geneva.

During the past year Mr. Schwenning has done research work on the subject of paternalism in the southern industries, including textiles. A paper summarizing this work was presented by Mr. Schwenning before the North Carolina Club at one of its recent meetings.

The subject on which he will speak this evening is related to the general topic of paternalism in that he will discuss the question previously mentioned, whether or not modern personnel management is paternalistic.

Personnel management, on one branch of which Mr. Schwenning will speak this evening, is one of the several fields of work in which upperclassmen in the school of commerce can specialize. Dr. Schwenning is instructor of the courses in personnel work as well as of those in business administration.

The officers of the society state that the meeting will last only one hour, beginning at 7 o'clock. As the meetings of the Taylor Society are open to the public, anyone who is interested in the topic to be discussed this evening is invited to attend.

During the remainder of the quarter there will be two more meetings of the group. At one of these E. S. Draper, a landscape architect of Charlotte will speak on the planning of cotton mill villages, and at the other Thorndike Saville, professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering, will present one phase of power plant management.

Infirmary List

The local infirmary reports the following sick list: W. B. Dike, T. W. Breman and Elizabeth Ried, confined with colds, and O. S. Steinrich with a cut foot. The infirmary attendants were forced to send J. H. Shuford to Watts hospital in Durham Sunday evening because of an infected leg that had become too serious to be taken care of by the local attendants.

CAMPUS Y LEADERS RETURN FROM MEET

The eight representatives from the University to the Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. Officers Training Conference at Guilford College returned to the University Monday.

The meeting opened Saturday evening at 6 o'clock with an address by O. R. Magill, secretary of the students' southern region of the Y, which was followed by a speech of Miss Smith, national secretary of the Y. W. C. A.

The principal business of the meeting was the organization of the conference into discussion groups which were formed Sunday morning. The girls met in a group under Miss Smith while the boys were under the leadership of Mr. Magill.

After an address by Thomas A. Sykes of Greensboro, the officers gathered in groups, the presidents, the vice-presidents, etc. In these they discussed problems that had confronted them in their work. The leaders of these groups were Mr. Magill, Ed King of State, and Grady Leonard.

Sunday evening Rev. W. A. Stanberry of Durham delivered an address on the subject of "National Brotherhood."

Monday morning the fifth meeting of the Student Officers Training Conference of North Carolina was closed with the election of officers for next year and the finishing of uncompleted business. Five students from each of the Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. organizations throughout North Carolina attended the conference.

within 48 hours after he receives notice of the offense, he is automatically put on probation. He is given ten days to make good the worthless check to which he signed his name, and if he does not attend to the matter by the expiration of this time, he is suspended and must report to the student council.

By more stringent dealings with bad check offenders the new student council in cooperation with Mr. Williams hopes to reduce to as few as possible the number of students who are in this way careless with their finances. Frequently Mr. Williams receives letters from many different business organizations asking aid in collecting bills which have been made by their acceptance of college boys' checks. Quite a few students would be much embarrassed if they should head their names in cases like the following: The Philadelphia Neckwear Company wrote a letter to Dr. Harry W. Chase, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C., stating that Mr. Blank, a student in his university, had given that firm a bad check and that the company would appreciate it very much if he would attend to the matter; the manager of a certain hotel in New York City wrote the following to Dean Bradshaw: "I thought the students of the University of North Carolina were all honest, upright and decent fellows who did not rely on a working man to pay their expenses when they come to New York."

For many years University Prayers (the daily chapel period) was a half-hour after breakfast.

EASTMAN KODAKS FOR SCHOOL KIDS

Millions of American children whose 12th birthdays occur some time this year are anxiously awaiting Thursday, May 1, when the Eastman Kodak Company's gigantic offer of 500,000 free cameras goes into effect. The half-million cameras have been distributed among the thousands of Eastman dealers throughout the country and will be given to those children who become 12 years old this year, provided that the mother accompanies each child.

Chapel Hill children will be among the fortunate ones, as both the University Book Store and Students' Supply Store are well-stocked with the free cameras. The motto of the day, according to Eastman dealers, will be "first come, first served," until the supply is exhausted.

Photo-Phone Will Be Demonstrated Here

The General Electric Company will give a demonstration of its photo-phone Friday night, May 2, in 205 Phillips hall. The public will be permitted to view the demonstration.

A representative of the Philadelphia office of the company will show the apparatus to all who may be interested. The photo-phone is the actual equipment which is used to produce and reproduce sound pictures.

The unique feature of the apparatus to be demonstrated is that there is no actual mechanical production or reproduction of sound. All of this is done by light. The sound waves are recorded on the film and are reproduced from that by light.

JORDAN WILL SPEAK AT MATHEMATICS SEMINAR

At the meeting of the mathematics seminar this afternoon Dr. A. M. Jordan of the school of education will speak.

Dr. Jordan's address will be upon "The Theory and Application of the Coefficient of Correlation." This address is expected to be very interesting, for the subject concerns the application of mathematics to economic, social and psychological phenomena.

WOMEN ENCHANTED BY ROMANTIC KING

Dennis King, who has been hailed as the talking-singing screen's newest apostle of romanticism, is, above all, a gentleman.

While he was working on the production of "The Vagabond King" at Paramount's Hollywood studio, King was asked to tell his ideal of womankind.

"First of all," said the famous Broadway musical comedy singer, "she must be a blonde—that is she must have a blonde personality. Many brunettes have it."

Nothing could have been more typically chivalrous of Dennis King than those words. Blondes and brunettes alike will find flattery in them.

"The Vagabond King" is based on the operetta of the same name which ran for more than a season on Broadway. The original Rudolph Friml songs will be heard again when the picture shows at the Carolina today.

what it is presumed Congress intended to forbid.

"The provision of the Clayton Act which forbids local differences in prices has not been the subject of any significant litigation that has reached the supreme court. A variation in selling prices in different localities that is not within the exception or provise of the Clayton Act itself, is, it seems to me, always in derogation of the public interest."

Mr. Parker explained that the Federal Trade Commission Act declares that unfair methods of competition are unlawful, and it gives to the Federal Trade Commission the sole authority to enforce that provision. "What constitutes unfair methods of competition, so far as precise definitions are concerned," he said, "is not and can never be determined."

Dean Charles T. McCormick of the University law school presided at the lecture and introduced Mr. Parker.

A total of 12 degrees were conferred at the commencement of 1879.

PARKER FINISHES LECTURE SERIES

New York Lawyer Concentrates On Public Utilities in Last Address

Delivering the last of a series of three lectures here last night before the law school on the general subject of "Business and the State," Junius Parker, noted lawyer, discussed the due process clause of the fourteenth and seventeenth amendments, and their enforcement by the supreme court in limiting the states in the exercise of their police power, and in limiting the federal government and the states in the fixing of rates for railroads and other public utilities.

"The right of a state to engage in the active operation of business is broader than its right to regulate the charges on rates made by private persons engaging in the conduct of business," Mr. Parker said.

Discussing the governmental operation of business enterprises from two different points of view, Mr. Parker pointed out instances which seem to justify governmental operation.

"There was dissatisfaction with the operation of the railroads during the period that they were operated by the government as an incident of the war; but one must remember that we were intent on winning the war quickly and decisively at any cost," the speaker said.

"There have been, though, in peace times, instance after instance of extravagance, favoritism, 'playing politics,' and general inefficiency in public works constructed and maintained by municipalities, but the tendency toward state operation, certainly of public utilities, is not retarded but accelerated when the owners of public service companies go too far. And the more public service companies succeed in these contentions the more they accelerate the tendency toward government ownership and operation."

Playmakers Praised By Charlotte Paper

According to the latest press reports received here the Carolina Playmakers met with much success at their appearance in Charlotte last Friday night.

The Charlotte Observer of April 24, in regard to their presentation, says: "Dream Life of a negro, and the old age longing for the unknown; the urge for finer things in life on the part of a mill girl, and the martial ambitions of a mountain spinster—these themes, added to the masterful technique of the Carolina Playmakers, created a program at the Central high school auditorium last night that exceeds anything previously done by this company in their Charlotte appearances."

"Like a breath of fresh air from the Carolina hills, the three one-act plays of the Playmakers, North Carolina's contribution to America's advance in the drama, brought to the local audience a delightful presentation of home state people as they are, living and acting in characters that had a world vision."

The three plays presented were: Paul Green's "The No 'Count Boy," Loretta Carroll Bailey's "Black Water," and "Magnolia's Man" by Gertrude Wilson Coffin.

FOERSTER JOINS FACULTY EXODUS

Norman Foerster, for 15 years professor of English in the University, has accepted a call to the University of Iowa. He is to be director of a proposed school of letters, which will embrace the departments of Greek, Latin, romance languages, German, and English and will have the cooperation of the departments of history and philosophy, the school of fine arts, and the graduate school.

The plan of the school of letters is in line with a general tendency in universities to break down departmental barriers and coordinate learning. Its special object is to move gradually in the direction of the type of literary teaching and scholarship outlined in Professor Foerster's recent book, The American Scholar, published by the University of North Carolina Press.

DR. CAMERON IS TO PRESIDE AT STATE MEETING

The annual meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society and the North Carolina Academy of Science will be held at Duke University in Durham, May 9 and 10. Dr. Cameron of the University of North Carolina will preside over the meeting and L. B. Rhoades, secretary department of agriculture, Raleigh, will officiate as secretary.

No definite program has yet been made out, but the meeting is assured of a large number of papers from the various colleges and universities.

The year was one of activity and the dominant note of the pending meeting is expected to be given by the industrial chemists of the state who are expected to present a series of papers which will advise the academy of technical problems confronting the authorities and thus enrich the interest and aid of the academic workers in the state institutions.

A closer cooperation between the investigators is felt to be one of the important factors in the advancement, and the academy meetings are the best means of furthering this cooperation.

SWARTZ WORKING ON OIL PROJECT

By New Method Carolina Professor Intends to Discover Oil.

Working for the past year in collaboration with Dr. F. W. Lee, of the United States Bureau of Mines, Dr. J. H. Swartz, of the geology department, has practically perfected a method of determining the character, depth, dip, and direction of slope of geological structures which influence the accumulation of oil. After testing ore deposits in Canada and strata in Kentucky, the experimenters found it possible to locate ores, oil reservoirs, and, under favorable conditions, oil, itself. Oil has actually been discovered by the method in one place in Kentucky.

In brief, the process is as follows: with the use of radio batteries an electric field is created in the ground which, due to the presence of layers of rock, becomes distorted. By measuring the distortion, the resistivity of the strata may be calculated and from that the character of geological material present.

It is too early as yet, in the opinion of Dr. Swartz, to predict the commercial possibilities of the system since much experimental verification is yet to be done.

PRESS ANNOUNCES VOLUME OF VERSE

The University Press announces this week publication of its first book of verses, Released by Anne Blackwell Payne, young southern poet. This is the author's first book of collected verse.

Miss Payne was born in Washington, N. C., and, with the exception of the last few years, has spent most of her life in the south. Her work has appeared in the leading periodicals, newspapers, and anthologies, and her name is no doubt familiar to many.

In this little volume she has brought together the best of her verse, as well as some not published before, and has grouped them under "light lyrics," "sonnets," and "poems for a little child." The book has been very attractively bound.

BOB HOUSE WILL RETURN TO STAGE

Famous Opera Star of Other Days Will Lead Thorns and Orange Blossom Company.

(By Bob House)

It is a matter of great delight to me that the course of my life has led me back to the stage, especially since my return will be under the auspices of the Imperial Stock Company. It is a privilege to be associated with an organization that is internationally known for the high professional quality of its offerings, and for the note of moral uplift that runs through its repertory. The last reason, that of the moral uplift and self-sacrificing work for the public welfare, being my chief interest in the stock company. I sincerely want to congratulate the managers of the Imperial Stock Company on having secured such a noted actor for the part of Tommy Swift in the coming play.

In my first attempts in dramatics I was very active in operas. After a successful operatic career in which I sang such leading bass roles as Karl, the huntsman, in the well-known production, Snow-White, I entered the field of non-musical drama with the full consent of my former audiences in opera and my entire family and neighbors. There I was unusually successful in such roles as the comedy lead in the famous stage farce, Mr. Bob. I then turned my attention to Shakespearean productions. My fame by this time had become nation-wide, which did not in the least affect my modest character. At this time I reached perhaps my greatest success in Midsummer Night's Dream.

Under the stress of war, marriage, and the necessity for making a living, I threw my resources successively into the army, the public schools, historical work, and university administration. I am glad to say that the situation in these fields permits me now to turn at least part of my attention to the stage. It is an exceedingly opportune moment in the history of the theatre that a professional group of such superior quality as the Imperial Stock Company can enter the theatri-

Y BUILDING FILLING IMPORTANT PLACE IN STUDENT LIFE HERE

Students Center Daytime Activities Around "Y" Structure At Center of Campus; Has Different Aspect At Night.

(By Elbert Denning)

Few people ever realize the place the Y fills on the campus. The Y building during chapel period is the most popular "hang-out" place on the campus because most of the boys go there to loaf away the half hour set aside for freshman chapel. There are always several boys in front of the building; some talking in a group, others just standing there. There is always a steady stream of boys going in and coming out of the building jostling each other in the crowd.

The hall inside is crowded with boys who are waiting for the eleven o'clock bell to call them to class. Several boys are standing around the desk on the left talking to the man behind the counter. The long wooden bench on the right is crowded, and there is always some one moving around. In the left reading room there are several boys sitting around the room with their faces hidden behind magazines. In the right reading room there is a large number of boys either sitting around doing nothing or hastily glancing over the day's assignment that they did not have time to prepare the night before. Probably one or two boys will be playing checkers on the little checker tables provided by the members of the Y. M. C. A.

The Book Exchange, at the end of the hall opposite the front doors where cigarettes, candy, sandwiches, cold drinks, and school supplies are sold, is also always crowded. A group of boys is standing around the cold drink stand pushing, pull-

CAMERON SPEAKS BEFORE CHEMICAL ENGINEERS GROUP

Dr. Frank K. Cameron, professor of physical chemistry, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the University student branch of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers Tuesday evening in Venable hall.

At this meeting the newly-elected officers, who are to serve during the next school year, were installed. Those officers are: R. J. Ruble, president; Frank Thomas, vice-president; T. R. Taylor, secretary; and Adam Fisher, treasurer.

In his talk Dr. Cameron, who is faculty advisor of the University chapter of the institute, spoke of the work of the chemist and the engineer in industry and the definition that industry gives of these professions. He also recounted personal experiences and observations that have been made since he entered the field of chemical engineering.

During the remainder of the school year there will be two more meetings of the local branch of the institute. At each of these, papers prepared by student members will be presented.

PROFESSOR AIDS IN FOLK SERIES

Ralph Boggs, assistant professor of romance languages, is now preparing number ninety of a series of books published by the Folklore Fellows, an international organization. These books are published at the office of the group in Helsigfors, Finland. The Folklore Fellows are spread all over the world and its members are constantly unearthing and classifying new material. The book Mr. Boggs is now publishing is one on Spanish folk tales. He has just finished a pamphlet of the extension division here on folk lore in general which includes North Carolina tales.

Mr. Boggs, who came to this institution last fall from the University of Chicago, gave a course in folk lore last quarter in the department of comparative languages. He hopes to give another course at some future time. There is great opportunity for the gathering and classification of folk lore in North Carolina. Two students, working under Mr. Boggs, are preparing theses on folk lore for their doctor's degree, which they hope to get at commencement next June.

TEN NATIONALLY KNOWN ARTISTS COMPOSE GROUP

Six Dances Will End Social Season in "Burst-of-Glory."

(By Charles G. Rose, Jr.)

The final commencement dances this year, which will be given by the German Club, are scheduled for June 10, 11 and 12. These dances, which will be staged in the Tin Can, will probably be the best on the entire season's dance program.

Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, who have already been signed to play for the dances, are considered by many to be the most famous dance orchestra in this country. All the past winter the orchestra has been playing on an extended engagement for the entire winter season at the Roosevelt hotel in New York City. Besides having played at numerous engagements in many of the other large cities of the north, this orchestra is also quite famous throughout Canada.

Playing with the orchestra are the three Lombardo brothers. Guy, the leader, is the eldest and is an excellent violinist; Lebert is a cornetist, and also doubles on the drums and trumpet, while Carmen, the youngest, is a clever saxaphonist, singer and composer.

Another feature of the orchestra is the noted "Four Horsemen of Jazz," as they have been called. This quartet has sung for a number of Columbia records in the past few years.

In addition to having played at practically all of the society centers of the north and Canada, the Lombardo group has broadcast from many of the larger radio stations in the country. Stations WBBM, WJBT and WTAM are only a few of the stations that have broadcast the programs of this musical group, to say nothing of the numerous phonograph records that the orchestra has played for.

This orchestra, composed of ten men, has made but one change in its personnel in the past five years. The group is now made up of Fritz Kreisler, pianist; George Gownas, drummer; Weston Vaughn, banjo and tenor soloist; Jack Miles, trombone; Ben Davis, tuba; Larry Owens, feature saxaphonist; and the three Lombardo themselves.

Before coming here the Royal Canadians are to play for the University of Virginia at the final dances. The orchestra will remain on the Hill for three days and will leave immediately for a summer engagement in one of the larger resorts in Paris.

In order not to conflict with the summer school, the dances are to be given in the Tin Can instead of Swain hall. The Tin Can is to be divided into several compartments, one for the dancing floor, one for a smoking room, another for a dressing room, and a fourth for a tea room.

Another advantage in having the dances in the Can is the large parking space nearby. Heretofore there has been much confusion caused before and after the dances by couples going Philosophy, except so far as it enables one to bear losses with equanimity, is not a business asset.—Lord Riddell.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The Solution Of A Bad Problem

The student council is determined to do something about the most perplexing problem now confronting collegiate officials dealing with students. With this end in view President Greene and the Council following a conference with J. A. Williams of the dean of student's office, who handles bad checks for the University, adopted more stringent regulations governing the passing of bad checks by students here and throughout the state.

When a student has passed a check he is notified to make the check good within 48 hours and to report to the bad check committee. If there is no element of fraud involved usually a warning or at most bad check probation is the procedure. But if what is classed as carelessness or oversight becomes a habit punishment is imposed.

Youth with its reputation for carelessness and irresponsibility is likely to find forgiveness forthcoming much more quickly than those of more mature years. Such an attitude prevails here, but forgiveness is not a license to violate a state law. To face the problem frankly passing rubber checks is fraud and theft. Both are covered by statute in North Carolina and because the University officials have seen fit to handle the cases through regular University channels we should not take advantage of their leniency.

If there is an element of fraud involved vigorous action should follow. Persistent violation of the bad check rule should be treated as such and if punishment by the student council is not sufficient to cause the cessation of the practice then let the matter go into courts.

Our system is lenient. We should keep it so; but in doing so let us not forget that receiving something for nothing is theft and theft is well-governed by the statutes.

"Shaggy" Dancing

Many comments have been made here lately as to the type of dancing that has lately become popular on the "Hill." Some have tried to describe it as "Hulu" dancing, others as Indians on the war-path, and numerous other such appropriate titles have been bestowed upon this new-fangled hop.

It is true that the dancers on the floor are entitled to have a good time, but when their fun comes to such "hop-scotch," "war-whoop" prancing as has here lately taken hold on the campus, then it is about time that some preventative step be made and be made quick.

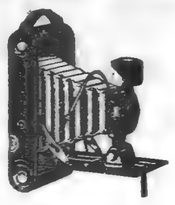
Of course there is probably no harm in the advent of this hop, but to those spectators or chaperons that have to watch such "stuff," it is absolutely nerve-racking. If one were to watch some of the promoters of this new style of dancing, he would think that he was witnessing a group of Indians preparing for the war-path. And if David Crockett were to come on the floor and see such prancing together with the painted faces, he would immediately begin organizing a band to clear the "colony" of its "red-skins."

But, leaving aside all of the fun, it is getting to be a serious problem and it is one that the German club is about to take in hand.

With the advent of this dancing, the one time grace in dancing is done away with. Formerly it was really pleasing to the eyes to see a dance, but since this late prancing has come into style, it could almost be said that watching a dance would drive one crazy with such "hop, skip, and jump" style that has lately come into its own.

Since, then, there are going to be a set of dances this week-end, it should be impressed upon the minds of these "new-found dance" advocators just how silly their "Hulu" dance really appears to a spectator. Of course that is probably the only reason that the "fluke" dancing was originated, but even that doesn't help to justify such actions.

The stepping needs no description, for those that are guilty of practicing it know well what they are doing. It is the hope of the German Club, and the committees in charge of the fraternity dances that such aforehand mentioned "hops" be done away with in the further dances on the "Hill."—P. H. D.



DISCOVERY OF SHRUB REWARDS LONG SEARCH

Wild sweet shrub bushes have been found growing again in the woods near Chapel Hill by Miss Josie Pritchard. Most of the sweet shrub plants growing in the arboretum and village were brought in from the woods many years ago. The old colored man who knew where these wild plants grew has been dead several years. Since his death the Chapel Hill botanists have been trying to find where these wild sweet shrub plants grow, but until now have been unsuccessful. They are very delighted at Miss Pritchard's discovery.

R. M. Grumman, head of the University extension division, will return today from Pinehurst, where he has, for the past two days, attended the State Medical Society meeting there.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

Two events worthy to be remembered have taken place this week. Both of them received due recognition in other sections of this paper. But since we claim that more people read colyums than any other part of the daily, we refer to these epoch-making happenings again.

1. The Phi Assembly "immortalized" three co-eds Tuesday night by receiving them into the folds of that august body. To our stunted gaze, they appear quite mortal to date.

2. The Di Senate went on record as favoring the immediate launching of a rejuvenation program. Beatty Rector, Big Dog of the senate, again spoke in terms of "revitalization."

At this juncture, we take it upon ourself to declare that the teeth of the League of Nations are false. We suggest, therefore, that the league be supplanted by a Home for Obsolescent Statesmen. There would be no change in purpose occasioned by the shift.

In our humble (though frequently expressed) opinion, the student federation movement is getting under way.

We note with rolled-up sleeves the annual advent of hot weather and, with a desire to be temporarily stricken with color-blindness, the bright-colored gingham dresses that have accompanied it.

We must apologize to our gentle readers. Some few weeks ago we published in this paper the results of a very intense study—entitled "The Reason of Man." Furthermore, we promised to follow this with a similar treatise, to be called "The Reason of Woman." Although we have done extended research of late (having actually gone down to Russell Inn), we have not thus far uncovered any evidence to show that there is any such thing as the reason of woman. We, therefore, table the matter indefinitely.

Many may be something of a degraded creature himself—but he wants his women to be of a different vintage. This fact reflects the essential nature of the species. Perhaps, that's the reason for the increasing number of old bachelors in this grand old commonwealth of ours.

Quoting from the scribal work of another and more fertile brain, "Glasses that fit inside the eye are the invention of Professor Heine, oculist of Kiel, Germany. The glass is very thin, being ground to the shape of the eye and fitted under the eyelid. They are designed especially for women."

As one interested in the welfare of the fairer sex, we call upon modern scientists to invent a muffler that will fit inside the mouth.

"Tar Heel Man Discovers Scandal in I Dorm," stated this paper recently. We've been searching the old campus organ daily for some account of what was done with the scandal. 'Twould never do to discover a scandal and then not remove it.

Our daily prayer: "Feed us unto fatness."

SLANT ON BACKSTAGE LIFE IN PICTURE TODAY

Something new in scenes of backstage life is promised in "Puttin' on the Ritz," the United Artists' all-dialogue musical extravaganza starring Harry Richman, which begins its local showing at the Carolina Theatre today.

This production contains not only the conventional glimpses of rehearsals and dressing rooms. It goes deeply into the lives of that interesting and curious band of folk—the professionals—shows them as human beings. It depicts them in poverty and riches, leads the audience to the little nooks and crannies of boarding houses and theatrical hotels which they call home, and makes them real personalities.

An actor without money is a particularly pathetic figure, says Richman, and he is made more so by the boastful conversation and jauntiness of manner with which he attempts to carry it off.

As a vaudeville team with many ups and considerably more downs, Richman, Joan Bennett, James Gleason and Lilyan Tashman offer some remarkable characterizations, with a great deal of comedy and many serious scenes.

Crane To Represent State In Washington

Dr. H. W. Crane will attend the first International Mental Hygiene Congress to be held in Washington, D. C., May 5-10. Dr. Crane, state psychologist, was appointed by Governor Gardner to represent this state at the congress at which from 22 to 26 countries will be represented.

Pranks Of Old Days

The story of University days during the Civil War and the incident of the cows in a class room calls to mind an occurrence happening several years after in the early seventies.

W. L. Britt, a student at the University, relates an interesting story of an unfortunate teamster who was hauling sand on the University property at this time.

It was against a University regulation to leave a wagon on the campus over night. The innocent wagoner, being unfamiliar with this rule, made the grave mistake of leaving his wagon and harness in front of the library one night.

To his surprise the following morning he found his wagon and harness nicely placed on top of East building. The students received five dollars to help him get his wagon back where he could use it again.

Denishawn Dancers Coming

According to Professor F. H. Koch, plans have just been completed to have Ruth St. Dennis and her Dennishawn Dancers appear here. They will be here Thursday evening, May 24, at the Kenan Memorial stadium under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers and the American Association of College Women.

The company of players is of international reputation.

GRAHAM SPEAKS MONDAY

Frank Graham will be the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the Pre-Law Association next Monday night at 7:30 on the second floor of the Law building. Mr. Graham's subject has not yet been announced.

At this meeting some bibliographies, containing a list of suitable books to read as prerequisites for the study of law will be distributed by Miss E. Elliott, librarian.

BUILDINGS in Which You Take Pride

Drawing of the Coughlin Campanile at South Dakota State College, Brookings, S. D. Perkins and McWayne, architects

ON THE CAMPUS, where class buildings and memorial structures are so often distinguished by their noble form, floodlighting equipment serves to prolong the enjoyment of their beauty and to enhance pride in the institution. » » Such an application is made for the new 165-foot campanile at South Dakota State—magnificent gift of an alumnus. Electrically operated chimes sound the hours and are heard in concerts. At night, shafts of light from General Electric floodlighting projectors effect a picture of superb beauty done in the school colors and white. From the air, the tower is identified by the beam from a G-E airway beacon surmounting the floodlighted dome. » » Thus G-E equipment plays its part in promoting progress and fine appreciation. Back of every G-E product is an organization in which college-trained men are largely responsible for the planning, production, and distribution.

Expect Numerous New Marks At State Meet

Whittle, Farmer, Barkley, Simon, Gay and Others Look Good for State Contest.

HIGH SCHOOL MEET ALSO

Several new records are expected to be set at the annual North Carolina College Conference Field and Track championships at Greensboro Saturday afternoon.

Such a conclusion is easily arrived at. The men who took 40 of 60 places in last year's meet will be shooting at the records again, the better off for another year's work and experience. The new stars will include such youngsters as Charlie Farmer, sprinter, and Brodie Arnold, vaulter, who have already bettered state marks.

Farmer has twice equalled the southern record of 21.2 for the 220-yard dash, and is almost certain to lower Currie's state mark of 21.6. With a fast start, he might conceivably equal Currie's mark of 9.6 for the 100-yard dash, but this is a time seldom done.

Gay, Carolina's converted quarter-miler, has done as low as 50.6, pushed closely by his teammate Weil, and either might speed to a new record in the quarter-mile, now held at 50.8 by Erwin of Duke.

In the half-mile, McGinn, of State, the present record holder with a mark of 1 minute 58.6 seconds, has been running around that time consistently all season, and might easily lower his own mark. Minor Barkley, Carolina ace, who has been averaging two minutes regularly for the event, is likewise a good bet.

Barkley is another prospect for a new mile mark, he having beaten Paul Rekers, Penn State's I.C.A.A.A.A. champ, in a 4:26.6 mile, when the state record of Galen Elliott is 4 minutes 23.4.

Simon of Duke has been good all season and might lower his own 9 minutes 57 second record on the two mile.

Whittle of Davidson has equalled the state record of 15.3 seconds on the high hurdles, but the 24.4 state mark on the low hurdles, set by Moore of Carolina five years back, looks fairly safe.

The state marks in the javelin and shot look fairly safe, but in the other field events Theron Brown of Carolina has bettered the state discus mark in practice throws, Brodie Arnold of Carolina has vaulted 13 feet which is 10 inches over the state mark, George Bagby of Carolina has high jumped 6 feet 3-4 inches and within one inch of the state mark, and McCall of Davidson has equalled the state broad-jump record of 23 feet 1-2 inch, set by Kinsey of Wake Forest, who will be back this year.

Carolina should lower the 3 minutes 28 seconds for the mile relay, the Tar Heel team having turned in a mark of 3:24.7 for a new Georgia Tech relay record.

After all it seems the dopesters are right when they predict for Saturday afternoon the most sensational track meet ever held in the state.

Looking Them Over

by

Browning Roach

Much adverse comment on the part of football fans was elicited by the football schedule undertaken by Duke University last fall. Many were inclined to give the Blue Devils the raspberries for attempting to compete with such teams on the gridiron as Pitt, Villanova and the Navy. It seems that the Devils have the laugh the other way now. When Duke departed on a northern trip this week with a solid week of games booked with such baseball teams as Penn, Villanova, Princeton, Fordham, N. Y. U. and Navy, there were plenty of sportsmen who were just itching for a chance to warble "I told you so."

With victories over Penn and Villanova in the first two starts of the week, even the most radical of the Duke knockers cannot fail to accredit the Blue Devils with having a fair nine. Some who wish to save Carolina's face may, after the 14-5 drubbing of last Saturday, even admit that Duke has a good team. Personally, we'd like to see a few pitcher-slaughtering sluggers like Kistler on the Tar Heel lineup. This lusty bat-slinger didn't do so well in the Villanova game—ten bases on five trips to the plate. A single, a double, a triple and a homer. We wonder who keeps this man in bats—one poor little stick couldn't possibly stand all that punishment.

As a personal favor will somebody please drop a copy of the Literary Digest for June 15, 1929, around at the Tar Heel office? We plead a lamentable lack of knowledge on the subject of lacrosse and our sudorific efforts at a typewriter leave us scant energy for journeying over to the library files and effecting an investigation, as per Mr. Booker's suggestion.

While confessing complete ignorance on the theories and practice of the game, we admit to having been a spectator at one or two lacrosse contests and the play possesses somewhat of a thrill even to the uninitiated—enough that we'd like to see it added to the catalog of athletic events on the campus. The name lacrosse implies a traditional prestige surpassed only by that of polo. Georgia and Maryland are, apparently, the only institutions in the south which have taken up lacrosse with any degree of enthusiasm. As to its being a paying proposition from the point of view of the University athletic association, that is problematical. But as an intramural and general campus sport it has its appeal.

For the benefit of some of those out-of-state undergraduates who have been misinformed, we'd like to assert—upon ample authority—that Pika is not a southern dialectical corruption of the word piker.

Back in those days when freshmen were wild and wooly, and hazing was not regarded as an expression of puerility, a freshman is said to have fired upon an indiscreet soph who was attempting to haze him. We hear also, from less reliable sources than the Daily Tar Heel, that this ungrateful act of the freshman roused the ire of the sophomore, and the latter proceeded to pluck the bullet from his ribs, fling it into the teeth of the bloodthirsty freshman and continue with his hazing in earnest.

FROSH TRACKMEN NOSE OUT DUKE BLUE IMPS 66-60

Cordle Features Meet With Close Victory Over Bray in Two-Mile.

The Tar Baby trackmen invaded Durham Tuesday afternoon to hand the Duke Blue Imps a 66-60 licking in a meet full of close contests and thrilling finishes. Fulmer of Duke was the individual star of the day, taking first in three events and second in another to lead the high scorers with 18 points. Archie Davis was Carolina's high scorer, taking first in the shot and discus and second in the 120-yard high hurdles, scoring 13 points in all.

The best race of the day was the two-mile run, in which Cordle, diminutive Tar Baby, trailed closely upon Bray of Duke until the last straightaway was reached, and then unleashed a burst of speed which carried him home the winner by two yards in the fast time of 10:23.

Both the 100 and 220-yard dashes were closely contested, Fulmer beating out Drane in a driving finish both times.

In the one-mile run, Jensen, closely followed by Jones, covered the distance in 4 minutes 36 seconds, the fastest freshman mile time recorded in North Carolina this season.

100-yard dash—Fulmer (D), Drane (C) and Chapman (D). Time, 10 3-5 seconds.

One-mile run—Jensen (C), Jones (C) and Lewis (D). Time, 4:36.

220-yard dash—Fulmer (D), Drane (C) and Chapman (D). Time, 23 2-5.

120-yard high hurdles—Brownlee (D), Davis (C) and Stafford (C). Time, 16 4-5 seconds.

440-yard run—Mitcham (C), Watkins (C) and Coombs (D). Time, 53 seconds.

Two-mile run—Cordle (C), Bray (D) and Hubbard (C). Time, 10:23 1-5.

220-yard low hurdles—Stafford (C), Fulmer (D) and Brownlee (D). Time, 27 3-5.

880-yard run—Jensen (C), Jones (C) and Watkins (C)—triple tie. Time, 2:05 4-5.

Pole vault—Tie between Martindale (C), Taylor (D) and Ripley (D) at 10 feet 6 inches.

Broad jump—Fulmer (D), Lindeman (C) and Colley (D). Distance, 20 feet 3 inches.

High jump—Colley (D), first; tie between Stafford (C) and Hamlet (C) for second place. Height, 5 feet 8 inches.

Shotput—Davis (C), Dorson (D) and Miles (D). Distance 34 feet 11 3-4 inches.

Discus—Davis (C), Dorson (D) and Hodges (C). Distance, 107 feet 6 1-2 inches.

Javelin—Taylor (D), Tellman (D) and Brownlee (D). Distance, 138 feet.

Pick Competent Timers

With indications for a number of record-breaking performances at the state track meet in Greensboro Saturday afternoon, officials have taken precautions to secure the most competent staff of officials possible to time the flying athletes. Dr. Hesler of the University of Tennessee, who will be the timer, has served in a similar capacity for such important meets as the Georgia Tech relays and the Southern Conference meet. J. V. Mulligan of Washington, D. C., who will be starter, has filled that job at the Penn relays, the Southern Conference indoor games and at many important meets.

FORFEITS

Sigma Delta forfeited to A. T. O. in a scheduled game yesterday afternoon. This gives A. T. O. three wins and no defeats.

Delta Sigma Phi forfeited to Kappa Sigma yesterday afternoon in a scheduled game.

STUDENTS BUILD CODE SET FOR FORTY CENTS

For the small sum of 40 cents, which was divided between the two of them, E. L. Lowery and M. Gippin have rigged up a pair of wireless sets with which to signal from the fourth floor of Ruffin to the corresponding floor of Mangum. Sending and receiving sometimes far into the night, the two students have, since installing the apparati Friday night, practically learned the international Morse code. An arrangement of mirrors has been designed to simplify the process of observing the sender's light bulb.

TAR HEEL TRACK SUPREMACY MAY PASS SATURDAY

Finest State Track Program Will Be Offered in Greensboro on Saturday.

Can the University trackmen continue their unbroken eight-year rulership over North Carolina track?

That question will be answered at the annual North Carolina college conference field and track championships at Greensboro Saturday afternoon and the answer promises to provide a mighty interesting track program for the Epicurean sports fan.

Coach Bob Fetzer took over the track reins at Carolina back in 1921, and in 1922 the Tar Heels started knocking down state titles. A great line of distance stars—Elliott, Pritchett, Henderson and the rest—led the point-parade, and last year the University's string of straight state titles mounted to eight.

The 1930 team to defend that record at Greensboro Saturday may be fighting the odds. The great array of distance aces is gone. Captain Nims, University record-holder for the quarter-mile, and Creighton Wrenn, two-miler, are definitely out with injuries. Bill Perry and Ty Reid, the Tar Heels' best high hurdlers, may be out.

Can the Tar Heels beat those odds? The question is hard to answer. On paper, even without the unusual distance strength, the Tar Heels have a better-rounded team than in recent years.

Bagby in the high jump; Arnold, Neiman and Ruble in the vault; Farmer in the sprints; Slusser in the low hurdles—these men make the Tar Heels strong in events in which the Tar Heels of other years lacked power.

THE WORDS on the back of the package still mean what they say. No "extras," which do not contribute to the quality of the smoke, are included in the price of Camels. Just the utmost smoke-enjoyment that modern science can put into a cigarette.

That statement was on the first package of Camels manufactured and has been on every one of the billions of Camel packages sold from that day to this. When it was first written, other cigarette manufacturers were giving away flags, pictures of actresses, pictures of ball players—almost anything that would make the smoker think he was getting something extra for his money. The makers of Camels believed the smoker wanted a cigarette sold strictly on its merits, with all of its cost put into quality—a cigarette made of such excellent tobaccos—so perfectly blended—so mellow—so fragrant—that it would win its own way.

The vast popularity of Camels is a tribute to that four-square policy.

HEAD OF PHYSICS DIVISION RETURNS

Dr. Stuhlman Attends Meetings Of Physical Society and Research Council.

Dr. Otto Stuhlman, chairman of the physics department, returned from Washington Monday morning where he attended meetings of the American Physical Society and the National Research Council, April 25, 26 and 27.

At the meeting of the American Physical Society on Friday and Saturday, Dr. Stuhlman represented the physics department of the University. Two papers, the results of work done by Dr. Stuhlman and M. D. Whitaker, M. L. Braune and O. P. Hart, were read.

The program of the meeting of the American Physical Society, held in the Bureau of Standards, was a departure from the usual in that the type of papers read was divided into two phases. These phases consist of papers dealing with theories and of papers of a practical scientific type. Of the 106 papers read, 21 were of the latter type. The titles of the reports varied between such imposing subjects as a new explanation of the Michaelson-Morley-Miller Relativity experiment to such theoretical subjects as the life of the metastable mecurical atom in which durations of time are measured to less than one-hundredth of a millionth of a second.

Sunday morning Dr. Stuhlman represented the American Physical Society in the annual meeting of the American Research Council.

COLLEGE ALUMNI PLAN CHRISTIAN MEETINGS SOON

A group of about 60 young alumni, representing 15 different colleges and universities, who are now numbered among Charlotte's roll of business and professional men, gathered at the Charlotte Y. M. C. A. for a luncheon yesterday given them by the southern regional office of the student Y. M. C. A.

The luncheon was sponsored by a local committee composed of Francis Clarkson of Carolina, chairman, Morgan B. Speir, Jr., of Davidson, Lucian J. Dale of State, J. Spencer Bell of Duke and John R. Purser, Jr., of Carolina. These men furnished lists of the other alumni from their respective schools who are now working in Charlotte and who have graduated since the war. The printed invitation sent to the list thus compiled explains in brief the purpose of the meeting.

The invitation read as follows: "You are cordially invited to attend a luncheon at the Charlotte Y. M. C. A. building on Tuesday, April 29, at 1 o'clock, to discuss the present moral, social and religious situation among North Carolina college men and school boys with particular reference to the work of the student Christian Association movement. Addresses will be delivered by Bishop Penick of Charlotte and Harry F. Comer of the University of North Carolina. After the addresses opportunity will be given for questions and discussion."

A similar meeting is now being set up with the several groups of college alumni in Durham for a luncheon at the Washington Duke hotel next Wednesday, May 7. Victor Young, a prominent member of Carolina's younger sons in Durham, will be chairman of the meeting.

Miss Strobach Is To Direct E.C.T.C. Show

Beginning Monday, May 5, Miss Nettina L. Strobach, state representative of the bureau of community drama, will direct the final rehearsals of a four-act romantic comedy, "Mice and Men," by Madaline Riley, which is to be given by the senior class of Eastern Carolina Teachers College, May 8 and 9, in Greenville.

Last fall, Miss Strobach was the supervising director of William Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," which was also presented by the E. C. T. C. girls.

Change Office Hours

The office hours of the administrative offices of the University have been changed from the hours of 9 to 5 to those of 8:30 to 4:30.

Dr. Harold Meyer of the University social science department will address the Vance county teachers' meeting at Henderson next Saturday, May 3. His tentative subject is "Modern Trends in the Home."

Y Building Filling Important Place In Student Life Here

ing, and yelling for drinks. There are a few boys who hang around in front of the candy counter waiting to be served, and many more boys who stand in front of the counter at the rear of the room purchasing various things or who wait patiently for one of the several clerks, who dash around behind the counters to get the articles called for.

The Y Building Late at Night

The Y building at night is quite a contrast from the Y building during chapel period in the mornings. No one stands around on the outside. The doorway is never crowded, and one enters without being pushed into the hall as in the morning.

The hall is deserted and the desk on the left stands like a lone sentinel. Probably it is quieter in there than in one's own room when one has some "heavy" studying to do. The right reading room is rarely deserted early at night. Two boys sit around the checker tables in deep scientific study. They are always so interested in their games that they do not notice anyone. They play on as if the building is a castle and they themselves kings.

The place even becomes uncomfortably quiet. One always has a strange feeling—a feeling that the building is going to fall in on you or that something similar is going to happen.

Plans are also under way for having some sort of cooling device which will add greatly to the enjoyment of the dances.

For further preparation, the Tin Can is to be very attractively decorated and in this way the customary bareness of the building will be covered. Devices are also being installed which will remedy the acoustics of the building such that the music will be unmarred.

The first dance of the finals is to be Tuesday night, June 10, and will last from 9 until 1. Three more dances will be given Wednesday: a morning dance from 11:30 to 1:30, one in the afternoon from 4 to 6, and a night dance from 9 until 1. On Thursday, June 12, the dance program will consist of a morning dance at the usual time and the final dance of the set to be given that night from 9 to 2. It has been planned that an afternoon dance be given by some of the local fraternities, and for that reason no afternoon dance has been scheduled by the German Club.

These dances, which will be the last ones before the beginning of the regular summer school dances, will be attended by persons from all over the state, and the German Club is making preparations for an unusually large crowd. Without an exception these commencement dances this year can be classed as the biggest feature of the entire state's dance season.

Freshmen will be permitted to attend these dances, which are the first that this class has been allowed to attend. It is at this time of the year that numerous freshmen join the German Club, and all of those that are planning to make application for membership will watch the Tar Heel for further announcements which will be made concerning membership.

cal field which has been so delightfully stimulated by such amateur groups as the Carolina Playmakers. If I may venture to speak for the management and professional personnel of this company, they consider themselves in no way competing with organizations on an amateur plane. They feel with modesty, but with a sense of pride in their long years of professional training, that the slightly heightened tone of professionalism, which they thus bring to the support of the theatre, may be conducive to the furtherance of art in this district. Certainly they extend the hand of fellowship to their confreres in the amateur field. It is the proud boast of this company that their productions have never brought the blush of shame to the most modest cheek and certainly our productions invite inspection by the most fastidious. It is something with this high and most moral resolution that I announce my return to the professional stage.

I should like to add that I am open to engagement in addition to my major work for inter-act musical specialties of pleasing charm. My wife, however, forces me to state that a suitable place for rehearsals will have to be furnished other than my Chapel Hill home.

FLOWER SHOW IS GIVEN BY WOMANS CLUB IN TIN CAN Brilliant and Elaborate Display Of Spring Flowers Is Put On By Ladies.

PRIZES A R E AWARDED

Many persons from this village and also from out of town attended the flower show put on by the Woman's Club yesterday in the Tin Can. Much interest was shown in this annual occasion, and generous contributions were made. Special prizes were given by various business concerns of the town and also from outside.

Along the sides of the Can the cut flowers were arranged in beautiful display. The seats of the Can served as a system of benches affording an unobstructed view of the flowers. Among the flowers in these exhibits were porch boxes of ferns, window boxes and vases containing all colors and species of anchusa, cowslip, ragged robin, pyrethrum, violets, valeriana, tulips, primrose, pansies, phlox, poppies, verbina, and many others.

On the opposite side of the building were displayed bush and climbing roses, weigela, narcisus, lupin, sweet william, ferns and cactus. Near the rear on both sides were floor landscapes made very realistic by artificial lakes and stone walls.

At the extreme back a formal garden was erected with stone birdbaths and flower pots made from stone by hand. The furnishings for this garden were furnished by local and out-of-town firms.

The center of the hall contained plants from the University department of botany. The most of these were tropical plants, such as the rubber plant of India, crown of thorns from Madagascar, palms, cactus, cocoanuts, tangerine, banana and others.

A part of the space was taken up by exhibits of luncheon and formal dinner sets. These were decorated with colored candles and flowers to match the different colored candles.

On the walls were hung living flowers in picture frames to give the effect of still life pictures.

A special feature of the exhibit was a collection of antiques and restorations by the buildings department. This was composed of old relics of furniture repaired and made over by the buildings department. The old pieces were gathered from various homes in Chapel Hill.

Another interesting feature was the table landscapes arranged by different persons in the vicinity. The midget golf company contributed a very realistic reproduction of a lake in the depths of a thick forest. Dr. W. C. Coker gave two displays of homes and gardens, and the Kiwanis club also contributed a table landscape. Of several from the Chapel Hill grammar school the most interesting was a conception of the Zinderneuf Fort as described in Beau Geste.

Arrested for Theft

Joe Strowd was arrested very early Tuesday morning at his home. This colored person had been under suspicion of stealing for quite some time, but no arrest had been made.

Seniors To Meet

The final smoker of the senior class will be a banquet sponsored by members of the executive committee and the class president in Swain hall at 9:00 o'clock Monday night.

Such business as final arrangements for the senior dance, which will be held May 16, the selection of senior regalia, and plans for commencement will be transacted.

The speaker has not been definitely selected.

THREE FINES FOR TEN ROUNDS OF CHICKEN FIGHTING

Recorder's Court Listens To Usual Number of Volstead Cases.

A ten-round feature bout on an excellent card of chicken fights was unceremoniously interrupted Easter Monday when officers snapped handcuffs on the wrists of J. L. Poole, H. L. Weaver and E. F. Killian, all white, and promoters of the show. Poole and Killian were fined $5 dollars each for fostering feathered-fowl fights, and Weaver was $10 poorer when he walked out of the court room.

Steadman Adkins failed to direct his car down the street in the shortest distance between two points, and was consequently arrested for driving while under the influence of whiskey. Adkins was unable to appear in court, however, due to the fact that he was crowned on the head with a rock thrown by one Horace Jones. The case was postponed.

The sensitive noses of officers Blake and Wright detected an intoxicating odor issuing from the hip-pocket of Elmo Taylor. Taylor was invited to attend court session next Monday.

Charles Farrington, Eugene Cotton and McKenley Stone celebrated the commencement exercises of a public school with possession of whiskey, public drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Their three-fold dissipation resulted in suspended sentences and a bill for one-third of the court costs.

Joe Black is serving six months on the roads merely because inquisitive policemen found six pints of Orange county corn in his overcoat pocket.

W. G. Fields convinced the judge that he was not guilty of giving a worthless check to the Model Market.

Lewis Austin, colored, starting out on an early career at a watch racketeer, was apprehended for swiping a timepiece from Floyd Austin. As Lewis is only 15 years of age, he was ordered to appear in juvenile court Monday. His charge is more serious now, as the watch has stopped running since the theft.

The bevy of beauties pictured above are representative of the numerous members of the fair sex who will invade Chapel Hill during the week-end to participate in a set of three dances, which promise to surpass in glamour all previous social activities of the quarter.

FACULTY TO GIVE DRAMA TONIGHT

"Thorns and Orange Blossoms" Is Romantic Conception Of Life.

Under the direction of Wilbur Daniel Steele and Paul Green, a group of University faculty members and townspeople will give a benefit performance of Bertha M. Clay's celebrated melodrama of the 1880's, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," in the Playmaker theatre tonight and tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Howard Mumford Jones, whose portrayal of Joe Morgan, the drunkard, in "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room," stands as one of the greatest triumphs in the history of the drama in Chapel Hill, will have the role of the villainous Carstone.

The troupe organized by Green and Steele is called "The Imperial Stock Company."

Music and novelties—ranging from "Over the Waves Waltz" and "Home Sweet Home" down to "Four Little Blackberries" and "Don't Swat Yer Mother, It's Mean"—will be given between acts and will add much to the sentimentality.

The production of this play in Chapel Hill is similar to what is being done by Christopher Morley in Hoboken, N. J., where he has been presenting "The Black Crook," and other plays, and also to what is being done in London. "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" is a very sophisticated melodrama of the English nobility of the 1880's, and was very popular at that time.

Those in the cast include Howard Mumford Jones, Harry K. Russell, W. D. MacMillan, Cornelia Love, R. B. House, Frances Stratton, Russell Potter, George McKie, W. A. Olsen and Jesse McCoy.

DEBATING TEAM GOES TO BOSTON

The University debating team leaves today for Boston for the contest with Boston University on Sunday. Those who will rep- Sunday. Representing Carolina are J. M. Baley, G. P. Carr and John Wilkinson. The Tar Heel debaters will uphold the negative side of the question, "Resolved, That the nations of the world should adopt some plan of complete disarmament of all forces, except those which are needed for police purposes." This will be a return debate with the Boston University team they having been entertained here on April 19. At that time our debaters supported the affirmative side of the disarmament question and won. It was a very hotly contested debate and the first that the Boston forensic artists lost this year.

PARKER HONORED BY KAPPA ALPHA

Junius Parker, an alumnus of the University and of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity, was entertained by the local chapter at an informal luncheon at the Carolina Inn Wednesday.

In addition to the guest of honor, the following were present: Dr. E. W. Knight, professor of Education, J. de R. Hamilton, Jr., president of the local chapter, William Lindsay, Arthur Little, Jack Ward, Frank Howell, Billy Trotter, Gene Wells, Steve Millender, Ed Mann, Hugh Lobdell, Bill Taylor, Alfred Hamilton, Bill Oliver, Henry Redding, Wriston Carpenter, John Herbert, Sam Peace, Sam Cromartie. Mr. Parker spoke briefly of the days when he was a student at Carolina, comparing collegiate life of 1889 with that of the present day.

GOLDEN FLEECE TO TAP TUESDAY

Ten Men To Be Honored at Solemn Ceremony in Methodist Church.

The speaker for the annual tapping ceremonies of the Order of the Golden Fleece will be Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, president of the University, according to an announcement by Fleece officials.

The tapping is set for Tuesday, May 6th, and will take place in the Methodist church, which it is hoped will be large enough to accommodate the crowds which annually turn out for the affair.

President Chase's Fleece address will be one of his last appearances as head of the University. This fact, added to the interest of the campus in the selection of men for membership in the Order, and the picturesque character of the ceremony, will make the tapping this year one of the most interesting in the history of the Fleece.

The speaker last year was Governor O. Max Gardner. At the conclusion of his address, Governor Gardner was tapped for membership in the Order. President Chase is himself an honorary member of the Golden Fleece.

Following a period of intense interest and speculation last year ten men were picked. These men were tapped in Memorial hall by gowned and hooded figures who stalked up and down the aisles, suddenly pouncing one by one upon the men selected. The active members of the order, assisted by the Fleecemen tapped in other years who are still on the campus, will make the selection of men to be elected this year.

MAY FROLIC OF SIX FRATS WILL BEGIN TONIGHT

Three Dances Will Be Given Tonight To Start Off Colorful Week-End.

"13" CLUB TO GIVE FORMAL

Three dances are to feature the dance program for tonight, the first night of a big week-end of dances. The three dances are the "13" club dance at the Carolina Inn from 6 to 9, the first dance of the May Frolics in the Bynum gymnasium from 9 to 1, and the annual spring dance of the local Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity at the Washington Duke hotel from 10 to 2.

The first dance of the May Frolic, which is being staged by six of the fraternities on the Hill, will probably be the main number on the program. Each of the six fraternities have invited from 20 to 30 girls to the dances, and a large crowd is expected by the committee.

This first May Frolic dance is to be given in the Bynum gymnasium, and the music for the occasion is to be rendered by the Florida Rhythm Ramblers. This orchestra is composed of negroes and is returning from a winter's engagement at the Tampa Yacht Club.

The gymnasium will be decorated as a seaside cabaret in a foreign port. The orchestra will be dressed in sailor costumes and will play from the end of a weather-beaten wharf, while the walls of the hall are to be covered with oriental trophies.

Art Sickles, representing the Sigma Chi fraternity, is chairman of the dance committee, and is assisted by representatives from the five other fraternities giving the dance. The entire committee is composed of Marion Follin, Beta Theta Pi; Moseley Fonvelle, Phi Delta Theta; Dail Holderness, D. K. E.; Willis Henderson, Sigma Nu; Charles Lee Smith, Zeta Psi; and Art Sickles, Sigma Chi, chairman.

Another dance which will be given tonight is the Sigma Phi Sigma dance in the Washington Duke hotel from 10 to 2. Preceding this dance there will be a banquet given by Carl Griggs, adopted son of President and Mrs. Chase, to the Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity.

Music for this dance will be played by Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra.

The third dance of the afternoon is to be a twilight dance staged at the Carolina Inn by the local "13" club. This dance is to be given from 6 to 9 o'clock and will be strictly formal.

As has been customary in the past, this dance is to be given by the newly elected members of the club. It is to be the first social affair given by the club this year. Alex Mendenhall and his Carolina Tar Heels are to render music for the occasion.

Chauncey Royster, chairman of the "13" dance committee, says that numerous bids have been mailed out and a large number of girls is expected for the occasion. Other members on the committee are: Bert Haywood, president of the club, and Tom Shelton, secretary and treasurer.

The newly-elected members of the "13" club in whose honor the dance is being given are: Bill Draper, Beta Theta Pi; Ted

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The fact that a form of government is intended to make a Democracy is not enough to make it one.—Richard S. Childs.

A Matter of Student Pride

The work being done by a committee selected by the president of the student body to form a North Carolina Federation of Students should be a matter of pride for every Carolina student. It is the first constructive work yet done to bring together in a compact organization the senior institutions of this state, and with 19 such institutions the committee has faced no easy task. Those interested in the work know that little will be realized in the first few years of the organization. There are too many problems which the federation must face for any real benefit to be realized this year.

But it is for the future that the organization is being perfected. Those of the freshman and sophomore classes will realize far more than those of the upper classes the benefits to be derived from a student federation; and it is for them to learn what it is all about. Too many are inclined to scorn the efforts of those fostering the movement. They, perhaps, realize that student enthusiasm is short-lived and that too often in the past such movements have been born only to be prematurely sent to the grave because of disinterestedness and scorn.

We think it is to be different this year. Those interested have not played with the idea as a new toy but have devoted their energy and time to it as with a great task. And it is a great task. Unifying the student bodies of 19 North Carolina institutions into a student federation is a task seldom undertaken without forethought. But results are showing. The preliminary work is near completion. It is now the time for the student body to demonstrate its interest and its pride in the magnificent work of the committee.

There Should Be An Honor System Vote

Many of us are doubting the advisability of retaining the honor system in the University. We see many students violating their pledges during quizzes without feeling any the worse for it. To them the honor system is an old custom, dear to their predecessors, which has been handed down to them. They do not feel the pride in it which every student in the University should have. The honor system has been forced upon them without their consent and they have no scruples about violating it.

An honor system should spring from the desire of the student body itself and should only be kept when students feel they want it and will uphold it. At present, most of us feel we have been given the system and that we have nothing to do with keeping it here. The honor system should be put to a vote of the student body each year as to whether it should be retained. The students of the University would then take greater pride and enforce it better if they knew it was they, themselves, who decided to keep it. Let us have a vote on the question next fall.—A. V. L.

Exodus From The Faculty

Hardly has the announcement been made concerning Dr. Chase's resignation when a flood of further announcements appear concerning the resignation of several prominent members of the faculty, and especially of the department of English. First, Professors Howard Mumford Jones and Russell Potter hand in resignations to take effect after this quarter; and now, Professor Norman Foerster announces his acceptance of the position of head of the English department of the University of Iowa. And with all this Dr. Vilbrandt of the department of chemistry tenders his resignation.

A great deal has been said already about the laxity of the legislature in not providing for such situations. The University of Virginia pays her faculty members much more than Carolina, whose faculty seems to be greatly underpaid in spite of the prominence the University has achieved, in recent years especially. The legislature, controlling the money bags of the state, does not seem to have taken into consideration the fact that in letting slip from the faculty these men, who have assisted greatly in building up the reputation the school enjoys, the prestige of the institution is seriously affected.

No institution has such a supply of eminent figures on hand that other and more liberal colleges can continue to attract them without some effect being obvious. The University of North Carolina should be finding this out already; with three of the outstanding members of the English faculty gone, the work of that department is seriously crippled. The question tion remaining is simply: What is the state going to do about it? The matter rests with the state; everyone knows the University is extremely loath to part with faculty members of such high quality,—yet there the matter stands. Newspapers discuss the situation; people say they "hate to think of all those good men leaving." The legislature comes in for a temporary roasting, then all is forgotten, including the fact that nothing has been done and that the matter is far from remedied.

The only way to put a stop to this general and easily understood exodus of men from the faculty is to make some provision to hold them here. There is no need to talk about putting a premium on brains; teachers do not expect to become millionaires, but they do expect, and rightly so, sufficient financial remuneration for the years and years of preparation they have served to be followed by more years of service. If the state is to remain proud of the position and importance its university has achieved, then it must put a stop to this practice of false economy. No educational progress can be made when parsimony stays the hand of those in control.—R. H.

Limited Number Of Scholarships Open

Among the schools to which applications may still be made for graduate scholarships and fellowships are Vanderbilt University and the University of Oklahoma. The closing date for receiving applications for fellowships has already gone into effect in most of those schools from which bulletins have been received.

Vanderbilt is offering for the year 1930-31 twenty fellowships to the value of $500 each and 20 scholarships valued at $300 each.

The University of Oklahoma offers a number of industrial and special fellowships amounting to between $500 and $700. There are also a number of graduate assistantships, the value of some being $500 to $800 and of others $250 to $1,200 dollars depending upon the training and experience of the applicant.

Chapel Hill Actress

Miss Frances Stratton, pretty and attractive Chapel Hill girl, pictured above, is playing one of the leading roles in "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," a play being presented by a group of University faculty members and townspeople under the direction of Paul Green and Wilbur Daniel Steele in the Playmaker theatre tonight and tomorrow night at 8 o'clock for the benefit of the Orange County Relief Fund for the poor. Freshmen Downed By Baby Deacons

The frosh were downed Wednesday afternoon for the first time in two weeks by a score of 6 to 1 by the Baby Deacons at Wake Forest. The Baby Deacon nine scored three runs in the second and three in the seventh to win the game.

McCaskill tallied the one run for the Tar Babies in the ninth. Even though the Tar Babies got more men on bases than the Baby Deacons, they were unable to score.

Adkins started the mound work but was relieved by Griffith in the fifth. Pattisall was also relieved in the fifth by Peacock who finished the game behind the bat. Allan was substituted for Dixon in the eighth to hold down right field for the remainder of the game.

Lister led the Deacons in hitting by getting four hits out of four times at the plate. There was no outstanding hitting by any of the Tar Babies.

The line ups: Carolina—Adkins p, Pattisall c, McCaskill 1b, Ferebee 2b, Powell 3b, Riggs s. s., Daniel lf, Whitehead cf, Dixon rf; Wake Forest—Griffin p, Hicks c, Joyner 1b, Barham 2b, Earp 3b, Bethume s.s, Lister lf, Miller cf, White rf.

The Carolina freshmen will meet the Oak Ridge nine here Friday at 4:00, following which they will take a five day trip to Virginia playing several prep and freshmen teams.

Golf Course Stopped

W. H. Holderness and Norman Cooper, former students at the University were recently frustrated in their plans to construct a miniature golf course in the lot adjoining the Carolina Inn when it was discovered that the construction of such an enterprise in the location would be in violation of the zoning law.

Holderness and Cooper had purchased their equipment, secured property rights, and begun construction before applying for a permit. City Manager Foushee learned about the undertaking and informed them that the site was outside of the business district and a permit of construction would be denied.

It is rumored that they will attempt to carry out their original plans in the lot adjoining the Tar Heel Club and fronting Franklin street. This property is in the business zone and may be used for such a purpose.

Chapel Hill is divided into four zones namely, Residence A, Residence B, Business 1, Business 2. Paying amusements such as miniature golf courses, theatres, and the like must confine their location to either one of the last two zones.—P. H.

Little Dyer Injured

The four-year-old son of Professor H. S. Dyer sustained a fractured shoulder yesterday morning when he was run over by Professor Peacock of the commerce department who was backing his automobile out of the garage.

It seems as if the young boy had slipped away from home in order to play on the local playground and was not seen by Professor Peacock as he was backing his car.

He was rushed to the infirmary where an x-ray examination was made by Dr. Abernethy, revealing a fractured shoulder. From the infirmary he was taken to Watts hospital in Durham. His father is away on a glee club trip, and his mother accompanied him to the hospital.

Both the teams representing Sigma Nu and Kappa Alpha failed to appear for their scheduled game yesterday afternoon.

PRIZES OFFERED FOR BAT ESSAYS

National Contest Is Open To All University Students.

A national contest being conducted by the Sales Analyst, Inc., of Boston, has for its purpose an exhaustive market study of baseball bats from every possible point of view. Cash prizes totaling 50 dollars are being offered to students in a selected number of universities and colleges, among which is Carolina.

Students in these universities are invited to write papers, not to exceed 1500 words, on some phase of baseball bats, their qualities, uses, quantities, and attitudes of baseball players to baseball bats in general. The papers must be mailed to the Sales Analyst company on or before Monday, May 5. Contestants must give full name, address, and name of university.

Though participation in this contest is not limited to economics students, members of these classes interested in modern economic problems are especially urged to enter the contest, which it is claimed offers an excellent opportunity for putting into practical use ideas formed about these problems.

Further information concerning this contest, including conditions of competition and suggested points to cover, may be secured from Malcolm D. Taylor, associate professor of marketing at the University.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS MAKE INSPECTION TOUR

The industrial chemistry and the chemical engineering classes of the University went on an inspection tour to Greensboro Wednesday. The Proximity Air Works, Vick Chemical Co., and Pomona Terra Cotta Works were inspected under the supervision of local professors.

These tours are taken from time to time and count as part of the regular class work. They afford students an opportunity to observe the actual application of what they learn in the classroom.

This is the fourth tour taken this year. Other trips were to the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company of Durham and the Durham Gas Plant, to the Buckeye Oil Company of Raleigh, and the ice and filteration plants in Chapel Hill.

RARE MALADY REPORTED

S. A. Nathan, county health officer, recently had a report on the first case of cerebrosperia meningitus in nine years. Philip Atwater, colored, was the patient. He became ill on Sunday, April 27, and was dead when Dr. Nathan arrived. He was 22 years of age and lived half a mile from Hillsboro.

One case of scarlet fever at Cedar Grove has also been reported to Dr. Nathan, and three cases of pelegra in the nearby section of Chapel Hill; one case of pneumonia; 2 cases of whooping cough; and 2 cases of chicken pox. Dr. Nathan says that he thinks chicken pox is on the decline.

Phi Wants No Outsiders

G. P. Carr, chairman of the dance committee of the Phi Assembly announces that with the exception of the officers of the Di Senate, no outsiders will be permitted to attend the dance.

Betas Bow to Dekes

In the snappiest game seen on the intramural diamond this season, D.K.E. defeated the Betas 8 to 0 yesterday afternoon. Both nines presented a pair of fine batteries.

Alexander, who pitched for the Dekes hit a triple and a single in three attempts to lead his team at bat. Newcombe, catcher and Walker also connected for triples.

Waddell was on mound duty and Race did the receiving for the Betas. The game was full of action and few errors were made.

The fast fielding of the entire Deke team and the ability to hit in the pinches gave them the victory. It was a hard fought game and much closer than the score would imply.

Chi Psi forfeited to Phi Gamma Delta in a scheduled game.

Moore Proves Nemesis

With Wilcy Moore pitching a two-hit game and striking out 13 men, New Dorms defeated Old West 7-2 yesterday afternoon.

Hardin, Moore and Shelton led the hitting for New Dorms.

Score by innings:

Team		R	H	E
O. W.	001 10—2	2	1
N. D.	005 2*—7	9	1

Batteries: Old West—Winecoff and Woodley; New Dorms—Moore and Williamson.

L. F. Stallings has been elected captain of next year's varsity wrestling team. Stallings was perhaps the most valuable man in this season's competition.

Golfers Keep Stride

Carolina keeping up her winning streak swept the highly touted Vanderbilt team off their feet at Birmingham, Alabama by a score of 10 1-2 to 7 1-2 in a golf match Wednesday.

The match was considered to be an important one since Vanderbilt had beaten Georgia Tech earlier in the season and since Georgia Tech has been the Tar Heels' only conqueror this year.

This match was a good practice round for the southern conference intercollegiate matches which are taking place on the same course this week-end.

DR. SCHWENNING LECTURES TAYLOR CLUB YESTERDAY

Defends Personnel Administration; Flays Union Stand On Organization.

Speaking before the University student branch of the Taylor Society at its regular meeting Wednesday evening, Dr. G. T. Schwenning, associate professor of business administration, offered a defense of personnel administration and stated that more progress has been made in the past 20 years from the development of a social conscience than was made in all the previous years of legislation and compulsory action.

Summing up his defense, Dr. Schwenning said that one may consistently urge the development of scientific personnel management as one of the immediate agencies by which the status of the working class may be improved and many of the obvious evils of industry can be mitigated.

Speaking of the objections of the unions to the development of personnel administration, Mr. Schwenning, who was presenting the side of the employer in the question, said: "We say that we must maintain the unions to fight the bad conditions in industry, and yet we are trying to maintain the bad conditions so that the unions will have something to fight." He likened this position to that of the character in a novel who asked that sin be sent so that there would be something against which virtue could fight, believing that if there were no sin, there would be no evil for virtue to combat.

Commenting on the present labor situation in Danville, Va., where the American Federation of Labor is making an effort to unionize the workers, the speaker stated that the union was making one of its first attempts at unionization in the south at Danville because the industrial democracy in the mills there has been in successful operation for about 11 years.

Because it fears that this successful system will spread, the union is attacking this plant rather than going to some of the other mills where conditions are far worse, was the idea conveyed by the speaker. This seems to be a deliberate attempt of the union to insure its own existence rather than remedy the situation where improvement is most needed, he further stated.

"The unions have been concentrating their efforts on the 10 per cent of the plants which have had successful methods of preventing industrial unrest and unsatisfactory conditions, and it is unfair for the unions to do this rather than to concentrate their efforts on the remaining 90 per cent of industries which are in far worse condition."

That there is no one solution for the problem of unsatisfactory labor relations was the opinion of the speaker, but he continued: "I maintain that, with its obvious deficiencies, scientific personnel management is as intelligent a method as has been applied to the problem."

Personnel management is a comparatively new thing, and there is much territory that has not yet been touched by it. "The south is as yet untouched by personnel management, but as we get larger industries and more specialized executives, we will get it. Before we do so, however, it is probable that we will get some legislation and some unemployment."

The world is becoming so democratic that the grand manner would be extinct except for traffic cops.—Bangor Daily Commercial.

EDUCATION GROUP COMPLETES WORK

Bradshaw and Trabue Represent University at Conference on Personnel Work.

M. R. Trabue of the bureau of educational research and Dean Francis F. Bradshaw attended a meeting of the national committee on personnel work held at Princeton University on April 25 and 26. This committee has been active for the past five years under the direction of the American Council on Education.

The most outstanding accomplishment of the meeting was the developing of the use of "scales and tests" for measuring achievements in college. Thus, instead of a student's acquaintance with a subject being measured by the number of courses he has in that field of study, it is measured by his actual knowledge and accomplishment in that work.

Several colleges are already using this system. A student entering one of these schools is not classified according to the number of units he presents for credit but by his actual learning in his subjects. Five hundred thousand dollars will be used in the next ten years to develop this idea.

A report was made on various factors that influence students in their judgment of moral and ethical problems. An appeal is being made for funds for further advancement of this work among students.

FEDERATION CLUB STATES PURPOSES OF ORGANIZATION

Intends to Promote Better Interscholastic Relations; To Organize Here May 10.

Following a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Thursday afternoon the University student federation club issued a complete list of the purposes and plans for a proposed state-wide student federation to be organized here May 10.

The following is a statement of John A. Lang, executive-secretary of the club:

"In order to let the people of the state know exactly the purposes of a state federation of students, we have prepared a list of some of the most outstanding things that we hope to accomplish through the federation. Through the North Carolina Federation of Students, we hope:

"1. To strengthen and improve student government in every college and university of the state, and to encourage the development of student government in the high schools and preparatory schools of the state.

"2. To give the students of North Carolina a more effective means through which to express themselves on any important matter.

"3. To promote more friendly, cordial, and reciprocal relations between the various student bodies of the state in athletics, publications, debating, and in all other phases of student life.

"4. To help the students of North Carolina become better acquainted with each other, so that they may develop as fellow North Carolinians and not as little sectarians.

"5. To promote the general welfare of student interests in North Carolina and abroad, and to render any service to the students of the state in any case that might arise.

6. To help properly relate the students of North Carolina to the National Federation of Students and to the International Confederation of Students, and to help the students of this state become better acquainted with and of more assistance to the general student movement in this nation and throughout the world."

The typing contest will commence at 9:30 and the stenography at 10 o'clock. There are one hundred and ten contestants from twenty-one schools entered in the competition.

This will be one of the last of the high school contests to be held this year. On Friday, May 16, the baseball game for the state general championship will be played at Emerson field at 3 o'clock. There are thirty-four schools now competing in the elimination tournament to choose the competitors for the finals here. The winners in each of the two divisions, the one for the east and the one for the west of the state, will be entered in the final elimination.

WHITEMAN TO END RADIO PROGRAMS

Popular Old Gold Orchestra Will End Engagement on Columbia Chain.

Radio listeners throughout the United States will receive with genuine regret the announcement that Paul Whiteman and his band are nearing the end of their broadcasting engagements.

The Whiteman-Old Gold orchestra, which for the past year has been one of the stellar attractions over the Columbia network, will play its concluding radio concert on the night of Tuesday, May 6th. The feature of the farewell program will be the rendition of "The Stein Song," the melody dearest to the hearts of the students and alumni of the University of Maine. This will be the first time this famous old number has ever been included on the Whiteman-Old Gold program, and it is also perhaps the first time the old college song has been presented by an orchestra of the proportions of the Whiteman group.

"The Stein Song" was included on the program of the concluding Whiteman-Old Gold broadcast in response to the numerous requests for its presentation which came from the university men and the college publications throughout the country. In an effort to furnish just the numbers for which the radio fans had expressed a preference, Mr. Whiteman readily consented to include the melody in his Old Gold package of favorites. He has personally prepared a special arrangement of the number, designed to accentuate every note of the lilting melody and to stress the infectuous swing of the famous old tune which for so many years has inspired and thrilled the University of Maine students and the old grads as well.

Mr. Whiteman's closing program will be broadcast to the United States and adjacent countries over station WABC and the Columbia system between the hours of nine and ten o'clock p.m., daylight saving time, on the evening of Tuesday, May 6th.

Band Concert Tuesday

The University band will play a program under the Davie Poplar Tuesday night, May 6, at 7:15. This is one of the programs sponsored by the music department in recognition of national music week.

Thirteen Club Dance

The annual twilight dance of the Thirteen Club at the Carolina Inn last night proved a delightful feature on the week-end program of social activities. Alex Mendenhall's Tar Heel Boys furnished the music for the occasion.

The array of attractive girls present included the following: Misses Claire Lockehart Hanes, Winston-Salem; Lola Miller, Laurens, S. C.; Mary Cannon, Concord; Maria Parham, Henderson; Helenora Withers, Sally Couch, Charlotte; Anne Arrasmith, Dorothea Jones, Philadelphia, Pa.; Lititia Mason, Raleigh; and Phoebe Harding, Chapel Hill.

The chaperones were: Mrs. C. H. Harding, Mrs. J. H. Anderson, Mrs. A. S. Lawrence and Mrs. M. E. Martin.

Leavitt Writes On Spanish Literature

S. E. Leavitt of the department of romance languages, will soon complete two books which he has been working on for the last few years. The first book will be called Andres de Claramonte and the Estrella de Seville and will be the results of investigations in the National Library in Madrid, Spain. This book will deal with the date and authorship of the famous play La Estrella de Seville, which was long attributed to Lope de Vega. Mr. Leavitt has been working four years on this book and expects to have it completed before the end of this year.

By the end of the summer, Mr. Leavitt will have completed the second book he is working on which is a study of Spanish-American literature in the United States. This will be done for the Harvard Council on Hispano-American Studies, of which Mr. Leavitt is a member. Mr. Leavitt intends to work this summer at the Harvard library and will there complete his two years' work on the subject.

DR. METZENTHIN TO STUDY ABROAD

German Professor To Go On Three-Month's Trip to Unearth Old Documents.

Immediately after the close of this spring quarter, Dr. Metzenthin, of the department of Germanic languages, will leave for Europe. He expects to sail from New York, June 7, on a Holland-American Line steamer. He will spend about three months in Europe visiting numerous state and university libraries as well as some monasteries. The purpose of Dr. Metzenthin's trip is to help contribute to the solution of the problems connected with the question of the "home" of the Haliand, the Saxon epic. Among the cities he will visit are Munich, Prague, and Bonn, where he will make is headquarters.

The Haliand is an old Saxon epic telling of the life of Jesus. The complete work consists of six thousand verses written in a style similar to the Anglo-Saxon Beowolf, though the language is different. The poem is supposed to have been written in 830 A.D. by a cleric of the Catholic Church. Until recently there was a dispute as to whether the poem was written by a cleric or a layman, but, chiefly due to research made by Dr. Metzenthin, it is now thought that a cleric composed the epic.

The problem which Dr. Metzenthin will work on this summer is about the place in which the epic was composed and its early history. He will examine as many as possible of the ninth and tenth century manuscripts in libraries in central Europe and will compare the lettering with the extent manuscripts of the Haliand. There are now two known complete manuscripts, one in the London Museum, and the other in the library of the University of Munich. Two shot fragments of about fifty verses each are in the Vatican Library and in the library of the University of Prague. Of course, only a part of this tedious though extremely valuable work can be done this summer.

Dr. Metzenthin has done research work on the Haliand for many years. Beginning with his thesis for his Ph.D. degree until now he has constantly worked on the subject, often contributing articles to magazines about his conclusions. He will be assisted this summer by his daughter, Miss Esther Met-

YACKETY YACK TO BE ISSUED SOON

1930 Annual Contains 392 Pages And Is Bound in Blue Leather.

According to a statement issued yesterday by B. Moore Parker, business manager of the Yackety Yack, the University annual will be distributed about May 25.

This year's edition will contain 392 pages and will be beautifully bound in blue leather. The library theme will be carried out in all sections of the book.

This issue marks the 30th edition of the publication, and the 40th anniversary of a school annual. In 1890 the Greek letter fraternities published an annual known as the Hellenian that was supposed to represent fully every phase of college life. This was continued until 1900, when a different type of book was published which represented only the fraternities. This book received very little moral or financial support from the majority of students. Beginning in the year 1901, the first issue of the Yackety Yack appeared, sponsored by the literary societies and the fraternities of the University. This was the beginning of a permanent University annual. The first issue contained 241 pages.

Recent issues have employed many up-to-date features, and the 1930 yearbook contains many technical improvements. The Vanity Fair section contains more than the usual amount of beautiful girls and the dance section presents a very harmonious color scheme. The feature make-up is especially good, containing interesting pictures from every walk of college life.

Andy Merritt Dies

A Correction

Owing to an error, the name of J. C. Williams was omitted from the list of the debaters who will represent Carolina at Boston Monday night. Williams, who was chosen No. 1 in the tryout, left for Boston later than the three others. He will join Carr, Baley and Wilkinson in Boston.

PINK GUTHRIE IS DEAD AT LAST OF ALCOHOLISM

Noted Community Character at Lasts Succumbs; Denatured Favorite.

(By Howard M. Lee)

Pink Guthrie, aged 60, colored, better known to students and people of this county as "Denatured," is dead. Pink was found dead yesterday morning at 11 o'clock on the floor of his house by his wife. According to Dr. S. A. Nathan, Orange county coroner, he had been dead about two hours before his lifeless body was discovered.

Mr. Nathan did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest, it being quite apparent that death was the result of acute nephritis —brought on by alcoholism.

Last Saturday Pink was washing windows at the Strowd Motor Company; the cleaning compound used was almost 90 per cent denatured alcohol. As usual, Pink could not resist the temptation to drink and misappropriated a half-gallon of the alcohol for illicit purposes. Between Saturday and Sunday "Denatured" drank a quart of the liquor and became very sick. Sunday evening he told his wife that this was his last drink; and it was.

Pink holds many records in the county. Among these distinctions are the following: first man to be tried in the Chapel Hill rceorder's court; greatest number of road sentences ever given one man; oldest habitual drunkard; ablest colored "lawyer."

Judge C. P. Hinshaw of the Chapel Hill recorder's court stated that Gutherie has appeared in various courts on an average of once every 60 days for the last 25 years. Up until the last two or three years he has plead his own cases with remarkable efficiency, but lately he has fallen down.

Guthrie was in court several weeks ago and was given a sentence of seven months on the county roads. He took an appeal to the superior court, telling the local recorder that he would never serve his term.

Once before when working at Strowd's garage, Pink had stolen denatured alcohol. One of the gasoline pump tanks was leaking and a hole had to be dug in order to stop the leak. A barrel of denatured alcohol was over the opening with a faucet at the botom. Ping opened the faucet and drank such a large amount of the alcohol that he had to be pulled out of the hole.

While on a drunk several years ago he was requested by a citizen of Chapel Hill to get a dog out from under a house. Pink was very obliging, so he lay down on the ground and reached for the dog. The dog, being quicker than Pink, bit him on his nose, which event left a scar until his death.

Three years ago Pink was under a suspended sentence in the Hillsboro superior court for being drunk. He was later arrested in Chapel Hill for being intoxicated, and was given a month on the roads. He took an appeal to the superior court. Judge Daniels, the presiding judge, increased the sentence to six months.

"Judge, you can't do that," exclaimed Pink at the height of his

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

We are living in an atmosphere of slander.—Rev. E. J. Sweeney.

The Purpose Of The Federation

The need of co-operation between institutions in North Carolina becomes more apparent as more problems arise, but until a student federation is formed nothing may be done about these. Love feasts and get togethers between neighboring institutions will do little to foster the spirit of friendship and co-operation unless these have as their base something more than the current subject.

It is therefore that the committee here adopting suggestions from student leaders of other institutions have incorporated into the proposed constitution a provision to make the federation a possible board of arbitration. With the change in presidents each year and with almost 20 institutions taking part in the selection of the officers, there is little likelihood of a frame-up being organized to control the federation; and partisanship and prejudice will not dominate a group of fifty as it would a group of five or ten.

Apparently the student committee here is seeking to build something lasting, not a monument to themselves, for they know that student honors and student praise are short-lived. But they have a purpose; they have the interest of the North Carolina institutions at heart and they will, with sufficient encouragement, support an organization of which we will all be proud.

Examine the purpose of those interested and you will find a sincere interest in students, student problems and a tendency to disregard personalities in the effort to produce something reflecting no glory to themselves but reflecting the praise of age and wisdom to youth.

Purpose of Phi Beta Kappa

Undoubtedly one of the most outstanding achievements attainable in the course of a college career is election to Phi Beta Kappa. Membership in this pre-eminent and widely-known organization serves as a fitting reward of work well and conscientiously done, and affiliation with the society has justly grown to be considered an indication of an individual's possession of superior scholastic qualities and attributes of leadership.

But, in our opinion, there has grown up a general tendency to place perhaps too great an emphasis upon the desirability of belonging to this fraternity. It seems that the intention and original purpose underlying the founding of the organization must, of necessity, be somewhat violated by such practices as dropping courses, changing courses and even schools, scheduling "crip" courses, and "booting," all the sole purpose of maintaining an average sufficiently high to qualify for election to Phi Beta Kappa.

When the point is reached at which students forego the acquiring of a broad and well balanced education for the purpose of making grades, the factor responsible for that condition has ceased to serve its purpose. —(J. M. L.)

College News

In a recent issue of the Fayetteville Observer an editorial appeared concerning intercollegiate sports which was entitled "College News." In this the writer commented on the fact that "great emphasis has been placed on college athletics and a recent survey made of 227 American and Canadian university and college presidents revealed the fact that they favored full and complete interpretation of academic and scientific information to the public even at the expense of minimizing the news of intercollegiate sports."

It was further stated that "news is news and it is difficult to make news out of what is not news, and as a general thing there is far more news value in intercollegiate athletics than in purely academic subjects. The blame for this, if there is any blame, might be placed upon the colleges themselves because of the emphasis that they have placed on athletics."

Many of the more intellectually minded citizens of the state lament the fact that coaches of athletics at the various colleges and universities are in numerous cases salaried higher than the specialized professors. However, athletics as an advertising medium for the college can hardly be beaten in the minds of the prospective student. Although a large value has been placed upon intercollegiate sports as an advertising medium, this is by no means its real importance. The supporters of intercollegiate athletics are attempting to keep the development of the body in step with that of the mind. It would be an audacious step for me to clash with the opinions of such brilliant minds as the 227 college presidents, but perhaps it might be wise to suggest that these men would naturally be prejudiced somewhat in favor of literary rather than physical developments.

The writer of the editorial referred to takes an opposite view of the situation. "It is regrettable that such is the case and there is no doubt but that the press of the country would gladly cooperate with the educational institutions in giving publicity to purely academic subjects, providing the colleges and universities make the same effort to put news into these subjects as they have done to put news into athletics."—H. L. A.

University Swimming Team

The University of North Carolina is sorely lacking in water facilities. Most universities and colleges of the size and importance of this University have pools, lakes, or rivers for rowing or swimming. We have no lake or river for rowing and our pool is in very bad shape. There are many students in the University who are interested in swimming and who would like to see a swimming team formed.

According to Mr. Robert House, executive secretary of the University, there are many streams and rivulets near Chapel Hill which can easily be made into lakes if the University spent the money. No doubt this is a project which the University has in mind for the future. However, because of the great expense connected with such an undertaking, we cannot expect to have the advantages of water facilities in the near future.

For more immediate purposes we need not give up the idea of forming a swimming team. If those who are interested in swimming would come together under the leadership of the athletic association, we are sure a satisfactory arrangement could be made which would give them the use of Sparrow's Pool for practice and for swimming meets. The arrangement would be advantageous to Sparrow's Pool as well as to the University. The Tar Heel will gladly print an announcement of a meeting, if a few students request it.—A. V. L.

PRIZE NOVELS TO BE CHOSEN EACH YEAR BY MAGAZINE

So many promising college writers turned up among the contestants in the recent College Humor-Doubleday, Doran campus prize novel contest that with the announcement of the prize-winning novel, the editors reveal their plans to make the campus novel prize of $3,000 an annual event. The campus novel prize becomes established with its award to a co-ed of Northwestern University — Miss Betty White. Miss White achieves distinction and starts on her writing career with the publication of "I Lived This Story" in the June College Humor. She joins the discoveries made by this magazine of such authors as Katharine Brush, James Warner Bellah, Eric Hatch and others of the newer school.

Rules for the 1930 College Humor-Doubleday, Doran campus prize novel contest differ slightly from those of the contest just concluded, but the prize remains the same—$3,000 for the best novel submitted by an undergraduate enrolled in an American or Canadian university, or a graduate of not more than one year. Whereas formerly the campus novel was limited in scene to a college background, the 1930 campus prize novel may be placed in any modern environment and be woven around any set of characters.

The sum of $3,000 is for the right to serialize the story in College Humor and to publish it in book form. Motion picture and dramatic rights will remain with the author. Both the book and the magazine publishers reserve the right to publish in book or serial form, according to the usual terms, any of the novels submitted in the contest.

The contest will close at midnight, October 15, 1930. Typed manuscripts of not less than 70,000 words should be sent with return postage to the Campus Prize Novel Contest, College Humor, 1050 North La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill., or to the Campus Prize Novel Contest, Doubleday, Doran and Company, Inc., Garden City, N. Y.

Chase's New Son

CARL GRIGGS

President H. W. Chase and Mrs. Chase have just announced the formal adoption of a son, Carl Griggs, who is to assume the name of Carl Carter Chase.

The young man is 17 years of age and is a sophomore here. He will go to the University of Illinois next year.

MED MEN MEET AT N. C. RESORT

The 77th annual meeting of the State Medical Society, held at the Carolina hotel, Pinehurst, on April 29, was widely attended by physicians from all over the state. Approximately one-third of the group, however, were former medical students at the University.

In addition to the society's meeting, the medical alumni association of the University held its first meeting in the form of an informal luncheon given in the Crystal dining hall of the hotel, no formal program being given. One hundred and five members were present at this meeting and among the distinguished guests present were Dr. Ross G. Patterson, dean of Jefferson Medical School, Philadelphia, Pa., and Dr. Hart, professor of surgery in Duke medical school.

Dr. B. F. McMillan of the class of 1880, the only representative of the old medical school established in 1880 and suspended in 1885; Dr. James Vance McGougan of the class of 1891, first class after the re-organization of the school under Dr. R. H. Whitehead, and Dr. R. H. Cooleemee, of the class of 1894, were present at the luncheon.

The Medical Alumni Association was organized at last year's commencement. The following officers were elected at that time: Dr. Frank C. Smith, Charlotte, president; Dr. R. A. Ross, Durham, vice-president; and Dr. Calvert Toy, Chapel Hill, secretary. This association was organized as a branch of the general alumni association.

Good Performances End Playmaker Tour

The Carolina Playmakers wound up a very successful tour by two last appearances. They appeared Monday night in Gastonia at the high school auditorium and in Greensboro Wednesday night at the Odell auditorium.

They presented three plays at each place: Paul Green's "The No 'Count Boy," Loretto Carroll Bailey's play of the mill people, "Black Water," and Gertrude Wilson Coffin's hilarious comedy, "Magnolia's Man."

The Gastonia Daily Gazette of April 29 says: "Playmakers please big audience here—University organization plays to packed house—'Magnolia's Man' best of three—an exceedlingly well-balanced program. 'The No 'Count Boy' was given first, and left at least one person in the audience with one foot in the clover fields, and the other on firmer ground, and the general effect of feeling rather dazed and foolish."

"Of the three plays presented 'Magnolia's Man,' is best from the standpoint of plot, workmanship and a truthful portrayal of the characters represented."

It is interesting to notice the difference in the critics opinions. The Greensboro Daily News of May 1 says: "'No 'Count Boy' center of interest in well-acted performance—comedy very effective." The no 'count boy was acted by Holmes Bryson, "who lifted the evening from the routine of entertainment to an experience not soon forgotten."

In regard to "Black Water" the critic says: "Very nicely acted—Loretto Carroll Bailey has a genuine turn for phrase and inflection and she puts it to good use.

"'Magnolia's Man,' . . . welcome relief of laughter . . . humorous, well-knit production."

YALE RECEIVES $100,000 GIFT

New Haven, Conn., May 2.—President James Rowland Angell announced today that Paul Block, of New York City, owner of several important American newspapers, has recently given Yale University $100,000 for a program of studies in the field of journalism.

"The purpose of the studies will be to promote an understanding of the press as a powerful factor in human affairs and as a major business enterprise," President Angell said. "An important part of the plan is the establishment of a series of lectures by men prominent in the newspaper world who, in addition to their public addresses will be available for conference with students and for collaboration in courses bearing on the subject of the press. In the undergraduate schools, the problems of the press will be emphasized by enlarging the scope of certain courses in economics and political science to take account of this important field of study. In the graduate school advanced study and research will be promoted among students specializing in the social sciences.

Mr. Block, who is a member of the commission on city planning and survey appointed by Mayor James J. Walker, of New York City, is the owner of the Toledo Blade, the Pittsburgh Post Gazette, the Milwaukee Sentinel, the Newark Star Eagle, the Brooklyn Standard Union, the Duluth Herald and Duluth News-Tribune.

SWIMMING SUITS
SUMMER 1930 A.D.

WE'VE always observed that Spalding gives as much attention to style as to workmanship in making swimming suits—and that this season, as always, the new briefer, more daring Spalding Styles are setting the pace at the most fashionable watering places.

But style is only half the Spalding story and only one of our reasons for featuring Spalding suits. Special yarns and knitting processes give Spalding suits four inches extra stretch and lasting liveliness that prevent binding, wrinkling and gaping. And, of course, Spalding suits are flawlessly finished. $4.50 and $5.50. Come in and see them!

Tar Heels Send Balanced Team To N. C. State Meet

Have Strength In Every Event; Farmer In 220 And Arnold In Pole Vault Expected To Set New State Records.

MEET STARTS AT 1:45

The Tar Heel track team, 33 strong, left this morning for the annual North Carolina college conference track and field meet at Greensboro this afternoon the favorites to annex their ninth consecutive state title, despite the fact that other Big Five schools and some of the Little Five will present strong individual performers. The University delegation is perhaps the best balanced of any, and can be expected to show strength in every event.

Carolina has entered 33 varsity and 12 freshmen, Duke 27 varsity and 12 freshmen, Davidson 24 varsity and five freshmen, State 25 varsity and 15 freshmen, Wake Forest 20 varsity.

Charlie Farmer should cop the two dashes. Gay and Slusser, Tar Heel entries have a good chance to place in these events.

Ken Gay and Weil, Carolina; Brohard, Davidson; Ottinger and Floyd, State, are probably the strongest entries in the 440.

Barkley, Carolina; McGinn, State, and possibly Simon, Duke, are the most likely entries in the 880. Barkley and McGinn each have a victory over the other in this event, and the outcome of their race would be hard to predict.

Barkley and Lowry, Carolina, and Simon, Duke, are the strongest contenders for the mile run. Baucom, Carolina, and Simon and Heizer, Duke, will probably figure most prominently in the scoring in the two-mile.

Carolina should monopolize the pole vault, as the Tar Heel entry list shows three vaulters with marks of over 12 feet.

Whittle, Davidson, and Perry of Carolina look like the best of the high hurdle crop. Slusser, Reid and Stafford, Carolina, and Whittle, Davidson, are likely to do most of the scoring in the low hurdles.

McCall, Davidson, and Kinsey of Wake Forest are the favorites in the broad jump. Bagby, Carolina and Freeman and Roberts of Duke, with possibly some trouble from the Davidson entry, size up the high jump field.

Dupree, Wake Forest, looks to have things right much his own way in the javelin. Brown, Carolina, has been showing up well in this event, and might give trouble. He has bettered the state mark in practice throws in the discus, and is a strong contender for first place.

In the shot, Adkins and Koenig of Carolina have at least an outside chance to cop first honors.

The mile relay team composed of four men from Gay, Farmer, Weil, Case, Stafford and Garrett is a favorite to win this event. This team set a new record of 3:24.7 in the Georgia Tech relays.

Everett Wins

Everett's baseball team nosed out Grimes by the score of 7-6 yesterday afternoon in a thrilling game which was not decided until the last half of the final inning. Both teams were fighting to keep out of the cellar of the intramural league as neither had won a game yet.

Filcher, Everett's first baseman, hit a home run with one on and played a sterling game in the field.

Grimes	140	10—6
Everett	210	31—7

Batteries: Allen and Galord; Williams and Chaifitz.

SPORTS CHATTER

* * * *

By Hugh Wilson

Speaking of lacrosse being a good sport for introduction at Chapel Hill, there are two other sports which seem even more adapted to this campus—namely, association football, generally called soccer in this country, and the good old English game of Rugby football. Soccer is a game which almost anyone who is not physically crippled can play with a good measure of success. Physical size is no advantage in this game, but is rather a disadvantage as it interferes with the agility which is necessary in a good soccer player. Furthermore, it is a game which the poorest of players can play and still enjoy, unlike most other games. Too, it is an all-year sport, being played from fall to summer by thousands of factory and club teams in the north.

As to rugby, or "rugger" as British slang has it, it seems to be a game even more suited to this campus. Although great size stands one in good stead for some positions, there are far more positions for which small men are suited, and both speed of foot and soundness of wind are far more essential than brute force. In this game, every man is at one time or another called to act as a back. The play is not half so hard or severe as in American football, being more in the nature of a real game in which everyone enjoys his part—a species of glorified "roughhouse"—than a hard, dreary job which is far too serious to be enjoyed. This game is also a year-'round sport, being played in all British Colonies at all seasons, despite heat—the writer witnessed one such game in Singapore, three degrees north of the Equator, when the thermometer stood at about 100 degrees Fahrenheit. It seems especially suited to this campus for another reason—here there is not such a deeprooted, competitive spirit which tends so much to make for poor sportsmanship and subsidization, the canker sore of American sport, as in northern and midwestern colleges, and the lesser spirit of competition and the greater spirit of play are just suited for "rugger." It might be added to appease the ever-present moguls of football that in many of the larger colleges, coaches have found it advantageous to import Canadian Rugby stars to instruct the gridiron heroes during spring practice in the hows and whys of lateral passing, around which the game of Rugby is built. I guess "Big Bill" Thompson will be after me now.

While speaking of new sports on the Hill, it might be well to mention the result of the fencing team's first match, which somehow escaped the Tar Heel. Carolina won rather easily from Georgia Tech by the lopsided score of 9 bouts to 4. At the end of the four epee bouts, the score was two-all. Brown, winner of the intramural tournament, won both of his matches, while Captain Hendlin lost both of his. The Tar Heel swordsmen did better in the foils bouts, Captain Hendlin and Digby Wardlaw each winning all three of their bouts, while Fred Wardlaw won one bout and lost one before yielding his place to Manager Harry Galland, who lost the remaining bout, making the score 7 to 2 in the foils and 9 to 4 for Carolina in the final reckoning.

TAR HEEL ENTRY LIST FOR STATE MEET NUMBERS 33

McCall, Whittle, Simon, Brohard, DuPree, Kinsey, Expected To Give Trouble.

The probable Tar Heel entries for the annual North Carolina college conference track and field championships at Greensboro today were announced last night by Coaches R. A. Fetzer and Dale Ranson.

The Tar Heel delegation will probably number 33, and should be one of the largest. By doubling several of the men the Tar Heel coaches expect to enter the maximum number of four performers in each event. This means that the Tar Heels are making their strongest bid to run their string of consecutive state titles to nine.

With Davidson drawing strength from outstanding performers like McCall, broad jumper; Whittle, hurdler; and Brohard, 440 man; and Wake Forest, Duke and State each bringing individual stars, the dope is that Carolina will have to overcome the stiffest opposition of recent years to win the title.

The Tar Heel entries, by events, will probably be as follows:

100-yard dash—Farmer, Slusser, Erickson, Gay.

220-yard dash—Farmer, Slusser, Gay.

440-yard run—Gay, Weil, Case.

880-yard run—Barkley, Garrett, Hamer, Horney.

One-mile run—Baucom, Lowry, Farris.

120-yard high hurdles—Perry, Reid, Stafford, Goodwin, Slusser.

220-yard low hurdles—Perry, Reid, Stafford, Goodwin, Slusser.

Pole vault—Arnold, Neiman, Ruble, Dry, Smith.

High jump—Bagby, Owens, Johnson, Shulenberger.

Broad jump—Neiman, Johnson, Stafford.

Discus — Dameron, Brown, Adkins.

Javelin — Brown, Parsons, Remsen, Dry.

Shot—Adkins, Brown, Koenig.

Mile relay—Gay, Weil, Garrett, Farmer, Case, Stafford.

TAR BABIES LOSE GAME TO RIDGE

The Tar Babies were defeated in a hard fought game yesterday afternoon by the Oak Ridge nine. The final score was 4 to 3.

The Oak Ridge nine put over a final run in the ninth to win the game. Carolina tied the score in the eighth when Dixon singled, scoring Whitehead ahead of him. The Oak Ridge club was able to make hits count for the winning tally.

Chandler allowed the visitors only four hits, three of which came in the ninth for the winning run. Carolina outhit the Oak Ridge aggregation, getting twelve safe bingles. Daniel led the Carolina hitters with a triple and a single to his credit. Peacock and McCaskill followed with two each. Brady and Waeton got all the four hits for the Ridgers.

Frosh Track Meet

The Tar Baby cindermen will close the track season Wednesday with a meet in Raleigh with the State freshmen. Events start at 3:30. All freshmen are requested to stay in shape until this meet.

Mangum Beats Ruffin

Mangum defeated the Ruffin nine yesterday afternoon 7-2. Webster pitched a nice game for the winners, and also helped his team at bat. Mowery was on the mound for Ruffin.

The game was full of action, both teams displaying fast fielding. There were no long hits, but the Mangum boys were consistent and managed to score every inning.

Country Club Cabaret

The annual spring cabaret of the Chapel Hill country club will be held at the club house Tuesday evening at 6:30. Dinner will be served and there will be stunts and dancing. Stringfellow's orchestra will provide the music for the occasion. The cabaret is open to all faculty members, whether members of the club or not. Reservations should be made through Mrs. Ernest Mackie before Monday noon.

FROSH WIN FROM DUKE YEARLINGS IN TENNIS MEET

The Carolina freshman tennis team traveled to Durham last Thursday and handed the Blue Devil frosh team a bad beating, whitewashing them nine matches to none. The Duke racqueteers were no match for the Tar Heel players who lost but one set during the entire match, and won all the others by lop-sided scores.

Grant (C) defeated Howard 6-0, 6-2; Hines (C) defeated Clark 6-3, 6-2; Abels (C) defeated Bridges 6-1, 6-1; Napier (C) defeated Power 6-0, 6-1; McKee (C) beat Fulford 6-1, 6-0; and Barnett (C) defeated Skinner 6-2, 6-0.

Doubles: Grant and Hines (C) defeated Clark and Howard 6-2, 6-0; McKee and Barnett (C) defeated Brown and Newman 6-8, 6-1, 6-4.

Old East Loses

Carr defeated Old East 3-1 yesterday afternoon. Brown of Carr and Jackson of Old East hooked up in an old-fashioned pitchers' battle, with Brown having the better of the argument. Eleven men were whiffed by Brown while Jackson sent seven back by the strikeout route.

Watkins had a perfect day with two triples and a single out of three official times at bat.

Carr put the game on ice in the last inning when Brown singled, Watkins tripled scoring Brown, and later came home when Carpenter errored Griffin's hard grounder.

BALTIC COUNTRIES PLAN CELEBRATION

Norway To Observe Its Nine-Hundredth Anniversary of Christianity

Of the numerous important events in Scandinavia the present year, three stand out as conspicuous examples, namely, Iceland's commemoration of the one thousandth anniversary of its parliament, the Althing, the oldest parliament in the world; the observance in Norway of the nine hundredth anniversary of the introduction of christianity into that country, and the festivities in Denmark attending the one hundred and twenty-fifth birthday anniversary of Hans Christian Andersen, the world famous writer of fairy tales.

In order that Americans intending to go abroad the coming summer may be presented with the opportunity to visit unusual scenes and be able to include the above three events in their European itinerary, the Baltic America Line has set apart its flagship, the S. S. Polonia for the purpose of a voyage that starts from New York, June 17.

In Iceland the preparations for commemorating the millennial are on a scale promising many surprises. Not only will the King of Denmark, Christian X, who is also King of Iceland, preside at the opening exercises on the plains of Thingvalla, where originally the Althing met, but the American commission appointed by President Hoover will give evidence that the celebration has a world-wide scope. In addition to witnessing the historical pageants and other events, lasting three days, the passengers on the S. S. Polonia will have before them constantly the scenic grandeur for which Iceland is famous.

From Iceland the course of the Polonia will be toward Norway. The immediate objective will be Trondhjem, Nidaros, as this ancient Norwegian city is now called. Here will be commemorated the introduction of christianity into Norway, nine hundred years ago, when King Olav Haroldsson took the lead in this direction. It was also in defense of his faith that the Norwegian king lost his life in the battle of Stoklestad. St. Olav is now the patron saint of Nidaros.

Besides the ancient Cathedral of Trondhjem, said to be one of the finest examples of church building of the period, there are many other points of interest, and visitors will be able to employ their stay in the city to the greatest advantage.

Reminiscent of a time when the Hanseatic League held high sway as the dominant factor in trade and shipping, Bergen has much of interest to visitors who desire to turn back the pages of history and see the past revealed in buildings and quays that have survived the ravages of time and the elements. In Bergen the old and the new rub elbows, for the city is today one of the great shipping points of northern Europe.

With Denmark, chapter three in the unique story that the Polonia of the Baltic America Line will write down, Copenhagen makes an appeal of its own to those taking part in the excursion. The Danish capital long since earned a reputation as a center of entertainment, and in addition the fastivities commemorating the one hundred and twenty-fifth birthday anniversary of Hans Christian Andersen are bound to be of the most impressive kind. The whole world acclaims the Danish poet as absolutely in a class by himself. Copenhagen will pay him tribute in a manner commensurate with his fame.

It is in the city of Odense that the climax of the celebration will take place. Here is to be dedicated the new Andersen museum, standing next to the humble dwelling where the poet was born. In days to come this museum will become a mecca for the many admirers of the Danish fair tale writer.

It goes without saying that the Baltic America Line will strive in every possible way to make the excursion an event out of the ordinary, both from the standpoint of comfort and what is to be seen during the days afloat and on shore.

TWO FIFTY-ONE DOGS IN VILLAGE

C. P. Hinshaw, lister of taxes for Orange county, states that the people have shown kind cooperation with him in his work. He states further that the value on personal property has dropped 10 per cent over last year. According to Hinshaw, the sum total of taxed property has fallen considerably from that of last year.

The books show that the total number of dogs listed in Chapel Hill township last year amounted to 251, 162 of these being owned by white people and 89 by negroes.

The total number of automobiles listed last year was 871, 118 of these belonging to negroes. The books also show that 2267 persons listed taxes.

PSYCHOLOGY EXPERIMENT ATTRACTS PEDESTRIANS

Pedestrians on West Franklin street one day this week were suddenly astonished to see a dignified member of the University faculty speeding in the direction of town in a Dodge automobile, with a piece of metal sheeting attached to the rear of the car augmenting at each contact with the pavement the normal variety of noises emanating from the indignant Dodge. Not satisfied with a single trip in disturbance of peace, upon reaching the bottom of the hill, the driver turned and unconcernedly proceeded to repeat the performance. Could it be that one of the guardians and models for student moral conduct had partaken a little too intemperately and indiscreetly of a famous variety of local produce?

Chief Foister reported yesterday that the Chapel Hill fire department had not been called out for more than a week.

NEW CAFETERIA COMBINES EVERY MODERN FEATURE

Friendly Cafeteria Opens In Space Next To Sutton's Drug Store; Has Attractive Fixtures.

Upon entering the Friendly Cafeteria yesterday noontime, this reporter was agreeably surprised. Before him were rows of neat brown tables with black tops, the walls were furnished. in craftex and decorated with side lamps, and the tables where food was distributed were spick and span presenting an inviting appearance. The harmony created by the brown wood-work and brown decorations, as well as the absolute spotlessness of the entire cafeteria gave a pleasing and comfortable atmosphere. Chapel Hill's latest cafeteria had opened to the public. About a half hour after the cafeteria opened its doors it was well filled. Students of the University made up most of the patrons though there were many townspeople and members of the faculty.

The new Friendly Cafeteria is next to Sutton's Drug Store and occupies the space which was formerly the home of the University Cafeteria. The building has been remodeled during the past few weeks and many improvements both for beauty and for providing better service have been made. This Friendly Cafeteria is similar to the Friendly Cafeterias which are now operating in Greensboro, High Point, Winston-Salem, Durham, and Charlotte. Meal tickets sold at the Chapel Hill branch will be honored in all these cities.

All vegetables at the new cafeteria are sold for five cents. Meal tickets amounting to five dollars and a half in value are sold for five dollars. Another special feature of the cafeteria is the weekly boarding rate of seven dollars, which is at the rate of a dollar a day. No restrictions whatsoever are placed on those taking advantage of this regular boarding rate.

Senior Smoker

"Red" Greene, president of the senior class announces that Judge W. J. Brogden of Durham will speak at the final senior smoker in Swain Hall at 9 o'clock Monday night.

John Alexander, Harry Galland and Ross Porter, chairmen respectively of the dance committee, memorial committee, and the regular committee will report at this meeting.

German Students To Be Entertained

Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Metzenthin will entertain students of German and all others interested in the language at their home on Hillsboro street this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The feature of this informal gathering, the last of the quarter, will be the singing of German student songs. Several students have been practicing the better known student songs, and will present them under the leadership of Miss Sue Dent.

The Sunday afternoon gatherings of students interested in speaking German have been popular through the year. In each case they have been held at the home of Dr. Metzenthin. Refreshments have been served, directions for finding them being written in German.

The meeting this afternoon will be the last of the year since Dr. Metzenthin is leaving shortly for Europe, where he will continue his German researches.

Andrew McIntosh, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. McIntosh was married to Miss Margaret Wooten of La Grange last Saturday afternoon in the Little Church around the Corner in New York.

Edwin S. McIntosh, of the New York Herald Tribune staff, a brother of the bridegroom, was the best man and Miss Florence Faison, of Rocky Mount, was maid of honor. Mrs. Willis A. Garvey of Larchmont, N. Y., was matron of honor. The bride was given in marriage by James T. Wooten, her brother.

Playmaker's Practical Joke Falls Through

(By J. P. Tyson)

The Playmakers have returned and they bring back with them a glowing description of their tour. A grand time was had by all, with the exception of Howard Bailey, who had a very unfortunate time.

In one part in the play, Bailey was supposed to eat an apple, which the stage manager was to provide. Now at this time of the year apples are very plentiful and the stage manager should have had an easy time providing them. But another element had to be considered.

Muriel Wolf and Holmes Bryson, the perpetual pranksters, had a bad habit of purloining the apples at times most embarrassing to that stage dignitary. Now life for him was beginning to be a miserable affair. Just when he thought that he was "setting pretty," with everything done right, he would discover at the last minute that his apples had "taken wings and gone," and then he had to scour around like a madman to get more fruit.

But he had his suspicions and he was determined to get even. He went out and got three large, juicy red apples and injected a tremendous dose of quinine in two of them, saving the third for Bailey.

In some way or other the apples were mixed and when it came time for Bailey to munch his fruit he experienced a very peculiar thing. Maybe the audience thought that his expression was natural but there was one person, much to his sorrow, who knew how to account for it. But the result was that Bailey found himself with a most disquieting taste in his mouth and enough quinine to cure the swamp countries of all their malaria, or what not.

The Playmakers left Chapel Hill Friday, April 20, under the direction of Professor Heffner, and were away ten days, eleven towns being visited.

The audiences were, for the most part, small, though in several places they were attended by record-breaking audiences. In Gastonia, where they played at the high school auditorium, they were heard by over 1200 people and in Rock Hill by over 1400. In Winston-Salem and Red Springs they had an un-

LECTURES MADE HERE FRIDAY BY AID OF TALKIES

General Electric Company Makes Demonstration; Four Scientific Lectures Made Through Medium of Photophone.

The General Electric Company, before a large number of persons Friday night, demonstrated the photophone, the talking picture apparatus produced by the company. While this was not a demonstration of the actual production and reproduction of the film, four lectures were given on scientific subjects.

J. E. Lear of the school of engineering and J. A. London, Charlotte representative of the General Electric Company, were in charge of the program.

Mr. London, giving a short introduction of the photophone, said the General Electric Company would probably produce 1,000,000 feet of the film this year, a large amount for a company not in the regular motion-picture business. The company was at work on talking films many years before they were thought possible, however.

There are two ways of recording sound pictures, according to London. The first is the use of disc phonograph records synchronized with the film and kept in proportion with the speed of the film. This is known as the Vitaphone system. The other means is the recording of either the density of sound or the sound waves themselves on the film and reproducing them. This method is known as the movietone and photophone, requiring the use of the photo-electric cell which is similar to the radio tube.

The first lecture Friday night was given over the photophone by Dr. Irving Langmuir of the General Electric Company's laboratories in Schenectady, upon the subject of "Invisible Oil Films on Water." Dr. Langmuir showed the existence of such films and the use that can be made of them in discovering the weight and nature of the molecules of certain oils.

The next two pictures were upon the subjects of "The Marvels of Science." The first of these showed how the Great Northwestern Railway tunneled the Cascade mountains in Washington. The second was entitled "The Electric Ship," and showed the maiden trip of the Virginia, the largest passenger ship built in America. This ship is electrified in every way whatever.

CARRBORO MILLS ARE STILL GOING

Plants Are Running on Despite Rumors That They Might Be Shut Down

SITUATION IS UNCERTAIN

No official statement has been issued yet about the possible closing down of the branch plants of the Durham Hosiery mills at Carrboro. Reports a few weeks ago that the plants were to close as soon as orders on hand were filled, caused considerable concern locally. But the mills are running on, and some new orders received lately has given rise to the belief that at least part of the plants will continue to operate for an indefinite period.

Mill number 7, the smaller of the two main plants, will most likely remain in operation, even after the negotiations are closed that will affect the others. However, if the larger one, mill number 4, closes in a few weeks, over a hundred people will be released from employment in Carrboro. A few workers have already been let off as production slowed up. Some of these have been placed in Durham plants, and others have found employment elsewhere.

The situation is uncertain. It will take the course of two or three more weeks, it is stated by some of the officials, to get arrangements worked out. The general textile depression has affected these mills, as others, and plans for closing some of the plants were made only after every attempt had been made to keep them running.

George Lawrence, welfare officer, stated yesterday that so far only one family affected by the layoff of labor at Carrboro had sought aid through his department. This was a negro family. A generally above-average type of labor is found in the Carrboro plants, as compared with workers in some other mills, Mr. Lawrence believes. Some of them own homes in the village and will be hard hit when their employment is cut off. Others who live in homes owned and rented to them by the owners of the mill may also experience difficulty in locating employment and getting re-adjusted. Opinion expressed by business men and people affected is that there is the hope and possibility that orders coming in may enable the mills to run on a while longer anyway, retaining most of the workers.

Population Here 2,697

Village Has 82 Per Cent. More Inhabitants Than in 1920

Chapel Hill's 1930 population is 2,697. This information is given out by Oliver M. Perry, census supervisor for the second district. The figure is described as a "preliminary count;" so the final official figure may be more or less.

The 1920 census put the population of the village at 1,483. Thus the ten-year increase has been 1,214, or about 82 per cent. (if the calculation be based on the "preliminary count").

The number of Chapel Hill's inhabitants has always borne a close relation to the number of students in the University. The village grows with the institution; the high percentage of growth since 1920 has been a direct result of the expansion of the University.

May Frolic Dances Close Social Week

A full week-end of dances came to a close last night with the last dance of the May Frolics. This dance, which was given in the Bynum gymnasium, was fully attended and, according to those attending, was quite successful.

Yesterday afternoon the second dance on the program of the May Frolics was given in the Washington Duke hotel from 4 to 6 o'clock. Music for both of the entertainments yesterday was played by Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra.

These dances, which were given by six fraternities on the Hill, was probably the biggest set of dances before the finals on June 10-12, at which time Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians will play.

Episcopal Tea

The second Episcopal tea of the spring quarter will be held at the Parish house this afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock. Mrs. J. H. Anderson, the hostess, states that the tea will be given on the lawn in the rear of the church if the weather is favorable. The Y quartette will render several selections. All students regardless of church affiliations are cordially invited, Mrs. Anderson states.

Pre Laws To Meet

There will me a meeting of the Pre-law Association Monday night at 7:30 in the law building. Frank Graham of the history department will speak. A list of books helpful and instructive to pre-law students has been compiled by Miss Elliot, the librarian of the law school. This list will be distributed at the meeting.

STUDENT KILLED AND THREE HURT IN MOTOR WRECK

Red Constantine Killed, Joe Carpenter, Carlysle Smith, and Flem Wiley Injured When Car Overturns Near Lynchburg.

Cunningham Constantine of Birmingham, Ala., was instantly killed and three other students of the University were injured when an automobile in which they were riding turned over near Lynchburg, Va., late Friday.

J. Fleming Wiley of Durham, driver of the car, was scarcely injured, but Joe H. Carpenter of Covington, Va., sustained a possible fracture of the skull, and T. Carlyle Smith, Jr., of Asheville sustained a fracture of of the nose and minor abrasions.

These students, on the way to Sweet Briar College to attend social functions that were a part of May Day exercises there, had stopped to put up the top of the roadster in which they were driving about 14 miles south of Lynchburg. In starting around a curve, which is sharp and downhill, the car skidded on the wet highway and was thrown down an embankment, entangling in a wire fence.

Constantine fell underneath the rear of the car and was immediately crushed to death, while the others were thrown clear of the car. There are excellent chances for Carpenter's recovery, and it is expected that Wiley and Smith will be released from Memorial hospital in Lynchburg within two or three days.

According to a witness, the roadster was traveling at a normal rate of speed. None of the young men had been drinking.

"Red" Constantine, as the dead boy was known here, was a member of the junior class and a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He was elected manager of the basketball team for next year. He was well known and well liked on the campus.

Constantine's father has gone to Lynchburg where the body was taken, and several of Constantine's close friends left Saturday for Lynchburg.

Spearman and Allison Travel in Europe

Walter Spearman and John Orr Allison, two former University students who left drab and academic America for the enticements of France and the allurements of the University of Lyons, report in a letter to acquaintances in the village that while they are learning new things about the old world, they are, nevertheless keeping up with affairs back home.

Echoes from Chapel Hill can be heard across the Atlantic, and Walter Spearman writes that he is keeping up with the course of the textile situation, the Duke-Carolina "Love Feasts," and the successes of local celebrities. Spearman graduated last year from the University where he edited The Tar Heel. Allison graduated in 1928 and worked last year on The Alumni Review. Both boys expect to enter the journalistic field on their return to North Carolina.

The boys ask for news from the Hill, and in exchange for that they send choice bits of news from Europe. Part of Spearman's letter follows:

". . . I suppose we are learning some little things about the French—that they are so economic they even eat the head and neck of baked chicken, that they never heard of people drinking milk, that the average Frenchman goes to the opera as often as the average American to the movies, that an automobile is a luxury in France instead of a necessity, that French newspapers print editorials on the front page and have not yet succumbed to the onslaught of comic strips, and that French literature is a vast and inexhaustible subject of study and admiration. Possibly there are even a few more things that we have observed, but that ought to do for a starter!

"If travel can do us any good, we ought to be changed enough when we come home, for we have had a week-end in Geneva, a week-end at Chamonix-Mont Blanc, three weeks in Paris, a week in the Swiss Alps, a week along the Riviera, and soon depart for our Easter vacation in

Few men are lacking in capacity, but they fail because they are lacking in application.—Calvin Coolidge.

Concerning Students Of Journalism

Are students of journalism naturally lazy and incapable? At a newspaper convention held a short time ago, the editor of a certain newspaper made a statement to the effect that only about one journalistic student out of twenty makes good. If this be true, then the future of the press is indeed shaky—if it depends upon embryo journalists as ourself. But is it actually true? Judging from our contact with older and more experienced newspaper men, we are inclined to accept this statement with a grain of salt. Journalism schools are not to be compared with factories which turn out finished products ready for the market. Journalism is an art that requires not only a deep interest in the work itself, but also a great deal of training, and it is too much to assume that students just out of college can compete with men who have years of experience behind them.

This same editor also advocated making studies for this profession a graduate course, giving as his reason that students take journalism courses only as "crips" and not for the benefit that might be obtained from them. Of course there are some who always seek the easiest way out, but the student who intends to take up newspaper work as a livelihood, will, in most cases, take advantage of his opportunities; and the change would only make it harder to get a degree without any great difference in the qualifications of the students.

The situation, we admit, is not what it might be. The weeding-out process must occur in every profession, however, and journalism is no exception. We only ask that the devil be given his dues. —J. S. S.

Pen Points

By H. J. Galland

Some years ago a young lady who was editing a high school journal in New York received a contribution from one of the readers. The contributor who handed in the literary gem had written about brothers. Her essay was highly laudatory and complimentary, and she rambled at length on the beautiful relationship possible between brother and sister.

The editor looked over the contribution and was amused, for she knew that the contributor was brotherless and had never the doubtful experience of having one of the animals in her own family. So the editor, being saddled with a brother, sat herself down and drew a word-picture of brothers as they actually are, or as she had found one of them. She described in detail the contents of his pockets, his aversion to clean collars, the invariable state of his hands, and other unsavory and uncomplimentary things. And she ran her article alongside the contributor's, under the double heading, "Brothers—By One Who Never Had One," and "By One Who Has One."

The writer of this column was the poor unfortunate who unwittingly sat for the portrait "By One Who Has One." And now, having seen that sister recently, the incident of high school days comes to mind, and with it a chance to retaliate. The sister in question is more or less typical of many others. She is a little older than her brother, and he knows her (or thinks he does) as well as she knows him.

The most striking results of what travelling she has done in Europe is noticeable in her conversation. She has a most excellent repetoire of French and German slang and cuss words. She can, and has, put to shame a Parisian taxi-driver who was inclined to become obstreperous in an effort to scare an American into paying an unjust fare, by rapid and calculated flow of argot, causing him to stare in wonder and then drive quickly off, sadly disillusioned.

She has never quite learned to light a cigarette, on the few occasions when she smokes, without first blowing out the match two or three times. She has no taste or use for corn and such liquor, but can hold her own with anyone when it is a matter of good wine or liquers, another result of continental training. She has an excellent sense of humor, and is what is known as "open-minded." The fact that she can no longer subdue her brother easily by physical means she bemoans. She can however, embarrass him by means best known to herself, and on occasions does so.

She is a good horsewoman, but a bad tennis player. She refuses to return tennis balls not placed carefully within her reach, and goes off into gales of laughter at her own efforts, thereby breaking up a game before it gets started. She does not play bridge, but she has an excellent taste in books, without being "bookish." She has an instinctive sympathy for drunks, especially if they are good-humored and well-behaved.

When out with her brother, she automatically splits all costs. She is inclined to regard him in general as a necessary evil, sometimes interesting and sometimes just pathetic in his efforts at being his age. Her favorite anecdote is that early in life, when led in to see her new brother while the assembled relatives waited breathlessly for a bright remark, she maintained a disappointed and contemptuous silence. But all in all, she is a pretty good egg—for a sister.

SPEARMAN AND ALLISON TRAVELING IN EUROPE

Brittany and Spain. School lasts until the end of June, and after that we are planning to travel through Italy, Germany, Belgium, Holland, and England, returning to the States in September.

"But the worst of it is that I fear we are becoming spoiled for honest-to-God work—this is too easy a life to last. We are comfortably lodged in a French family for room and meals. Madame Deroin has two grown sons, both of whom have left home, so she takes us in their place and tries to make herself believe that we are her sons—even to the point of serving our breakfast in our own room in the morning, turning down the bed-covers and laying out our slippers at night, and dosing us with iodine and rum when we are sick. During the winter rain and fog we spent most of our time reading and studying, but now with the coming of spring we can venture out and get more of an idea of the countryside. Not finding the University entirely to our liking, John turned to music and is studying both piano and violin, while I turned to the library and am reading all I can of Flaubert, Rousseau, Moliere, deMaupassant, Zola Daudet and Balzac.

"It is certainly being a most delightful year and I am tremendously glad that we came. Naturally it has changed our ideas on many things—and I count that a mental victory. However, I think it would take a great deal more than a year in France to change our natures, so we will probably return much like we went away in that respect. . .

"We have had a wet time in France with all the floods along the Garonne River in the southern part of the country. The newspapers tell harrowing tales of death and devastation with an occasional heroic rescue thrown in for relief or a comic description of cows in trees and pigs floating along on housetops. Many of the marooned people had to be furnished food from airplanes. If the waters have subsided sufficiently, we may go through that section during our Easter holidays to see just how terrible the damage is. The Frenchmen of Northern France declare that the floods came as a punishment for the war profiteers who made their fortunes in Southern France while the Northern part was being laid waste by the Germans.

"Springtime in France is lovely. All the roads are bordered with rows of poplars or chestnuts, and the tender green leaves are beginning to show. Out in the country the almond and peach trees are in bloom, and the valleys are full of yellow primroses. The days are so bright and sunny now that I can scarcely bear to stay indoors, but spend my time strolling along the banks of the Rhone watching the gulls or find some comfortable rock pile to sit on while I read.

"Ed Hudgins came to see us before Christmas and reported a fine year at Oxford. He likes the English life of leisure and is altogether charmed with the University. . . ."

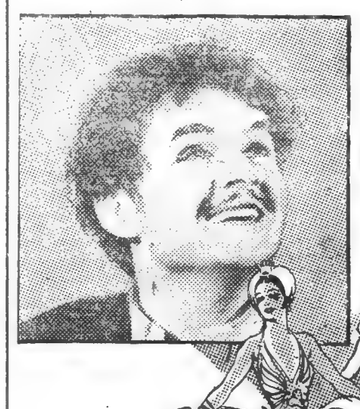
PENN STATE TRACK TEAM ACKNOWLEDGES COURTESY EXTENDED BY THEATRE

The Carolina theatre, following its policy of entertaining members of visiting teams during their stay at Chapel Hill, entertained the members of the Penn State track team during their stay here two weeks ago. The manager of the track team upon reaching home, sent the following letter to the manager of the Carolina theatre:

Dear Mr. Smith:

May I take this opportunity on behalf of the Penn State track team to thank you for the courtesies extended to us by your management.



We would certainly like to return the favor at State and as you, no doubt, are very much interested in the University of North Carolina's activities we hope to return the favor when they meet us next spring.

TAR HEEL TENNIS MEN STILL HOT

Beat Deacons By 9-0 Score; Makes Seventh Consecutive Victory.

The Tar Heel tennis team gained its seventh consecutive victory here yesterday by whitewashing the visiting Wake Forest aggregation for nine matches. The Carolina team has been going great guns so far this season, and none of its opponents have succeeded in obtaining more than two individual matches in any team match.

Hendlin (C) had an easy time disposing of Vernon (WF) 6-0, 6-0. Hendlin was placing the ball with great accuracy and Vernon could not break through to win even a single game.

Captain Merritt (C) played a steady game to trim Sikes 6-2, 6-0. Merritt played a very steady game, Sikes being unable to play consistently enough to press him.

Liskin (C) ran through Egleston for a quick 6-0, 6-1 win. Liskin played a careful game, letting his opponent make the errors, and Egleston could win only one of his services before losing the match.

Graham (C) met a tough man in Griffin of Wake Forest, and was forced to three sets in order to win. Griffin won the first set by taking the offensive and rushing the net as often as he could. Graham got his eye on the ball in the second set and passed Griffin repeatedly at the net. In the final set both players went on the defensive, and Graham proved to be the steadier player by taking the set 6-3.

Palmore (C) defeated Cobb 6-3, 8-6 in a long match. After losing the first set, the Deacon player settled down, but could not outsteady Palmore who came from behind and took the last set 8-6.

Baggs (C) had some trouble in the first set against Fletcher, but after a long struggle he was able to win 8-6. The Deacon player slowed down in the second set, and Baggs took advantage of this opportunity to run out the set 6-1.

Hendlin and Liskin, Carolina's left-handed sophomore pair, met unexpected opposition in Vernon and Sikes of Wake Forest, and were forced to three sets to win 3-6, 6-2, 6-3. The Wake Forest couple won all of their services in the first set, and showed some fine team work to win the set quite easily. After trailing at 2-0 in the second set, Hendlin and Liskin finally got going and ran off six straight games to take the set 6-2. The Wake Forest pair fought hard in the final set and succeeded in tying the score at 3-3, before going down before the steady stroking of Hendlin and Liskin.

Merritt and Palmore (C) defeated Egleston and Cobb 6-3, 6-4 in a hard match.

Graham and Browne (C) found Frank and Fred Fletcher of Wake Forest a hard team to beat, but their playing was a little too good for the Deacon pair. The final score was 6-3, 6-4.

JINX CAMPS ON TAR HEEL TRAIL

Nine Loses 7-8 Despite Outhitting Wake Forest Team.

Old Man Jinx camped on the trail of the Tar Heels here yesterday afternoon, and after outhitting the Deacons from Wake Forest and missing two good chances to sew up the game with a single hit, the Carolina nine dropped an 8-7 decision to the visitors.

Heavy hitting on both sides, with three homers, a double and a triple being poled out, kept the outfielders on the run and two pitchers for either team were needed to furnish the batters with something to swing at. Allen, Reynolds and Benton for the Deacons, and Whitehead, Potter and House for Carolina hit for .500 or more, with all except the first of these pounding the moundsmen for extra bases.

The fifth was the big inning for Wake Forest. A single by Cobb, a home run by Benton, a double by Gillespie and another homer by Reynolds cleaned the bases and left the Deacons with a five-run lead.

Henry House's triple to left center brought in Maus for the first Tar Heel tally in the opening session at bat, while the fourth, fifth and seventh added two each to the home team's count. In the fourth Lufty singled himself to first, took third on Potter's hit to left field and scored when Potter took second and the shortstop missed the throw from home. Wright rolled one to the pitcher who ill-chose his play and tried to catch Potter going to third, letting both men take their bases. Wright and Potter then executed a neat double steal, with the former going to second and the latter sliding across the plate to be safe by a close decision.

Successive singles by Whitehead, Maus, House and Lufty in the next inning added a couple of runs to Carolina's total and a homer by Potter in the seventh with Jackson on third fell one short of tying the score at eight-all.

Lefty Lanning stayed on the mound for the Deacons until the seventh, fanning seven men, but relinquished his job to Newsome after Potter's round-trip clout. Longest gave way to Edwards after the extra base barrage counting four runs in the fifth. Edwards held the Deacons scoreless for his half of the game, allowing but two hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Four Southern Universities Adopt

FIFTY CILLEGES IN NATION PLAY GAME

Lacrosse As New Varsity Sport

(By Nathan Volkman)

Lacrosse has for a number of years been making slow but sure headway in the collegiate world, and each year is assuming greater proportions as more and more college teams take the game up.

According to a special dispatch to the Baltimore Evening Sun, "Lacrosse now outranks every other spring sport on the Penn athletic curriculum, having surpassed even rowing in popularity." Not only is this the case at Penn, but at most of the other colleges where it has been introduced.

In the United States at present the game is going strong in the east, progressing rapidly in the south, and swinging towards the west. The state of Maryland, where the game has flourished since the early '80's, leads the entire country in lacrosse activity.

In the lacrosse movement, Carolina, a leader in southern collegiate activities, has remained lethargic and uninterested; while Georgia, Georgia Tech, Maryland and Virginia have assumed southern leadership in the lacrosse world, the latter having engaged in a match with an Oxford-Cambridge team only a few days ago.

A brief review the game may, perhaps, aid in stimulating the interest of University athletic officials and the student body in the game.

According to historic belief, the Indians were the first to play the game. With the Indians lacrosse was almost a religious rite, the game often being preceded by ceremonies and fasting. The best player of the tribe was frequently elevated to a high and respectful position because of his prowess in the game.

The Indians had no set standard rules for the game, no set number of players, no set number of goals, and no set distance between goals, and the game must, therefore, have been exceedingly more difficult than the present day game.

The origin of the name is doubtful, one explanation having it that a missionary likened the stick used by the Indians in playing the game to a bishop's crozier, therefore calling the game la crosse. Another is to the effect that a group of white men on Lac Ile a La Crosse in northern Saskatchewan once watched the game played between two Indian teams and called it after the name of the island. The former is believed to be the better explanation.

It was in 1840 that the game was first taken up by white men, when a lacrosse team was organized in Montreal. The sport developed rapidly in Canada, so that by 1867 it had become the Canadian national game, which position it still holds in Canadian sportsdom.

From Canada it spread rapidly to the United States and England, where its invasion resulted in the organization of a large number of independent clubs and college teams. In the United States Maryland early became the center of lacrosse activity and has since held that position in the lacrosse world.

Although Harvard, Columbia, and New York University were the first colleges in this country to take up the game, Baltimoreans are said to have introduced the game at Princeton, Yale, Pennsylvania, Stevens and Lehigh. With these colleges as a nucleus, the spread of the game in the collegiate world was inevitable.

As yet lacrosse does not draw crowds even comparable to football or professional baseball, but it is interesting to note that in 1884 a game between an all-American team and an English team played before King Edward VII drew a crowd of 44,000. The American record is 11,000, which was the attendance at the finals of the Olympic playoff between Johns Hopkins and the University of Maryland in 1928.

The sentiment of the people of Holland, who saw the lacrosse contest between Johns Hopkins and an English team at the Olympic games in 1928, is well expressed by the following extract from the "Algemeen Handelsblad" (Amsterdam):

"Lacross, as it was demonstrated, gives the impression of being an interesting, stimulating, exciting and fast game. It demands great speed, quick decision, initiative on the part of the individual, a world of backbone, and a firm hand."

This spring over 50 college teams and 25 independent clubs are actively engaged in the sport, while a large increase in the numbers is expected next year. As the qualities of the game—its speed and excitement, its lack of involved technical rules, and the fact that it is one of the few college games which requires no extensive training—become better known, the game will find a place on every college sport curriculum and an interested public to support the game.

More than $800,000 worth of golf balls were imported into the United States last year.

CAROLINA LOSES IN GOLF TOURNEY

Alabama's Crimson Tide golf team won the Southern Conference intercollegiate golf tourney at Shades Valley Country Club, Birmingham, Ala., Thursday, with an aggregate team score of 614. The Florida 'Gators' golf team was second in this match. Thirty-six men represented Alabama, Florida, Vanderbilt, Sewanee, Georgia Tech, Tulane and North Carolina.

Sam Perry of Alabama won low medal score for the qualifying in 142 taking two par 71's on the difficult Shades Valley course. Bill Duckwell of the Florida aggregation took second place with a 146. Perry is favored to win the individual championship.

Meade Willis of North Carolina qualified but was eliminated by Ed Herrin of Georgia Tech 5 up and 4 to go. Benny Goodes of North Carolina was eliminated in the quarter-finals by Bill Legwen of Georgia 4 up and 3 to go.

Fraternities Entertain

This week-end brought many guests and affairs to the Carolina Inn. On Friday night the Chi Phi fraternity entertained at a dinner, and from 6 to 9 p. m. the Thirteen Club gave a tea-dance.

The Sigma Phi Sigmas and the Sigma Nus both entertained last night. The Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity gave a dinner before the dance at the home of President Chase, while the Sigma Nus had a banquet for 80 guests.

AVIATION needs trained men today. And the leaders in this great and rapidly growing industry are united in saying that the surest way to qualify for the many engineering, field, flying and executive positions is to graduate from an approved flying school.

The highest recommendation given to a flying school is the government approved certificate, which means that the school has new, dependable training planes, competent licensed instructors, a flying field of proper size and character, and modern, recognized methods of instruction.

To make it easier for forward-looking men and women to become pilots or to fill other well-paying positions in aviation, Curtiss-Wright has put into force a new finance plan that enables you to fly now and pay later.

CAROLINA PROFESSORS ENGAGE IN EXTRA-CURRICULAR PURSUITS

Nearly One-Half Engaged In Some Activity Outside of Teaching; Literary Pursuits Head the List of Extra-Curricular Activities; Reveal Why They Work Overtime.

(By John Mebane)

Nearly half the faculty of the University of North Carolina engage in some activity outside of teaching. Some of them write books, others conduct newspaper columns, still others devote their time to extensive research work. At the present time literary pursuits head the list of extra-curricular activities to which many professorial gentlemen are wont to devote their spare hours.

For divers reasons the professors turn their attention to these activities outside of the classroom. Addison Hibbard, dean of the college of liberal arts, who dubbed these savants engrossed both in teaching and literary activities "truant professors," upon being questioned why he wrote, replied that there were three main reasons, the first and most important being that he was in sympathy with southern literature. He declared that he wished to accept the challenge flaunted in the face of the south when H. L. Mencken entitled it the "Sahara of the Bozart." "Then, again," he stated, "most of my writing grows out of my classroom work in American literature. And, my last reason is that I write to earn money." Mr. Hibbard has recently edited "The Lyric South," an anthology of verse by southern poets. He has also written "Studies in Southern Literature," and he was formerly editor of "The Literary Lantern." Mr. Hibbard's latest work is "The Book of Poe." The dean has discovered an adequate escape from the appellation of "truant professor"—his writing is done during vacations.

What Jones Says

Howard Mumford Jones who, in addition to being a professor in the department of English, is a literary critic, an author, a poet and a playwright, upon being questioned as to why he writes, declared that he enjoys it, that he believes it the duty of a man who has acquired knowledge to share it with others. "Then, too," said Mr. Jones, "you know one derives money from literature occupations." Mr. Jones has recently published "America and French Culture," a book lauded by the critics; and he has since collaborated with Philip Allen in writing "The Romanesque Lyric." Some years ago he wrote his first book of verse, "Gargoyles," and he has also written and published a number of plays. In addition to contributing to many of the prominent magazines in the country, he edits "The Literary Lantern," a weekly book review column appearing in southern papers.

Why Henderson Writes

Archibald Henderson, internationally-known dramatic critic and biographer of George Bernard Shaw, first tackled writing when he found that it was an economic necessity and so secured a firm foothold in the world of literature. Dr. Henderson says that his preliminary work got him interested and that he soon found himself constantly engaged in writing. "I continue to write," said Dr. Henderson, "because I find myself asked to do so by the various publications to which I have contributed." This scientist and man of letters, in addition to contributing to magazines the world over, is the biographer of George Bernard Shaw and has written such books on the drama as "Changing Drama" and "European Dramatists" and he has also published "The Conquest of the Old Southwest," "Mark Twain" and "Table Talk of George Bernard Shaw." One of his outstanding scientific works is "Relativity, a Romance of Science."

John M. Booker, also a professor in the department of English, who has written for many of the outstanding publications, states that he writes only spasmodically and then only because of his interest in a particular subject. Teaching, he maintains, interferes with the author. Mr. Booker has compiled "A Middle English Bibliography" and has contributed to numerous magazines and newspapers.

Collier Cobb's Views

Collier Cobb, head of the geology department and world-renowned geologist, states that his writings cannot be considered outside literary activities as they relate to geography and are the outgrowth of field or laboratory investigation. Among his best known publications are: "Where the Wind Does the Work" and "Some Human Habitations"—both printed in the "National Geographic Magazine"; "Early English Survivals on Hatteras Island," reviewed at length in the "Geographic Journal" of the Royal Geographic Society and already reprinted seven times; "Lands and Dunes of Sacony"; and recently a paper on the "Loess of the Yellow River Valley" that has already been taken into the new geographies such as Tarr and Von Engeln. Dr. Cobb states that his globe-trotting has to do directly with his teaching and is not for use in literary work.

Paul Green is probably more widely-known as a playwright than as a professor of philosophy. Mr. Green has written plays which have been produced in London and at the Provincetown Theatre in New York City. He received in 1927 the Pulitzer Prize for his play, "In Abraham's Bosom." He has also written "The Field God," "Lonesome Road," "The Lord's Will," "Wide Fields," and many other plays. Mr. Green has also written for many magazines and has a wide literary reputation.

Keeps Wolf from Door

Edgar Knight of the school of education and a recognized authority on the subject which he teaches, writes first to help make a living. Dr. Knight says that he cannot support a professorship and a family in respectability without doing outside work. "My second reason," he declared, "is that I enjoy doing literary work—especially if it is published. And my third reason is that writing is good discipline. It makes for accuracy and carefulness. My books on educational history were written because there appeared to me to be a need for such work." Among Dr. Knight's books on education are: "Public School Education in the South," and "Notes on Education." Others of his works are "Among the Danes," "The Making of Citizens," (done in collaboration with J. G. deR. Hamilton), and "Our State Government." Mr. Knight also contributes to such magazines as "Current History," "Sewanee Review," "Atlantic Quarterly," and "Outlook."

Norman Foerster's Views

Norman Foerster of the English and Comparative Literature departments is recognized as a critic of eminence throughout the country. Mr. Foerster has written a number of books and articles dealing with literary criticism. He has contributed to the "Dial," "The Nation," "North American Review," "New Republic," and a number of scholarly publications. Mr. Foerster declares that he is interested in problems connected with the subject and teaching of literary criticism. "Both teaching and writing," he said, "have a common ancestor. Being interested in literature critically, I endeavor to be at once scholarly and critical." His subjects, he stated, were in part suggested by his teaching. "My textbooks in college English have definitely grown out of my teaching."

Afraid of Going Native

O. J. Coffin, head of the department of journalism at the University and former editor of the Raleigh Times, is the conductor of "Shucks and Nubbins," a tri- weekly column appearing in the Greensboro Daily News. Mr. Coffin swears that he writes his column because the Daily News is willing to pay for it, to keep from "going native," and because some of his home-folks seem to like it. He also states that through this means he has been able to pay the last installment on his 1927 model Chevrolet. Mr. Coffin has also published a book of verse, "State House Anthology," at his own expense ($50).

Numerous Other Writers

There are numerous other writers in the various fields of literature at the University. J. G. deR. Hamilton of the history department has published a number of books dealing with government and history. M. C. S. Noble, dean of the school of education, is preparing a book for the press. Howard W. Odum, head of the school of public welfare, has published a number of articles concerned with the study of the negro, and his book, "Rainbow Round My Shoulder," has already received wide praise. G. C. Taylor has published many articles in such magazines as "Studies in Philology."

There is practically no field in writing which has been left untouched by professors in the University faculty. The list of authors and their works might be extended for many pages without telling the complete story. This article suffices only to point out a few examples.

Four Literary Men

Pictured above are left to right top: Dr. Archibald Henderson and Collier Cobb. Bottom: Dr. Howard W. Odum and Dr. Edgar W. Knight, four professors, representative of the Carolina literary group.

A recent canvass of the faculty tends to prove that professors engage in many activities outside of the regular class work. The greater part of their work is editorial and creative writing.

Playmaker's Practical Joke Falls Through

usually small crowd.

At practically every place Professor Heffner was told that this was the best showing that the Playmakers had ever given. Professor Elba Hennington, head of the department of dramatics at Greensboro College, stated that this was the best bill of plays that she had ever seen the Playmakers produce.

The various news reviews were extremely flattering in their praise of the productions. Nearly all said that this was the best that they had ever seen the Playmakers do.

Greensboro was especially impressed with "The No 'Count Boy," which, according to the Daily News, was "outstanding."

Many places were very much pleased with "Black Water," while the sure fire play was Gertrude Wilson Coffin's "Magnolia's Man." The Gastonia Gazette says that that play was the choice of the bill and that Mrs. Coffin's acting was especially commendable.

They were given banquets by the Gastonia high school, the Rock Hill alumnae, and Greensboro College.

They had only one mishap on the trip, which was a puncture.

At every place that they appeared they were asked to return next year and in a number of places the contracts have already been agreed upon.

This is the first time in the history of the Playmakers that Professor Koch has missed a tour. He stayed in order that the rehearsals of Romeo and Juliet, in which he takes a prominent part, might go on smoothly.

GIFT OF $1,500 TO SCHOOL LIBRARY

Board Decides to Set Amount Aside As Nucleus for Permanent Endowment

GIVEN BY WILLIAM BAYLEY

Checks amounting to fifteen hundred dollars have been received by the executive board of the Mary Bayley Pratt Library for children here from William Bayley, of Springfield, Ohio. Mr. Bayley is a brother of the late Mrs. Joseph Hyde Pratt, of Chapel Hill, in whose memory the children's library is named.

The checks represent gifts from Mr. Bayley and his father and Mrs. Bayley. In his letter he speaks of his affection for Chapel Hill, and of his appreciation of the desire here to create a permanent memorial to Mrs. Pratt. During a visit to Chapel Hill not long ago he saw something of the work of the library, and became convinced that it is already playing an important part in the life of the village.

Mr. Bayley made no suggestions as to the use of his generous gift, but left its disposal entirely to the judgment of the directors. The executive board, composed of Mrs. R. H. Wettach, chairman, Mrs. D. D. Carroll, Mrs. W. E. Caldwell, Miss Nora Beust, Mrs. N. B. Adams, Miss Evans, C. S. Shields, A. S. Lawrence, and Frank Graham, met on Monday night. They decided to set aside the fifteen hundred dollars as a nucleus for an endowment fund, which it is hoped will grow. The interest will be devoted to repairs and replacements. The need for such a permanent fund is evident; it guarantees as nothing else can the continued existence of the library. Mr. Bayley's gift is very genuinely a gift to the whole village, since it is a means of enriching the lives of its children.

Two other gifts from personal friends of Mrs. Pratt have been received recently. Frank Compton, of Chicago, publisher of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia, has donated a set of his books, one of the best known juvenile encyclopedias. William Armstrong, of Buffalo, sent two boxes of books which had formed the childhood library of his daughters.

The library room in the northeast corner of the school building is a pleasant place, with its new draperies and glass balls trailing ivy in each window. Recent acquisitions are a screen which will also serve as a bulletin board, and a filing case for a collection of pictures. The circulation increased from 877 volumes in October to over fifteen hundred in February. Much of this increase is due to the interesting accession of books in the George Bryan Logan collection. The children enjoy the pretty room, and though they call it "the little library." Miss Evans' records show that the high school boys and girls use it quite as much as the younger children.

The library will be kept open in its present quarters all summer. The hours and days of opening will be announced later. The story hour, which was so successful last summer, will also be continued.

Newspaper Man Has Faculty Interview

Allen Raymond, staff representative of the New York Herald-Tribune, was in Chapel Hill yesterday interviewing members of the University faculty in regard to the textile situation in the south.

He was representing the League of the New England States, an organization studying the industrial problem in the New England States. He is traveling over the southern states to see if such a league is possible in the south, and to determine what should be its plans and policies.

He came south as a result of Governor Gardner's proposed organization. He leaves for Raleigh today to discuss plans with Governor Gardner. From there he goes to Hartsville, S. C., where he will see Dr. E. R. Coker, a member of the National Agricultural Commission to Europe in 1918, secretary of the South Carolina Land Settlement Commission, and prominently connected with the University of South Carolina and Coker College.

ORDER OF GOLDEN FLEECE WILL HOLD TAPPING TONIGHT

SUPREME COURT JUDGES INVITED TO LAW BANQUET

Enjoyable Program Planned For Affair In Carolina Inn Wednesday.

The law school association of the University will give their annual banquet Wednesday night at the Carolina Inn. The affair will be a large one and over 100 guests are expected.

Ed Scheidt will be toastmaster, while the principal speaker of the evening will be President Harry W. Chase. All five judges of the North Carolina Supreme Court have been invited and are expected to attend.

A complete program of songs, speeches, poems, and other attractions have been planned, and the affair promises to be an enjoyable one.

The entertainment committee which planned the banquet is composed of the following men: Professor M. S. Breckenridge, Waddell Gholson, Peyton Abbott, J. H. Chadbourne, Wex Malone, Tom Gold and Moore Bryson.

The banquet which was held last spring was quite a success. It is reported as having been the best in the history of the association. Professor M. T. Van Hecke was toastmaster last year and Judge Brogden, speaker.

At the banquet a picture of the third year law class will be presented to the law school association.

ROSE HEADS N. C. BAR ASSOCIATION

Another of the University's alumni has recently been elevated to a prominent position. Charles G. Rose, prominent Fayetteville lawyer, was chosen to head of the North Carolina Bar Association. Rose is a trustee of the University.

Mr. Rose graduated from the University in 1900, taking his law degree in the law school here in 1902. While in school here Mr. Rose was editor of the Tar Heel, a member of the Order of the Gimghoul, and the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

His son, Charles, Jr., is now a freshman at the University, on the Tar Heel staff, and is preparing to enter the law school.

SECOND EPISCOPAL TEA ATTRACTS LARGE CROWD

The second Episcopal tea of the spring quarter, which was held in the Parish house Sunday afternoon, was attended by a large number of students and out of town guests. Mrs. J. H. Anderson was assisted in receiving by Mr. J. B. Bullitt, Mrs. G. M. Braune, and Mrs. A. S. Lawrence. The "Y" quartet sang several selections, and group singing was accomplished on the piano by Donald Wood. Punch, cakes and candies were served during the calling hours.

The tea next Sunday will be held especially for students and their mothers in celebration of Mothers' Day.

U. D. C. MEETS TUESDAY

The local chapter of the U. D. C. will hold its usual weekly meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Mrs. Marvin Utley on Vance street.

Kress Man Here

A representative of the S. H. Kress Company will be here tomorrow morning to interview those seniors who have expressed an interest in seeing him.

All such persons should apply to Henry Johnson at 114 Bingham hall after chapel.

CHASE ADDRESSES FRESHMAN CLASS FOR FINAL TIME

Enjoins Men of '33 To Complete Education At Any Cost.

After an introduction by Dean Bradshaw praising him for his twenty years of faithful and efficient service to the University, President Chase in his last message to the freshman class issued a challenge to them not to let financial difficulties deprive them of a college education.

The speaker called attention to the fact that a college education is becoming a normal experience and that over one million persons are attending colleges in the United States, making more than one percent of the entire population. He further said that prior to the Civil War and for some time after, that a college education belonged only to the wealthy and privileged and that there are more men in college now than there were in high school then.

College Trains for Life

Dr. Chase further stated that he regarded figures on the increase in financial returns for college men of very little value because financial gains were not the big object in obtaining a college education. He told the freshmen that they were going to appreciate life in a fuller sense after coming to college.

He compared the benefits of a college education to a geometric ratio bringing immeasureable returns in the future and continued saying that each year meant more than the one preceding it in college.

In closing he stated that the University was now going through a period of severe economizing and that this fact should not cause a slack in pace. He said that no one should let these difficulties deprive him of his life investment—a college education. He closed by asking the class to work on and to continue their education and to go out and make their mark in North Carolina and the South. He congratulated them for being the most progressive freshman class ever to attend the University.

Deputation Team To Make Wilmington Trip

The Y.M.C.A. deputation team will leave for Wilmington at 1:00 o'clock Thursday afternoon. They will give a week-end program, visiting several schools and Hi Y clubs.

The team will consist of the Y.M.C.A. quartet, Jack Connelly, first tenor; Fred Laxton, second tenor; Wofford Humphries, baritone, and Jack Miller, bass and the following speakers: Pat Patterson, F. M. James, Jack Dungan, Ed Hamer, and Will Yarborough.

DI SENATE WILL HOLD IMPORTANT SESSION TONIGHT

An exceptionally interesting and important meeting of the Di Senate will be held tonight. President Rector will preside over the discussions on the bills which will be brought up. A new treasurer will be elected to succeed Pat Patterson who has held the office up to now. A lively discussion is expected over the bills to be brought up. The main topic of discussion will probably center about the resolution offered by Senator McKee: "Resolved, That the Di Senate go on record in favor of the confirmation of Justice Parker as associate justice of the United States supreme court." The Di seems to be very much interested in this subject and many heated discussions are expected.

Other bills to be discussed are "Resolved, That the state should support at its university those students possessed of unusual talent, but lacking the necessary funds," and "Resolved, That the governor of North Carolina be given the veto power."

The report of the banquet committee consisting of Senators Dungan, Dratler and Patterson will also be given tonight. According to preliminary plans, the Di will have a banquet at the Carolina Inn, probably the third week in May. This too will be of interest to all attending. Those who are absent from the meeting will be automatically dropped. The president of the Di urges all to attend and take part in the stimulating discussions.

HUNDRED PRIZES ARE AWARDED AT FLOWER EXHIBIT

One Thousand Entries Transform Tin Can Into Flower Garden.

With more than 1000 entries, 114 of which were awarded prizes, the annual Chapel Hill flower show, held in the Tin Can last week, was judged the best on record. The flower show is sponsored annually by the Woman's club of Chapel Hill and was this year directed by Mrs. H. R. Totten.

Complete to the last detail, the show transformed the drab appearance of the Tin Can into a veritable flower garden, with profuse colors and perfume coming from displays of all sorts of blossoms from roses, aquilegia, and iris to large collections of unnamed field flowers. Rock gardens with fountains, fish and sometimes a turtle; landscape with forests, drives and hill; and lawns with bird baths and shrubbery all added to the beauty of the show.

Prizes numbering 114 were awarded. These were made possible by merchants of Chapel Hill, Carrboro, Durham and Greensboro, together with several local citizens.

Among winners of prizes were Mrs. K. M. W. Tack, Mrs. G. W. Lay, Mrs. J. M. Lear, Mrs. Moody Durham, Mrs. H. R. Totten, Mrs. C. E. Preston, Mrs. H. D. Carter, Mrs. P. H. Quinlan, Mrs. T. E. Best.

Winston-Salem, Asheville, and Charlotte are Also Winners In Annual Event.

Miss Nancy Lee Brasington, advanced student in typing in the Wadesboro high school, emerged from the 108 representatives from 20 schools to win the class A medal in the annual high school typewriting contest here Saturday with an average of 58 words per minute for a quarter of an hour.

In the class B contest, in which groups competed, Winston-Salem high won the silver loving cup offered as a prize with a team average of 57.58 words per minute.

Class C. and class D contests were won by Miss Sarah Stevens of Asheville high and Miss Marie Lindsay of Charlotte Central high, respectively.

Miss Selma Factor of Asheville high won the accuracy medal with an average of 46 words per minute for the entire contest with only one error; while Miss Pauline Stroupe of Charlotte Central high took the high speed honors, averaging 75 words per minute.

In the shorthand contest Durham and Asheville tied for first place in the advanced group, while Durham won the beginners' contest. These contests are sponsored annually by the University extension division in cooperation with the North Carolina Commercial Contest Association, of which Mrs. Cora L. Odum of Charlotte Central high school was elected state manager to succeed Miss Ruth A. Ford of the R. J. Reynolds high school, Winston-Salem. Mrs. Myrtle Asbury of Charlotte Central high was elected secretary and treasurer.

Inspectors In Town

Phi Interested In Philippines

The Phi Assembly tonight will get into regular business after having delayed the consideration of the Philippine Independence question at its last meeting.

PRESIDENT CHASE WILL SPEAK AT HONOR CEREMONY

Scheduled For 8:30 At Methodist Church; Much Interest In Event.

The Order of the Golden Fleece will hold its annual tapping in the Methodist church at 8:30 o'clock tonight. President Harry Woodburn Chase will be the speaker. Professor Horace Williams will introduce Dr. Chase.

Hooded figures will stalk the aisles, in impressive ceremony, to pounce upon the select few who have been sufficiently outstanding in the different student activities to merit membership in the Fleece.

The usual wide interest is centering on tonight's tapping, naturally enough, since Golden Fleece is the second oldest collegiate honorary organization in the country, and since membership is generally considered the highest campus honor obtainable.

Speculation among students as to which of their number would be tapped has been rife for months. Prospects of student leaders have been common topics of discussion for weeks. The Daily Tar Heel put forth the list thought by staff members to have the best chances in the issue of April 25.

Tonight's tapping, when the black-robed argonauts roam the aisles, will bring the long period to an end, and from all indications there will be a record crowd present for the annually impressive ceremony.

President Chase's appearance tonight will be one of the last opportunities for the retiring head of the University to appear in an official capacity before the student body as a whole.

CAFETERIA GOES OUT OF BUSINESS

Successful Management by Mrs. Troutman Keeps Welcome In Open For Two Years.

The Welcome In cafeteria, next to the post office, closed its doors this morning to further business. This cafeteria, which has been under the management of Mrs. W. E. Troutman, has been operating for approximately the last two years.

Prior to the opening of the Welcome In cafeteria the building was occupied by numerous other cafeterias, all of which were forced to close up after operating for a month or more.

For a while the building was rented by a Greek cafe and cafeteria combined; but on account of business troubles, it soon closed its doors. Then just before the Welcome In cafeteria occupied the place, a cafeteria was operated there under the name of the Carolina cafeteria, which also closed up in a short while.

When Mrs. Troutman opened the new Welcome In cafeteria some two years ago, everyone thought that it would meet the same fate as all of the others. But by good business management and by serving a good menu, the Welcome In was able to continue much longer than any of its predecessors.

The announcement of its closure this morning came as a blow to the community. No plans have yet been made for a future opening.

POLICE OFFICERS IN EXCITING RACE

Model T Rum-Runners Almost Escape Local Law Enforcers.

(By D. C. McDuffie)

Policemen Wright and Lloyd had a very exciting experience Saturday night. A report came to these officers that a 1925 model Ford roadster was coming through Chapel Hill loaded with liquor. The Chapel Hill policemen were too smart, however, to allow this fast model T Ford roadster to come through the town of Chapel Hill without some disturbance, so they waited for the vicious rum-runner to make his appearance.

The officers were soon convinced that the report was a very true one, because they soon heard the sound of a buzzing model T motor. The Chief and Officer Wright were in the force's model A Ford facing in the same direction the rum-runner was coming and prepared to make a fast "take-off." This dangerous rum-runner, unaware of the fact that two officers were waiting for him, came by driving very slowly, but as soon as he saw the two officers in blue he advanced his speed considerably.

Chief Lloyd and Officer Wright were off on the second. According to the report it was impossible for them to gain much speed on the fast model T Ford until they were almost within the city limits of Dur-

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

There is no more justification for being a chaplain in the army or navy than there is for being a chaplain in a speakeasy.—Rev. Peter Ainsley.

Judging From The Results

The social activities of the past week-end have been classed as entirely successful. However one may judge the success or failure of a social affair, we believe that all will agree as to the success of the entertainment of the last few days.

The entire plan was conceived early during the winter quarter and was tried as an experiment by the organizations staging the series of dances. It is likely that the plan will be continued with additional affairs added each year. If the success of this year's "Spring Frolic" is used as a gauge of what future affairs will be, we favor it wholeheartedly.

Not only did the dances serve as a pleasant interlude for the work between mid-terms and final exams, but it also added what Carolina has long needed—a more definite arrangement of spring dances.

Here we have the German Club and various organizations to give dances. But there is little orderliness to any dances given with the exception of the German Club affairs. No one denies that such an affair each spring shortly after mid-terms would aid in placing the social activities for the year on a more definite basis. While not being afflicted with jazz-mania still we willingly join in the chorus, "On with the dance."

Experimental Education—A Total Failure?

An announcement has just been made by President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin to the effect that the experimental college of that institution will be closed the first of June. This statement came as a tremendous blow to those who believe in the virtues of experimental education as practiced at Wisconsin. The opponents of this type of educational method no doubt feel a certain vindication in Wisconsin's failure, if it is a failure.

Under the tutelage of Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, philosopher and educator, students studied with a philosophical attitude. They tried to study life as a whole. Optional attendance, no examinations in our meaning of the term, and weekly seminars were features of the college. These features gave students many liberties, of course, and placed students upon their own initiative. Students were responsible for their work to no faculty member but to themselves. But the experimental college has failed, the cause attributed by President Frank being "internal friction," whatever that may mean.

Rollins College, which has been the co-leader with Wisconsin in the field of this new education, now has a greater task ahead. Upon that institution now rests the responsibility of proving the practicability of the methods which the experimental educators have innovated. It is a difficult undertaking for it has the appearance of being more theoretical than practiceable, whether or not such is the case. If Rollins fails, then it would seem that there is such a thing as too much freedom for the student.

We hope, however, that because certain elements of the new education seem undesirable, educators will not view the entire undertaking as a failure. The placing of students upon individual initiative, the significant thing about this new kind of education, it seems to us, needs much more emphasis by our educators than has heretofore been given.

"Thorns and Orange Blossoms"

The famous "Imperial Stock Company" deserves great praise for its recent production "Thorns and Orange Blossoms." It certainly showed the high calibre of professional acting of which the members of the company are so proud, and did not even "bring the blush of shame to anyone's cheek." But in a more serious vein, the play and the inter-acts provided an evening's entertainment the equal of which has not been seen in Chapel Hill in a long time. The play pictured in a most amusing and pleasant way the very sophisticated melodrama of the '90's. The audiences entered easily into the spirit of the play and responded to its type of humor and sentimentality. Especially on the first night it "followed its natural instincts to reward villainy with disapprobation and to applaud virtue in distress."

The members of the faculty and their friends who produced the play are due much credit for the pleasurable evenings they gave us and for the service they have done for charity in Orange County. We encourage them to produce more of this work which we are sure gave them as much pleasure as it did to us.

Bob House, comedian of the "Imperial Stock Company," wants it announced that he appreciates the tremendous applause he received upon each of his appearances on the stage. He knew the public had as much confidence in him as he did in himself. Mr. MacMillan declares he is very much alive and in the best of health despite his supposed murder which occurred both Friday and Saturday evenings. Dr. McKie is very much worried over a certain question, and says that his ability and lawful right as a preacher does not extend beyond the stage. Although he is accustomed to take ministerial parts in plays, his work does not give him the right to perform any particular services in actual life which might run in competition to the usual duties of Chapel Hill preachers.

All in all, the production of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" provided excellent entertainment both for the audiences and the participants, was a good service in behalf of the poor of Orange county, and was another triumph for Mr. Green and Mr. Steele in the Little Theater Movement. —A. V. L.

Readers' Opinions

WHAT SHALL WE DO?

It has been rumored, and from very reliable sources, that the University is facing a financial crisis. The news has reached the writers that the administrative officials have been called upon to reduce the present clerical forces and equipment expenses to the minimum. It is also hinted that a cut in the salaries of the faculty might become necessary.

It is a regretable situation since the University has just started towards the heights to which those who love it and support it have been wishing to see it attain. It has won national recognition and is conceded to be one of the foremost institutions of learning in the south. To halt our present progressive program would be to destroy in a very short time what it has taken years of toil, patience and money to build.

There are already to those who are intimately connected with the University, evidences of the slowing up of our progress. Already, we have witnessed the departure of some of our most eminent professors who have found better positions elsewhere. This comes as a blow to the school.

These men will be sorely missed, and it will take years to replace them. Can we be so inconsiderate of our future and the youth of North Carolina as to not awaken to these facts and try by every conceivable means to remedy this situation which imperils the future welfare of our state.

In casting about for an immediate means of relief, we find that it is impossible to legislate for an increase in the existing tax rate under our present economical conditions. Then we examine the items of expense of the University for the purpose of detecting some possible place where the expense may be reduced at the injury to all concerned. We find that the University spends several thousands of dollars on entertainment, faculty dinners, commencement programs, and various other forms of social activities which add little to the intellectual attainments.

While these activities are quite important and have a definite value, we cannot compare them with the importance of academic work. We would suggest that the expenses be cut in these activities and not in the all important academic departments.

We know that every senior looks forward with pride, hope and longing to the day on which he will receive his or her diploma. This day is usually one of pomp and celebrity. Although this adds nothing to his general knowledge or education it gives him a few hours of pleasure at the expense of the school.

We believe that there are few seniors at the University who would not be willing to sacrifice a few moments of pleasure in order to help their Alma Mater to endure and continue its usefulness to the state and nation. To do away entirely with these functions is not our proposal, but to merely cut them to the minimum. — R.W.P. and D.A.K.

"Thorns and Orange Blossoms"

(By Robert G. Dawes)

When the firm of Morley and Throckmorton leased the old Rialto Theatre in Hoboken back in 1928, they little "recked" what deeds were to be perpetrated in their names. These gentlemen started the proverbial ball a-rolling, and the passion for Victorian revivals took its place with those for antique furniture and longer skirts.

Chapel Hill was treated to a presentation of the fifty-year old melodrama, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" Friday and Saturday nights of last week. The local production played to capacity houses both evenings. It is doubtful that the nurturing theatre of the folk drama has ever contained such a riotously appreciative and enthusiastic audience. They came to watch, but remained to cheer. Vociferous, sincere applause, righteously indignant hisses for the villain, and a constant roar of merriment marked this epochal entertainment from curtain to curtain. Spectators, many of them stolid and staid faculty members, were somewhat hesitant and retricent at first. Inhibitions engendered by the modern theatre prevented them from expressing their real feelings. But some well-placed and competent instigators soon dispelled all tendencies toward self consciousness, and a splendid and un-inhibited time was had by all.

Mr. Robert Sellers, a talented young technician of the professional theatre, imported especially from New York for the production, displayed in his settings a fine conception of the spirit of the Victorian theatre. To anyone conversant with stage history, Mr. Sellers' use of wing-pieces, back-drops, and leaf-borders gave ample testimony of that gentleman's painstaking research and untiring labor. With both settings and costumes of such excellence, the production was virtually assured success from the beginning. Madame Prouty, modiste, designed and executed with consummate artistry the costumes for the female characters, an element which went far to produce the desired atmosphere of the period with such accuracy. The men's costumes and the properties were also more than satisfactory, and gave evidence that those able producers, Messers Green and Steele, were well acquainted wih stage arts and artists when they engaged the various individuals who were responsible for the staging of the play. The appropriate incidental music which added so materially to the flavor of the play, was prepared and rendered under the direction of Mrs. McCall.

And now for the difficult and dangerous part of any criticism: the acting and the direction. The casting was admirable, with strict regard for "type" in the majority of characters. Comparisons are impossible. There was such a wealth of variety in the characterizations and each character so admirably portrayed, that to single out one or two for special commendation would be both fool-hardy and perilous. The gentle love of Violet and Randolph was made pathetically real by Mr. and Mrs. Russell. If the approbation of the audience is a criterion of artistic value the work of the first leading lady was among the finest ever seen on the Playmaker stage. The haughty, fierce movements of Lady Ryvvers were a joy to behold. Tommy Swift and his fascinating Monica, portrayed by Mr. House and Miss Stratton, provided many delightful and humorous moments, while in the field of character parts, Messrs. Potter and McCoy gave to their small but important roles complete understanding and finished performance.

To H. M. Jones must be given much of the credit for the success of the whole enterprise. His villainous villain was a masterpiece. His direction too was, for the most part, exceptionally good, but it is to be feared that because of his proximity to the play, he failed to have always that sense of perspective, so essential to a director. A play of this nature does not need to be burlesqued. Christopher Morley showed his wisdom in playing "After Dark" absolutely "straight," that is, seriously. Mention might be made in this connection of the gospel hymns, which smacked too decidedly of a Billy Sunday mass meeting. This was a technical error. Its authenticity to period is sought after—and, as in this case, followed so closely in costume and scenery—it should certainly be observed in the selection and rendition of church music.

Of gesture and stage movement, the criticism might justly be advanced that both were just a trifle too obvious. There was too much of the "ham" element present. Saturday night saw an improvement in this respect for the audience called for more serious acting, but the burlesque

Carolina-Virginia Games 'Head Week's Full Card

TRACKMEN MEET PRINCETON STARS

Ben Hodges and Teammates Offer Stiff Competition; Tennis Team On Southern Tour.

The final two games of the annual Carolina-Virginia baseball series, the first here Friday and the second in Greensboro Saturday, and the Carolina-Princeton track meet at Princeton Saturday head a big sport card for Tar Heel teams during the coming week.

The Tar Heel nine faces perhaps the toughest assignment. They meet the strong N. C. State team, one of the leading contenders for the Big Five title, in Raleigh Tuesday, then swing back to the Hill to meet South Carolina here Wednesday and Virginia here Friday, then journey to Greensboro Saturday for the annual Gate City classic with Virginia.

The track team has but one engagement, but that would seem to be plenty. Princeton, with Ben Hodges and its other line of stars, rates easily with the best track teams in the country, and the Tar Heels will meet them at Princeton where the Tigers can throw in four and five contestants in every meet to muster to the fullest their great scoring power.

Carolina's state championship tennis team will likewise open its most strenuous campaign of the season. The Tar Heel netters leave Monday on their annual tour, to carry them south this year, and after eight matches in nine days to bring them to the southern tourney May 15, 16 and 17. They open with Davidson there Tuesday, then meet Tennessee at Knoxville Wednesday, Vanderbilt at Nashville Thursday, Sewanee at Sewanee Friday, and Georgia Tech at Atlanta Saturday.

The Tar Heel golfers, likewise state champions, return from the week-end's southern tournament for a good week's rest before playing N. C. State a return match in Raleigh on Sunday for their one contest of the week.

T. E. P. TENNIS TEAM BEATS DELTA TAU DELTA

Tau Epsilon Phi's tennis team defeated Delta Tau Delta yesterday afternoon in a match which was featured by forfeits. The final score was 3-2, but only two singles matches were contested.

Selkin made the victory possible for Tau Epsilon Phi by beating Owens 1-6, 6-4, 6-4, after a great uphill battle. Scales, Delta Tau Delta, outplayed Shohan 6-3, 6-3 in the other singles match. T. E. P. won one singles and a doubles match by forfeit, and in turn dropped the forfeit, and in turn dropped the last doubles in the same manner.

"F" Beats Grimes

In one of the hardest fought intramural tennis matches this season Everett ("I") defeated Grimes yesterday afternoon.

Braswell was the outstanding player on the Grimes team and succeeded in winning his singles match with Blauner by the score of 7-5, 6-3. "I" won the other three matches including the doubles. Breen, "I," defeated Andrew, Grimes, 6-3, 6-1; Kaufman, "I," defeated Hodges 6-4, 7-5.

In the doubles Blauman and Kaufman defeated Hodges and Anderson 6-0, 3-6, 6-3.

Sigma Nu forfeited to Delta Sigma Phi yesterday afternoon in a scheduled game.

GAMECOCK NINE MEETS CAROLINA HERE TOMORROW

Renew Baseball Rivalry Latent Since 1926; South Carolina Reported Strong This Season.

The Universities of South and North Carolina renew an old baseball rivalry with a game on Emerson field here tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The rival universities of the sister states have not met on the diamond since the spring of 1926 when Coach Duke Duncan's strong Tar Heel nine won a tough 3-2 victory.

The Gamecocks are reported to have a strong team this year, and Coach Jim Ashmore of the Tar Heels may execute several shifts to bolster up Carolina's strength.

The injured Rand may be able to be back on second base again, in which case Jackson would be left free for first, and Maus could be shifted back to the outfield.

This would be a great help. Captain Maus, to whom the big league scouts have paid much attention already, is equally good behind the bat, at first or in center field.

But the Tar Heels, long on catchers and short on outfielders who can hit consistently, need him in center. Either Potter or Kushner could be used behind the bat, and from Davis, House, Sher and the others Coach Ashmore might muster a strong hitting outfield combine.

The Tar Heels played but one game last week, with the result that the pitching crew is in universally good shape. Auburn Wright, veteran right-hander, is the most likely Tar Heel pitcher.

This will be the last before the Tar Heels play the final two games of their annual three-game series with Virginia. The first will be played here Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and the second will be the annual gala classic in Memorial stadium in Greensboro Saturday.

CO-ED RACQUETEERS TO MEET RALEIGH TEAM

The newly organized co-ed tennis team will play a match with the Raleigh tennis team this afternoon on the Raleigh courts. Lil Jackson and Ida Currie represent the Carolina co-eds.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

By Jack Bessen

Amassing a high total of 76 points, Carolina's cinder path artists continued their habit of winning the state championships by more than equalling their opponents' complete score. State, Davidson and Duke finished second, third and fourth, respectively.

"Ten Point" Farmer again upheld his fast-growing reputation by annexing the century and 220 dashes. Charlie tied the southern record of 9.8 in the century and 22.2 in the 220, which was remarkable time, considering the slow condition of the track.

Minor Barkley also scored ten points for the champions, copping both the mile and half-mile. Minor won the mile under wraps, and broke away from the field in the half-mile to break the state record of 1:58.6 made last year by McGinn of State with the time of 1:57.

Whittle and Slusser put on a real duel in the 220 low hurdles. The Davidson star crept away from Rip on the last hurdle and thus made a clean sweep of the hurdle events. In the 120 high hurdles, Whittle broke the five-year state record, but since he knocked over the last bar, his record was thrown out of the books.

The Tar Heels annexed all the points in the discus throw. Dameron, Brown and Adkins finished in that order.

The hot weather kept the men participating in the field events from making any remarkable showings. For example, "Brodie" Arnold, who cleared 13 feet last week in the meet with the W. & L. Generals, could clear the bar at only 11:11½, and "Weasel" Neiman, a consistent 22½ foot broad jumper, fell a foot below his usual standard.

"Weasel" Neiman severely sprained his back while pole vaulting, and after taking a few jumps in the broad jump, was forced to retire.

By far the most thrilling race of the afternoon was the two-mile run, which was won by Bill Simon of Duke. Cliff Baucom, cross country captain-elect, dogged Simon's heels the entire distance, but the Duke star just nosed out Cliff — incidentally both men coasted in under the record time made by Pritchett of Carolina in 1927. It's just another of these rare cases where the breaking of the state record isn't good enough for a first place.

Carolina's representatives in the football shuttle relay ran away with the event. Jimmy Magner, star halfback, handed Fysal a five-yard lead, which he gave to Redfern. Redfern increased this lead and Chuck Erickson's sprint was just a matter of formality.

The majority of the spectators were Carolina fans, all the Tar Heel entries receiving fine support from the stands.

The World War Memorial stadium, where the third and last game of the Carolina-Virginia baseball series will be held next Saturday, is one of the prettiest ball parks in the state and south. The stands are made of cement and are directly behind home plate. The infield is one of the grass cut-away infields, thus making the play of batted balls faster.

With but a week and a half left to the end of the intramural league schedule, the league titles are still in doubt. The dormitory title has narrowed down to three teams, Carr, "F" and New Dorms. None of these teams has met defeat, and they have played a good brand of baseball. In the fraternity league the field is a bit more open. Six teams have yet to meet defeat and at present it seems that there will have to be a playoff to decide the title winners.

TAR HEEL NINE PLAYS STATE AT RALEIGH TODAY

Game To Have Bearing On Big Five Race; Fleming or Edwards To Hurl For Carolina.

The Carolina nine invades Raleigh for the first time this season to take on N. C. State at Riddick field this afternoon.

Either Frank Fleming, steadiest of the Tar Heel moundsmen, or Paul Edwards, who hurled stellar relief ball against Wake Forest Saturday, will take the box for the Tar Heels.

State's pitcher has not been announced yet, but from the significance which the contest will have as regards the Big Five race, the Wolfpack will probably use its ace, Bill Averette, conqueror of the Blue Devils and other foes.

The Wolfpack, hot after a Big Five crown, is just back from a Virginia invasion that opened successfully with victories over Maryland and Virginia, but closed with losses to Washington and Lee and V. P. I.

The Tar Heels, who had an even more disastrous Virginia trip recently, lost their third straight game Saturday, outhitting Wake Forest 12 to 8, but letting down in the pinches and dropping the contest 8-7.

Both teams will be hot to shake the jinx that has dogged their steps in recent games, and likewise to push on up the Big Five ladder.

With the right-handed aces of the respective crews scheduled for duty, the contest promises to be warm.

Rand, veteran second baseman, is still on the injured list and the lineup for Carolina will probably show Potter, c; Captain Maus, 1b; Jackson, 2b; Whitehead, ss; Lufty, 3b; Davis, lf; Sher, cf; House, rf; and Fleming or Edwards, p.

State will probably start Plonk, c; Gerock, 1b; Furtado, 2b; Wilkie, ss; Turner, 3b; Hargrove, lf; Snipes or Meade, cf; Morgan or Beake, rf; and Averette, p.

Pikas Upset S. Z.'s

Pika Kappa Alpha broke Sigma Zeta's winning streak yesterday afternoon by the score 7-2. The Pikas, bunching their hits in the last two innings, tallied 5 runs.

Brooks, the losing pitcher, received poor support, his team committing 6 errors. McNair fanned 9 men and allowed only 4 hits.

Aycock Wins

Aycock defeated Old West yesterday afternoon 9 to 5. The game was slow and uninteresting. Sayre and Woodley pitched for Old West but neither could stop the winners. Taylor served behind the plate for the losers.

Hooks pitched and Bernstein caught for the victors. Hooks also shared with S. Wall for honors at bat. Wilson and Keldog led the Old West hitters.

S. P. E. forfeited to the Phi Alpha nine in a scheduled game yesterday.

TENNIS TEAM ON TWO WEEKS' TRIP

Netmen Open With Davidson This Afternoon And Wind Up Southern Tour With Conference Tourney at New Orleans.

Undefeated for the season and winnerof both singles and doubles in the North Carolina College tourney, the University of North Carolina tennis team fares forth today for a two-week southern tour which will come to a climax with participation in the southern tourney at New Orleans May 15, 16 and 17.

The Tar Heels open against Davidson at Davidson tomorrow afternoon, following which they swing into Tennessee Wednesday, Vanderbilt Thursday, and Sewanee Friday. Then Saturday they will journey into Atlanta to meet Georgia Tech. Alabama will be met the following Monday, Tulane on Tuesday, L. S. U. on Wednesday, and then will begin the Southern tourney on Thursday.

The Tar Heels making the trip with Coach John Kenfield were Hinkey Hendlin, who won the state singles championship; Captain Bill Merritt; Phil Lisken, who teamed with Hendlin to give the Tar Heels their left-handed championship doubles team; Ed Graham; and Henry Baggs.

The Carolina team has already met and beaten Davidson and Alabama, but will be playing the other teams on the trip for the first time. The Davidson match this afternoon promises to be especially interesting. Davidson pushed the Tar Heels close for honors in the recent North Carolina college tourney, and it was Captain Johnston of Davidson whom the Tar Heel Hendlin had to defeat in the finals.

SIGMA NU'S HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET

President Harry W. Chase and Hon. Walter Murphy Speakers At Fraternity Dinner; Henderson Toastmaster.

Addresses by President Harry W. Chase, of the University, and Hon. Walter Murphy, prominent legislator and financier, were features of the annual Psi chapter of Sigma Nu fraternity banquet, held at the Carolina Inn Saturday night. Professor Archibald Henderson served as toastmaster for the occasion.

The banquet was held in connection with a house party given by the fraternity and some forty girls were among the ninety persons present. Sigma Nu members of the faculty and their wives who were present were Dean and Mrs. Addison Hibbard, Professor and Mrs. E. E. Peacock, and Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Lyons.

Walter Murphy, founder of Psi chapter, spoke of the growth of the University and the fraternity especially during the ten years in which Dr. Chase has been president. Speaking for the fraternity he expressed extreme regret that the University head is leaving.

Dr. Chase, member of the Dartmouth chapter, thanked the fraternity for the farewell given him, and expressed regrets that he was leaving Chapel Hill after residing for twenty years. He told the group of working with "Pete" Murphy in securing appropriations for the University from the state legislature, and what a help Psi chapter's founder had been to the University for the past forty years.

Charles Price welcomed the girls on behalf of the chapter, and Miss Elizabeth Murphy, of Salisbury, graciously accepted the greeting. Cooper Person, commander of the chapter, spoke on the progress of the fraternity at Carolina.

The Aviation Course

Small Number of Students Enrolled; Course in Experimental Stage

The course in aero-dynamics in the University which is given as an optional to juniors and seniors in the department of mechanical engineering now has two seniors and one graduate student enrolled. The apparent reason for the low enrollment this year is that the course is just in the experimental stage, and most of the students had already chosen their courses before aero-dynamics became a part of the curriculum.

Quite a number of students, however, have voiced their intention of enrolling next year, and a few have been making use of the equipment for conducting experiments of their own. One freshman completed a model of the heavy twin-motored transport planes that flew successfully.

The equipment at present will be sufficient for instructions during the next year or two, but as more progress is made, more equipment will be needed. Just now, the department has one Vaught plane, one Liberty motor, a single-cylinder motor for test purposes and three propellors.

The object of this course is to give the students who plan to go to more specialized schools a fair knowledge of the fundamentals of aviation so that they will not be handicapped in this respect.—J. S. S.

Dr. Noble's Death

Brother of M. C. S. Noble Died at His Home in Selma Sunday Morning

Dr. Richard J. Noble, brother of M. C. S. Noble, died at his home in Selma Sunday morning from the effects of the injuries he had received in an automobile accident April 19.

Attended by high officials of Masonry, leading physicians and a large gathering of friends and neighbors, funeral services were held Monday in Selma, and burial services in Oakwood cemetery in Raleigh.

Dr. Noble was injured on April 19 when his automobile overturned on the Raleigh-Selma highway while answering a professional call. Pneumonia developed in Johnston County Hospital, and last Wednesday Dr. Noble insisted that he be taken to his home in Selma where he died early Sunday morning.

He served as Grand Master of Masons in 1889, as Potentate of Oasis Shrine in 1919, and held many other illustrious offices in the Masonic order.

He is survived by one brother, M. C. S. Noble, dean of the school of education of the University of North Carolina; four children: Ann S. Noble, of Selma; Dr. Robert P. Noble, of Raleigh; Albert M. Noble, of Smithfield, and Walter Moore Noble, of Brawley, Cal., and six grandchildren: Robert P. Noble, Jr., Richard J. Noble, Jr., Mary Primrose Noble, Ann Gilmore Noble, Billy Ward Noble and Betty Noble.

(Raleigh Times)

Death of Dr. Richard J. Noble depletes, perhaps almost ends, the list of the noble company of country doctors whose glory was of another age, but who have planted roots of honor and affection in the present that will bloom for a long time.

Dr. Noble was seventy-seven years of age, he had practiced medicine for fifty-five years, he was following a call of his service when the accident occurred that resulted in his death. In the practice of medicine he had built up a profound respect among his fellows; in Masonry he had been accorded the highest honors; as a citizen he was one of those four-square personages who take their obligations with old-fashioned seriousness; as a man he had accumulated in his long years literal phalanxes of those who loved him for himself and for the good he had managed to do and the comfort he had brought.

Another of the Old Guard gone—an old guard that never needed a shield because it never thought to give ground!

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT OF DR. PATTERSON TO MISS SARAH ROBERTSON

The engagement of Miss Sarah Robertson to Dr. Howard Patterson was announced in New York yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Robertson.

Thus are united two families who used to dwell in Chapel Hill. Dr. Patterson's grandfather, Eben Alexander, was professor of Greek in the University, and his father, Drew Patterson, who died in 1928, was in the faculty here as professor of physics and dean of the school of applied science. Miss Robertson's grandfather, Dr. Thomas Harris, was the head of the first medical school connected with the University.

The mothers of Dr. Patterson and Miss Robertson grew up in Chapel Hill together: the Misses Eleanor Alexander and Mary Harris. The Alexanders lived where Spencer hall (the woman's building) now stands. The Harris home was on Cameron avenue; it was demolished three years ago to give place to the Zeta Psi fraternity house.

After he was graduated here and had completed the two-year medical course, Dr. Patterson pursued his medical education in the Harvard school of medicine. For a while he served as interne at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital in Boston.

UNIVERSITY MEN DEBATE BOSTON IN RETURN AFFAIR

The University debating team debated Boston University last night at Boston. The Tar Heel debaters upheld the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved, That the nations of the world should adopt some plan of complete disarmament of all forces, except those which are needed for police purposes." North Carolina was represented by J. M. Bailey, G. P. Carr, John Wilkinson and J. C. Williams. This was a return debate with Boston University as their team was entertained at Chapel Hill on April 19. At that time our debaters supported the identical side of the same question and won the debate. The team which spoke last night also debated Boston at Chapel Hill. The first debate was a very hotly contested debate and the first that the Boston forensic artists lost this year.

The result last night's debate cannot be announced as the Tar Heel went to press before it could learn the decision.

ham. The Chief said that the car must have averaged at least 60 miles per hour all through the race. Nevertheless, the two officers did not give up and as the rum-runner entered the suburban section of Durham, they were but a short distance behind. As the rum-runner was under the influence of his own product, he could not keep his car under control, and so collided with a car that was parked on the left-hand side of the street. The two officers arrived immediately after the accident and found that one of the rum-runners had made his escape but that the other had stayed to look after the automobile.

The wrecked Ford was searched and four gallons of whiskey found. The person driving the car gave his name as James Brown. The two officers took possession of the wrecked car and put the driver in jail.

GLEE CLUB SINGS HERE THURSDAY

The University glee club will appear in the Playmaker theatre next Thursday night as a regular part of music week.

The concert will be the first given this year on the campus by the glee club with the exception of two chapel appearances last quarter. Admission will be 50 cents for students and 75 cents for outsiders.

This year the glee club has functioned entirely without financial assistance from the University. The season tours, although very successful, did not result in sufficient profit to finance the two big contest trips made recently by the group. An expense of about $480 was involved by the district contest at Greenville in which the University glee club was winner, and the trip made to New York in order to participate in the national intercollegiate glee club contest cost over $600.

A few small donations have been received by the club, but the assistance and support of University students as well as Chapel Hill residents is much needed.

spirit was still to much in evidence. The play doesn't need it; in fact, it would very likely be materially benefitted if it were played "straight," after the Hoboken manner, and also the Jitney Players, in "The Murder in the Red Barn." But this is a debatable matter, and cannot be dealt with here.

The indisputable fact remains, however, that the citizens and inhabitants of the fair village of Chapel Hill, owe unmeasurable gratitude to the producers, the director, and to all responsible for this production, for a most enjoyable entertainment.

Kiwanis Clubs Will Hold Joint Meeting

The local Kiwanis club will hold a joint meeting tonight in Mebane with four other clubs in this district. Burlington, Graham and Chapel Hill clubs are to meet as the guests of the Mebane club for a get-together frolic. No speeches have been planned for the occasion, and the program is to consist of a general "big time" for the members.

PARKER FAVORED BY DI SENATORS

Jack Dungan Elected Treasurer For Next Year; Banquet To Be Held Soon.

The most important feature of the Di Senate program last night was the discussion of the confirmation of Judge Parker as associate justice of the United States supreme court. After arguments were given by those who supported each side, the senate voted 22-3 in favor of his confirmation.

The election of treasurer for next year was held. Senator Jack Dungan was chosen to succeed Senator Pat Patterson, the present incumbent.

Plans were discussed for a joint meeting of the Di and the Phi to be held next Tuesday night. The Di will be host on this occasion. Senators Kenan, Hamer and Wood were chosen to select a topic for discussion at this meeting and reported the topic accepted by the senate. The topic is: "Resolved, That the Di and Phi favor the bill now before the legislature making 'bumming' a misdemeanor.

Senator Dungan reported for the banquet committee that plans were as yet incomplete. He read a menu of the Carolina Inn which will probably be accepted. Senators Wood and Fleming-Jones were added to the committee which already consisted of Senators Dungan, Patterson and Dratler.

Mr. A. Liebowitz and Mr. C. Johnson were admitted as new members at this meeting. President Rector spoke to them after their acceptance.

FARRAND VISITS U. N. C. AND DUKE

To Conduct Conferences In The Humanities.

Max Farrand, research director of the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, will spend from Wednesday, May 7, to Sunday, May 11, in Chapel Hill and Durham for conferences with those in the University of North Carolina and in Duke engaged in advanced research in the field of the Humanities. The Huntington is one of the world's great libraries and is attempting to become a research institution for the Humanities comparable to some of the great research institutions in the sciences. Mr. Farrand comes to tell students in the two universities interested and engaged in research beyond the doctoral dissertation stage about the resources and plans of the library and to get a first hand idea of the research being carried on at North Carolina and Duke so as to establish relations that may later be of mutual advantage.

"The field of research at the library," says Mr. Farrand, "the development of civilization in England and America—is really as broad as the world, and includes every discipline or subject in the University. We are, however, leaving the sciences out of account as the California Institute of Technology and the

Two Corrections

Upon the complaint of Mr. Robert G. Dawes, special dramatic reviewer, whose criticism of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" appeared in the Tar Heel yesterday morning, the Tar Heel wishes to state that the following phrase in Mr. Dawes' contribution—"Messrs. MacMillan, McKie, and Olsen did themselves exceeding proud"—was omitted.

The proprietor of the Campus Confectionery, Mr. Jeff Thomas, complains that the statement in yesterday's Tar Heel that, "For a while the building was rented by a Greek cafe and cafeteria combined, but on account of business troubles, it soon closed its doors" is a misstatement. He says that his place of business did not go bankrupt as the Tar Heel statement implied, but that it had been sold to a Mr. Bowden who went bankrupt.

BROGDEN SPEAKS TO SENIOR CLASS

Emphasizes Honest Day's Work; Class Votes Gift To University.

An address by Justice W. J. Brogden of the North Carolina supreme court, who stressed the importance of "an honest day's work," featured the farewell smoker of the University senior class in Swain hall here Monday night.

Giving expression to his fondness for Biblical illustrations, Justice Brogden, an alumnus of the University, meted out advice and experience to the Carolina seniors "as an older brother to one who is younger."

"Fifty years ago," he stated, "all lecturers and commencement speakers talked about culture and its fineness. When it found that such teaching did not fit, they began talking about leadership. But this was a philosophy of self-interest.

"Twenty-five years ago," he continued, "they began talking about service, and we had more service than we could do anything with. Then came the time when utility was the word. One should go to college because it paid. But this was still a philosophy of self-interest and did not add to the zest, enthusiasm and pleasure of life."

"Today," Justice Brogden stated, "it's not breadth of learning, depth of thought, or utility" that make for the greatest social harmony and happiness, but "the ability to do an honest day's work."

For after all, "it's doing the hard, irksome, routine tasks well that adds to the glory and charm of life," he concluded.

The speaker was introduced by Ralph C. Greene, president of the senior class.

At the business session that followed the address, the class voted to place as a permanent gift to the University a bronze fountain, bearing the name and date of the class, at the head of the stairs leading to the main reading room in the new library at a cost of $300.

In addition, it was voted that

PHI OVERWHELMS PHILIPPINE BILL

Representatives Stanly, Kelly, Jackson and Hobgood Defeat Independence Measure.

The Phi Assembly last night rejected by a two-thirds vote the resolution sponsored by Representative Nazareno of the Philippine Islands which asked immediate and complete independence for the Islands.

The bill was defeated by an onslaught of opposition led by Representatives Stanly, Kelly, Jackson and Hobgood. Those favoring the measure were Representatives Nazareno, Speight and Uzzell.

Representative Stanly pointed out the 30 years of successful relations between the United States and the Philippines. Representatives Jackson and Kelly gave information concerning the present government and progress of the Philippines under the supervision of the United States.

Representative Jackson outlined the extent that the Islands are governed by the United States, and Kelly pointed out to the assembly the progress in education and the upbuilding of the Islands under the control of the United States. Representative Hobgood favored domestic independence that they should receive complete independence.

Representative Nazareno pointed out in introducing the the bill that the Filipinos were universally for independence. Representative Speight contended that the United States should discontinue her imperialistic policy toward the Philippines.

Following the discussion the Phi, after a recommendation from the Di Senate, favored a discussion on the present proposal before the state legislature forbidding "bumming" by a state law.

The summer school is organized into three general divisions, the College Division, the Graduate Division, and the Division of Elementary Education.

Lynch To Head Glee Club For Next Year

At the meeting of the University glee club Monday afternoon in Person hall, Steve Lynch, rising junior, was elected president for the coming year. John Miller will serve in the capacity of vice-president, with Charles Duffy as secretary.

Lynch has done outstanding work this year with the glee club which won the southern championship and placed well in the national contest. The University singers took a number of extensive trips this season, including concerts in Carnegie Hall, New York City, and in the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C.

The glee club closes a successful season with a concert tonight in the Playmaker theatre. This will be the first public performance of the club in Chapel Hill under the direction of H. S. Dyer.

GRAHAM SPEAKS TO PRE-LAWYERS

Gives Interesting View On Parker Decision.

Speaking to a small but appreciative group of pre-law students Monday night in the law building, Professor Frank Graham outlined the steps in the coming of the industrial revolution to North Carolina, and the part of the lawyer in dealing with problems resulting therefrom. He showed the need for study of the industrial revolution in its relation to law and legal developments. Designating this change as the latest chapter in the march of power engines around the world, the speaker traced its rise, value and consequences, and resulting need for adjustments. Referring to the experiences of England and New England, he brought out the advantages of profiting by a study and avoidance, as far as possible, of difficulties encountered by them. The way of adjustment is law making and judicial interpretation in the light of changing conditions.

In an interesting aside discussion, Mr. Graham gave his opinion that Judge Parker was merely bound by the decisions of the supreme court in the Red Jacket case, and that he did not, in all probability, agree entirely with the common law principle involved.

GLEE CLUB WILL SING TOMORROW

As a feature of the national Music Week celebration here, the University glee club will give its annual home performance in the Playmaker theatre tomorrow night at 8:15.

The concert promises to be one of the finest given here by the group, which has just returned from a very successful tour of the southeast. General admission will be 75 cents.

Last Wednesday evening the club gave a concert in the Italian garden of the beautiful and exclusive Mayflower hotel in Washington, D. C., and the appearance was a marked success musically. It was highly commended by an audience regretably small.

The following is quoted from the Washington Evening Star: "The Glee Club of the University of North Carolina lived up to its reputation in the program presented last night before an enthusiastic audience. The director deserves high commendation for his training of the group in fine phrasing, excellent pianissimo singing, clean attack, and clear enunciation." Similar comments have appeared in every place where the club sang.

The same program which was used on the recent trip will be given here for the enjoyment of those who like good music well rendered. A feature of the program will be a group of songs by American composers, without which, states Mr. Dyer, the director, no program is complete. The American group, representing the higher type of music, has been highly applauded wherever heard.

HOODED FIGURES STALK IN AISLES SEARCHING MEN

Banquet for Neophytes of Order Is Held At Carolina Inn.

The Order of the Golden Fleece tapped nine Carolina men at an impressive ceremony held in the Methodist church last night. Preceding the tapping there was an introductory speech by Professor Horace Williams, an old Fleece member, and an address by President Chase, an honorary member of the Order.

Gordon Gray, Jason of the organization, introduced Professor Williams as an old Fleece man and one who has been always closely connected with the Order and its ideals. Dr. Williams spoke briefly on how leaders in history had the character and courage to live up to their ideals. "The Fleece never tapped a man who was lacking in character," said Professor Williams. "Galelio, Darwin, and Washington were leaders in their respective fields. The Fleece taps those who show the unique qualities of leadership."

Professor Williams then introduced Dr. Chase, who made a few introductory remarks on the Fleece tapping as a distinctive event of the University year. This was followed by an address on "Leadership in the State and South of Tomorrow."

The speaker recalled the first time that he came to the University campus twenty years ago as a young man out to work for the first time in the South. He found Carolina a unique sort of school rather shut off from the rest of the world. Durham was a two hour drive by buggy in those days. Lights were out at midnight, and main street was very dusty in summer and muddy in winter.

"There are two schools of thought and ideas opposing each other in the South," he asserted, "one that the South will always be sectional, and the other that it is just as much divided and varied as any other part of the country. There is no such thing as the Solid South any longer. Modern methods of industries and transportation are forming a connecting link between the South and the rest of the nation. Southern states are as widely diversified as any other states. The old tendency of the South living in self-contentment has been replaced by a heritage of independence and progress."

He closed saying, "This University stands for men of power and ability regardless of affiliations."

Following this two hooded figures stalked the aisles of the church tapping nine men in the following order: Ed Hamer, Joe Eagles, "Puny" Harper, Clyde Dunn, Pat Patterson, Noah Goodridge, Marion Alexander, Archie Allen and Will Yarborough. Immediately following the ceremonies, a banquet honoring the new Fleece men was held at the Carolina Inn.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Men do not know that this striving for an accumulation of riches is a deadly sin - covetousness.—Cannon Donaldson of Westminster Abbey.

New Auditorium Or No Entertainments!

The recent action of the state Budget Commission in slashing appropriations and calling on various departments to curtail expenditures may indicate that the University will not secure the much needed auditorium for another year. We need an auditorium here. And we need one large enough to accommodate at least half the present student body. Student entertainments, University exercises, plays and other occasions require an auditorium larger than the Methodist church, Gerrard hall, or the Playmakers theatre.

If the date for construction of the proposed auditorium is moved back or postponed indefinitely the Daily Tar Heel favors a movement to suspend or repeal altogether the student entertainment fee. It is unreasonable to tax the students to provide such entertainments unless the Board of Trustees and the state of North Carolina is able to provide its largest institution with an auditorium of sufficient capacity to seat all those who pay. It is unfair to those coming here on the program to be forced to perform in a building not constructed for such entertainments. And it is extremely unfair to those serving on the entertainment committee to expect them to provide accommodations when there are practically no places suitable for such.

Unless the proposed auditorium is constructed and unless the Budget Commission or whoever is responsible for the delay in its construction comes through this spring we favor a vote by the student body or suspension by the University authorities of the student entertainment until such time as those in control of the University's purse see fit to provide us with a place we may gather for entertainments and student meetings.

The Grand and Glorious Egg!

This week, or was it last, is National Egg Week. It is the week devoted to the grand and glorious peer of all foods, the saviour of Swain Hall breakfasts. Our first impression was that this was one of innumerable weeks devoted to every kind of thing or activity. But we soon realized that the egg is justly entitled to its own special week as any other great American institution.

The egg is one of the world's oldest institutions. It might even be argued with conviction that it is the oldest. Dinosaur eggs are about the most convincing relics that have come down out of fogs of antiquity. Probably the food value of wild birds' eggs was known to our remote ancestors when they crawled on their hands and knees or even later when they advanced to the stage where they used clubs and rocks to secure their food.

Now the egg has a variety of uses. It may be used as a source of food, as a means to combat lengthy and uninteresting orators and in certain stages of its existence to make a room or a hall unfit for occupancy. Its first use is the predominant one. Fried, with ham or bacon, boiled or scrambled, the egg has been effectively sung. In its simpler aspects it is a symbol of the American breakfast; it enters into an amazing variety of foods, so great is its adaptability and culinary congeniality. The egg is indispensable in the baking, pastry, and confectionery industries. The home kitchen hardly could get along without it. It figures in many concoctions of the modern soda fountain. The egg's connection with certain potent mixtures of the older, dryer days is the old dark chapter in its otherwise noble history.

Why consideration of the egg, singly or as one of large numbers, inspires to jocularity is not clear. There certainly is nothing about an egg, of itself, that is funny. Nor is the egg industry, which is said to return a seventy-five cent profit on every dollar investment, any joke. Yet from the time Columbus outwitted his friends with his trick of standing an egg on end, until the introduction of Swain Hall breakfasts, men have joked and made fun of this almost-perfect food. It is rumored that among Swain Hall patrons the egg is no longer a joke.

And so the egg, too, must have its week. In return for its many services to mankind, that is the least we can do for the poor, often misused, egg. Let us always celebrate this week and pay homage to the greatest of American institutions.—A. V. L..

Readers' Opinions

IN PRAISE OF "THORNS AND ORANGE BLOSSOMS"

The following expression of impressions and reflections growing out of attendance upon the performance of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" is part of a letter written by a graduate student to a friend in another state. The writer, for obvious reasons, omits his signature, but has made himself known to the editor of the Tar Heel:

I am enclosing a playbill of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," the recently revived melodrama of the 'eighties, which I saw in a gorgeous presentation at the Playmaker theatre here last night. I am still more or less lax and weak from laughter. In my hilarious recollections of the play this morning it has occurred to me that you might be interested in the playbill, and in an impression or two of my own arising out of the experience.

Though the play was presumably revived by Paul Green and Wilbur Daniel Steele (the latter is living here now), I believe that actually these professionals had very little to do with it. The advertisement of them as the impressarios of the "Imperial Stock Company" is a part of the joke, and illustrative of the spirit of play which gave the enterprise such tremendous verve. Actually the moving force and presiding genius was, I hear, Howard Mumford Jones, who, after a brilliant record here, has just accepted a call to Michigan, and who seems to have been making the show his characteristic farewell to Chapel Hill.

I suppose that you know enough about the dramatic genre of which it is an example to take the character of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" for granted. At any rate, it is as lachrymose and gorgeously melodramatic as you could well imagine. And the presentation certainly heightened all the effects. The acting was superb—of its kind. The cast was almost entirely composed of University professors and members of professorial families—mature people with a sophisticated conception of what they were trying to do. The staging was very elaborate—costumes, make-up, sets, stage business and stage effects were all that heart could have desired. Even the music rendered by a professorial orchestra and by professorial singers was perfect in its kind. You would have been reduced to tears of mirth, as I was, by this feature alone. And the audience, packed to the aisles and corners last night, as on Friday night, was perfect in its way as was the presentation. We hissed the villain, moaned and signed with the outcast wife, and patted our feet to the music.

The whole experience gave definition and emphasis to a feeling that has been growing in me ever since I have come to know this University. My impression, clumsily put into words, is of the splendid vitality, the verve, and the fine sense of play that characterize this community and its life. The people here, as simple and lovable as our own people, are alive to the finger-tips and are enjoying life as the Greeks and the Elizabethans enjoyed it, and in much the same way; namely, by doing things for themselves, capitalizing their own resources, putting into play their own talents. They are sophisticated in the best sense—that is, as I conceive the idea, without being cynical—and they exhibit towards one another's artistic efforts the tolerant and sympathetic spirit of enlightened amateurs. In other words, they realize in theory and in practice that in all but first-rate art there is a lot of convention, even of bunk, but that if art is not sterile and esoteric, convention—yes, bunk too—must be accepted.

Though numerous other agencies, institutions, and activities here constitute and in various ways express the community vitality of which I have spoken, the Carolina Playmakers with their theatre were the immediate background of the delightful presentation of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms." They furnished the theatre and, I understand, much of the technical work of presentation, and, of course, their tradition and their past labors in large measure produced the audience needful in numbers, money, and appreciation for such a show.

All of these reflections growing out of my experience suggest—most strenuously suggest—to me the need we have at home for something approximating the Playmakers here. Our community has the vitality, the intelligence, and the sophistication necessary for such an institution and its enterprises. I believe that our students, in social background, in native ability, and in previous training are the equals of the Carolina boys and girls. In the solid routine work of undergraduate grade,

"We" hate the thought of becoming a column writer, but ideas and suggestions pass through this office sometimes—believe it or not! Possibly just one of them may be interesting or helpful to some student or faculty member. With this "vision" in mind, "we" muster our courage for the great conflict.

The "we" above may be editorial. One of its important functions, however, is to associate "us" with Colonel Lindbergh. Since we have no reputation to carry us, we take the liberty of joining with the many big business concerns that depend upon "Lindy" to put across their advertising programs. "We're off!"

We don't like to make such a sudden break here in the "thought," but one of the Bell Telephone Company executives who was here in January could not understand why more college students do not take public speaking as a part of their business training. "Business men today," says he, "should be able to express their thoughts clearly and concisely. The man who cannot express his thoughts is at a big disadvantage."

Three definite requirements made by the Eastman Kodak Company of the men whom they accept for foreign service work this year are: (1) training in Spanish; (2) elementary accounting; (3) desire to make foreign trade a life career. This is a concrete instance which shows one practical value of a foreign language.

Employers are particularly interested in knowing how students spend their spare time in summer vacations. They always seem favorably impressed if a boy has tried to improve his financial condition or to supplement his educational experience. The same may be said for participation in worth-while campus activities. Such activities, they find, tend to develop personality—something they all look for, but none can exactly define.

Many students wait until the spring of their senior year before they realize that they intended to use their summer vacations as "try-out" experiences in one kind of work or another. Those who have made profitable use of their summers often have more or less definite ideas about what they do or do not like to do. Those who have "loafed" during the summers are often at a loss as to just where, when and how to begin what.

Listed below are some of the large business firms which have sent representatives to Chapel Hill during the current year to discuss employment with members of the senior class: Vick Chemical Company, W. T. Grant Company, E. I. duPont de Nemours & Company, duPont Rayon Company, Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, New York Telephone Company, Westinghouse Electric Company, General Electric Company, S. H. Kress & Company, Eastman Kodak Company, Remington Rand Business Service, Inc., The Procter & Gamble Company, B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, Standard Oil Company of New York.

The Standard Oil Company representative made an interesting statement about his company's experience with men who go into foreign service work. He says, "About 50 per cent of our men become very enthusiastic about foreign work and the type of life they live among the natives of another land. When they come home for a vacation, they get "bored" with this country and can hardly wait for the time to return. On the other hand, the other 50 per cent become dissatisfied and never want to see the foreign country again." For this reason, he warned the students whom he interviewed that they should be very careful before deciding to go into foreign work. He suggested that they talk with friends or acquaintances who have worked in a foreign country, so as to get first-hand information about both the disagreeable and attractive features of such a life.

Both the Eastman Kodak and Standard Oil Companies insist that men whom they send to the foreign field be unmarried—at least until the time of their first vacation. This means for about 2½ to 3 years. They want the man to know exactly "what he is getting his girl into" before it is too late.

Battle Of The Carolinas To Take Place Today

Diamond Squads of North and South Carolina To Meet for First Time Since Spring Of 1926.

Meeting on the diamond for the first time since the spring of 1926, the Tar Heels take on the Gamecocks of South Carolina here this afternoon at 4 o'clock on Emerson field.

The last baseball tie-up of these two institutions from sister states resulted in a 3-2 victory for the Tar Heels, then under the tutorship of Coach Duke Duncan. Diamond relations were then suspended for three seasons and today's game revives an old rivalry of years' standing. Contests have been hot between the two Carolinas in every branch of sport for several decades and the present clash is expected to be no exception.

The Gamecocks are comparable to the Georgia nine, with whom Carolina was barely able to break even in a four-game series earlier in the season, in that they have on their lineup several men of football note, among them being Boineau.

Fans are hoping to see Marshall Rand back in his old place at second. "Casey" Jackson has been holding the second sack job with little difficulty while Rand has been out with injuries, but there is a greater need for him on first in order that Captain Jimmie Maus may be able to add a little strength to the outfield. Behind the bat, on first or in the garden, Maus is entirely at home, and his hefty heave with the bat insures him a regular position wherever he may be needed most.

Potter or Kushner will be used behind the bat, the former probably getting the call because of the edge he holds in batting power. Since Maus has been filling out his nine innings of field work at first or in the field, these two rookies have been having a hot race for the backstop position. Both of them handle the throws from the mound with consistent ease but have been a little weak on the hitting. Potter came through with a homer in the Wake Forest tilt last Saturday which, added to a single earlier in the game, raised his batting average considerably.

Lufty and Whitehead will assume their regular places at third and short, while the outfield posts are subject to conjecture. If Maus takes one of the garden positions the other two will be filled from a multitude of candidates, among whom are House, Davis, Sher, Blythe, Branch, Paxton, and one or two more.

Auburn Wright, one of the two veteran moundsmen left from last year, will probably do the hurling for the Tar Heels.

The Gamecock lineup was not available in time for publication.

VARSITY GOLFERS CLASH WITH DUKE

Play at Hillandale Course Tomorrow; Take On State Saturday.

With the outcome of Carolina in the recent Southern Conference Intercollegiate Golf Tourney still fresh in mind the Tar Heels are considered to have a fine chance of capturing the title next year since Sam Perry, Harry Pritchett, Bill Duckwell, and Bill Legwen, the big guns of this last tournament, are graduating in June.

Thursday Carolina will meet Duke at Hillandale, Duke's home course. Although Carolina won the state championship handily, this match with Duke cannot be considered a snap, since the Tar Heels are combatting Duke on their home course. Duke is rumored to have a strong individual team and should give Carolina a rough time of it.

The Tar Heels will have State as their opponent this Saturday, Carolina being the Wolfpack's guests at the Carolina Country Club at Raleigh.

On Saturday, May 17, Carolina will embark on a trip to Charlottesville, Virginia to play Virginia at the Farlington Country Club, this match being one of the final athletic matches in which the Cavaliers and the Tar Heels will meet this year.

Lambda Chi Alpha Wins

Lambda Chi Alpha continued its winning habit yesterday afternoon by defeating Phi Delta Theta 7-4.

After the first two innings, which were played in the rain, both pitchers hurled good ball. Bob Bullock was on the mound for Lambda Chi Alpha and he worked a fine game, striking out eight men. "Brick" Grantham, the losing pitcher, was given poor support.

The mainspring of the Lambda Chi Alpha attack was Stanley, who laced out two home runs.

INTERCOLLEGIATE OUTBOARD RACING GAINS IN FAVOR

J. E. Wilkinson Sets New Record of 3 Hours, 26 Minutes, And 3 Seconds for 138 Mile Marathon.

(By Les Gage, Sports Ed., College Humor)

College students who have organized this spring for competition with outboard motor boats are not only interested in the short races but are already beginning to give some thought to the distance marathons. In the annual Albany to New York Marathon for outboards held on the Hudson recently a new high speed record of 3 hours, 26 minutes was established by J. E. Wilkinson, driving a 32 horse powered boat.

Wilkinson swept into the lead in the last two miles of the 138 mile grind by sensational driving after a disastrous start. Soon after the starter's gun popped, Wilkinson was stalled due to water having gotten into his gasoline.

Working frantically for a full half hour while the field of 111 other racers swept by, he finally started against the discouraging odds and piloted his way to victory. His time for the course comes within two minutes of equalling the running time of the century between Albany and New York.

Wilkinson, driving a 32 sea horse powered boat and Frank James who came in second with a 24 sea horse powered boat, exceeded the former record with motors of smaller displacement than many of the others entered.

Although intercollegiate outboard racing this year will be confined to the short events, it is highly probable that within the next year or two several sensational marathons will be planned for these student drivers.

These nominees are to be voted on at a banquet which is to be given May 19. A committee was appointed to take charge of the plans for the banquet, and a big closing "get together" is being planned. All cabinet members are requested to watch for further announcements.

A dinner given at the High Point Country Club opened the program for the convention. C. M. Wayrick, editor of the High Point Enterprise, was the chief speaker of the occasion. Favors were given to the delegates by numerous business houses in the city.

A business meeting held Friday morning was the next feature on the program. Brief reports were then made by many of the delegates on their respective publications. These reports were followed by meetings of the newspaper group led by Holt McPherson, the annual group by C. M. Beck, and the magazine group by Miss E. Vera Idol.

For dinner the delegates were entertained at a luncheon given at Edgefield Manor, at which time other favors were presented to the visitors. Throughout the afternoon trips were made to various points of interest in the city. Then at 8 o'clock the Greensboro Daily News was host to a dinner given at the banquet room of the Sheraton hotel.

This committee will meet with the board of trustees for the first time Thursday morning at 10:30 at St. Mary's school. The committee will have its last meeting on Friday, May 9.

TROTT WILL SPEAK AT MATHEMATICS SEMINAR

Richard Trott, instructor of mathematics and a candidate for a master's degree, will speak at the mathematics seminar this afternoon. The subject of his address, which is a report on his thesis, is to be "Certain Properties of Functional Determinants."

Mr. Trott is the third candidate to report this term. J. J. Slade, who has given three reports, was the first, and J. L. Garrett was the second.

At the meeting of the seminar last week, Dr. A. M. Jordan of the school of education was the speaker. One of the important points stressed at that meeting was the interest and cooperation the other departments of the University are showing in the mathematics seminar.

they are doing, I believe, as good work as the students here. I admit that the intellectual life of our students at home is not as keen and vigorous as that of the students here; but that is largely the fault of our university. We are not vitalizing college work as much as we ought to and as we could. We are not consolidating and directing potential student tastes and latent talents as we should. While our coaches are organizing and directing athletic abilities, while our socially minded faculty members and their wives are actively interesting themselves in the fraternities and in other superficial social enterprizes, while those interested in music are helping the students with their glee club, orchestra, and so forth, and while professors of polemical inclinations are doing something with the debaters, the rest of us are letting the rest of the students, with their multifarious tastes and aptitudes, go to the picture show. We really need something like the Playmakers at home. Playmaking as it is conceived and practiced here has demonstrated that it can make an enormous and permanent popular appeal, both in the University community and in the state at large. It is a species of art that can be quickly appreciated by average people. Carolina has demonstrated that, unquestionably.

Mayhew Has Throat Slashed By Negro

Donald C. Mayhew, operator of a filling station near the local firehouse, was slashed about the throat and body in a scuffle with James Hargraves, a negro employee, late Sunday afternoon. Mayhew was rushed to Watts hospital in Durham, where 36 stitches were requires to close the wounds.

Hargraves fled immediately after the altercation and though various rumors have been received in regard to his whereabouts, he has not yet been apprehended.

The Martindale Air Service of Chapel Hill used two planes, piloted by Hicklin and Reynolds, in the search for the negro, while 25 local citizens scoured the surrounding country without any results.

Hargraves was reported as having spent Monday night at another negro's home in Durham, but when officers reached the place he had been gone about 15 minutes.

According to latest reports, Mayhew is resting well, and hospital authorities believe the wounds will not prove fatal unless complications set in.

MAN AMONG MEN SMASHES THROUGH IN MIGHTY STYLE

George Bancroft, the mighty thrill-man, is coming to the Carolina Theatre again. This time the burly Bancroft, who has become a man among men in screendom, will be seen and heard as Joe Forziati, the steel worker who fights his way to success as a building construction contractor.

The picture, "Ladies Love Brutes," is based on the original play, "Pardon My Glove" by Zoe Atkins. It was adapted for the screen by Waldeman Young and Herman J. Mankiewicz.

According to the fascinating plot, Bancroft, having attained a moderate amount of wealth, decides that he now needs social position. He makes a play for Mary Astor, young society matron. But now comes the villainy, purveyed by Stanley Fields, a racketeering labor agitator, and the critical moment finds Bancroft with a big decision to make. He must choose death for his own little boy or for the child of the woman he loves.

"Ladies Love Brutes" comes to the Carolina Theatre Today.

HONORARY GROUP SELECTS MEMBERS AT LAW BANQUET

Order of the Coif Takes In Four Men; Chadburn To Edit Review.

(By Everard B. Shemwell)

At the annual banquet of the law school association last night, the Order of the Coif, honorary senior society of the law school, which corresponds to Phi Beta Kappa, chose its members from this year's class. Membership to the Order of the Coif is limited to men graduating with averages in the highest tenth of their class. As this year's graduating class has 37 members, almost twice the number it had last year, four men were chosen for the honor. These men were A. K. Smith of Raleigh, John H. Anderson of Chapel Hill, Waddell Gholson of Henderson and Charles Rouse of Kinston, chosen in the order in which they are named.

Smith is this year's editor-in-chief of the Law Review, and has a fellowship in law at Columbia University for next year. Anderson is assistant editor of the Law Review. Gholson is president of the law school association. Rouse, who finished in the middle of this year, is practicing law in Kinston with his father and brother in the firm of Rouse and Rouse.

Last year's members of the Order of the Coif were J. B. Fordham, Susie M. Sharpe and W. P. Stacy.

The banquet was quite a success in every respect, and a good program of speeches, songs, poems, and short talks was enjoyed by the large crowd that attended.

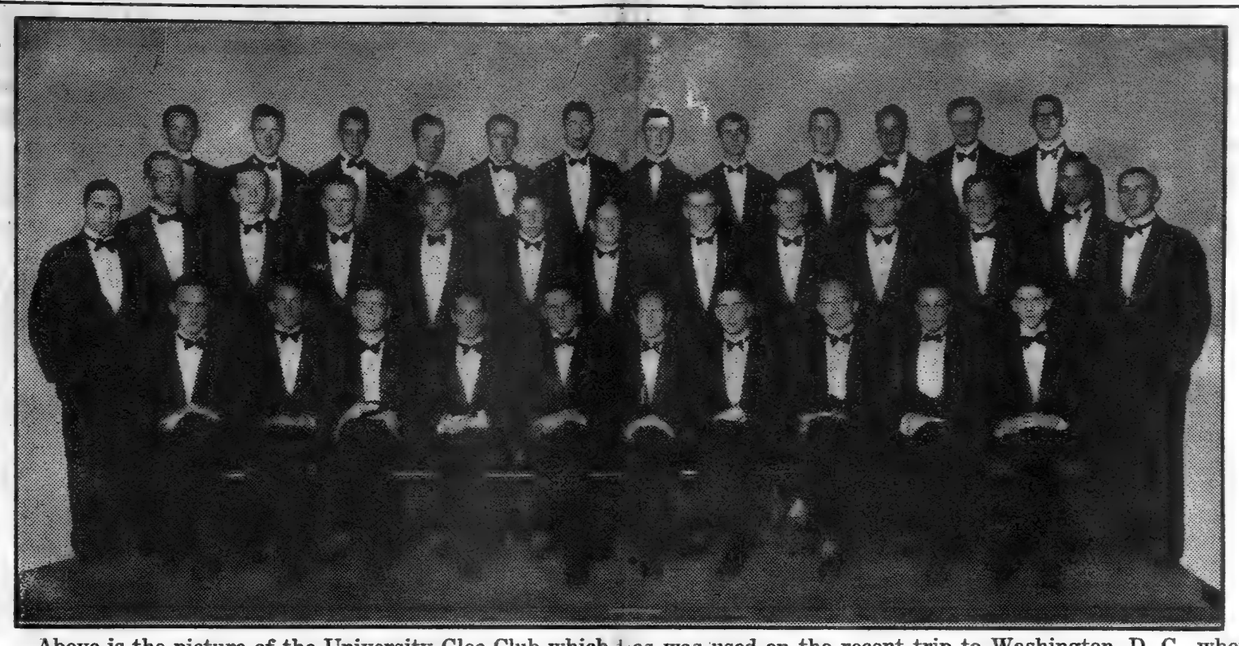
Ed Scheidt was toastmaster of the evening, and President Harry W. Chase, the principal speaker, gave a very interesting informal talk.

The entertainment committee which was in charge of arranging the banquet is composed of Professor M. S. Breckenridge, Waddell Gholson, Peyton Abbott, J. H. Chadbourn, Wex Malone, Tom Gold and Moore Bryson.

A picture of the third-year law class was presented to the law school.

Two additional awards were presented during the evening. A cash prize of $50 which is given to the member of the staff of the Law Review for the best and most consistent work throughout the year by George Watts Hill of Durham, was awarded to Harry Rockwell.

A prize for the best single contribution, a copy of Professor McIntosh's "Treatise on North Carolina Procedure" given by Phi Delta Phi, was also awarded to John H. Anderson, Jr.,



It was announced that the editor-in-chief of the Law Review for next year will be James H. Chadbourn of Spartanburg, S. C.

RADIO COURSE IS TO BE CONCLUDED

Holmes Will Teach Final Lesson In Successful French Series Friday Night.

The radio course in Elementary French, which has been delivered during the past twelve weeks, will be concluded on Friday night. This course, which is under the auspices of the University Extension Division, has been conducted each Friday night, at 6:15, over the station WPTF in Raleigh.

This course is delivered once a week for a half hour by one of the professors in the French department. A mimeographed lesson book is necessary for each of the radio listeners who take the lessons. This book has been written by professors in this University and was sent to all the radio students who applied. In this course, Dr. Urban T. Holmes gave the first four lessons, Hugo Giduz the next two, Dr. T. J. Wilson, III the seventh and eighth, and Dr. Lyons was supposed to give the last four lessons. However, because of his illness, Dr. Holmes gave the eleventh lesson in place of Dr. Lyons, and will also conclude the course on Friday.

The last ten minutes of Dr. Holmes' talk on Friday will be devoted to a dictation examination on the course. Diplomas will be given by the Extension

Holland Professor Uses Library Here

Dr. J. O. M. Borek of the engineering-economics department of the University of Utrecht, Holland, has just completed a period of study in the rural-social economics library here working out details for the settlement of land recently reclaimed by the Dutch government in the Zuyder Zee.

He was sent here on the recommendation of Dr. O. E. Baker of the United States department of agriculture and found the University library contained ample data for his research project. He also expressed delight with the University village.

In the Zuyder Zee reclamation project, the Dutch government is draining some 1400 square miles in the northwestern section of Holland by pumping out the water in the Zuyder Zee and building a system of dykes and dams. The work has been going on for 20 years, and now some of the section is ready for settlement.

A. T. Allen To Speak At N. C. Student Federation Gathering This Saturday

Dr. A. T. Allen, state superintendent of public instruction, and Professor Frank Graham, prominent University faculty member, will address the first congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students which convenes in Gerrard hall at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, May 10.

In an interview with Dr. Allen Tuesday night, John Lang learned that the state superintendent was willing not only to address the student congress but also to give the new student movement his hearty endorsement and support. Coming from the state's chief educational official, this statement will give great encouragement and momentum to this new student movement which had its birth on this campus.

Many University faculty members are lending their endorsement and support to this state Student Federation. Professor Frank Graham sees in this federation great possibilities for the development of intercollegiate cooperation, good-will and understanding, and he is going to deal with these important matters in his speech before the student congress here Saturday.

In a recent letter to Lang, Dean Francis F. Bradshaw well expresses his opinion of the local effort to bring about better relations between the student bodies of this state in his statement, which reads: "I am made very proud by the realization that the spirit and condition of student government and interest in the state of North Carolina and the problems of citizenship are having as fine a fruitage as they have had this year in such development as this and the relations with Duke University."

Endorsements of the state Student Federation have been coming to this campus from all over the state. A number of college presidents have lent this movement their support. President E. C. Brooks of State College has assured student leaders of this campus that State College will be well represented here next Saturday.

Professor M. L. Jacobs, accompanied by his wife, will leave for Baltimore Thursday to join his colleagues.

Beard is president of this Pharmaceutical Association and will preside over the meetings. Miss Alice Noble, also of the school of pharmacy, will present a paper before the historical section of the association entitled, "A Brief History of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association."

Meeting concurrently with the American Pharmaceutical Association are the National Associations of Boards of Pharmacy, the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy, and the American Association of Pharmaceutical Societies. These meetings will last the entire week.

This Saturday night Mr. Beard will be one of the speakers at the banquet at the Emerson Hotel in connection with the dedication exercises of the new building of the School of Phar-

Dr. Henderson Will Make Commencement Speech At Richmond

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the department of mathematics and nationally known speaker and writer, has received and accepted the invitation to deliver the commencement address at the University of Richmond in Richmond, Virginia.

At these exercises, which will take place June 10, Dr. Henderson will speak on the subject "The New Education."

The demand for Dr. Henderson as a speaker is becoming greater and greater. In June, 1929, he spoke at the commencement of the University of the South (Sewanee). This address, "The Higher Scholarship," was recently published in the Sewanee Review.

UNIQUE TYPE OF SOLAR STUDY IS SHOWN STUDENTS

Traveling Car Carries Complete Equipment for Astronomical Work; New Inventions Demonstrated.

(By Alan Lowenstein)

When University students went to Swain hall yesterday noon for lunch, they saw in front of New West building a peculiarly shaped car with a high roof, with drapes over the side which seemed to be concealing something, and sleeping accommodations inside. Another traveling exhibit had come to the University. On the sides of the roof in the front of the car on both sides were signs reading, "Astronomy." By 1 o'clock when most of the students were finished for the day a large crowd had gathered to satisfy their curiosity about the exhibit.

David Philips, the proprietor of the car, entered town early yesterday morning with his exhibit on the solar system, the stars and the relation of the moon to the earth. He has two devices on the side of his car which have been invented by him to make the study of the heavens simpler and more understandable to the ordinary student. The first device, called the "lunarian," shows the phenomena of the moon and why the moon is retarded.

The second, the "astroteluri-an," displays the solar system with its principal members grouped about as they are now in the sky. A movable object representing the earth with a "night" shadow on the ball marked with the equator, the tropics, and the polls, moves about the sun and explains the seasons, day and night, and why the sun moves north and south during the year. This is claimed to be the most complete exhibit of its kind in the country.

Mr. Philips is an amateur astronomer with inventive ability who is attempting to advertise and sell his inventions. He has been interested in astronomy for the past seven years and has worked on his two inventions for the past five years. He has constantly improved them both. Most of the recent changes have been to make them cheaper and more practicable.

Mr. Philips is a Massachusetts man, but he has been working in recent years in Florida from where he has just come. He holds letters of commendation for his work from the chief astronomer at the United States naval observatory, and from officials of the University of Florida and Florida State College. Since leaving these two last named institutions he has traveled gradually north and he intends finally to reach Harvard.

Mr. Philips hopes to sell some of his inventions to colleges and state educational systems. He expressed the belief that every state should have two or three of such cars to send around to the public schools and in that way teach the students astronomy in a simple manner.

Mr. Philips intends to be in Chapel Hill for two days, leaving tomorrow morning. He has with him a five and five-eighths Brashear telescope, an instrument of excellent make. He set it up yesterday afternoon and

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

It is the bored type of woman who is the most dangerous to the cause of peace.—Miss Ella Wilkerson, M. P.

Support For The Glee Club

As a part of national music week the Glee Club will present a concert in the Playmakers Theatre this evening at 8:15. Recent press reports of the club's performances elsewhere indicate that those who attend will hear a concert meriting a packed house. But will there be such attendance? We think not, for as a prominent official of the University remarked several days ago, "Carolina students don't go to anything except football games any longer." We are convinced that he is right after reviewing attendance at performances which should attract a large percentage of students, but which are attended by only a handful of spectators.

It is deplorable that here, "the leading southern educational institution," we neglect those things which are an integral part of our extra-curricular education. Whatever one may say, the University is maintained to give education. It was founded for that purpose and it has adhered to it since the founding. When it fails, then one may no longer say it is an educational institution. And when its students fail to avail themselves of the opportunities of becoming educated the University has failed in its purpose.

After all is not cultural development as important as muscular development?

Anarchy?

Even though it be admitted that, as an ideal, "no government is the best government," few practical, thinking people outside of Russia subscribe so far to the doctrines of Rousseau, Thoreau, and other upholders of Utopian social systems as to contend that a group of ordinary human beings could actually live under any anarchical form of government—or lack of government. Yet on this campus each individual is subject to no laws other than "the rules of a gentleman," than which nothing could be more vague or subject to individual interpretation and application. There is absolutely no proof available to show that man has advanced sufficiently far to allow each individual the privilege of determining his own modes of thought and behavior.

On the other hand, numerous experiments based upon the idea have been tried on this campus and elsewhere in recent years, only to result in dismal failure for the most part. The most recent and perhaps the most outstanding proof of this was the action of the faculty last quarter abolishing, after three years trial, the system of optional attendance for upperclassmen. Honor boxes, which used to abound in and around the dormitories, are no longer seen. It has become necessary to chain pencils to the desks at the library. Stricter regulations in regard to the passing of bad checks were found advisable last week. And these are only a few of the instances which might be mentioned as taking place right here at home, not to mention such outside occurrences as the recent failure of the educational experiment at the University of Wisconsin.

Furthermore, the stores of Chapel Hill do not find it expedient to operate on the honor system (though some tried it, to their sorrow). Neither the business office, registrar's office nor any branch of the University could function on such terms. No one who recalls the enormous amount of "red tape" necessary to obtain a ticket to a football game will assert that the Athletic Association manifests any faith in it. The same is true of the Entertainment Committee, Playmakers, or any other similar campus organization. Yet in the matter of classroom procedure we go on apparently in blissful ignorance of the facts, or, if shown undisputable evidence against the proper working of the system, fall back upon the old argument that the offender is "hurting no one but himself," a rather difficult assertion to support in view of the fact that grades are given on a competitive and relative basis.

Of course here we do have, in reality, not a true honor system, but a sort of modified monitor plan, wherein each student is supposedly "his brother's keeper," bound in honor to report infractions of unwritten laws. Even this, however, has not mitigated the evils, but has served only to make two guilty where only one was, before.

High School Relations

The University Extension Division has done much to bring the high school students of the state in contact with the University and to render service to the schools in encouraging extra-curricular activities. Thirteen contests, sponsored by the division, are conducted each year among the high schools. According to E. R. Rankin, head of the department of high school relations, there are about 10,000 students in the high schools with whom the Extension Division deals each year. About sixty schools from all over the state are entered in the competitions. Among the many contests conducted under Mr. Rankin's supervision are football, baseball, dramatics, debating, French, and eight others.

This work on the part of the University is of great benefit to the high schools, to the students, and to the University. It encourages extra-curricular activities on the part of students and makes these activities as beneficial as possible. It is good to see the leaders in the educational field recognize the great value of extra-curricular activities and to do their best to further them. The contests carry the University of North Carolina into thousands of homes in the state. They encourage students to enter this particular university and also point out to the citizens of the state the good work that is coming from the money they are giving to the advancement of education. The high school relations department is filling a most desirable place in the state educational system.

Readers' Opinions

IN DEFENSE OF SWAIN HALL

Monday morning found an entirely new group of boys flowing into Swain hall, because the Welcome In cafeteria had been closed. The large number of students were disappointed because the Welcome In had met with this misfortune, but they were proud of the fact that they could rely on Swain hall and secure board for less than twenty-five cents a meal. Swain hall has always proven a "stand by" to the students, because they realize that $22.00 a month is cheap for board.

Many people wonder how Swain hall can afford to feed so well at this low price, while other eating places are closing up. The only good answer that can be found to this question is this: scientific managment and economical buying. It is clearly understood that Swain hall is owned and operated through the University, and it is absolutely an un-profitable concern. Therefore, this proves exactly why Swain hall is the cheapest place to eat.

It seems that many students are taking these factors into consideration, as over 50 men have checked into Swain hall since Monday, and no doubt this number will continue to increase throughout the remainder of the quarter. The total number of students eating at Swain hall regularly is from 600 to 800, depending on the season of the year.

Swain hall is praised not only for the good, wholesome food it serves, but for the self-help work it gives to students. From 60 to 90 boys work in Swain hall all through the college year; more of which are used at the beginning of the college year, because many of the incoming freshmen are inexperienced in kitchen work. These boys are divided into the following groups: waiters, dishwashers, glass washers, those who set up food, those who clean up, and those who do the miscellaneous work. The students who have worked themselves to the most responsible positions are "Mac" Covington, assistant manager, and "Willie" Morgan, assistant manager to stock room. These two boys will be greatly missed next year, because both are seniors.

Swain hall uses only the highest grade of foods, such as grade A pasteurized milk. They also offer a variety of foods and drinks, as coffee for breakfast, milk for lunch and iced tea for supper.

CHIPS Off The OLD BLOCK

By Moore Bryson

Once in the life of every college student there comes a time when the urge to write a column becomes irresistable. Should I say, "Tut, tut," and let the matter drop now, I might have another to add to my list of suppressed desires. My inhibitions being sufficiently numerous already, I must ask you to bear with me while I attempt to reduce my ambitious writer's complex.

The students on one none too interesting class have forsaken their pastimes of tit-tat-to, drawing pictures, and composing poetry for a far more interesting game. The professor has two pet phrases which he uses continually. His listeners are combatting the warm weather by keeping a record of the number of times he uses each of these phrases during the hour. Mild but intense betting goes on as to which expression will win each day. The scores are posted after each class. Up to date, the professor is evidently unaware of the significance of the symbols which appear on his blackboard daily.

A certain couple (names unknown) stroll hand-in hand between every class. We are at a loss to know whether it is spring, or spring training for summer school.

Imagine my consternation upon returning to my room a few nights ago to find a rope tied in the form of a noose hanging over my bed. Accompanying it was a placard reading as follows:

Precedents,

1. Judas
2. Achitophel
3. Joe Schmaltz

Why not you?

Perhaps after reading this column, the accessory-before-the-fact will leave a shot-gun, for as a co-ed was heard to remark, "I detest anything tight around my neck."

Speaking of co-eds, we hear we have a female Janus on the campus. One of our most beautiful had a blind date with an out of town boy the other night. Thinking to have some fun, she left off all make-up, slicked her hair back over her ears, put on an unbecoming dress and horn-rimmed glasses and came down stairs to meet her unknown admirer. However, some of her sisters took one look and immediately sent her back to remodel for the honor of dear old Pi Phi.

Elmer Hall, technical director of the Playmakers, is constructing a gorgeous set for the forthcoming production of "Romeo and Juliet." Placed as it will be in the beautiful Forest Theatre, it should be one of the most noteworthy pieces of stagecraft yet produced by a little theatre group.

The Daily Tar Heel recently carried a story about quinine being put into apples on the Playmaker's tour. Some enterprising reporter should unearth the legend concerning the substitution of an unknown beverage for the regular ginger-ale in a certain play of not too many years ago.

Despite the statement that the new co-ed members of the Phi were to be immortalized, we have yet to hear a certain young lady called, "Saint Kitty."

Reports being received by President Hoover's law enforcement commission indicate that there has been less drinking among high school students under the prohibition laws than there was prior to their enaction.

GAMECOCKS LOSE TO CAROLINA MEN ON DIAMOND HERE

First Game Since '26 Results In 3-1 Win For Tar Heels.

The Tar Heels and the South Carolina baseball teams resumed their rivalry yesterday afternoon for the first time since 1926. The game added another victory to the Blue and White 1930 schedule. The game was a close one, but the Tar Heels came through with Lufty's home run in the second and with Brown and Wright scoring in the seventh, chalking up a 3-1 win to the credit of the University.

Whitehead, Lufty and Wright led the home team's hitting, Whitehead getting two singles, Lufty a home run, and Wright a single and a triple. Harley led the Gamecock's hitting by getting two singles. He was followed by Vaughn, Edens and Laval who got one single each.

Stoddard started the mound work for the Gamecocks, but was relieved in the sixth by Porter.

Crouch of Carolina relieved Potter in center field in the eighth.

Fleming of Carolina pitched a good game, allowing the South Carolina nine only six hits. No time during the game did he show any weakness or get himself in a hole that he couldn't get out of.

Vaughn played a good game at second for the Gamecocks and also did good at the plate as well as steal several bases.

CAVALIERS LEAD DIAMOND SERIES

Virginia Credited With 11 "Clean Sweeps" To Nine For Tar Heels In 36 Years Of Play.

The University baseball squad, meeting the Virginia Cavaliers on Emerson field here tomorrow at 4 o'clock and in Greensboro's memorial stadium Saturday at 3 o'clock, will have a chance to pull a "clean sweep" of the 37th annual Carolina-Virginia diamond series.

During 36 years the Tar Heels and Cavaliers have fought out their differences on the diamond, playing from one to three games each year. Nineteen times out of the more than three decades one team or the other has swept the annual series. Virginia shows eleven of the "clean sweeps," while the Tar Heels are credited with eight of the unblemished slates.

The Cavaliers have already lost that sort of chance this year, for the Tar Heels won the opener of the three-game series in Charlottesville by an 8-5 count, and that victory gives Carolina a chance for a ninth clean record.

The most famous of all the sweep series came in 1922 when three crack Tar Heel hurlers, Manly Lewellyn, Herman Bryson and "Lefty" Wilson, turned the Cavaliers back in three straight shut-out games. The three musketeers of the mound took a game apiece and won by scores of 6-0, 4-0, and 7-0.

Shields, Tar Heel rookie, held the Cavaliers to 9 hits for 8 innings in the first game this year, and kept those well scattered, Fleming replacing him and pitching hitless ninth-inning ball when the Cavaliers threatened a rally. Fleming and Shields, with the veteran Wright and the promising rookie Paul Edwards, are the most probable mound selections for the closing games of the important series Friday and Saturday.

* * * *

By Hugh Wilson

Again we burst forth in advocation of the addition of an extra sport to the University's schedule—two of them, in fact. North Carolina being a seacoast state having many rivers, creeks, lakes, swamps, etc., there are no doubt a great many native Tar Heels in the student body who are proficient in the art of playing fish—that is, swimming. In addition to these, there are plenty of swimmers from such a "wet" town as New York. The question then is, "Why not have a swimming team? True, the University has no pool of its own which is adequate for this purpose, but an arrangement might be made with the owners of Sparrow's pool for its use for such a purpose. This pool is of adequate length, being some 60 feet long. Certainly we should not allow ourselves to be outdone by almost every college of equal size in the country and by many much smaller colleges and preparatory schools, and we should especially endeavor to put a team in the field to compete with such close neighbors and rivals as Virginia, South Carolina and Duke — all smaller schools than ours, and of equal wealth at the time of the construction of their pools. Plans are under way for an adequate gymnasium and pool, but why wait in disgrace while plans lag and money arrives slowly?

The other game advocated is merely for intramural purposes. It seems to have invaded the campus for several weeks—in fact, it is said to have started at the Chi Psi fraternity house last fall, and is being played in so many places on the campus now that the campus is hardly safe for pedestrians. The ancient game of horseshoes is, of course, the game referred to. If some of the "barnyard golf" artists will only grow beards and learn to chew tobacco, perhaps the athletic authorities will set aside some place and let the enthusiasts have an intramural league, and then sane students will be able to go out of their respective dorms and frat houses without fear of having ringers thrown around their necks.

It looks as if K. O. Sells will wish that he never had left New York's "Great White Way" after his fight with Ad Warren in Greensboro Friday. Ad, tanned by the sun and looking to be hard and full of pep, has been working out in the Tin Can this week and looks much better than at any time this winter or spring. Sells will probably want to "sell out" long before the fight is over.

Wrestling Captain

Above is shown a picture of "Shorty" Stallings, captain-elect of the University's wrestling team for 1931. Stallings, who wrestled in the 125-pound class during the season of 1930, has an exceedingly fine record during the season and is deserving of great credit, although he failed to win the southern conference championship. "Shorty" won every match in which he competed during the dual meet season, winning on falls over the Navy and Princeton wrestlers and winning the majority of the remainder of his bouts in the same decisive manner. A few days before the Conference tournament he injured his arm.

This injury handicapped him greatly, and was in a large way responsible for his losing to the V.M.I. 125-pounder, the only defeat which he suffered last year. Stallings is considered a great bet for a conference championship next year.

WARREN GETTING READY FOR FIGHT IN GREENSBORO

Former Varsity Boxing Star Takes Daily Workouts In Tin Can.

Ad Warren, University alumnus and one time star of the Tar Heel boxing team, has been working out in the Tin Can this week in preparation for his ten-round bout with K. O. Walt Sells of New York, which will be held in the Yellow Cab Company arena at Greensboro tomorrow night.

In his workouts here, Ad seemed to be in wonderful shape, appearing much harder and more aggressive than when he trained here last month before his fight in Wilmington with "Big Boy" Roper, Indianapolis, whom he knocked out in two rounds. In addition to improving his physical condition, he seems to have speeded up his boxing without losing any of his old punch, as his sparring partners will agree.

Little is known about Sells' ability as a fighter, but he has been matched with Jack De Mave and Phil Mercurio who are well known throughout the east and middle west, and worked as Max Schmeling's chief sparring partner on the "German Dempsey's" barnstorming exhibition tour last year. At least, he has had enough experience to give Ad plenty of trouble.

K. O. Conway, under whose promotion the fight will be held, had originally scheduled Germany Heller, another New York fighter, as Warren's opponent for this fight, but Heller was forced to withdraw because of an injured foot.

Ad has been taking strenuous workouts, boxing several rounds daily with a large squad of sparring partners composed of Ralph Starnes, Duke varsity ringman; Archie Allen and John Warren of the Carolina varsity; Odell Sapp, frosh coach; Landis and Wilson of the freshman team; and also doing the usual rope-skipping, shadow boxing and bag punching.

Ad says that he chooses to work out here instead of in a pro gym because he can get a number of sparring partners.

Kellogg's CORN FLAKES

The most popular cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include ALL-BRAN, Pep Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles, and Kellogg's Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—the coffee that lets you sleep.

Knitting Needles

that help you swim

THE four inches extra stretch in Spalding Swimming Suits goes right back to the needles that knitted them. Special spring needles are used—not the ordinary latch needles that make a less elastic, lively garment. And the yarn in Spalding suits is Bradford spun—selected for its extra strength and extra stretch.

It is this extra stretch that makes it a joy to swim in a Spalding suit—that gives you such freedom of movement no matter how energetically you disport in the water. And we're particularly glad to feature Spalding suits because they always hold their shape, always fit snugly no matter how long they are worn. $4.50 and $5.50—and believe us, they're worth it!

Students' Supply Store

"Everything in Stationery"

The Campus

By Joe Jones

It is unfortunate that the general public seldom gets a glimpse of college students except when they are playing or loafing. This situation is no doubt largely responsible for the widespread feeling that college life is little more than a never-tiring succession of carefree play-days, a white-collar job with neither responsibilities nor office hours.

To a great many persons the college man is a hatless, dressed-up fellow standing at the curb beside a bestickered suitcase. His thumb points down the road, and there is a look of entreaty upon his honest face. He is an eteral week-ender, forever going somewhere, forever asking perfect strangers to take him there.

The non-college inhabitants of a university town must certainly have a poor opinion of the collegian discreetly hidden beneath their business pleasantries. They see him go to the movies every day in the week; they see him taking his everlasting ease in drugstore and smoke shop, drink uncounted glasses of dope, smoke untold numbers of cigarettes, trail back and forth and to and fro across the campus and the town, play tennis, play golf, play ball, sit on the fence, ride up and down the street in anything from a '21 Ford to a '31 Isotta-Fraschini, go to football, baseball, basketball games, track meets, wrestling and boxing matches, attend numerous student entertainments, beat a path to the co-ed dormitory, attend innumerable dances, and bum to the four winds on Friday afternoon. Far into the night they hear his radio or phonograph and between midnight and dawn they are awakened by his potvaliant return from an out-of-town dance or spree. They see him roll away in a big bus to stay on the road for days as the member of glee club, band, dramatic organization, or athletic team. They see him take Thanksgiving holidays, a fortnight of Christmas holidays, a week of spring holidays, and top of it all off with three months of summer vacation.

They don't seem to realize that he has to sit at attention on a hardwood bench for three whole hours five days a week, and perhaps attend a lab or two in the afternoon; nor that he is allowed only nine cuts in each class each quarter; nor that he has to go to chapel two or three times a week during his freshman year. What a pity they can't see the inside of any dormitory late most any night after the occupants have settled down from bull sessions, card games, and miscellaneous amusements. Then they'd see what a hard worker the collegian reallegian really is—that is, if any of the boys were still awake.

Yes sir, the movies and magazine stories about college life are all wrong. College men really have to work! If you don't believe it you've either never been to college or you are a college alumnus.

Academy Of Science Meet Opens Tomorrow

The twenty-ninth annual meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science is to be held at Duke University Friday and Saturday of this week. Teachers of science in colleges and high schools all over the state are expected to attend.

Meeting with the academy is the spring meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO GREENSBORO

A special train will carry the University of North Carolina student body to Greensboro Saturday for the annual Carolina-Virginia baseball game, carded for the Gate City's Memorial stadium at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The game, long acknowledged as the outstanding attraction of the Dixie collegiate season, is expected to draw a crowd of more than 10,000 this year, and among the fans will be close to 2,000 Carolina students.

The special train, put on by the Southern Railway, will leave Chapel Hill here at 9 o'clock Saturday morning and arrive in Greensboro before noon. It is scheduled to leave Greensboro at 11:59 Saturday night for the return trip. Excursion rates will make it possible for practically all University students to follow their baseball team that day.

Plans are already laid for a colorful pilgrimage. The University students will parade up Elm Street upon arrival in Greensboro, led by their cheerleaders and the 40-piece University band. They will occupy their own cheering section at the game Saturday afternoon, ably assisted by organized cheering sections from the two girls' colleges in Greensboro.

Negro Beats Up Wife

Henry Brown, local negro, who six weeks ago appealed to his fraternity brothers in the recorder's court to assist him in his predicament, now finds himself in another equally troublesome predicament, this time behind the bars.

Brown returned day before yesterday morning from serving his time on the roads, and immediately attacked his wife, beating her badly.

congress of the North Carolina Federation of Students here Saturday is now in the process of being worked out. Present plans call for a number of interesting student discussions. Ray Farris is to lead the discussion for better intercollegiate athletic relations. Joe Savage, president of the Duke student government, and Paul Choplin, president of the State student government, are slated to lead the discussion of the present plans for the betterment and improvement of student government in this state. Miss Mary Jane Wharton, president of the N. C. C. W. student government, is scheduled to tell the congress about the successes and failures of student government in women's colleges, and, no doubt, she will have a number of suggestions to offer to the women delegates present. There will be other student discussions along the lines of publications, debating, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and extra-curricular activities.

At this initial congress, the final steps will be taken to set up the North Carolina Federation of Students as a permanent and lasting organization, and the student leaders of the state are planning to make this occasion a memorable one in the history of the state. R. C. Greene is to act as chairman of this congress, and John Lang has been assigned the responsibility of drafting and proposing a constitution for the federation in this first congress. About 60 delegates from 16 colleges and universities in North Carolina are expected at this initial congress, and everything now points toward a successful day for the state Student Federation here Saturday.

Asbury And Spieden Interview Engineers

G. A. Asbury, maintenance engineer of the Southern Railway of Danville, Virginia, and Theodore Spieden, office engineer of the Southern Railway, also of Danville, interviewed several men in the engineering school yesterday afternoon.

These interviews, arranged through A. R. Hollett, coordinator of the junior year cooperative work, were in connection with the employment of prospective men by the Southern Railway after their graduation. The Southern Railway uses three pairs of students of the engineering school in cooperative work every year.

MAY MURRAY FIRST FILM PEP PRIESTESS

Mae Murray, it is claimed, is the originator among the screen stars of that well-known attribute, pep. When she first came to the screen, fresh from her triumphs as the Nell Brinkley Girl in the Ziegfeld Follies, she brought with her all those characteristically quick little mannerisms that had endeared her to her public on the stage.

Thus it was that Mae Murray started a new vogue in screen acting which has since been imitated by dozens of other screen stars, but there still remains the one and only inimitable Mae, a Mae who appears doubly irresistible, it is claimed by those in the know, in the new production of "Peacock Alley," at the Carolina today.

From Baltimore the delegates will proceed to Washington where they will attend the United States Pharmaceutical Convention. This convention is attended by representatives from medical colleges and societies, pharmacy schools and chemical societies all over the country. It meets only once every ten years to revise the United States Pharmacoepia. The Pharmacoepia is a book describing drug and medical prescriptions. Professor Howell will be chairman of the local delegation, Professor Beard will represent the North Carolina association, and Professor Jacobs will represent the school of medicine. Mr. F. D. Bowman of Chapel Hill will also be a delegate to the convention.

The course has been highly successful and has had students in many states. The Extension division has heard from students as far distant as New York state, Ohio, Tennessee, and Florida. No doubt there are many listeners who have not corresponded with the sponsors at Chapel Hill. The professors who gave this course this year would like to do something similar in the future.

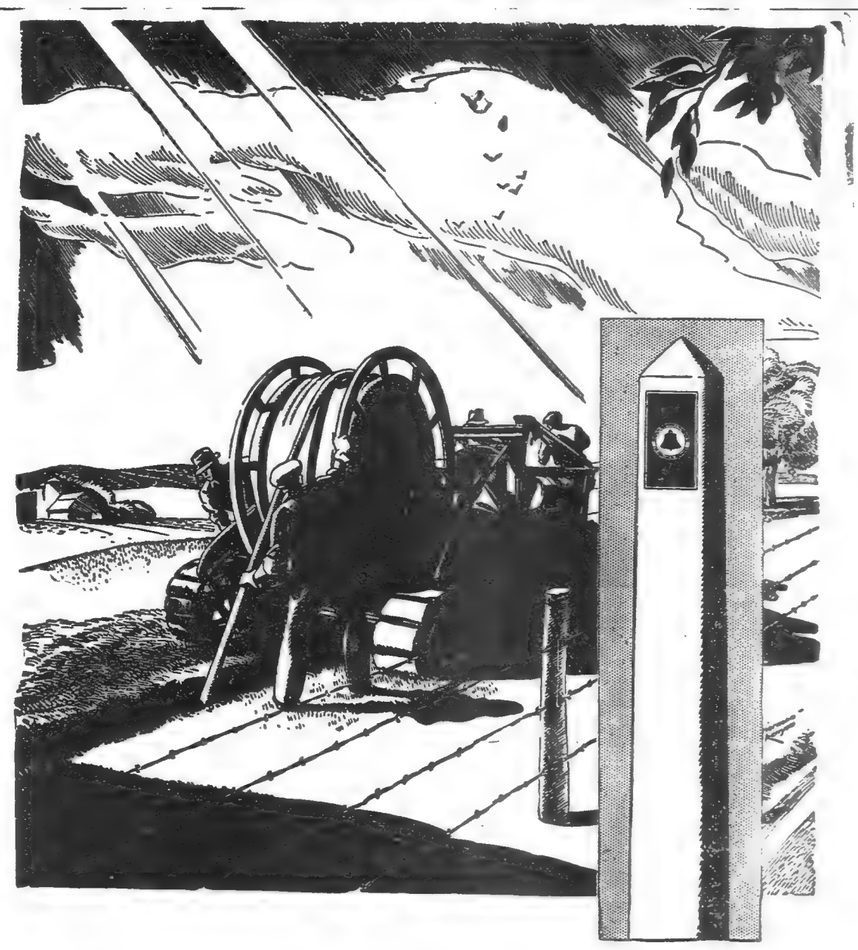
Carolina Student Body
Care of Student Government President
Chapel Hill, N. C.

To the Carolina Student Body:

We are always most happy to have Carolina students as our guests on the night of the Carolina-Virginia baseball game. This year we are not having the usual Open House, because it happens that the Play-Likers, the college dramatic organization, are presenting an old-fashioned melodrama called "After Dark, or Neither Maid, Wife, nor Widow." This bids fair to be an outstanding production in a long list of excellent plays presented by that organization, and there is much interest on the campus among our students in the play. A great portion of them desire to see it. The Play-Likers, realizing that Carolina boys may wish to accompany some of the girls to the play, have reduced the price of admission to students from $1.50 to the nominal sum of 50 cents, and by students we mean, of course, University students as well as our own.



We hope many of you will come.

Very sincerely yours,
MATILDA ROBINSON, Chairman

A milestone of Telephone progress

This marker is used to show the position of a new type of underground cable line. It is also a monument to the Bell System policy of constantly improving established methods and developing new ones.

For years underground telephone cables have been laid in hollow duct lines especially constructed for the purpose. By this newly developed supplementary method they can be buried directly in the ground without conduit—and, under many conditions, at a saving of time and money.

To do this it was necessary to develop a new type of cable, many kinds of special equipment including labor-saving installation machinery, and to work out an entirely new installation procedure.

Progress means change. The Bell System holds no procedure so sacred that it is not open to improvement.

DEAN BRADSHAW WRITES OF LIFE GUIDANCE WORK

Director of Vocational Project Outlines Plans for Blue Ridge Conference.

According to information received from the headquarters of the Southern Student Conference, a "Life Guidance Project" conducted under the direction of Dean Francis F. Bradshaw of the University will be one of the principal features of the Blue Ridge meeting in June.

Concerning his plans for work on this project Dean Bradshaw has written in a pamphlet issued by the conference offices:

"The 'Life Guidance Period' at the next Student Conference is in the center of the program, and that means that you, the individual person, are in the center. The sort of person you are and the sort of career you are to achieve—these are the major concerns of those planning for next summer at Blue Ridge.

"'What shall be my part in the world's work?' and 'How can I grow into it?' have always been central questions in life. To the answer of these questions modern thought and modern study of human behavior bring new and increasingly effective materials. The ideals and facts required for a sound vocational decision and the personality adjustments necessary for effective, happy, and useful living will be discussed by experts in these fields during the nine periods devoted to this general subject.

"In addition to the general orientation as to life-work attempted through the program just described, there will be opportunity for a limited number of students to secure individual, friendly and expert counselling from one of the faculty members participating in the Conference. During the 1928 and 1929 Conferences over over a hundred students received such assistance. Ask one of those on your campus about the value of this experience. Each faculty member will counsel only four students. You will have altogether about seven hours of

Chamber Orchestra To Play Saturday

The Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra will appear tomorrow at the Methodist church in a concert offering of first rank. This orchestra is composed of selected men from the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Walter Herrmann, the conductor, is well known to the music public as a distinguished concert cellist of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. He is in charge of the cello and ensemble department of the Cincinnati College of Music and is also the conductor of the College of Music Orchestra, formerly led by Theodore Thomas and Frank Vander Stucken.

This will probably be the outstanding feature on the spring program of entertainment. The programs that are rendered by the Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra are noted for their outstanding value and beauty, and have been highly praised by critics and the music-loving public wherever they have appeared.

Student Notice

All students now in the University who expect to apply for a teacher's certificate for next year are requested to see C. E. McIntosh at No. 10 Old Library at once. It is necessary for all credits to be filled out, so that they may be forwarded to the state department of education at Raleigh. Mr. McIntosh has the necessary blanks and will be glad to furnish them to all applicants.

TERM AMERICAN ANDES APPLIED TO BLUE RIDGE

Truly a Modern Eden in the Mountains.

Generally speaking it is only the socially select and financially fortunate that can lounge on the soft, warm sands of Palm Beach in the winter, or sleep out in the glorious clear air of the mountains in the summer. But in spite of the prohibitions that Palm Beach and Grove Park Inn place on us, we can go to the mountains with the best of them for the best part of the summer, and to the best neck of the woods. The much maligned William Jennings Bryan said at least one truthful thing in his life when he put his unqualified approval on the students' summer resort that spreads over a thousand acres in the Blue Ridge Mountains. And John R. Mott, himself, after visiting all the association grounds in the world, carved our name above the rest, when he named it the most magnificent and efficient association resort on the globe. "Figures don't lie," quoth the sage. No, neither do John R. Mott and "Bill" Bryan.

But there must be a reason for such an impression and if we're honest we'll find several, not the least of which is that it is the road to health physically, educationally and spiritually. "There's a Reason." And thereby is suspended the whole of the Blue Ridge Ideal, for it is transcendantly the high water mark physically, educationally and spiritually for the student life of the south. That sounds like saying a whole lot, and we admit that it is, but we could say a whole lot more about Blue Ridge and the Student Conference and then leave a world to the imagination.

It's a beautiful place. Some have called those mighty hills the American Alps, and some might call them the American Andes, but we prefer to boast of them as our beautiful Blue Ridge. Many have lived and died trying to describe their mountain majesty and anyone else who tries it deserves a similar fate.

There are crystal dawns and magnificent sunsets, wonderful gradations of color and temperature, the green to the gold, the chill to the noontide's heat, that breathes the atmosphere of purity that is Nature's eternal council to man. Yes, you'll quarrel for cover at night maybe, and languish for the swimming pool at noon, but spending the healthiest ten days that you ever lived, eating good food, drinking God's purest beverage and breathing His own fragrant air,

SEES CATHEDRAL IN BLUE RIDGE

Conference Member Envisions Vast Southern Memorial To Work of Founders.

(By a P. W. B.)

Nestled among the hills of North Carolina stands a Cathedral erected to the students of the south. Probably in all history of mankind, there has never been such a creative force erected to the living, and yet, sweat, blood, heartache entered into the building of this sanctuary. Men who made this possible were not working for salary. They were working to preserve that intangible something, (call it God if you wish) that flickers, and sometimes goes out, but when it permeates, transforms individuals.

Last summer I sat on Hightop, just back of the massive building, and as my eye roved over the whole scene, I relived the day when this was only a dream. The men who created this Cathedral sensed the need for a place where students could retire from the hustle of the campus and consecrate their lives. They were busy men, and yet they were close enough to the students to sense the need of a place where one could come, and in the stillness, feel

Dr. Henderson Away

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department in the Unviersity, left yesterday for Columbus, Ohio, where he will address the Kit Kat Club as guest speaker of its annual banquet meeting tomorrow in the Athletic Club.

His subject will be "The Real Bernard Shaw." Dr. Henderson is regarded as the official biographer of the noted English dramatist.

CONFERENCE HAS VARIED HISTORY

Location Constantly Changed Since 1892.

One of the most interesting and potent intercollegiate organizations in the south for the last four decades has been the Southern Student Y. M. C. A. Conference, which has come to be known in these latter years as the "Blue Ridge Conference." This name was the result of the purchase and development of Blue Ridge property by the Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s of the ten southeastern states, as their permanent assembly grounds in 1912. Of the nine different conferences that assemble at Blue Ridge annually, the Southern Student Conference is pioneer. In fact, the student Y. M. C. A.'s under the leadership of Dr. W. D. Weatherford led the movement that purchased the 1600 acres of land, and from year to year has built more than 30 buildings, with a present total property value of approximately one million dollars. The need for an adequate assembly home for the Student Conference inspired the action that has produced the present Blue Ridge.

It would be difficult to estimate the full force of constructive influence this Student Con-

Glee Club Gives Concert

The University glee club gave its annual campus concert last night in the Playmaker theatre as a regular part of the national Music Week.

The program rendered by the group under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the University music department, was received most enthusiastically by the local audience. It consisted of numbers used by the glee club on its spring tour.

Senior Notice

The executive committee of the senior class has selected different regalia since the entire class did not favor the blazers chosen. Stetson "D" has agreed to take orders for a light weight, solid white, sleeveless, slipover sweater, which costs $3.00. Senior class colors will be pinned on the sweater during senior week, which is May 25 to June 2.

The sweater is on display at Stetson "D" today. The executive committee requests that all seniors have measurements taken at once. Members of the class will be identified for the show, etc., by this regalia.

VARIED ROUTINE FOLLOWED DAILY AT CONFERENCE

Time Set Apart for Athletics, Sight-Seeing, Meditation, and Reading.

The daily program at Blue Ridge provides diversified occupation for delegates. Time for meditation, reading, sight seeing, and athletics is allowed, outside of the hours assigned for worship, addresses, discussion groups, and Bible study.

The first period is the worship hour, which comes as a morning watch before breakfast. This part of the program is habitually led by a speaker of inspirational and entertaining ability and is one of the best parts of the Blue Ridge Program.

Following the worship hour, breakfast is served in the dining hall. All the delegates eat at the same time, special tables being prepared for individual delegations or the combination of several delegations.

Bible study groups under capable ministers or other Christian leaders are held during the second period just after breakfast. The groups scatter out to any spot near the main auditorium, many of the leaders holding their discussions in shady places near the mountain streams.

The third period is taken up for personal adjustment. The whole conference assembles for discussion of the major problems of their adjustment during college life. Each leader is a trained specialist in his subject. This is the time which provides you practical, skilled help in comng to terms with life.

Next comes the resource hour and you are free to use your time in the most profitable way you know to secure help for your problems, whether from books, friends, leaders or in quiet meditation.

The last assembly of the morning is for interest groups, and includes discussions on practically every timely question of the day. Vocational guidance, international relations, church problems, men and women relations, and association tasks are the subjects of some of the largely attended groups.

Following dinner, the afternoon is left open, with the majority of the delegates participating in the various inter-delegation athletic contests. Nature study, sight seeing, hiking, and

CONFERENCE HAS GREAT GROUP OF ABLE MANAGERS

Reverend Poteat of Raleigh Will Open Conference; Kirby Page to Close.

Among the 30 or 40 able leaders for the 1930 Blue Ridge Student Conference, four men should be introduced as the principal platform speakers. The conference has been exceedingly fortunate in securing personalities who are attracting student attention for the vitality and power of their messages.

Rev. E. McNeil Poteat of Pullen Memorial Church, Raleigh, will open the conference with three addresses on "Coming to Terms with Our Universe." He was an outstanding athlete while an undergraduate, is an accomplished musician, but best of all has a prophetic message powerfully presented for the students of this generation.

Dr. Frank S. Hickman of Duke University is well known for his book "Introduction to the Psychology of Religion." His years of experience in dealing with students individually and as a Professor of psychology at Hamline University eminently fit him to present the topic, 'Coming to Terms with Ourselves," in three addresses. Dr. Hickman measures up to his giant stature in largeness of heart, mind and soul and in the power of his message.

Dr. Fletcher S. Brockman belongs peculiarly to the south as a native of Virginia and graduate of Vanderbilt University. He has reached now a place of eminence as an international figure, and is a Christian statesman in the largest sense of the word. No man is better qualified in spirit, experience, insight and outlook to interpret to southern students their relationship to others, whether it is a fellow student on his own campus or in one of the great universities of China, Japan or India.

Kirby Page will be the closing speaker of the conference. As editor, author and lecturer, he has won a unique place in the life of the nation. His book, "Jesus or Christianity," was a recent choice of the Religious Book A Month Club. His mes-

Deutsche Verein Will Meet Today

At the meeting Friday night of the Deutsche Verein, Professor Bell of the German department, will continue his illustrated travel talk, the first part of which was given in an early meeting of the Deutsche Verein. Students who attended this first talk will recall with interest the illustrations and remarks offered by Mr. Bell, and will be glad that he is talking again for a short time Friday evening on some phases of vacationing in Austria and southern Germany. Various places and experiences of the journey will be illustrated by lantern pictures. In addition to this a brief musical program of group singing has been arranged and a special quartet will render a number. The society will meet Friday evening at 7:30 in the Kiwanis room in the basement of the Methodist church.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Only a people who are calm and strong can work usefully for peace.—Andre Tardieu.

A Grave Injustice

Rejection of the nomination to the United States Supreme Court of Judge John J. Parker, distinguished jurist and alumnus of this institution, causes among us a feeling at once of indignation and fear. We are indignant because the United States Senate has insulted North Carolina and the South, and we are fearful lest the Senate lower the personnel of the court by allowing political issues to influence it in confirming appointees.

Whatever may be our personal opinion about members of the Court—whether we believe there is a need for more liberal sentiment than that existant at the present time—does not matter. It is to be expected that Mr. Hoover's appointees be of conservative nature. And in selecting a man for the nation's highest tribunal, Mr. Hoover no doubt looked for and, we think, found one who has the qualifications. The Senate was merely to decide upon the personal qualifications, but that body overstepped its bounds, as it so often does, when it based its rejection on the grounds, it seems, of Judge Parker's alleged anti-negro and anti-labor bias, both of which allegations were proven to be absurd and entirely false.

Parker's rejection is no doubt an offense to those who wanted to see a Southerner placed on the high bench. The majority of people in this section, undeniably Democratic in party affiliations, will certainly feel the Senate's action keenly, although Judge Parker is a Republican. They will feel that his being a Southerner, coupled with the pure politics of the action, rather than his qualifications, defeated him. We join with many others in voicing the sentiment that Judge Parker is the victim of a malicious injustice.—(B. M.)

Blue Ridge Conference

At this time of the year, plans are beginning to take form as to how the summer vacation is to be spent. To those students whose plans are as yet incomplete, as well as those who have already made their plans, the Blue Ridge Conference should be made a large factor in their summer's program.

Each year there gather at Blue Ridge from three to five hundred students representing the universities and colleges of the entire south. These students come from their various schools, and meet here in this quiet mountain resort to discuss their campus problems as well as to listen to some of the noted men that make up the conference program. Aside from the close contacts that will be made with students from some of the other schools, and aside from the privilege of hearing many noted men who will be present at the conference, the conference program also has its outdoor side—that of hiking, baseball, swimming, tennis, and numerous other such sports that the delegates care to participate in. It is true that this side of the conference should only be a minor factor in helping the students to decide whether they shall attend or not, but this sports side, as it may be called, adds much to the life of the conference.

With these physical developing facilities, the conference offers a four-square life development—first, a spiritual development gained from the general atmosphere of the entire conference; second, a social development which comes from continual association with students from other schools; third, a physical development that is offered by the tennis courts, baseball diamonds, hikes, and swimming facilities; and fourth, a mental development which comes from contact with some of the most learned men in the country who will be on the program of the conference.

This Blue Ridge Conference this year is to be held from June 14-23 and it is hoped that many students will see and grasp this opportunity of attending such a conference.

—C. G. R.

An Anomalous Situation

In a recent talk make by Professor Frank Graham, attention was called to an outstanding example of the sort of conditions which led Governor Gardner to inaugurate his Live-at-home program. Pointed out was the fact that North Carolina imports annually 500,000 bales of cotton, though exporting at the same time 300,000 bales of the same commodity. That an enormous loss must be here involved, both to growers and to manufacturers, is readily apparent.

The factor underlying this anomalous situation, according to Mr. D. R. Coker, who has spent years in a study of the problem, is the peculiar reluctance of North Carolina farmers to grow long staple cotton. Although this section is well suited to the raising of that kind of cotton, its production on any scale of importance has, due to ignorance or unwillingness to undergo change on the part of growers, been neglected.

North Carolina has long enough served as the means of enriching other sections of the country, and the time has come to awaken to the possibilities and opportunities in this rich state and to take advantage of them.—(J. M. L.)

About 1850 the two literary societies on the campus effectively controlled their members to prevent hazing.

(By Edna Morrisette)

Crowds of boys around an open, well-lighted doorway . . . a warm spring night . . . has anything started yet? Let's sit up in the balcony. . . . Would you mind sitting downstairs, please. . . . Don't go so far up front. . . . Gordon Gray, Jason of the order, introduces Dr. Horace Williams. . . . "The Fleece has never tapped a man who was lacking in character." . . . He in turn introduces Dr. Chase. . . . Can you imagine Durham being a two hours' drive? . . . He looks so distinguished up there. . . . "Two schools of thought opposing each other in the south" . . . "no longer any such thing as the Solid South" . . . Hmm! I don't know whether I agree with him or not.

Hearty applause . . . that was a good speech, wasn't it? . . . The speaker is sitting down. . . . Look! . . . Two hooded figures with the golden fleece over their shoulders emerge from somewhere in the front of the church. . . . Don't they walk heavy? . . . it's so quiet all of a sudden . . . it gives you such a funny feeling . . . one goes one way, one goes the other. . . . Won't they ever tap anybody? . . . Oh! what a noise, sounds like they knocked the poor fellow down instead of just tapping him. . . . Who is it? . . . it's Ed Hamer . . . look how red his ears are. More walking around . . . I'm getting nervous. . . . If they should tap anyone near me I'd die a natural death. . . . Who is that they're tapping now? . . . Joe Eagles . . . his face is so red one can hardly see where his face stops and his hair starts. . . . Oh right on the same row with me, Puny Harper . . . how in the world did they ever get that big boy to his feet? . . . Clyde Dunn next . . . I can't see him . . . move your head willya! . . . They're tapping Pat Patterson at the same time . . . if I only had two pairs of eyes. . . . Gee-ee-ee! here they come over this way again. Can't you slip down a little bit, Louise? . . . They've gone on by and tapped Noah Goodridge! . . . Marion Alexander . . . he's white as a sheet. . . . I know who one of those tappers is . . . I recognize those tan shoes. . . . They've tapped Archie Allen. . . . That's eight, must be all. . . . Nope, they're still stamping holes in the floor. . . . Who in the world is next? . . . Why, it's Will Yarborough . . . even the back of his neck is read. . . . Let's go, that's all. . . . I'm in an awful hurry . . . got to do a term paper and ten pages of French before I go to bed. . . . Glad it's not 20 years ago when they turned the lights off at midnight.

NATURE SCENERY LENDS ROMANCE

That well known Carolina moon, eulogized so fittingly in song, never shines more brightly, nor more effectively, than it does at Blue Ridge. On a soft, moonlight June night, when sessions are over and everyone breathes deep of the pure mountain air with a sense of security and inspiration, romance finds its place in the groups that gather for singing and talking.

There, women students, from southern colleges who are vacationing at Blue Ridge, as members of the maintenance staff, meet members of the men's conference, and, in the ideal setting, many a living romance has been bred. Many a lasting friendship, between men and women, and between men and men, is begun in that uplifting atmosphere of the Blue Ridge mountain tops.

A canoe ride on the moonlit lake, a stroll down a shady path, flecked with penetrating moonbeams, or a lounging on the grassy carpet in front of Robert E. Lee hall, to gaze over the beautiful panoramic view, laid out boldly under the rays of the moon, are some of the inducements to romance and nobility of friendship.

Yet the daylight, with a warm sun making everything stand out in stark reality, finds congenial groups being formed in convenient spots around the grounds. There is a spring of icy, pure mountain water, in a secluded spot, surrounded by stalwart mountain oaks, through which the sunlight sends flickering rays; there are a number of mossy plots on the banks of the mountain streams, with diminutive waterfalls gurgling out a happy song of welcome to the loungers; there are the shaded verandas of the delegation cottages; and there is the fountain with a temple-like enclosure, that is a popular meeting place all during the day.

In such surroundings, it is not strange that students are drawn closer together in friendship; that ideals are restored and strengthened; that, stripped of all sordid reality of humdrum every day life the days and nights are easily filled with romantic associations. And it is beautifully realistic that many delegates to Blue Ridge have met those with whom they have chosen to continue through life, in just such settings as nature provided in the beginning.

Rumor Is Denied

Rumor prevalent on the campus to the effect that the play, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" will be reproduced has been declared to be without foundation. The theatre is not available at the time the reproduction was planned.

Readers' Opinions

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Here's a hand for our University band, which I believe to be one of the finest organizations on the Hill. The open air concert Tuesday evening, though very brief, was well-received by the comparatively small group of listeners.

Mr. McCorkle and his assistants, as well as the members of the band, are to be congratulated for their fine work. Let's hear more of this organization.

THE LIBRARY CATALOGUE

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Many patrons of the library have been annoyed by the way drawers in the general catalogue are left on the shelves and out of their regular places. No less than thirteen drawers were placed all about in slip-shod order when the writer visited the library yesterday. This makes an inconvenience for library users as well as those who work there.

You, yourself, have often been annoyed by being delayed in finding the drawer you wanted and also by the lack of space on the shelves to place the drawer while you were using it. For better service for yourself as well as to help others you would do well to place the drawers back in their proper places after using them.

Virginia Here Today For Second Series Game

Tomorrow's Game Closes Annual Cavalier Classic

Ashmore Has Yet to Lose Baseball Series With Virginia; Tar Heels Have One Game In Bag Already.

A light workout and a lot of rest yesterday and the University baseball team stood ready for the final two games of the annual classic series with Virginia.

The Tar Heels took the first game of this 37th annual series in Charlottesville, 8-5. The second and third games, in which the Tar Heels will be fighting to repeat their 1929 trick and pull a clean sweep, will be played on Emerson field here Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock and in Memorial stadium at Greensboro Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, respectively.

Coach Jim Ashmore of the Tar Heels has never lost a series to Virginia, and if human effort can tell the tale, he obviously means to keep the record up this year. The probable pitching selections, announced yesterday, indicate that fact exactly.

Cecil Longest, who held Georgia's sluggers to three hits and has turned in several other fine games, is slated to pitch today. Paul Edwards, the real class of the Tar Heel rookies, whose most recent victory was Tuesday's win over N. C. State, is slated to pitch the Greensboro classic Saturday. The ever-dependable and veteran Frank Fleming is to be held in reserve.

The whole squad is in good shape, save Rand, second baseman, still troubled with an injured foot. It would be hard to find a better-fielding second baseman, but Phil Jackson, who moved from first to second in the State game, bagged two homers, and hits will be what the Tar Heels are looking for.

Captain Maus will be on first again in Jackson's place, with Lufty at his regular third base post, Whitehead at his regular shortstop position, and Potter behind the bat. Blythe, Davis, Paxton and Sher, left-handed batters; and House and McKinney, right-handers, will probably be alternated in the outfield to meet Virginia's pitching.

The Virginia series is the oldest on the Tar Heel schedule, and the annual Carolina-Virginia game in Greensboro is recognized as perhaps the biggest of the southern college baseball classics. This year's game, to be attended in a body by the students of Carolina, N. C. C. W., and Greensboro College, is expected to draw a colorful crowd of 10,000.

Homer Wins for S. A. E.

The S. A. E. baseball nine yesterday afternoon defeated Phi Sigma Kappa 10-6. The Phi's led the game until the last inning when S. A. E. made 8 of the 10 runs to win the game.

Davis, catcher for S. A. E., got a home-run in the fifth, driving two men in.

The batteries were: Phi Sigma Kappa—Teachey and Rives; S. A. E.—Waterhouse and Davis.

Beta Tennis Team Wins

Beta Theta Pi No. 1 tennis team defeated Pi Kappa Alpha yesterday by winning the three singles matches. Pi Kappa Alpha forfeited the two doubles matches. The scores were as follows: Draper, Beta Theta Pi, won over McCoy 4-6, 6-0, 6-0; Reid, Beta, won over Holt 6-2, 6-3; and Potter defeated Blue 6-0, 6-0.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

By Jack Bessen

A modern major league record was broken and a National League record was equalled in the second game of a double header recently played between the Brooklyn Robins and the St. Louis Cardinals. The new mark was set when the teams went to bat officially 103 times, the Gotham team with 52 and the Red Birds with 51. The all-time record was made in 1883 when the Detroit and Boston clubs went to bat 110 times. The more modern record was made by the Giants and the Reds who went to bat 99 times.

Max Schmelling, the German Dempsey, is back in the States. About a year ago "Der Maxie" got in bad with the Boxing Commish because he did not go through with a scheduled match and also because of managerial troubles. For this the German star was suspended indefinitely, but yesterday he showed repentance and was reinstated in time to sign for a title bout with Jack Sharkey at one of the New York ball parks. Before Max could be reinstated he had to agree to the New York boxing solons' demands. In the event that Max will succeed Gene Tunney as champion he must defend his title within a year and in New York; his opponent must be accepted by the commission, and the promoter must also be suitable in the eyes of the commish.

According to unofficial information the great gap between Harvard and Princeton is about to be closed. If this is accomplished, the Tiger and the Crimson will resume football relations in 1931, which will undoubtedly be sweet to both institutions. Both colleges are natural rivals and there never should have been an interruption in their long years of athletic relations.

The lacrosse coach at Syracuse verifies the report that the Cambridge lacrosse team that just finished a clean-up tour of our colleges had ringers in its lineup. One British lacrosser was recognized as the same collegian who played here a few years ago. It was unofficially understood that the foreign visitors needed a couple of good players to make the playing end of the trip a success. There is no scandal or even criticism connected with this affair. Lacrosse, like cricket, is largely a social pastime and a ringer or two is neither here nor there. We would not deign to criticise the British collegians—what with our colleges reeking with ringers. No sir.

When Yale beat Columbia on Saturday, Ed Leader showed that he had another high-class crew. Columbia still has a great chance to cop at Poughkeepsie this year under Dick Glendon's tutelage. Any crew fast enough to beat the pace of the Blue and White can row. However, the Elis have no setup when they match beats with the Crimson, but any Eli opponent will have to keep on paddling the rest of the season to stop the eight that Ed Leader has turned out. Here is a coach and a conditioner that belongs among the top file in sport—and you can name your sport from football to track in this connection.

TRACKMEN LEAVE TODAY FOR MEET WITH PRINCETON

Strong Tiger Team in Good Position to Spoil Tar Heels' Eight-Year Dual Record.

The University trackmen, who on Saturday by a big margin annexed their ninth consecutive state title, go north to Princeton today to meet the mighty Princeton Tiger in his home lair tomorrow.

The contest will be the Tar Heels' last dual meet before the Southern Conference championships in Birmingham the following week-end, and will probably be their toughest of the whole season.

Hedges and Rosner, two of the big Princeton guns, may be on the injured list. But Captain Dave Nims, Carolina star quarter-miler, is definitely lost for the season, and Perry and Reid, the Tar Heels' best hurdlers, are not in the best of shape.

The odds are even there. Princeton, in its first meet of the year, has been given the option of entering extra contestants in all events but the sprints and hurdles. The Tar Heels can hardly take a squad of more than 25, so that their average entry will run from 2 to 3 men in an event.

This is a big factor against the Heels. More impressive still is the uniformly high calibre of the Princeton performers.

Hollis Hand is reported to be the best sprinter at Princeton in years, and the Princetonians, referring to his coming race with the Tar Heel ace, Farmer, give Farmer no more odds than that the "outcome remains to be seen."

Summerill, Watt and Bradley comprise a fleet trio of high hurdlers, while Faber and Gorham are both outstanding in the high jump. The low hurdles are well fortified with Lincoln and Scarlet, the fastest pair, closepushed by Bradley and Wood.

The distance stars are particularly outstanding—Horne and Keown, quarter-miler; Mills and Sheppard, half-milers; Dawson and Spencer, milers; and Whitehead, Salters, Bele and Van Dusen, two-milers.

A strong array of men in the field events leaves the Tigers without an obvious vulnerable weakness. In this department, Ranck tied for second in the vault at the Penn Relays, and is well-supported by Austin; Andrews and Summerill are good bets in the broadjump; and Waldren, Burmen and Scarlet are strong in the weights.

Despite their stars and strength, it looks like a tough day for the Tar Heels, who will be doing their best to defend a record of no losses in dual meets over an eight-year stretch.

At The Carolina

In "The Big Pond," his newest starring film, Maurice Chevalier becomes thoroughly "Americanized."

His earlier films showed the former favorite of the Folies Bergere in the characterizations of a music hall singer and of an ambassador extraordinaire in a mythical kingdom. But "The Big Pond" shows him as an enterprising "big shot" in a chewing gum factory. And nothing could be more American than that.

"The Big Pond" is based on a Broadway play of last season by George Middleton and A. E. Thomas. The story deals with a young Frenchman, who is employed as a guide for American tourists in Venice. Through the influence of some tourists he is brought to America to take a position in a chewing gum factory. He starts "at the bottom" and gains prestige in the business through his novel ideas about advertising.

"The Big Pond" comes to the Carolina Theatre today.

TAR BABIES WIN TWICE IN VIRGINIA

Defeat Fork Union 27-8 and Woodberry 13-8.

The Tar Baby nine started off its Virginia trip in impressive style, defeating Fork Union Military Academy by the overwhelming score of 27 to 8 Wednesday, and continued the good work yesterday when they defeated Woodberry Forest by a score of 13 to 8.

In the Fork Union game the frosh slugged the offerings of the opposing pitchers to all corners of the lot. Riggs, Tar Baby short stop, led the attack with two homers and a single. He was followed by Whitehead who laced out three singles, and Dixon who found the ball for a triple and a single. McNeill starred on the mound for the frosh, giving up but two singles in the six innings which he pitched. The batteries for Carolina were Chandler, McNeill and Peacock, Pattisall.

The Tar Babies continued their savage attack against Woodberry Forest but could not get beyond the 13 jinx in runs. Peacock did the best stick work for Carolina in this game, garnering a homer and a single. Ferebee, who drove out a homer, and Dixon and White, each of whom made a double and single, were other men whose batting was outstanding. Griffith, Tar Baby pitcher who has had offers already from Detroit and New York, fanned eleven opposing batsmen in 5 2-3 innings. The Tar Baby batteries in this game were Griffith, Adkins and Peacock.

Conference Offers Ideal Vacation at A Minimum Expense

A perfect ten-day vacation is what Blue Ridge offers to southern students at a minimum charge. It can be safely stated that in no resort in the South is there more varied occupation, more healthful climate, more beautiful scenery, more congenial acquaintances to be found than in this resort perched on the side of the Blue Ridge mountains of North Carolina. Ten days packed full of worthwhile diversions, broadening influences, and breeding friendships is but a feeble estimate of the results obtained in the eighteen previous years that Blue Ridge has been maintained for southern confernces by the national organization of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Here are a few of the outstanding features of Blue Ridge:

1. The most beautiful scenery in eastern America.
2. Athletics of every description.
3. The ultimate in good speakers, leaders, and counsellors.
4. Campus leaders from practically every important university in the southern states.
5. Accomodations to satisfy the most meticulous.
6. Food of the highest quality in the greatest quantities.

New Dorms Swamps Mangum Batsmen

New Dorms crushed the Mangum baseball team yesterday afternoon 12-0. The wrecking crew of New Dorms got into action early, raking Kochendefer for 9 runs. Allen hit a home run and Fysal a triple in this inning.

Moore, the winning pitcher, whiffed 10 men and let Mangum down with 5 hits. Morgan, relief pitcher, hurled good ball for the remainder of the game.

At one time Memorial hall was used as a gymnasium.

FROSH TRACKMEN WIN OVER STATE

Drane and Stafford Take Two Firsts Each as Tar Babies Wind up Season by Doubling Score on Wolflets.

The Tar Babies wound up their season in impressive style when they defeated the N. C. State Wolflets in Raleigh Wednesday afternoon by a score of 86-40. The Carolinians ruled supreme in all the track events, winning every first place and dropping but five points to State on the cinders. However, State reversed the situation somewhat and took first in all the field events except two. In the 220, 440, 880, mile and two-mile the Tar Babies made a clean sweep of all three places, and the Wolflets did the same in the discus, shot and broad jump.

Carolina men finished first in "framed-up" ties in the 880, mile and two-mile.

The double winners of the day were Drane, who is copying Farmer's "ten point" habit, first in the 100 and 220; Stafford, high jump and 220 low hurdles; and Jensen and Jones, who voluntarily tied for first in both the mile and 880.

Stafford added a second place in the high hurdles to bring his total point aggregate to 13 and lead in the high scoring.

Phi Sig Racqueteers Win From Kappa Sig

Phi Sigma Kappa took a hotly contested tennis match from Kappa Sigma yesterday afternoon by winning the doubles and one of the singles matches. Andrews, Phi Sig, won over Bridges, 8-6, 6-4; Whittington, Phi Sig, defeated Kleemeir 6-1, 6-2; and Cozart, Kappa Sig, defeated Curlee 6-1, 6-1. In the doubles Phi Sigma Kappa made a clean sweep. Curlee and Andrews defeated Cozart and Satterfield 6-0, 6-2, and Whittington and Denning defeated Grey and Kleemeir 6-3, 6-4.

STUHLMAN WILL ADDRESS GROUP AT DUKE TODAY

Physics Professor To Speak At 29th Meeting Of Academy Of Science

The University physics department, headed by Dr. Otto Stuhlman, will be uniquely represented at the 29th annual meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science which will be held at Duke University in Durham today and tomorrow.

The unique feature of the department of physics' representation is that every member of the staff who has been attached to the department for more than a year will have a paper read at the meeting. This fact illustrates the unusual activity of the department of physics.

The physics section of the Academy is headed by Dr. Stuhlman of the University as chairman and Dr. Collins of Duke as secretary.

The papers that represent the local physics department vary greatly. Among the members contributing are Dr. Stuhlman, whose paper is upon physical characteristics of gas bubbles, and M. D. Whitaker, O. P. Hart and M. G. Braun, students of Dr. Stuhlman, who will contribute various papers on electrodeless discharge through certain gases and certain spectroscopic characteristics of this phenomenon.

The students of K. Z. Morgan will present the effects of external resistance on the negative resistance of electron tubes.

Dr. E. R. Plyler and students are contributing two papers on infra-red spectra. In one of these P. E. Shearin gives a theoretical discussion of this phenomenon.

Working Boys and Girls Find Place

At Blue Ridge there is a group of college students each year for the entire summer who gather there to work and study. This group is known as the P. W.'s, the boys being designated as Poor Working Boys, and the girls are called P. W. G.'s (Pretty Working Girls). The delegates to the summer conferences often form close friends with the Poor Workers.

Only college juniors, seniors, or graduates who desire to grow in religious and educational life are accepted on the Blue Ridge Working Staff. The staff has been distinctly a group whose members are deeply in earnest educationally, and not a group looking for a summer outing or for a money-making job. In the eighteen summers, more than two thousand college young men and women have had a summer quarter of intensive religious education training, which is one of the most distinctive contributions Blue Ridge has made. This educational procedure has not increased by lessened the expense for each worker to Blue Ridge and has not increased the number of workers.

LEAVITT WILL SPEAK TO SPANISH CLUB TONIGHT

The Spanish Club will meet tonight for the last time this year in the Episcopal parish house at 8 o'clock. Dr. S. E. Leavitt will recount the experiences of his trip to Spain during the past year. Refreshments will be served following the election of officers for next year.

Four dinners are to be given at the Carolina Inn this weekend. Theta Kappa Psi and Phi Alpha are entertaining tonight. Pi Beta Phi and the North Carolina Federation of Students are giving banquets tomorrow.

BLUE RIDGE MEET NOW IN 19TH YEAR

Entering its nineteenth year as a center of the summer activities of Southern Y.M.C.A.'s, Blue Ridge is planning for the greatest year of its history, according to O. R. Magill, executive secretary of the Student Division of Southern Y.M.C.A.'s.

Blue Ridge arose out of the needs of the Young Women's Christian Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, and the Missionary Education Movement for a Summer Training Conference center.

The Blue Ridge grounds were opened for conferences during the summer of 1912, and during that summer more than 1,400 people were served and trained in its buildings. In the 18 summers of its operation Blue Ridge has furnished Christian inspiration and educational uplift to more than 50,000 persons. No one can estimate its far-reaching influence.

Until Blue Ridge opened in 1912 there were only three interdenominational training conferences in the South—one for the representatives of the Y. M. C. A. in the colleges, one for the representatives of the Y. W. C. A., and one for the Missionary Education Movement.

State College Y. M. President To Head Blue Ridge Meeting

A. D. Stuart, vice-president of State College Y.M.C.A., is president of the Blue Ridge Conference for 1930, and will preside at all meetings of the conference of 300 college men.

At the 1929 conference Stuart was chosen by the Southern Regional Council of the Student Y. M. C. A. to be chairman of the council for the year 1929-30. The council, which he heads, plans and carries out the Southern Student Conference of college Y. M. C. A.'s, which is held at Blue Ridge each summer. This council helps the college Y.M.C.A.'s to plan their programs each year. The President's Training School, held at Blue Ridge annually during the first six weeks' of summer, is planned and directed by this group.

The council is composed of 19 students, 10 student secretaries, 10 state secretaries, 10 faculty representatives, and eight church board representatives together with four alumni representatives, one boys' work secretary, and one interracial secretary.

Four of the members of the Southern Regional Council are from North Carolina, including two of the officers, both of whom are from State College. The four men are A. D. Stuart, E. S. King, both of N. C. State, W. M. Upchurch, Jr., of Duke, and Harry Comer, general secretary of the "Y" at Carolina.

In addition to Stuart as chairman, the other officers of the council are E. S. King, N. C. State, treasurer; Guerry Harris, University of Georgia, vice-chairman, and Bert Karick, University of South Carolina, secretary.

Stuart will hold office until the final meeting of the 1930 Southern Students' Conference, at which time he will turn the chair over to a successor to be chosen by the council for 1931.

PUPILS TO GIVE RECITAL TONIGHT

The University music department will present a recital by pupils in violin, piano and voice tonight at 8:15 in the Methodist church auditorium.

The recital is being given as a regular feature of the national Music Week program, and there will be no admission charge. Ushers are being provided by Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity.

right there on the mountain side.

And there is, too, a health in the contact with real, live men. Men who are leaders back in their colleges, who have won glory on the gridiron and diamond for their institutions, men who are making their names in athletics and in the literary and social life of our southern educational world, who have met to share their fellowship in the most friendly of contests and the most fraternal of rivalries. Yes, those mountain sides, the long athletic field, the invigorating plunge into the swimming pool, are a physical road to health.

But home runs and mountain climbs claim not all our interest, for we're there to learn. And we collegians no doubt have much to learn. Indeed, we are blissfully free from the dusty tomes that embarrass the tranquility of the dormitory. Horace is cold and dead, and calculus can not survive the rarified atmosphere of the highlands, but we learn, and that's what we live for. It's life we learn by forming friendships with our delegates and the leaders who have learned the lesson of life before us. God's great symposium of biography, the Bible, is taught daily, and the teeming life of the mission fields is brought to us day by day till we see the world in the large, forgetting the provincialism to which we're all so prone. And how shall we manage the association next year? How shall our programs be adjusted and carried out? We are told by the men who know and who are there to help us. Day by day for 12 glorious days we face facts and folks and relate them to ourselves so vitally we never forget them, and back in our schools their influences shall be felt to an extent of which we little dream. Yes, these days are a road to an educational health.

But there is more than the mind and body that must be nourished and sustained. And it's there on those heights of privilege and intimacy that our hearts are touched and our spirits inspired. After all our souls are at the heart of things and we relate, unconsciously perhaps, but nevertheless truly, our thrills of body and mind to the quiet eternal impressions of our souls. Inspiration gains a new and vital meaning up there where the hills ride high. The messages from the platform make us think deeply and seriously about things of which we have thought little, or perhaps forgotten altogether. Or how often at the twilight hour looking into the face of the sunset as the blue shadows lengthen into the darkness of the mountains, has some life felt the unmistakable urgings that have helped shape its whole future career, or has come face to face for the first time perhaps with the God of the hills and the streams and the skies, and has felt the thrill of high manhood in the linking up in an eternal friendship with the Christ.

PHI ALPHA WILL GIVE BANQUET AND DANCE

Phi Alpha fraternity is holding a banquet at the Carolina Inn tonight to celebrate the second anniversary of its founding. Alumni are expected to come from Washington and parts of this state. Dr. Bagby will be the speaker for the occasion.

Following the banquet a reception and dance is to be held at the house. Music will be furnished by Bill Stringfellow.

the presence of their Creator.

Across the valley stands the Craggies with its Seven Sisters, Clingman's Dome, Pinnacle, and in this setting the beauties of nature were so evident that one just knows there are lasting values in our world of activity.

Men who built this Cathedral were not in a hurry. They, like our Father, provided for future student generations. Every dollar of money, every ounce of energy, was a symbol of devotion and a belief in the eternal prophecy of youth. They were not worried about where this money was to come from, for they knew that something fundamental to our lives must be retained at any cost.

A few days ago I stood in the midst of a great university. Students were rushing to this class or to that meeting, doing things that you are now doing 24 hours a day. They had scarcely a conception of the meaning of all the things that make up a student life, and certainly not time to evaluate them. Many in this throng were in danger of losing their spiritual life.

This is upsetting, yet who is to blame if students have not the time nor the setting to renew their faith in eternal values.

Men of vision created Blue Ridge, provided for summer conferences out from the hustle of life, to share with students that comforting assurance that Jesus enjoyed in his native mountains of Judea. There it stands, an enormous Cathedral to the students of the south, with Christian Associations inviting you to stop, come into the stillness of the mountains, consecrate your life anew, to Love and Goodwill and to all Mankind.

sage in three addresses will bring the conference the heart of that book. Mr. Page will come direct to Blue Ridge after landing in San Francisco from his present trip around the world. This will lend that color and warmth to his message which comes through intimate contact with the great spirits of the world and first hand study of the world's greatest human problems.

It would take volumes to give the story of the accomplishments and qualifications of the total list of eminent leaders who will be contributors to the rich program of the 1930 Conference. We need only mention the well-known names of a few of the others—Dr. Harry W. Chase, University of North Carolina; Dr. E. W. Sikes, Clemson College, S. C.; Dr. W. D. Weatherford, Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, Nashville, Tennessee; Dean F. F. Bradshaw, University of North Carolina; Dr. English Bagby, University of North Carolina; Coach Alexander, Georgia Tech; Dr. W. W. Alexander, Atlanta; Dr. Clifford Barbour, Knoxville, Tennessee; Dr. A. K. Rule, Louisville Presbyterian Seminary; Rev. A. C. Zabriskie, Alexandria Seminary; Dean W. H. CONFERENCE HAS VARIED HISTORY ference has had for the past four years upon the social, moral, and religious life of something like one hundred colleges in the southeast. During the 40 years the Conference has had nine different homes for its meeting. In 1892, '93 and '94 it met in Knoxville, Tenn., on the campus of the University of Tennessee. The regional secretary who organized and led these three conferences was Fletcher S. Brockman, who went to China with the foreign department of Y. M. C. A. and since has been a national figure in China. In 1895 there was no conference held, apparently for the reason that there was no regional secretary to organize and convene it. In 1896, '97, '98, '99 and '00 the Southern Student Conference operated under the leadership of W. D. Weatherford, meeting at Bingham School in Asheville. In 1901 it met at the Asheville School in Asheville. In 1902 Dr. Weatherford led the Conference at Haywood Sulphur Springs, near Waynesville. In 1903 and '04 it met again at the Asheville School. For the next four years—1905, '06, '07 and '08—the Farm School near Asheville was the assembly place, while for the following three years—1909, '10 and '11—the Conference met at Montreat, the assembly grounds of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Then came the most interesting epoch in the long history of the Southern Student Conference, when during the 1911 conference at Montreat Dr. Weatherford took a large group of students from the conference over across the valley, and several hundred yards up the slope on the opposite side of Black Mountain, to explore the proposed site for a permanent Y. M. C. A. assembly grounds. The site traversed was in the rough but clearly revealed the possibilities which since have become the beautiful reality of what we now know as Blue Ridge. Mr. Rockefeller gave the first $75,000 for purchase of the land and construction of the first building. Sufficient equipment was ready for the conference of the next summer, so that in 1912 the Student Conference opened in its own grounds and has met there annually ever since.

reading are also optional to the individual delegate.

Immediately after supper a good many of the delegates assemble around the piano in the lobby of Robert E. Lee hall for singing, while others stroll around the grounds getting acquainted. This is one of the free periods.

As a climax to the day's program, the leading address of the day is given at 8 o'clock. The featured leaders of the conference are heard by an assembly of the entire conference during this hour.

counselling with your adviser. There will be time for a fairly thorough discussion of your experiences, abilities, interests, and plans.

"As further help towards your understanding of the project discussed in this statement, the following is presented as the main reason for such an enterprise:

"Work is a universal activity. All persons much make some kind of adjustment to the work of the society in which they live. Human progress depends upon that adjustment being a fit and worthy one. Social progress comes through the activity of individuals who are well adjusted to their work and whose collective work in turn meets essential and individual is unique, and profoundly influenced by his work experience, the vocational adjustment must be appropriate to his peculiar personal and emotional nature. All honest work should be dignified as a service to society and a means to the specific advancement of human welfare, choice of such labor being dependent on personal satisfaction, ability, remuneration, social function, and similar considerations."

What is offered you at Blue Ridge is not a ready-made, cut-and-dried answer to the question "What shall I do?" but rather an opportunity for joint thinking with a trained and sympathetic counsellor. The results last summer indicate that at the end of the Conference period you may find that you have gained:

1. Great help in understanding what you are able to do.
2. Knowledge of new lines to explore.
3. New light on the significant opportunities of your campus.
4. Definite suggestions for additional work experiences.
5. Acquaintance with splendid ways to get information and help.
6. Clearer, broader, deeper, richer views of the problem involved in vocational choice.

North Carolina Federation Of Students Will Be Organized Today With Sixteen Colleges And Universities Represented

INITIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS TO BE AT 11 O'CLOCK

Dr. A. T. Allen, Professor Frank Graham, and Dean F. F. Bradshaw To Speak During Sessions of Congress.

BANQUET AT INN TONIGHT

(By K. C. Ramsay)

Some 60 delegates representing 16 colleges of the state are expected here today for the organization of the North Carolina Federation of Students. The opening session will be in Gerrard hall this morning at 11 o'clock. Professor Frank Graham and Dean F. F. Bradshaw are the principal speakers for the initial session. Red Greene, student body president, will preside at all meetings.

Registration for the congress will be held at the Y. M. C. A. from 9 until 11 o'clock this morning. At this time enrollment of delegates and payment of dues will be attended to and general information concerning the federation will be given out.

Dr. Allen To Speak

Dr. A. T. Allen, state superintendent of public instruction, will deliver an address at the afternoon session of the congress which convenes at 2:30 o'clock. Several discussions on various phases of student life will be held during the afternoon, and will be led by student body presidents from several of the larger institutions. Ratification of the constitution is to be considered at the afternoon session.

A banquet for the congress has been scheduled for the Carolina Inn tonight at 6:15, at which time the officers of the federation for next year will be elected.

The closing session of the first annual meeting will be tonight at 8:30 in Gerrard hall. Installation of the newly-elected officials will be held at this time. Any legislation which may come before the congress will be taken up during the closing session.

History of Federation

The North Carolina Federation of Students was first conceived at the Carolina-Duke confab held during the winter quarter. At this meeting student officials of both institutions de-

ROTARIANS ELECT COBB PRESIDENT

At the weekly meeting of the local Rotary club held Wednesday night at the Carolina Inn at 6:30 the following officers for next year were elected; Collier Cobb, Jr., president; R. D. W. Connor, vice-president; C. E. Rozzelle, secretary; Fred O. Bowan, sergeant-at-arms. The new board of directors that was also elected at this meeting are: Y. Z. Cannon, John Foushee, Milton Hogan, John McAuley, and Bruce Strowd.

Besides the election of officers, "Sandy" Graham of Hillsboro, and an alumnus of the University addressed the club on the subject of "Prison Reform."

Dr. Abernathy retired at the Wednesday meeting as president of the club, after two years of service.

New President To Be Chosen At Trustees' Meeting Early In June

The new President of the University will probably be elected at the Commencement meeting of the trustees here in Chapel Hill next month.

This is what the newspaper correspondents learned day before yesterday in Raleigh after a meeting of the trustees' committee which had been charged with the duty of recommending to the board men suitable for the position.

Three members of the committee (A. H. Graham, chairman, Leslie Weil, and Charles Whedbee) were present; Judge John J. Parker and Stahle Linn were not present.

The uncertainty that still envelops the affair is illustrated by the remark which Mr. Graham made to one of the correspondents. "I do not know how I should vote myself if I had to vote today," he said.

The committee was not instructed to recommend any one particular man, but to present the names of several whom it regarded as capable. It is said that as many as 15 or 20 names may be laid before the trustees.

It is surprising how little discussion about the presidency there has been in Chapel Hill in the last few weeks. The community was all excited about it immediately after President Chase's resignation was announced; then the excitement seemed to burn itself out, and days on end have passed without any general discussion of the presidency. R. D. W. Connor is still talked of in Chapel Hill as the member of the faculty most likely to be chosen. In fact, since the withdrawal of Frank Graham, no other faculty member but Mr. Connor appears to be seriously considered. Precedence points toward the selection of a man already here. Since the re-opening of the University in 1875 every president has been chosen from among the faculty.

Another person who has been frequently suggested for the presidency is Ivey F. Lewis of the University of Virginia, who was graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1902. And another is Edwin Greenlaw of Johns Hopkins, formerly dean of the graduate school here.

Now and then one hears the proposal that, instead of electing a president this year, the trustees make a temporary appointment of a chairman of the faculty. The news from the meeting in Raleigh, however, indicates that this course will not be followed.

UNIVERSITY MEN SPEAK AT DUKE

Deliver Papers At Meeting Of State Branch Of Academy Of Science.

Presenting many different types of papers, various departments of the University are well represented at the 29th annual meeting of the North Carolina section of the Academy of Science at Duke University yesterday and today.

At the mathematics section to be held this morning at 11 o'clock, five out of the six papers to be read were written by members of the local mathematics department. The authors of these papers are J. W. Lasley, Ernest L. Mackie, L. E. Bush, A. S. Winsor, and Edward T. Browne.

The physics department will be uniquely represented in its proper section in the fact that every member of the staff who has been attached to the department for more than a year will have a paper read at the meeting. Among the authors of these papers are Otto Stuhlman, head of the department, and M. D. Whitaker, O. P. Hart, M. G. Braun and P. E. Shearin.

Practically all of the papers in the chemistry section of the Academy were products of the local department of chemistry.

The departments of geology and botany are also represented by several papers. Among those contributing are Collier Cobb, head of the geology department; W. C. Coker, head of the botany department; and W. F. Prouty and J. N. Couch. J. B. Bullitt of the school of medicine and Carleton S. Preston of the school of education will also read papers.

DENNIS DANCERS HERE ON MAY 22

Colorful Dances of India, Java, Japan, China, and Cambodia Will Be Presented.

One of the most interesting announcements of the year is that Ruth St. Dennis and the Denishawn Dancers will appear here on the evening of Thursday, May 22, under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers and the Chapel Hill branch of the American Association of University Women, the performance to be given in the stadium.

In a program of solo and ensamble dances, embracing only a few of the numbers which have been so popular in the past that they would be sorely missed if they were omitted, the world famous dancing star will exhibit her latest creations.

A notable novelty by Miss St. Dennis will be the "Bas-relief Figure from Angkor-Vat," the inspiration for which was gained when she visited the city abandoned centuries ago by the vanished race of Kymers, but which still ranks with the famous temples of India and the Pyramids of Egypt among the architectural wonders of the Eastern world.

Another new number will be the visualization of a Tagore poem, in the course of which Miss St. Dennis will speak the poet's exquisite verse. Colorful and spectacular dances of India, Java, Japan, China and Cambodia will be offered. For once the many local admirers of this great artist will have an opportunity to see a comprehensive list of her finest creations in a single program.

At one time Memorial hall was used as a gymnasium.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR UNIVERSITY CUT 20 PERCENT

Running Expenses Must Be Reduced $175,000; Tuition May Be Raised.

SALARY SCALE PRESERVED

For its running expenses next year the University is to have $175,000 less than the $875,000 appropriated by the last legislature. This is the 20 per cent. cut decreed by the budget commission for all state institutions.

After allowing for a contemplated decrease due to probably lower enrollment, and for the increase in expenses in the form of contractual obligations, the University will have a maintenance fund for next year (July 1, 1930, to June 30, 1931) smaller by $100,000 than the maintenance fund for this year.

Just how the deficiency is to be made up is not yet decided—the details are to be worked out—but the likelihood is that there will be savings in the non-instruction budget, an increase of $7.50 in the registration fees of every student, and an increase of $50 in the annual tuition fee of every student from outside of North Carolina. Thus it is hoped to provide for $50,000. The remaining $50,000 will have to be saved by reductions in the clerical and instruction personnel. Reductions in the instruction personnel may be brought about by not replacing teachers who have resigned and not providing substitutes for some of those who are on leave.

President Chase, Charles T. Woollen, Robert B. House and members of the executive committee of the board of trustees met at the Governor's office in Raleigh Wednesday. The Governor told them that the cut in the budget was necessitated by a deficit in the state's revenues, and he discussed with them the nature of the savings that might be effected.

The effort will be made—and the University administration thinks it will be successful—not to make any reduction in the established scale of salaries.

Phi Beta Kappa To Conduct Initiation

The regular spring initiation ceremonies of the Phi Beta Kappa scholastic fraternity will be held Thursday night, May 15. The interesting program will feature an address by Professor Frank P. Graham in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock. All old and new Phi Beta Kappa members are requested to hear Professor Graham. The general public is also cordially invited.

Following this address at Gerrard hall, the Phi Beta Kappa members will conduct a private initiation for the new members of the organizatoin. Refreshments will be served at this time.

DEBATING TEAM VISITS SENATE ON RETURN TRIP

The debating team from the University of North Carolina composed of J. C. Williams, G. P. Carr, J. A. Wilkinson and J. M. Baley heard a real debate on their return trip from Boston. They stopped in Washington, D. C. long enough to hear the debate in the United States Senate prior to the vote rejecting the nomination of Judge John J. Parker for the Supreme Court Bench.

Prof. Frank Graham

Professor Frank Graham of the department of history will address the North Carolina Federation of Students this morning in Gerrard hall on "Campus and Commonwealth."

THREE RELIGIONS TO BE DISCUSSED TUESDAY NIGHT

A Jew, A Protestant, and A Catholic Will Lead Symposium In Gerrard Hall Under Auspices of Y. M. C. A.

A Jew, a Catholic and a Protestant, speaking respectively for 20 minutes each on the fundamental tenets of their faiths, will lead a symposium on religion next Tuesday evening, May 13, in Gerrard hall at 7:30 o'clock. A special committee of nine students working under the auspices of the University Y. M. C. A. is bringing the three speakers to the campus for this purpose.

Rabbi Nathan Krass of New York City will present the fundamentals of the Jewish faith; Hon. R. D. Douglas of Greensboro, father of Virginia Douglas, a junior in the University, will present the fundamentals of the Catholic faith; and Dean Elbert Russell of Duke University school of religion will present the fundamentals of the Protestant faith. These three speakers are asked to confine their presentation to a maximum of 25 minutes, so that the speaking will be over in an hour to leave time for questions and discussion following.

This symposium is intended to awaken wider interest in religion in general and to illustrate the relationships and differences between these three dominant faiths of American people. To point out the place religion holds in the experience of our people and its part in the development of western civilization; especially is it designed to enrich the spirit and attitude of tolerance between differing religious groups and to increase the frequency of cooperation between them; to bring more knowledge of our own as well as the other fellow's religion and a consequent deeper appreciation of ours and that of all others.

The public is invited to this meeting, and asked to bring any questions on religion which they would like to ask these three speakers. Bring these questions written out so as to have them read from the platform. If questions arise during the speaking which you would like to ask, write them down and have them ready to turn in to the chairman.

STRING QUARTET TO APPEAR HERE TONIGHT AT 8:30

Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra To Play At Methodist Church In Final Student Entertainment Program.

HERRMANN IS DIRECTOR

The Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra, under the direction of Walter Herrmann, will appear here tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Methodist church under the auspices of the student entertainment committee. This will be the final presentation of the year on the student entertainment program.

The program follows:

I. Franz Schubert: Octette in F major, Op. 166 (Adagio—Allegro; Andante un poco mosso; Scherzo: Allegro vivace; Finale: Andante molto—allegro).

II. Richard Wagner: A Siegfried Idyll.

Intermission.

III. Claude Debussy: Petite Suite (a.—En Bateau; b.—Cortege; c.—Minuet; d.—Ballet).

IV. Gabriel Pierne: Ballet de Cour—four antique Airs and Dances (Rigaudon; Passepied; Passa Mezzo; Pavane and Saltarello).

Mr. Herrmann, the conductor, is well known to the music public as a distinguished concert cellist, and is one of the outstanding men of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. He is a member of the faculty of the Cincinnati College of Music and is a prominent figure in the National High School Orchestra Camp at Interlocken, Mich.

The Cincinnati Chamber Orchestra is a concert offering of the first rank, giving programs of outstanding value and beauty. It has been highly praised by critics and the music-loving public wherever it has appeared.

The student entertainment committee has been very fortunate in securing this well-known orchestra for a concert which will, probably, be the outstanding feature on the spring program of entertainment.

It will be recalled that the world-famous Flonzali Quartet, which has now disbanded, was exceedingly popular in its appearance here last year.

COUNCIL ELECTS WARD PRESIDENT

As a result of the elections held Thursday night Jack Ward, Kappa Alpha, was elected president of the interfraternity council. Tommy Hunter, Sigma Chi, was elected secretary and treasurer for the coming year.

Under the leadership of Bullock the council has been actively engaged in many phases of fraternity endeavor during the past school session. The organization has done much toward regulating and maintaining fair and amiable relations between the numerous fraternities on the campus.

Graduate Club Dance

The Graduate Club of the University will entertain with a dance for the members tonight in the graduate building from 9 until 12 o'clock. The scene of of the dance has been extensively decorated for the occasion. Bill Stringfellow's orchestra will furnish the music.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I am forced to the conclusion that the dominating influence in every party is love of compromise and the cult of expediency.—Lord Beaverbrook.

Welcome

The Daily Tar Heel welcomes the visiting delegates to the first meeting of the North Carolina Student Federation. We believe, and there is just reason for our belief, that the work of this convention will become the foundation of greater work which subsequent conventions may do.

But may not our welcome remind you that you are here for a purpose. It is to found an organization to foster a spirit of cooperation and mutual understanding between the student bodies of the institutions of this state. In performing your duty you will have founded an organization which will fill the greatest need of North Carolina educational institutions of today.

It may be said that you are seeking an ideal. And it may be contended that such an organization as yours can exist only in the minds of dreamers. But have not all of man's great institutions first existed in the minds of dreamers?

It it be an ideal, let it be a dream. But let you in seeking the attainment and fulfillment of your ideals and dreams remember that in doing so you are rendering to the institutions of this state a service which will not be forgotten, but which will be perpetuated throughout the college generations of the future.

Merger of the Di and Phi

Much consideration of late has centered around the activities—rather, lack of activities—of the two forensic organizations on the campus, the Di and Phi societies. "Rejuvenation" programs and similar schemes to re-arouse interest in the work of the two assemblies have been undertaken, mostly in vain. Editorial pro and con on the subject have appeared. Yet attendance at meetings remains woefully detrimental to the prestige of the respective societies, and long since has any act of either of the two ceased to be considered an expression of campus opinion.

Undoubtedly the most satisfactory session of either organization each quarter is the customary joint session. At that meeting an important bill is usually discussed, and some attention given, even by non-members, to the decisions recorded. Does it not logically follol that a permanent combination for forces would result even more advantageously?

Organized at a time when interest in public speaking and debating was at a relatively high ebb, diverse interests of the east and west portions of the state practically necessitated the separation of the two factions, and some governmental authority was delegated to them, the two sections now have no basis upon which to justify the holding of separate meetings. The only possible objections to the amalgamation would be the necessity of disregarding tradition, the resulting destruction of several offices, and the loss of the spirit of friendly competition which exists between the two assemblies at present. Yet the advantages would far outweigh the disadvantages, and perhaps a measure of dignity might in time come again to be vested in the deliberations of worthy Senators and Representatives.—J. M. L.

"After Graduation Then What?"

In spring at the many schools of the nation young men's thoughts turn not so much to love as to a certain matter deserving of much more consideration. They are faced with the perennial question: "After Graduation then what?"

Figures have been compiled which show roughly that fully three-fourths of the members of the average college graduating class have no definite ideas as to their immediate future. To most of these young people commencement means beginning work—but what kind of work?

Seeing this existing condition, the people who pay the taxes and the calamity howlers of the land raise the annual complaint that the colleges are incapable of turning out men and women who are ready to work, that the elaborate system of college training is unsuccessful since it apparently does not fit its students for immediate usefulness.

But, suggests a writer in the "Atlanta Constitution," is this the primary function of a college course? Or is it not that the educational machinery is a sort of threshing machine to separate the wheat from the chaff, selecting only the students of certified ability to enter professional fields, casting the others aside as a waste product of the collegiate crop?

On the other hand, an instructor on the University faculty has advanced the opinion that the outsiders are too hasty and too harsh in their criticisms. As he says, a college course is nothing more than a cultural background for experience, gained as a result of a strenuous series of intellectual gymnastics, which fits a person not for immediate success but for a more rapid rise in his chosen field.

Therefore, he reasons, neither the graduate nor outside observer should feel disappointment at the moderate beginnings after graduation, but should rather look to the future to find a true perspective on the results of a college education.—E. C. D. Jr.

Memorial Day—

Today is observed in this state as "Memorial Day" and by an act of the legislature is a legal holiday. It is called Memorial Day because it is observed in memory of our Confederate dead, and on this day their graves are decorated with flowers and moistened with tears. This beautiful custom began soon after the Civil War and should never be allowed to cease.

Confederate Memodial Day is not the same in all the southern states. In Virginia it is the 30th of May, in this state and South Carolina it is the 10th of May and in other southern states it is the 26th of April, which is the anniversary of Johnston's surrender to Sherman. The 10th of May was selected as our Memorial Day because it is the anniversary of the death of Stonewall Jackson.

Mrs. John Logan, wife of the Union general, was the first to suggest Decoration Day in the North. Mrs. Logan was present at the decorating of graves on Memorial Day at Petersburg, Va., on May 26th, 1868, and suggested to her husband, General John Logan, that as Commander of the G. A. R. he issue an order for a Decoration Day so that the graves of the Union soldiers could be covered with the flag, and flowers be strewn to honor their heroic dead. So May 30th was selected in the northern states as Decoration Day, flowers being then more profusely in bloom in that section.

Observation of Memorial Day in the south, and Decoration Day in the north, is not an attempt to keep alive the misfortune of 1861-1865, but is an attempt to perpetuate the heroism and valor displayed by our ancestors. "Glory and love to the men of old, that their sons may sherish their virtues bold. Courage in heart and a sword in hand, both ready to fight and ready to die for fatherland."

The people of the south and those of the north cannot honor too highly the memory of their Confederate and Union dead, and it is eminently proper and appropriate that on every 10th of May North Carolina should decorate with flowers their untimely graves—H. L. A.

CORRECTION OF WARREN'S STATEMENT

Editor Daily Tar Heel:

In Thursday's issue of the Tar Heel, a statement was made referring to Ad Warren, in which he was quoted as saying that he trained in the Tin Can here because he could get a number of sparring partners here. This statement was a mistake. What Warren said was that he chose to work out here because he could get a number of sparring partners here, most of whom were either varsity men or varsity prospects and whom he felt would benefit by working out with, and being instructed by, a more experienced ringman, such as himself. Thus he not only received benefit himself, but he also could help out the next year's team for his old school.

DR. WRIGHT PLANS TRIP TO ENGLAND

Will Collect Material For Book On English Middle Class.

Dr. Louis B. Wright of the department of English will return to England in June to complete the collection of material for a book on the culture and literature of the English middle class in the Renaissance. He is a fellow of the Guggenheim Foundation and has received a continuation of an appointment for research in Europe which he held in 1928-29. He plans to sail early in June and return in time for the University's opening in September. Most of his time will be spent at work in the British Museum in London and in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

During 1928-29 Dr. Wright was engaged in investigating various Renaissance problems in England and Italy. The results of those investigations he expects to publish in the near future.

Dr. Wright had expected to teach in the first term of summer school in the University but on notification of his re-appointment as Guggenheim fellow he was granted a leave of absence. During the winter quarter he was on leave as visiting professor of English at Emory University.

NAZARENO WILL DEBATE PHILIPPINE QUESTION

Alfredo Nazareno announces a challenge to a debate either orally or through the pages of the Daily Tar Heel on the question of immediate and absolute independence being given to the Philippines.

Nazareno stated yesterday in making this announcement, "Although the negative side of the question won in the Phi Assembly Tuesday night, the winning argument is untrue and is misleading. Be it remembered that I left the hall after introducing the bill in order to allow the members of the Phi to express their opinions freely.

"The Philippine - American problem is of especial importance at this time. Congress is now busy with the question of Philippine independence. In Washington the Philippine Committee of Independence has great work in hand. At Paris the Philippine Independence League has been organized. All over the Philippines demonstrations are on for the independence movement."

Tar Heels Show Improvement In Batting Averages; Team In Fine Shape For Contest.

FRIDAY GAME RAINED OUT

Wet grounds caused the calling off of the second Carolina-Virginia game here yesterday, and centered all attention on the final contest between the ancient rivals in Memorial stadium at Greensboro this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Greensboro game today will be counted in the Tri-State League standings instead of the contest scheduled yesterday, the Carolina and Virginia coaches agreed.

Greensboro, May 9.—The Tar Heels and Cavaliers were ready tonight for the final and crucial engagement of the annual Carolina-Virginia baseball series, carded for Greensboro's beautiful Memorial stadium here tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Interest is running high on the eventful battle. The Carolina student body, led by its 40-piece band and cheerleaders, is coming up from the Hill by special train. The student bodies of N. C. C. W. and Greensboro College are expected out en masse. Virginia will send its own representation. All in all, indications are for a colorful and record crowd at this 37th annual renewal of the south's greatest college baseball classic.

The Tar Heels, with a record of seven victories out of the last nine games in Greensboro, will stack their mound hopes on the stout right arm of the powerful youngster Paul Edwards. The big rookie has proved the "find" of the season in Tar Heelia this year, and only Tuesday he let the hard-hitting N. C. State club down with seven hits and won the Tar Heels a 6-2 win that was a decided upset.

The whole Tar Heel club has been playing its best ball of the season this last week, and is keyed up to the last pitch for the final game of the important Virginia series. Marshall Rand is in shape again to cover second, so that the Tar Heels will be able to use their regular lineup again. Captain Jimmy Maus and Nap Lufty, both Greensboro boys, and Rat Whitehead and Obie Davis, who are leading the Tar Heel sluggers, will be staging a private contest to see who can boost his batting average the most.

Whitehead, shortstop, is leading the parade with 27 hits for 70 tries and an average of .386, closely followed by Davis with .372, Captain Maus with .359 and Lufty with .343.

The probable Tar Heel lineup is Captain Maus, c; Jackson, 1b; Rand, 2b; Whitehead, ss; Lufty, 3b; Davis, lf; Potter, cf; and House, rf.

SAPP BREAKS ARM WHILE TRAINING

Frosh Boxing Coach Suffers Injury In Practice Match; Bout With Kimrey Postponed.

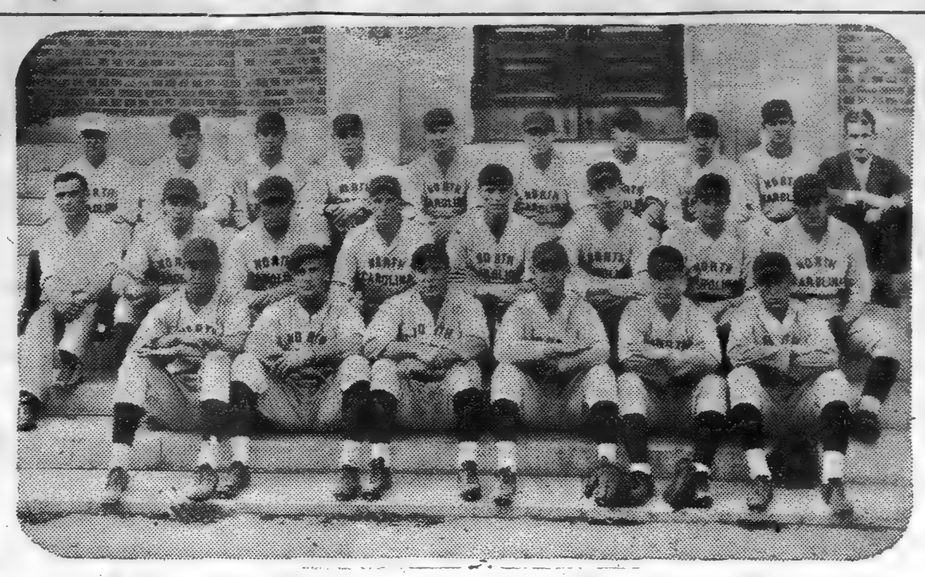
Odell Sapp, University law student and frosh boxing coach, broke his right arm yesterday afternoon while training for his professional debut with Dewey Kimrey, scheduled to be held in Charlotte May 19, and was definitely incapacitated for further professional boxing this year.

Sapp suffered his injury while boxing with Bill Miller, husky freshman heavyweight. The injury was the result of Sapp's hitting at Miller and striking his arm against the freshman's head when Miller ducked.

Sapp was scheduled to meet Kimrey under the management of Crayton Rowe, University coach, on the same card in which K. O. Roberts and Buster Newberry clash. John Warren, varsity light heavy and brother of Ad, who fought K. O. Sells in Greensboro last night, and Marty Levinson, frosh featherweight of whom Coach Rowe expects great things in the future, were scheduled to box in amateur bouts on the same card against opponents who have not yet been selected. Since Roberts has not yet come to terms with the promoters and shows no signs of doing so, Sapp's disqualification will probably result in the indefinite postponement of the fights.

EDITOR ANNOUNCES BUCCANEER PLANS

New Staff Is Partially Filled; Next Edition, May 20.



Kermit Wheary, editor of the Carolina Buccaneer for the coming year, has announced the partially completed staff and some of his plans for the Buccaneer next year.

The personnel of the complete staff will not be known until the fall when the editorial board, the art board and a third managing editor will be chosen. Bobbie Mason will be the new art editor; Pete Gilchrist, associate editor; Bob Betts, assistant editor; Walter Mason, exchange editor; J. P. Tyson and "Doc" Foster, managing editors; and Al Lansford, assistant art editor. J. C. Harris has already been appointed by the Publications Union Board as business manager.

According to Wheary the make-up of the Buccaneer will be changed, especially with reference to the editorial page and the staff page. Another change will be the addition of two feature pages in each issue. Because of the popularity of the continued story which was printed this year, it is planned to run another next year.

The last number of the Buccaneer for this year will be known as "The Farewell Number" and will appear May 20th. The cover for this number has been drawn by Al Lansford.

Baseball Team Ready For Today's Game

Pictured above is the University of North Carolina baseball squad which will unleash its big bats in the annual clissic with Virginia in Memorial stadium at Greensboro this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

This will be the 85th game between the Tar Heels and the Cavaliers, whose baseball rivalry dates back to 1891. The Greensboro game is recognized as perhaps the South's most outstanding annual college clash, and is expected to break all attendance records this year.

Second row: Marshall Rand, second baseman; James Shields and Auburn Wright, pitchers, Burgess Whitehead, shortstop; Nap Lufty, third baseman; Cecil Longest, pitcher; Obie Davis outfielder; and George Hinton, outfielder.

Third row: Coach Jim Ashmore; Henry House, outfielder; Branch Paxton, outfielder; Paul Edwards, pitcher; Piggy Potter, catcher; Bill McKiney, outfielder; Cloyd Blythe and Bill Crouch, outfielders; Phil Jackson, first baseman and Manager Gordon Gray.

Twenty-Two Tar Heel Track Stars In New Jersey Today For Dual Meet With Princeton

Carolina Will Be Defending Record Of No Defeats In Dual Meets.

CLOSE MEET ANTICIPATED

Twenty-two University trackmen left last night for their important Saturday afternoon meet with Princeton, reported to have one of the strongest teams in the east this year.

The Tar Heel stars picked to compete against the Tigers were Brodie Arnold, Fenton Adkins, George Bagby, Theron Brown, Minor Barkley, Cliff Baucom, Sandy Dameron, Charlie Farmer, George Hamer, Bill Horney, Ken Gay, Dick Garrett, Larry Johnson, Walter Lowry, Dave Neiman, Clarence Phoenix, Bill Perry, Ty Reid, Raymond Ruble, Rip Slusser, Johnnie Stafford, and Lionel Weil.

These men comprise the great bulk of the Tar Heel trackmen who ran roughshod over the field in the state meet last week-end, annexing Carolina's ninth consecutive title, and scoring 76 points to their nearest opponent's 26.

The team will be contesting at Princeton with one of the east's strongest cinder contingents.

Carolina's stars, however, will be fighting their best, for a victory over Princeton would be a big new feather for the Tar Heel cap, which includes already the feathers of victory over such outstanding teams as Penn State and Washington and Lee's southern indoor champs. A victory, moreover, would give the Tar Heels a record of nine years without a loss in a dual meet, for this is the Tar Heel's last dual meet of the season and the only contest left on their card save the annual southern conference meet in Birmingham, Ala., next week-end.

Senior Notice

Today is absolutely the last chance for seniors to have their measurements taken for senior regalia. The sweater selected seems to be very popular, since a large number of orders were taken Friday. However, there are still several members of the class who have not yet given their orders. These men are urged to drop by Stetson "D" immediately and do so.

The regalia consists of a solid white, light weight, sleeveless, slip-over sweater on which the senior colors will be worn during senior week. The cost of these is only about half of what the regalia cost in previous years.

HIBBARD AND MOSS WIN COUNTRY CLUB MATCHES

In the finals of the annual flight tournament at the Chapel Hill country club course Addison Hibbard and W. D. Moss won the foursome title Thursday from J. C. Bynum and W. E. Caldwell. This match brought to a close the two weeks of play at the local golf course in which 40 members participated.

SPRING STYLES ARE ON DISPLAY

Stetson "D" Windows Mirror Season's Vogue; Linens Alone Retain Smart Plainness.

When winter goes, spring and summer can't be far behind. Brightly colored ensembles in the attractive Stetson D windows prove the fact beyond shadow of a doubt and indicate some interesting trends that the spring and summer styles are taking.

Local style authorities indicate that the season's wearing apparel will be a sight for sore eyes and that the advocates of more color for men will be completely satisfied.

Sport wear, semi-formal wear, and swimming attire are contesting the supremacy of the rainbow for color. The nearby swimming pools give ample testimony of the application to the latter class of wear. A glance at the tennis courts and golf links and along the streets readily proves that striking ensembles in pastel shades are the vogue for sport and semi-formal wear.

The interior of the local Stetson D establishment reflects the new vogue in striking manner. Sun tan, sapphire, nile, cardinal, orchid, azure blue, and sea green are the prevailing shades in the attractive display of Jantzen swimming suits in the right front window.

Straw hats in a profusion of styles and kinds, but all with gay, bright bands, form the display in the opposite window and with the cool interior of the store give an attractive invitation to the "hot-headed," perspiring young men who battle Chapel Hill's heat on the sidewalk outside.

Whitest linens alone retain their plainness, but the plainness is one that is decidedly smart. With striped linens on the wane, the season's vogue at the University, as well as elsewhere, and mirrored in the Stetson D stock, is for plain and attractive whites, two-button with peaked lapels, and tailored to the form like a worsted instead of hanging in the old sack-coat fashion.

Dark blue suits in attractive Nurotex run the linens a close second in popularity, are just as cool, and perhaps even more serviceable.

Lightweight sport sweaters for spring carry out the same effect. A glance at the showcase shows solid colors including whites, blacks, blues, tans, greens, oranges and a great variety of shades in between. These are to be matched with white and striped flannels, better than ever this year, and with sport knickers, in colorful ensembles.

The whole display creates an impression of style, proper yet individualistic, and life and color and gaiety—a replica of the smart Fifth Avenue Shops transplanted to Chapel Hill.

RADICE LEADS IN LEAGUE BATTING

Carolina Has Three In First Six; Lufty Leads In Homers.

Statistics released this week by Tal H. Stafford, statistician of the Tri-State League, show Radice, Maryland first baseman, in the lead with a batting average of .412. Whitehead, Carolina shortstop holds second place with .387.

V. P. I., leading the league in games won and lost, fails to place a man among the first six, while only two men are hitting above the .300 mark.

The Tar Heels, whom recent defeats have dropped to sixth place in the Tri-State League, have a harder hitting crew than their averages show. Three Carolina men hold second, fourth and sixth places in league batting averages, while Nap Lufty, third-sacker, has five home runs to his credit in nine Tri-State League games to take first place in extra-base knocks. Five men are tied for second place in home run hitting with two each. These are Williams, W. & L.; Cronin, Maryland; Sloan, Virginia; Turner, N. C. State; and Jackson, Carolina.

The six leading hitters, with number of games played in the Tri-State league, follow:

Radice, Md.	8	.412
Whitehead, N. C.	9	.387
Cronin, Md.	9	.379
Maus, N. C.	9	.378
Routin, W. & L.	7	.355
Lufty, N. C.	9	.355

DR. FOERSTER IS TO DIRECT UNIQUE SCHOOL

Accepts Call To Become Director Of School of Letters At University of Iowa.

Norman Foerster, for 15 years professor of English in the University of North Carolina and a noted authority on American literature, has accepted a call to organize and head up a proposed school of letters at the University of Iowa. A previous announcement in the newspapers stated erroneously that he was to become head of the department of English at Iowa.

The school of letters, of which Professor Foerster is to be director, is to be an educational experiment of wide significance. There is said to be no such school anywhere in the country. It will embrace the departments of Greek, Latin, romance languages, German, and English, and will have the cooperation of the departments of History and Philosophy, the school of fine arts, and the graduate school.

The plan of the school of letters is in line with a general tendency in our universities to break down departmental barriers and coordinate learning. Its special object is to move gradually in the direction of the type of literary teaching and scholarship outlined in Professor Foerster's recent book, "The American Scholar" published by the University of North Carolina Press, which created quite a stir in literary circles when it appeared last fall and gained for its author much of the credit for initiating what has been called the "new Humanistic movement."

Professor Foerster soon found himself in the thick of a controversy. Unwilling to stand by and look on, he edited a series of essays entitled "Humanism and America," in which he defended the attitude the "new Humanists" through a survey of American scholarship and modern civilization.

It is understood that a group of New York journalists are to reply to Professor Foerster soon with a volume entitled "The Critique of Humanism."

Profesor Foerster is a native of Pittsburgh, Pa. He was awarded degrees by Harvard and by the University of Wisconsin and has studied abroad. He is the author of a number of books and essays and a contributor to various journals. His resignation is a serious loss to the English department of the University.

Throughout the year he has entertained various athletic teams ad organizations at one time or another, making a regular practice of giving a show to a campus group at least once a week. In his way, he says, he expresses his personal appreciation for the efforts of the various teams and organizations.

LYMAN B. STOWE REVEALS STORY OF "UNCLE TOM"

Grandson of Creator of Famous Book Speaks Before English And History Students.

Mr. Lyman Beecher Stowe, a grandson of Harriett Beecher Stowe, addressed a small group of History and English students in Bingham hall Friday morning on the interesting subject of how his grandmother came to write Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Mr. Stowe told of how when his grandmother lived in Cincinnati, she often went across the border to Kentucky to visit friends on their plantation. Here she got a first hand view of the relationship between a slave and his master.

Harriet Beecher Stowe's husband was a professor in the theological seminary in Cincinnati, and in 1850 he accepted a position at Bowdoin College in Maine. On the way north to Maine, Mrs. Stowe stopped at Boston. Here she met a "runaway" negro by the name of Josiah Henson, who had become a preacher. In the course of a conversation with this negro, Mrs. Stowe heard of the cruel death of his father at the hands of an overseer. This horrible story always stuck in her mind and formed the basis of her book.

It was a sister who first gave Harriet Beecher Stowe the idea of writing about the negro. And one day while in church in Maine Mrs. Stowe became so affected at recalling the brutal story that she had heard in Boston that she left the service and resolved to write the incident down. This formed the last part of her book and was called "The death of Uncle Tom." With this as a nucleus she completed her book.

It was first printed in serial form by "The National Era" in Washington, and it was not considered sensational. Mr. Jewitt, a Boston publisher, asked permission to publish the story in book form. He offered the author 10 per cent of the profits or a 50-50 proposition on all gains and losses. Mrs Stowe, after much deliberation, finally decided to accept the former. It was considered too great a risk to accept the 50-50 proposal because the book was written by a woman and was on a very sensitive question.

The book was at first received very well. It is estimated that three hundred thousand copies were sold in the first year. The South hailed it with acclamation during the first few weeks after its publication, but in a few months hatred against it became so bad that no reputable Southern family would have the volume in their home, let alone read it.

According to Mr. Stowe, his grandmother wrote the book with the express purpose of so

PRESS TREATISE ON MILL TOWNS STIRS REVIEWERS

Book By J. J. Rhyne Favorably Commented Upon By New York and Richmond Critics.

"Some Cotton Mill Workers and Their Villages," a recent publication of the University Press, has been widely criticized, the majority of the reviewers commenting favorably on the book. This book is the result of a study of the Southern mill situation made by Jennings J. Rhyne, former assistant in the local social science institute and now director of the social science school at the University of Oklahoma.

Rhyne is a native of Gaston county and during the 25 years of his residence there had wonderful opportunities for observing the great industrial revolution in that part of the state. His study was made before the Gastonia mill troubles and pictures normal undisturbed conditions necessary for the just appraisal of those difficulties.

The investigations, which were made while working with the University Social Science group, included personal visits to four types of mill towns—the cotton mill town, incorporated town, suburban mill village, and rural mill village—and interviews with over 500 families including 2362 persons.

One of the features of the book is the discussion of the paternalism of the mill operators, who, it is shown, control and regulate practically the entire lives of the workers. According to the writer, men, women, and children not only work in the mills, but also live in company houses, are arrested by company cops, are ministered unto by company preachers, brought into the world by company physicians, and buried in company coffins by company undertakers. The answer of the operators to these charges of paternalism, he explains, is that the policy is for the benefit of the workers and keeps them from squandering their earnings.

According to the Richmond News-Leader book reviewer, Roy Flannagan, "Dr. Rhyne s figures show that mills offer better working conditions than farms from which mill workers come and that the mills draw the cream of the farm population. Glancing at the picture of the mill towns one can only contemplate with horror the conditions which may exist throughout the poor farm white population. We can look forward to studies of this farm population some day, provided the staff and personnel of the University of North Carolina are not lynched or otherwise suppressed before these assiduous, and honest and tremendously valuable students reach this subject."

The study shows the social status of the mill worker to be much lower than that of the average industrial worker, but, in

Y. M. DEPUTATIONS TEAM TO RETURN FROM WILMINGTON

The Y. M. C. A. deputation team will return to the campus tonight after having spent the past three days in Wilmington speaking to Y groups, the high school and churches.

Thursday evening the team spoke and sang before a meeting of four religious organizations, after which the Y quartet sang over the Wilmington radio station.

Friday morning two chapel periods were entertained by the group. Visits were made to county and city homes during the afternoon.

Saturday morning the boys of the town were entertained. In the evening the young women of the town were hostesses to the team at a beach party.

This morning appearances at the churches of the town precede a general mass meeting of boys and young men at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The members of the team were: Ed Hamer, Will Yarborough, Pat Patterson, Jack Dungan and F. M. James, speakers, and Wofford Humphries, Jack Connolly, J. E. Miller and Fred Laxton, who compose the Y quartet. Grady Leonard served as leader of the group. Ed Hamer, Will Yarborough and Jack Dungan were unable to stay with the team the full time, having to return early Saturday morning to attend the meeting of the State Federation of Students in session here this weekend.

Dr. Swartz of the Geology department will speak at the meeting of the Freshman Friendship Council in the "Y" tonight at 7:15. All old members, as well as new men who desire to join at this time, are urged to be present.

CONTINENT TOUR LEAVES JUNE 7

The transcontinental study tour which leaves Chapel Hill June 7 and 8 is expected to offer a great opportunity for those who are interested in structural and economic geology which is important for those taking geology 1.

This tour will take in sections of the country where the student can see the actual work of streams, glaciers, geological action of the winds, volcanos, mountains, plateaus, and various other things of which the student knows little and that only from reading and description.

Each of the different subjects will be taken up at such time as it is best illustrated by the country through which the party is passing.

Information from the geology department states that the tour is well represented by the advanced classes but there is still accommodation for those studying geology 1. The tour should be especially interesting to those beginning the study, for it puts the actual study before them as nature has provided it.

BULL'S HEAD WILL OFFER LATEST WORLD'S CLASSICS

The Bull's Head Book Shop will increase its stock with a new edition of The World's Classics, which contains about 25 titles. This set comprises the works of such popular authors as Dickens, George Eliot, Clemaitex, with essays and poetry.

One volume of especial interest will be Norman Foerster's American critical essays, which is his most recent book.

Best sellers at present are Durant's Story of Philosophy and Well's Outline of History. An edition of Everyman's Library has been carried for some time but this is the first time that a World's Classics has been offered for 80 cents.

Playmakers To Present "Romeo And Juliet" In Outdoor Theatre

Professor Frederick Koch and Miss Lois Buell of the Boston Repertory Company Are To Have Roles; Production Will Be Presented Next Friday and Saturday.

(By J. P. Huskins)

As often as spring comes, with its profuse colors and perfumed breezes, theatre-goers in Chapel Hill turn from the sound and silver screen of the movies to the Playmakers' annual outdoor performance amid the oaks and murmuring pines of their Forest theatre.

Now that spring is here and the Forest theatre is at the height of its beauty, rehearsals are in full swing for Shakespeare's immortal play of youth, "Romeo and Juliet," which will be given Friday and Saturday nights, May 16-17, featuring Miss Lois Buell of the Boston Repertory Theatre, and Howard Bailey of the Playmakers in the title roles.

The performance next Friday and Saturday is particularly significant because it marks the first time a guest player has taken part in a Playmaker production.

Last year it was Hubert Heffner in a Playmaker revival of the lovable, idle, dram-drinking Dutch spendthrift "Rip Van Winkle" that drew one of the largest crowds in the history of the Forest theatre.

Two years ago it was "The Tempest," produced wholly by a Playmaker cast, that brought flocks of drama-lovers to the Forest theatre, and they liked the weird, fanciful music, almost ethereal, ominously flaring lights, the airy spirit and beautiful song, the shipwrecked mariners being led astray, blindly following the song, on and on toward a grotesque and yawning cavern in a sheer rock wall.

Many Notable Productions

And so on back with "A Thousand Years Ago," "The Poor Little Rich Girl," "The Rivals," "Prunella," "The Comedy of Errors," "As You Like It," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Twelfth Night" and "The Taming of the Shrew," back to the beginning of the Forest theatre in 1919.

But with their presentation this year of Shakespeare's play of youth, of conflict and intrigue in something of a natural setting, the Playmakers are planning the most ambitious program yet.

Professor Koch has always wanted to produce "Romeo and Juliet" in the Forest theatre, but has been unable to do so because, as he puts it, he "lacked a Juliet." But with the coming of Miss Buell to Chapel Hill that

DI AND PHI WILL MEET IN ANNUAL SESSION TUESDAY

Senators Will Be Hosts To Representatives For Joint Meeting.

(By Henry Wood III)

The annual joint session of the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies will convene in the Di hall Tuesday night at 7:15 o'clock. The senators are hosts for this occasion and President Beatty Rector will preside. The bill for discussion at thie meeting is "Resolved, That the defeat of Judge John J. Parker for the supreme court of the United States evolved mainly on the Democratic party."

It has always been traditional custom for the Di and Phi to meet in joint session once during every school year; however, the plan was abandoned for a number of years and was not revived until 1928. The purpose of these meetings is for the senators and representatives to exchange ideas and opinions on some topic of national or state interest and to discuss among themselves the progress of forensic endeavor in general here at the University. These sessions have always been enthusiastically attended by members of both groups, resulting in stimulated interest within the two societies.

Judge Parker's defeat has been a subject of much heated controversy and is, in the opinion of the Di and Phi, the logical topic for debate at the present time. The assemblies endorsed the candidate's nomination for the supreme court bench at their individual meetings and are now resolved to determine the actual cause of his defeat. Many other questions of equal importance have constituted the calendars of the two organizations for the past eight months.

The contemplated action of the state legislature in regard to drastic restrictions on "bumming," a subject of vital consequence to many students at the University, will be debated by the Dialectic Senate in the immediate future. This question was scheduled for discussion at the joint session Tuesday night, but was tabled due to the corresponding census of opinion. It was mutually agreed that such an act was radically unjust and therefore not a suitable topic for debate.

As the Di is host for this annual occasion, President Beatty Rector urges all senators to be present to welcome their guests and friendly rivals.

Two In Infirmary

The week-end infirmary list is the smallest for some time, only two cases being reported. W. Ed Elizabeth is ill with a nervous disorder and V. E. Russell is suffering from a case of chickenpox.

THREE SESSIONS ARE HELD

Congress Invited To Meet At Duke Next Year.

(By K. C. Ramsay)

John Lang of the University was elected president of the newly organized North Carolina Federation of Students for the 1930-31 school year at a banquet held at the Carolina Inn last night. Other officers elected were William Murray of Duke, vice-president Mary Jane Wharty of N. C. C. W., secretary; and Mayne Albright of the University, treasurer. The delegation from Duke invited the Federation to hold its congress next year at Duke University in Durham.

The new officers were installed at the closing meeting of the federation in Gerrard hall last night. Several bills concerning the policies of the organization were passed at this time also.

High Lights of the Congress

The high lights of the congress were the addresses by Dr. A. T. Allen, state superintendent of public instruction; John Lang, chairman of the constitution committee and secretary of the University Federation Club, and Professor Frank Graham of the University department of history. The discussion on student government held yesterday morning was quite profitable.

Roll of Federation

The delegates in attendance included Lillie Ballard and Virginia Brown, from the Asheville Normal; James Denny and Marium Bass, Atlantic Christian College; Clyde Blackman, Max Fishbank and John McCanless, Catawba; Dan Goody Koontz and Dan S. LaFar, Davidson; W. D. Murray, J. W. Mann, Jr., Everett Weatherspoon, R. L. Reams and Chrisman Haws, Duke;

Grace Gardner and Bessie Gray Grissom, East Carolina Teachers; Elizabeth B. Kapp and Jessie Adams, Greensboro college; Huldah Dixon and Rosalie Andrews, High Point; Rufus Rhyne and Professor L. F. Harlemann, Lenoir-Rhyne; Mary Jane Wharton, Lucille Knight, Evelyn McKneill, Helen Shuford, Helen Petrie, Elizabeth McLaughlin and Elsie E. Ban-

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A man who has no excuse for crime is indeed defenseless.—Bulwer-Lytton.

A Convention With A Purpose

With the election of officers last night the first annual congress of the North Carolina State Student Federation closed. Adoption of a constitution, addresses by A. T. Allen and Frank Graham and discussions of student problems were features of the meeting. After attending the meetings we are convinced that every delegate attending this congress had a purpose. That purpose was to face the problems of student conduct in a fearless manner and if possible to solve them sensibly.

We congratulate the delegates. The bickering so often characteristic of student gatherings was noticeable because of its absence. The provincialism and bitterness usually attendant upon student meetings could not be located. One could not call the congress a "love feast," for there was no attempt to smooth over old differences. Why was this so? We think that the great problems of student governments entirely submerged all other thoughts, and that the quality of delegates here was of such calibre as to preclude the possibility of collegiate prejudice.

In their discussions the delegates disclosed a knowledge of student problems surprising even to the most enthusiastic. And with a vigor seldom found even among those of more mature years those delegates tackled the most perplexing problems confronting deans of students today.

To those who plead for thinking students the meetings yesterday would have been a revelation. To those who deplore the lack of seriousness among youths of today the discussions would have been a pleasant surprise. But to those who believe in youth and to those who advocate student government the entire congress would have been joy, for they had here the most convincing of all arguments that youth after all thinks and that youth when necessary faces its problems in a fearless manner.

Faculty Directories For Buildings

Despite the fact that much effort is expended every fall in acquainting the new students with the campus and that signs are placed on all the buildings so that the new men may know where to look for anyone they wish to see, there is one inconvenience in practically every building, except the dormitories, which makes it difficult for even a fourth year man to find the office of any faculty member whom he wished to visit for the first time.

If one wishes to call at the office of a professor he can easily find in which building he has his office, but locating the exact room is quite a different matter. Within almost all the buildings on the campus in which there are offices, there is not even a sign of a directory, and after one has searched a building, vainly trying to find someone who knows where a certain professor has his office, the lack of a directory is more than apparent.

A hasty survey of the buildings on the campus indicated that of all the buildings in which there are offices only two, Bingham hall and Venable hall, had directories. That in Bingham is a standard commercial directory such as is used in office buildings, but that in Venable is only a typewritten sheet in the bulletin board near the entrance, but which nevertheless serves very satisfactorily.

While it is realized that at the present time it may be impossible to have commercial directories placed in all the buildings, it does not seem that it would be impossible to have a typewritten directory placed on the bulletin boards of the various buildings, and to insure their remaining there to place them under glass in a frame which could be securely fastened to the board. —B. A New Gymnasium

The University at present has three desperate needs—an auditorium, a gymnasium, and more funds to pay to faculty members to keep them from joining the increased emigration from the "Hill." It is understood that funds for the auditorium are soon to be forthcoming. The Legislature seems to have gone on record as favoring a weakening of the faculty by the slashing of the appropriations for the University for next year by 20 percent—the second year in succession that this has been done. Really, it makes one wonder whether the legislators in their all - embracing wisdom, have not decided to freeze the University of North Carolina off the map. and allow such of her students as can to attend privately supported Duke. Thus the first and third needs are temporarily settled.

There is no doubt that a new gymnasium is needed. The old Bynum Memorial gymnasium is pitifully out of date, as no person in touch with present day athletics and physical education of the day will deny. It is too small, it has practically no adequate seating capacity for over 100 persons; it is devoid of proper, up to date equipment for athletics or gymnastics; the swimming pool in the basement is so small and inadequate that it profits one to walk a mile to Sparrow's and pay a 25 cent fee to swim there if one is to have any pleasure or exercise from the swim; and the locker room and lavatory space is also inadequate. Whereas the Tin Can is adequate in size for indoor track, basketball, boxing and wrestling, it is entirely too shabby an outfit for a University of such prestige as the University of North Carolina. Its use for Intramurals—and perhaps indoor track—is strongly advocated, but to bring our guests from other universities into such a barnlike structure and ask them to compete there is comparable to inviting a friend to sleep in one's stable. Too, it is injurious to the health of the members of the athletic teams competing and practicing there. Several members of the varsity and freshman boxing squads took cold as a result of the poor heating and the construction of the building, which make it known as the one place in Chapel Hill which is colder than out of doors in winter and hotter in summer. These colds severely interfered with the boxers during the entire season, and were largely responsible for the poor condition of our team which resulted in the loss of the Conference title. No doubt the wrestling and basketball teams were handicapped by the same thing. Too, the University loses money because of the frigidity of the Tin Can's atmosphere. Although nearly 4,000 fans turned out for the boxing and basketball encounters with Duke, and perhaps 3,500 witnessed the boxing match with Penn State, very few paid admissions were taken in, the majority of the crowd being students. In a properly heated hall with adequate seating capacity, a crowd of at least 6,500 might be expected. But as one Chapel Hill wit expressed it, "why should one pay to see a "pug" knock "cold" another "pug" who is already cold and catch cold oneself in the bargain!" At least, it must be considered a disgrace and a blot upon the name of the University of North Carolina that she has not as good athletic equipment as the majority of American colleges, regardless of size, nor has she as good equipment as many preparatory schools of two and three hundred pupils of high school age; and all should agree that in this crisis of state and school no effort should be spared to wipe every reproach and blemish from our record.

The question then arises as to how the necessary funds should be raised, since the state fathers are cutting down rather than raising appropriations. The writer is closely acquainted with the situation in an Eastern preparatory school, 45 years of age and having but 1,000 alumni. This school already was far better equipped as to a gymnasium and swimming pool than is the University, but nevertheless the trustees decided that the equipment was not adequate. Committees of alumni were formed from each class and each district. On May 1st of last year a drive for three fourths of a million dollars for a new gym, athletic fields, and an endowment fund for increased faculty salaries was launched. By June 10, on which date the drive closed for the summer, over 300,000 dollars had been pledged. The drive was taken up again about September 15, and continued until October 29, when it was deemed inadvisable to solicit funds when the country was in such a state of financial depression after the market crash. The drive commenced again on March 1st, the results of the fall campaign having swelled the treasury to over half a million dollars. It is expected that the set amount will be reached in another six months.

This money is not being raised by asking certain alumni to strain themselves financially. A Special Gifts committee was formed and proceeded to solicit the more wealthy alumni for the larger contributions. Only one contribution over 25,000 dollars was received. Every man was asked to contribute at least five dollars a year for three years, and all payments were to be made on a three year basis.

If a young preparatory school such as the one mentioned can tackle such a task so successfully when their alumni are fewer even than those of our medical school, it certainly seems that, given the leadership of a capable man, our scores of thousands of alumni should be able to give time, cooperation, and money enough to raise a fund of $450,000 to save us from athletic disrepute. —H. The New Co-op Schedule

The recent announcement of the school of engineering that through the newly adopted changes in the curriculum the time spent at the University by engineering students is now equal to that spent at the best technical schools and that in addition there is included in the curriculum a period of 24 weeks of contact with industry, marks another forward step of the faculty of that branch of the University to develop at Carolina one of the strongest engineering schools in the entire South.

With the additional eight weeks, which will be obtained by adding four weeks to each of the two required summer school sessions, the engineering courses offered at the University include four full years of scholastic work and 25 weeks of co-operative work, which is more than is offered at any other technical school in the South.

In addition to increasing the total length of time spent at the University by the engineering students and thus permitting more material to be included in the curriculum, the new plan, which will go into effect in June of this year, will alter the co-operative system of the junior year, as the new arrangements of periods will be based on the regular quarters of University work. This change should prove to be a great improvement over the old system by which the juniors did their scholastic and co-operative work on a system involving periods of seven weeks.

The school of engineering is to be congratulated on the adoption of this new plan, which marks another step in the continual advance in the development of this technical branch of the University into one of the best engineering schools in the country. —B. W.

Readers' Opinions

A WORD ON MOTHER'S DAY

This is the time of year when everything is beautiful. Nature seems to lure us to her. In the spring of the year the grass takes on a pretty green and the skies have that soft blue which they have only in the spring of the year. The air is filled with the fragrant scent of new-born buds and flowers. Our thoughts turn to the beautiful.

And at this time of the year we think of Mother and the love Mother has for us. Its beautiful tenderness is so in harmony with the season.

It was Mother who gave us life. Mother who nursed us through the tender years, who listened to our baby prattle. Many is the time Mother has patiently listened to our boyish boasting, and though perhaps she was hiding a smile, yet she was always in sympathy with our endeavors. Even after we were older it was always Mother who helped us through our countless difficulties. Ever patient with us, never tiring of doing for her boy. Few of us deserve it, yet Mother is always ready to do more, and more, and never can she do too much for her boy. Always has Mother prayed and denied herself that her boy might have the best. Her one real desire in life seems to be to see her boy the boy she has prayed he will be.

Do we appreciate all of this? Of course we do, but how nice it is to show by some little thoughtful act that we do appreciate it. You can see her eyes brighten and her face light up when her boy shows her that he is thinking of Mother. It is to her as a wonderful dream come true. It is such a little thing for us to do, yet it means so much to her.

So on this Mother's Day let us pause for a moment to think of her and in one way or another let her know that we are thinking of her. Let us on this Mother's Day pause for a moment and thank God for His gift of Mother.

At The Carolina This Week

By H. J. G.

Manager E. Carrington Smith of the Carolina theatre has just released an announcement of the run of pictures for the week of May 12.

On Monday, the feature will be "In Gay Madrid;" in which Ramon Novarro plays the part of a student in the Spanish city. Novarro's voice is renowned, and is used to full advantage in this romantic picture. Five world-famous concert and popular composers combined in creating striking musical numbers especially for Novarro's splendid singing voice. In several of the numbers he is aided in heroic renditions by a massed chorus of 50 trained voices as well as lilting orchestral support, a musical blending of exuberant proportions. The under love scenes are sung Novarro with only guitar companiment as a tinkling background.

Tuesday's picture is "One R mantic Night," an adaptation the Ferenc Molnar play, "T Swan," in which Lillian G plays the leading part. In making of this picture it was brought out that the continent waltz, most graceful of all ba room dances, is the only one. seems, that Hollywood's "ex tras" have difficulty in doing correctly. The tendency of "atmos phere" players was to sway the bodies and turn, whereas th continental waltz is strictly for mal, with no side or backward movements. Finally, a Russia who was once a high officer i the Imperial Guard, volunteered to serve as teacher. Throughou the picture, great care was taken to keep the spirit of the graceful Molnar comedy-drama.

For Wednesday, one of the best pictures of the year, "Hallelujah," is the feature. All of the players in this superb drama are negroes. Director King Vidor recognized the splendid opportunity for using chorus and single voices and as a result, engaged well-known singers and stage people who had had experience before they were engaged for the picture. Nina Mae McKinney, the 17-year-old feminine lead of "Hallelujah," attracted considerable attention by her clever singing and dancing in "Blackbirds," the colored musical success before Vidor signed her. As technical supervisor of the music of the picture which includes such famous spirituals as "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" and "Goin Down to the Water," Vidor engaged Eva Jessye, director of the Jubilee Dixie Singers.

Thursday's picture is "The Case of Sergeant Grischa," the powerful war drama of the year. In the opinion of Major Hans Joby, former officer of the German Army and an authority on European military practices who served as technical advisor, "Pictures like 'The Case of Sergeant Grischa' do more to promote peace among nations that

WARREN VICTOR IN SELLS FIGHT

K. O.'s K. O. Sells on Technical Knockout In Ninth Of Ten Rounds.

Ad Warren, one time star of the University's boxing team, won another bout in his "come back" campaign in Greensboro Friday night when he defeated K. O. Sells, tough New York scrapper, on a technical knockout in round 9 of their scheduled 10-round bout. Warren, perfectly trained and carrying not an ounce of superfluous flesh, weighed in at 183 pounds to his opponent's 184.

Warren carried the fight to his adversary throughout the bout, clouting Sells with everything but the waterbucket. However, Sells proved to be as game as they come, and refused to give up. Ad succeeded in flooring the New York boy only once during the course of the bout. At the end of the second round he went down in a neutral corner before one of Warren's furious rushes, but quickly got up and continued. Throughout the rest of the fight he kept his feet, though during most of the bout he served merely as a punching bag for Ad, who grew arm weary from punching the bleeding face and reddened body of the defeated battler so constantly. The end came when one of Sells' seconds threw in the towel in the 9th round.

Warren looked better than he has for some time, and if he continues to tear up his opponents in such impressive style, he should soon be "in the money" again and his "come back ' campaign will be a success.

Sells has had a measure of success in his previous fights. He has stayed the limit with Phil Mercurio and Jack DeMave, two of the outstanding battlers around New York, and acted as Max Schmeling's chief sparring partner on the German's barnstorming exhibition tour last year.

Van Liew To Succeed Tebell At N. C. State

Dr. Ray Sermon, director of athletics at North Carolina State, officially announced that John Van Liew of Des Moines, Ia., will succeed Gus Tebell as head football coach.

"Monk" Younger, Davidson College mentor, was the first choice of the committee, was immediately eliminated when his salary price was too high for the Tech officials.

John Van Liew, the new coach, willl report late in the summer. He is a native of Des Moines, Ia., and a product of Grinnell College, in the same state. John K. Griffith, commissioner of athletics for the western conference, says for him:

"He is one of the best football coaches among my acquaintances. He is thorough student of football and basketball and has attended most of the well known coaching schools. He is favorably known by most of the athletic men of prominence throughout the country. He has a lot of original ideas, and he is predominantly a coach."

Lyman B. Stone Reveals Story Of "Uncle Tom"

dramatizing the institution of slavery to the slaveholders that they would become abolitionists. It was not her wish to arouse any hatred between the north and the south because she had many friends among slaveowners. She believed in abolition, but she was not an abolitionist nor had ever belonged to that party.

The facts presented in Uncle Tom's Cabin have often been challenged. Besides what Mrs. Stowe, herself, gained first hand, she asked her brother, who was working in New Orleans, to visit plantations and tell her of his experiences. Thus many of the incidents in the book are founded on fact. In answer to criticism Mrs. Stowe also wrote The Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin in which for every imaginary case of brutality in her story she cited a real occurance backed by documents.

At least ten million copies of the book have been sold, three million of which were sold in this country. The book has been translated into more than 20 languages.

Strange as it may be no international copyright has ever been secured for Uncle Tom's Cabin, but Mr. Stowe stated that there is a bill pending in Congress now to secure such a right. Neither did the author secure any dramatic rights for the story, as it never entered her head that it should be dramatized. It has been said that the play Uncle Tom's Cabin has been produced more often than any other.

It is not a well known fact that Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote 24 other books besides the one that made her name famous. Two of these, Old Townfolks and The Minister's Wooing are considered by some superior to Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Mr. Lyman Stowe is on a tour of universities to gather material for a series of articles he is writing for the World's Work. He is an editor and author, and was connected with the publishing house of Doubleday, Doran and Co., for over ten years. Among the books he has written is one on the life of his grandmother. His home is in Forest Hills, Long Island. This is his first visit to Chapel Hill.

Sixteenth Century Football Was Much Rougher Sport Than Game Is Today

PURITAN OF 1583 DESCRIBES DANGERS

(By Beaumert Whitton)

If Philip Stubbes, Puritan pamphleteer of the sixteenth century, had been in Duke stadium last December 7 and seen Carolina hand Duke a licking in what is assumed to be the roughest of the intercollegiate sports, he probably would have decried the lack of roughness on the part of the players and would have left the game with the complaint that it had become entirely too ladylike for him.

Writing of the game as it was played in the latter part of the sixteenth century, Stubbes told of the dangers the players underwent in the following terms: "Sometimes their necks are broken, sometimes their backs, sometimes their legs, sometimes their arms, sometimes one part thrust out of joint, sometimes another, sometimes their noses gush out with blood."

Continuing, in the paper which he protested against the game as "a friendly kind of fight," he said, "sometimes their eyes start out, and sometimes hurt in one place and sometimes in another. But whosoever scrapeth away the best goeth not scot-free, but is either sore wounded, and bruised, so as he dieth of it, or else scrapeth very hardly."

These comments on the most popular collegiate sport are contained in the principal work of Stubbes, The Anatomie of Abuses, which has the somewhat long sub-title of "A Discoverie, or Brief Summarie, of Such Notable Vices and Imperfections as Now Reigne in Many Countreyes of the World; but (especiallye) in a famous Ilande called Ailgna i. e. Anglia . . . together with . . . examples of God's Judgements . . . made Dialoguewise . . . (1583)."

It is no wonder that all the dire results mentioned above came about, states the writer, for "they have sleights to meet one betwixt two, to dash him against the heart with the elbows, to hit him under the short ribs with their gripped fists, and with their knees to catch him upon the hip, and to pick him on the neck, with an hundred such murdering devices."

Evidently such actions, which were not ruled out as they are now in the well-regulated game we know, were the cause of many small and perhaps some large personal differences, for in the same document the Puritan says, "And hereof hatred, displeasure, enmity, and what not else; and sometimes fighting, brawling, contention, quarrel picking, murder, homicide and great effusion of blood, as experience daily teacheth."

From this account of the game, one would presume that in the days of "good Queen Bess" football was a matter of some seriousness. Murder, homicide, and "great effusion of blood" seem somewhat foreign to the modern football game, but 'way back when football was in its infancy, if we are to believe Stubbes, such things were daily occurrences. What wonder then if Mr. Stubbes, Puritan, would consider our game exceedingly ladylike and not worth the time taken to see it.

One point must not be overlooked in considering Stubbes' account: he was a Puritan, who set out (through means of broadside and pamphlet) to lash his countrymen for their vices: Perhaps, after all, the game wasn't quite so bad as we would imagine from this account, but in any case, it must be admitted that the modern game is far from the "bloody and murderous practice" which Stubbes describes in his pamphlet.

Beginning his career with studies at both Oxford and Cambride, Stubbes took to the road instead of finishing his work and receiving a degree. His object in thus quiting his scholastic activities and joining those who travel was in his own words "to see fashions, to acquaint myself with natures, qualities, properties, and conditions of all men, to break myself to the world, to learn nature, good demeanor, and civil behavior; to see the goodly situation of cities, towns, and countries, with their prospects and commodities; and finally to learn the state of all things in general, all of which I would never have received in one place."

Whether it was bad food or harsh treatment during his seven years of travel or whether it was merely the expression of an atribilious nature, he emerged a snarling Puritan who took to abusing his fellow countrymen for their vices. The paper from which the account of football comes is a part of his principal work, The Anatomie of Abuses, in which he described the manners and customs of his time, chiefly to call attention to the vices of the age, of which he considered football one.

CHILDREN RECITE FOR MUSIC WEEK

In celebration of National Music Week, the children who study music under Mrs. J. M. Williams, gave a recital Wednesday afternoon in the Baptist Church.

Twenty-three of Mrs. William's pupils took part. Margaret Coward won the prize offered to the child who gave the best expression of the value of music. She gave "Music Exalts Life."

Press Issues Butler's Book On Shakespeare

"Materials for the Life of Shakespeare" by Dr. Pierce Butler of Tulane University is the most recent publication of the University Press, having been released Monday, May 5. The author is dean of the Sophie Newcomb Memorial College at Tulane.

According to the announcement bulletin, "the book is neither a biography nor a handbook, but a combination of the two, presented differently from the usual reference book. It assembles the most important of the early sketches, anecdotes, biographies, criticisms, and documents concerned with Shakespeare and his times. The materials are arranged chronologically as far as possible, and with an eye towards their bearing on the progression of Shakespeare's career."

Memorial hall which was torn down this winter, was dedicated in 1885.

SPORTS CHATTER

By Hugh Wilson

Talk about the irony of fate! Odell Sapp certainly learned something about that Friday. After working out all week with Ad Warren, Carolina alumnus and pro boxer par excellence, without so much as receiving a scratch, he entered the ring against a freshman and broke his arm!

Ad Warren certainly "put the leather" on K. O. Sells Friday night. In fact, the spectators began to wonder if Ad could keep slugging the New York fighter, being so arm weary from the continuous rain of blows which he had poured on his opponent from the opening bell. Sells certainly had a great pair of legs and a world of nerve to stay in there as long as he did. The "know-it-alls" among the fans will probably claim that Sells was merely a "set up," brought in to give Ad's "come back" a boost. All that needs to be said about that is that Sells has been considered fit to fight Mercurio and DeMave, men who have better record around New York than Ad has, and to act as the chief sparring partner of the outstanding contender for the world's heavyweight championship—Max Schmeling, the "German Dempsey." Sells would have given Ad plenty of trouble if Ad had not dazed him so early in the fight.

The University seems well on its way toward developing the habit of having a freshman sprinter each year who has acquired, to a greater or lesser degree, the custom of winning both the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Last year it was Charley Farmer, and this year Bob Drane, while not so sensational as "Ten Point," has won practically every 100 and 220 in which he has competed. He had an off day against the Duke freshmen, taking second to Fulmer of Duke in both events. However, he came back to defeat Fulmer in the leg of the medley relay which they ran against each other in the state championships, and won both dashes in the final meet of the season with the N. C. State Wolflets Wednesday. Drane has one advantage over Farmer as a trackman—he is also the premier Tar Baby broad jumper.

Jensen and Jones, both of whom run the mile and half mile, are two especially fine prospects for next year's varsity. Jensen has taken it easy while turning in some fast times, and he has been closely followed across the line by Jones in almost every race.

Speaking of freshman track, that meet with State was an odd one. To see the light blue of Carolina flash across the finish first, second, and third in the 220 and 440 must have given any except State fans a thrill, to say nothing of the half mile, in which three Carolina runners joined hands to score a triple tie; the finish of the mile and two mile also showed Carolina men copping all the places, two Tar Babies joining hands to tie in both races. Carolina also took first and second in the 120 and 220 yard hurdles and first in the pole vault and high jump.

The frosh baseball men certainly must have worn their "hitting clothes" when they left on their Virginia trip. Twenty-seven runs against Fork Union, 13 against Woodberry! Let's hope they didn't leave them at the tailors to be pressed during the remainder of the trip! The pitching of McNeill and Griffith was very creditable; McNeill giving up but two singles during the six innings which he pitched in the Fork Union massacre, while Griffith fanned 11 batsmen during a six inning stretch in the contest with Woodberry Forest.

Carolina will not lack battery men in the future if this year's freshman outlay is repeated in years to come. McNeill, Griffith, Scarboro, Chandler, and Adkins form a hurling squad from which Coach Ashemore would be glad to draw for his varsity now. Griffith, who is said to have already received offers from the New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers, and McNeill are perhaps the "class" of the squad, but the others are almost as capable. Behind the bat there are Peacock and Pattisall, two perfect receivers who can throw and hit with the best. Carolina will not lack pitchers and catchers for some time.

Duke again has shown the error of taking on too ambitious a schedule. Everyone is familiar with the disastrous results of its heavy football schedule last fall, and recently its northern baseball trip brought about almost the same result. It is true that it won one more game than it lost on the trip, but its baseball team is hardly to be compared in ability with its football team. Each defeat suffered by as snappy a college ball club as it brought to Chapel Hill recently should be considered an athletic disaster. As was to be expected, Duke commenced by trouncing the able Pennsylvania teams rather badly, by scores of 9-5 and 14-2, respectively, then, slowing down, was barely able to nose cut a less skillful Princeton team by a score of 1-0. Then came the certain defeat. Despite a day's rest, gained when its game with Fordham was rained out, it broke badly, making no less than nine errors and dropping its game to N. Y. U. To end the trip, it lost a close game to Navy when Fitzgerald's single broke up the game in the ninth. Again errors, the result of too much strain, were the cause of the loss. In this game, as well as in all the games of the trip, the Blue Devil batsmen upheld their share, outhitting the opposition in every game played.

University Trustee Dies Of Weak Heart

Addison G. Mangum, member of the board of trustees of the University and a prominent Gastonia lawyer, died at his home in Gastonia on April 30. He had from a heart attack. He had been suffering from a weak heart for several years, and failed to respond to medical attention.

Mr. Mangum has been an enthusiastic supporter of the University, attending many school activities. He was a member of the class of 1892, and belonged to the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He is also the cousin of Dr. C. S. Mangum of the medical school.

The deceased had many friends both in Gastonia and the local community who grieve at the news of his death.

Morning Session

Francis F. Bradshaw, University dean of students, opened the morning session of the North Carolina Federation of Students organized here yesterday morning by extending to the assembly the official welcome of the University faculty. In addition to welcoming the group to the University, Dean Bradshaw, speaking briefly on student government, stated, "Since American government is based on Democratic principles it is only right that its future leaders should carry on its student affairs Democratically."

R. C. Greene, president of the student body, welcomed the congress on behalf of the Carolina students, and spoke briefly of the organization of the federation.

John Lang, acting-secrtary of the federation, ably emphasized the importance of students exerting their influence in affairs of the nation, and stated that such organizations as the one being formed were a good medium for doing such things. He also declared that the congress would be a good means of settling many problems in common among the colleges of North Carolina.

Professor Frank Graham of the history department praised the step being made toward better relations between the colleges and declared that proper leadership by the federation would be invaluable to collegiate affairs in the state.

The closing event of the morning session was a round-table discussion on student government, and a lively confab resulted, being centered around the honor system and the organization of student government. In general it was believed that the honor system is a success in the North Carolina colleges.

Allen Addresses Congress

"I wish to congratulate this group on the great work it is starting," stated Dr. A. T. Allen, state superintendent of public instruction, at the afternoon session of the N. C. Student Federation in Gerrard hall yesterday. "I believe that this federation will benefit the colleges of North Carolina greatly and eventually will be of service to the whole state."

Dr. Allen stated that self-government is the largest problem before the student groups and nation, and that the federation should be of much assistance in solving the problems of self-government. Willingness to recognize the rights of the individual, the ability to be individual, cooperation and participation in government are the four great principles of self-government, stated Dr. Allen.

The state's chief educational leader went on to show how education improves these qualities and develops individuality rather than destroys it.

Constitution Ratified

The constitution committee presented the proposed constitution for adoption at the afternoon session, and after a few minor changes were made it was ratified by a unanimous vote. The purposes of the federation are well laid down in the preamble to the document which follows.

"We, the students of North Carolina, in order to improve and strengthen student government throughout the state, to achieve a spirit of friendship, cooperation and reciprocity among the various student bodies of the state, to develop the proper student consideration of important problems and solutions in all phases of student and public life, to promote the general welfare of student interests everywhere, and to foster a better acquaintanceship, understanding and relationship between the students of this state and of all other states and nations throughout the world, do establish a state federation of students in North Carolina and ordain the following articles as the Constitution of this federation."

Playmakers To Present "Romeo And Juliet"

difficulty has been solved, for this young actress from the Boston Repertory Theatre is well qualified both by experience and personality to play "Juliet."

For the past two years she has been under the direction of Henry Jewett, manager of the Repertory Theatre, who said of her in a recent letter to Elmer Hall, technical director of the Playmakers: "Anything you feel like putting in your program about the Repertory Theatre of Boston and Lois getting her first training with us will be quite all right as far as I'm concerned. I do hope she makes a hit as 'Juliet.' She certainly has youth and charm, lots of grit, and is a hard worker. She should get across."

Miss Buell went to the Repertory Theatre two years ago, not as an actress, but to study scenic designing and costuming in the theatre workship. Mr. Jewett became interested—all the more, we are led to believe, because she did not pose as an actress—and began to offer her parts in his productions.

She played in "The Tempest," "The Merchant of Venice," "Winter's Tale," "S. S. Incorporated," "Sweet Nell of Old Drury" and "Alice in Wonderland," and did these parts so well that she was given leads in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "The Princess," and "Water Babies."

When the Repertory Theatre closed last winter, Miss Buell thought of going to New York, but was advised not to do so. Then, the latter part of March, she decided to come south to have a look in on the Playmakers and for what additional experience she could pick up. Professor Koch saw his opportunity to stage "Romeo and Juliet." When he asked Miss Buell if she would play "Juliet," he found that she had always wanted to do the part.

Koch's Second Appearance

The appearance this year will be of interest for another reason—it will be the second time Professor Koch has appeared in a production in this state. He made his debut to North Carolina audineces as "Petruchio" in 1923 when the Playmakers gave "The Taming of the Shrew" in commemoration of the tercentenary of the publication of Shakespeare's first folio. This year Professor Koch will play the role of the gallant "Mercutio," knight of the star-tipped sallies.

The Forest theatre is a wonderful setting for such a production.

At the height of its beauty just now, it's one of the most attractive spots around Chapel Hill. You can almost feel the spell of "the forest primeval, the oaks and the murmuring pines." It is situated just east of the University campus and arboretum in the heart of the native forest, little changed by its coming. Giant oaks look down from above, their huge branches meeting in a spacious vault.

A little stream winds its way to the rear of the stage, and the water as it murmurs over the rocks adds not a little to the spell of the place. A variety of forest trees forms the background of the stage—the cedar, the sweet-gum, the flowering dogwood and others, with interlacing honeysuckle vines lending fragrance to the air to make a perfect setting for a garden scene or a balcony scene as the case may be.

The hillside slopes gradually from the stage enclosure and gives ample space for a large audience.

Scenery Designed by Hall

The scenery for the performance will be the most elaborate in the history of the Playmakers. It is based on the multiple stage idea—with different stages for different scenes. There will be a stage for the street scenes, one for the scene of the ball, and one large stage in the center for the balcony and tomb scenes, with the action shifting from one stage to another.

Such a setting is more fully achieved in an open-air theatre, and especially so in the Forest Theatre. The present stage was designed by Professor Koch and planted under the supervision of Dr. Coker in cedars, arbor vitea, dogwood, Judas tree and honeysuckle to give a beautiful background.

Elmer Hall, who is directing the performance of "Romeo and Juliet," designed all the scenery for the production. Mr. Hall has promised many surprises to admirers of stage scenery. The setting for the street scene, for example, pictures a street in Verona, Italy, with walls 24 feet in height. The balcony scene is in its natural setting. Mr. Hall has extensive experience at scenic designing. He was stage manager last year for the Fritz Lieber Shakespearean Repertory Company, which was continuously staging "Romeo and Juliet" and other Shakespearean productions.

all the essays, lectures and pacifist propaganda extant."

"Alias French Gertie," starring Bebe Daniels, is the feature for Friday. Adapted from "The Chatterbox," a successful play by Bayard Veiler, the role imposes a test on Miss Daniels' dialogue abilities. One third of the star's lines are delivered in French, the other in the argot of the underworld. Ben Lyon, as the smooth, handsome, light-fingered Jimmy Hartigan, is well cast, and is especially convincing in the romantic scenes opposite his fiancee.

The picture for Saturday is one of the most popular of that popular series of Fu Manchu stories. Warner Oland plays the lead in "The Return of Dr. Fu Manchu." The popularity of these mystery stories of the East is unsurpassed in the realm of crook drama. "The Return of Dr. Fu Manchu" completes a week's run of unusual pictures at the Carolina Theatre.

concluding, Dr. Rhyne states that due to the ambitions of some of the workers, and the pressure of public opinion, the enforcement of school attendance laws, the child labor laws and in some instances, industrial welfare work, they may improve their present status to the extent that they will have a social rating equivalent to other industrial people.

That Rhyne's whole treatment of the investigation is purely impartial and that he seeks at all times to give a true account of the conditions of the cotton mills in North Carolina is the general opinion of the reviewers.

Commenting on the book, the New York Times reviewer says that "the book makes a beginning, as a concrete study, of a much needed wide survey of the cotton mill situation in the South," while the Richmond paper's reviewer advises Northern industrialists expecting to locate in the South to read this book and all of the North Carolina sociological books. "The truth will never hurt a section about which more lies have been told than any other land in the world, not excepting the union of Socialist republics" is his concluding remark.

FRANK W. SKINNER, FAMOUS ENGINEER, WILL SPEAK HERE

Will Tell Engineers of New Hudson River Bridge Project Costing 75,000,0000

Frank W. Skinner, consulting engineer who is now retained on the new Hudson River Bridge at New York City, a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and at one time editor of Engineering Record and Contracting, will deliver a lecture on the Hudson River Bridge, the longest suspension bridge in the world, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in Phillips hall.

Mr. Skinner, who is stopping at Chapel Hill while on a lecture trip through this section, will particularly speak of the bridge which is now being erected between Manhattan and Fort Lee, N. J., and will discuss suspension bridges in general, comparing different bridges of this and other types.

As he has been retained as consulting engineer on this structure, Mr. Skinner has been able to obtain much interesting data and many photographs. This material will be used in his talk Wednesday, which will also be delivered in Blacksburg, Raleigh, Durham and Lewisburg, Penn.

The clear span of this new bridge, which connects Washington Heights, New York, and the Jersey shore, is 3,500 feet, much greater than that of any bridge of similar type. The great size of the structure can be realized when one considers that the dead load of the bridge will be 84,000 tons, the supporting towers rise over 600 feet above the water level, and the length of wire used in the four cables is 551,200,000 feet.

In his talk Mr. Skinner will not only describe the bridge at New York but will also compare it with several other suspension bridges and will discuss the erection of various types of bridges such as arches, cantilever and simple trusses.

Dean Braun, head of the school of engineering which is sponsoring the lecture by Mr. Skinner, states that the public is cardially invited to attend the talk Wednesday afternoon, and that all engineering students are requested to be present.

Y. M. DEPUTATIONS MEN ALL RETURN

The last members of the Y. M. C. A. deputation team returned from a very successful trip to Wilmington Sunday night, several members of the team being forced to return earlier in the week to attend to their work here.

Talks and musical performances were given at the morning services of the First Baptist, the First Presbyterian and the Grace Methodist churches. Services were later held at the prison camp. The trip was concluded by a city-wide boys' meeting held at the Baptist church at 2:30 Sunday evening with Grady Leonard and Pat Patterson making the final talks.

It is estimated that the group performed and spoke before approximately 2200 people. Radio performances were given on Friday night and Saturday afternoon.

Three Lombardo Brothers

Pictured above from left to right are the three Lombardo brothers, Carmen, Guy, and Lebert, who furnished three-tenths of the modern jazz in Guy's popular Royal Canadian Orchestra. These well-known music makers, who are fast gaining international fame, are definitely engaged to furnish the dancing tunes this year at the final dances of the University, June 10 through the 12.

In addition to numerous engagements at popular night clubs and broadcasting programs, the Royal Canadians have recorded many of the latest song hits. Descended from an ancient family of musicians, the Lombardo brothers have formed an orchestra that offers, perhaps, the most fascinating jazz music in the country. They are now classed with Whiteman, Coon-Sanders, Dornberger, Olsen, and others who occupy the pinnacle of public popularity.

Dormitory Elections

The annual campus wide dormitory elections will be held tonight. A president and two vice-presidents will be elected in each dormitory. In case of failure of the president to return to school next year, one of the vice-presidents will advance to his position.

The elections will be called at 10:00 p. m. and will be held in the first floor halls in the old quadrangle, in the social rooms in the new quadrangle, and in the middle sections of the first floors of the other dormitories, or such other places as the dormitory presidents may designate. All dormitory members are urged to cooperate with the dormitory presidents by voting in this election.

Dimnick Conducts Interesting Psychology Experiment; Unusual Reactions Of Subjects Noted.

Since February 1, Mr. G. M. Dimnick of the psychology department has been experimenting with members of the student body, giving them tests to determine the effect of abnormal conditions on the habit of integration. From a number of students in the psychology department who volunteered to take the tests 20 were selected by Mr. Dimmick—5 women and 15 men.

The tests given were divided into three groups consisting of various types of work in integration. In was found that no further improvement was made in the accuracy or speed of those practicing the integration after 15 days.

After practice was completed, the tests were given under normal conditions and then under abnormal conditions. The first abnormal condition under which the tests were given was that of a 24 hour hunger distraction. Then the tests were given during a 24 hour period of sleeplessness. Lastly, the students underwent the tests accompanied by an auditory distraction.

According to the reports of all the subjects the hunger distraction was the most disagree-

Professor W. F. Prouty of the geology department, was elected president of the North Carolina Academy of Science at the first day's session of the organization in Durham Friday afternoon. Mr. Prouty succeeds Professor J. B. Derieux of State College.

The other University man to be elected to an office of the academy was H. R. Totten of the botany department who will serve as secretary-treasurer. The remaining officers of the academy elected Friday are: P. M. Ginnings of the chemistry department of Greensboro college, vice-president, and W. L. Porter of the geology department of Davidson, member of the executive committee.

The Universiy twas well represented in the departmental meetings of the academy which were held Saturday. Papers were presented by members of the mathematics, physics, chemistry, geology, botany, medicine, and education departments.

At the meeting of the mathematics section five of the six papers presented were by members of the University department of mathematics. Those presenting papers were J. W. Lasley, E. L. Mackie, L. E. Bush, A. S. Winsor and E. T. Browne.

The physics department was uniquely represented in its section in that every man who has been attached to the department for more than a year presented a paper. Those representing this department were Otto Stuhlman, Jr., M. D| Whitaker, O. P. Hart, M. G. Braun and P. E. Shearin.

The departments of geology and botany were represented by several papers read by Collier Cobb, head of the geology department; W. C. Coker, head of the botany department; Dr. Prouty, who was elected president of the academy for next year; and J. N. Couch.

J. B. Bullitt of the school of medicine and Carleton S. Preston of the school of education represented the University in their respective sections of the academy.

Duke Musicians Are Engaged For Summer

Jack Tannenbaum, Duke symphony violinist from Patterson, N. J., has joined the ranks of the summer collegiate musicians. While Jelly Leftwich and his University Club Orchestra are playing at Wrightsville Beach and other college jazz orchestras are playing their summer programs, Tannenbaum will be up in the Catskill Mountains with his nine-piece orchestra.

In addition to being collegiate, Jack's orchestra is also intercollegiate. It contains a trio of sax players from the University of Maryland, a piano player from Columbia, a drummer from St. Clair College, the violinist from Duke and others who have not yet been selected.

Tannenbaum is an upperclassman although this is his first year at Duke. This year he has distinguished himself as a violinist through his playing in the Duke University symphony and at various social occasions on the campus and in Durham.

German Club Notice

Freshmen and upperclassmen wishing to join the German Club in order to be eligible to attend the finals are requested to turn in their names with a check for ten dollars to Will Yarborough, treasurer, at the S.A.E. house sometime this week. Applications will be considered in the order of submission and those not accepted will be returned. All applications must be accompanied by the check.

WOOLCOTT TALKS ON MORRIS PLAN

Alumnus Addresses National Commerce Fraternity At Annual Banquet.

Phillip Woolcott, senior vice-president of the Morris Plan Bank of Virginia, spoke on "Industrial Banking As a Career," at a banquet held by the Delta Sigma Pi commerce fraternity, at the Methodist church last Thursday night. The occasion of the banquet was the fifth anniversary of the installation of the local chapter.

Mr. Woolcott approached his subject from the viewpoint of whether or not industrial banking makes a good career. He stated that he would not try to discourage his hearers, as he was discouraged when beginning his career, by a statement that banking was complete. He traced the development of the Morris Plan and explained the need it fills in the modern economic system, and showed how it has been gradually accepted by financiers. His audience was warned, however, that if they engaged in industrial banking as a career they must face the prospect of entering a business still looked upon by many as inferior.

The Morris Plan banks were founded in 1910 by Arthur J. Morris. He had found the necessity for a banking system which would lend to the small borrower, and had studied the banks of Italy and similar institutions in other European countries. The result of his study was the establishment in this country of numerous industrial banks designed to lend to people of good character and earning capacity at reasonable rates. The plan was found profitable, and in ten years over one hundred banks were established throughout the United States. The idea of these banks was to serve the man who could not get credit elsewhere. Up until five years ago these remedial banks were looked upon as inferior by commercial banks. Today, the speaker stated, there is a tremendous change from that attitude. Personal loan departments have been added, so that now, instead of having industrial banks entirely set apart from commercial banks, there are industrial banks doing much the same type of business as is done by commercial banks.

"Anyone entering the industrial banking field," Mr. Woolcott stated, "must have a con-

SYMPOSIUM WILL BEGIN IN GERRARD AT SEVEN-THIRTY

Rabbi Krass, R. D. Douglas, and Dean Elbert Russell To Outline Religions.

Three men—a Jew, a Protestant and a Catholic—will lead a symposium on religion tonight in Gerrard hall at 7:30 o'clock. Rabbi Nathan Krass of New York City will speak on the Jewish faith; Hon. R. D. Douglas of Greensboro will speak on the Catholic faith; and Dean Elbert Russell of Duke University will speak on the Protestant faith.

The symposium, which will be presided over by R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, is being fostered by a committee of nine students under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A.

Rabbi Nathan Krass of New York City, who is to present the fundamentals of the Jewish faith, secured his B. L. from the University of Cincinnati and his B. H. L. from the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, in 1899. Since that time he has done postgraduate work at Harvard and the University of Chicago.

In 1903 he was made a rabbi, and since then has traveled entensively over the United States. Besides having lectured for the PondLyceum Bureau and a Chautauqua company, he has addresses numerous colleges and

DI AND PHI WILL MEET IN DEBATE

Seek To Place Responsibility For Parker's Rejection By National Body.

The annual joint meeting of the Di and the Phi, which has drawn much advance comment, will be held tonight in the Di hall at 7:15 o'clock. President Beatty Rector of the Di Senate, which society will be host on the occasion, will preside. The bill for discussion which was selected by the Di is "Resolved, That the defeat of Judge Parker for the supreme court of the United States devolves principally upon the Democratic Party."

In the past history of the two organizations, it had been traditional custom for the two groups to meet in joint session at least once a year. However, the plan was abandoned for a number of years, and it was not until a year ago that the custom was revived. The purpose of these meetings is for the senators and the representatives to exchange ideas and opinions on topics of national or local interest and to discuss among themselves the progress of forensic endeavor in general at the University. These sessions have always been enthusiastically attended by members of both societies.

The defeat of Judge Parker has been a subject of debate among students here, especially in attempting to place the responsibility for the action. In the opinion of members of the Di and the Phi, this is the logical topic at this time. Both of the assemblies endorsed the nomination of Parker at their

To outlaw a country is not to make it amenable to world opinion but the opposite.—Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald.

Where Are We Going?

Added to the recent resignations of Dr. Chase and other prominent members of the faculty, the action of the budget commission in slashing the University's appropriation of $875,000.00 by $175,000.00 causes us to ask: Where are we going? The 20 percent cut puts the question of how we are to maintain our present high standard squarely up to the student body.

Undoubtedly the resignations from the faculty will be keenly felt. But in time we believe that men equally as high in the educational field would be developed to replace those going elsewhere—provided the all-powerful Budget Commission does not cripple us.

But the action of the Commission is a severe blow to the University. During the past few years we have felt the need of additional equipment, but we have somehow managed to get along without an adequate auditorium and gymnasium. However, when the 1929 legislature appropriated only $875,000.00, those interested in Carolina were forced to cut figures to the bone in order to meet the demands of the legislators. Now we are told to go even further. Where are we going?

We may well ask a more pertinent question: What are we going to do about it? There is no appeal from the actions of the Budget Commission. There is no session of the legislature until 1931—eight months away. But there is the primary early next month. The legislature selected at that time will make the appropriations for the following two years.

Confined within the student body is a large number of eligible voters. By means of personal votes as well as the influence certain students may wield through their friends and their families we can do a great deal toward safeguarding the University in the future.

Again we ask the question: Where are we going? And we add to that: What are we going to do about it?

The Emperor's Birthday

When the bells of all Japan rang out a few days ago for the Emperor's birthday, Chapel Hill was one of the places to hear their echoes. For Lieutenant-Commander Nakamura of the Imperial Japanese Navy, who is studying here, on that day treated his fellow-diners at the Graduate Club to cigars and refreshments.

In making a short talk at the time Lieutenant Nakamura said that his chief purpose in America was to acquaint himself with the English language, and that he was mighty glad he had chosen Carolina as his place of study. Declaring that he liked the University, he said he was especially pleased with the friendliness and courtesy shown him by those with whom he had come in contact here.

We are glad to hear Lieutenant Nakamura say this, just as we have been glad to hear students from various other countries say the same thing about Carolina.

The University should go out of her way in encouraging foreign students to come here. They do their part in creating a broadening influence on the campus. They invariably help to break down racial narrowness and bigotry which lurk even in such enlightened places as Tar Heelia's center of education. Their conversations and class room discussions are usually invigorating and straightforward.

If anything like world peace ever comes to pass it will largely be through the growth of international understanding, and certainly the cause of international understanding is furthered when American students study abroad and foreign students come to American colleges. The University in being hospitable to students from other countries is helping to strenghten the fabric of that dream called world peace.

Lieutenant Nakamura's celebration of Emperor Hirohito's birthda yat North Carolina's Graduate Club is an inkling of what may some day be accomplished in the way of peace on earth by the universities of the world. —J. J.

The College's Supreme Need

"The supreme need of the college and university and their leaders of today is to believe something they are ready to die for," stated a recent editorial in the News and Observer. In this article a claim was made that a spirit of cynicism was abroad in the college and in the world of today, and that this dangerous and destructive tendency was masquerading under the good names of "liberty" and "self-expression."

"Disrespect for established truth and authority" certainly seems to be the prevailing characteristic of many of the University students. Even the recent editorials in the Tar Heel were severely criticised by some because of the "self-content" which they seemed to breathe as well as the satisfaction with the present situation. Although such has not been the outlined policy of the Tar Heel neither does it intend to attempt to tear down our old institutions until better ones are offered. At a University it is expected that there should be more freedom of thought and expression than at some of the colleges where the actions of the students are more closely regulated.

The editorial referred to stated that there "is no conflict between faith and liberty. Indeed, liberty opened the way for the free exercise of faith in the days of Luther and other reformers, civil, and religious. What some dilletantes call 'liberty" is translated by them to mean apostasy from the Word and from revealed religion and lack of convictions."

"Prove all things and hold fast to that which is good" was suggested as being the only true doctrine for intellectuals and all others.

The cause for the editorial seemed to be a recent announcement from Amherst College that "the elimination of all Biblical literature courses from Amherst curriculum for the coming year, and the resulting removal from the faculty of one of the most popular professors . . . "

This step of retrogression precipitated a new outburst of student feeling against the action of the Amherst board of trustees. A special from Amherst stated: "Opposition has been forthcoming among both undergraduates and alumni since rumors of the trustee's decision were circulated following their meeting several weeks ago."

The N. & O. editorial rejoiced that "this lends support to the belief of many that youth has more faith than age, and that the most of present day indifference is among the older men, who set a bad example to youth." It seems that he was not referring to the University of North Carolina.

The concluding paragraph of the editorial follows. "The excuse given by the trustees of that rich college (Amherst) is that "it is economically necessary." The test of what a man believes in is what he holds on to in time of stress. A college that gives up religious study and practices no economy in less important things advertises its appraisement of values."

The churches at Carolina seem to be the only means afforded for Biblical study at Carolina, and although some of the students are as vitally interested in religious work as when they were at home, there is still a much larger number who have almost entirely given up such activities. The difference between a University and a College as expressed by many accounts largely for the removal of a biblical course from the University's curriculum, and there is much doubt as to how much popularity such a course would receive if re-instated. —H. Personnel Paragraphs

By Henry Johnston, Jr.

What will become of the graduates who leave the University in June? And in particular, what will happen to the many who have decided not to take up professional training but rather to find a place somewhere in that broad field called "business"?

Some of the actual experiences and impressions of recent graduates should throw light on the paths of those who are to follow. With the hope that they will prove enlightening and helpful, I list below excerpts from correspondence with some of the younger University alumni.

A 1929 commerce graduate who is now working with the Standard Oil Company of New York in the Dutch East Indies writes, "This is a dandy place here at Macassar, a town of about 50,000—1,000 Dutch and the rest natives. . . . I like the town, the weather and the people very much. . . . Just about 5 degrees below the equator and the weather is splendid—not too hot, a nice breeze and very pleasant nights. . . . Very tropical and different from home. . . . The work is marketing of Standard Oil products to natives (Chinese own most of the shops): We also have some office work which is very enjoyable. . . . We work from 8:45 to 12:00 and from 1:45 to 4:30. . . . All the business is done in Malay and we must learn it as soon as possible. . . . I now make $200 per month. . . . I shall probably be located here a year or two, then transferred to a larger station in Java."

This graduate took the foreign service training course given in New York each summer by the Standard Oil Company. It lasted for about three months and he was paid a salary of $25 per month during this time. There were 33 in the class, including two boys from N. C. State and one from V. P. I. They studied various phases of the oil business and the company's methods of marketing and accounting.

Another 1929 graduate, connected with one of the largest furniture factories in the state, writes: "Billing all shipments . . . is my first and foremost duty. This requires a knowledge of freight rates, tariff schedules, routings, sight drafts, export manifests and many other railroad rules and regulations, which were all Greek to me at first. . . . About the only thing in college that has been of direct value to me was Business English. Mr. ——— gave me some points which have really been helpful in handling repair and adjustment correspondence. . . . About 20 people in this office and a majority of them have been to college."

"I think the most valuable thing I learned in college was how to associate with and meet people," writes a 1926 graduate who is clerk in a first-class hotel in this state. "I have found that many men without college training are very timid in their contacts in the business world. . . . My accounting and French help me a great deal in my work. I have quite an amount of records and book-keeping to do and just lots of the formulas and names for the various kinds of foods are French or come from the French."

A 1929 graduate who is a junior accountant with a large New York firm writes: "Please let me advise you to persuade all students interested in getting a job in business to study accountancy, and work in some phase of business during vacation. Without knowledge of accountancy principles—and how to practice those principles—one is lost in the present-day business world, and I guarantee that a job will be hard to find that doesn't require it as a prerequisite."

* * *

"Your time for work is not more than half over when the store closes in the afternoon," writes a 1929 graduate who has been in the merchandising business with a chain organization in New York for only a few days. "We have not quit work earlier than 12 o'clock either of the three nights I have been here. . . . After about five years the money prospects look good; before this time you have to work like h—— for barely enough to live on. . . . But it is a great and fascinating game and the training is invaluable. . . . If you learn merchandising, you can demand a salary and get it. . . . The manager here, who is only 27 years old, was offered a position a short time ago at a beginning salary of $15,000 per year and a $5,000 a year raise thereafter."

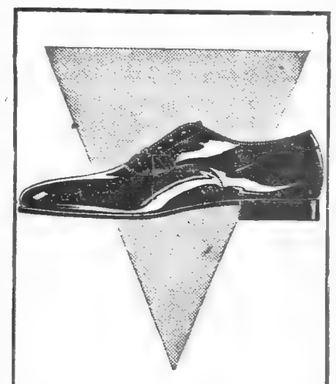
The above are samples of one type of information which comes to this office from time to time. When we find that a man is dissatisfied with his work for an apparent good reason, an effort is made to assist him in making a readjustment. The information secured by means of this "follow-up" work is invaluable in bringing our files up to date. You can get the benefit of this "cumulative experience" by applying to 204 South building.



Two State Laws Are Included In List Of "Noble Experiments"

Two North Carolina "freak laws" are included in the list of "noble experiments" published in the last issue of Judge. The two laws were sent in to the magazine by Dr. G. K. G. Henry.

The two laws as stated in the magazine are as follows:

"A man in North Carolina shot across the border line and killed a man in Virginia. The governor of North Carolina refused extradition on the grounds that the crime had not been committed in this state.

"The Carolina Playmakers, University Glee Club, fraternity dances and botanical collection of the University of North Carolina are all illegal under a law which forbids theatrical music, dancing or the exhibition of natural curiosities within five miles of Chapel Hill."

The more active the foot, the more important the fit. Hence we're not a little proud of our success in fitting college men!

Mr. Grissette is scheduled to speak at meetings of alumni to be held in Atlanta May 15, Jacksonville May 20, and Miami May 24.

Alumni outside of North Carolina are showing an active interest in the success of the fund, according to Mr. Grissette. Committees of active workers are busy in the three states mentioned.

Mr. Grisette will be away during the greater part of the month of May.

Scientific Society Will Meet Tonight

An important meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society will be held at 7:30 tonight in 206 Phillips hall. An election of officers will take place; and Otto Stuhlman, head of the department of physics, and F. K. Cameron, of the department of chemistry, will speak.

The subject of Dr. Stuhlman's address will be: "The Motion and Bursting of Gas Bubbles Rising Through Liquids." This problem consists in a study of the bursting conditions of bubbles of a gas as it passes through the surface of the liquid as the temperature of the liquid is changed.

Professor Cameron will speak upon "The Absorption of Sulphur Dioxide by Calcium Phosphates."

Princeton Tigers Eat Up Carolina Track Records

ONLY DUAL LOSS IN YEARS

Saturday Marked First Loss Of Its Kind In Eight Years For Blue and White Tracksters.

MEET RESULT: 80 2-3 - 45 1-3

Minor Barkley Outstanding Star Of Day; All Men Do Well.

The Carolina track team's record of no defeats in dual meets during the last eight years tumbled in ruin Saturday afternoon when it lost to a great Princeton team by a score of 80 2-3 to 45 1-3. The team performed excellently in spite of its defeat, several of the men making the best marks of their track careers and yet not being able to take firsts. The bitterness of a defeat after so many years of supremacy is lessened very much by the fine performances turned in by almost all the members of the team.

The outstanding feature of the meet was the running of Minor Barkley, Tar Heel ace, who took first in the half mile in 1:56.5 and second in the mile in 4:21 1-5—the best day's running ever done by any southern distance man. In the mile, he was beaten by Dawson of Princeton in the fastest college mile run in the country this year. He pressed Dawson so closely that the easterner was forced to break the college record to win in the excellent time of 4:20. In this race Barkley's time was 4:21 1-5, tying the southern and U. N. C. record set by Galen Elliott in 1926. In the half mile Barkley came back to win in the fast time of 1:56.5, his greatest half mile. The time set for this race broke the U. N. C. record of 1:57, set by Barkley in the state championship meet at Greensboro last week, and came within .8 second of breaking the southern record of 1:55 4-5 set by Gess of Kentucky in 1928. Both Mills and Shepard of Princeton, who took second and third respectively, finished in under 1:58 to nose out Horney of Carolina, who ran the distance in under 2 minutes for the first time in his life.

In the two mile Cliff Baucom of Carolina was running a close second and was making a strong challenge for the lead when, in rounding the last turn he stepped on the concrete curbing and fell; by the time that Baucom had gotten on his feet, Whitehead of Princeton had passed him and had a 12-yard lead, which Baucom cut down to three yards in a valiant but futile effort to do better than third.

Charley Farmer continued his winning streak, taking both the 100 and 220 from Hollis Hand, Princeton star who came in second both times. Rip Slusser took third in the 100 as did Ken Gay in the 220.

In the 440, Lionel Weil turned in his best quarter of the year but could take no better than a close third, so severe was the competition. In this race Ken Gay battled with Keown of Princeton for first for the first 350 yards, but tired and was unable to place.

In the 120-yard high hurdles Perry of Carolina was leading when he hit the seventh hurdle and took a bad spill, losing any chance for a place. Ty Reid ran a game race, finishing a close third.

In the 220 low hurdles, Rip Slusser looked to be well on his way to a victory when he crashed into the sixth hurdle and ruined his chances of a place, Princeton sweeping the event.

In the pole vault, Ruble of Carolina chalked up his second 12-foot vault of the year to tie

S. A. E. Crushes A. T. O.

The S. A. E. nine defeated A. T. O. 4-0 in a fast and closely contested game yesterday afternoon. Waterhouse pitched well for the victors while Farleigh caught and also led his team at bat. Quinn pitched for the losers, and Booker caught.

The winners played consistently throughout the game. Very few errors were made. A. T. O. trailed 4-1 until the last inning when it scored two runs on a walk and a homer; however, S. A. E. tightened up and put the next three batters down in order.

This victory gives S. A. E. the right to meet Lambda Chi Alpha for the fraternity championship.

Phi Sigs Whip Betas

Two undefeated tennis teams, Phi Sigma Kappa and Beta Theta Pi No. 1, clashed yesterday afternoon with Phi Sigma Kappa coming out the victor.

The hardest fought and most spectacular game of the afternoon was between Andrews, Phi Sigma Kappa, and D. Wardlaw, Beta Theta Pi. Andrews won 6-2, 0-6, 6-3. The other scores were: Curlee defeated Draper 3-6, 6-3, 6-0. and Whittington defeated F. Wardlaw 6-2, 5-7, 6-3.

TENNIS TEAM IS SUCCESSFUL ON SOUTHERN TOUR

Carolina Racqueteers Defeat Tennessee, Sewanee and Tech; Davidson and Vanderbilt Matches Called Off.

Word has been received from the tennis team, which is now on an extended southern trip, that Carolina has won every match which has been played. The Davidson and Vanderbilt matches were called off on account of rain and wet courts, while Carolina took the Tennessee, Sewanee and Georgia Tech matches.

Four consecutive days of rain, however, did not deprive the netmen of a 4-2 victory over the University of the South at Sewanee Friday. All the matches were played on a single indoor, wooden court. Captain Bill Merritt of Carolina lost heavily to Teddy Burwell, a Charlotte boy who is one of the favorites for the coming Southern Conference tournament at New Orleans. Bill came through with only one game, going down before Burwell's swift service and fast all-around shots 6-1, 6-0.

Other matches were as follows: Hinkey Hendlin won over Allen (S) 6-3, 6-2; Phil Liskin (C) defeated Hines 6-1, 6-0; Sonny Graham (C) won over Raines 9-7, 6-4; Hendlin and Liskin (C) lost their first doubles match of the season to Burwell and Allen, 8-6, 6-3; Captain Merritt and Sonny Graham (C) won over Hines and Raines 6-4, 6-2.

Carolina scored a victory over the Georgia Tech netmen Saturday but the scores of the meet were not available.

PERRY TO SPEAK TO ENGINEERS

At the meeting of the University of North Carolina student chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers to be held tonight at 7:30 in Venable hall, William A. Perry, a senior in the department of chemical engineering, will speak on the research that he has been conducting during this year.

The talk by Mr. Perry will be one of a series of talks by student members of the local branch of the institute, which holds meetings every other week.

The research work on which Mr. Perry will speak is that which he has been conducting on "Deaerated Water" since the opening of school last fall. In this work he has been making a study of the effect of deaeration and deactivation of water with respect to corrosion. The study has been made to determine practical means for removing dissolved oxygen in boiler water and so ridding the water of the agent causing corrosion.

The meeting Tuesday evening will be the next to the last meeting of the University chapter of the institute to be held this year. The last meeting, which will be held on May 20, will be the final business meeting of the year.

Since its organization last fall, the University student chapter of the A.I.C.E. has held meetings regularly twice a month. One meeting a month has been given over to business, and the other to the presentation of papers by chemical engineers and the student members of the chapter.

During 1890 the Blue and White, a paper, rival to the Tar Heel, was started by the "non-frat" group on the campus. Later when the fraternity question had been peaceably settled, this rival paper withdrew.

Carolina 6; W. F. 3

Carolina added to her Big Five average by a 6-3 win over the Wake Forest nine yesterday afternoon at Wake Forest. Paul Edwards pitched for the Tar Heels. Lanning took the mound for the Deacons, but was knocked out of the box in the sixth inning.

COMPETITION FOR PRESIDENT'S CUP TO BEGIN TODAY

According to an announcement made yesterday by the program committee of the country club, all members of the club are requested to play a qualification round of 16 holes either today or tomorrow. All those making a score of 85 or less will then play in a non-handicap tournament for the president's cup. This tournament will be held on Saturday, May 17.

The winner of this non-handicap tournament will have his name engraved on the cup, provided he has not won this tournament in the past two years. It is stated in the rules that if a member wins a tournament, he is then disqualified from the tournament for two years following. In this way a member can win every three years.

This cup is given to the club by the Student Supply Store, and has become a permanent trophy of the club.

It is planned that the woman's social committee give a tea at the club from 2 to 6 Saturday afternoon for all those in the tournament.

The club committee also stated that according to plans so far, there will be a handicap medal play tournament on the Saturday following this president's cup tournament. This handicap medal play tournament, which will be on May 24, will be the last tournament of the program for this year.

Carr Beats F

With Brown hurling consistent ball throughout the game, Carr defeated Aycock ("F") 5-0 yesterday afternoon. Brown was complete master of Aycock, sending eight men back to the bench by the strikeout route and allowing only one hit—a single by Bernstein. Hooks pitched a creditable game until the last inning when he walked three men, connected with a timely scratch infield to let in three runs.

Carr will play New Dorms Thursday for the championship of the dormitory league. The batteries will be: for Carr—Brown and Strunsinski; New Dorms—Moore and Williamson.

CAROLINA MAKES CLEAN SWEEP OF VIRGINIA SERIES

Lone Tally In Ninth Saves Cavliers From Whitewash In Annual Classic.

The Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina swamped their ancient rivals from Charlottesville Saturday afternoon with a score of 12 to 1.

The pitching of Fleming was the outstanding feat of the afternoon. The big boy permitted six Cavalier hits, well scattered, struck out seven and was thoroughly master of the field at all times. The lone Virginia score in the ninth was a gift. Bryant got on through an infield scratch hit. He advanced on a choice and scored when Potter dropped Pinter's fly to center.

This same Potter killed the best other chance the Cavaliers had, however. Bryant and Lewis hit cleanly to right in the first inning before Fleming settled down to mastery. Pinder sent a drive between center and right field, which Potter gathered in beautifully. It was the third out. The Tar Heels engineered a nifty double play in the seventh to kill the single other Virginia chance.

All Sorts of Scoring

Mielziner pitched weakly and had weak support. He opened the first inning by walking Jackson. Whitehead came through with a clean single to right. Maus beat out a bunt to fill the bases. Jackson scored when House sacrificed.

Carolina scored a brace in the second. After Wright had flied out, Brown walked, stole second and took third on a wild pitch. Fleming struck out, but Jackson walked and Whitehead hit again to score Brown. Jackson scored on a double steal engineered by him and Whitehead.

They ran up three more in the third, with House walking to open. Lufty's roller to Dent was handled slowly and the hitter was safe. House and Lufty scored on Wright's booming triple to center, the single long hit of the game and one which won Wright a handsome watch, The blow finished Mielziner and Ellis took the box. Wright scored when Ellis missed an easy toss at first from Byrd.

The fourth was Jimmy Maus' inning. The Greensboro boy hit to left, stole second, advanced to third on a House sacrifice, and then stole home.

The seventh brought three more runs with House starting the fireworks with a drive to

FROSH VICTORS OVER DURHAM HI

The freshman baseball team yesterday afternoon won over Durham high school 11-5 in a seven-inning game.

This was the first game for the frosh since their return from the Virginia trip. They are looking good to upset the Duke freshmen tomorrow afternoon as they have won the past five or six with large scores.

Riggs, Whitehead, Croom and Dixon led the Carolina nine's hitting, all the boys doing good work at the bat. Whitehead, Riggs and Croom got home runs.

Johns, Giobbi, Bumpass and G. Pope led the hitting of the Durham team. Johns led by getting a home run in the sixth.

Coach Cerney used many men in the game, giving most of the squad a chance to play.

The frosh lineup: Blackwood, p; Peacock, c; Whiteheart, 1b; Ferebee, 2b; Powell, 3b; Riggs, ss; Croom, lf; Whitehead, cf; and Dixon, rf. Durham lineup: Lougee, p; Giobbi, c; Johns, 1b; Bumpass, 2b; Cheek, 3b; Goodwin, ss; Dave, lf; G. Pope, cf; and Pope, rf.

Mangum Slugs Old West

Mangum came out on the big end of a 12-9 score in a slugfest with Old West yesterday afternoon. Crutchfield and Grindstaff alternated at the battery posts for Mangum. Both also led their team in hitting with two hits apiece, one of Grindstaff's safe blows being good for two bases. Johnson also connected with a two-bagger for Mangum.

Winecoff and Wilson pitched for Old West while Woodley caught. Sayre played a good game on the field for the losers.

The Phi Alpha-T. E. P. baseball game scheduled yeserday afternoon was postponed.

CARILLON TO BE PLACED IN TOWER OF DUKE CHAPEL

A carillon of the most modern type will be installed in the tower of the new chapel at Duke University as a gift from George G. Allen and William R. Perkins of New York.

This carillon will be, according to President W. F. Few who announced the gift, "a significant and unique addition to the cultural and spiritual resources of the University, and a tribute to the man whose broad-visioned business statesmanship, rugged strength of character, and large-hearted humanitarian ideals the donors have chosen to honor in this way."

Mr. Allen, a native of Warren county, North Carolina, is chairman of the board of trustees of the Duke Endowment. He is president of the Duke Power Company and is connected with other large business enterprises. Mr. Perkins, a native of Virginia, is attorney for various Duke interests and for several years was Duke's personal advisor.

The first use of this unique musical device was in the fifteenth century in Holland, Belgium, and North Germany. The development of Carillon music is comparatively recent in England and America. The most modern carillons are equipped with stationary bells and electrically controlled keys in contrast with the old swinging bells.

The gift of the carillon to Duke, while naturally of real consequence as an addition to the resources of the University, will add significance as a community asset. The range of the carillon making the beauty of its musical tones audible for miles around.

left field. Lufty was out at first, but Potter walked and Wright was safe on an infield blow to fill the bases. House scored on Brown's out and two more came in as Sloan dropped a high fly from Flemming's bat. It was a case of too much confidence, the ball falling squarely into his hands.

The final Tar Heel runs came in the eighth.

with Austin of Princeton for first, an especially fine performance on the Tar Heel's part considering that this is his first year of pole vaulting. Brodie Arnold had an off day and could do no better than tie for third.

In the javelin throw, Theron Brown got off his best heave of the year for 170 feet, a mark which, if repeated next Saturday, should certainly gain him a place in the conference meet.

Brown repeated his first place performance in the discus with a throw of 130 feet 10 3-4 inches. On his final throw, Sandy Dameron hurled the disc 134 feet, further than ever before in his track career, but the two front spikes of his shoe had touched the circle line and his throw was declared foul. His previous throws had gained him third place.

Larry Johnson leaped over 22 feet for the first time this year to take a second in the broad jump, while George Bagby jumped 5 feet 11 inches for a second in the high jump after an exciting duel with Faber.

An unusual thing occurred in the shot put—two Princetonians tied for first at exactly 41 feet 11 3-4 inches. Adkins took third in this event.

120-yard high hurdles—Summerill (P), Bradley (P), Reid (C). Time, 15.5 seconds.

STUDENT INVOLVED IN AUTO CONTEST

Two persons were killed and six others injured Sunday as a result of an automobile accident in which W. H. Griffin of Wendell, a freshman in the University school of engineering, was an accessory. Griffin was the driver of the car in which Miss Sallie Scarborough, his niece and one of the victims, was riding.

Miss Lucy Sandlin of Leesville was the other victim of the accident. She was riding in a car driven by E. B. Moore of Durham, who was taken into custody at the instigation of the Wake county coroner Waring. Moore was charged with reckless driving. There were no charges against Griffin.

According to the occupants of the car the accident, taking place on the road between Wendell and Lake Myra, was caused by the inability of both drivers to see through a cloud of dust raised by a car that had just passed the Griffin car, which was headed towards the lake resort.

The report of the coroner indicates that Moore, returning with his party from the lake, was driving carelessly on the left side of the road at the time of the accident. Griffin was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Pauline Griffin Scarborough of Wendell, her family, and another young man, a friend of Griffin's.

individual meetings prior to Parker's rejection by the senate.

The contemplated action of the state legislature in regard to drastic restrictions on "bumming," a subject of vital consequence to students in the University, will be debated in the Di in the immediate future. This question was scheduled for discussion at the joint meeting tonight, but was tabled when the Parker bill was proposed. It was mutually agreed that such a bill as the "bumming" legislation was radically unjust and therefore unsuitable for debate.

As the Di is host for this annual occasion tonight, President Rector has urged all senators to be present. Visitors are also welcome at this meeting.

able of the three. The loss of sleep affected the women more than the men, and Mr. Dimmick attributed this to the fact that men participate in "bull sessions" more frequently than the fairer sex and are usually "night hawks."

The auditory distraction, which was an ingenious contraption of two electric fans, one with steel wings and the other with wooden wings, which beat upon a large piece of tin, also bothered the women more than the men. The hunger distraction affected both sexes equally, being more effective than either of the other means of influencing the integration of the subjects.

In the auditory distraction test the work of the men was done in less time but with more errors; while the women required more time to complete the test but had fewer errors than the men.

Mr. Dimmick stated that all 20 of the students who volunteered to take the tests had remained with him, although going without feed for 24 hours at a time and in spite of having to take the tests at 12:30 p. m. and at 7 a. m.

The experiment is not yet concluded, but Dr. Dimmick hopes to determine by the tests whether or not there is a correlation between an individual performance under abnormal conditions and the traits measured by the Downey and Binet Tests, with which the results of the experiment will be compared.

societies on religious, educational and civic themes.

Rabbi Krass is in addition to his other work director of the Juvenile Probation Association as well as being the founder and head of the Brownsville Forum. From 1917 to 1921 he toured the United States on behalf of the Jewish War Relief Funds and Liberty bond sales. Then in 1923 he led another tour of the country in behalf of the Jefferson Memorial Fund.

He has also acted on numerous executive committees assisting public welfare. At present Krass contributes to many of larger religious papers and magazines in the country.

Dean Elbert Russell of Duke University is to speak on the Protestant faith. Dean Russell, a noted educator, secured his A. B. from Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., in 1894, and in the following year received his M. A. from the same school. Later, in 1919, he was given his Ph. D., at the University of Chicago.

Since his graduation, Russell has been professor of Bible and Bible literature and church history in several of the larger colleges of the middle west. In 1914 he was a candidate for congress on the Progressive party ticket.

Besides his professorships and academic activities, he has acquired a name in the field of writing. Some of his books are "The Parables of Jesus," "Jesus of Nazareth in the Light of Today," and "As Each Day Comes."

At present Dean Russell is at Duke University as head of the school of religion.

Hon. R. D. Douglas of Greensboro, who is to present the Catholic faith, is a banker and lawyer of the state. Mr. Douglas, after having secured his A. B. from Georgetown University, was admitted to the bar in 1897. Soon afterward he was appointed as attorney general of North Carolina beginning in 1900.

A strong Republican, he was a delegate to the national convention at Chicago in 1904. From 1903 to 1907 Douglas was editor in chief of the Daily Industrial News, the only Republican daily in the South Atlantic states at that time. From 1906 to 1916 he served as postmaster at Greensboro, and is at present vice-president and trust officer of the Greensboro Bank and Trust Co.

These speakers have been asked to limit their speeches to a maximum of 25 minutes and in this way the talks will be completed within a short time, thus leaving ample time for questioning. The public may bring written questions which will be read from the platform.

The committee that is aiding the local Y in the symposium is composed of Sean Felship, Harry Gump and Harold Urist, Jewish men; Ellis Fysal, Bill Collins and Miss Virginia Douglas, Catholic representatives; and Jimmie Williams, Ed Hamer and Beverly Moore, Protestants.

Judge Parker's Defeat Not Due To Democrats

JOINT MEET OF DI AND PHI SAYS BLAME LIBERALS

Senators Hosts To Visiting Assemblymen; No Banquet For Di.

At their quarterly joint meeting last night, the Di and Phi had for thier chief topic of discussion the question, "Resolved, That the defeat of Judge John J. Parker devolved upon the Democratic Party." One of the liveliest and most interesting discussions of either organization during the year took place and resulted in the defeat of the bill by a vote of 19-11. Visitors and those who were forced to leave before a vote was taken had no say in the matter. However, from the amount of discussion against the measure, the bill represented the views of those who attended the meeting.

Representative Wilkinson, of the Phi Assembly, upheld in a credible and fiery manner the bill which he had sponsored. Speaker Carr, also of the Phi, assisted him in leading the arguments for the bill. He pointed out that the Democratic party continually attempts to embarrass the administration by defeating its policies, and this was another such attempt. He agreed with Representative Wilkinson, who really led the side, that the senators vote in a partisan manner in most cases, and that it was the partisan vote of the Democrats, not their belief that Judge Parker was inefficient or undesirable, that defeated his appointment.

Representative Speight led the opponents of the bill. He based his reasons on the fact that Parker's attitude toward the negroes and toward the "Yellow Dog Contracts" caused his defeat. He added that it was the Republican senators, who did not like these beliefs of Parker, that carried the senate against confirmation.

President Rector of the Di Senate, who presided at the session, descended from the chair in support of the opponents of the bill. He relinquished the chair to Senator Medford, president pro tem of the senate. He reiterated the statements of the previous speakers in their contention that the Republican party had defeated the confirmation bill.

THREE MEN LEAD RELIGION FORUM IN GERRARD HALL

Jew, Catholic, and Protestant Outline Faiths In Twenty-Five Minutes Each.

A Jew, a Catholic, and a Protestant in a symposium held last night in Gerrard hall gave their own reasons for their beliefs in their separate religions. Rabbi Nathan Krass of New York City spoke for the Jewish faith; Hon. R. D. Douglas of Greensboro for the Catholic, and Dean Elbert Russell of Duke University for the Protestant.

Rabbi Krass, the first speaker, stated that one of the main reasons for his belief in the Jewish faith was, probably because he was born and reared one. It was his belief that one's religion depends largely upon his geography and his racial antecedents. "We are born in one faith," stated the speaker, "and it is usually in that faith we remain."

Taking up a little history of Judaism, he stated that Christianity, Mohammedanism, and numerous other religions originally came from the old Jewish faith. He also stated further that at least seventy-five percent of the Protestant Bible was translated directly from the Hebrew Bible, and even a larger percent of the Catholic Bible.

"The main difference between Christianity and Judaism is the divinity of Christ," continued Rabbi Krass. He said that Protestantism revolves around Christ and His life, whereas Judaism revolves around no specific person.

He stated that Judaism was not only a belief in one God as ruler of the universe, but, quoting the tablet on the front of Gerrard hall, he said that the words on that tablet were a perfect definition of Judaism. "To do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God," declared the speaker "is an excellent definition of Judaism."

Defining his faith further, he stated that it was not only a religion but it was also a descendant of an ethnic group that could be traced back as far as Jacob. "It is also an expression of religion as given by a Jewish genius," he continued.

In closing Rabbi Krass stated that both Judaism and Christianity were instruments that the eternal God uses for the perfection of the human race, and for this reason they both should live together as friendly neighbors.

Douglas Agrees

Hon. R. D. Douglas, speaking for the Catholic faith, agreed with Rabbi Krass in his statement concerning geography and racial antecedents on one's religious belief. Before taking up the differences in the three be-

Editor Of New York World Approves Proposed History Collection At University

In an article in the Raleigh News and Observer, Claude G. Bowers, editor of the New York Evening World, and author of Party Battles of the Jackson Period, Jefferson and Hamilton, and The Tragic Era, approves of the proposed plan of making the University of North Carolina a center for the gathering of a southern historical collection.

Mr. Bowers laments the fact that undue emphasis has been placed on the east and particularly New England by historians, while the south and west have been slighted. In a like manner the New England statesmen have been made all but sancrosanct while the most important leaders of the south and west have been dismissed lightly.

Although it is to some extent true, according to Mr. Bowers, that this emphasis given to the east is a result of partisan and sectional bias, the people of the south share the responsibility in the fact that they have been indifferent to the preservation and collection of the source material upon which the historian must rely. The people of the one section have treasured and have opened the journals of their ancestors; the people of the other have attached little value to such things and have destroyed or hidden them.

Mr. Bowers was impressed with that fact in the preparation of Party Battles of the Jackson Period. The New England estimates were found easily and in abundance, while some of the foremost of the southern were shrouded in an almost impenetrable mist.

The plan of the University of North Carolina to make a systematic search of the south seems to the editor of the Evening World little less than an inspiration of genius. This comprehensive plan will inevitably bring forth a wealth of material hitherto hidden; yet if such material is gathered in different collections scattered throughout the south, it will be inaccessable to many. The plan, then, is to bring this material under one roof, in the library of the University.

According to Mr. Bowers, there are numerous reasons why Chapel Hill should be the center of such a collection. Chapel Hill is recognized as one of the cultural centers of the south. The University has a long and distinguished history and its work is making a deep impression on the scholars of the country. The charm and quiet of the community lend themselves to the labors of research. The University has shown special interest in the science of history through the collection and publication of a vast amount of important documentary material. And then, the new, imposing, fireproof library which insures the preservation of the collections.

To quote the New York editor: "However, the purpose is neither one of mere state or institutional pride. It is—must be—a southern enterprise and achievement or it fails completely."

Considering the nature of the work and the nature of material,

LITTLE DAMAGE DONE TO STORES

Gooch's Foister's, Students' Supply and Wootten-Moulton Escape Losses.

Chapel Hillians who came down to Franklin street last night after half past eight witnessed one of the most dramatic fires the town has had in many months. Though not causing much damage outside of the store it originated in, the fire at first appeared as though it would assume large proportions. Starting in the rear of Jack Lipman's University Shop, the fire spread to the rest of the shop, but flames did not gain further headway. Gooch's Cafe and the Students' Supply Store, the two neighboring stores, suffered no damage and their business will not be disrupted. However, water and much smoke entered Gooch's and for a time the manager was not sure that he would be able to open in the morning.

Though no definite estimate of the damage could be gotten before the Tar Heel went to press last night, Chief Foister of the fire department stated that it would be confined to the merchandise and shelving in the University Shop. What was not destroyed by flames in that store was destroyed by the water that was poured in by the firemen. Hoses were placed both in the front and in the back of the building and kept up steady streams for a half hour.

The Wootten-Moulton Photograph Studio and the Foister Studio suffered little damage with the exception of smoke. The frame department of the Foister Photo Company was filled with smoke for a considerable time after the blaze was extinguished.

Though Jack Lipman was out of town at the time of the fire, it was estimated by persons in the crowd that his damage might exceed $10,000.

Venable Honored

At the recent meeting of the North Carolina Academy of Science, held in Durham, Dr. F. P. Venable was elected honorary life member. This is the first time that the Academy has elected one of its members to such an office of honor, and it is a signal of distinction for Dr. Venable.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The educated man is a man with certain subtle spiritual qualities which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings, rational and sane in the fullest meaning of that word in all the affairs of life.—Ramsay MacDonald, quoted in the New York Times.

Concerning The Future

One may well say that the future of the University will be determined in the June primaries, for the men selected at that time for the legislature will hold the power either to continue the University on its present plane or to reduce it to "just another University." Never in its long history has the University faced a crisis as serious as at present. Even during the reconstruction period when the University was closed and its reopening a matter of conjecture was there a more critical condition existing.

At that time the crisis was caused by the philandering and extravagance of a corrupt and wholly unfit legislature. Conditions are different now. A state administration, bent upon reducing operating expenses without regard to the ultimate cost to the state, is slowly starving the University to death. A budget bureau, with merciless precision, is extending its tenacles until the struggle to maintain life will be useless.

We can do nothing to relieve the immediate danger. But we must safeguard the future at any cost. Those who profess to have the interest of the University at heart should exhaust every effort to preserve it from the jaws of a tax-relief-at-any-cost legislature. Only those far sighted and open-minded candidates, whatever their party affiliation, should be considered as fit for the law-making body of this state. Those who seek relief with utter disregard of the future should be defeated. The question remains. What are you going to do about it?

There was once a time when the neighbor dropt in for a call instead of calling in for a drop.—Louisville Times.

Away With Hazing

Considerable commotion has been raised by the State College freshmen this year over the wearing of the traditional red cap. A vote was taken by the student body last fall upon the point, but a measure abolishing the cap was defeated by the slight majority of 13 votes. Odd as it may seem, the rising sophs are still against this distinction between the frosh and their superiors. Leaders of the class are expecting to bring this issue into the limelight again this fall and have high hopes of permanently abolishing the customary caps.

Hazing is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. A glimpse of the change in relationship between college freshmen and the old men during the last several years establishes this fact. Brutal treatment of the freshmen is practically obsolete, the minor forms of initiation are bound to follow. Many fraternities as well as secret societies still adhere to the ancient forms of punishment, but they are following more and more the trend toward abolishing physical suffering. The rest will follow naturally.

The point is this: when a man comes to college, he is making his first really serious step in the direction of manhood. His first year in college is apt to play a major part in the kind of a man that he will be. There are enough trials that he will have to stand without the unnecessary ones of humiliation and subjugation that devices of freshmen distinction entail. In short—we are heartily in agreement with the stand that the freshmen of State College have made this year, and hope that other colleges having like systems will act in a similar manner.

—H. D.

At The Crossroads

Verily, the University of North Carolina is at the crossroads. Just which way to go is the problem which the legislature handed down to University officials when it effected the recent cut in appropriations. Shall the University of North Carolina take a back seat because of inadequate funds, or will we, the students, supplement the meagre state appropriations until such time as the state again gets "on her feet" financially?

It is indeed a regrettable fact that the people of the state of North Carolina put other things ahead of education. That this is the case, however, there can be no doubt in the light of the action of the legislature over a period of the last year. Citizens of this commonwealth should be willing to reduce funds for luxurious pleasures in order to foster and promote the work of this university, but this is decidedly not the case. We cannot go ahead at our accustomed rate without adequate funds, and the appropriations for next year are very obviously inadequate. Assuming that we would not tolerate our alma mater's being forced to take a back seat because of financial difficulties, a temporary raise in student fees looms up as the logical solution to the problem. But upon close examination we find that this outlet is in reality a blind alley. Many students have dropped out of school since the opening of the present collegiate year for financial reasons. A raise in student fees would cause many more to withdraw, and would thin the ranks of next year's freshman class. This line of reasoning, which seems plausible enough, deals a death blow to the idea of increasing student fees. The harmful results of such an increase—decrease in next year's freshman enrollment and withdrawal of many upperclassmen—invalidate its execution, for there would be no appreciable increase in the aggregate of student fees. At the same time fewer students would enjoy the benefits of a college education.

In the erection of a two thousand dollar house we may use the periodical plan; that is, we may build half of it one year and then build the other half two years later when we have earned the other thousand dollars. The house will be as good as if it had been built in a month's time. But not so with a university. A year's decline, or even a year's standstill for any reason, will bring about harmful results, the eradication of which will require a decade. Some solution to the present forked-road situation must be found. BUT WHAT?

We join the editor of this publication in asking, "Where are we going?" We add another interrogation: what manner of legislature have we? With respect to the University situation there seems to have been so little thought in that body of late that the introduction of any product of the thinking process would be decidedly out of order.—J. C. W.

CAROLINA SONGS? WHERE ARE THEY?

According to the records, this University enjoys the name of being the oldest state university in the entire nation, dating from 1795. During the long and progressive history which the institution has enjoyed since that eighteenth century date when its doors were first opened to aspiring young Carolina, tradition of many and varied kinds have been built into the records.

But where are the songs which must have been a part of this traditional experience? A state with such a wealth of folk-lore can hardly be thought to be devoid of song-lore. The pride of past generations must have found expression in alma mater songs of dignity and of levity. Where are these songs?

Since coming to the University last September I have had no less than twenty requests for Carolina songs. Publishing houses are anxious to utilize original school songs in collections now being compiled. Requests from this source have been many.

In addition, individuals who are interested in the history of the University are constantly writing for copies of a "Carolina Song Book." The answer is always the same: "There probably is such a book but the writer cannot suggest where it might be found."

If such a collection of song material exists, the department of music would appreciate hearing about it. If none exists it is time talented people combine their efforts to produce such songs as soon as possible.

HAROLD S. DYER,
Dept. of Music.

County Health Statistics

The total number of births in Orange county during the year ending in 1929 was much larger than that for the year 1928, and also larger than the death rate, as the records show that 221 have died in Orange county during 1929 and 438 have been born.

Dr. Nathan also reports that no one died in the county during the year of 1929 from typhoid fever, small pox or measles. The other reports are as follows; one death from malaria fever, four from whooping cough, three from diptheria, sixteen from tuberculosis, five from pellagra, and thirty-five infant mortality deaths.

liefs, he stated that for a person's faith not to be a superstition it was necessary that it be based on reason.

Mr. Douglas, giving the points on which the religions differed, stated that the first question was, Was Jesus the promised Messiah? "The next difference, and the one that is most important, is the question of whether Christ did or did not establish one church," said the speaker. It was the speaker's opinion that if He did establish one church, then this one was the Catholic church.

In regard to the question of salvation he stated that it was the Catholic's belief that any human created by God could be saved, and that he would only go to Hell by willfully sinning. Speaking of some of the other misunderstandings he declared that the Catholic church claims the right to translate the Bible as it sees fit, but this does not hinder a scholar from having his own translation.

"Purgatory," continued Mr. Douglas, "is a place of temporary punishment for those who are not bad enough to go directly to Hell and not good enough to go directly to Heaven."

He closed by saying that since all of the represented religions were of the same fold, he hoped that they would have such an opinion in their connections with each other.

Russell Speaks Last

The last speaker was Dean Elbert Russell, who spoke for the Protestant faith. He described it as a religion of individualism in that all of its members were allowed their own opinions and their own ideas.

The speaker declared that the Protestant, while accepting the Bible, differs from the Catholic in that he allows the Spirit of God to enlighten his mind so as to get a clearer translation of the Scriptures.

"By means of keeping his eyes, ears, and mind always open," said Dean Russell, "the Protestant is ever open to new ideas that may come up and in this way he may have a truer knowledge of the divine progress."

He concluded by saying that the Protestants believe that they can honor God most by using the facilities that He has given them to the greatest good.

Following the three talks, numerous questions, asked by the audience, were answered by the speakers.

Editor Of New York World Approves Of History Collection

Mr. Bowers says that the simplest task will be to get books and pamphlets having a place in a distinctively southern collection. Then a collection of the publications of the various states, the biographies of southern men and women, memoirs, autobiographies, local histories, and southern contributions to literature must be gathered. Another necessity will be the files of southern newspapers.

The unique feature will be to scour the south for letters, diaries, unpublished actions of organizations, social, commercial, religious, and fraternal, which are invaluable to the historian in picturing the times.

There are a number of collections of the sort proposed here throughout the country. There are a number in the east. With its collection of material on the northwest, the Wisconsin Historical Society has done a great service for the student of the northwest. For the middle west, the Burton Library in Detroit has done the same. In California, the Bancroft collection furnishes material on the Spanish occupation of the Pacific coast. The University of Texas furnishes material about Mexico and the southwest. Unless the plan is realized, Mr. Bowers assures that the student of the south will have nowhere to go.

By means of the above instances, the New York editor proves that the idea is not novel. He goes on to prove that the University's plan is not new, but only a plan for expansion; for the library now has 40,000 bound volumes dealing with North Carolina and contigious territory and numerous family collections. In addition to these manuscripts, books, pamphlets, and newspapers, something else is needed; that is money. It has been coming in from many sources, but much is needed.

In conclusion, Mr. Bowers asserts that the program of collecting material is in keeping with the rapid strides the south is making in the way of progress. "It seems absurd that a section so enormously rich in the statesmanship of her leaders and in her inspiring contributions to the creation and building of the nation should have failed so signally in reaping the reward of her enterprise and genius on the pages of history. A great percentage of the people of the United States have never known the historic splendor of the south. Now, if the south will cooperate with this enterprise, and it is possible only through cooperation, her place in the sun of history will be assured. And finally, if this enterprise is successful, it will win the admiration and respect from the scholarship of the nation.

The speakers were continually interrupted by questioners and this only aided in making more fierce the fight that both sides were making to gain votes for or against the bill. The meeting was well attended, and brought to the minds of old members the pictures of the Di and Phi in past years when the two literary societies held a more important position on the campus.

At this session, which is the fourth since the revival of the old custom, the Di Senate was host to the Phi and therefore the officers of the Di were in charge. President Rector presided, K. C. Ramsay was clerk, J. M. Little was critic, while H. Wood held the position of sergeant-at-arms in the absence of McB. Fleming-Jones.

Before the discussion on the Parker question was opened, the banquet committee of the Di announced to the Di members that the plans for the banquet had been placed aside indefinitely.

Farmer Undefeated

A victory over Hollis Hand, Princeton ace, last Saturday gave Charley Farmer, Tar Heel sprinter, an undefeated season record. Beating such stars as Ed Hamm, who set southern records in both 100 and 220 yards in 1928, Sandifer of Washington and Lee and Hand of Princeton, the flying Tar Heel sophomore has won every sprint race he has entered this season.

WILD CATS HAVE NO TERRORS FOR TAR HEEL TEAM

Billy Brown Leading Blue and White Attack Helps Down Duke's Nemesis.

With Billy Brown leading the attack with a homer, a double and a single, the Tar Heels defeated the Davidson Wild Cats 8-3 yesterday at Emerson field. The victory not only extended the Tar Heel winning streak to four games, but also lifted them to a tie for first place with Duke, blanked Monday by Davidson's star, Doc Kugler.

Longest, who started on the hill for the Tar Heels, pitched a good, heady game, allowing seven hits and walking but one man, while McInnes, the starting hurler for the visitors, allowed eleven bingles, walked six and hit three batters.

Both teams failed to dent the rubber until the fourth when Carolina netted a run on two walks and two infield hits. In Davidson's half of the fifth, McInnes went to first via the base on balls route and advanced to second on Longest's balk. Covington drove the visiting hurler home with a safe drive to left.

The fifth proved the big inning for the Tar Heels. Whitehead was hit by the pitcher and stole second and advanced on the catcher's wild throw over the base. Maus walked, House flied to the shortstop, Lufty also walked. Brown then drove a long line drive to the gate in right center for a circuit blow, scoring Whitehead, Maus and Lufty ahead of him. Incidentally this blow won the 17 jewelled wrist watch offered by the National Jewelry and the National Theatre Companies for the longest hit of the game. This offer is continued for the rest of the games on the schedule.

In the sixth inning the Tar Heels also garnered two runs on Whitehead's single to left, Maus's triple down the third base line and a fielder's choice.

Billy Brown opened the seventh with his third consecutive hit—a long double to left center. Wright's infield hit advanced him to third and Crouch's bunt brought him in with Carolina's last tally.

BRIEFS

The Tar Heels ran wild on the bases, being credited with no less than seven stolen sacks. Jackson and Whitehead led with two apiece. On the contrary Davidson failed to steal even one, Maus's whip keeping them close to the bag.

GOBBLERS HOLD LEAD IN LEAGUE

Virginia Polytechnic Institute held its lead in the Tri-State League of the southern conference by taking two out of three games played last week, and made itself the paramount contender for the season's honors. With nine games won and only two lost, V.P.I. holds an edge over the other contenders that cannot be overtaken this season, unless V.M.I. should win from Maryland today, in which case the two Virginia schools would go into a tie for first place.

The Tri-State schedule will be completed this week, except for a game between Carolina and N. C. State next Tuesday.

The league standing, including games of Monday, May 12, follows:

TEAM	W	L	Pct.
V. P. I.	9	2	.818
V. M. I.	5	2	.714
Maryland	6	4	.600
W. & L.	4	4	.444
N. C. State	4	5	.444
U. N. C.	4	6	.400
Virginia	1	8	.111

SPURTS IN SPORTS

By Jack Bessen

Recently night baseball was given a test in the middle west when the Des Moines and Wichita clubs of the Western League staged a game at the Des Moines ball park. Contrary to advance predictions and dope, the experiment was a huge success financially, 10,000 attending, and also for the purpose of determining the practicality of night baseball.

"There were long drives, high pop flies, long clouts to the outfield and hard-hit balls to the infield, with the players accepting the chances in a nonchalant manner which indicated that they did not have any trouble following the hit ball.

"The only sign of a ball being lost in the glare of one of the many projectors came in the first inning when Third Baseman Vigare of the Wichita club looked weak on attempting to field Shortstop Neilson's high pop foul. It appeared as if the infielder lost the ball in the lights, but he did not offer any alibi such as is offered by one who loses the ball in the sun.

"The most amazing thing about the test was the easy manner in which the batters followed the ball. Not once during the game was a batsman caught falling away from the plate on a pitch that was not near him.

"The fielders did not experience any difficulty in following the ball. The players got a jump on the sphere as easily as they would in the daytime. Not once did a player lose sight of the globule, unless it was Vigare.

"There wasn't anything in the test that would indicate night baseball would be a failure from a playing standpoint. The game can be played under artificial light if the fans want their baseball at night instead of the afternoon."

It was too bad that Carolina's attempt to keep clean an eight-year record of supremacy in dual meets came to such a disastrous ending last Saturday when the Tar Heels dropped a meet to the Princeton Tigers 80 2-3 to 45 1-3. The odds were against the Tar Heels from the very start of the meet, for it takes a wonder team to cope successfully with a strong club with but 22 men, and conceding that the Tar Heels have a very good team, it is no wonder outfit. In addition to the hardships suffered by the long trip, the Tar Heels were without the best services of four of their stars—Captain Nims, who is lost to the team for the remainder of the season; Perry and Reid, two hurdlers who are recovering from injuries suffered in the Washington and Lee meet two weeks ago; and "Ookie" Neiman, who will probably be lost for the remainder of the season as the result of a severely strained back suffered at the state meet.

The cry for new blood in the majors has been answered with a vengeance this spring, one of the best crops of rookies to come up having responded to the call. Probably the prize rookie and the answer to Barney Dreyfuss' prayer for a first baseman is the new slugging Pirate star, Gus Suhr.

George Fisher traded by John McGraw of the Giants to the St. Louis Cards on the eve of opening day has been a hitting fool all along and has been keeping the Cards in the thick of the pennant fight in the early stages of the race. One highly touted Yankee rookie, Dusty Cooke, has fallen down, but Ben Chapman, a newcomer from St. Paul, with whom Dusty spent the season of 1929, has been making good at third base. Little Charley Engle has been playing so well for the Pirates at third that Pie Traynor, the premier third baseman, hasn't been missed. Bennie Frey of the Cincinnati Reds has also been winning his spurs, gaining three victories in as many starts, among them two shutout games against the champion Cubs and the Boston Braves.

Tar Heel Squad Favored In Southern Track Meet

University Athletes Stand Excellent Chance of Shattering Several Southern Conference Marks In Annual Classic At Birmingham.

TRAINING PERIOD BEGINS

Birmingham, Ala., May 13—With dual meets and sectional carnivals behind them, Southern conference track coaches will put the final polish on their charges this week in preparation for the eighth annual conference track and field meet here Friday and Saturday.

The Tigers of Louisiana State, winners of the championship for the past three years, are far below their form of previous seasons and are accorded slim chances of repeating. Graduations did it.

North Carolina will have the rail position as a score or more teams toe the mark in the annual assault on existing records. The Tar Heels recently swept to their ninth consecutive Carolina college championship and lost only one meet all year.

Sharing favored position along with the Carolina entry are strong teams from Washington and Lee winners of the conference indoor meet, and Florida. Mississippi A and M, Georgia and Tulane also have shown strength.

North Carolina athletes are looked upon as possible record breakers in four events. Charlie Farmer, the sensational sophomore speedster is booked to set new marks in both the century and furlong. A fast mile relay team may topple Vanderbilt's old mark of three minutes 23 seconds set in 1926 and in Arnold, Coach Bob Fetzer has a pole vaulter liable to hoist himself over the bar at dizzier heighth than ever before attained in the south.

With a contingent of steady performers, Florida is counting on a succession of second and third places to push them to the fore.

Eddie Hamm, Georgia Tech's world champion broad jumper, is in good form. He holds the present mark of 25 feet 6 3-4 inches.

Mississippi A and M has a young high jumper named Daws, who has bettered the hi-jump record of 6 feet 3-4 inch in practice.

Buck Anderson, who holds the javelin mark, heads a strong Georgia team, which also includes Bob Young, distance runner and Sandy Sanford, who won the high jump last year.

Decoligny of Tulane and Finklestein of Washington and Lee appear to be the class of the hurdlers, while Hall of Florida, Stevens of Washington and Lee and Anderson of Georgia shape up as likely winners in the shot put. Coleman of Auburn has won first place in the discus throw in every meet in which he has participated this season.

Ottinger of North Carolina State and Shepard of Washington and Lee have turned in the best performances in the 440-yard dash.

Tulane's football relay team, which set a new Drake relay mark a few weeks ago, is an odds on choice to win that special event of the program.

TAR HEELS DROP WAKE FOREST 6-3

Paul Edwards Holds Deacons To Five Hits While Carolina Batsmen Knock Lanning Out Of Box.

Behind the steady pitching of Paul Edwards, star right hander, the Tar Heels defeated the Wake Forest Deacons 6-3 in a thrilling game played Monday at the Deacons' stamping grounds.

Captain Lanning, who started the game, was hit freely by the Tar Heel batters, giving nine hits and six runs in his six-inning stay on the mound. Meador, relieving the Deacon captain, fanned six of the eight men that faced him in the three final frames and allowed only one scratch hit.

The Tar Heels counted a trio of runs in the third stanza as a result of two walks, a sacrifice, Maus's single, and an error by the Wake Forest right fielder.

Gillespie's triple in the fourth scored Cobb, who had walked. In the eighth Allen, first man up, laced out a long drive to left field, which was good for the round trip.

Score by innings:

Team				R	H
W. F.	001	100	010	3	5
N. C.	003	021	000	6	10

Batteries: for Carolina—P. Edwards and Potter; for Wake Forest—Lanning, Meador and Gillespie.

CAROLINA FROSH FOOLS OLD COACH

Lewis Whitehead, centerfielder for the University freshman nine, staged a celebration all his own last week when the Tar Babies played Augusta Military Academy, Whitehead's old alma mater. Whitehead is a left-handed batter, and when his old coach told the Augusta fielders that Whitehead hit only to right field, the star youngster proceeded immediately to blast two homers into center field.

WHITEHEAD LEADS CAROLINA HITTERS

Burgess Whitehead, star shortstop, is leading the University batters as the Tar Heel nine enters its final stretch of games for the Big Five title. Duke will be met at Durham Saturday afternoon, and the Tar Heels will ring the curtain down for the season with a game with N. C. State here next Tuesday afternoon.

18-Run Average

Fifty-five runs in three games was the unique record piled up by the University freshman nine on a short Virginia invasion last week. Fork Union, Woodberry and Augusta Military Academy this week can all attest to the power of the Tar Baby sluggers.

CAROLINA FACES LOSS OF TRACK STARS FOR MEET

Dave Neiman and Bill Perry Possibly Out of Running In Southern Conference Meet At Birmingham This Week-End.

Faced with the probable loss of two of its star performers for the week-end's Southern Conference meet, the University of North Carolina track team is driving away all the harder in daily practice.

The men are Dave Neiman, star broadjumper and vaulter, suffering from a wrenched back sustained at the recent state championship meet, and Bill Perry, who took a hard spill while leading in a great 15.3 seconds high hurdle race at Princeton last Saturday.

Neiman is more than certain to be out of the conference meet, and Perry undoubtedly will not be in top form. Injuries to these point-winners is a heavy blow to the Tar Heels, despite the fact that they are conceded to be well up among the favorites to cop southern honors at the week-end's big meet.

Princeton last week-end gave the Tar Heels their first dual meet defeat since 1921, but the Tar Heels rose to heights of performances, under the intense competition, that seem to indicate that they have the stuff to give the field a fight at the southern meet anyway.

Undefeated Tennis Team Plays L. S. U.

The Carolina tennis team, holder of both singles and doubles state titles, plays L. S. U. at Baton Rouge today, and goes tomorrow to the annual three-day southern tourney at New Orleans. The Tar Heels have gone through a week's play on their trip without meeting defeat and are expected to go well in the tournament.

The state title holders for the Tar Heels are Hinky Hendlin, singles champ, and Hendlin and Phil Liskin, doubles champs. Both boys are sophomores and southpaws.

Thirty-Four Teams In High Baseball

The class B elimination high school baseball series opened with 19 entrants in the east and four less in the west. Of these 34 teams which have entered the series nearly three weeks ago, there are four teams which remain undefeated.

In the eastern semi-finals last week, Hamlet defeated Wilton, and Morehead City scalped West Edgecombe high. Shelby high school, 1929 state champions, won over Spencer in a hotly contested game, and will play Mt. Airy for the western championship.

The champions of the east and west will play here Friday afternoon, May 16th at three o'clock for the state class B championship which points to be a great game because of the keen competition which these two teams have met the whole season.

FIRST-RATE REPARTEE

At least one good story comes off the recent Tar Baby invasion of Virginia. The Carolina frosh were playing A. M. A. A doughty sergeant was umpiring and getting no small number of complaints from both sides. The Tar Babies were leading 12-0 in the seventh. There was a particularly raw decision, and the Tar Babies' red-headed pitcher, gifted at repartee, walked over to the doughty umpire, and glibly asked: "Say, what are you trying to do, make this game hard for me?"

WYKOFF BREAKS CENTURY RECORD

U. S. C. Sprinter Runs Hundred Yard Dash In Nine And Three-Fifths Seconds.

IS OFFICIALLY TIMED

Frank Wykoff, the University of Southern California's stellar sprinter, lowered the accepted world's record for the 100 yard dash, set at nine and three fifths seconds by Charley Paddock, Chet Bowman, Drew, and several others, when four official Amateur Athletic Union timers clocked him for the distance in nine and two fifths seconds Saturday afternoon.

The record breaking performance was accomplished at the annual Southern California Amateur Athletic Union championship track meet, held this year at Occidental College.

George Simpson, Ohio State flyer, is the only other man recognized as having covered the century in better than nine and five tenths seconds, having done so twice. However, Simpson's time was made with the valuable aid of starting blocks, and for that reason he has not been given credit for the world's record. The matter is still under debate as to whether he will be accorded the record.

Wykoff made his new record Saturday without the aid of blocks, starting from plain old fashioned holes, and if the course over which he ran is found to be not less than 100 yards when officially measured, there is but little doubt that he will be recognized as the official world's record holder. It is believed that in the event that such action is taken, Simpson's claim to the record will be dismissed because of the evident unfairness of according him an equal record with Wykoff.

Wykoff started his brilliant sprinting career early when he defeated the most prominent sprinters on the Pacific coast in 1928 while still a member of Glendale high school. That same year in the tryouts for the Olympic team at Boston he ran no less than four heats in nine and three fifths seconds, assuring himself a place on the team.

FRESHMAN NINE LOSES TO DUKE

Came Out At Little End of 15-0 Score.

The frosh baseball nine yesterday afternoon lost to the Duke freshmen 15 to 0. The Tar Babies showed good baseball but couldn't get going, the Duke team taking an early lead.

Coach Cerney used many men during the game by alternating and giving most of the boys a chance to play.

The Tar Babies did not play as good ball as was expected, as the first game with the Duke frosh was very close. Since this time the team has improved greatly and it was expected that the freshmen would add this game to their credit.

The lineups were: for Duke—Coombs, p; Werner, c; Cochrane, 1b; Hersey, 2b; Cooley, 3b; Robetshaw, ss; Ellis, lf; Bost, cf; and Klare, rf. For Carolina—Griffith, p; Peacock, c; Allen, 1b; Ferebee, 2b; Powell, 3b; Riggs, ss; Daniel, lf; Whitehead, cf; and Dixon, rf.

McNeill relieved Griffith of the mound work in the second, Pattisall relieved Peacock, White took first, Barber third, Croom, lf, and Riddle took rf.

The frosh will close the season Thursday afternoon, meeting Wake Forest at Emerson field.

BAILEY TO PLAY ROMEO IN LAST PART WHILE HERE

Leader In Playmaker Productions To Continue Acting In Massachusetts After Graduation.

Howard Bailey, who is playing the part of Romeo in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," which is to be produced this week end, is making his farewell performance for the Playmakers.

Bailey has been with the Carolina Playmakers now for three years and has taken a very active part in the organization.

Before coming to Chapel Hill he acted with the Birmingham Little Theatre under the direction of Bernard Szold, and with the Birmingham-Southern College dramatic club. He also directed and acted in productions of the Community Theatre at Bessemer, Alabama.

Howard Bailey

Since joining the Playmaker staff in the summer of 1927, Howard Bailey has played in the following parts: Lem in "In Dixon's Kitchen," John Sanders in "The Scuffletown Outlaws," Tu San in "The Marvelous Romance of Wen Chun-Chin," the mountain preacher in "Mountain Magic," Guerin in "Francois' Luck," Ricky in "You and I," Captain Horster in "An Enemy of the People," Charlie in "The Man Who Died at Twelve O'clock," Doctor Immanuel in "Quare Medicine," Reverend Blanton in "The Lie," the lover in "O Promise Me," Enos in "The No 'Count Boy," Bartholomew M. Burgess in "Magnolia's Man," Danny in "Job's Kinfolks," Danny in "Black Water," and now Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet." Besides this he had a juvenile lead in last year's production of the Wigue and Masque Club. Bailey has acted as assistant business manager of the Playmakers for the past two years and has been on every tour the Playmakers have made since his coming.

After graduating here in June, Mr. Bailey will join the staff of the Cape Playhouse in Dennis, Massachusetts. He acted in this company before, having played the part of Paris in their production of "Romeo and Juliet," which featured Edith Barrett and Elliot Cabot in the leading roles. He also played the leading juvenile role in "The Cape Cod Follies," the summer musical show of the Cape Playhouse.

FORMER MED STUDENTS RECEIVE APPOINTMENTS

The following are the appointments of former Carolina Med students who have been taking work at the Harvard University Medical school: Chrisman, A. S., U. S. Naval Hospital beginning July, 1930 and rotating for one year; Ferguson, C. L., U. S. Naval Hospital beginning July, 1930, rotating service for one year; Munro, B. S., Boston City Hospital, Boston, Mass. beginning March, 1931, surgery work.

U. OF P. STUDENTS STAGE RIOT ACT

Carolina Medical Graduates Among Three Hundred Arrested.

Police in Philadelphia had their hands full recently when riots of a serious nature broke out in the student body of the University of Pennsylvania. The annual riot resulted in the arrest and incarceration of more than three hundred students, among them graduates of the University of North Carolina medical school who are attending the University of Pennsylvania medical school now, and the arrest, imprisonment, and trial of the head of Philadelphia's law forces, Director of Public Safety Schofield.

The riot takes place annually now after the conclusion of the venerated Ivy Day services, and is usually the largest outbreak of the year at a school where rioting is a sort of a minor sport. Large quantities of eggs, tomatoes, and bottles—especially milk bottles—were saved for the purpose. At the customary pre-arranged cry of "rowbottom" thousands of students swarmed forth from dormitories and fraternity houses and siezed upon street cars, stripping the poles from the wires, attacking en masse any solitary "copper" who happened to appear, despoiling him of his uniform. Soon the riot squads arrived, riding their motorcycles gaucho like into the crowd, brandishing revolvers and lashing out with their nightsticks. As usual, the students retired to their "dorms" and "frats" and let loose their shower of ripe henfruit and glassware. This time, however, the police did not play fair, and instead of retiring and letting the crowds disperse gradually as has been the custom, Schofield's "Cossack cops" attacked the fraternity houses, insisting on blowing in the doors, allegedly even when students stood by offering to open the door with a key. Students were yanked off to police stations, barefooted and clad only in pajamas, there to languish the night through.

ENROLLMENT HAS REMAINED NORMAL

Great Decrease In Number Of Students Is Denied By Officials.

Contrary to a rumor that is prevalent on the campus to the effect that the student enrollment this quarter has dropped to about 1800, it was learned yesterday that the number of students has actually increased in comparison with the spring quarter last year.

The enrollment this quarter is 2,240 as compared with 2,228 this time last year. However, there has been a greater decrease this quarter than for the spring quarter last year. The difference between the enrollment for spring and winter quarters last year was 276. This year the difference is 383. Thus 107 more students dropped out of the University this spring than last. In a student body of over two thousand this difference should not be very noticeable.

Impressive Program Given Memorial Day

An address by Dr. William S. Bernard of the University faculty and songs and readings by the local school children featured the annual Memorial Day exercises of the Leonidas Polk chapter of the U.D.C. in the Methodist church Saturday.

The program given by the Chapel Hill school children was directed by Miss Helen Schell of the local high school faculty.

FRESHMAN Y. M. HEARS GEOLOGIST

"The keynote of the meeting of the freshman friendship council Monday was an address by Dr. J. H. Swartz of the geology department.

Dr. Swartz set out to show how science strengthens religion. He pointed out the fact that many students are afraid to let their knowledge of science and religion mix, keeping one in one side of the head and the other in the other side. He also stated that many students were warned by their parents before coming to college to watch out for science. This he said was because of a lack of knowledge of science.

"Evolution gives a creation with a plan," the speaker maintained. Then he pointed out the fact that all life followed a one-track railroad, those that are primitive getting off first and so on up the scale of development.

"Everything has a definite plan," was the statement that he based his proof upon. Then if everything has a definite plan, everything must have a cause, as nothing is left to chance. Then he said that the way to find out the cause of anything was to find the most fundamental thing connected with it.

The basis of atheism was discussed next. After showing why people become atheists because of a lack of the full knowledge of science and because they refused to believe certain things that they were told to believe, he pointed out that it was impossible for a person with a full knowledge of science to be an atheist.

Dr. Swartz concluded his speech by telling the students not to be afraid to mix their knowledge of science and religion but to let their knowledge of science strengthen their religion. He further stated that science was not the foe of religion but is the best proof of the immortality of the soul.

A vote taken on the motion of giving a banquet at the Methodist church on next Sunday night was carried unanimously. A hillside meeting of the outgoing and incoming officers was scheduled to take place in Kenan Memorial stadium next Sunday evening at 4 o'clock.

Wright accidentally spiked the Wild Cat third baseman, and as the visitors crowded up to aid the injured player, Longest and Jackson pulled a nifty double steal. Well all's fair in love and baseball.

Brown wasn't the only home run hitter yesterday. McInnes, Davidson's hurler, drove a long one to right center which was good for the circuit.

Whitehead made a neat pick-up in the eighth of a hard hit ball and his throw just beat Goodson to the bag.

Obie Davis made a pretty throw to Maus to nab Goodson who had attempted to score on Proctor's fly to left.

The varsity lost a good reserve catcher and a fine varsity prospect in the loss of Bob Kushner. Bob strained his kidney so severely in the first Wake Forest game that he was ordered to drop baseball for the year.

FUSSLER SEEKS DATA ON METEOR

All students who saw the great fire-ball which passed over North Carolina and Virginia about 9 o'clock on the night of May 3 are asked to see Dr. Karl H. Fussler of the physics department and give him such information as they may have obtained from seeing the meteor.

This request for information about the meteor is made in response to a letter received by the department from Charles P. Olivier, president of the American Meteor Society, who asks that all data that can be obtained be sent to the headquarters of the society at the University of Pennsylvania observatory at Upper Darby, Penn.

As president of the Meteor Society Mr. Olivier is gathering data on all such bodies which appear in this section of the country, so that their orbits and heights can be calculated. It is only through the cooperation of many persons that such data can be collected, and the students of the University who saw the recent meteor are asked to contribute their observations.

Dr. Fussler, who is collecting this data from the students, states that when all of the many observations have been studied the names of those contributing will be published in the report which will be issued.

Dr. Fussler has offices on the main floor of Phillips hall and will be glad to receive any descriptions which may be given. He is in his office during chapel period each day and in the general physics laboratory each afternoon.

FRENCH CRITIC REVIEWS "THE AMERICAN SCHOLAR"

Dr. Norman Foerster's latest book, "The American Scholar," which has drawn much comment among literary critics and students, has lately been criticised by that distinguished French scholar, Monsieur C. PLACEMENT TESTS TO BE CONTINUED

Identical Examination Will Be Required Of All New Students.

The freshman English department will continue its well-known placement tests during the coming year. The same method will be used in determining the amount of knowledge of English possessed by the new men.

The method perfected by the freshman English department of the University is considered by many as the most effective for correct placement of the incoming freshman class.

A list of sentences is given to the new men every year, containing errors in punctuation and other faults which the men are asked to remedy. Their placement depends on their ability to correct errors occurring in these papers.

Those who make the most errors are placed in the lowest sections, which teach the mechanics of writing. This part of the department is known as the 1a section. Raymond Adams, instructor, will be chairman of the group again next year.

Those who do well on the placement test and succeed in correcting the most mistakes are placed in a higher section known as English 1. Professor Thrall will continue as chairman of this section.

SAPP WINS ATHLETIC HONORS THROUGH LONG PERSEVERANCE

Law Student and Freshman Coach Received First Football Letter In Senior Year; Was Runner-Up In Southern Conference Boxing Tournament In 1929.

(By Hugh Wilson)

There is a man in the University law school now whose athletic career here is an outstanding model of perseverance in earnest hard work which should give heart to any discouraged would-be athlete. The man referred to is Odell Sapp, freshman boxing coach and assistant coach in freshman football and baseball. When Sapp entered the University as a freshman in the fall of 1924, he had had very little previous athletic experience, having played baseball only while in high school. Nevertheless, although he had never previously played any football, he determined to become a candidate for the freshman team, and accordingly went out for it. In his first year he did not meet with much success, failing to earn his numerals, but learned a good deal about the game. The next year he went out for varsity football and again met with little or no success, although he picked up some valuable information as to the fine points of the game. In the fall of 1926, still undaunted, he went out for football again, and although he showed the coaches that he was fast developing some ability, he again failed to make his letter. It was to be expected that he give up his long and fruitless attempt then, but the determination to make good on the gridiron was firmly imbedded in the Camel City boy's purpose, and he again became a candidate for varsity honors in the fall of 1927. It was in this year that Sapp finally reaped the rewards of his long and diligent campaign of perseverance, winning his varsity letter at the University. Sapp played in every game of the year, doing well in all, but starring especially against Wake Forest, State, Virginia and Georgia Tech.

In 1928 he came out for football again, of course, being eligible to play under the southern conference ruling that if one has not competed for three years in intercollegiate contests, one may compete in such contests during one's fifth year in attendance at the University or college at which he is a student. During this season Sapp was again a regular end, and turned in one of the finest performances of end play ever seen at the University. So versatile was his playing that many place him without doubt on their selections for the mythical "all-time" team of the University as the first ranking end. He became equally adept at blocking tacklers and snagging passes on the offense, and breaking up interference and making sensational tackles

GRAIL SOON TO AWARD TROPHIES

Much Speculation As To Probable Winners Of Medals And Plaques.

Much speculation is going on about the campus as to who will receive the medals and trophies awarded annually by the Order of the Grail. These awards are medals for excellency in scholarship during the past three quarters of the outstanding student on each of the athletic teams of the University and trophies for the freshman athlete who has the highest scholarship record, and for the student with the best record in intramural sports.

The winners of these awards will be announced at an early date as the Order of the Grail has been considering the possible candidates for the medals for some time. The Grail has not decided as to whether it will award medals or placques to the varsity athletes this year. In the past medals have been presented, but the idea of giving placques this year has been thoroughly considered and will in all probability be carried out.

The presenting of these medals and trophies is in keeping with the program of the Grail's work to promote better relations between the organizations on the campus, particularly the frat and non-frat groups.

Football players being given much consideration for the football medal are Henry House, fullback; Aubrey Parsley, end; and George Thompson, tackle. Burgess Whitehead, short stop; Henry House, outfielder; and Nap Lufty, third baseman, are among the members of the baseball team eligible for the award.

Hoke Webb, Noah Goodridge and Archie Allen have the best scholastic standings of the members of the boxing team and one of these men will probably receive the medal.

SAVILLE INSPECTS SHORES

Professor Thorndike Saville, of the school of engineering, spent several days over the past week-end in an inspection of the shore protective works of the Atlantic coast from Sandy Hook, N. J., to Indian River on the Delaware shore.

This trip was made to provide a semi-final report to the Board of Land Improvement and Beach Erosion of the U. S. Army.

BRIDGE ENGINEER DETAILS LATEST HUDSON PROJECT

Frank Skinner, Internationally Known Designer, Speaks On Bridge Construction.

Frank W. Skinner, one of the foremost consulting engineers in the country and a specialist on bridge construction, spoke before a group of engineering students, faculty members and other interested persons yesterday afternoon on the subject, "The New 3500-foot Hudson River Bridge."

As consulting engineer to one of the major organizations interested in the bridge, Mr. Skinner has been able to obtain much valuable and unique data as well as many interesting photographs of the construction of the bridge.

The first part of the talk by Mr. Skinner was concerned with a description of the New Hudson River bridge and an account of the difficulties encountered in erecting the four great cables of the bridge. The latter part of the talk was a comparison of the different types of long span bridges and a comparison of the Hudson River bridge with other ones of its type.

The speaker paid a definite tribute to the John A. Roebling Company when he stated that this organization had not only completed the cables in less time than required, but that it had further guaranteed the design of the bridge.

The two towers which support the cables on each shore rise 635 feet above the water level, and the dead weight of the concrete anchorage on the Manhattan side is more than 560 million pounds.

The steel in the wires used to build up the cables is of the best quality obtainable, the required ultimate strength of this material being 220,000 pounds per square inch.

To finish the cables in the required time a new type of apparatus to spin the cables had to be developed. This apparatus when completed enabled the cables to be erected four times as fast as any previously used.

A lighting system costing over $60,000 was installed on the bridge to allow night work. Over a million and a half dollars were spent by the contractor in building a ground plant alone. This did not include the equipment to be used in the actual spinning of the cables.

An entirely new system of joining the wires within the cables was developed for this bridge. In this method the metal in a joining tube is compressed under hydraulic pressure until the tube flows around the wires, and the resulting splice is stronger than the wire itself.

In comparing the different types of bridges used for long spans, Mr. Skinner discussed the advantages of the arch, the cantilever, and the suspension bridge, and described the erection methods used in building each.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

For example, the tiny ant, a creature of great industry, drags with its mouth whatever it can, and adds it to the heap which she is piling up, not unaware nor careless of the future.—Horace.

The Southern Collection

Claude Bowers, in his article in the Raleigh News and Observer on the plan for establishing an historical collection center in the University, strikes a note which is unfortunate but true when he says that the south has neglected to preserve its past documents and records. While other sections of the country, notably New England, have realized the value of preserving such material, the south, although its past history is as illustrious—if not more so—as that of any other section, has lagged far behind.

We would like to know the cause of this situation. It is difficult to understand why any people with the historical background which the south possesses should not desire to perpetuate its past record. Certainly we are realizing at the present time the importance of preserving both past and contemporary records, but it must be disheartening to the collectors of this material that the southern people themselves might not be interested in this work. Perhaps they are; nevertheless, the collectors find it difficult to locate certain important materials, although they feel sure that many of these valuable documents are in existence. It is a source of regret that persons in possession of this material do not turn it over to those who are trying to knit southern history into a unified whole.

The outlook for southern history looks brighter with the advent of the University into the field. What has always been needed is a center for a southern collection, and now that the University of North Carolina has taken the step to create a center, vigorously engaged in the work, the collecting of historical materials will, we hope, gain new impetus.—B. M.

A Few Misplaced Bricks

The greatest eye-sore of Carolina is that portion of the campus which lies directly back of the old Memorial hall site. For the past several years this has been the dumping ground of all the various departments of the University, with the possible exception of the laundry.

Some of the University officials might argue that such a site must be maintained for the use of the power plant. The student body and the Daily Tar Heel fully understand the position of the power plant. This institution must be on the campus to serve it efficiently, but why in the name of the University itself does it tolerate the use of this part of the campus by all of the various other departments.

Only last fall a visitor to the University wanted to know what project was under construction, after having seen all of the materials and equipment collected at this particular place. As no work was being done on the campus the man was told, much to the embarrassment of his host, that this was merely a part of the University.

Certainly the University should take some steps to eradicate this disgraceful sight from the campus. If not, then the class of 1931 need not worry, for here they will find a needful but not an appropriate place to do the University a service that will not be gorgotten for years to come—H. M. L.

By Moore Bryson

Apparently "we" is the correct pronoun for a columnist to use when referring to himself. However, "we" have decided to discard this form and be both unconventional and egotistical by using the pronoun "I." I sincerely hope that this effort to give the column a personal touch will not displease the editor nor any of my numerous readers and admirers.

One of the wits of the campus told a newcomer that the "Battle of Chapel Hill" was fought on the University commons during the Civil War. Furthermore, the listener was told that if he desired proof, he could see for himself the bullet marks on the Confederate monument. Being of an inquisitive nature, the boy started over to examine it and was half way there before he realized the falaciousness of the story.

Slap my wrists! The Betas are having Sunday afternoon teas. Knowing the Betas' reputation for political strategy and knowing too the proximity of examinations, I was not at all surprised to find that the majority of those in attendance were professors. Seriously, I do think that any functions which will bring the student body and the faculty in to closer contact are to be encouraged.

There is a vital need for an adequate swimming pool in Chapel Hill. Even the early season crowd almost fills the little Sparrow's pool to overflowing. Swimming is one sport that may be enjoyed by every one and wise ones will tell us that it is one of the most healthful of all exercises. For one who has the money to invest, a pool should prove a paying proposition; or better still, a gift of a beautiful pool by a kind alumnus would endear him in the hearts of the students forever. It is quite apparent that the legislature has no intention of wasting the tax-payers' money on such unnecessary foolishness in the near future.

Henry Anderson took his date to the stadium last Sunday night. Cautious Henry also took a clock along with the alarm set for ten-fifteen. I've always thought that an alarm clock was supposed to be used to awaken one who was asleep. Henry, was that complimentary to the young lady?

REPORT MADE BY ST. MARYS GROUP

Dean Walker Made Chairman Of Committee.

Dean N. W. Walker, of the school of education of the University, was made chairman of the committee which met last week at St. Mary's to investigate the possibility of that school becoming a four year college. The two other members on the committee are Dr. B. F. Finney, vice-chancelor of the University of the South at Sewanee, and Dr. Frazer Hood of Davidson College.

Several times before making St. Mary's School a four-year college has been considered, but nothing was done. At the meeting of the present committee with the board of trustees at St. Mary's on May 8th and 9th, the requirements for the school to rate with other colleges and universities of higher standards, and on the running basis of four years were discussed.

Of the several problems facing the school before it can become of the four-year type with the A rating the financial one is the greatest. The endowment must be built up, the college plant enlarged, and the salaries increased, according to Dean Walker.

As chairman of the committee Dean Walker is making a report on the findings of the committee which he will send to Dr. Finney and to Dr. Hood. The final report will go to Bishop Edwin Penick of Charlotte, who appointed the committee and through whom the decision will come.

SWAIN SUMMER WAITERS NAMED

Seventy-Three Men On List To Serve First Summer Session.

J. O. Harmon, director of Swain hall, announces today the selection of workers for Swain hall during the first session of summer school. In addition to these, a group of twenty-five alternates is announced.

Students' Trunks Handled Through Dormitory Stores

According to an anouncement received at the Tar Heel office yesterday, trunks are to be handled by the Student Transfer through the dormitory stores at the end of this quarter.

It is the plan so far that a transfer be run to Greensboro carrying all trunks going in that direction, and a second transfer by way of Raleigh, Lillington, Fayetteville, Lumberton, Hamlet, and Sanford. Besides these transfers the usual local hauling to Chapel Hill station and to Durham will also be continued.

Towards the latter part of the quarter, a booth will be placed in the Y for all those students wishing to secure tickets. Arrangements should also be made with the dormitory manager as soon as possible so as to avoid the rush at the end of the year.

This plan has been sanctioned by the U. C. S. P.

Strong Squad Of 23 Men Goes To Birmingham For Conference Track Meet

WELL BALANCED ARRAY TO FACE SOUTHERN STARS

Farmer and Barkley Best Bets For Points Against Classy Field of Dixie Cinder Artists; Injuries Keep Neiman and Nims Out.

One of the strongest and best-balanced track teams ever to carry the Blue and White will leave tonight to represent the University at the classic Southern Conference meet in Birmingham tomorrow and Saturday.

The great legion of distance stars that were Carolina's in another day are gone, but in its place is a well-rounded, well-balanced team that is fairly strong in every event.

The Carolina coaches and team don't think half so much of their victory chances as certain of the prognosticators, for the Dixie field looks tougher this year than ever before, but the fact remains that the Tar Heels have a list of 23 men who may be expected to give the field a battle royal at the conference meet.

In the dashes there is Charlie Farmer, sensational sophomore, who has scored 10 points in every meet, tied both southern dash records, and beaten such stars as Hamm, Sandifer and Hand.

In he quarter the Tar Heels will be without the services of the injured Captain Nims but will have two good men in Lionel Weil and Ken Gay, both of whom can do between 50 and 51 seconds.

Minor Barkley, former cross country captain, takes ample care of the half mile and mile. The senior star has done as low as 1:56.5 on the half and 4:21.4 on the mile in the same afternoon, and is rugged as well as speedy.

Cliff Baucom is a strong contender in the two-mile. In Saturday's Princeton meet, Baucom, after tripping and falling on the last curve, came within three seconds of the southern record.

Perry has done as low as 15.6 in the high hurdles and Slusser has broken 25 seconds in the low hurdles, but Perry is not in the best of shape now.

Brodie Arnold, a junior and a newcomer in the legion of stars, has gone as high as 13 feet in competition in the pole vault, and is, in fact, the only southern vaulter who has soared so high this year.

Theron Brown, a sophomore, although averaging but 130 feet on the discus in competion, has bettered the southern mark of 136 feet 6¼ inches in practice throws, and, as the saying goes, "it only takes one good throw to do it."

George Bagby, a junior, has cleared the high jump bar at as high as 6 feet ¾ inch, just one inch below the southern mark.

There are many more "dark horses." All or none may come through, for the conference field looks tougher this year than ever before. But the fact remains that the Tar Heels have any number of potential record-breakers on whom much of the attention at the conference meet will center.

In 1890 the trustees of the University, upon the request of the faculty decreed that there should be no more intercollegiate football games.

Track Men Leave

The following men left yesterday evening for the Southern Conference track meet to be held at Birmingham Friday and Saturday: Adkins, Arnold, Bagby, Barkley, Baucom, Brown Dameron, Dry, Farmer, Garrett, Gay, Hamer, Horney, Johnson, Lowry, Perry, Phoenix, Reid, Ruble, Slusser, Smith, Stafford, Weil, R. A. Fetzer, Coach, and J. J. Alexander, Manager.

WARREN TO MEET LEAGUE IN NEXT COMEBACK FIGHT

Bout With Old Pugilistic Jinx Will Mark Turning Point In Career of Former Carolina Boxing Star.

Ad Warren, former knockout of the University's ring squad, is in Asheville at present, undergoing a vigorous training siege in preparation for his bout with Jack League, his old pugilistic jinx, which will be staged in Asheville Friday night.

This fight is perhaps the turning point of Ad's "comeback" campaign, in which he has been busily engaged all this winter and spring. So far the going has been uphill, the bouts offered him not being especially remunerative. If Ad gets by this fight with a victory, he can look ahead to better fights and bigger purses in the future; if he drops the decision it will be a long time before he will get "in the money" again. The fight is one of especial interest not only because of its critical bearing on the former Tar Heel's ring future, but also because it was this same Texan, Jack League, who gave Ad his initial push on the downgrade almost two years ago in a bout held in Asheville. In that bout Ad was leading on points and striving for a knockout. League, a seasoned fighter knowing every trick of the ring game, was striving just as hard to prevent such an outcome, blocking as best he could the ex-collegian's terrific hooks. In so doing, he blocked one of the punches with his elbow, striking Ad on the forearm and breaking it badly. Ad, not wishing to give up and have a technical knockout registered against him, kept up his futile struggle for three rounds, although he was able to use but one arm. In spite of his grit, he was forced to quit when the injury caused him too much pain. In his first fight after the injury healed, Ad again broke the bone, and again had to undergo a long layoff. As a result of his forced inactivity, when he returned to the ring he met with reverses, which he is trying to wipe out in his campaign now.

Ad has been competing in a series of fights lately in order to get himself into shape to gain revenge on League and erase that technical K.O. stain by putting the veteran Texan to sleep in short order. Among the men whom he has whipped recently are "Big Boy" Roper, Indianapolis, Ind., giant whom he knocked out in two rounds in Wilmington, K.O. Walt Sells, New York scrapper whom he knocked out in nine rounds in Greensboro Friday night, and "Big Sid" Terris, himself a former Carolina student, over whom Ad won a ten-round decision in Wilson on March 20.

CAROLINA IN TIE WITH DUKE FOR BIG FIVE LEAD

Five-Game Winning Streak, Including Three "Big Five" Victories, Brings Tar Heels To Front In Title Series.

After a five-game winning streak for the slugging University Tar Heels, the "Big Five" titular race has taken on a very complicated aspect, with wide interest centering on the Carolina-Duke battle in Durham Saturday afternoon.

The ancient rivals clash on Hanes field Saturday afternon. "Lefty" Jenkins, Duke ace, is practically certain to be on the mound for Duke, and the Tar Heels will probably send up their newly-discovered ace, Paul Edwards. With both teams having dropped two games to four won, and the Big Five title probably to hang in the balance, prospects are for a hot afternoon's baseball.

Early season losses to Wake Forest and Duke, overbalancing a lone win from Davidson, all but eliminated Carolina from the titular picture. The potentially powerful Tar Heels hit their stride last week. They took the Virginia series, and beat State, Wake Forest and Davidson in a row. Davidson meanwhile had pulled the unexpected and taken Duke for a fall, and now Carolina and Duke stand once more on even terms—each with four games won, two lost, and two to go.

The Dukemen play Davidson again Thursday, and if Doc Kugler can put the shutout "hoodo" on the Devils again, things will look brighter for the Tar Heels. If he doesn't, a Duke victory over Carolina Saturday would practically assure Duke the title, so that Carolina would be the only team with a chance to stop the Durhamites.

Besides the Duke game Saturday, the Tar Heels are also to meet State here Tuesday in their final game. Victories are practically essential in both games for a title, and the Tar Heels will be fighting toward that end. The team is in good shape and looked great, slugging viciously, hitting in the pinches and playing heads-up ball aways, while beating Davidson Tuesday, 8-3.

Four Teams To Battle For Baseball Honors

The intramural baseball season will be brought to a close this week with Carr and New Dorms playing today for the dormitory championship and Lambda Chi Alpha taking on S. A. E. Friday.

All these teams have gone through the season without a single loss.

Carr's batteries will be Brown and Strunsinski while New Dorms will work Moore and Williamson. New Dorms is favored to repeat last year's performance. Boasting such hitters as Hardin and Fysal, they have batted their way to the top.

In the fraternity league Lambda Chi Alpha will use Bullock in the box. S. A. E. has not announced its battery for Friday.

Frosh Meet W. F. Today

The Carolina freshman baseball team will play Wake Forest frosh today at Emerson stadium at 3:30 o'clock. This is the last game for the frosh. The batteries for Carolina will probably be Griffith and Peacock.

During the decade 1880-1890 one form of hazing was to thoroughly blacken a freshman with a good rubbing of lampblack.

Monroe A. & M. Eliminated

Monroe A. & M., winners in 1928 of the Southern Preparatory school track and field championships, were definitely eliminated as a contender for the championship this year when a telegram was received from the school authorities which stated that due to a widespread epidemic of mumps which had broken out among members of the track team the school would be represented by only one man, who was entered in the discus and shot put.

HAMLET-SHELBY MEET HERE FOR BASEBALL TITLE

Game To Be Played On Emerson Field Friday At 3 P. M.

The state class B high school baseball championship will be decided between Hamlet high school, eastern champions, and Shelby high school, western champions, on Emerson field here at 3 p. m. on Friday. Indications point to a closely contested game when the teams meet in the final encounter Friday afternoon. In the past both high schools have been outstanding contenders for first honors. Hamlet high school has advanced each year to a high position but has never held the eastern title. Shelby won the state high school baseball championship in 1924, 1925 and 1929.

In its opening game in the eastern championship series Hamlet defeated Rowland at Hamlet. Laurinburg was its next victim at McColl, S. C. In the games between the eastern district champions, Hamlet defeated Wilton 9 to 7 and then and then played a thirteen-inning 1-1 game with Morehead City, victors over West Edgecombe, at Hamlet. Following this tie game, Hamlet and Morehead City played at McColl, S. C., on May 13, Hamlet winning by a score of 9 to 5 and thereby becoming eastern champions.

Shelby defeated Belwood in the opening game of the western championship series 12 to 2 at Shelby. In its next championship game, Shelby defeated Mt. Holly at Shelby by a score of 9 to 3 and became champions of the fourth district in the western championship series.

PREP TRACK MEET PRINCIPAL EVENT IN LOCAL SPORTS

Seven Military Schools and Two Others Have Entered Applications For Annual Contest.

Nine preparatory schools, representing almost every district of the central south, have sent in entry blanks for the fourth annual southern preparatory school track and field meet, with a possibility of more coming in before the meet begins Saturday afternoon. The majority of the entries were from military schools, seven of the nine teams entered being from institutions of such type. The schools entered are: Greenbriar Military Academy of Greenbriar, W. Va.; Augusta Military Academy of Fort Defiance, Va.; Georgia Military Academy of College Park, Georgia; Danville Military Institute of Danville, Va; Blackstone Military Academy of Blackstone, Va.; Hargraves Military School of Chatham, Va.; Monroe A. & M. of Monroe, Ga; Asheville School for Boys of Asheville, N. C.; and Staunton Military Academy of Staunton, Va.

Winners of this meet for the past three years have been the Asheville School for Boys in 1927, Monroe A. & M. in 1928, and Woodberry Forest in 1929. The first two of the former winners will compete again this year, but Woodberry Forest will be unable to enter the meet, due to a conflict in schedule.

It is interesting to note that several Carolina men share in the holding of the records for this prep school meet. In 1928 Rip Slusser, Tar Heel football and track star, running under the colors of Augusta Military Academy, tied the existing record of 10.2 seconds, held by Scott of Hargrave.

Last year the record was tied again by Stokes of Woodberry Forest. Three of this year's Carolina freshman track team, competing for the McCallie school, helped to set up a new record for the mile relay, covering the distance in 3:30. The Tar Babies who helped set up that record were Drane, frosh sprinter; Brock, quarter miler; and Watkins, quarter and half miler.

The meet will be held on Emerson field Saturday afternoon, and will begin promptly at 2.

TAR HEELS LOSE TO DUKE GOLFERS

Win Foursome Matches 5-1 After Dropping Twosomes 3 1-2 to 5 1-2.

Tuesday afternoon the Blue Devil golf team nosed out the Tar Heels 9½ to 8½ in a close and exciting match at the Hillandale Country Club, Durham. The twosomes were played last Thursday, eventing in an almost insurmountable lead for Duke who had tallied 8½ points to Carolina's 3½. But the Tar Heels came back strong Tuesday afternoon in the foursome matches, winning five out of a possible six points, only to be beaten out by a solitary point.

Charlie Chatham lost 3 points to Jennings, Meade Willis lost 2½ points to Randell, Adams lost 3 points to Taggert, and Luther Steward, Carolina's only winner in the twosome matches, took over Buie for 3 points. With an obviously much better showing in the foursome matches, Chatham and Willis cut down Jennings and Randell for three points and Steward and Adams, following up their teammates' example, appropriated 2 points from Buie and Taggert, lacking a single point of accomplishing their eagerly sought-after victory.

Carolina showed a complete reversal of form, since earlier in the season the Tar Heels had beaten the Blue Devils in a dual match by the crushing score of 14½ to 3½. Incidentally, Carolina overwhelmed Duke, its closest competitor in the state intercollegiate golf tourney at Sedgefield, by 22 points.

The height winning the running high jump in a gymnastic contest in '86 was 4 ft. 4 in.

FLORENTINES REVIVE MEMORY OF SPORTING EVENT WITH PAGEANT

Re-enact In Colorful Costumes Famous Football Game Of 1530; Event, Resembling Rugby, Said by 16th Century Contemporary To Be "Noble Game."

About ten days ago in Florence, Italy, a football game was played just as it was played in that city exactly 400 years ago. This game in 1530 was one of the memorable sporting events of history, for while the young men kicked their ball about in one of the plazas, the guns of the besieging papal and imperial armies thundered outside.

The game in the sixteenth century was played principally, it appears, to show the contempt of the Florentines for the besieging armies of both the church and the state.

The game last week, which was an exact reproduction of that 400 years ago, was far different from that played in America. It was a veritable pageant: the costumes were copies of those in Florentine museums, and the game was preceded by a procession which started at one of the other plazas and wound its way through the oldest streets of the city to the place of the game.

The game, begun with a ruffle of drums and a flourish of trumpets, resembled rugby much more than the modern American game. Twenty-seven players in green costumes represented one side of the river and a like number in white represented the other.

At each score a cannon was fired, and the teams changed sides, the victors with their banner flying and the losers with theirs furled. After the 60 minutes of play, the victory of the green team was announced by another roll of drums and flourish of trumpets.

The sixteenth century Florentines appear to have been passionately fond of football. Three popes of Florentine origin are reputed to have been highly proficient at the game in their youth.

One of the contemporaries of the sixteenth century game describes it as "a noble and courtly game not meet for the populace or servants, but rather for honorable soldiers, gentlemen, lords and princes."

UNIVERSITY PRESS ISSUES VALUABLE BOOK ABOUT N. C.

Volume By S. H. Hobbs, Jr., Is First Of Its Kind.

The University Press has announced a new book entitled North Carolina: Economic and Social to be released on May 25. This volume by S. H. Hobbs, Jr., of the rural social economics department of the University, is the first of its kind to be published in the United States, and it is thought that it will serve as a model for future volumes on other states. The book contains around 400 pages which include many valuable maps and up-to-date tables.

The author has presented North Carolina in its true light, and has given an unbiased and factual analysis of the state, based on 15 years of intensive research. His findings are amply substantiated by official and properly organized data. This volume is indispensible to those who need to know the facts about this state, and it will serve for many years as a ready reference in home-state affairs.

The Press believes that this book should find its way into every public library in the state, into every school library, into every newspaper office, into the hands of all the teachers whose subjects touch upon home-state affairs, and into the hands of everyone interested in state economic and social affairs. The book will be found valuable as a reference for high school teachers of history, civics, economics and geography.

SETS PACE FOR FARMER

Heath Whittle, Davidson track captain, goes Charlie Farmer one better in point scoring. In seven participations this spring he has scored a total of 90 points, an average of 12 6-7 points.

For the four dual meets Davidson has staged he scored 69 points, an average of 17 1-4 points a meet. He obtained three points in the West Virginia indoor meet, eight in the Georgia Tech relays, and 10 in the state meet. His highest score was 20 points, winning four first places against Wake Forest. He did not make below 15 points in any dual meet this season.

Whittle's specialty was the high and low hurdles.

TO USE AIRPLANE IN RIDDING TOWN OF INSECT PESTS

E. W. Consable, state chemical biologist, has recently been in Chapel Hill conferring with Dr. S. A. Nathan, county doctor about spraying the Bolen creek section against mosquitoes. The two men, after making a close survey of the creek, have found that the work may be done very scientifically with the use of airplane.

A survey had been made of the Bolen creek section last summer, but no definite arrangements were made until recently. Dr. Nathan states that this work will be begun about June 1.

It may be of interest to the students, especially those in the school of engineering, to know that this work will be somewhat of an experiment, and if it proves successful will be continued on a commercial basis, which will enable students to secure jobs in this field.

Mr. Charles Martindale, owner of the local airport, and his chief pilot, Mr. Hinklin, have agreed to do this work for the actual cost of gas and oil. This offer will enable the interested parties to carry on the experiment very cheaply.

Dr. Nathan has been working on a formula for some time and has found a mixture of paris-green and soapstone a very deadly poison for insects and thinks this mixture will clean up the mosquitoes in the Bolen creek section if applied efficiently.

Sapp Wins Honors By Long Perseverance

on the defense. He played in every game that season, starring especially in the games with Wake Forest and Maryland.

Sapp had never boxed any in high school, nor had he boxed at the University prior to the winter of 1928. Before that time he had been too wrapped up in football to pay any attention whatsoever to boxing. Football in the fall season always precluded his going out for fall boxing, and winter football practice prevented him from boxing during the regular ring season. However, after winning his football letter in the fall of 1927, he felt freer to try his hand at some other sport and went out for boxing during the latter half of the pugilistic season.

Here he met with no series of reverses as he had in football. His long hours of work in scrimmage and setting up exercises had strengthened his frame and worked him into condition. He made the team, and although he lost several dual meet bouts, fighting in the light heavyweight division of the Southern Conference tournament at Charlottesville, he won his way through to the semi-final round, but there met defeat at the hands of Hooks of Georgia, who had previously defeated him in a dual meet.

In the winter of 1929, Sapp was too much occupied by the difficulty of his studies in the law school to come out for boxing throughout the season, but when he was needed for the tournament he returned, and with but one week's practice entered the tournament. He met with success on every hand, defeating several good men to gain the final round. However, his lack of advance training told against him and he was defeated in the finals by Pattie of Virginia Polytechnic Institute in a close bout. However, he took second place, giving Carolina 2½ points and materially aiding in bringing the championship to Carolina.

Sapp, as has been hitherto mentioned, played baseball at Winston-Salem—as a catcher. In his freshman year here he won his freshman numeral, performing creditably—as an outfielder! His baseball career was cut short the next winter, however, when he tore the ligaments of his throwing arm in winter football practice.

Sapp's athletic career came to an untimely end last Friday when he broke his arm while training for his first professional fight, scheduled to be fought against Dewey Kimrey in Charlotte on May 19.

Whatever the early part of his athletic career may have lacked in brilliance, Sapp certainly made up for with persevering labor. His example stands out like a light in darkness among the hundreds of high school athletes who come to college, grow dissatisfied when they do not become stars or make letters overnight, and quit trying.

Russ Bolin and his Cotton Pickers, who will render the music for all the remainder of the dances this week-end, will also play for this dance.

Henry House, Herb Nelson and Jack Lindley will lead this dance, while the committee in charge will be composed of Artie Marpet, chairman, Will Yarborough, Tom Craig, Mayne Albright and Pat Patterson.

It is the plan of the dance committee that all students other than juniors who bring dates to the dance will be admitted free of charge. Stags, however, from any of these other classes will not be admitted.

Immediately following the juniors' dance, there will be a dance staged by the seniors from 9 to 1 in the gym. This dance, which is the first one given by this class this year, is to be a formal affair. Leaders for the senior dance will be Red Greene, Julian Fenner and Bob Merritt.

Other dances over the week-end will be a tea dance given by the Sigma Zeta local fraternity at the Carolina Inn on Saturday afternoon from 6 to 9. Following the fraternity dance, the last Order of the Grail dance is to be staged in Bynum gymnasium from 9 to 12. The regular admission fees are to be charged at this dance. Music is to be furnished by Russ Bolin and his Cotton Pickers.

Band To Give Second Benefit Show Sunday

There will be a benefit show at the Carolina Theatre Sunday afternoon for the University band. The program will begin at 2:30 o'clock, when the band will play a forty-five minute program. This will be followed with a picture, the title of which will be announced later in the Daily Tar Heel.

About a month ago the Carolina Theatre consented to put on a benefit show for the band. This performance was necessitated because the band needed financial support. About nine hundred people, mostly students, were present at this show, and the offering amounted to about $65. As this amount has not covered the need of this organization, it has been found necessary to ask the aid of the students and townspeople.

The band has given many concerts over the state during the year, and the expenses have been so great that additional help is needed from the outside.

LOCAL COUNTRY CLUB TO GIVE BARBECUE SUPPER

A barbecue supper will be given at the Country Club tomorrow evening at 6:30, immediately following the non-handicap tournament that is to be staged. The winner of the tournament will be presented with a cup at this occasion.

The Community Singers, presented by H. S. Dyer, will feature the program. Mrs. T. J. Wilson, Jr., is in charge of the supper.

ALPHA PSI DELTA HOLDS INITIATION

Meeting Held Wednesday In New West; 28 Members Attend.

The annual spring initiation of the Gamma chapter of Alpha Psi Delta, national psychological fraternity, was held Wednesday evening, May 14, in New West. The meeting was well attended, 28 members being present. The following were initiated: Mrs. L. M. Brooks, Dr. J. M. Valentine, G. A. Metz and J. W. Eaton.

The present officers of the local chapter are G. B. Dimmick, president; R. E. Hamill, vice-president; and H. N. DeWick, secretary-treasurer.

On the program for the evening was a talk by Dr. H. W. Crane, who has just returned from the meeting of the international congress on mental hygiene held in Washington, D. C. Dr. Crane spoke on impressions which he received at the convention.

After discussing the general nature of the congress, Dr. Crane brought out the fact that the leaders of the mental hygiene movement are psychiatrists who pay little, if any, attention to the vast amount of psychological data which should be of great value to them in this field. He noted that 123 of the formal papers presented at the Congress were delivered by medical men, while only 12 were presented by psychologists.

In a paper on "The Objective Character of Legal 'Intent'" Dr. J. F. Dashiell, the second speaker on the program, brought out that in court cases where the "intention" of the accused must be established, the subjective aspect of the problem must be neglected since only the accused can introspect.

Following the initiation and program a banquet was served by a committee composed of H. N. DeWick, R. E. Hamill, and H. W. Crane. The tables and room were decorated in purple and gray, the fraternity colors.

Dinner At Inn

Hugh Stafford, assistant circulation director of the Pictorial Review Publishing Company, will entertain 30 guests at dinner at the Carolina Inn tonight.

GRAHAM SPEAKS AT INITIATION OF PHI BETA KAPPA

Compares Past and Present Attitudes Of Scholarship; 39 Candidates Received.

The annual initiation of the Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, was held last night in the Episcopal parish house. Preceding the private ceremony, Professor Frank Graham of the history department gave an inspiring address in Gerrard hall to the members-elect and to the general public.

Gordon Gray, president of the organization, spoke briefly on the founding and purposes of Phi Beta Kappa. He then introduced Professor Graham, who opened his address by comparing the present attitude of scholarship with that of the old. "What is the value of scholarship?" asked Mr. Graham. "President Lowell of Harvard answered this by saying that practically all the people listed in Who's Who in America were noted for scholarship. The Presidents of the Bell Telephone Company and the General Electric Company found scholarship and a successful business career had a close correlation.

"The old tendency was to be ashamed to study, but that day has now passed. Scholarship goes hand in hand with other activities. Former graduates of the University who have achieved great distinction in later life came to college with the earnest attempt to study, and carefully regulated their time so as to achieve this end. Consistency in mastering one's studies usually reaps reward in our later careers. The buildings on this campus are primarily here for the attainment of scholarship.

"The main purpose of scholarship is not for personal glory but to give one a chance to give back to the world what he has drawn from it. There is a challenge to the men of Phi Beta Kappa to be the leaders of scholarship in the south, and the defenders of tolerance and independence."

Immediately following the address, Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., University registrar, read out a list of the new initiates in the order of their scholastic attainments, the candidates coming forward.

After the private initiation at the parish house, refreshments were served for the old and new members.

The following were initiated: Marion Romaine Alexander, Asheville; Thomas Hays Barker, Jr., Leakesville; Sterling Archie Barrett, Fayetteville; Clay Covington Bell, Rockingham; Robert Foster Dewey, Chicago, Ill.; Thomas Basil Douglas, High Point; William Dunn, Jr., New Bern; William Clyde Dunn, Kinston; Joseph Colin Eagles, Wilson; Sara Gilmore Falkener, Chapel Hill; Cleo Wade Goldston, Goldston; John Cameron Grainger, Wilmington; June Uriah Gunter, Jr., Sanford; Charles Patton Hayes, Asheville; Matthew George Henry, Chapel Hill; Frank Allen Jones, Cofield; Wallace Hamilton Kuralt, Springfield, Mass.; John Van Lindley, Greensboro; James Millard Little, Jr., Winston-Salem; Lawrence Fourshee London, Pittsboro;

HIGHS CLASH IN DIAMOND FINALS

Shelby Represents Western Division For Fourth Time While Hamlet Makes Initial Bid For State Title.

Shelby and Hamlet high schools clash on Emerson field here this afternoon at 3 o'clock for the 1930 high school championship of the state.

Shelby won its fourth western championship and the right to play in the finals by defeating Mount Airy 5-3. Hamlet triumphed over Morehead City 9-5 on Tuesday after Monday's game between the two teams had run 13 innings to a 1-1 tie.

The western and eastern champions to clash for the title this year are regarded as two of the strongest teams ever to come through the field and to the finals, and prospects are for a great contest that will be witnessed by a record crowd, including large delegations from both Hamlet and Shelby.

Shelby has won the title three times before, in 1924, 1925 and 1929, and has never come to the finals without taking the championship cup back to the west. Hamlet has been a strong contender for several seasons but has never reached the finals before.

ACTIVITIES MEN TO DECIDE FATE DAILY TAR HEEL

Committee Will Meet Tuesday At Banquet; Invitations To Be Mailed Persons Expected.

The student activities committee is to hold its first meeting in more than a year at a banquet to be served at the Carolina Inn next Tuesday at 6:30 o'clock.

The principal question to be discussed is the advisability and method of continuing the Daily Tar Heel. Any other propitious matters may be brought before the group.

The student activities committee has not met since January 20, 1929. At that time the question as to whether the student paper should become a daily was discussed. The committee drew up four plans to combine the Tar Heel and the Magazine and submitted them to the student body which endorsed the plan by an overwhelming majority.

The meeting Tuesday will be the first over which "Red" Greene will preside. The committee is of a flexible nature, its members being determined by the president of the student body. The current editors of the various publications, the student government officials, deans of the various colleges in the University, and other prominent campus officials are eligible to serve on the committee. "Red" Greene will send out invitations today.

Room Notice

Rooms for the fall quarter are open for reservations for the students now occupying the rooms. If you expect to live in the same room this fall, it is required that you make a $5.00 deposit by May 31. After that date all rooms on which no deposit has been made will be assigned to other applicants.

All applications will be filed in the order in which they are received, and will be assigned in the same manner on June 1. A $5.00 deposit must be made with each application.

TWO MEN REACH QUARTER FINALS IN NET TOURNEY

Hendlin and Liskin Come Through Second Round of Conference Tournament; Merritt And Graham Eliminated.

Two Carolina tennis stars, holders of the N. C. intercollegiate singles and doubles titles, came through the first and second rounds of the Southern Conference tennis tourney Wednesday at New Orleans.

Hinky Hendlin, state singles champ, seeded number 6 in the tournament, had little trouble in disposing of Willard McGinness, Florida, 6-3, 6-2, and Robert Hare, Sewanee, 6-1, 6-1. Yesterday Hendlin met one of the strongest contenders for the singles title, Donald Cram of Vanderbilt. Cram is seeded number 2 in the tourney, next to Clifford Sutter, Tulane's defending champion.

Phil Liskin, co-holder with Hendlin of the North Carolina doubles title, won from William Schwartz of Vandy in default in the first round, and took in C. L. Williamson of Georgia Tech in three hard-fought sets, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. He met Bayon, Tulane, seeded number 3 in the quarter finals yesterday.

Liskin and Hendlin were to meet Boykin and Brandon, Georgia, in the quarter finals of the doubles yesterday afternoon. Reports of the results of these matches had not been received when the Tar Heel went to press.

Captain Bill Merritt was eliminated in the second round of play by Teddy Burwell, Sewanee, 6-3, 6-3. Burwell defeated Hendlin in a scheduled match on the indoor court at Sewanee last week. E. K. (Sonny) Graham was put out of the running in the second round by Donald Cram of Vandy.

Lorado Taft To Speak On Art Here Next Week

THREE LECTURES

Noted Character To Discuss Ancient and Contemporary Art.

HAS INTERESTING CAREER

Known As An Entertaining And Educative Lecturer; Talks To Be Illustrated.

Lorado Taft, noted sculptor, artist and author, will appear in the Methodist church three evenings next week, delivering a series of lectures on ancient and contemporary art. On Monday, May 19, he will choose for his subject "Classic Art." Tuesday it will be "Sculpture of the Renaissance." And as his final topic on Wednesday, he will talk on "Modern Cculpture."

Mr. Taft holds a high position in American and European art circles. For 35 years he has been connected with the Art Institute of Chicago. At the University of Chicago he has attained the honorary title of professor lecturer on the history of art. Also, he is a non-resident professor at the University of Illinois.

Prominent in all forms of artistic activity, he is a member of the National Academy of design, of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and honorary member of the American Institute of Architects, and is one of the board of art advisors for the state of Illinois. Twice he has won national art awards, once at the Buffalo Exposition in 1901, and again at the St. Louis Exposition in 1904.

Born in the little midwestern town of Elmwood, Ill., in 1860, he began to display his artistic tendency at an early age by writing short stories and illustrating them himself. His desire to be a sculptor was first born in him at the age of 13, when he was permitted to assist a Belgian sculptor repair a set of damaged casts at the University of Illinois, of which institution he was later a graduate. Fascinated by the process of fitting the pieces together like a jig-saw puzzle, he determined to try his skill at modeling in clay. For this hobby he developed a great amount of enthusiasm and continued it throughout his college career.

After graduating from the regular curriculum at the University, the young artist decided to continue his study at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris, where he enrolled as an independent student for five years. Returning to America, he opened up a studio in Chicago in 1886; there he has remained up to the present time.

The Good Old Bathtub

With modern day advertising the bathtub is threatened with becoming obsolete. Of course there are those who cling to their Saturday night baths, but bathing is without doubt a popular custom now.

It is a far cry from the days when ladies and knights were sewed or perhaps soldered into their clothes and when it was considered unhealthy to bathe often. Legend has it that bathing was not a popular practice at that time. Perhaps the servants didn't relish the idea of carting water from the moats, heating it and then having their efforts rewarded by receiving a bawling out from the master because the water was cold.

But man progressed. The proverbial Saturday night bath became the aversion of little boys and possibly the grown-ups too. We can't imagine anyone getting any fun from attempting to bathe in a hand tub before the kitchen stove. The water was likely to get cold and then, too, wearing clean flannels wasn't all a "bed of roses." Clean flannels have a habit of itching and sitting through long church services in those days must have been torture.

The passage of time has made flannels and Saturday night baths obsolete. Daily or multi-daily baths are the practice along with fewer clothes. Perhaps that's the reason for so much bathing. Anyway, we must have our bath.

Science has contrived to make it a pleasure instead of a duty. The eye and ear are pleased. Interior decorators use flowers and gold fish to make the bathroom the beauty spot of the modern home. One listens to the song of the canary or the music of the radio now. A telephone is a necessity. Visitors are told that Mr. Blank is having his bath and cannot be disturbed. The bath has replaced business trips and conferences.

However, science threatens to take the bath away. Thousands are becoming addicted to showers. And, too, the television and other modern inventions eliminate the telephone and other conveniences attached to bathing. What is to become of the bath tub? We wonder.

Budget Suggestions

The recent regrettable, but perhaps necessary, action of the state legislature reducing by twenty per cent the funds allotted to the University brings forcefully to the attention of faculty and students alike the problem and necessity of discovering some means whereby the present rigorous budget may be further pruned and contracted. Even after considering the facts that other state-supported schools of this state and many others will also receive proportionately less allowance, that general business conditions will tend to lower prices, and that increased alumni support may perhaps be forthcoming, it is clear that we must begin immediately to investigate potential sources of revenue.

Probably the most equitable, if not the most lucrative, adjustment would be encompassed by increasing the tuition for out-of state entrants. It cannot be considered discrimination to deny to those who contribute nothing, either directly or indirectly, to the taxes of the state, the benefits received therefrom. And even if the out-of-state enrollment be decreased by such action, we make bold to assert that exclusion of what is known as "the foreign element" would meet with little disapproval of the student majority.

A second possible step lies in the curtailment of Extension Division activities. This department of the University, which has grown within the last few years to equal the older part, while highly beneficial and desirable, yet should be the first of the two to bear the brunt of an extensive appropriation decrease. Since it is, in fact, actually a secondary part of the institution, its welfare should be secondary to the efficient functioning of the University proper.

A third alternative, to which no doubt it will be found necessary to resort, is the raising of general tuition fees. This, we believe, since it would place a greater burden on the more than sixty per cent of self-help students on the campus, should be a last resort.

But probably the best plan would be the inauguration of higher scholastic standards for entrance and for continued attendance, with the end in view of eliminating that class of parasites in the student body who come here without the least idea of really acquiring some degree of learning (not Degree of Learning). An untold amount of the tax-payers' money might be saved in this respect, and opportunities to bona fide scholars at the same time increased.

Readers' Opinions

CONCERNING ANOTHER BACKWARD MOVE

Recently there appeared an editorial to the effect that Student Entertainments should be discontinued the first quarter of next year because of the lack of an adequate building. Even though the New Auditorium will not be completed until approximately January 1, 1931 and even though this fact will necessitate the exclusion of some numbers which obviously could not be presented in the Methodist church, it will be perfectly possible to bring thoroughly worth while programs which could easily be presented in this church or in Swain hall. It would be possible to bring such men as Commander Byrd to either of these buildings and it would be possible to bring some really excellent musical programs. The number of entertainments might be cut down but the quality might easily be enhanced. After all is it not true that one dollar is a minimum sum to pay for one really good program—much less several. I dare say that any of us would pay this small sum to hear Commander Byrd anywhere.

Some have said that it is not fair to charge all the Students in the School of Liberal Arts and the School of Education the one dollar fee per quarter when there is no building large enough to seat all of these students if they should all desire to come. Swain hall will seat approximately 1400 students and there are 1070 students in the School of Liberal Arts and School of Education combined. Therefore, the plan is technically honorable and more practically honorable still in view of the fact that all of these students, for various and sundry good reasons, will not attend every performance. Therefore, there will be adequate room for outsiders—that is to a certain reasonable extent.

Finally, can we afford to take another backward step at a time when the University is being condemned and underrated for having been forced to take so many drastic ones. It is, of course, regrettable that Swain hall must be used to accomodate the large gatherings but is it not far better to use this building with all of its draw-backs than to be defeated in the moral sense of the word by doing away with one of the few things on the campus which has brought the Fine Arts in active form into the lives of the average students? Any University can to a certain extent keep up a text book reputation but the University of North Carolina has prided itself on being an active institution. Aside from the research departments the living forms of Fine Arts on the campus have done more to create a nation wide reputation for us than anything else. Can we, who pride ourselves so much because of the really constructive and extrenuous work on the part of both professors and students in the field of writing and play production, afford to scoff at or at least ignore the forms of Fine Arts which others have created and wish to bring to us? Only through the inspiration which we receive on being thrown into an atmosphere of constructive, active, work of others in the field of Fine Arts are we able to create with an increasing amount of originality our own art forms.

I will admit that some of the programs offered this year were not so generally desirable and I will admit that it is necessary to bring features to the campus which will interest the average man since the average man has to pay. However, I believe that there are many things of true cultural value which are capable of inspiring this so-called "average" student. In short, I am confident that if these programs are continued next fall great pains will be taken to bring features to the campus which will be thoroughly cultural and of the highest calibre and yet have inspirational (interest) value for the average man. We simply cannot afford, especially at this critical period when articles of despondency are appearing every day in the Tar Heel, to lose one of the few active and vivid expressions of art in the life of a University student, for after all, a great part of our education is received through these exalted methods of personal contact—namely, by the eye and the ear.

Prelims Of Conference Meet To Start Today

PROSPECTS FOR A CAROLINA VICTORY ARE ONLY SLIGHT

Farmer, Perry, and Garrett Have Illnesses Which May Disqualify Them.

The preliminaries of the annual Southern Conference track and field championships will get under way in Birmingham this afternoon, with over 300 contestants representing the 20 colleges contesting. If a majority of the contestants live up to their past performances, it is certain that all events will be closely contested and that several meet records will be broken, so fine have been the times and distances set up in the dual meets this spring.

The chances for victory of the University of North Carolina, heralded but a short few weeks ago as favorites for an overwhelming victory, grew slimmer and slimmed yesterday when it was learned that at the time the team left for Birmingham three of the men were quite ill with indigestion. These three were Charley Farmer, favorite to win the 100 and 220; Bill Perry, star high and low hurdler; and Dick Garrett, quarter miler and member of the relay team. When it is also considered that the Tar Heels are competing without the services of Dave Nims, their captain and star quarter miler, and Dave Neiman, pole vaulter and premier Carolina broad jumper, things begin to look black indeed; in addition, Ty Reid, brilliant sophomore high hurdler, will not be in the best of form, due to a knee injury.

The outstanding competitors for the dashes are Farmer and Gay, N. C.; Brown, L. S. U.; Lay, Mississippi Aggies; Kelly, Kentucky; Chamblee, Auburn; Smith, Alabama; Hamm, Georgia Tech; Thurman, Vanderbilt; Parker, L. S. U.; and Sandifer, W. & L. Smith, Brown, Hamm and Sandifer are expected to give Farmer, who rules the favorite because of his victory in the Tech relays in 9 4-5 seconds for the 100 and 21 3-5 for the 220, which times he duplicated in later meets, plenty of trouble.

In the 440, Waites of Mississippi A. & M. rules as a slight favorite, but should receive a great fight from Gay and Weil, N. C.; Ottinger and Floyd, N. C. State; Shepard, W. & L.; Lay, Mississippi Aggies; Kelly, Kentucky; Klanke, L. S. U.; Lindsey, Maryland; and Rinehart, V. P. I., all of whom have done the quarter in less than 51 seconds and none of whom have beaten 50 seconds. This race should be especially close.

The half should be another very closely contested race. Minor Barkley rates as the favorite in this event, due to his 1:56.5 half in the Princeton meet last week, but is certain to receive strong competition from Young, Georgia; Krackey, Alabama; Dicert, Tennessee; Lineberger, Clemson; McGinn, N. C. State; Lybrook, V. P. I.; and Lindsey, Maryland.

In the mile Barkley again rates as the favorite, mainly because of his splendid victory over Rekers of Penn State and his fast 4:21.4 mile in the Princeton meet last week.

The 120 high hurdles should be an especially close and fast race. DeColigny of Tulane and Johnson of Florida have both done 15 flat. Hurdlers who should press these men closely are Perry and Reid, N. C.; Corbett, Tennessee; Spear, W. & L.; LaCoste, L. S. U.; Kinnamon, Maryland; and Mattox, Georgia.

In the 220 low hurdles the favorites are Finkelstein, W. & L., and DeColigney of Tulane.

In the shot put Hall, Florida, and Swart, V. P. I., are the ruling favorites, with Swart being given the edge due to the fact that he has a 45 foot 3 inch heave to his credit, a better performance than any other Conference putter has attained.

The discus throw should be a close contest between Coleman, Auburn, and Theron Brown of Carolina. Coleman beat Brown out in the Tech relays, winning by ¼ inch. He is rated a slight favorite because of his having thrown the platter 134 feet in a meet while Brown has done but 130 feet in meets, although he has done as well as 139 feet in practice.

In the javelin Anderson of Georgia, who took first last year, Songy of L. S. U., who took second, and Graydon of Georgia Tech, who has thrown the spear over 200 feet, are the ruling favorites.

The high jump brings together an especially fine field, Dawes, Miss. Aggies; Bostwick, S. C.; Kennedy, S. C.; DeColigny, Tulane; Sanford, Georgia; Hall, Florida; Greenblatt, Tennessee; Taylor, Tulane; and Bagby, of Carolina, all having cleared six feet.

The pole vault will present the best field ever entered in the south; the best men in this event are Arnold and Ruble, Carolina; Yawn, L. S. U.; Munger, Florida; Bradshaw, Alabama; and Frederick, Mississippi Aggies, all of whom have done better than 12 feet 6 inches except Ruble.

The broad jump should be the only walkaway of the meet, there being no one who should come close to Ed Hamm of Georgia Tech, who holds the world's record of 25 feet 11½ inches, the Olympic record of 25 feet 5¾ inches, the Southern Conference record of 25 feet 6 inches, and who has leapt 25 feet 6¼ inches this year.

The relay favorites are Vanderbilt, N. C. State, Carolina, Florida and Mississippi Aggies, with Florida and N. C. State having the best chances.

In the team scoring, Carolina ranks a slight favorite because of her well-balanced team, the Tar Heels having almost sure point winners in practically every event. However, the laurels of victory may very well go to Florida, Mississippi A. & M., L. S. U., or W. & L.

Every team in the conference except three—Virginia, V. M. I., and Mississippi U. is entered.

New Dorms Wins Over Carr In Close Game

Old Man Jinx camped on Carr's trail yesterday afternoon and it lost a hard-fought game to New Dorms 1-0. Brown deserved to win. He sent eight men back to the bench by the strikeout route and allowed only one hit, a single by Higdon. Moore was also in rare form, whiffing nine men and giving up but five hits.

New Dorms scored in the third after Higdon single, stole second and came home when Sanders, center fielder for Carr, muffed Fysal's long fly.

Carr threatened to rally in the last inning. Sanders singled through short; Hinshaw and Stone, pinch hitters, struck out; Brown was hit by the pitcher; but Moore made Witkins fan for the last out.

The Lambda Chi Alpha-S. A. E. game will be played at 3:30 today to decide which will meet New Dorms for the championship.

The University had to pay $500 to a house-mover to erect the main arches for Memorial hall when it was built in 1884.

In 1885 a student had to be a member of one of the campus literary organizations to room in University buildings.

BLUE DEVIL TILT MAY SETTLE BIG FIVE TITLE RACE

Ashmore Grooms Two Best Mound Stars To Face Duke Tomorrow In Crucial Contest.

Once again on even terms with Duke in the Big Five titular race, the slugging Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina are centering all their attention on Saturday's Carolina-Duke game in Durham.

Duke took a previous game from the Tar Heels, despite the fact that the Tar Heels slugged the Duke pitching ace and old Tar Heel nemesis, "Lefty" Jenkins, viciously. As a result of the Davidson victory over Duke, the teams are back on even footing again—4 won, 2 lost, and 2 to go.

If Carolina beats Duke Saturday, then only N. C. State will stand in the way of a Big Five title for the Tar Heels. Paul Edwards, the rookie who has proved the class of the Tar Heel moundsmen, has not worked since he beat Wake Forest Monday, and, in excellent shape, is the most probable man to oppose Jenkins.

S. A. E. ELIMINATES T. E. P. TENNIS TEAM

Tau Epsilon Phi's tennis team was eliminated as a contender for the intramural championship by Sigma Alpha Epsilon yesterday by the score of 3-2.

The results were: Sulkin (T. E. P.) continued his string of victories by beating Forleigh 6-3, 8-6; Waterhouse (S. A. E.) fought an uphill battle to win over Shohan 3-6, 6-2, 6-2; Goodridge, captain-elect of the boxing team, beat Cohen in a thrilling battle 7-5, 7-9, 6-4; Forleigh and Waterhouse (S. A. E.) made victory certain by trimming Sulkin and Shohan 6-4, 6-2. S. A. E. forfeited the final doubles match.

Carolina Golfers To Meet Virginia Today

Carolina will embark on a trip to Charlottesville, Va., today to compete with Virginia in the final golf match of the year at the Farlington Country Club. Virginia seems to be an unknown quantity.

Due to the fact that one of the team's most consistent players, Benny Goodes, is out, Carolina will have to play all the harder to attain a victory over the Cavaliers. The men to go on the trip are Charlie Chatham, Meade Willis, Luther Steward and June Adams. Coach Kenfield will be unable to accompany the team to Virginia since he is with the tennis team at New Orleans.

FRESHMEN WIN FINAL DIAMOND GAME OF SEASON

The freshmen yesterday afternoon won their last game by defeating the Baby Deacons 5-4.

Griffith pitched a good game, striking out nine men and allowing only one hit in the first eight innings, but weakening in the ninth and allowing several hits.

McNeill was put in to finish the game, which he did in fine style, stopping the onslaught of the Baby Deacon batters.

The Deacons had not shown any signs of scoring until the ninth inning when they gathered their hits to make four runs which tied the game, but Allen got a double to bring Ferebee in which ended the game.

The whole Carolina team played good ball, being up against the outstanding freshman team in the state which will probably win the state championship.

The lineups were: for Carolina—Griffith, p; Peacock, c; Allen, 1b; Ferebee, 2b; Leonard, 3b; Riggs, ss; Daniel, lf; Whitehead, cf; Dixon, rf; for Wake Forest—Griffin, p; Hicks, c; Lister, 1b; Barham, 2b; Earp, 3b; Pethume, ss; White, lf; Miller, cf; and Appel, rf.

DEBATING TEAMS AT UNIVERSITY HAVE FAIR YEAR

Engage In Fourteen Debates, Two Oratorical Contests; Win Three, Lose Five.

(By Alan Lowenstein)

With the Carolina-University of the South debate a week ago yesterday, the University debating organization completed its activities for the year. From the point of view of debates won and lost, one might consider the year as being less successful than former years, but from the caliber of the debates our teams have held, and from the excellent teams they have met, one might say that the year was worthwhile for the teams. Fourteen debates were held during the year, two oratorical contests, and a Di-Phi debate.

North Carolina teams debated Wake Forest, North Carolina State, South Carolina, Emory, Georgia Tech, George Washington University, Maryland, Northwestern, Boston University, Virginia, and Sewanee. Two of these colleges, George Washington University and Boston University, were debated twice by our teams. During the season North Carolina won three debates, lost five and had four no-decision contests.

Two oratorical contests and one Di-Phi debate were held during the year. H. H. Hobgood represented the University in the American Legion Oratorical Contest last February and was awarded second place. In the intercollegiate oratorical contest on the Constitution held two weeks ago, he was awarded third place. This was the state elimination contest. However, due to some irregularities, this contest was recently held over, Hobgood not taking part. The Mary D. Wright Memorial Debate between the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Assembly was won by the Di. J. C. Williams was awarded the Wright medal for the best speaker on the winning team. The Di was represented by Williams and C. Shreve, and the Phi by R. E. Stanton and J. C. Harris.

Twelve students took part in the debates for the University this year. John Wilkinson and C. P. Carr participated in five debates each, J. M. Baley and W. W. Speight were entered in four, McB. Fleming-Jones and H. H. Hobgood represented the University in three contests, while J. C. Williams and C. W. Meares took part in two debates. T. E. Denton, T. M. Mashburn, W. Uzzell and A. V. Lowenstein took part in one debate each for the University. The debate squad during the year was made up of about 25 members.

Four subjects were debated during the year. The question "Resolved, That the nations of the world adopt a plan of complete disarmament with the exception of such forces as are necessary for police purposes" was debated eight times by University teams, the chain store question, worded "Resolved, That the principle of the chain store system is detrimental to

ALLERTON HOUSE TO FEATURE U.N.C. BY RADIO MONDAY

Six-Thirty Program From K. Y. W. Dedicated To Carolina-Virginia-Maryland.

On Monday night at 6:30 eastern standard time over radio station KYW at Chicago there will be a special program dedicated to the Universities of North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland.

The hour this coming week will be dedicated to the three southern universities mentioned above. The Allerton glee club, one of the finest in the country, will sing three songs of each university represented. This will be supplemented by solo numbers and a short word of greeting to alumni by J. G. Williams, president of the North Carolina Club of Chicago; Nelson Levings, secretary of the University of Virginia Club; and George B. Morse, president of the University of Maryland Club of Chicago.

Station KYW is a 50,000 watt station and is one of the three strongest stations in the country.

The program for the meeting includes choral songs by the Y quartet, reports and the feature will be the talk to be delivered by Frank Graham. The president of the Y, Ed Hamer, invites all students who would like to visit and hear of the work done the past year and those who would like to join in a meeting of good fellowship in the Forest theatre.

GLEE CLUB ENDS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Wins South Atlantic Title; Gives 14 Performances In This and Other States.

Winner of the South Atlantic intercollegiate contest and of the acclaim of discriminating audiences in this and other states, the University glee club has just closed one of the most successful seasons in the history of musical organizations at this institutions.

The club gave concerts in 14 different towns. One of the performances was in New York City, where the club appeared in the National Contest as the representative of the South Atlantic states, and another was in Washington, D. C., the latter being sponsored by Carolina alumni of that city.

Concerts were also given in Charlotte, Monroe, Concord, Durham, Raleigh, Wilmington, New Bern, Murfreesboro, Spartanburg, S. C., Norfolk, Va., and in Chapel Hill. The last appearance was before the homefolks in a concert in the Playmaker theatre here last week.

Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music, directed the club throughout the past year, with Professor Nelson O. Kennedy as accompanist and piano soloist. Officers of the club were J. Paul Scurlock, Greensboro, president; Troxell Reynolds, Chapel Hill, vice-president; Stephen A. Lynch, Jr., Miami, Fla., secretary; W. Gillis Brown, Flushing, N. Y., librarian; Homer L. BOOK OF POEMS IS ISSUED HERE

Author of Volume Is Member Of Writers' Club Of Columbia University.

The latest offering of the University of North Carolina Press is a volume of verse by Anne Blackwell Payne, a native Tar Heel now residing in New York.

The title of the volume is Released. It consists of light lyrics and sonnets and poems for children. Her verse has appeared in leading magazines.

Miss Payne was born in Concord. Her family moved to Washington when she was young girl and she grew up there. She attended Flora MacDonald College and then taught school for six years.

Stories and verse for children comprised Miss Payne's first efforts at writing. Many of her poems were published in Child Life, Youth's Companion and elsewhere. One of her children's poems was set to music and published in Primary Education and another was used in the Elson Fifth Reader. Her first serious poem appeared in Good Housekeeping in 1922.

Miss Payne has been living in New York for six years, during which she has been intermittently studying English and poetry at Columbia University with John Erskine, Carl Van Doren, Joseph Auslander and others; writing short stories, helping to run a house, and occasionally teaching kindergarten.

She is a charter member of the Writers Club of Columbia University; has had poems in four of their yearly anthologies which are published under the name of Copy; and won the prize for the best poem one year. She is also a member of the Poetry Society of America.

COLLECT $648 IN DRIVE FOR FUNDS

Lawrence Makes Statement On Results Of Campaign For Relief of Poor.

George H. Lawrence, superintendent of public welfare stationed at Chapel Hill, in an interview with a Daily Tar Heel reporter stated that $649.11 raised through emergency funds for the poor of Orange county has been carefully expended during the recent period of hard times.

The Campus Relief Fund, sponsored by the Daily Tar Heel, contributed $202.73, and outside contributions amounted to $227.51, which consisted of gifts from members of the faculty, students and residents of Chapel Hill, was used to relieve some 53 needy families in the county.

The present period of hard times and poverty throughout the county, according to Mr. Lawrence, are caused principally by unemployment and poor crops throughout the section. Now that warm weather seems to have set in conditions should improve, according to Lawrence, since the majority of the country families will be able to grow foodstuffs in small quantities, at least.

So far conditions in Carrboro have been very good, but with the partial closing down of the larger of the two factories there, approximately 100 people, both men and women, will be out of work.

Mr. Lawrence has $21.94 left in the emergency funds, and states that approximately 18 of the 43 families aided will require additional assistance.

RUSHING RULES ARE ANNOUNCED FOR NEXT YEAR

Provisions Are Practically Same As Those Of Last Year Except For Date Restrictions.

Jack Ward, the new president of the interfraternity council, announces the following rushing rules for next year. They will be the same as those for this year with only a few changes.

The new rules read as follows: Rushing—The rushing season begins one week after the first day of classes which is preceded by what is known in fraternity circles as the first period of silence in which there shall be no rushing of any kind. This period of silence includes what is commonly known as freshman week in addition to the first week of classes. For the twenty days following this date each fraternity will entertain freshmen to whom it is considering extending bids. All fraternity rushing-entertainment is restricted to the fraternity houses and shall be limited to the hours of two to nine o'clock p. m., except on the last night (October 18) of the period of rushing, when the time shall be extended to midnight. The second period of silence shall extend from midnight of October 18 to six p. m. of October 20. Periods of silence are periods in which freshmen consider the merits of the various fraternities by whom they have been rushed. No freshmen are permitted to be rushed or talked to by any fraternity man or his associates during the periods of silence. During the entire rushing season no freshman will be permitted under any circumstances to spend time at fraternities outside of the above mentioned hours (two to nine p. m.)

No fraternity man will be allowed to room with a freshman during rushing season, or even allowed to visit him at his rooms outside of the regular hours.

Dates — Appointments between fraternity men and freshmen can only be made once a week in advance, the first ones having to be recorded in the Dean of Students' office. No freshman shall be permitted to break any first date with a fraternity under penalty of being barred from fraternity membership. No freshman can make more than two dates with a fraternity for the first two days.

Pledging—After the rushing season fraternity bids are given out by the dean of students, after each student has recorded his preferences providing he were to receive a bid or bids. Each freshman names his first, second and third choices and more if he had them. No freshman, under any circumstances will be permitted to be pledged before pledge day.

Initiating—Fraternity pledges may be initiated at the end of the winter quarter provided they have passed five courses, making at least two C's (85). Any pledge not satisfying scholastic requirements to be initiated must wait over until the following year to be initiated.

Catholic Mass

Catholic Mass will be held in Gerrard hall tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock.

During the school year 1891-1892 no student was allowed to leave "the Hill" without the permission of the president.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The more bautiful a woman is the more likely she is to meet the wrong man.—Mrs. Ethel Mannin.

University Welcomes Athletes

The University has undertaken this week-end another of its duties of courtesy which most fittingly becomes her position as one of the leading institutions of the state and of the south — namely, the entertainment of the athletes here for the annual state high school baseball championship held yesterday and for the annual southern prep school school track and field championships to be held this afternoon. The University as a whole, through the medium of the Daily Tar Heel welcomes these school students to its campus and expresses the wish that they may enjoy themselves to the utmost while on the Hill. It is hoped that the students of the University will extend themselves in an outstanding effort to do all they can to give the athletes and their friends a good impression of the warmth of hospitality so prevalent on the campus.—H. M. W.

Old College Songs

In a recent Open Forum letter in the Daily Tar Heel, Dr. Harold S. Dyer, music director, lamented the fact that such an historic institution as the University of North Carolina should have kept so little record of her songs. He stated that numerous other schools and many individuals were constantly sending in requests for a Carolina song book, or copies of old Carolina songs.

It is certainly regrettable that so many of these old tunes and songs that were used when our fathers and grandfathers were in school are now almost extinct so far as the present day Tar Heel is concerned.

We have often been questioned by returning alumni what has become of certain songs that they sang when in school. On rare occasions we see some of these old grads harmonizing on some old college songs which recall memories. Why is it that so many of these tunes that will cause tears to come to the eyes of an old grad are now not even sung at all on the Carolina campus.

The Southern Historical Collection which is to center at Carolina may uncover many of these songs, and some of these might even now be available in places. Nevertheless, it seems very difficult for those interested to find such material.

We recently visited in a home where the University of North Carolina has been almost a religion for the past half-century or more. It was in this home that we heard a lady whose husband, brothers and sons were all University men, play and sing a duet with her sister which was largely composed of old Tar Heel songs representing the periods when these men were in school. It was a rare treat to hear these songs at all, especially so when played by two ladies each over seventy-five years of age.

We cannot remember the names of all those sung, but the names of one or two of them, as well as we can remember were: "Neath the Oaks of Our Old Chapel Hill," "Neath Our Old College Bell," and another which began—

"When I am an old man with babies on my knee
I'll teach them that the alphabet begins with UNC"

It was with great surprise that the ladies mentioned learned that we did not know these songs, and it was deeply regretted by both of them as it should be by us.

Although the harmonizing groups that used to gather under Davie Poplar and around the thing of the past, their songs Old Well have now become a should not be forgotten. It is gratifying to see someone taking an active interest in assembling these songs, and any aid anyone can give in finding these would be accounted a service to Carolina. Many of our alumni remember most of these songs and if they would assist, possibly a song book of old Carolina songs could then be published.

Drama or Dancing This Week-End?

Many times and often since I have been in Chapel Hill, have I heard students make extensive plans for a first trip to New York. In the usual prearranged or preimagined tour, to be more pointedly truthful, the expectant visitor includes such places as the Metropolitan Museum, the theatres and even the opera so that they may satiate in part their avowed craving for the fine arts. On their return I curiously question the well intentioned seekers-after-the-fine-and-artistic only to find that Greenwich Village, night clubs and musical shows had taken so much of their time as to have made it impossible for them to achieve what they had set out to. Some of them managed to visit the Paramount or the Roxy theatres and were properly impressed by their dimensions and luxurious fittings and architecture, having seen only a talking picture and a review. The major part of the usual New York visitors return to Chapel Hill properly impressed with the New York they had already been familiar with from what they had seen here at the Carolina theatre but they bring back the same avowed craving (for the finer things) which they had when they left.

This week-end the Playmakers will present "Romeo and Juliet" in their forest theatre. The production will without a doubt be fine in every sense of the word. Here is indeed the opportunity for Carolina students to witness a finished piece of work in the acting and staging of a play which cannot help but appeal to their finer sensibilities. The cast is well selected and well directed. A unit set arrangement will be used. This type of set is usually desirable but is necessary here due to the fact that a curtain is not available in the forest theatre. With this arrangement continuous action from the first to the last scene, as was the original intention of the playwright, will be achieved. There will be a ten minute intermission between the second and third acts for the comfort and relaxation of the audience and actors. Only two performances of the play are scheduled, and it would be sad if those who could and would appreciate the play could not avail themselves of the opportunity to see it.

There is only one circumstance which might possibly keep the students from flocking to the forest theatre Friday and Saturday nights and that is the fact that there are five dances scheduled for this week-end. Dances have by this time ceased to be a novelty on this campus. Therefore, it is expected that the play will be well attended. If necessary, both the dances and the play can be attended but never let it be said that an intelligent Carolina student neglected to see a remarkably good production of "Romeo and Juliet" because there was a dance in the offing!—P. S. L.

Maintenance Funds Versus Decline

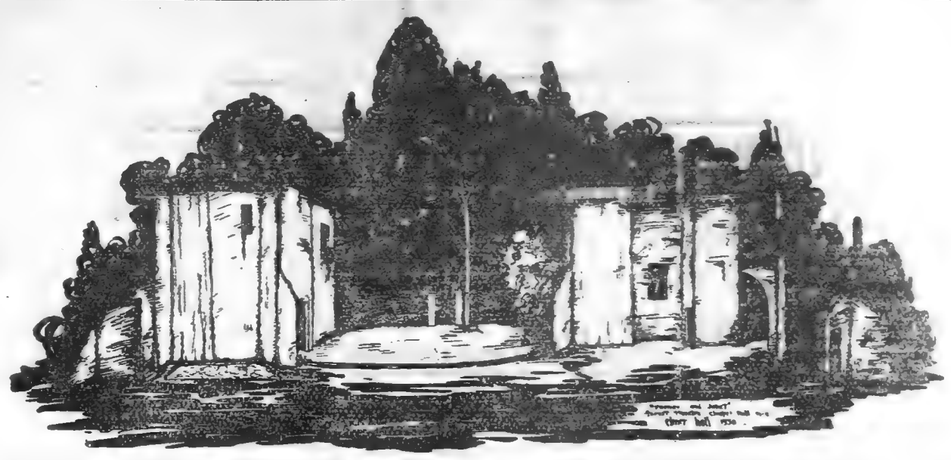
With the recent action of the state budget commission in slashing the maintenance funds of the University by twenty per cent, the University of North Carolina faces a crisis. Either it will continue to provide the excellent quality of teaching and service to the student body and will continue to have a widespread influence throughout the state and the nation, or else it will sink back among the second rate colleges from whence it has so rapidly risen. No institution, contrary to the apparent belief of the state legislators, can function on air or on the good will of those connected with it. If maintenance funds are not provided by the state, some features of the University are bound to be crippled.

During the past ten years the University has expanded enormously. Buildings have been added, a new library, athletic fields, tennis courts, and the Tin Can built, new schools have been started, the faculty has been increased from seventy-five to two hundred and twenty-five members, and the student enrollment has been more than tripled. Expansion is an excellent thing, but with every dollar given toward enlargement, a certain amount must be given for maintenance. If a $625,000 library is built to take the place of one that is one-fourth the size, maintenance funds four times as great should also be provided. If the state is too poor to pay for the upkeep of this University, it is too poor to own an institution of this size. It is very unbusiness-like to put up new buildings and make a larger institution, and then say "run by yourself." The University just can't run by itself and it must have the money. If the people of the state will not come to its support, they must be content to see it sink back and lose the excellent reputation it has gained in the past ten years. The University of North Carolina, with all the advertising it gives the state, has just gained a position of prominence along with some of America's greatest colleges, and now it is about to lose the ground it has gained.

At this moment, the University faces the situation of being unable to increase the salaries of professors who have been due them for four years, it cannot pay them pensions and annuities, no money can be given professors or scholars for research work, and new instructors and professors cannot be employed to fill the places of men who have left. Other economies will have to be made next year in order to meet the new lower budget. Last year the budget was low and the University was wondering what departments would be able to stand crippling the best. Now every department will suffer from the lack of funds.

Higher salaries must be raised to keep good professors at the University. At present we learn from reliable sources that a full professor gets $3,750 while the highest paid instructor receives but $2,000. This University pays lower salaries than any other state university with the exception of South Carolina. No man who may be wanted elsewhere will stay in Chapel Hill with such low salaries, especially when he knows he has no pension to look forward to. If good men, who have their homes established here, leave us because of the low salaries we need not expect to get others equally as good to come here in their place. The practice of replacing full professors who are authorities in their fields by inexperienced young instructors is devastating to the faculty. The English department is practically crippled now that some of the best men are leaving. Other departments are suffering also. In the French department one vacancy will not be filled next fall due to the lack of money. Not only the faculty, which is losing eight men and which has lost 27 men in the past two years will suffer, but other features of the University will suffer as badly. No first class university can keep its reputation unless it maintains the facilities and high calibre of work for which it is known. The practice of sending forth our best men all over the country wth the public knowing that this is happening for lack of funds, is hurting the University and the state as well.

The people of North Carolina must face the facts. The situation is not exaggerated at all. Men have been elected to power in the state government on the platform of tax reduction, and to carry out their promise, they are just slashing the budgets of state institutions. True, that reduces the taxes, but at the expense of the state's most valuable and most prided institution. People must realize that education comes before a politicians promise of a few dollars reduction in taxes. North Carolinians and the leaders of this University must forget all ideas of an art school, a teachers' college, a new gymnasium, the establishment of a department of comparative literature, as well as other desires for expansion. As in a time of war, every available cent must go to the immediate necessity. The University must be maintained at its topmost speed. Quality comes before expansion.—A. V. L.



A Plea For Outsiders

We have it on good authority that the Board of Trustees of the University is contemplating a raise in the tuition charges for students who come from states other than North Carolina. We are convinced that such action would be decidedly unwise, all things considered. Although the University of North Carolina is primarily an institution for the benefit of citizens of the state, the erection of any barrier to outsiders is detrimental enough to warrant careful consideration.

The students of the University of North Carolina are too much alike. All too many of them have had the same ideals instilled into them by such agencies as the village church, the rural school, and the town gossip—in which there is to be found marked uniformity throughout the villages of the state. What we need is more "spice in the program." We submit that nothing can do a student body more good than members from various and sundry parts of the nation, having various and sundry ideas to spill. The best universities of the land have students from "everywhere."

We feel that the requirements for outsiders are already stringent enough for practical purposes.—J. C. W.

Set for "Romeo and Juliet," Forest Theatre

The above scene is a sketch by Elmer Hall, technical director of the Playmakers, of the scenery for the performance of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet in the Forest theatre last night.

This is the most elaborate setting ever designed for use in a Playmaker production. It incorporates the multiple stage idea, so effectively used with plays of this type. There are different stages for the various scenes, the open space in the center being used for the balcony and tomb scenes. Mr. Hall, who is directing the play, had charge of the construction of the set.

Romeo, Howard Bailey, will again pay court to his Juliet, Miss Lois Buell, tonight in the Forest theatre. These two characters are supported by a cast which includes Frederick H. Koch, director of the Playmakers, Mrs. Nora Del Gumble, Professor George McKie, Mrs. George Howe, Joe Fox, Kent Creuser, Horace Ward, Harry Galland, Eveland Davies, George Wilcox and others.

the American public" was debated three times. "Resolved, That modern science tends to destroy theistic faith" was the topic in two debates, and the question, "Resolved, That the thirteen-month calendar be adopted," was used once.

According to the statement from the business office of the University, given out with the permission of the debate council, $2,023.44 was taken in by the debate council through student fees which were collected and also from the balance of the previous year. The expenses for the year are as follows:

Professor George McKie, salary 1927-1930, $150.00; Advertising, $22.50; Yackety Yack, $250.00; Printing, $24.25; Personal Service (typing and pasting placards), $6.30; Smokers for visiting teams, $12.75; Telephone and telegraph, $4.02; Fees paid visiting teams, $50.00; and travel, $794.58—making a total of expenses for the year of $1,314.40. Subtracting this sum from the income, a balance of $709.04 is left to the debate council for next year.

The members of the debate council for this year are: J. C. Williams, member from the Di; J. C. Harris, member from the Phi; R. M. Albright and W. W. Speight, members at large; and Professors McKie, Graham and Jones, faculty members. J. C. Williams is president of the council. The new council will meet for the first time in about two weeks. It consists of McB. Fleming-Jones, member from the Di; H. H. Hobgood, members from the Phi; W. W. Speight and Beatty Rector, members at large; and Professors McKie and Graham, faculty members. As Professor Jones will not be in the University next year, his place is vacant until President Chase appoints a successor.

At the next meeting of the debate council, debaters who deserve their certificates or monograms will be awarded them. A monogram is given a debater who participates in at least two debates during the year and who has not already received one. Certificates are given those who have already received monograms. These certificates state the years in which the debater has taken part in forensic activities.

In concluding the summary for the year, one might say that the caliber of the debates and of the debaters has been bettered, though the interest of the general student body has decreased. Debating appears to be losing ground in its popularity with the students of the University. However, it is hoped that the excellent contests which are being booked for next year, and the interesting subjects which will be chosen, will help to regain the lost interest of the student body.

Athletes Of Nine Southern Prep Schools Are Here For Annual Track And Field Day

100 CONTESTANTS

Cream of South's Material Will Attack Existing Records on Emerson Field Today.

EXTRA EVENTS ARRANGED

A.M.A. Favored By Dopesters; Prep Stars Expected to Rival College Performances; Meet Begins at Two O'clock.

More than 100 of the south's best prep school trackmen will compete in the fourth annual southern prep school track and field meet today. The meet is to be held on Emerson field, beginning at 2 o'clock.

The prep school stars, who come from nine schools representing almost every district of the central south, will begin their assault on the prep school records simultaneously with the beginning of the final rounds of the Southern Conference varsity meet at Birmingham, in which the North Carolina team is one of the leading contenders.

There will also be two special exhibition events during the meet. The first will be a special three quarters of a mile race between Jensen, Jones, Cordle and Hubbard, Tar Baby distance stars, and Williamson of High Point, state champion in the mile and half mile. Jensen, Jones and Cordle competed in such a race during the Penn State meet with Galen Elliott, Charlotte track coach who set the Southern Conference and U. N. C. record for the mile while a student here, with Jensen coming out the winner.

The other special feature of the meet will be a special 100-yard dash to be contested among the members of the freshman class. Drane, Stafford, Marland, Geiger and Wornom of the Tar Baby track team are scheduled to run in this event. Coach Dale Ranson says, however, that any other speedy member of the freshman squad who wishes to enter may do so.

Augusta Military Academy reigns as favorite team among the dopesters today, but the field is admittedly one of the strongest ever to compete in the annual meet, and the Virginia lads will have tough going.

The Augusta stars include Weisker, sprinter and broad jumper; Bowman, half miler and miler; Goodwin, hurdler and broad jumper; Copps, shot putter; Founds and Humphries, vaulters; and Mosely and Goodwin, high jumpers.

Asheville School, Greenbriar, Danville Military Institute, Staunton Military Academy and Georgia Military Academy are all sending equally large delegations, any of which may nose the Augusta team out. Hargrave, Blackstone and Monroe A. & M. will have smaller contingents competing.

Many of the prep schools which will compete boast stars who have turned in marks that rival college performances, and today's meet promises more than its quota of star performances. Woodman of Blackstone, for instance, has thrown the discus within a half-inch of 130 feet; Weisker of Augusta has broad-jumped 21 feet 7½; Bowman of Augusta has done 1,000 yards indoors in the fast time of 2 minutes 27 2-5, and so on.

Others who will be especially watched include Degarimore, sprinter of Georgia Military Academy; Glenn, hurdler of Asheville School; and Winters, Greenbriar broad jumper.

The meet entries and results will be announced through the University's loudspeaker broadcasting system.

SHELBY DEFEATS HAMLET 11-2 FOR BASEBALL TITLE

Hard Hitting by Winners and Errors By Losers Make Contest One-Sided.

Defeating Hamlet 11-2 yesterday afternoon on Emerson field, Shelby high school laid claim to the state class B baseball title for the second time in succession and the fourth time since 1923.

Seven errors in fielding by Hamlet aided the Shelby boys materially in rolling up the top-heavy score. Tallying in every inning except the fifth and seventh the Westerners made a steady march through Hamlet, holding a lead throughout that was never threatened.

The Shelby boys pounded out the offerings of Brown with unfailing regularity to total 11 hits before the play was over. Philbeck, left fielde, drove out the longest hit of the day. A long drive into right field with the bases loaded in the third cleared up the sacks and left Philbeck parked on third with a triple to add to his batting average. Hamrick, pitcher, and Harrelson, first base, for Shelby each made connection with the ball for three singles. Brown, Hamlet hurler, was the only other man able to land more than one base blow, getting singles in the fourth and ninth.

Crowell came in from center field in the eighth to relieve Brown on the mound after two Shelby men had been put down and the next three had singled in succession. Crowell retired the only man to face him on an infield play.

ALUMNI TO MEET AT COMMENCEMENT

Eleven Classes Will Observe Tradition and Custom At Annual Gathering.

The presidents of the 11 University classes which will meet in reunion this commencement will speak for their respective classes at the meeting of alumni in Gerrard hall at 10:30 o'clock on June 9.

Practically all of the 11 class officers have signified their intention of being in Chapel Hill for their class reunions. The 10:30 o'clock meeting has been presided over for years by Judge Francis D. Winston, and he will again be in the chair.

The classes which come back this June are: 1880, for its 50th reunion; 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898, 1905, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, and 1929. The 1905 graduates reunite for the 25th time, while this will be the first meeting of the class of 1929.

BULLOCK PITCHES FOR LAMBDA CHI

Winners to Play New Dorms, Dormitory Champs, for Intramural Title.

S. A. E. could do little with "Bob" Bullock and Lambda Chi Alpha defeated S. A. E. yesterday afternoon by the score of 7-4. Bullock allowed four hits and fanned eight men. Waterhouse was pounded for nine safe blows which was climaxed in the fourth when Lambda Chi Alpha scored five runs to sew up the game and the fraternity championship.

Bowman was the hitting star of the game, garnering two hits out of two times at bat. Bullock won his own game in the fourth when he tripled with two on base. S. A. E. rallied in the last inning but was cut short after two markers had been chalked up when Waterhouse fanned.

Lambda Chi Alpha will play New Dorms for the intramural championship next week. These two teams were the finalists last year with Lambda Chi Alpha the winner. The batteries will probably be: for New Dorms—Moore and Williamson; for Lambda Chi Alpha—Bullock and Prevost.

TAR HEELS WILL MEET OLD JINX, 'LEFTY' JENKINS

Diminutive Blue Devil Has Beaten Carolina Five Times; To Pitch Today.

Can the hard-hitting Tar Heels beat their old jinx "Lefty" Jenkins, when Carolina and Duke mix on Hanes field in Durham this afternoon?

If they can, they will be one up on the field contesting the hot "Big Five" titular race. If they can't, Duke will be one up.

The little Duke hornet has never bowed to the Tar Heels. In fact, he has beaten them five times in three seasons, for Duke has always saved their best for the Tar Heels.

The last time they met, however, the slugging Tar Heels nicked him for eight hits, something that doesn't always happen to Jenkins. Duke won the slugging duel, but not before the Tar Heels had blasted the myth about Jenkins' invincibility.

Since that time the Tar Heels have been gaining their own reputation for hitting the best pitchers the hardest.

They knocked out "Lefty" Lanning, Wake Forest's ace, twice, and beat Bill Averette, the righthand Wolf who beat Duke.

The Tar Heels are back on even terms with Duke in the state titular race, and playing their best ball of the season.

Mr. Jenkins may close his anti-Tar Heel career with a sixth victory over the Tar Heels, but it's a cinch he'll have a lively fight today that will produce some mighty interesting ball.

Either Paul Edwards or Frank Fleming, the two Tar Heel aces, will oppose Jenkins on the mound today, according to who is "right and ready" in Coach Jim Ashmore's opinion.

In march 1886 the two literary societies and the faculty reached an agreement whereby the libraries of the societies should be combined with that of the University. The official title then chosen was "Library of the University of North Carolina endowed by the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies.

CAROLINA TEAM IS ALL SET FOR DURHAM BATTLE

Claim for Big Five Title To Be Settled in Duke Game Today.

A light workout yesterday, climaxing a tough siege of pointing for one game, and the house of the Tar Heel baseball team was in order and everything set for today's crucial game with Duke's Blue Devils in Durham. The game is to be called at 3:15 o'clock.

On this game the Tar Heels' chances of a Big Five title will hinge. The Carolina nine is in tip-top shape, playing its best ball of the season, and is determined to give the Devils a great battle.

Either Paul Edwards or Frank Fleming will be on the mound for the Tar Heels. Coach Jim Ashmore, taking no chances, has groomed both stars and will start the one who seems "right and ready" tomorrow.

Opposing Edwards or Fleming on the mound for Duke will undoubtedly be "Lefty" Jenkins, superb little Duke southpaw, who gained offers from several big league clubs because of his stellar work on the Devils' northern trip.

Because Jenkins will be the Duke pitcher, the game will mean more to the Tar Heels than a shot at a Big Five title. The Tar Heels will be trying also to break a three-year spell cast over them by Jenkins.

In three seasons Carolina and Duke have tied up on the diamond five times; Jenkins has pitched all five games, and the Tar Heels have yet to beat the portside star.

They have hit him hard on several occasions, and in the first Carolina-Duke game this year touched him for eight hard blows, but still lost.

The Tar Heels, by knocking Wake Forest's Lanning out of the box twice and by beating Averette, State's conqueror of Duke, have gained a reputation of late for hitting the best pitchers hardest. They will be laying for Jenkins in his final game against Carolina tomorrow, and the duel should be interesting, regardless of who wins.

Jenkins' jinx over Carolina recalls a similar jinx which "Lefty" Wilson of Carolina held for Duke. In four years of pitching Duke never beat Wilson. In his final game in 1928, Duke knocked him out in the ninth and piled up a three-run lead, but Casey Morris came up in Carolina's half of the final inning and knocked a homer with the bases full to preserve the jinx.

Will Jenkins have the same luck, or can the Tar Heels break the magic spell?

The Tar Heels' starting lineup, which will be trying to do just that thing will probably be Captain Maus, c; Brown, 1b; Jackson, 2b; Whitehead, ss; Lufty, 3b; Davis, lf; Potter, cf; and House, rf.

Bradshaw Completes Series Of Talks On Vocational Subject

Dean Bradshaw has just returned from a visit to Davidson College where he conducted two faculty discussions on methods of providing educational and vocational guidance for college students.

This concluded a series of such discussions which he began at Davidson College at the request of the faculty there last February. Similar seminars were held by Dean Bradshaw at the University of Florida last year and at the University of South Carolina.

Mangum Swamps Everett

Mangum completely swamped the Everett nine 12 to 1 in a slow and uninteresting game yesterday afternoon. The losers played a poor game on the field, and let in several unearned runs for Mangum.

Witkins' triple in the last frame scoring Bloom who had just singled, saved Everett from a "shut-out."

CAROLINA THEATRE

DENIS DANCERS RECEIVE PLAUDITS FROM ALL SIDES

Have Turned Large Crowds Away From Stadium Performances In New York.

Ruth St. Denis and the Denishawn Dancers will give an open air performance the night of May 22 in Kenan Memorial stadium at 8:15 o'clock. The Denishawn Dancers are managed by Edward W. Lowery of New York and are coming to Chapel Hill under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers and the local branch of the American Association of University Women.

For the past several years the high spot in outdoor entertainment in New York City has been the performances given each summer in the Lewishon Stadium of City College by the Denishawn Dancers. Their popularity is such that lines form in front of the box office hours before the performances are scheduled to begin. Last August several hundred additional seats were erected to accommodate the crowds wishing to attend the performances at the stadium and then several thousand people were turned away from the doors each night.

"With such a beautiful natural setting as that afforded by the stadium of the University, the performance should be even more picturesque than those given in New York," says a dispatch from the advertising agent for the Denishawn Dancers. The dispatch goes on to say that "certainly the wooded hills which surround the stadium offer a more fitting background for the dances than the rows of apartment houses which tower above the Lewisohn stadium in New York."

Miss St. Denis is arranging a special program for this coming southern tour and is including in it such numbers as lend themselves particularly to outdoor presentation. By request she is reviving the Liszt "Liebestraum," one of her best known dances in an almost inexhaustive repertoire.

A special feature of this tour will be the reappearance of Miss Ernestine Day, who led the stage choruses very notably in "Glorifying the American Girl." Her appearance in Chapel Hill will be the first time she has performed with the Denishawn Dancers since she left them to go on the screen.

Another outstanding member of the company is Miss Regenia Beck of Greensboro. Especial interest has been taken in the fact that she will appear in this state and already several parties have been planned to do her honor.

The Boston Globe said recently, "As lovely and as inimitably graceful as ever, Ruth St. Denis danced her way into the hearts of another capacity audience at the Boston Opera House last night."

The New York Herald-Tribune says of the dancers that they are "the foremost contribution to the art of dance in America." From the New York American is found that "not even the celebrated Russian Ballet of Imperial days gave so charming or so intriguing an entertainment."

The Chicago Herald said, "it is difficult not to use superlatives in reviewing these dancers, for they spell beauty, youth, grace and sincerity in the highest degree."

Owing to the great capacity of the Kenan stadium the scale of prices will be relatively low. Reserved seats will sell for $1.50 and $2.00 and several thousand unreserved seats at $1. In event of rain or cold weather, the performance will be given the following evening. Late Thursday afternoon the weather conditions at Chapel Hill will be broadcast over radio stadion WPTF, Raleigh, in order to inform those people throughout the state who are contemplating a visit to the stadium that night.

Denis Dancers Here Next Week

The famous Denis Dancers under the direction of Miss Ruth St. Denis, internationally known danseuse, who are to perform in the stadium May 22 are pictured above in a moment of a dance interpreting one of Straus' great musical compositions.

ROYAL CANADIANS WILL BE FEATURE OF FINAL DANCES

Nationally Famous Orchestra Continues To Gain In Popularity.

ARE JAZZ SPECIALISTS

The final commencement dances this year, to be given from June 10 to 12, will feature Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians. The dances will be staged in the Tin Can and, according to German Club officials, the set will probably be the biggest event on the season's social program.

According to public sentiment, Guy and his orchestra are one of the most popular bands in the country. During the past winter they have filled an extended engagement at the Roosevelt hotel in New York City. Besides having played in practically all of the larger social centers of the north, the Royal Canadians are almost as well known in Canada as in the United States.

One of the attractions of the orchestra is the three Lombardo brothers, themselves, play in the orchestra. Guy, the leader, is the eldest and is an excellent violinist; Lebert is a cornetist, and also doubles at the drums and trumpet; while Carmen, the youngest, is a clever saxophonist, singer and composer.

Another feature of the Canadians is the noted "Four Horsemen of Jazz." This quartet is known in the radio world, and has recorded Columbia records.

The orchestra itself, in addition to many broadcasting engagements, has made numerous phonograph records.

In the past five years this orchestra has made but one change in its entire personnel. At present the group is composed of ten men: Fritz Kreisler, pianist; George Gownas, drummer; Weston Vaughn, banjo and tenor soloist; Jack Miles, trombone; Ben Davis, tuba; Larry Owens, feature saxophonist; and the three Lombardo brothers themselves.

According to the plans of the German Club, the dances are to be staged in the Tin Can instead of Swain Hall. This is done in order not to conflict with the first session of summer school.

The Tin Can is to be divided into several compartments, one for the dancing floor, one for a smoking room, another for a dressing room, and a fourth for a tea room. By making all of these compartments, the Tin Can will probably be the most satisfactory place that could be found, not only because of the conflict of having the dances in Swain hall, but also the fact that there is more parking space near the Can. Since there is usually such a confusion before and after the dances, it was thought that this would be all done away with by the new arrangement of having the entertainments in the Can.

Further plans have been made by the committee in regard to a cooling system for the hall, and arrangements have been made which will greatly aid the acoustics of the building such that the music will be unmarred.

The first dance of the finals is to be Tuesday night, June 10, and will last from 9 to 1 o'clock. Three more dances will be given Wednesday: a morning dance from 11:30 till 1:30, one in the afternoon from 4 to 6, and a night dance from 9 to 1. Thursday, June 12, the dance program will consist of a morning dance at the usual time, and then a final dance that night from 9 to 2. One of the local fraternities has planned an afternoon dance, and for this reason no afternoon dance is to be scheduled by the German Club.

It is at this time of the year that many freshmen apply for membership in the German Club, and for the benefit of all those who are planning to join Will Yarborough will interview such candidates at the S. A. E. house in the near future.

The initiation fee and assessments for new members of the club will amount to $18. For old members who have paid their dues, the assessments will be only $6 and the old rates in regard to visitors and alumni will be $10 for the entire six dances, or $2 for each dance.

Methodist's Party at Pool

The young people of the Methodist church had a party at Sparrow's swimming pool Thursday night.

School Election

Ballots will be cast today to decide whether or not the Chapel Hill graded school district will be enlarged. Notice of the special election has been published during the past few weeks. If the election goes through, considerable new territory will be taken into the special tax district, and both the white and colored schools within the town limits will benefit by the added revenue.

Voting will take place at the school building all day Saturday. Only those who have already registered may vote. The Australian ballot system will be used. The judges are A. W. Hobbs and Eugene Andrews.

Survey of County Schools

A special survey of the schools of Orange county has just begun. Not long ago, the county board of education authorized such a survey, and A. M. Proctor, who is professor of education in Duke University, is at work on the project. A study will be made of every school, reports will be submitted, and a plan for general improvement worked out for the county's educational system.

The engagement of Miss Katherine Batts to Mr. William Callier Salley was announced last Saturday.

Miss Batts is from Tarboro and is now secretary in the romance language department of the University. Mr. Salley is an instructor in Spanish at the University and comes from Tuscaloosa, Ala.

The marriage will take place sometime in June, and then the couple plan to spend the summer in Spain. Next fall Mr. Salley will join the faculty of Whittenburg College in Springfield, Ohio.

Poppy Sale Next Saturday

The American Legion Auxiliary will hold the annual poppy sale Saturday, May 24. At a meeting next Tuesday afternoon workers will be selected to help conduct the sale.

TAYLOR SOCIETY MEETING
MONDAY EVENING
BINGHAM HALL - 7 P. M.

VOLUME XXXVIII — CHAPEL HILL, N. C., SUNDAY, MAY 18, 1930 — NUMBER 173

CONEY SCHEDULED TO SPEAK BEFORE TAYLOR SOCIETY

Assistant Librarian To Tell Group Of Scientific Library Management Monday.

Donald Coney, assistant librarian of the University, will speak before the local student branch of the Taylor Society on "Libraries and Scientific Management" tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock in room 103 Bingham hall.

In his talk Mr. Coney, who has been connected with library work for ten years, will discuss the place of scientific management in educational institutions as well as the functionalized organization of libraries and standardization of library methods and personnel.

The field which Mr. Coney will treat is one in which no organized work has been done, although there has been activity in the scientific management of libraries since the beginning of the scientific management movement.

The discussion which Mr. Coney will present Monday will be very general, for it is impossible to treat in an hour a subject on which he states an entire volume could be written.

The field of scientific library management is one which offers almost limitless opportunity, for as yet the field has scarcely been touched.

Mr. Coney, who has been connected with library work for ten years, was with the library at the University of Michigan for several years and was then librarian at the University of Maryland before coming to Carolina a year and a half ago.

The speaker has been actively interested in the subject of scientific library management, and is well qualified to speak on the subject which he will discuss tomorrow.

The Taylor Society, of which the local organization is a student branch, is an international organization for the promotion of the art and science of scientific management and administration, and as such the local group has held a series of meetings during the year at which faculty members and outside speakers have presented subjects related to scientific management.

The meetings of the society are open to the public, and the officers of the group extend an invitation to any who may be interested in hearing Mr. Coney.

Frosh Council Banquet

The freshman friendship council will meet at an annual banquet tomorrow night in the basement room of the Methodist church at 6:30. This banquet, planned for some time, will be the climax of the quarter's program.

The officers of next year's sophomore cabinet are to be elected tomorrow from a list of nominees already drawn up.

A Correction

The Tar Heel was erroniously informed concerning the recent election of the Glee Club Librarian. In correction we announce that Alden J. Stahr, of East Orange, N. J., was unaimously chosen to serve as librarian for 1930-31.

Tar Heel Meeting

The regular weekly meeting of the Daily Tar Heel staff will convene tonight in the basement of Alumni building. Members of the reportorial staff will gather at 7:15. City editors will meet at 7:00. New beats will be assigned at this meeting, from which nobody will be excused. The rule whereby two absences drops a member from the staff will be enforced. Both the editor and the managing editor will be present.

BAND CONCERT AT CAROLINA TODAY

The University band will give a benefit concert this afternoon at 2:30 in the Carolina theatre.

Following an instrumental program of about 45 minutes in length, the picture, "Sweetie," will be shown through the courtesy of the theatre manager, E. C. Smith. The picture stars Nancy Carroll and is supposed to have taken place in western North Carolina.

A silver offering will be taken to secure necessary funds for the band, a condition which has arisen from the fact that the University has been entirely unable to support the organization this year.

COMMENCEMENT BEGINS ON JUNE 7

Davidson College President Will Preach Baccalaureate Sermon June 8

ELEVEN CLASS REUNIONS

Class Day exercises on Saturday, June seventh, will formally open the University of North Carolina commencement exercises which will last through June tenth.

The baccalaureate sermon will be preached by W. L. Lingle, eleventh president of Davidson College, who will have been inaugurated at that institution on June first.

On Sunday afternoon at five o'clock there will be a band concert under Davie poplar and in the evening the Y. M. C. A. will hold vesper services.

At ten-thirty on Monday in Gerrard hall Judge Francis D. Winston, as usual is to preside over the Alumni meeting, calling the classes holding reunions to come on the platform and having their presidents tell something about them.

The alumni luncheon will be presided over by President W. T. Shore of the Alumni Association at twelve-thirty in Swain hall.

Following another band concert in the afternoon under the poplar, class suppers are to begin at six o'clock. At nine o'clock President Chase gives a reception after which the annual Alumni ball will be given in the Tin Can.

The speaker for commencement day is John H. Finley, editor of the New York Times, who was here in 1904 for the same purpose. Exercises are to begin at eleven o'clock and if the weather is clear they will be held in the open space around the Davie poplar. Dr. Hubert Haywood of Raleigh, is chief marshal.

The classes holding reunions with their officers follow:

FULL SCHEDULE OF DANCES HELD

Junior and Senior Affairs Well Attended; Sigma Zeta Fraternity, Phi and Grail Give Dances.

A full week-end of dances was completed last night with the Grail's final social event of the year. This dance was given in Bynum gymnasium from 9 to 12, music for the affair being rendered by Russ Bolin and his Ohio Cotton Pickers. According to those attending, the dance was a big success.

The junior tea dance given Friday afternoon from 6 to 9 was the first dance of the week-end. Henry House, Herb Nelson and Jack Lindley led this dance, while the committee in charge of the dance was Artie Marpet, Will Yarborough, Tom Craig, Mayne Albright and Pat Patterson.

This dance had been planned to be the annual junior prom, but on account of the other dances it was changed to a tea dance. The attendance at the dance was very good, according to reports.

Immediately following the junior dance, the seniors gave their annual dance. Leaders for the dance were Red Greene, Julian Fenner and Bob Merritt, who led a very attractive figure. This dance, which was a formal affair, was played for by Russ Bolin and his Ohio Cotton Pickers, who played for the junior dance also.

Another dance given Friday afternoon was the annual spring dance of the Philanthropic Assembly. This dance, a tea dance, was given in the Phi hall from 6 to 9 o'clock. The hall was elaborately decorated by Charles Whedbee. Refreshments were served to the 30 members of the Phi and their girls and guests. Music for the affair was played by Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra.

EPISCOPAL TEAS COME TO CLOSE

Parish House Entertainments Have Brought Students and Faculty Closer Together.

The curtain will ring down on one of the most successful activities of the year this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock when the last tea of the quarter will be held in the Episcopal parish house.

Made possible through contributions from the many Episcopal women's organizations in the state, these affairs have become widely known as valuable contributions to the student life here. They have not only served to furnish a period of wholesome entertainment for student recreation, but, in addition, have offered occasion for meetings of faculty and students which would not have otherwise been possible.

Thus, the student teas have become a unique and important addition to the social life of the University community.

Rev. A. S. Lawrence, rector of the parish, has had general supervision of the teas, but the major part of the work and responsibility has been willingly assumed by Mrs. J. H. Anderson. Mrs. Anderson, who is to leave Chapel Hill soon to make her home in Raleigh, is one of the state's prominent clubwomen and a religious and social worker. She has successfully carried on the teas, planning the programs and providing for refreshments.

Entertainment for these affairs has been unusually varied, featuring the best of talent from among the students and faculty and ranging from musical saw solos to readings of original poetry.

Among the entertainers have been Donald Wood, Urban T. Holmes, L. M. Brooks, Wex Malone, Bud Abernathy, Bill Carlyle, Francis Stratton, Clyde Duncan, Mrs. A. S. Wheeler

MAJOR CAIN THREATENS TO SUE CHAPEL HILL EDITOR

Says Louis Graves Has Libelled Him In Referring to His Age As 86; Will Hurt His Chances In Matrimony.

Major William Cain, one of the state's grand old men, has threatened to enter into a friendly law suit against Louis Graves, editor of the famous Chapel Hill Weekly.

The Major alleges that Editor Graves heaped libel upon him by referring to his age as 86. The Major avers that he is only 83, and that three years makes a whale of a lot of difference with a man who is still in the market for matrimony.

The Major has never married, but, says he, "a man never gets toold for marriage, and I still consider myself an eligible bachelor."

The Cain birthday was celebrated Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Nash gave a dinner party for him at their home, and invited many of his close friends in for the feast.

Years and honors sit lightly upon Major Cain, who was formerly head of the department, and is now professor emeritus, of mathematics in the University. He has a keen intellect, a kind heart and an intense interest in the problems of his profession.

When the Civil War broke out he was too young to fight in the army of the Confederacy, but he was such a master of military tactics that he was selected to drill large bodies of that army. Again he was prepared to practice law, but discovered that he was too young to stand the bar examination or to go before the courts. These are but two incidents in the life of Major Cain.

One of the foremost authorities in America on earth pressure and retaining walls, the author of eight authoritative books on mathematics and civil engineering, a writer of scientific papers for learned journals, a violin player of no mean ability, a sportsman who enjoys hunting, fishing and riding, a member of society who is genial, witty and pleasant in his intercourse with friends and relatives—few men have lived lives as full and varied.

"You have five or six professions," said his friend, the late Dr. Whitehead. "You're a teacher of mathematics, a civil engineer, a violinist, a hunter, a fisherman, and several other men."

Magazine Staff Meeting

The first of the regular bi-monthly Carolina Magazine staff meetings will convene tonight at the magazine office in the basement of Alumni building at 7:30. All candidates for the tentative staff must be present unless excused by the editor.

Beard of the University's school of pharmacy, was elected a member of the executive committee of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy, and was made president of the National Conference of Pharmaceutical Associations.

UMSTEAD IS TO RUN FOR SENATE

General Opinion Is That He Will Win Democratic Nomination June 7

WELL-KNOWN IN COUNTY

John W. Umstead has announced that he will enter the Democratic primary June 7 as a candidate for the state senate from Orange county.

The prevailing opinion hereabouts is that he will win over J. Clyde Ray, the only other contestant for the Democratic nomination. Mr. Umstead came from Durham two or three years ago to make his home here, but even before he became a resident of Orange he had a wide acquaintance throughout the county. A graduate of the University in the class of 1909, he is the representative in this section of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company.

His friends welcome with delight the announcement of his candidacy and they are going to make a vigorous campaign for him.

Another Chapel Hill resident who will have his name on the Democratic primary ballot is S. W. Andrews. He is running for register of deeds. L. J. Phipps of Chapel Hill and Sam Gattis, Jr., of Hillsboro are seeking the nomination for assemblyman from Orange.

HARLANDS TO BE HOSTS TO TAFT

Lorado Taft, who will speak at the University within the next few days, will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Harland on Briarbridge Lane during his stay in Chapel Hill. Friends who wish to see Mr. Taft are invited to call on him at the above address.

MRS. KENAN GIVES $25,000 TO HELP NEW COLLECTION

Wilmington Woman Gives Money For Southern Collection Of Historical Material.

Another generous gift has been added to the already long list of benefactions of the Kenan family, Mrs. Graham Kenan has recently given $25,000 to the University to be used for the southern collection of historical material which has been established at the University.

The Kenans have been outstanding in their generosity to the University. Back in 1905 Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, who was Mary Lily Kenan before her marriage, gave to the library a fund to be used in the collection of books and material relating to the Civil War. This collection is known as the Kenan Collection of Civil War Books. At her death Mrs. Flagler, then Mrs. Robert Bingham, left to the University a fund of a million and a half dollars for the establishment of the Kenan professorships.

Soon after the World War Mrs. Graham Kenan established the Graham Kenan Fellowship in Philosophy in memory of her husband, and in the spring of 1927 William Rand Kenan gave to the University, in memory of his father and mother, the magnificent stadium which was completed in the fall of that year.

The recent gift enables the University to carry on with much more effectiveness its program for the collection of manuscripts and documents relating to the history of the south.

PHI TO DISCUSS RECENT CUT IN APPROPRIATIONS

The Phi Assembly at its regular session Tuesday night, will discuss the present situation in regard to the cut in the appropriations for the University. The bill as submitted is as follows: "Resolved, That the legislature of North Carolina should be called upon to support its institutions in the proper manner."

This question has been widely discussed since the appropriations to the University have been cut recently to the amount of $170,000 yearly.

The Assembly in its last meeting rejected by a large majority a bill submitted by Representative Nazareno of the Philippine Islands for immediate independence of the Philippines.

The rejection of this measure called forth the criticism from the Filipino that the Phi defeated the measure due to false statements submitted by Representatives Stanley, Kelly, Jackson and Hoobgood. At the coming meeting Representative Nazareno will probably submit his criticisms to the Assembly. This will undoubtedly call forth a defense of the stand taken by the representatives.

Debate Council

The old and new debate councils will meet together Monday night at 7:30 in 210 Murphey hall. The old council will officially turn over the reins of office to the new members. Immediately following, the new council will choose a president.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I regret that I have to preach, but cannot practice thrift.—Archbishop of Canterbury.

Continuation of the Present Rushing System

Although the Interfraternity Council has decided to continue the same system of rushing as is in effect this year for the year 1930-1931, there has been comment among some fraternity men which is not favorable to the present rules. Chief objections seem to be that there should be a longer period of rushing and that the preliminary period of silence is too long. Many favor an open season—not lasting all the year—during which freshmen may be formally pledged at any time. These objections came up at the time the present regulations were adopted, but they did not have the proper support to make them of much weight. And it seems that the present system still has the support of the majority of fraternity men, if the action of the new Council in continuing it for the coming year is any indication.

There can be no doubt that this system is an improvement over the old. The freshman has more time for study during the rushing period, he is given a chance to become somewhat adapted to his new environment before fraternities start using their high pressure methods on him, and he is not burdened by a prolonged period of rushing which would interfere with his other activities. Individual fraternity members likewise have more time for study and activities than formerly. Fraternities, however, benefit mainly under the new system by having them by written invitation on the first two days, thus allowing each fraternity to entertain desired freshmen before they are swamped with dates.

When these rules were first adopted it was understood that they were to be experimental. The rules have met with general approval, we think, and they should be given another year's trial. It is hoped by the members of the Council that the regulations will be fully observed by the individual fraternity man which is necessary to the effectiveness of the rules.

Speaking Of Phi Beta Kappa

A few nights ago thirty-nine students of the University were accorded what may well be classified as the highest honor that can come to any student during his college career—membership in Phi Beta Kappa. Theirs is a distinction which will grow as the years pass by; theirs is a self- satisfaction (the greatest good accruing from any honor) that will be accelerated from year to year. The coveted "key of knowledge" is given only to those who have done very superior work consistently for three years or more. It cannot be secured by politics or any form of chance. Consistent, hard work coupled with superior native ability is the only formula that will result in membership in Phi Beta Kappa. Because Phi Beta Kappa is positive proof of stickability mingled with native ability, we congratulate the thirty-nine students who were inducted into those select ranks a few nights ago.

There was a time in the history of the University when not more than six or seven men were annually taken into Phi Beta Kappa. Although it is hardly fair to compare the Carolina of the present with the Carolina of many years ago, we wish to point out that the proportion of students making Phi Beta Kappa here has remained fairly constant from the time of the establishment of the local chapter. The writer is, as a matter of fact, of the opinion that Phi Beta Kappa here is a greater honor than it ever was. This contention is made in lieu of the fact that there are more extra-curricular organizations to attract students than ever before. It is interesting to note that the men who rank highest in their candidacy for Phi Beta Kappa are well represented in campus activities—many of them holding offices, and a number being prominent in athletics. This being the case, we are forced to believe that the students who were initiated into the select order at the last initiation ceremony received an honor which is becoming greater all the while, because scholarship pursuits can no longer occupy the amount of the student's time that they once did.

Our congratulations are sincerely extended to our fellow students who have been recently awarded the most lasting, and in our opinion, the highest distinction that can come to a Carolina man.

—J. C. W.

The Public School Teaching Situation

We would no get very far by merely stating that there is an over-supply of public school teachers in North Carolina at present, for even the undertaking game is crowded. The crowded condition of the public school teaching profession in the state does, however, bear a definite relation to the University of North Carolina, in the writer's opinion.

Being cognizant of the relatively low wage paid teachers in the state, the School of Education of the University a few years ago launched the policy of granting prospective teachers free tuition upon condition that they teach in North Carolina for two years in the space of the three years immediately following graduation. This plan was an excellent one in theory and has worked well since its inauguration. The fact of free tuition has, however, brought to pass one evil—Too many students enter the School of Education; the result is too many public school teachers. Many teach the required two years merely in order to prevent paying tuition charges, thereby getting the jobs which would be given those really interested in the teaching profession.

Abolition of free tuition in the School of Eduction would do nothing to remedy the situation, but would rather make matters manifestly worse. The establishment of more loan funds to encourage students unable to pay tuition to enter branches of the University offering courses in line with their professional desires alone would do the trick; that is, reduce the number of non-professional public school teachers.

—J. C. W.

Reciprocity Is What We Want

Since the present is the best time to do anything, a reciprocity system in connection with admittance to athletic activities among the Universities in the state would be apropos at this time. It would be expedient to establish such a system in the Universities and simultaneously be a method of creating good will among them as well as bringing them closer together. At the present time much hard feelings are created as a result of illicit entrance to the various games. This would of course not happen with the above system in practice.

Such a system would tend to liven up the atmosphere, increase attendance at games and unify the Universities in the state furthering the success of the North Carolina Federation of Students which was established here last Saturday, May 10.

Readers' Opinions

AN APPEAL FROM THE DEAF

There is approximately one deaf inmate to each county home. Due to the fact that the state is financially unable to provide a central home for the deaf, the deaf of the South have organized what is known as the Dixie Association of the South, with the aim of founding a home for the aged and infirm deaf.

The home Fund Committee of the association has started its work, and will appreciate any and all contributions from the people of each state. Contributions should be sent to the State Chairman of the Home Fund committe who will publish in the state newspapers a list of the contributions, and will send the amount to Mr. Herbert R. Smoak, of Union, S. C. The support of the people is necessary to the success of the association's plans.

During their years of activity these aged and deaf have contributed much both physically and financially to their home folks, to charity, and to eivic bodies, and it is an urgent desire of the Dixie Association of the Deaf that the work of the said committee be looked upon, not as charity, but as a just and deserving work.

You may announce that all contributions be sent through your paper to Mrs. J. L. Edmondson, 1107 Spruce Street, Durham, N. C., who serves on the Home Fund Committee as chairman in your state.

Anything you may offer to make our activity more efficient will be greatly appreciated.

Thanking you very much for your generous aid to the state chairman, I am,

Very truly yours,
J. M. Robertson, Pres.

"Romeo and Juliet"—Playmaker Production — Forest Theatre, May 16 and 17.

By A. H.

There was a bit more rain than tears in the Forest Theater Friday evening, but not enough of the former to spoil Romeo and Juliet, and quite enough of the latter to seal the success of the Carolina Playmakers' first essay in open-air-tragedy. It is true that a few drops threatened to cut off Juliet (and the show) soon after the nurse weaned her, and Romeo had to ride to Mantua in a drizzle, and Friar Laurence's reverend bald head felt a few sprinkles, and the lofty vault of the Capulets' tomb dripped a sweeter and more copious dew upon the lovely upturned face than a charnel house is apt to yield; but it did not really rain. The lightning-bugs winked angry protests at the clouds, the whippoorwills pleaded for fair weather, and the noble white-oaks and the sweet gums lifted imploring arms to the heavens and spread a gold-fretted roof above the spellbound audience. That is the mythology of the weather control. The technique of it was slightly different. Up in his tower at the top of the hill, Elmer Hall, who had put arrangement but that about the the gloss of perfection on every weather, telephoned (maybe radioed, for he had everything else electrical) the man at the rain valve, "For heaven's sake, shut off the juice; have a heart," and the show went on.

Yes, while the Rain Maker was sputtering his bluff, and while Elmer was doing his stuff, the show went on. For all your correspondent knows, the acting may not have been as deep as a well, but he knows it was not so wide of its mark as a church-door; 'twas enough, and 't would serve for any right-hearted audience in all these more or less United States. Romeo and Juliet is a youthful play about youthful passion and death, and a youthful cast carried it off with the elan of youth. The young performers brought its immortal poetry to the place and the time where it belongs—out into the open air, under trees and stars (or clouds, if the weather says nay), on a spring night, when Carolina whippoorwills and thrushes tell Romeo and Juliet that 'tis neither the nightengale nor the lark. Never did 'Beauty and anguish walk hand in hand the downward slope to death' in a Dramatis personae nearer the heart of youth. and in scenes more like the morning of the world (clouds excepted).

To comment upon individual actors is to be invidious. The cast was like those famous football teams that have no stars but always win the game. Yet, since from such teams the sports reporters select gobs of star dust and make stars, your dramatic reporter supernumerary and extraordinary must make a stab, even if he justly suffers a broken head for his pains.

The titular roles were played as they ought to be played. Virtuoso stuff stales the spirit of poetic immaturity that breathes in Romeo and Juliet. And Howard Bailey and Lois Buell either played to the fact or acted much as they would have acted in Verona or London three-hundred-odd years ago, had they been swirled up into such a whirlwind of tragic passion. Personable enough for his role, gifted with a rich and flexible voice, Mr. Bailey compassed the ranges of his scenes admirably; to this reporter he seemed at his best in the quarrel scene with Tybalt, where his eyes really flashed and his face was contorted by the paroxysms of grief and anger. Miss Buell was what Juliet ought to be. Her voice, soft and low (an admirable thing in woman, and indispensable in Juliet), was at a distinct disadvantage in the open air and wsa not always heard from the third row back, but was an admirable instrument for her delicately sensitive interpretation of the lines. Expression, movement, and gesture observed the shades and nuances feelingly and gracefully. She dropped "Parting is such sweet sorrow" as it should have been dropped—like a single woodland bouquet of orchids.

As for Mercutio, he amply demonstrated the truth of a remark by that Carolina professor of Shakespearean drama who is fond of saying that Shakespeare had to kill off Mercutio to keep him from running away with the play. In years Professor Koch is a little farther from his 'teens than the average member of the cast, but his too was the spirit of youth that carried the play along in full spate. His Queen Mab speech was a magnificent piece of fireworks,

Nothing of youth but love and sympathy is in the roles of Friar Laurence and the Nurse, but that and all else that goes with these roles was captured by Professor Mackie and Mrs. Gumble. The dramatic range of the latter, wider than the former but not so deep, was mastered everywhere. Mrs. Gumble was at her best where the Nurse is at her best—in the garden scene where she "holds out" on Juliet. This reporter is sorry that the long speech describing the weaning of Juliet was cut; it went so swimmingly from "Come Lammas-eve" to "And she was wean'd" that he craved the rest.

Peter (Joe Fox), the Nurse's servant, stumbled and fanned his way into notice at once, and held what he got. His anti-masque to Romeo was exquisite.

As for the others, the fiery Tybalt (Kent Creuser) scowled and fulminated up to the possibilities of that strong role; Benvolio (Harry Galland) and Paris (Eveland Davies) moved surely through their less rugged parts, exhibiting (for the minor roles) conciseness of enunciation; Escalus (B. C. Wilson) was an incisive and vigorous prince; Montague (Horace Ward) and Capulet (Charles Elledge) were excellent vendetta chieftains, the Capulet showing to great advantage by reason of his more important business, particularly in his handling of the marriage problem; Lady Capulet (Margaret Vale) realized perfectly that quiet role; the Apothecary (Cuttis Muse) was as macabre as anything out of Dante or Chaucer; and the servants, Balthasar (Fred Cole), Sampson (Gordon Dike), Abraham (Ernest Deans) and the Page to Paris (Robert Davis) ran their errands, fought, got in the way and out of the way as good Shakespearean servants should.

Two words should be said for the music and the minuet. The University Orchestra, augmented by members of the State Symphony Orchestra, alone gave a treat worth going to the damp woods to hear. Their music, coming from the bushes and the honeysuckle hedge, was as fresh and sweet as the evening tir. Much of the minuet, stately and graceful as it was, was lost to your correspondent, who was watching a certain slender lit-

Pen Points

By H. J. Galland

Old Jupe Pluvius was a bewildered man this week-end. He didn't quite know which way to turn. There were the farmers in eastern North Carolina doing their best to make him welcome, and there was Elmer Hall in Chapel Hill burning figurative incense to keep him away so that his handiwork, Romeo and Juliet in the Forest theatre, wouldn't be rained out and ruined.

Not knowing quite what to do, Jupe did a little of both. But Playmaker audiences are hardy by this time and he didn't appreciably affect them. Nor could the week-end dances be stopped by his sporadic activity. Wet or slightly moist dances are a new thing in these parts.

Soft words and gentle phrases, we find, go far toward getting the girl. During one of the rehearsals for the Forest theatre play, Romeo decided to improve on Willie Shakespeare with a little modern language. "Say," said he, "that's a swell-looking bim. Hey, gal, how about a little date? Old man Capulet won't care if he doesn't know. How about it, kid?" Juliet didn't register. From which may be deduced the fact that Willie knew his stuff with the ladies after all, for Juliet came around nicely when addressed in his well-known language.

We note that George Lawrence has an actual balance of $21.94 left over from the Orange County Relief Fund. If Mr. Lawrence will drop a dime of that sum near us, we will tell him whether it has flopped to heads or tails by merely stepping on it—after which we will accept with thanks $21.84.

Warm weather—and the only proper existence these days is that of a tile in Sparrow's pool.

A plea for the preservation of old Carolina songs in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel. The compilers of the book, if it appears, are referred to a current classic having to do with the Betas, and are advised that an excellent source for such material is the annual interfraternity council banquet.

Lorado Taft and the Denishawn Dancers will be here shortly. Both are worth while attractions. Which of the two will be better attended is an easy question. Were Mr. Taft to appear in diaphanous robes and prance a step or two, and were the Denishawn girls to model in clay as they danced, the attendance might be more nearly equal for the two events. In fact, in the case of Mr. Taft, there would probably be a record-breaking crowd. Can't someone do something about this—we'd like to see how it would work out.

There's nothing like a man waiting to grab copy from a typewriter to make one hurry and dash out utter nonsense. There is such an insistent hurrier at our elbow now—no, he's out and around the corner, this colyum fluttering in the breeze as he carries it.

DUKE TAKES BIG FIVE TITLE WITH WIN OVER HEELS

Edwards, Longest, Fleming and Shields Fail To Stop Them As Blue Devils Trample Carolina 15-2.

Pounding four Tar Heel pitchers for 14 hits, the Blue Devils administered a 15-2 drubbing to Carolina in Durham yesterday, thereby laying undisputed claim to their second consecutive Big Five championship.

The game was only a repetition of the one-sided contest played in Chapel Hill earlier in the season, in which loose fielding for the Tar Heels and a brand of hitting that brings despair to the hearts of opposing moundsmen were the deciding factors in causing such a large difference of scores.

Duke started off in their half of the first inning by running in more than enough tallies to win the game. Harrington, first up, was retired on a weak grounder to pitcher, Dean took a base on balls, went to third on Werber's single to left field, and came in home when Wright failed to recover Werber's hit soon enough to throw him out at the plate, with Werber taking second on the throw-in. Kistler doubled, bringing Werber in, Rochelle popped up to short and Lufty juggled Murray's hit to third, letting Kistler score while Murray took first. Farleigh walked and Warren cleared the bases with a home run drive to center field. Jenkins was hit by a pitched ball and was caught stealing second for the third out, leaving the Blue Devils with a six-run lead on three hits.

Carolina, after going down in one-two-three order in the first, made a futile attempt to overtake the lead in the second and scored the only two runs she was able to wangle out of the old Tar Heel jinx, Lefty Jenkins. Successive singles by Lufty, Potter and Wright brought in two runs, leaving the Devils still with a four-run lead.

The Blue Devils evidently didn't trust the Tar Heels, for they kept adding to the already sufficient lead at every opportunity. One run in the second, another in the fourth, four in the sixth and three in the eighth added up to 15 and the bloodthirsty Devils had bitten off their last bite of Tar Heel meat. Carolina stuck her two runs and six hits in the bag with the tell-tale scorebook, giving deep utterance to vows of vengeance at the next meeting on the diamond in 1931.

Carolina First In Conference Meet

In a flash which came over the wire last night just before the Tar Heel went to press it was learned that Carolina won first place in the Southern Conference track meet with 40 1-2 points. Georgia took second with 28 1-2 and Mississippi A. & M. came third with 25 1-3.

In the 100 yard dash Charlie Farmer took third place, with Hamm of Georgia Tech first, but the Carolina sophomore showed his heels to the field to come in first in the 220.

Minor Barkley placed second in the mile, and third in the half, Ken Gay got third in the 440, Adkins fourth in the shot, Baucom third in the two mile, and Slusser second in the low hurdles. Other Carolina point scorers were Pheonix, fourth in the mile; Perry, fourth in the high hurdles; Brown and Dameron, third and fourth in the discus; Arnold; and second in the mile relay.

McGinn of State won the half mile, while Hamm captured the century in ten flat.

MARTIN LEVINSON GOOD BOXER SAYS TAR HEEL WRITER

Will Close Impressive Season By Fighting Swengen of Mt. Holly Monday.

(By Dan Kelly)

Martin Levinson, freshman at the University, has hung up an impressive record in boxing this last season. Levinson hails from the hills of Connecticut. Prior to his coming here he held records in amateur boxing circles.

He began his boxing career at Crosby high school, Waterbury, Conn., at the age of 16. While in prep school he took part in 36 fights, winning all but 11. He fought some of the best men obtainable in Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut and Maryland. He contested for the featherweight title of Connecticut in 1929 tournament, losing in the final fight by a scant margin.

Entering the University in the fall as a freshman, he continued his good work with the gloves. His first fight was with McBride of Washington and Lee. He put his opponent on the canvas in the first round of the fight and gave him a severe beating in general, the fight being stopped in the third round.

Levinson's second engagement was with Bobby Goldstein of the the University of Virginia. He lost this fight after having floored Goldstein in the first round. Goldstein is considered to be one of the best bantam weights in the south, however.

Fighting Whittaker of Oak Ridge next, he won easily in a three-round decision fight. His next contest was with Hunter of N. C. State. He punched Hunter N. C. State. He punched Hunter to the canvas and gave him a terrific whipping. His last fight of the season was with Jackson of V. P. I. In this bout Levinson clearly outfought his opponent in every phase of the game, climaxing his season's record with a knockout early in the third round. With this record the ring followers at the University will be insured of plenty of thrills the coming season, in the bantamweight class, at least. He is scheduled to fight Bob Swinger of Mt. Holly at Charlotte Monday.

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was organized October 1, 1883.

CAROLINA TEAMS BRING SCHEDULES TO END TUESDAY

Baseball Game With State And Tennis Match With Duke Ring Down Curtain On Season.

The University baseball team brings its Big Five titular quest and its 1930 season to a close with a game against N. C. State on Emerson field here Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Paul Edwards, star sophomore hurler, proved too much for the Wolfpack in a previous meeting, and it is likely that Edwards will be on the mound again in the Tar Heels' final game. Bill Averette, the Wolfpack ace, will probably pitch for State, so that prospects are for a lively mound duel.

The Tar Heel tennis team will also close its season this week. The Carolina netters meet Duke in a return match here Tuesday. Led by Hendlin, Captain Merritt and Liskin, the Tar Heels have come through an undefeated season and will be striving to keep their slate clean on Tuesday.

Duke pushed the Tar Heels hardest in the North Carolina college tourney, as well as giving them a tough fight in their dual meeting. Feature matches are expected all along the line with the number one duel between Hendlin, Carolina's state champ, and Phillips of Duke expected to be especially interesting. The doubles match between Hendlin and Liskin, Carolina's state champions, and Frank and Rogers of Duke should be another feature, these being the same teams that clashed for the title.

These events will ring down the curtain on the University's sport card for the year. The track and golf teams finished their seasons on Saturday, the former in the southern meet in Birmingham and the latter with a match with Virginia. The freshman teams have all wound up their schedules, and now gloves and mits and rackets will be put aside for the more serious business of getting set for exams.

AUGUSTA MILITARY WINS PREP MEET

Stafford Military Comes Second With 36 1-2 Points.

Augusta Military Academy, led by the stellar performances of Captain Goodwin, star hurdler, and Alex Weisker, who broke the records in the 100-yard dash and broad jump, nosed out Staunton Military Academy 39½ to 36½ in the southern preparatory school track and field championships held on Emerson field here yesterday afternoon, in a meet in which no fewer than six records were smashed and one tied.

Competition in the meet was close throughout, and it was not until the last event which was counted in the score was run off that the victory definitely rested with the colors of A. M. A. The victory of the Virginia boys was well deserved, Goodwin and Weisker accounting for four firsts, and four new records, while Moseley, of the same schoo,l took first in the high jump, ⅛ inch short of a record, to score up a total of five firsts for A. M. A.

Goodwin broke the record in the 120 high hurdles with the fast time of 16 seconds flat. The old time for this race was 16.2 seconds. In the 220 low hurdles Goodwin again broke the existing record with the time of 25.2 seconds, the old record being 25.8. In the 100 yard dash, Weisker broke out to the front with the gun and increased his lead to about four yards, winning with ease over McAinich of Staunton in the record-breaking time of 9.8 seconds. The old record was 10.2 seconds, and was jointly held by Rip Slusser and two other men. The watches of all five timers caught Weisker in this time. In the 220 yard dash, Weisker again broke to the fore with the starting gun; however, at about the 150 yard mark McAinich came up with a rush to take the lead, which he held till the finish. His time in this race was 22.4 seconds, a mark which tied the existing record. In the broad jump, Weisker again took first, breaking the record by 9¾ inches with a leap of 21 feet 7¼ inches. In this event, Whitton and Perry of Staunton, who took second and third with jumps of 21 feet 1½ inches and 21 feet 1¼ inches respectively, both went over the old record of 20 feet 9½ inches. In the pole vault, McKay of Danville Military Institute broke the old record of 11 feet 3¼ inches with a vault of 11 feet 5 inches. In the half mile, Cadman and Sparrow of D. M. I. put on a thrilling neck and neck battle, with Sparrow leading until the last straightaway and Cadman passing his teammate then to race across the finish in the record time of 2 minutes 3 seconds. The old record was 2 minutes 4.2 seconds. In the shot put, Chapman of Staunton won by over two feet from his nearest rival, tossing the lead a mere 46 feet 2¼ inches. In the mile run, Cochran of Staunton put on a terrific sprint to beat out Bowman of Augusta, collapsing as he crossed the finish line. His time was four minutes 45.2 seconds. In the 440-yard run, Hormell of Greenbriar Military School took the lead in the first 20 yards and won, going away from Armstrong of Hargraves in 52 seconds flat. In the discus Stanhagen of Greenbriar threw the platter 118 feet 3 inches to win over Chapman of Staunton. In the javelin throw Lineweaver of Staunton tossed the spear 156 feet to take first over Smith of Hargrave, his closest rival.

The closest races of the day were the 100 and 220 between Weisker and MaAinich and the 880 between Cadman and Sparrow, D. M. I. teammates. The biggest walkaway of the afternoon was the 220-yard low hurdle race, in which Goodwin of A. M. A. defeated his closest rival, Traendly of Greenbriar, by over 20 yards.

Weisker was high scorer of the meet, with two firsts and one second, and two records, having a total of 13 points; Goodwin was a close second in the scoring honors, hanging up two firsts and two records for a total of 10 points.

In the special events between the U. N. C. freshmen, Bob Drane ran his best race of the year to win the 100 in 10 seconds flat. In this race Marland took second, Wornom third and Stafford fourth. In the ¾ mile run, Clarence Jensen, premier Tar Baby distance man, allowed Jones to lead until the final straightaway was reached, and then uncorked a terrific sprint to win by 20 yards in 3:19. Cordle, Tar Baby two-miler, also came through with a final sprint which carried him home ahead of Jones; Jones finished third and Hubbard fourth.

In the regular prep school mile relay, all entries except Staunton withdrew, this event not being counted in the scoring. Hastily the frosh tracksters, who had already dressed and partaken of sundry "dopes," hot dogs and chocolate bars in celebration of the end of training, were gathered up and formed into a team to give Staunton some competition. In the first leg of the relay, Mitcham, star frosh quartermiler, gained a 20-yard lead over Metcalf of Staunton; in the next lap, Watkins, another frosh 440 man, running against Buesching of Staunton, increased the lead to some 30 yards; Jones, Carolina half miler and miler, increased the lead another five yards, running against Bonnett of Staunton; Drane, running against Chapman of Staunton, increased the lead to some 45 yards, crossing the line with a total time for the Tar Babies in 3:33, two seconds under the record set last year by the McCallie school team, of which Drane and Watkins were members. Staunton's time was 3:46, and the members of its team were awarded the medals.

FOUR FROM SOUTH WIN FELLOWSHIPS

Two From University Of Texas Win Yale Awards.

Out of 179 fellowships and scholarships given by the graduate school of Yale University for the year 1930-31, four were received by southern men.

Two men receiving fellowships for graduate study in government and political science were Charles E. Davis, a graduate of the University of Texas, and Cecil H. Tolbert, also a graduate of the University of Texas. These fellowships are made possible through the gift of the Cowles Foundation for the study of government, made to Yale University by members of the family of Alfred Cowles of the Chicago Tribune.

Another southerner receiving a fellowship was Charles D. Matthews, a graduate of Birmingham-Southern College. Mr. Matthews was given his fellowship for research in Semitic languages.

The fourth fellowship that was awarded to a southern man went to William C. Bramble for research in organic chemistry. This award was donated to Yale by the Texas Oil Company.

Bill McDade

Bill McDade was 76 years old yesterday.

He started in as a janitor for the University at the re-opening in 1875 and served the institution for 33 years without a break. For his first quarter of a century there was no central heating or water-works, and he had to make a fire and carry water for every room in the Old East, and in several recitation rooms as well.

George Stephens of Asheville, alumnus of the University and an old friend of Bill's happened to be at my house when Bill called the other day. And the three of us exchanged reminiscences about past days in Chapel Hill.

"I used to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning," said Bill, "'cause I had to start early to get the work done. We janitors took turn about ringing the bell, each one ringing it a week at a time. The janitors these days don't know what work is compared with what we did."

"I never will forget," said Mr. Stephens, "how quickly Bill could make a fire. He would come in when I was asleep, pile a lot of wood in the fireplace, throw a little oil on it, and be gone, leaving a big blaze, before I could open my eyes."

After Bill quit the University's service he began working for fraternities, and now he is the janitor for the Beta Theta Pi's. He is still hale and hearty and enjoys nothing so much as greeting old-timers whom he used to know when they were boys here. He is serving today the grandsons of many of the men whom he served in the 70's and 80's.

Last Episcopal Tea

The last Episcopal tea of the spring quarter will be held this afternoon from 4:30 to 6 in the Parish house. Special music will be featured. Students of all religious denominations are cordially invited.

WRIGHT RECEIVES NEW FELLOWSHIP

To Continue Studies In England In June.

Dr. Louis B. Wright of the English department of the University will return to England in June to complete the collection of material for a book which he is preparing on the culture and literature of the English middle class during the Renaissance.

He has just received a continuation of the Guggenheim fellowship which he held in 1928-29 and plans to spend most of the time from June to the opening of the University in September at research work in the British Museum in London and in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

Principals Who Actually Teach

In a recent study made by M. C. S. Noble, Jr., of the state department of public instruction, it is disclosed that more than fifty per cent of the white principals of North Carolina schools teach from three to five periods each day. Only 130 of the 901 principals do not have actual classroom duties. The largest groups teach four periods a day. The class periods range from 40 to 60 minutes each. "This should dispel any fear that these school officials as a whole do not take part in teaching activities," states a bulletin issued by the department of public instruction.

THE THEATRE

tle brunette whom he had seen that afternoon, dressed at rehearsal in a boy's blue overalls and a none-too-immaculate undershirt (she did have on shoes too, perhaps). The wood magic had done its metamorphological stuff; she danced like a sylph, and she gave your correspondent a pretty interlude.

When your correspondent, between Acts II and III, strolled around a bit, he discovered a satyr or faun clinging to a great white-oak tree. When he addressed the faun, the faun answered in a rich Louisiana Creole drawl and unhooked a telephone receiver. He was a switchman in communication with Elmer Hall and Bob Dawes on the hill—one of half a dozen who manipulated lights on orders from the hilltop.

This incident and the overalls girl merely suggest the hard work and the marvelous organization that kept the scenes moving from Capulet's house on the extreme left to Friar Laurence's Cell and the Apothecary's Shop on the extreme right, from the street in front of the stage to the churchyard at the back. The writer does not know the technical slanguage, but he was told that the stage was organized on the multiple-set or unit-scene plan, the lights defining particular scenes and "blackouts" cutting off the rest of the stage. Whatever the terms, the things themselves were right. Mr. Hall made perfect adjustment between his sets and the natural background, giving the one that degree of definition that merged it into the latter, without parting.

And now for the audience and the tradition in which this superb performance was rooted. Your correspondent never stretched out under the Davie Poplar or warmed an assigned seat in the late lamented Memorial hall; he therefore did some thinking, perhaps, about things that the Carolinese took for granted. Where else, in all these United States, he asked himself, could such another experience be had for six bits? Where else could a band of collegiate youngsters, stiffened a bit by two or three wise older heads, put on Romeo and Juliet in such surroundings and get away with it-get away with balcony scenes, duels, deaths, and graveyards? Where else is there such a woodland theater, selected, improved, and otherwise let alone? Where else would such a group of people pay the aforesaid six bits, sit on the ground (damp), and listen with quiet, deep enjoyment to such a show? If there is anyone else—and no doubt there is, though your correspondent doesn't know—such an institution as the Carolina Playmakers, then that institution has made all those places queried.

Chapel Hill Burglar Loses To Chicago Pair

Up until just the other day it was thought that someone either in or near Chapel Hill had committed the most unusual theft when he removed, without the owner's consent, the radiator from an automobile parked near the Tin Can last winter.

Now, however, a pair of men from Chicago, that city famous for its crime even if it is of the ordinary garden variety, have gone the local thief one better and Chapel Hill thereby loses its distinction. And we must concede that the story from Chicago has it all over the local tale.

"Do you know what those things are?" inquired a policeman of William Stacey and Albert Brusillo, when he saw them rolling a cart of merchandise from the plant of a printing firm.

"No, we don't," replied the pair who were beginning their careers of crime in this most unusual fashion.

"What are they?"

"Burglar Alarms."

And so Chapel Hill loses its distinction.

At a trustees meeting in the spring of 1896 it was decided that University students could join fraternities in October of the sophomore year instead of in January of the same year as had been the case before.

KOCH IS STAR IN OPEN - AIR SHOW

Has "Great Time" Playing "Mercutio"; His First Role Since 1923.

Frederick H. Koch, who is listed in the University catalog as professor of dramatic literature, but who is better known to Tar Heels as chief of the Carolina Playmakers, has appeared in the role of actor only twice during the 12 years he has been in Chapel Hill. He figures it's his business to try to teach others how to act and write.

Professor Koch made his second appearance in performances given here Friday and Saturday nights in the Playmakers' beautiful Forest Theatre. The production was Shakespeare's immortal "Romeo and Juliet." Professor Koch did not play the title role. He took the part of the gallant "Mercutio." But he was by far the star of the show.

"I am having a great time," he said during intermission. And he evidently was. He was a first-rate example of an actor who lives the part and enjoys it. His only other appearance in the role of actor was back in 1923, when he played the part of "Petrucio" in "The Taming of the Shrew," another outdoor production.

Miss Lois Buell, of the Boston Repertory Theatre, as Juliet, and Howard Bailey of the Playmakers, as Romeo, had the title roles, and they handled the parts exceptionally well. But no little credit should go to Harry Galland, who played the role of "Benvolio" in magnificent fashion.

One particularly pleasing feature of the production was the continuity of the action. The scenery by Elmer Hall, technical director, was based on the unit set idea with different stages for different scenes, with the action shifting from one stage to another. There were no waits between acts except a 15 minute intermission. The scenery was magnificent.

The incidental music for the balcony scene and other scenes of the play was furnished by the University Faculty Orchestra, augmented by the State Symphony Orchestra.

Among the 40 members of the cast, in addition to these mentioned above, were: B. C. Wilson of Glenville, Eveland Davies of Chapel Hill, Horace Ward of Rose Hill, Charles Elledge of Salisbury, Kent Creuser of New York City, Professor George McKie of Chapel Hill, Fred Cole of Southern Pines, Gordon Dike of Germantown, Pa., Ernest Deans of Selma, Joe Fox of Metheun, Mass., Curtis Muse of Carthage, Herbert Davis of High Point, George Wilcox of Newport, Margaret Vale of Chapel Hill, Lois Buell of Boston and Nora Del Gumble of Redpack, Pa.

Ferguson To Head Soph Y Next Year

The Freshman Friendship Council held a banquet last evening in the basement of the Methodist church at 6:30. After dinner, the election of officers for next year's sophomore Y. M. C. A. Cabinet took place. "Bim" Ferguson was elected president, "Tommy" Thomas, vice-president, Bill Hoffman, secretary, and Jim Steere, treasurer.

Immediately following the elections, the council was entertained by the "Y" quartet. Then Mr. Rozzelle, pastor of the Methodist church, spoke to the members on "Right and Wrong—What Norm of Comparison Shall We Use." The meeting closed with a word of prayer.

Phi To Elect

Speaker Carr of the Phi Assembly will conduct an election of officers tonight for the fall quarter of next year.

Providing the assembly finishes its business in a reasonable time the house will turn to the consideration of the following bill: "Resolved, That the legislature should be called upon to support its institutions in a proper manner."

CROWD ATTENDS EPISCOPAL TEA

Group Joins In Singing Old University Songs; Mrs. Anderson Given Ovation.

With an unusually large attendance, the final Episcopal student tea for the year was given Sunday afternoon in the parish house of the Chapel of the Cross. Hostesses on this occasion were Mesdames J. H. Anderson, C. W. Woollen, S. H. Hobbs, Jr., J. B. Bullitt, I. H. Manning, A. S. Lawrence and Harding, who have also previously assisted with the teas.

Miss Frances Stratton at the piano and Jack Wardlaw, banjoist, furnished the music for Sunday's affair. These musicians have previously appeared on the programs for the teas as have Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lawrence, Mrs. R. H. Wettach, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Harris, Harold Cone and members of Bill Stringfellow's orchestra.

Sunday's program was completed with the group singing "'Neath the Oaks of Old Chapel Hill," a college song of the '90's, revived for this occasion; "Auld Lang Syne"; and the University song, "Hark the Sound."

The students present also joined in one of the University yells for Mrs. Anderson, who has been largely responsible for the success of the teas and who is to leave Chapel Hill soon to make her home in Raleigh.

A feature of the teas to which public attention has not previously been attracted is the home-like atmosphere of the parish house interior. The furnishings for these rooms were provided by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the parish, under the direction of its president, Mrs. Hobbs.

There were a number of out-of-town visitors at the tea.

Y HILLSIDE MEET HELD IN THEATRE

The annual hillside meeting of the three Y cabinets was held last Sunday afternoon near the Forest theatre. Seated on the ground, the cabinet members listened to a talk by Frank Graham.

Mr. Graham in an informal way spoke to the members on the advantages of getting out in the open and being alone out with nature. Continuing the speaker gave examples in the life of Christ where He had gone away from the crowd to be alone with Himself.

Prior to Mr. Graham's talk the yearly reports of the Y were given by Jimmie Williams, Jack Dungan and Jimmie Kurfees. The devotional exercises were led by John Lang, while the meeting was in charge of Ed Hamer, the new Y president.

Special Committee Will Confer Today; To Present Findings At Meeting Tonight.

OTHER TOPICS ON DECK

A banquet and meeting for the newly selected student activities committee is to be held tonight in the Carolina Inn at 6:30 o'clock, at which time the fate of the Daily Tar Heel is to be decided.

As a result of the discussions of this conference, it is hoped by President "Red" Greene that some definite decision concerning the advisability of continuing the Tar Heel as a daily may be reached. It is an openly known fact that the paper has been running at a considerable loss this year.

Just how much this deficit amounts to will be reported to the committee by the chairman of the Publications Union Board, Clyde Dunn. Another report will be brought to the student activities committee by a sub-committee which President Greene has appointed to investigate the status of the publication and to present its findings for consideration of the group.

Made up of J. E. Dungan, Robert House, Will Yarborough, Pat Patterson, J. M. Lear, Oscar Coffin and J. A. Williams, this committee met for the first time last night and will convene again at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

After considering the report of the sub-committee and after having concluded its own discussions on the subject, the activities committee will formulate its own conclusions. If it is decided to continue the daily publication, recommendations will be made for financing the paper.

Although the above-mentioned topic is to occupy the larger part of the evening's discussion, other pertinent subjects that relate to local campus activity will be aired.

The following men have received invitations from President Greene to attend the banquet and to take part in the business carried on there: Ray Farris, Pat Patterson, Theron Brown, Dave Henry, Mayne Albright, Ed Hamer, Burgess Whitehead, Henry House, Will Yarborough, J. E. Dungan, Glenn Holder, Travis Brown, Clyde Dunn, John Mebane, J. C. Williams, Cy Edson, Kermit Wheary, Harry Galland, E. C. Daniel and K. C. Ramsay, representing the student body.

The following faculty members have also been invited: F. F. Bradshaw, W. S. Bernard, J. M. Booker, H. S. Dyer, Addison Hibbard, H. D. Myer, D. D. Carroll, C. T. McCormick, A. S. Mangum, J. M. Bell, N. W. Walker, G. M. Braun, E. V. Howell, W. W. Pierson and W. M. Dey.

Ex-President Of Michigan Writes On What's Wrong With Colleges

Clarence Cook Little, eminent scientist and former head of the University of Michigan, has written a book in which he severely criticizes American institutions of higher learning. The volume, entitled The Awakening College, is sure to be the subject of considerable discussion in educational circles. The New York Times calls it the "Now It Can Be Told" of an ex-university president."

Here are some of the passages from the review in the Times:

"It cannot be said that Dr. Little has completely escaped bias. His is no Olympian aloofness. He is still smarting under the abrasions of campus warfare. He sees pink if not red when he thinks of hide-bound professors, arrogant deans, young Babbits in the fraternities, and bloated athletics. But his book is not the work of a man with a grouch. He is not trying to 'expose' the University of Michigan or any other one institution. He takes an optimistic view of the changes now going on in the colleges and universities . . . . .

"The unfortunate aspects of the college system are not hard to find. The old methods of examining candidates for admission, now being slowly modified, are unscientific and unfair. They do not test even factual knowledge with any degree of precision and they neglect the emotional factor entirely. The same error is carried over into the standardized and over-professionalized curriculum. Although colleges are supposed to exist for the purpose of educating students, devotion to teaching is generally frowned upon and 'creative scholarship' is practically forced upon the faculty. Men who are admirable teachers but who do not write monographs are constantly being left behind in the race for promotion . . . .

"Fraternities are likely to be snobbish and selfish, putting their almost inconceivably narrow interests ahead of those of the institution which permits them to exist. Inter-collegiate athletics, stimulated by groups outside the campus, absorb much of the interest which under a better system might be given to wholesome exercise, to intramural contests of many sorts, and even to studies. In the state universities the difficulties of higher education are increased by political pressure, and in all universities and colleges the alumni are at times a pernicious factor.

"If one stopped here the picture might be such a distressing one as to justify a movement to abolish colleges and universities and educate our educable youth in the future by a system of apprenticeship or in the ancient

Di To Initiate

The quarterly executive session of the Dialectic Senate will be held tonight in the Di hall at 7:15 o'clock, at which time officers for the fall quarter will be elected. The regular quarterly initiation of new members will be held. Any one wishing to propose men for membership should do so at this meeting.

Full attendance at this meeting is urged by President Rector, as there will be only one more meeting this quarter.

TAFT LECTURES IN PHILLIPS HALL ON 'CLASSIC ART'

To Speak Again At Methodist Church On Renaissance Sculpture.

Lorado Taft opened his series of lectures on art in Phillips hall last night with an entertaining and educational talk on "Classic Art." Owing to an unsuitable screen for the illustrative slides, the Methodist church was not used as planned.

Spicing his main theme—itself very interesting—with excellent witticism, Mr. Taft held his audience of assembled townsfolk and students interested throughout the length of the talk; he is one of the few men ever able to accomplish this feat at the University. His lecture was accompanied by slides, demonstrating the various beauties of Greek sculpture and architecture.

Perhaps one of the main factors in holding the interest of the audience was the fact that Mr. Taft is acknowledged to be one of the foremost authorities on sculpture in not only the United States but also the world at large. His statements and surmises about ancient Greek sculpture are accepted as the standards of the nation's leading art centers.

Tonight Mr. Taft will talk on "Sculpture of the Renaissance." Due to the spread of favorable reports on his first appearance in Chapel Hill, even a larger attendance is expected tonight than last. The Methodist church will be equipped with an ample screen for the occasion.

Chapel Hill Firemen Receive Certificates

Stage Annual Feast With Mayor Council Presiding.

Forsaking, for the time being, their trucks and hose for music and dancing and barbecue, the local fire department held its annual feast at its lodge near here Saturday night. At this feast there were 60 guests, including all the town officials.

Thirteen certificates for service of five years or more were awarded to the members of the local fire department by J. L. Miller of Concord, secretary of the State Fireman's Association. Other speakers were Rev. B. J. Howard of the Chapel Hill Christian church, former Chief Andrews of the fire department, and Chief J. F. Bennett of the Durham fire department.

Other features of the celebration were music by Jack Wardlaw's Banjo Boys, selections by the "Dixie Boys," local colored quartet, horseshoe pitching and Brunswick stew.

Service certificates were awarded to Chief J. L. Foister for 26 years of service; J. W. Huskey, 26 years; D. T. Nevill, 23; A. B. Leigh, 21; R. C. Andrews, 18; P. B. Sparrow, 17; P. R. Perry, 13; P. A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I have sort of lost my taste for writing—Calvin Coolidge.

Forward or Backward?

The success or failure of the Daily Tar Heel will be decided within the next few days by the student body. The paper as a daily has passed its experimental stage and now faces a vote of confidence or condemnation.

When plans were submitted to the student body last year it was understood that the consolidation of the business management of the Magazine would effect some saving but not enough to enable the daily to break even. However, after one year of publication the students are to decide whether they wish a daily paper or not.

Tonight at the meeting of the student activities committee meeting proposals for continuing the Tar Heel as a daily will be discussed. Three propositions will be submitted the student body—return to the tri-weekly, an additional fee of one dollar or abolition of the Buccaneer and curtailment of the cost of the Yackety Yack.

The plea was made last spring that either the Tar Heel must keep stride with the University and go ahead or must fall backward. One no longer is able to make that plea. But we do insist that at this time, when the University is facing the scrutiny of countless eyes, it would be a mistake to discontinue the one sign of progress among the students here. We must not show signs now of wavering in our determination to keep abreast the times. We have no voice in the determination of the work of the legislature, the board of trustees or the faculty, but we alone have the right to conduct student affairs. Do we go forward or backward?

The president's report of 1896 stated that a rule was being enforced which permitted no one except players and managers to go outside the state to attend athletic games.

Shall the Daily Tar Heel Continue?

Tomorrow evening at the Carolina Inn the student activities commtitee will meet to discuss the expediency of continuing the Tar Heel as a daily publication of the University of North Carolina.

It has been intimated by one of the members of this committee that a hearty endorsement of the Daily Tar Heel will be made at this meeting, and that the committee will recommend an increase of one dollar, or 33 1-3 cents a quarter, in the student activities or publications fee for next year.

As was predicted when plans were under way last year for making the Tar Heel a daily, the Daily Tar Heel has not been a financial success. The expense of operating a daily has been noticeably greater than that of the tri-weekly, and in addition business conditions have caused a slight deficiency in advertising during the past three quarters. Otherwise the Daily Tar Heel has been a marked success, and there is no legitimate reason why it should not continue to be published six times a week.

It was also predicted that occurences on the campus involving news interest would not be sufficient to provide copy for a daily student publication. This prediction has been adequately disproved. Practically every issue of the Daily Tar Heel has been filled with articles that were of sufficient news value for a college paper. Rather than being confronted with a paucity of reportorial copy, the editorial staff has had to deal with the opposite sort of situation. Time and again the make-up men have been forced to discard stories turned in, or to hold them over until a later issue in order to make room for more necessary articles. Selectivity has thus been fostered. Instead of having to use whatever copy there might be at hand to fill up the paper, the staff has been able to select those of most news value and interest to the readers. The number of occasions upon which "house ads" have been run because of lack of news items may be numbered on the fingers of one hand.

A staff of more than 70 has carried on the business of putting out a daily student paper with smoothness and efficiency which is commendable in amateur journalists. The work has been rather well systemized and departmentalized, and individual and collective responsibility for the various phases or steps in preparing the paper for circulation has brought about a well-functioning student daily.

When the student body passes the final verdict on the fate of the Daily Tar Heel Tuesday, May 27, it is to be hoped that sentiment for progress will be unanimous and that the vote will be cast for continuance of the Tar Heel as a daily rather than for retrogression to the old tri-weekly. —B. R.

We'll Go On Regardless

A great amount of dissatisfaction has arisen in University circles since the announcement that the Appropriations Committee had made a drastic reduction in the funds for the University.

This cut should not be regarded with such disappointment. The University of North Carolina will continue its usefulness regardless of any cut in monetary support from the state.

The University has survived more terrible storms than this and emerged stronger and more powerful than before. Such difficulties serve a good purpose in determining whether the University can stand and overcome its difficulties. It will overcome them without doubt, it will be victorious as it has been in the past under like periods of monetary decline. No force is strong enough to hinder this insituation, glorious in its history and tradition, from continuing its usefulness to the state and to the nation. —D. K.

Boxing and Duelling Dangers are Compared

Duels in the German universities are defended by the Society of Surgeons of that republic as being in the first place, less dangerous than boxing, and in the second place, quite harmless to the contestants when held under proper conditions. As a matter of fact, say the doctors, the duels are not duels at all in the accepted sense of combats based on bad blood, but tests of courage and strong nerves.

Student swordplay in the Fatherland has been for generations characteristic of Kultur. Scars on Teutonic faces have been considered badges of honor equivalent to broken collar-bones of American football players. While in progress the duels are bloody affairs, more serious in aspect than in actuality. Sometimes too much blood is lost, or, there is septic poisoning. Otherwise nothing happens.

When boxing is considered, however, there is another story. Of late much study has been given to the condition described as "punch-drunk." Many a first-class man has been ruined, mentally and physically, by repeated batterings about the head. No man, it is said, is ever quite the same after he is knocked out; there is a psychological reaction from such sudden oblivion, as well as physical. That men are killed in the ring, the records prove; that there are serious after-effects from long-continued pugilism is also true. It is true, as well, that many men have spent years at the game and apparently have suffered no ill effects.

The comparative histories of boxing and student duels indicate the surgeons of Germany are right in their conclusion. However, we do not see student duelling as one of this University's activities in the near future, nor do we see the decline of boxing. Under the careful supervision that is given by officials of boxing in this University, we doubt that any ill effects will be suffered by students.—A. V. L.

Michigan Ex-President Writes About What's Wrong With Colleges

university of hard knocks. But remedial forces are at work. The vested interests in the colleges are yielding to the slow development of an entrance-requirement system which will include 'a measure of the student's emotional maturity and balance; a measure of his general mental ability and of his particular aptitudes.'

"This awakening, as he sees it, is being brought about by the students rather than by the faculties. 'Rigorous domination by fixed organized authority vested in a favored and privileged group of adults has,' he thinks, 'become an obsolete and useless practice.' The younger generation looks to its teachers to be 'elder brothers rather than all-wise parents.' The student's dignity must be recognized and respected just as in industry the workingman's is coming to be. The 'high priest in business, industry, medicine, politics and in a whole host of other fields' has had to step down from his pedestal; 'in education and religion he still holds grimly to his orthodox rights, even though youth is leaving him stranded in solitary glory as it pours past like a river at the flood.' But this is a transient phase, for individualistic education is beginning to take the place of mechanized routine."

Some of Mr. Little's criticisms are summarized by the New York Herald Tribune Books as follows:

"Fraternities should go because they 'militate against the students' acquisition of a more mature, individual and independent point of view.' Automobiles and liquor should be banished from the campus because they introduce unnecessary 'complicating factors during a period of extremely difficult orientation and adjustment.' Likewise, coeducation is ruled out, at least for high school and junior college youth, because it 'introduces a needless complexity which leads to unwise and needless efforts in emotional adjustment at a period where the formation and establishment of intellectual activity are most needed.' Compulsory military training is to be abolished as a 'needless irritant.' Dr. Little would do away with the 'trade unionism of the American Association of University Professors' and with 'faculty clubs and other gossip pots,' as they exist today. He would introduce 'men and women who love to teach, who are not ashamed of the absence of higher degrees, who are not scholars 'producing' academic adiposity for their own aggrandizement, but 'reproducing' the zeal for scholarship in the minds and hearts of their students.'

"Dr. Little is doubtless correct when he finds his hopes for the complete awakening of our colleges in the student rather than in the faculty member or the administrator. Plainly and necessarily, he does not count much if at all on the formal governor and director as a factor. Whatever criticisms and reservations may be made by the forward-looking parent and educator, as they read this book, all will be grateful to this scientist that he ventured out of his laboratory long enough to gain the experiences and make the observations which are here recorded. What he says in the way of criticism and suggestion may well mark his book as one of the most effective calls to the 'easy' academic sleeper to awaken."

Leased Oil Lands Endow Texas Univ.

A novel solution to the problem of creating an endowment fund has been found by the University of Texas, which within recent years has received more than $13,000,000 from bonuses and royalties from its leased lands on which oil has been found. Oil seems to have endowed the University, and that institution is comfortable in the assurance that a conservative estimate shows that within the next forty years, if the present rate of production of oil money is continued, a total of $200,000,000 will be received.

TEAMWORK WON SOUTHERN TITLE SAYS COACH BOB

Track Mentor Cites Excellent Record Of Tar Heel Teams.

Teamwork rather than the performances of individual stars is what enabled the University track squad to win the Southern Conference title at Birmingham last Saturday, Bob Fetzer, head coach of the Tar Heel squad and "Dean" of southern track, said yesterday when requested to give his reasons for the consistent success of the Carolina track teams.

It was the second Southern Conference title the Tar Heels had won in the last five years, not to mention the fact they have won nine consecutive state championships. Among numerous other accomplishments, they have lost only one dual meet since Fetzer took over the coaching reins back in 1921 and have set four of the six new records in the Georgia Tech relays.

In the Southern Conference meet last Saturday the Tar Heels were without the services of Captain Dave Nims and Dave Neiman, stars in the quarter-mile and broad jump, respectively. Despite this handicap, together with the fact that the track was wet and slow, the Tar Heels won the meet by a margin of 12 points over their nearest opponents.

The victory was the result of consistently good work by the entire Carolina squad. Seventeen of the 23 members of the squad participated in the scoring.

"We had much rather win that way," said Coach Fetzer yesterday. "It indicates hard work on the part of the whole squad, and it means that the University is getting somewhere in furthering its policy of athletics for the mass of students, not for a few stars."

Charlie Farmer, stellar sophomore sprinter, beat the field in the 220-yard dash for Carolina's one first place. The other 16 Tar Heels scoring were Gay, Barkley, Phoenix, Baucom, Lowry, Perry, Slusser, Adkins, Brown, Dameron, Arnold, Dry, Smith, Ruble, Weil and Horney.

A great deal of credit for the success of the Tar Heels must go to Coach Fetzer and his two assistants, Dale Ranson and Vernon Cowper.

The summary follows:

120-yard high hurdles: Decoligny, Tulane, first; Maddox, Georgia, second; Ford, Tulane, third; Freeman, Duke fourth; Perry, North Carolina, fifth. Time, 15.2.

100-yard dash: Hamm, Georgia Tech, first; Smith, Alabama, second; Farmer, North Carolina, third; Leigh, Miss. A. & M., fourth; Brown, L. S. U., fifth. Time, 10 seconds.

Mile run: Young, Georgia, first; Barkley, North Carolina, second; Wells, Tulane, third; Ricks, N. C. State, fourth; Phoenix, North Carolina, fifth. Time, 4.25.

220-yard dash: Farmer, North Carolina, first; Kelly, Kentucky, second; Smith, Alabama, third; Leigh, Miss. A. & M., fourth; Whatley, Tulane, fifth. Time, 21.7.

440-yard dash: Ottinger, N. C. State, first; Klampe, L. S. U., second; Gay, North Carolina, third; Wait, Miss. A. & M., fourth; Hugg, Tennessee, fifth. Time, 50.1.

Two-mile run: Stewart, Tennessee, first; Reynolds, Miss. A. & M., second; Baucom, North Carolina, third; Lowry, North Carolina, fourth; Weight, L. S.

By Hugh Wilson

Talk about hard headed! "Lefty" Jenkins must have been born with the idea in his head that he was to go to Duke and beat successive generations of Carolina baseball teams. Even one of Longest's speediest fast balls, delivered right against the side of the southpaw's head, couldn't knock that idea out of that impregnable cranium! It sort of jarred it loose a little for a while, it seems—"Lefty" gave up three straight singles and a couple of runs to the Carolina Boys in one inning, a generous process which the little Scotchman is not in the habit of doing.

Jenkins, by the way, attracted considerable attention from big league scouts by his fine hurling on Duke's recent northern trip. It is rumored that the Athletics and Giants are in a mad scramble for his services, with the Mackmen in the lead because of Jack Coombs' onetime association with that club. It is understood that several of the Blue Devils who have finished their three years of playing are to join various big and minor league clubs.

For that matter, it wouldn't take much imagination to picture several of the Tar Heel stars in the uniform of some club in the "big time" circuits. Jimmy Maus certainly seems headed in that direction for some future day, and the scouts could hardly leave behind Nap Lufty and Burgess Whitehead if they desire to play.

One certainly has to hand it to those Hamlet "razzberry" artists. They were out for their fun, win or lose, and they sure got it! When the game became so much of a runaway as to be disgusting to them, they merely looked the other way—incidentally in the direction of the Shelby rooting section—and contented themselves with making in stentorian tones "wise cracks" (?) about north and south bound cows to the Shelby lady cheerleader, much to the delight of the hundreds of Carolina "gate crashers" who, in default of the admission fee of four bits, had simultaneously broken through two gates, vaulted fences, and made a grand rush towards the stands, which they gained successfully, despite the waving arms of a certain well known and husky football star, the chief bouncer of the afternoon. In fact, it has been darkly hinted that the enthusiastic high schoolers flung so much "razzberry" juice about the campus that a few unsuspecting student councilmen, unaware of the potency of the fruit, ate thereof and became straightway noisily hilarious!

Sunday's Daily Tar Heel carried a story, painfully inked out by another of "ye struggling Tar Heel scribes," to the effect that Marty Levinson, frosh 125-pounder, was a great little scrapper with a great record. The writer seconds the motion heartily, but he also feels that another freshman ringman deserves equal mention. The embryo pug referred to is, of course, none other than Platt Landis—known on the Hill by the various titles of "P. Walker," "Sailor," and "Wildcat." Sounds tough, doesn't he? All he did this year in boxing was to ring up K. O.'s in 30 seconds of the first round over his opponents from V. P. I. and N. C. State, in the second round over the V. M. I. light heavy, and in the third round over the University of Virginia light heavy. In his fight against Oak

TAR HEELS CLOSE SEASON AGAINST N. C. STATE TODAY

Paul Edwards To Take Mound Against Wolf Pack In Game To Decide Second Place In Big Five Race.

Fighting for the runner-up honor in the Big Five baseball race the University of North Carolina nine will close its 1930 season against N. C. State in a game here this afternon at 4.

Paul Edwards, lanky right-hand star of the Tar Heel mound corps, will likely be on the mound for the Tar Heels. Bill Averette will probably be the State pitcher opposing Edwards. Edwards is the big boy whose fine work hurled the Tar Heels suddenly back into the Big Five race only to have Duke blast their chances on Saturday. He is also the Tar Heel star who bested Averette, State's best pitcher, in the previous Tar Heel-Wolfpack meeting.

Not at all dismayed as a result of the loss to Duke, and determined to beat State and finish second if possible, the Tar Heels put in a good day's practice yesterday and were all set for their final game with the Wolfpack.

The Duke game, sixth loss to Lefty Jenkins in three years, was a setback of course, but it was only the same thing that Lefty Wilson of the Tar Heels did to Duke for four years ending back in 1922. The Tar Heels took it as such, determined that spilt milk couldn't be regained by crying, smiled that the jinx Jenkins wouldn't be back next year, and did their best preparing for the final game with State.

The Carolina lineup for today's final game of the season will probably show Captain Maus, c; Jackson, 1b; Rand, 2b; Whitehead, ss; Lufty, 3b; Davis, lf; Potter, cf; and House, rf.

FRESHMEN CLOSE SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Wake Forest Game Is Last Of Successful Season; Make Recommendations For Numerals.

The freshman baseball team ended a successful season last Wednesday by defeating Wake Forest. The frosh played especially good ball to win this game, making twelve victories out of 17 contests.

In the five defeats all were close with the exception of a one-sided loss to Duke.

On a trip to Virginia the freshmen hold a record by scoring 55 runs in three games.

Riggs led the hitting for the season, with six homeruns, and Whitehead followed with five. Daniel, Ferebee, and Dixon also boast good batting and fielding records. Griffith, Chandler, Adkins, McNeill, and Scarboro lead the pitchers.

Coach Cerney has recommended the following men to the athletic association to receive numerals: T. F. Adkins, B. A. Allen, M. A. Barger, S. M. Chandler, H. G. Connor,Jr., W. D. Croom, J. W. Daniel, J. G. Dixon, E. C. Ferebee, J. T. Griffith, C. N. Harris, F. A. Leonard, J. D. McNeill, J. F. Merritt, R. O. Pattisall, J. G. Peacock, W. C. Powell, R. B. Riddle, S. S. Scarboro, C. W. Walck, L. W. Whitehead, G. L. Whiteheart.

The resignation of faculty members to accept positions at higher salaries is nothing new. In 1896 President Edward Winston resigned to accept a position at double the salary he was receiving at the University.

TENNIS TEAM TO MEET DUKE TODAY

Last Match Of Season Here This Afternoon; Hendlin and Liskin Lead In Victories.

The Tar Heel netmen, back from a successful southern tour, play the Duke racqueteers here this afternoon in the last match of the season. Carolina practically has the state title sewed up already, but a victory over Duke would remove all doubts as to who's who in North Carolina tennis.

Carolina conquered the Blue Devils 7-2 earlier in the season, playing on the Duke courts. Today the tennis squad will be without the services of Ed Yeomans, who has been out of varsity play since the state tournament, and Carolina will be pushed to keep her unspotted record of no defeats for the season in dual meets.

On the recent two-weeks invasion of Dixie, the net squad won from Tennessee, Sewanee, Georgia Tech and Alabama and tied 3-3 with Tulane.

The Tulane match was somewhat of an upset, since the Green Wave numbers among its racquet wielders the southern champs in singles and doubles.

In the conference tourney at New Orleans both Hendlin and Liskin went through to the quarter-finals before losing to Cram of Vandy and Bayon of Tulane respectively. In the doubles they lost out to Feuer and Salley of Florida in four sets. The Carolina men had a chance to take the match, but weakened and allowed the Florida men to come through with the winning set. Captain Merritt and Sonny Graham met with strong opposition early in the tourney and failed to survive the preliminaries.

With Yeomans still out, the lineup to be sent against Duke today will probably be Hendlin, Captain Merritt, Liskin, Graham, Baggs and Palmore.

Goldfish Lost

Three goldfish were removed from the Chapel Hill high school biology department last weekend. These fish are said to be valuable and it is important that they be located. The fish which are missing have dorsal fins of a peculiar shape. Any information regarding the whereabouts of these goldfish will be appreciated by the school superintendent.

TRACK TROPHIES ARE ON DISPLAY

Prizes Of Conference Meet Are Exhibited In Smoke Shop.

Two trophies that the winning Carolina track team brought home with it from Birmingham are on view in the windows of the Carolina Smoke Shop.

One is a huge cup over 12 inches high which becomes the permanent possession of the Tar Heels and is called the Bill Streit-Andy Joffe trophy.

The other trophy is about 24 inches high and is a bronze figure of a man holding a wreath high above his head in one hand and a shield in the other. This award cannot become the permanent possession of any team until it has been won three times. Louisiana State University won it in 1928 and 1929. The trophy was presented by the Ritz theatre.

Golf Team Defeats Virginia To Close Successful Season

The Tar Heel golf team successfully concluded its rather victorious season by defeating the Cavaliers at the Farlington Country Club, Charlottesville, Va., by the score of 10½ to 7½. This is quite noteworthy since Virginia had not tasted defeat previous to this match during the past season.

Sports Chatter

Ridge, Platt ran up against a smaller and speedier man whose main idea seemed to be quite sensible—namely, to duck, run away, and dodge continually in order to keep away from "Katy," Landis' mauling right. Consequently Platt won the decision by a mile, but got no chance to land "Katy" and score another knockout. In the first fight of the season, Landis fought a terrific battle with Collins, W. & L.'s star freshman, in which both men came within an ace of being knocked out at different times in the fight. At the end, the judges disagreed and the referee awarded the decision to Collins. If Landis will learn to jab and hook more effectively with his left, without doubt he will soon ring up a Warrenesque string of knockouts, and may even outdo Ad in that line. His right is already so dangerous a weapon as to merit being handcuffed by the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Dumb Humans—those dumb enough to get in the ring with him being the beneficiaries. How do I know that? Don't ask embarrassing questions! I know!

It appears that enough of the "foolish frosh" have been played up in this paper already. When it comes to boxing, the records during the past year of Archie Allen and Noah Goodridge should be scanned. Allen fought in six dual match bouts and four more in the conference tournament, winning six on decisions, three on technical knockouts, and losing his final bout in the tournament for the welterweight championship to Captain Rainey of Virginia. Goodridge also fought in six dual matches and four tournament bouts, winning eight decisions and losing but two. In the dual match with Florida, he lost to Captain Phil O'Connell, southern featherweight champ in 1929 and lightweight champ in 1930, in a bout which went four rounds and was decided by the slightest of margins. In the conference tournament, Goodridge again met O'Connell in the finals—in the lightweight division this time, in the featherweight in 1929—and again lost a close decision in an extra round bout.

Most Stormy Meeting On Record Results In Choice Of Ten New Officers.

The Phi Assembly last night in a record meeting of attendance elected its new officers for the fall quarter of next year. The following men were elected by large majorities: Mayne Albright, speaker; W. R. Whittington, speaker pro-tem; Hamilton Hobgood, sergeant-at-arms; D. C. McDuffie, reading clerk; F. M. James, treasurer; and Dan Kelly, assistant treasurer. Those selected on the ways and means committee are as follows: Lee Greer, chairman, W. E. Uzzell and Johnny Wilkinson.

The meeting was called to order by Speaker Carr, who immediately got into the business of the initiation of new members. The new members presented and accepted for membership were as follows: Ruth Ellen Williams, Warren T. Davis, A. C. Skinner, A. L. Gaylord, E. M. Culpepper, J. A. Clark, W. C. Parker, J. A. Sherrell, H. M. Nichols, J. A. Shuford, W. H. P. Lyon and Glenn Dickson.

Following the initiation of new members Speaker Carr called for nominations for the various offices. The nominations followed and were dispensed with in order.

After the election of the officers a discussion arose as to who was eligible to appoint the assembly member on the debate council. Former Speaker Lang contended that by the constitution the newly elected speaker should be allowed to appoint the debate council member. After much discussion as to the reading in the constitution regarding the appointment on the debate council, Speaker Carr put it to a vote of the assembly which decided by a two-thirds majority that the new speaker should appoint the debate council member. Hamilton Hobgood was selected by Speaker Albright for debate council membership.

Following this appointment Speaker Albright praised the former administration of Speaker Carr and expressed confidence in the new officers selected.

The election of officers for the fall quarter was postponed until the next meeting.

FORGERY CHARGE ATTRACTS CROWD

Three Hundred Listen To Court Proceedings Against Carrboro Pair.

At the weekly meeting of the Recorder's Court yesterday morning, nine cases were tried by Judge Hinshaw. Much excitement was aroused among townspeople about the forgery charge against two citizens of Carrboro. Three hundred people attended the session.

In the forgery case Sam Powell and W. Clark, both of Carrboro, were charged with signing and attempting to cash a check that was illegal. Both men are white and about twenty-five years old. According to the evidence, Powell had worked as a mechanic on Jack Wardlaw's car. Wardlaw had given him a check for $12.50 in return for his labor. Powell cashed the check, spent the money, and then told his wife he had not been paid. His wife continually asked him for a part of the money, but he always told her he had not yet received it. As he had not the money, Powell decided to deceive her and sign a check illegally for the amount. He thought that money he would make on another job would give him the money. Powell entered the office of the South-Eastern Express Company and asked Mr. W. M. Adams to make out a check for $12.50 and sign Jack Wardlaw's name to it. Adams refused and Powell signed it instead.

The check was signed on Monday, May 12. The following Thursday, after he had shown the check to his wife and said that it was necessary to keep it as Wardlaw did not yet have money in the bank, Powell went fishing and left the check in his pocket. Mrs. Powell took the check and sent her son to get it cashed. He returned unable to have it cashed. She then sent her brother, Mr. Tom Clark, with the check to the Carrboro bank. The bank not knowing Wardlaw, refused to cash it and sent him to the the Bank of Chapel Hill. At the Chapel Hill bank Cashier Hogan saw that the check had been forged and had Clark arrested immediately. Sam Powell was arrested upon his return from fishing.

At the trial, Mr. S. M. Gattis appeared for both Powell and Clark. Judge Hinshaw declared them innocent as there was not sufficient evidence that fraud was attempted. Powell was in jail from Thursday, May 15, until yesterday. Clarke remained in jail only until Saturday as he was able to raise the $200 bond.

Speight Heads Tau Kappa Alpha

On Wednesday, May 14, six debaters were admitted into Tau Kappa Alpha, the national forensic fraternity. Those who were initiated are J. M. Baley, McB. Fleming-Jones, A. V. Lowenstein, T. M. Mashburn, C. W. Meares and W. Uzzell.

During the evening the initiates went through the ritual of becoming members, and then took part in the business meeting which followed. W. W. Speight was elected to the office of president and secretary of Tau Kappa Alpha. He succeeds J. C. Williams who held the position this year.

South Bell Rings With New Tone

Unknown to most students, the old bell in South building has been peeling off its resented sound at the hands of a substitute for the past five days. Fred Hargraves, gentleman janitor of South building for over 12 years, was taken sick with acute appendicitis last Thursday evening. He was operated on in the Lincoln hospital for the colored in Durham, where he still remains in a critical condition.

Born a native of Chapel Hill, Fred has been in the employ of the University for over a score of years. He received his great promotion to official ringer of the bell when the regular sexton fell asleep and caused no end of consternation in the 12 o'clock classes. This was ten years ago. From that time up to this last Thursday, with the exception of a few erratic departures to the Haiti section of Durham and other such exclusive centers of local color, Fred has climbed the stairs of Old South building at the appointed times and made the neighboring hills ring with the peals of a bell rung as no other can.

Even to an amateur in belfry art, the distinction of Fred's technique is discernible. Somehow the campus co-eds scurrying along through the arboretum to the tune of the 10:15 bell miss the persuasiveness formerly voiced in the resonant sound. Certainly the inhabitants of Old East and Old West dormitories miss the gentleness with which Fred used to summon them to awaken at 7 a. m. And the students on 12 o'clock classes desire the perfect punctuality with which the 1 o'clock bell used to ring.

A. I. E. E. Tomorrow

TAYLOR SOCIETY HEARS LIBRARIAN

Donald Coney Speaks On "Libraries and Scientific Management."

At the regular meeting of the University student branch of the Taylor Society held Monday evening in Bingham hall, Donald Coney, assistant librarian of the University, spoke on "Libraries and Scientific Management."

In his talk Mr. Coney spoke of the application of scientific management to library work and especially of functionalization as applied to the work of the University library.

Considering the library as a producing organization, the product consists of "units of information," which may be books, parts of books, magazines, stereoptican slides or other forms of information. The service rendered by the library is the gathering of this material, cataloging it, filing it, and bringing it from the stacks.

Whether the library of the future supplies books and magazines as it does now or turns to supplying moving picture films and phonograph records, its function will still be to supply the "units of information" previously mentioned. With the more or less standardized library, functionalization is the most prominent field in which scientific management can be effected, and it is in this branch of the work that the University library has been working.

Time and motion study is another field which is open in library work, for much of the routine work, such as circulating and cataloging, is of such a nature that time and motion study can be used effectively.

Mr. Coney, who has been engaged in library work for ten years, was connected with the library of the University of Michigan for several years and while there organized the new library of business administration. From Michigan he went to the University of Maryland where he was librarian until he became assistant librarian here.

During the remainder of the quarter the local branch of the Taylor Society will hold two or three meetings.

Alumnus Plans Destruction Of Bed Bugs With Spiders

(By J. M. Little)

The momentous discovery was made recently by Dr. N. Lorando of Athens, "a physician well informed and a thoroughly competent, professional gentleman." This discovery was a species of spider "that eradicates the ordinary 'bed bug,'" a type of insects that "spread contagion . . . and cause much discomfort to the human race . . . around our milling quarters, lumber camps, villages and many homes," and was revealed in a recent letter to Dr. R. E. Coker from Dr. W. H. Atkinson, an alumnus of the University who is traveling through Europe and is at present in Austria.

Sensing here an opportunity to alleviate the suffering of many of his fellow countrymen, Dr. Atkinson obtained a promise from Dr. Lorando to ship specimens of the valuable insects directly to the University where they might be bred and distributed, since "in the proper hands and quarters they might become a real joy to life in many places." Mr. Atkinson advances his opinion that "besides being interesting from the entomological standpoint, this spider is of real value, and should be cultivated. They propagate rather rapidly, so some one should supply the bugs. This ought not to be difficult as they are usually plentiful in the negro settlements and about the mill workers' quarters, and a few nickels would get you a bottle full occasionally." Dr. Atkinson adds further that the spider is not poisonous and does not attack human beings.

Dr. Coker is as yet undecided as to what to do with the spiders, which are expected any time, since there are here no proper facilities for caring for them. In line with suggestions from Dr. Atkinson, the insects will probably be turned over to the entomologists at State College.

MASTER VIOLINIST VISITS UNIVERSITY

Long Haired Fritz Kreisler Plays To Three Hundred.

Chapel Hillians who came to Franklin Street about seven o'clock Saturday evening, were surprised at the novel visitors who had come to town. Seated on the low stone fence in front of the Methodist church were a young man and his wife, playing on their violins. Parked at the curb was a large Ford car, especially built, made so that a small family could live in it. The mother of the young man sat on the back porch of the peculiarly built "house-car" and a young child was at her side. On the sides of the car was painted "Ray Auville, Master Violinist, Proclaimed Champion Everywhere." And as the champion violinist and his wife played away with songs of various tunes, people began to gather until after a short while as many as three hundred had gathered.

The two violins squeaked their pleasure at being here in Chapel Hill, and their masters played them with a zeal unmatched by even the great Fritz Kreisler. To be sure, by the expert manner in which Auville shook his long locks of black hair, we might venture to declare him the peer of all violinists, as he so modestly judged himself.

The University students seemed to enjoy the program and the two interesting characters. Request numbers came after many pieces had been played before. No matter what was asked them, the master violinist and his wife were able to play it. When the hat was later passed, the crowd willingly gave to the support of the violinists who provided them with the evening's entertainment.

It was learned later on, that this travelling group was another of those which have been heading north from Florida, stopping on their way to visit and entertain the people of the towns through which they pass. Previously the campus had seen a travelling snake circus, and an astronomy exhibit.

WELCOME IN IS TO REOPEN THURSDAY

Due to the physical condition that the building is in, it was announced yesterday by the manager that the Welcome In Cafeteria would not be able to open its doors Thursday morning as it was first planned. The opening date will be announced in the Tar Heel later in the week.

The cafeteria was forced to close two weeks ago. At that time an average of 200 people were being fed at each meal. The reopening of the establishment will offer jobs to many self-help students. Over a hundred students have been employed there.

PROPOSE DOLLAR INCREASE IN FEES TO COVER COSTS

Campus Faculty and Student Leaders Refuse To Consider Return To Tri-Weekly Plan.

FEES CHEAPEST ON RECORD

Harvard Fees $21 Yearly; Others $19, $16, $20; Vote To Be Taken Next Week.

(By E. C. Daniel, Jr.)

Meeting last night for the first time since January of last year, the student activities committee unanimously endorsed the continuance of the Tar Heel as a daily. During the discussions of of this point, both faculty members and students joined in praise of the publication, speaking highly of its value, the prestige which it gives the University, and its value to student life.

As a result of the meeting, the student body will be asked to vote an annual increase of one dollar in the publications fee in order to continue the issuance of the daily. In fact, a decision on this point was the principal objective of the conference.

At the outset of the meeting, President Greene asked for a report from the Publications Union board as to the amount of the deficit incurred in the publication of the daily this year. It was revealed by President Dunn that, although the other campus papers are practically self-supporting, the Tar Heel had brought upon the board a net debt of $3300.

In the beginning, some slight objection was offered to raising the fee on the grounds that financial conditions in the state were prohibitive. As an alternative for this measure it was suggested by several faculty members that the Buccaneer be abolished and that the Yackety Yack and Magazine be simplified.

However, the student members of the committee agreed and stated that the comic magazine would never be abolished by student vote, and so this idea was abandoned.

Meanwhile Professor John E. Lear produced statistics to show that the student publications fee here is only about one-third as much in the University as it is in schools of similar standards and with identical publications. Professor Lear's figures showed that the total fee at Harvard University amounts to $21. At other large schools the charges run from $16 to $20.

In view of this fact, and since no increase has been made in the local fee for seven years, despite numerous improvements and additions in the quality and quantity of publications, an addition to the regular charges was deemed justifiable by the meeting.

Since this increase in fee will not completely cover the extra cost of the daily, a reallocation of the publications budget will be arranged. It is hoped by those interested in the paper, especially the new business manager, Pat Patterson, that an increase in local and foreign advertising may be secured to offset any additional need of funds.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I am not infallible—Magistrate David Hirshfield.

Damned With Faint Praise

Friends and fosterers of the Playmakers have pronounced the recent production of "Romeo and Juliet" the finest achievement and most spectacular piece of work accomplished by that group. Outsiders have viewed it and commented on it as they would pass judgment on a professional rather than on an amateur theatre performance. The play was produced on so large a scale and directed with such finesse that it exceeded the efforts of any amateurish or experimental theatre organization. Concentrated work on the part of the cast and the technical operators of the Playmakers is almost entirely responsible for the unconditioned success of their last production of this season.

The play was cleverly reviewed and the comments made were all very entertaining. Occasionally a genuine bit of criticism or commendation peeped from out the close lattice work of witticisms but on the whole the really excellent piece of work was damned with faint praise. Credit is due where credit is deserved and one feels called upon to express one's profound admiration for the manner in which Elmer Hall produced and directed the entire production calling out the best and finest in a cast which was very well chosen. Miss Lois Buell in the role of Juliet was charming. She interpreted her part and played it with a degree of perfection and finish which is found only in an actress of ability. Her sweet naivete and simplicity as the child Juliet and the splendid command with which she handled the most dificult scenes of the role of the Juliet who became a woman under the stress of the contentions of love cannot be dimmed by the performance of any of the older and more seasoned Shakespearean interpreters. The criticism made as to her voice was entirely unjust. At times even the most powerful of the male voices was made indistinct by the profusion of woodland noises. Carolina and the Playmakers should be grateful to Miss Buell for the time and talent she lent them to help make the production of "Romeo and Juliet" a fine one since without her it could not have been achieved.

Howard Bailey as Romeo played the part with such perfection as could be attained only by a person who is inherently the poet, the dreamer and the trained and sensitive actor. The Playmakers may well bemoan his leaving but should be comforted by the fact that he will undoubtedly be heard from in the near future.

Joe Fox, as Peter, was unsurpassable. Mrs. Nora del Gumbel by voice and action made the nurse the creation she was meant to be. In fact the entire play as interpreted by the Playmakers made as great impression on me as did the "Romeo and Juliet" produced at the Civic Repertory Theatre in New York by Eva La Gallienne.

The play was well attended at the Forest Theatre but it is a noted fact that a large number of the students did not avail themeslves of the opportunity of witnessing the most worth while thing accomplished by the Playmakers this year. The entire performance was of such unusual finesse and beauty as to make it unforgettable. Yet there issued from various houses such inane doggerel as "What ho! Romeo . . . Merchrochrome is split! . . . and the like. One wonders almost sadly whether the play was duly and truly appreciated. —P. S. L.

Now and Then A Defeat

Colleges and universities are prone now and then to boast of their athletic prowess in various sporting events, to enumerate with pride the number of games and matches through which the college colors have come victorious in past seasons. Or, if the varsity teams are not so successful, the individuals boosting these teams permit alibi after alibi to slip volubly off the tips of their tongues.

It is not sufficient, in the eyes of the collegian, that the varsity candidates spend sudorific hours of play and practice upon the athletic fields and in the gymnasiums, developing their strength and skill, and then applying that perfection of athletic ability in gruelling contests against fellow athletes representing rival institutions. The team must win. Conscientious endeavor and sportsmanlike competition are to the non-participating spectators but chaff. The grain is measured by the number of victories and the impressiveness of the score.

A few days ago a defeat at the hands of Princeton University checked Carolina's steady march through eight seasons of track competition. In those eight seasons no individual institution had been able to present an aggregation of trackmen who could best Carolina's array of stars. Now that a team has arisen which has shown itself superior to our own, should we spend our time bewailing that fact, or in casting about for the thread of alibi to justify in our own minds that defeat? One victory more or less in the history of an athletic team is of no major consequence in the University's daily round of affairs. Nor is a defeat. The beneficial attributes of competitive athletic relations are of more note to the individual athlete and to the spirit of sportsmanship in the institution than the comparative scores of the team and its rivals.

"Deadwood Dick" Fights His Last Battle

An almost legendary character to most Americans was Richard W. Clarke, for better known to the world of boyhood and the dime novel as "Deadwood Dick," who has died peacefully in his bed at the age of eighty-four years. With his passing goes another link with those early years of the Northwest when the white man had not yet extended his domain in a supreme fashion over the lands of the Indian. His life has been an adventurous and interesting one. Tourists throughout the Black Hills country will miss him. as in his way he was an important component of that majestic scenery.

Pony express rider, Indian fighter, pioneer and scout, "Deadwood Dick" played the vivid part that the sixties of the last century provided for adventurous souls. He was helped not a little by the sort of literature turned out by the late Edward L. Wheeler for reading by small boys with parents of rigid principles. Probably many of us remember the eagerness with which we devoured such novels, and it is with a pleasant thought that we recall the joy we got from them. To the end, "Deadwood Dick" dressed the part he played, too, with long hair falling over his shoulders, the garb of the former days in the Wild and Wooly, and a trusty .45 strapped to his belt.

He knew Custer, he followed the trail of the gold, he was colleague of all the heroes like Captain Jack Crawford, Buffalo Bill, "Diamon Dick," "Wild Bill" Hickok, and the rest. Through it all he boasted he had "never killed a white man," leaving it to the imagination to count the number of dead Indians.

Thus passes "Deadwood Dick," a link with the glorious past and at the end a kindly old gentleman living at home with his family, but with an aura of romance matched by few of his contemporaries. —A. V. L.

Honor System On Trial

The swiftly approaching series of examinations will present the last occasion this year for the honor system definitely to be on trial. And there will no doubt be reenacted quite a few times the old Spencerian tragedy of the Murder of a Beautiful Theory by a Gang of Cruel Facts.

But this particular examination period, it seems to us, has peculiar significance. In view of the numerous reactionary measures both enacted and proposed recently by the faculty, it is clear that no liberal institution, however well it may be entrenched here, is entirely safe from possible abolition. Nor is the dissatisfaction with, and even opposition to, the honor system confined mostly to the officials of the University, since there is a growing spirit of non-approval of the existing conditions among the intelligent student minority.

The issue is, therefore, directly confronting the entire student body, with time and their actions to be the deciding factors of the question. Though honestly and entirely opposed to the use of the honor system among as varied and kaleidoscopic a group as is found on this campus, we would be heartily disappointed to see its repeal proceed from a failure on the part of Carolina men to display the ability of upholding its ideals.

—J. M. L.

In 1900 the old porch and massive columns that had been placed on the south side of Gerrard hall were removed and a door was cut in the east end of the building.

Readers' Opinions

SOCIAL PROBLEMS AND THE SHOWER

Civilization is progressing. At least one man thinks so, and he expressed his opinion that the widespread use of bathtubs is proof enough that we are further advanced than our ancestors, who bathed in creeks or rivers, or else didn't bathe at all.

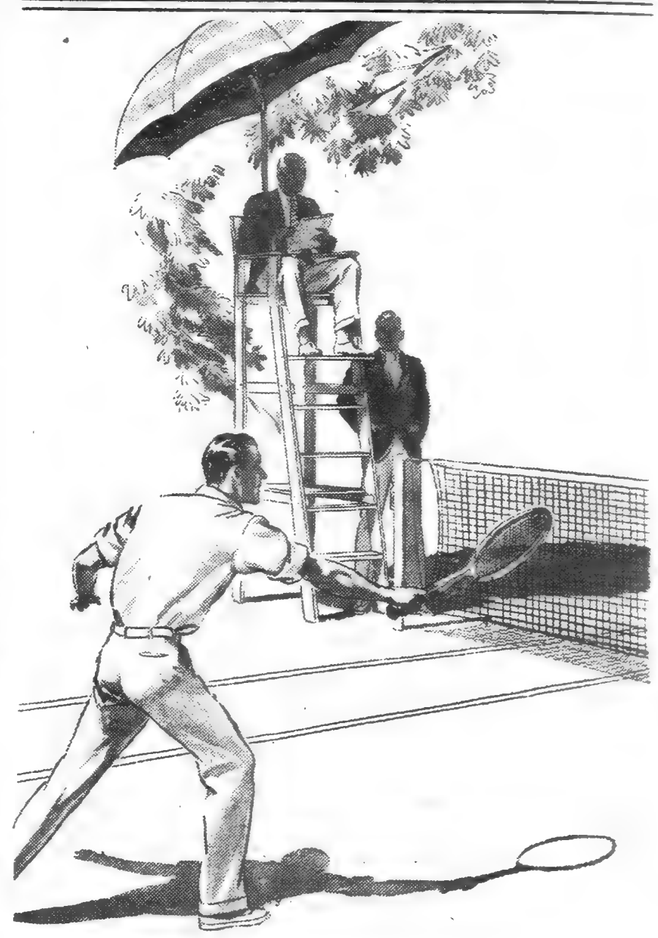
This theory is a bit old-fashioned. The bathtub is fast losing its horror to children on Saturday nights and its prestige as the "cleanser of the mob." The inventive genius has gone the old bathtub one better and has produced the shower bath, which is fast replacing its predecessor and fading rival.

Modern civilization has come to accept anything with advantages, and the advantages of the shower are numerous.

The shower is a time-saving implement. The bather no longer has to wait for the tub to be filled up; he no longer has to wait for the water to run out, in order that he may later wash out the tub for the next bather. Neither is he hurried by others who are impatiently waiting their turn nor does he bump his shins or does he slip and fall heavily to the floor trying to please those who are coaxing him along and offering him advice as how to hurry his bath. In fact, this saving of time keeps peace in the "well-washed family," allowing no arguments or ill feelings among the members of the family as to who will use the tub first and who last.

The most serious problem of tub-bathing has also disappeared with the coming of the shower—that of lost soap. No matter how dirty the bather may be, the water in the shower is never black enough to conceal the whereabouts of the cake of soap that slipped out of the bather's hand. This keeps him in a good humor; he never loses his temper by fussing around in the tub vainly searching for soap.

The shower is healthier than the tub. The water in the tub is too soapy and is used again and again by the bather. The pores of the skin are filled with soap, which cannot be rinsed off by the same soapy water or disposed of by vigorous rubbing. Vigorous rubbing tires the bather and afterwards he does not feel like going out for the evening, but instead he stays at home and fumes around about the "hard day he had at the office" and the fun he is missing by not going out.



The bathtub has today become more of an ornament than anything else. It is all right to make the bathroom pretty by designs in the tiles, by various color schemes, by sunken tubs, and by modernistic lighting effects. But the bather must also use "the tub beautified" instead of looking at it and showing it to the neighbors.—E. H. D.

A CRITICISM

On attending the recent religious symposium held at Gerrard hall the writer was astonished to learn that the learned Dean Russel of Duke University did not know that there were two chapters alike in the Bible. This fact was brought out when the Dean was questioned by a Carolina student. In answering the question the dean stated that he did not know that there were two such chapters. It that he supposed that the student was referring to the book of Psalms. The Dean explains this similarity by saying that the composing of the Psa that several writers contribut and that all similarity was eliminated.

For the Dean's benefit he m compare the nineteenth chapt of Second Kings to the thirt seventh chapter of Isaiah.

The writer also noticed t fact that beautiful oratory ha not lost its sway among t simple minded, for on discussing the speeches with several students he found some students who believed all three of the religions, which is plainly impossible. Floyd Haywood

DUKE TENNIS TEAM LATEST TO FALL BEFORE CAROLINA

Final Game Of Season Is 7-2 Win For Blue and White Men.

The successful Carolina tennis team definitely clinched the state title here yesterday afternoon when they turned back the Duke racqueteers 7-2 in a match characterized by many long duels. This victory brought to a close one of the most successful tennis seasons in the athletic history of the University. Due to the fine coaching of John F. Kenfield, the team swept through the season for 12 victories, one tie with the strong Tulane team, and no defeats.

Hinkey Hendlin started things rolling for Carolina by outlasting Phillips of Duke 7-5, 6-4. Both players were fairly evenly matched but the Carolina man had more finishing shots than did Phillips, and was able to pull the important games out of the fire when he needed them.

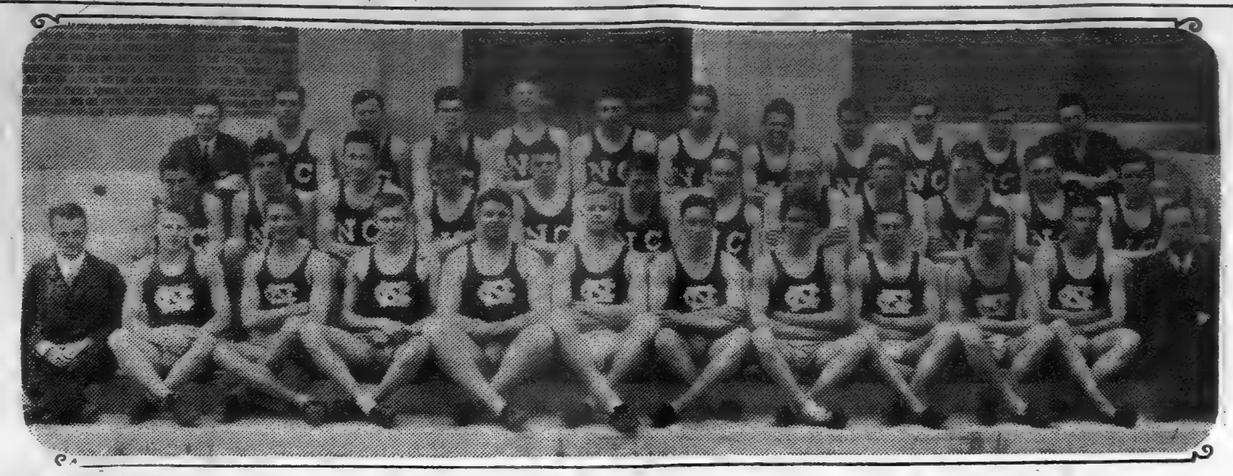
Phil Liskin of Carolina and Frank of Duke, both left-handers with the racquet, fought it out for three sets before Liskin finally came out ahead 6-2, 4-6, 6-3. Liskin had no trouble taking the first set, but fell down in the second when Frank staged a comeback to win the set. The exertion of winning the second set tired Frank considerably, however, and Liskin captured the last set after Frank had tied it at 3-3.

Captain Bill Merritt, playing his last match for Carolina before graduation, took Myers of Duke into camp rather handily 6-4, 6-2. Merritt, desirous of winning his last college match, played crafty tennis and avenged his former defeat by Myers in Durham several weeks ago.

Sonny Graham dropped the first match to Rogers of Duke 6-1, 6-3. Rogers was playing at the top of his game and displayed some fine tennis to beat the Carolina man so readily.

Baggs of Carolina took the scalp of Curtis (Duke) without much difficulty, 6-2, 6-4. Baggs has won all his matches this season, and he was simply too good for Curtis.

Palmore of Carolina had a hard time defeating Farris of Duke, but he outlasted and outsteadied his opponent to win 6-4, 5-7, 7-5. With one set apiece, Farris ran up a 3-0 lead and it looked as though the match was his. Palmore, however, suddenly found his game again and ran off five straight games. Farris retaliated by tying the score at 5-5, and then Palmore won the next two games to take the set and match.



Hendlin and Liskin having already beaten both the No. 1 and No. 2 Duke doubles teams in recent matches, the Blue Devil coach tried the new combination of Phillips and Frank against them. This didn't do much good as the Tar Heel pair came through to win a hard match 7-5, 10-8. The Duke couple needed but two points to take either set, but they could not quite make the grade.

Rogers and Myers won Duke's only other match of the day when they beat Graham and Browne in a long match 12-10, 6-4. The Carolina team had the lead several times, but could not overcome the steady stroking of Rogers and Myers.

Captain Merritt and Palmore of Carolina took the measure of Curtis and Farris 6-1, 6-2. Merritt and Palmore rushed through the opposing couple and had the match in hand at all times.

In 1901 the state appropriation to the University was $25.000.

Carolina Track Squad, Southern Champions

Pictured above is the University of North Carolina's flying track squad, newly crowned Southern champions, and an excellent example of the old adage that team work is what counts.

The Tar Heels won top honors in last weekend's Southern Conference meet by a margin of 12 points over nearest opponents.

Yet, without captain Nims, star quarter-miler, and Dave Neiman, star broad jumper, and on a slow track, the Tar Heels took but one first place, and won on the margin of consistently fine work by the whole squad, 17 of the 23 Tar Heels at Birmingham making scores.

"We had much rather win that way," says Coach R. A. Fetzer. "It indicates hard work on the part of the whole squad, and it means that the University is getting somewhere in furthering its policy of athletics for the mass of students, not for the few stars."

Charlie Farmer, stellar sophomore sprinter, beat the field in the 220 yard dash for Carolina's one first place. The other 16 Tar Heels scoring were Gay, Barkley, Phoenix, Baucom, Lowry, Perry, Slusser, Adkins, Brown, Dameron, Arnold, Smith, Dry, Ruble, Weil and Horney.

The Tar Heel squad this season continued a brilliant Carolina track record, for which much credit goes to Coach R. A. Fetzer and to his assistants, Dale Ranson and Vernon Cowper.

The 1930 team, besides winning another Southern title, won a ninth straight state championship for Fetzer-coached Carolina teams, won all dual meets but Princeton, and set four of six new records at the Georgia Tech Relays.

Second row: Wrenn, Smith, Brown, Farmer, Reid, Weil, Lowry, Slusser, Horney, Ruble, Phoenix, Hamer.

Back row: Manager Johnston Alexander, Goodwin, Manning, Dry, Medford, Harper, Owens, Farris, Carr, Rhodes, Case, Assistant Coach Vernon Cowper.

STATE BOWS TO TAR HEEL NINE

Final Baseball Tilt Results In Win For Local Team.

Raking two State hurlers for 12 hits and five runs, the Tar Heels closed their baseball season by defeating State 5-3 yesterday at Emerson field. The victory not only gave the Tar Heels a clean season's slate over the Wolfpack, but definitely assured them of second place in the state race.

State scored a run in the initial frame on Plonk's triple to center and Edwards' wild throw to first, but Carolina knotted the count in the same inning on Davis' triple to left center and Whitehead's grounder to second.

Neither team did any further scoring until the fourth when Maus' second single, Potter's infield hit and Edwards' second safe blow counted one run. In its half of the fifth State again evened the score as a result of three safe blows.

The fifth proved to be the Tar Heels' big frame, scoring three runs off Shore who had relieved Averette. Whitehead beat out a hit to third, stole second and advanced on the catcher's wild throw and counted on Pinch Hitter Blythe's triple to right center. Blythe scored on Lufty's sacrifice loft to left. Brown doubled to center and scored on Potter's hit to left.

BRIEFS

Immediately following the game the players chose Burgess Whitehead as their leader for next year. Burgess hails from Woodville and starred on the freshman and varsity clubs. In addition to being a classy hitter, Burgess is one of the finest fielding shortstops in the state and South.

The curtain fell down on the playing career of six Tar Heels, Captain Maus, Nap Lufty, "Casey" Jackson, Billy Brown, "Piggy" Potter and Frank Fleming doing their swan song.

"Jimmy" Maus and Nap Lufty played their last game with severe injuries. Maus' charley-horse was so bad that he could hardly bend to receive pitcher's slants, while Lufty played his second game with a fractured left arm. Nap hurt it before the Duke battle, but nevertheless played.

Captain-elect Whitehead was all hot and bothered out there at short. "Rat" made some of the prettiest pickups and throws

Captain Elect

Burgess Whitehead, who was elected captain of the 1931 baseball team immediately following the State game, has served as shortstop on the team during the season just come to a close. He is a member of the Monogram club, the Zeta Psi fraternity and is a Phi Beta Kappa man.

Beta No. 2 Leads

Beta Theta Pi No. 2 tennis team defeated the Phi Sigma Kappa racqueteers 3-2 yesterday afternoon to win the fraternity championship and the right to play New Dorms, dormitory champions, in a match at 4 o'clock today, for the campus championship.

The match was started Monday afternoon, but was so hotly contested that darkness prevented its completion. Every game was hard-fought and the score stood two-all with the score of the deciding doubles match between Moody and Dresslar, Beta Theta Pi, and Andrews and Curlee, Phi Sigma Kappa being 19 to 17 in favor of Moody and Dresslar when the game was postponed until the next day.

In the singles Dresslar, Beta, defeated Curlee, P. S. K., 9-7, 6-4; Andrews, P. S. K., defeated Moody, Beta, 1-6, 6-3, 6-3, and Whittington, P. S. K., defeated Black, Beta, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4.

9 MILLION A DAY—IT HAD TO BE GOOD TO GET WHERE IT IS

Denishawn Dancers In "Valse Extase"

Miss Denis is shown in a pose taken from one of her most popular dances, a terpsichorean interpretation of "Valse Extase." The world renowned group of artists will come to the Hill for an afternoon performance in Kenan Stadium Thursday afternoon. Student tickets for this entertainment will be on sale for fifty cents each.

DANCERS APPEAR BEFORE ROYALTY

Ruth St. Denis and Troupe Have Performed Before Many Notables.

Ruth St. Denis, who with her troupe of dancers will perform in Chapel Hill Thursday night, has long been distinguished by the "class" which characterizes her audiences wherever she dances. The announcement that she will appear invariably guarantees that society with a capital "S" will grace the occasion with its presence. Because of this it is expected that an unusually large crowd of the elite of North Carolina society will be in attendance at the performance to be given here at the Kenan stadium Thursday night at 8:15.

Wherever Miss St. Denis and her company have performed they have been entertained by the leaders of society. In foreign countries royalty and potentates have paid honor to the talented dancers. On the opening night in the Imperial Theatre, Tokyo, Prince Kuniomic, the son of the Emperor, attended and called Miss St. Denis to his box to offer his congratulations. In India the Gaekwar of Barada gave a tea in her honor and the Myzam of Hyderabad entertained her at dinner in the gardens of his Bombay palace. The Calcutta premise brought out an unusually brilliant audience, which included Sir Rabindranath Tagore, the Maharaja of Mohr-Bunj, the American Consul and Mrs. Ley, the Governor, the Earl of Lytton and his suite, and General Shea, in command of the British army in India.

During the past season Miss St. Denis has filled some highly important engagements in the homes of American socially elect. In August she danced for Mrs. Arthur James Curtiss at Newport in a theatre especially constructed for the occasion in the grounds of her Beacon Hill house. During the Christmas week she gave a short program at the ball given by Mr. Atwater Kent at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel in Philadelphia to introduce their daughter to society. She recently appeared at the housewarming of the Park Avenue mansion of Mr. and Mrs. Gerrish Milliken of New York and an outdoor performance at Mare Lago, the winter home of the Edward Huttons at Palm Beach.

Miss St. Denis' popularity is not, however, limited to the socially elect. The long lines which formed in front of the box offices at the Lewisohn stadium, New York, hours before the Denishawn performance are proof enough of her particular appeal for the masses as well as the classes.

Because of the large capacity of Kenan stadium, the scale of prices will be relatively low, reserved seats selling for $1.50 and $2.00 and several thousand unreserved seats at $1. Student admission price will be 50 cents.

In the event of rain or cold weather the performance will be given the following evening. Station WPTF of Raleigh will broadcast Chapel Hill weather conditions late Thursday afternoon for the benefit of those people throughout the state who plan to attend the performance.

TAFT LECTURES DELIGHTING MANY

Famous Sculptor Will Complete Art Series By Talk Tonight.

Lorado Taft continued his series of lectures here at the University last evening with a discussion of "Art of the Renaissance." The Methodist church was equipped with a special screen to accommodate the lantern slides which accompanied the talk.

Mr. Taft proved to be fully as well versed in the subject of Renaissance art as in ancient Greek. He again repeated his ideal of building a museum containing corridors of national art, with trancepts crossing these aisles to represent the different epochs in the history of art.

The main beauty in sculpture, as depicted by Mr. Taft, is the play of light and shadow upon the work. He deplores the ignorance displayed in the poor arrangements of statuary in many world-famous museums. And it is mainly by the standard of receptibility to proper lighting that he criticizes the great sculptural masterpieces of all times.

Mr. Taft proved to be consistent in the genial complaisant personality he displayed Monday evening. Especially entertaining are the witty comments on some of the lantern slides; as an impromptu humorist, he proves to be an excellent satirist. It is undecided whether his lectures are more entertaining or more intellectual. Certainly there is a wonderful combination of the two.

Tonight Mr. Taft will conclude his lectures at the University with an insight into contemporary sculpture. This should be the most interesting of the three, the majority of the people being uncertain whether they should praise or denounce the new modernistic trend in both architecture and sculpture.

School District Will Cover New Territory

At a meeting held in the Chapel Hill school building last Saturday it was decided by a vote of 99 to 4 to enlarge the school district.

143 registered, and of this number 103 voted. The forty who did not vote are considered opposed to the proposition. Only seventy-two votes were needed to pass the amendment.

The enlargement of the district will mean that many of the parents of school children will pay the regular school tax instead of the monthly tuition that they now pay.

FORGERY CHARGE ATTRACTS CROWD

Eight other cases were also tried in the morning. Bill Baxter, white, and a University student were brought up for appearing in a public place in a drunken condition. Baxter was fined $5 and both were charged for costs. Sidney Lloyd, white, was given one month on the roads, but his sentence was suspended upon payment of costs and the pledge that he would be a law-abiding citizen for six months. W. L. Carbine, white, parked his car contrary to the parking ordinance and was told to pay costs.

Coon Neville, colored, was found in a public place in a drunken condition and was told to pay costs and not to be seen in Chapel Hill for six months. Reuben Winston, and Lawrence Edwards, both colored, were found guilty of public drunkenness and were given one month on the county roads, though their sentences were suspended upon payment of costs and upon a promise of good behavior for six months. Henry Brown, colored, was found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon upon his wife. His sentence was suspended, though if he should be found guilty to another offence in the future, this case can be reopened.

ACTIVITIES MEN ENDORSE DAILY UNANIMOUSLY

An interesting sidelight of the conference was a lively discussion between Dean D. D. Carroll and Professor Oscar Coffin. Carroll contended that, since the daily paper has been an experiment, the Publications Union Board would not exceed its legitimate powers in drawing upon the surplus of the board to continue the experiment another year.

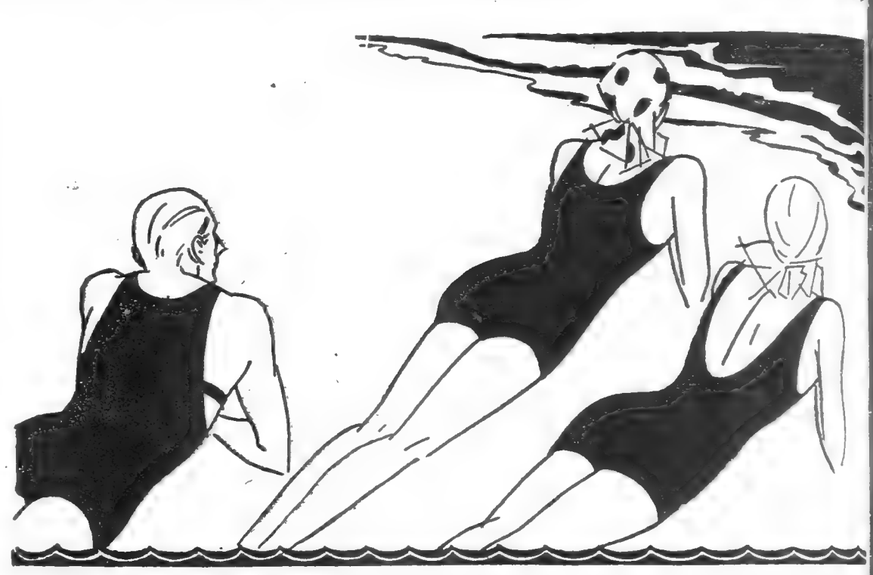
"Let's just sit tight for a year," said Carroll.

And in reply Coffin, as a member of the Board, stated that he had some scruples in disposing of other people's money; and that he would look upon such an action as a "misappropriation of funds."

The resolution which was finally adopted is practically the same as that one presented by the sub-committee which President Greene appointed to make recommendations to the activities group, with the exception that the increase in fee was reduced from 50 cents to 33 cents per quarter. Jack Dungan served as chairman of the special committee.

Upon the completion of this, its particular business, the committee discussed the campus honor system for a few minutes. Bob House, Ed Hamer, Dr. W. F. Prouty, chairman of the faculty executive committee, K. C. Ramsay and Ray Farris were among those contributing to this part of the program.

Mr. House expressed faith in the honor system, declaring that it has worked, and that "boys are just about as good today as they ever were. The University is still a fine, wholesome place," he said.



However, the group agreed that some effort should be made to instill further the spirit of the honor system into the minds of the students, especially those entering the University for the first time. In order to accomplish this purpose, Ray Farris suggested more frequent public discussions of the honor system and a more rigorous program of freshman and pre-freshman education in the system.

In 1906 the average charge for board at the University Commons was eight dollars a month.

DENIS DANCERS
KENAN STADIUM
8:15 TONIGHT

VOLUME XXXVIII | CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, MAY 22, 1930 | NUMBER 176

FAMOUS DANCERS WILL APPEAR IN STADIUM TONIGHT

Ruth St. Denis and Troup Will Exhibit Latest Creations At 8:15, On Gridiron.

WILL BE SPECTACULAR

Ruth St. Denis and her famous troupe of dancers will appear here tonight at 8:15 in the Kenan stadium under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers and the American Association of University Women.

In a program of solo and ensemble dances, embracing only a few of the numbers which have been especially popular in the past and which would be sorely missed if they were omitted, the famous dancing star will exhibit her latest creations.

A notable novelty by Miss St. Denis will be the "Bas-relief Figure from Angkor-Vat," the inspiration for which was gained when she visited the city abandoned hundreds of years ago by the vanished race of Kymers, but which still ranks with the famous temples of India and the pyramids of Egypt among the architectural wonders of the Eastern world.

Another new number will be the visualization of a Tagore poem, in the course of which Miss St. Denis will speak the poet's exquisite verse. She will offer a Tanagra figure to music of Schumann and a beguiling Rubinstein waltz, in addition to dances of India, Java, Japan, China and Cambodia, bringing the program to a close with a colorful spectacle, a scene in an East Indian bazarr, supported by the entire company.

For once the many local admirers of this great artist will have an opportunity to see a comprehensive list of her finest creations in a single program. Even then they may cry for more, for according to the Los Angeles Times after a recent recital by Miss St. Denis:

"There were precisely nine of her solo dances with lovely fragments for encores, but there was not enough of Miss St. Denis. She is a thousand women. One feels that she could go on forever picturizing lovely, evanescent, changing, adorable feminity."

Assisting her will be a new and youthful group of Denishawn Dancers who will exhibit a series of ensemble numbers never seen before, since they present the latest conception of the creative genius of America's greatest dancer.

An unusually large crowd from all over the state is expected to attend the performance tonight because of the international reputation of Miss St. Denis and her dancers. Admission prices will range from $2 for reserved seats to 50 cents for student tickets.

Correction

Ed Hedgepeth, graduate of the University, has written the editor to correct a statement carried in press dispatches to the effect that Carolina men at the University of Pennsylvania were involved in a recent riot. According to Hedgepeth no Carolina medical student was involved, the riot being confined to members of the undergraduate student body.

SPARROW'S POOL ATTRACTS MANY

Sun-Bathers and Swimmers Putting In Long Hours At Favorite Retreat.

(By Hugh Wilson)

Mrs. Sparrow, proprietress of Chapel Hill's sole bathing emporium—all kinds of baths, both shower, pool, sun and mud baths being available, generally in the foregoing order—has made some new installations recently in order to attract still more of the bathing fiends to her already large patronage. The addition mentioned is the installation of a new and modern springboard, which has already attracted great attention and favor from the divers—and incidentally from those who like to sun themselves on the edge of the pool and are disturbed by the tidal waves thrown up by various and sundry high divers!

This is the seventh year that Mrs. Sparrow has been running the pool, and if the patronage of the persons who daily seek refuge from the heat in its cool waters is to be taken as a criterion, it is one of Chapel Hill's most popular institutions. Certainly with the Chapel Hillians themselves, and also with those unfortunates who attend summer school here, Mrs. Sparrow deserves credit as a philanthropist. This year, as usual, the crowds have been large, six or seven hundred people a week paying the required—and very nominal—two-bit fee to cool their perspiring skins in the water. The fame of the pool has even spread so far as to reach Durham, several water fans coming over from the Bull City each week for a swim.

Mrs. Sparrow says that the attendance has been very largely increased in the last couple of years with the advent of the sun tan craze which has swept the country so recently, causing the manufacturers of women's summer clothes and bathing suits so much anguish. It is even rumored that this craze was the cause of several aviators having crashed into the roofs of buildings in larger eastern cities, they having forgotten to steer their planes because of what they saw when they approached too close to the buildings. At the pool there are several tables which may be used quite appropriately by picknickers. Sad to say, however, these tables are more frequently used by the sunbathers. In addition to these facilities for baths in the sun and pool, there are showers in the dressing rooms, and if one likes a mud bath, there are always a lot of playful gents there to accommodate — sometimes previous to one's wishes!

In addition to all these fine assets, all those who are not ac-

Taft Reminisces On Progressive School And Community Changes

Prominent Sculptor Is Greatly Impressed With Unusual Beauty And Individuality Of University; Considers Institution Foremost In Fields of Research and Drama.

According to Lorado Taft, who has been staying at the residence of Dr. J. P. Harland during his three-day sojourn at the University, many changes have taken place in the community in the past eight years. It has been that long since he last appeared in Chapel Hill. Since then the streets of the town have been paved, many new buildings have been built, and the University has risen to the front in the fields of research and drama.

The great sculptor, hailed in many art circles as the world's greatest, was greatly impressed by the natural beauty of the campus. "It is very rare," he said, "that one finds a state university of such beauty. They usually grow up according to the dictates of economics, and the University of North Carolina is blessed with such individuality."

However, he expressed great surprise upon learning that the University had no art department. "It is very unfortunate," he said; "you are practically the only university in the country that does not have such a division." Moreover he expressed his opinion that even in such a practical science as engineering free-hand drawing is always a great aid.

"To understand art is to widen one's appreciation and, consequently, enjoyment. That is why I am striving so hard to lay more stress upon this line in colleges throughout the United States." The main difficulty in furthering art in America, he said, is the scarcity of people really acquainted with the craft. Through education this condition can be remedied.

The two main ambitions of the great sculptor are the creation of a great art museum and the completion of his idealistic sculptural project in Chicago. The Utopian museum, which he frequently mentions in his lectures throughout the country, would consist of several long aisles, each containing a nation's art arranged in historical order, with trancepts cross-cutting the corridors representing the different periods of history. In his lectures he is propagandaizing for the realization of this ambition, he admits.

The great figurative groups he has undertaken in the midway district of Chicago will be one of the greatest art treasures of the world. One of these groups has already been completed This is the mammoth statue of the Father of Time, which stands at the western extremity of the Midway and is effectively silhouetted against the setting sun. At the eastern end of the commons, he contemplates a corresponding group symbolizing the creation of man. With intense anticipation he looks forward to the completion of this highly idealistic piece of Archaic sculpture, which will not be affected in form because of its mythological subject, "Deucalion and Pyrrha," not the ordinary Adam and Eve material.

With excusable pride Mr. Taft spoke of "his Chicago." This city, he predicts, will sometime in the near future be the center of the world. "It is a city of destiny," he repeats. According to the great sculptor, the World's Fair at Chicago in 1933 will do more to further art in America than any other incentive; it will present an exhibition of statuary properly placed and properly

DEBATE COUNCIL GIVES AWARDS TO EIGHT DEBATERS

Speight Succeeds Williams As New Head; Next Year's Schedule Is Discussed.

After all votes had been turned in yesterday, George McKie, secretary of the debate council, announced that W. W. Speight had been elected president of the council for next year. The vote was 6 to 5, with Speight having the majority. The old council met with the recently elected group in discussing debating activities for next year and in electing a new president.

Certificates and monograms were awarded for meritorious work this year. A monogram is given a debater who has taken part in at least two intercollegiate debates during the college year. Certificates are given those who have already received monograms in previous years. J. M. Baley, McB. Fleming-Jones and C. T. Meares will receive monograms, while G. P. Carr, J. C. Williams, J. Wilkinson, W. W. Speight and H. H. Hobgood will receive certificates.

A debate schedule for next year was discussed by the two councils though no definite plans have yet been adopted. Those of the old council who were present at the meeting are: J. C. Harris, John Wilkinson, J. C. Williams and W. W. Speight. McKie was the only faculty member present. Howard Mumford Jones and Frank Graham, faculty members of the council, were absent, as was Beatty Rector. A successor to Jones, who will leave the University this summer, is to be appointed by President Chase.

Fleece Initiates

The Order of the Golden Fleece initiated its nine new members on Tuesday night in a secret ceremony held at an unknown location. The new argonauts sighed with relief yesterday as they felt the strain of the anticipated initiation over, although they appeared a bit sore and sleepy. No longer do they have to be in their beds by 10:30 or do any of the other "severe" requirements demanded by old members. They are now ready to embark on their "quest for the Golden Fleece" as Jason and his Argonauts did in the famous Greek legend.

The following were initiated: Joe Eagles, Ed Hamer, Pat Patterson, Marion Alexander, Will Yarborough, "Puny" Harper, Clyde Dunn, Archie Allen and Noah Goodridge.

The first long distance telephone line to Chapel Hill was established in 1901.

NATIONAL HEAD ENDORSES STATE STUDENT GROUP

N. S. F. A. President Writes Lang Supporting Newly Formed N. C. Federation.

Within two weeks after its organization, the North Carolina Federation of Students has attracted the attention of many student governments and federations throughout the country and has also become actively engaged in helping two student governments of this state settle some very grave problems in their respective student bodies.

John Lang, president of the state student organization, recently received a letter from Ed R. Murrow, president of the National Student Federation of the United States, in which he gave his hearty endorsement and support to the student movement in North Carolina. Moreover, President Murrow pledged the undivided support of the national federation to the state movement. In his letter to Lang, President Murrow announced that the national federation was so interested in the state organization that it is sending him from his home in the state of Washington to North Carolina early in June to interview Lang in an effort to harmonize the work of the two federations.

Lang has recently received a letter from the vice-president of the Southern Federation of Students pledging him the support of that organization in his work in North Carolina. Many faculty members and students in this state and elsewhere have been writing to the officials for information about the state federation, and there seems to be a general note of approval in all of these letters of the start that the student movement in North Carolina has already made.

Officials of the federation are considering a number of plans by which they hope to strengthen and improve the organization. Possibly the most important of these new plans is the one by which they are hoping to plant student government to some extent in the high schools and preparatory schools of the state. A campaign for reciprocal athletic tickets for the college students of the state has also been planned. Less hissing and booing at athletic contests will form another policy which the federation is going to urge. Finally, a campaign for junior college members for the federation is going to be waged next fall. President Lang has called a meeting of his executive committee at Chapel Hill to convene early next fall, at which time he hopes to be able to outline a most useful and effective program for the state student federation during the coming year.

An Increase In The Student Fee

Following a lengthy discussion of ways and means of continuing the Daily Tar Heel the Student Activities Committee voted unanimously to propose to the student body an increase of thirty-three cents per quarter in the present publications fee. Although general business conditions were blamed for the present financial crisis of the Daily, it was the opinion of the majority of the group that it would be impossible to continue the present four publications without an increase in the five dollar fee.

The history of the Publications Union Board reveals steady improvement in all publications since adoption of the Publications Union constitutions six years ago. However, it also reveals that during the same six years no increase has been made in the student fee. Now we are told that an increase is necessary. This increase, while so small as to be almost insignificant, means a great deal to the publications here. It guarantees a continuance of our present publications on a sound financial foundation.

It is to the credit of the Publications Board that we have held our fee to such a low figure. Investigation of similar institutions proves conclusively that we have the lowest fee of any University in this section of the country and that in many instances we pay less for a year book, a comic, a literary magazine and daily paper than is charged elsewhere for the year book alone.

But we face an impasse now. To discontinue the daily would be a step backward. It would mean that the effort of those who have gone before to produce here the best has been in vain. Much time and many years have been spent in developing our publications. Need we disregard that time and those years?

In 1889 a member of the Congress of the United States matriculated in the University, entering the law school at that time.

Lorado Taft

One of the most worthwhile diversions of university life, so they tell us (and we believe it must be true), is the entertainment program. Each year distinguished people in the fields of literature, music, science, and art are brought here in the interests of culture and entertainment. And in selecting attractions for a program, the committee on entertainments has done a job worthy of highest commendation.

Bertrand Russell and his ideas, William Beebe and his fishes, and the Russian Choir all were features of a most successful season. We might have had only one of these and still be proud of an excellent program. But when a man like the sculptor in our midst appears on the program it makes us doubly proud.

Lorado Taft, who gave his last lecture last night, brought to this campus an interesting personality as well as his own ideas about art. He is one who is given to thought as well as to action. He is not only a leading authority on sculpture, but his own creative work in the field has won him distinction as one of the foremost contemporary sculptors. His work and his ideas qualify him in unusual way for the lectures he has given.

Many times in these columns we have expressed our good fortune in the visits of certain people, but never has the University been more fortunate in having any speaker than in having as its guest Mr. Taft. B. M.

Bill McDade, Janitor

Bill McDade, dean of the University janitors, celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday Saturday. He began working for the University in 1875 and served the institution for 33 years. He is now janitor at the Beta Theta Pi house. Excellent though his record may be it does not much surpass the faithfulness of many other colored men who have made up the rank and file of Carolina's numerous body of janitors.

Some years ago a northern writer designated this university as a school having five hundred students and eight hundred colored janitors. Although this is rankly hyperbolic it is certainly true that a large number of colored workmen are constantly employed on and about the campus. Most of them are janitors; some are cooks; others take care of the lawns and collect trash.

Theirs is an important work, and they do it well. They do their work quietly; they are surprisingly little in evidence. They never seem to be in the way, noisy, or cluttering up doorways. It is doubtful if the members of any other race could discharge the duties of the University's janitors in such an agreeable manner.

In celebration of the birthday of their oldest member we wish to extend our best wishes to the brotherhood of Carolina janitors.—J. J.

Readers' Opinions

FOR A DAILY TAR HEEL

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

The experimental year for the Daily Tar Heel closes with two facts clearly evident, one, a successful editorial policy and the other, a financial deficit.

The Daily Tar Heel has been a source of pleasure and interest throughout the year. In fact, it has become a student necessity. Like breakfast, classes, study, the Carolina and many other habits we are now accustomed to having the Tar Heel as a daily necessity.

One could enumerate many values that justify the existence of the Tar Heel as a daily sheet. It ranks with the tri-weekly, there is enough evidence that it is needed and can be carried on and every effort should be made to continue it.

However, there is a financial deficit. This sum is large enough to create problems. A plan should be devised to take care of it. Such a plan is being proposed to the student body and as a member of the student activity committee of the faculty I heartily endorse it for the following reasons:

1. I believe in the Daily Tar Heel. I have enjoyed it and shall continue to subscribe for it and read it. In fact, I like to read it the very first thing in the morning along with one of the state papers. I would miss is as a daily pleasure.

2. It is a student necessity as a practical means of aiding student life with its many activities. This end is attained by notices, announcements, news, letters, and so on.

3. The editorials have been good and influence student opinion, attitudes and help to promote projects and programs.

4. It has allowed us to keep up with the activities of the campus from day to day—the news is not stale. The campus world is served with a daily newspaper just as we find in the city.

5. It has given unusual opportunity for practice in the field of journalism and the daily contacts of editors bespeaks a desire to continue and develop this relationship.

6. There has been some suggestion that the deficit be absorbed by eliminating the Buccaneer, the Magazine or the Yackety Yack. I think it would be a backward step to eliminate any of these projects. They all find a place in student life and while there may be an objection now and then to some of the content, under proper editorship it can be reduced to a minimum.

7. The most feasible plan appears to me to be to cut down expenses on all of the publications and increase the publication fee by One Dollar. In this way we can continue as we have this year, keep up the standards and perhaps better each publication due to the experiences of the past year.

8. Should the proposition fail the elimination of the Buccaneer, Magazine and Yackety Yack will not cancel the entire deficit of the Daily Tar Heel. We should recognize the real loss should the proposition fail support. We would lose all three of the above publications or go back to the tri-weekly paper.

9. Therefore, let us support the proposal of the Student Activity group since it is the most feasible way to continue.

Summarizing:

(a) It gives us the Daily Tar Heel.

(b) It allows the Buccaneer, the Magazine and the Yackety Yack existence.

(c) It is not an exorbitant demand nor a prohibitive sum.

(d) In comparison with many colleges the entire publication fee is much smaller here than elsewhere.

(e) It will give the staff confidence to continue and make good.

HAROLD D. MEYER.

AN ALUMNUS SPEAKS

To the Editor:

Although just one year old, when spoken of as an alumnus, I can imagine the University of North Carolina five years from now by the numerous changes during the past year. And some of the changes during the past year are not for the best interest of the school. Your editorial, "Concerning the Future," was timely.

But as an alumnus and a reader of the Daily Tar Heel, if you will allow me the space I would like to jot down a few changes I have noticed:

First, of course, is the resignation of President Chase and several prominent members of the faculty.

The abolishing of optional attendance.

I think the band has uniforms.

There was no reaction, judging by the absence of Open Forum letters, to the Golden Fleece tapping.

The "Stuff" is getting so strong in Orange county that even "Pink" Guthrie couldn't stand it.

Howard Bailey, the man with the Little Theatre Voice, is singing his swan song as Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet."

The "gal childs" are being taken into the Phi.

The Carolina Playmakers played in Charlotte on the Spring tour.

That ye managing editor is now Jack Dungan instead of John, alias J. Elwin.

Memorial Hall is to go.

In reading the Tar Heel each day there is one change I have been looking for, but to date my efforts have been in vain. The only place I will feel at home in five years from now will be Graham Memorial Hall.

AN ALUMNUS.

"BE AN OPTIMIST"

Editor The Daily Tar Heel:

I have just read the essay in the current issue of the Carolina Magazine, entitled "I am a Fool," and for some unaccountable reason I have been moved to comment; perhaps because in some ways I am in accord with the author. Our reactions and our temperaments, however, are entirely different.

Like the author, I have also been one of these uunfortunates, for account it unfortunate, who have found it necessary in order to get a college education, to struggle under the burden which a lack of sufficient funds entails. Quite unlike the author, however, I should again go through with it in the same manner in which I have, if that were necessary, in order to derive the same benefit that I feel I have gotten from my college career.

I do not deny, in fact I am positive that these benefits would have been ten-fold better if I had not had the worry and discouraging influence which follow when one is not able to determine at times if he shall be able to buy his next meal. There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that of two persons having equally the desire to learn, but one having the wherewith-all for certain pleasures and the freedom of mind from money matters, whereas the other having nothing and hence a lack of freedom of mind, the former has every opportunity to get what he wishes from college, whereas the latter is too handicapped to get half what he might. The breaks are not even; speaking now simply of education.

I think the author if truly writing of his own experiences, created an atmosphere himself which precluded his chance of getting anything at all from college—either socially or otherwise. I shall venture to say that his inferiority complex was not the result of his classmates snubbing him because he had to work, but that he was not socially compatable because he came here with that inferiority complex. His self-conciousness built the barrier. I do not believe that as a general rule these days people take time to notice whether a person's trousers are patched or his hands calloused, or if noticing care a rap. In anyone sticks here four years and leaves "dumber" than when he came, then it is entirely his own fault. He forms misconceptions because he is a pessimist. He needs to develop optimism, forget himself, his clothes, and for a time his social aspirations. These are quite desirable, but I should say unattainable in the state of mind in which he finds himself. Change that state of mind and the rest will undoubtedly follow. I am a staunch believer in what is expressed in the following little verse:

"If you thing you are beaten, you are;
If you think you dare not, you don't;
If you'd like to win but think you can't,
It's almost a cinch you won't.
If you think you are outclassed, you are;
For out in this world you'll find,
Success begins with a fellow's will,
It's all in the state of mind.'

It would be unfair after this tirade not to relate how my case differs from that of the author's, as far as money matters are concerned. After graduating from high school, I worked for one year, saving nearly enough to pay the expenses of my freshman year in college. I then took advantage of the University Loan Funds to complete my freshman year, working the following summer to save enough for the first quarter of my sophomore year, again borrowing from the University and other sources to complete this year. Following this, I found it necessary to drop out of school for another year in order to pay up the debts which had accumulated during the first two years, and leave me in a position to borrow again. This I did and succeeded also in saving enough for the first-quarter expenses of my junior year. The rest I borrowed, and intend borrowing more to complete the one year that I have left for a degree in engineering. I have not hesitated to borrow, being confident that my earning capacity after completing my education, will be far greater than it would have been without this education. I might say also in passing that I have not entirely shut myself away from extra-curricular activity, having worked with the glee club for three years and made every trip since I began with it. This experience I account as valuable toward my future station in life as my study of engineering.

I should certainly not advise high school students with the desire to learn, but without the ready money to see them comfortably through school, to give up entirely the thought of going to college. Instead of saying, "Die in the Poor House rather than go to college a self-help student," I should say, "Do not plan to work while at college, but work first, save, borrow, trust a great deal to luck (which somehow does not fail if one is in the proper frame of mind), go to college, gain some of its many advantages, then work hard to pay for those advantages. Above all, be an optimist."

Taft Acclaims Koch

Another acclamation has been added to the already long list of laurels won by Professor Koch and his Playmakers. Lorado Taft, when the professor's name was mentioned, exclaimed, "Oh yes! The man is famous; he is known all over the world." Such a testimony, coming from such a distinguished and celebrated authority of art, calls attention again to the great services rendered to the University by Professor Koch and his successful dramatic enterprises.

CHIPS Off the Old "BLOCK"

By Moore Bryson

Howard Bailey played what is likely to be his final role with the Carolina Playmakers Saturday night. It was very apropos that his last appearance should be in the role of "Romeo." Since his arrival on the campus several years ago, Howard has continued to stir amorous emotions within the hearts of numerous co-eds. His dreamy, temperamental and irresponsible nature evidently has a decided appeal. Besides being in favor with the weaker sex, he is also a good friend and companion with the boys. He makes a darn good addition to a "stag" party and can successfully hold his own with the next one. We all regret his departure and wish him success in his chosen field after he has broken away from the apron strings of his Alma Mater.

Incidentally, it appears that Romeo's affection for Juliet is not limited completely to the confines of the stage. Howard has apparently taken advantage of every opportunity to be with Lois Buell since her arrival from Boston. Such interest long ago surpassed the limits of professional courtesy. It is to be hoped that the courtship (a mere assumption on my part) will have a more pleasant ending than that decreed for the original characters by Shakespeare.

One can readily understand anyone's interest in Miss Buell. I was severely tempted to become a "Stage-door Johnnie" after seeing her charming portrayal of Juliet. However I refrained, one reason being that I had taken a delightful date to the performance and was perfectly content to let matters remain in status quo; the other reason being that I have tried too many time in the past to become a formidable rival of the great Baily without success.

Too much credit cannot be given to Mr. Hall for his accomplishments in producing "Romeo and Juliet." Forced to conserve because of limited funds, he designed and executed the most elaborate and artistic set ever used at the University at a total cost of less than $25. What is more, he conclusively proved that a Shakespearean production is not necessarily dull and boring to an average modern audience. Not once did he allow the action to drag or the spectator's mind to be diverted from the plot. His departure is made less grievous only by the knowledge that his place will be taken next year by the inspiring and inspired Sam Selden.

Two former Playmakers have returned to Chapel Hill for a visit after a season's run on New York stages. Helen Dortch and "Pen" Harrison are once more with us to pollute our innocent minds with terrible puns. Were it not for my deep respect for you, intellectual reader, I would repeat some of the foul ones the two of them concocted the last time I was with them. Helen undoubtedly holds the Southern Intercollegiate Championship, for she once made a pun on the word "grape-fruit." "In order to make wine," said Helen, "you take a bag and squeeze the grape thruit."—Holy St. Francis!!

RALEIGH WINNER OVER BULL CITY

High Baseball Teams Clash Here For Class A Championship.

With Allen Bailey pitching shut-out ball, Raleigh high beat Durham here yesterday 5-0, and thereby won the eastern title and right to play Charlotte high here Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the class A high school baseball championship of the state.

Pitcher Bailey hogged the limelight by a large margin, but got fast and consistent support from the whole smart Raleigh nine. Bailey held Durham to three hits, one an infield tap, and never let a Durham man get as far even as third. Not content with the pitching glory, he hit a triple and two singles for four times up, and drove in three of Raleigh's five runs.

The smart Durham team executed three double plays and played consistently good ball afield, but couldn't find Bailey for the hits necessary to win.

ANNUAL CHECKER TOURNEY PLANNED

The eleventh annual tourney of the North Carolina Checker Association will take place at Laurinburg on July 4 and 5, it was announced here yesterday by Edward Scheidt, secretary of the association.

Each year North Carolina's strongest checker players gather in a meet to determine the checker championship of the state. It has been held by Scheidt for the past two years. In 1928 he defeated the late George Anderson of Salisbury for the honor, and last year he won in the finals from Curtis Efird of Albemarle.

Former champions who will figure prominently in the tourney are H. O. McNair of Maxton, Coit M. Robinson of Lowell, and Harry Anderson of Winston-Salem. Other strong players who will be out to win are: Beverly McIntyre of Laurinburg, I. F. Sampson of Winston-Salem, Curtis Efird of Albemarle, J. P. Murray of Moyock, D. W. Freeman of Durham and A. F. Bowen and C. C. Gunn, both of Raleigh.

Looking Them Over

by
Browning Roach

It looks as though the 9.4 clocking of Frank Wykoff, California sprinter, will go unrecognized for a time yet. His performance was too recent for consideration by the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

* * *

Sprint records, like a well known brand of Kentucky burley, evidently must be aged in the wood before they are to be given to the public.

Because he used starting blocks, George Simpson's time of 9 2-5 last year was not recognized at the I. A. A. F. meeting at Berlin Tuesday. Eddie Tolan, University of Michigan negro, was officially hailed as the 100-yard champ. His mark of 9.5 in the western conference championships at Evanston, Ill., May 25, 1929, met with the approval of the I. A. A. F. and was specified as the only mark to come under the former 9.6 record which has been equaled on several occasions. Charlie Paddock once ran the 100 in 9.5, but at that time tenth-second watches were not approved by the I. A. A. F. and his time was thrown out.

Three other records of interest made by American athletes are: 163 feet 8¾ inches for the discus throw made by Eric Krenz of Stanford; 14 feet, 1½ inches for the pole vault made by Lee Barnes, former U. S. C. star; and 3 minutes 13.4 seconds for the one-mile relay made by the American Olympic quartet in a dual meet with Great Britain shortly after the last Olympics.

* * *

To appreciate properly the above records take a glance at the Carolina and southern records for the same events. Just about three-quarters of a foot in the vault, 3-10 of a second in the dash, nearly 30 feet in the discus and around 10 seconds in the mile relay.

A few things that have caught our eye at the ball games this year—

Nap Lufty crossing home plate on every trip between his position at third and the bench.

Jimmie Maus' peg to pitcher when things aren't going to suit him.

Billy Brown's speed on the base lines and his pose at first.

Rat Whitehead's delivery to first, or home, or any old place from any old position.

Jimmie Maus' whistle.

Piggy Potter's chatter—rivals that of Billy Brown.

Cecil Longest's physique and running form.

Shorty Branch's luck-shots over second.

Obie Davis' swing at a high outside ball. ?

Phil Sher's griping on the bench—and with reason.

Cloyd Blythe's contented expression when pinch-hitting.

Casey Jackson—I'll bite—what?

The whole squad, when at bat—looking toward the bench for Ashmore's signal when the count is two strikes and one ball.

Would-be big leaguers fishing for applause by snagging pop-ups in the stands.

The Gentlemen of the Press—taking a ballot to decide between a hit or an error—the hits usually get it.

Players, managers, base umpires and base coaches continually craning their necks toward the sections of the stands where the females are most abundant, and sometimes emitting sighs for field glasses.

Racquet Stars

The Carolina Tennis team has gone through a most successful season. After having defeated all the good teams in the state by large scores, the team took a trip through the South in search of more opposition. The Tar Heel racqueteers won all their matches but one there, defeating the U. of Tennessee 5-0, Sewanee 4-2, Georgia Tech 7-0, U. of Alabama 4-3, and tied the strong Tulane team 3-3.

The team has won 12 matches, tied one, and lost none, this giving them undisputed claim to the state title.

Carolina Racquetmen To Give Exhibition Match At Sedgefield

The Sedgefield Country Club has invited three varsity and three freshman tennis players of Carolina to give an exhibition match on the club courts this Sunday.

Hinky Hendlin will oppose Bryan Grant, southern men's champ, in one match; Phil Liskin will meet Wilmer Hines, southern junior champ, in another; and Captain Bill Grant other; and Captain Bill Merritt will play Lenoir Wright, Virginia prep school champ, in the final singles match. Hendlin and Liskin will meet Grant and Hines in the only doubles match of the afternoon.

PROFESSOR AIDS IN TRACK WORK

All during the past track season J. P. Harland, professor of archaeology here, has been assisting in coaching sprinters and others in starts.

Mr. Harland was a member of the class of 1913 at Princeton University and ran the 100 and 220 yard dashes for that school. Although his chief interest at the present is archaeology, Mr. Harland says that he gets quite a bit of pleasure by assisting the track coaches here.

Particularly with Charlie Farmer has Mr. Harland been working, and he intends to continue to work with him for the rest of this quarter since Carolina's 10 point man is planning to enter the A. A. U. Amateur Championship meet in Chicago about June 14.

New Track Records

Three more new world's records were added last week to Wykoff's 100-yard record of 9.4 without starting blocks. The records were in the shot put, discus throw, and mile run.

Eric Krenz, giant blonde weightman of Stanford University, hurled the discus 167 feet 5 inches, breaking his own world record by over three feet, in the annual California intercollegiate meet.

Herman Brix, former University of Washington weight star representing the Los Angeles A. C., heaved the shot 52 feet 4 inches in a meet last week, breaking the former mark by several inches.

Crowley, running for Allentown Preparatory School of Allentown, Pa., in the University of Pennsylvania Interscholastics last Saturday, broke the accepted world's schoolboy record for the mile, set by Bill Cox of Mercersburg Academy in 1924, when he sped over the distance in 4 minutes 21.4 seconds.

Athletic Pictures

Members of athletic teams and squads who have had their pictures taken this year for the News Bureau or Yackety Yack may get copies by calling at the Tar Heel office between 4 and 5 p. m. today and tomorrow.

Tennis Players Here Take Up Pajama Fad

People sleep in pajamas, go to the beaches in pajamas, sometimes even walk about the streets in pajamas, and now an aspiring Tar Heel reporter has discovered that they play tennis in pajamas.

Getting up a half hour earlier than usual, he—the aspiring reporter—loked out of his window in Everett yesterday morning and saw what appeared to be two pajama-clad figures playing tennis. Upon closer investigation these figures turned out to be Philip K. Kaufman and Benjamin Winik, two Everett dormers. When questioned, the two nature lovers finally admitted that they arose at 6:30 every morning and indulged in two sets of strenuous tennis before going to classes.

They go to sleep each night with their tennis racquets beneath their pillows so that when the alarm rings at 6:30, they have merely to put on their slippers, grab their racquets, and they are ready for action.

If this fad turns into a general habit, the school will become a training ground for tennis players in the embryo. It is rumored that a scout for the U. S. Davis Cup squad has been seen snooping about the school courts in the early hours of the morning looking for material.

PRESS BOOK HAS IMPORTANT DATA

Heer's Book Treats of Income And Wages In South; Clarifies Numerous Questions.

(By Jack Riley)

"Income and Wages in the South," by Clarence Heer of the University institute for research in social science, has been issued by the University Press. With the aid of his wife, Dean Carroll, and Professor Odum, Mr. Heer has compiled much valuable statistical data concerning the industrial and agricultural conditions in the south.

In the last few years the south has made much progress in industry and has gained many new mills and factories. This spread of industry in the south has caused many questions that call for exact quantitative information rather than speculation and controversy.

In the less than 100 pages of the little book by Mr. Heer is given a panoramic picture of the present conditions in the south. Numerous questions that have caused continual controversy are clarified.

The industrial conditions in the south have room for much improvement, but until the critical condition of the southern farmers is remedied there is little hope for the industrial worker. All the industrial workers in the south only make up about 17 per cent of the population. The greater part are farmers, and until the farmers get better returns the others must wait.

For the last eighty years the condition of the southern farmer has been a question of general comment. At present, the author finds, the average income of the south is less than one-half that in the other states. Mr. Heer shows that of the ten states having the largest ratio of rural population, six of these are in the south, and that of the ten states showing the lowest per capita wealth, eight are southern. Mr. Heer points out that the reason for the low wages is the fact that nearly half the population in the south depends on unprofitable agriculture as a source of livelihood.

So long as there remains the high amount of poorly paid labor in the south, there will remain the low rates of income. The only way to better these conditions is to better living conditions and to increase the income of the workers.

Pictures of both freshman and varsity track squads will be made at Emerson field this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

(By Harry Galland)

Fished by chance from the bottom of the sea, where it had lain embedded for over 2400 years, an important archaeological discovery found in Greece recently has made what is probably its first public appearance in America at the University, shown by Dr. J. P. Harland, professor of Archaeology, in his classroom.

This latest acquisition in the field of Greek sculpture was found, not by the spade of the archaeologist, but with a net in the hands of an unsuspecting fisherman.

A little over a year ago, fishermen off the coast of the island of Euboea, along the eastern coast of Greece, cast their nets about 600 yards off shore. A heavy weight attracted their attention, and they found they had hauled up a bronze arm from the sea. Several years before, the mate to this arm had been found.

Excited by the possibilities of their find, the fishermen dove repeatedly at the approximate spot where they had netted the arm, and finally located and were able to drag out of the sands, where it had lain for twenty-four centuries, a bronze statue in fairly good condition.

Eventually last year it came into the hands of the Greek government and was taken to the National Museum at Athens, where it has been carefully cleaned of all encrustations. The arms have been re-attached, and just recently has it been ready to be put on exhibition.

The statue represents Zeus with the left arm outstretched, hurling his attribute, a thunderbolt, with the right. It is dated about 470 B. C., a decade before the beginning of the Great Age of Greece. About seven feet in height, the statue is in a perfect state of preservation, the eyeballs alone being missing. These were probably of white enamel with a black pupil and brown iris.

A Greek archaeologist connected with the National Museum at Athens, a friend of Dr. Harland, sent a photograph of the statue to him as soon as it had been cleaned and was ready to be set up in the museum. Since no pictures or descriptions of the find have yet been published, it is making its American debut in Chapel Hill.

While expeditions of archaeologists are constantly exploring and digging for remains of the glory that was Greece, little of importance has been discovered in recent years. Most of the remains of sculptures and temples have been found at Delphi or near the Acropolis at Athens. A find as far afield as that of the statue of Zeus, is, therefore, of particular interest to archaeologists.

Three Masters of Hilarity

Jack Oakie, Leon Errol and Skeets Gallagher in "PARAMOUNT ON PARADE" At the Carolina Theatre Today

To Publish Outcome Of Prohibition Poll

Forty voters out of every hundred in the United States desire the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, twenty-nine prefer modification of the Volstead law, and thirty-one stand for strict enforcement, according to the Literary Digest's final report on its nation-wide poll, to be published in Saturday's issue of that magazine.

A grand total of 4,806,464 of the twenty million ballots sent out came back properly marked, as follows:

For modification—1,464,098, or 30.46 per cent.

For inforcement—1, 464,098, or 29.11 per cent.

For repeal — 1,943,052, or 40.43 per cent.

"The harvest of votes far exceeds the fruits of all the Digest's most famous and disputed presidential polls. Does not this indicate that the American people are more deeply stirred by the existing prohibition situation than they were even by the Hoover-Smith contest, whose astonishing outcome was so categorically forecast by our 1928 polls?" says the editor of the Digest.

North Carolina was one of the five states that registered a majority vote for strict enforcement. Fifty-one per cent of the 59,774 voters from this state favored enforcement, 26 per cent were moist, and 23 per cent wet.

College sentiment throughout the country seems to favor repeal. In the vote taken at Carolina April 2, 658 favored repeal, 144 modification, and 142 enforcement.

lighted, which is the essential feature of all effective displays and which is so often disregarded. Mr. Taft himself is supervising the exhibit.

In speaking on various subjects, he stated that he considered his colossal statue, "Blackhawk," to be the greatest of all his works; that the Stone Mountain Memorial was a curiosity and an object for devotion of all southerners, but was not art; that Gutzum Borglum's correction of Calvin Coolidge's 50-word history of the United States, which is to be inscribed on the West's version of Stone Mountain, is the greatest joke among contemporary artists; that modernistic art was capable of being very interesting and also very foolish, according to the seriousness of the artist; and that at present he is willing to term himself a "publicity man for sculpture."

Mr. Taft has been well received on the campus, and his lectures have been greatly appreciated both from an educational and an entertaining standpoint. He left last night for his native haunts in Chicago, where he is to lecture before a board of municipal architecture.

FLAVOR? You can't beat the flavor of Kellogg's Pep Bran Flakes. The crunchy crispness. The good-to-the-last-spoonful deliciousness. You'll say they're the best bran flakes you ever ate.

Try them. Full of whole-wheat nourishment plus extra bran to be mildly laxative.

Great for breakfast—for late suppers. Ask to have them served at your fraternity or campus restaurant.

The most popular ready-to-eat cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include ALL-BRAN, Corn Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles and Kellogg's Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—the coffee that lets you sleep.

STUDENT PAPER HERE COMPLETES STEADY GROWTH

Only Few More Issues Remain Before Thirty-Ninth Year of Progress Will Have Begun.

(By George Wilson)

Endorsing the continuance of the Tar Heel as a daily newspaper, the student activities committee means to enable the paper to maintain the steady progress that has attended it since its inception in 1893. This decision, besides assuring the faith of the campus in the Tar Heel, is welcomed also because of the fact there will probably be no step backward in the history of the paper.

The Tar Heel was organized in February, 1893, as a weekly paper, sponsored by the Athletic Association. At that time there were two existing publications on the campus, the Carolina Magazine and the year-book, the Hellenian. The magazine had enjoyed an existence of almost fifty years, and it welcomed the arrival of a new publication that could handle material and things of interest that a literary magazine could not handle. In fact, it had strongly urged the organization of a newspaper, and in 1891 had extended its hand to the unsuccessful Chapel Hillian, a paper, whose existence was very short.

The Athletic Association, seeing the need for a student newspaper and thinking of the benefits it could derive from it in the way of publicity, decided to start a paper, which it did by electing the members of the staff and appointing the editor and manager.

Scarcely a year later, another newspaper appeared on the campus, the White and Blue. Its arrival was very noisy as it bitterly denounced the Tar Heel as impartial, favoring fraternities, and even went so far as to demand the withdrawal of fraternities from the Hill. The Tar Heel, on the other hand, ignored the allegations of its rival, and welcomed another paper on the Hill. A year later the White and Blue had been combined with the Tar Heel.

The weekly Tar Heel, under the direction of the Athletic Association, existed without radical change until 1909. Prior to this time, it was realized that there was more news on the campus than could be accommodated by a weekly paper, but no attempt to change from a weekly had been made. In 1909 a semi-weekly was tried and existed until 1911, when financial conditions forced the Athletic Association to go back to a weekly. This is to be regretted as it is the only step backward the Tar Heel has made in its history.

From 1911 to 1920, the University was under a great period of expansion and it was often talked of making the Tar Heel a semi-weekly, but the disastrous experience of 1909 prevailed. However, in 1920 the student body voted for a semi-weekly

Campus News Men See Pre-Showing Of Picture

Manager Smith Is Host to Staff of Daily at Advance Showing of Story of Newspaper Life; Follows Usual Policy of Entertaining Campus Groups.

Last night E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, entertained the editor, managing editor, business manager, the city editors, the members of the editorial board, the sports editor and his assistants and some of the outstanding members of the reportorial staff of the Daily Tar Heel at a special advance showing of the picture, "Young Man of Manhattan," which is to be shown at the regular hours today.

It frequently happens that because a motion picture deals with newspaper men and women and press activities, many patrons are scared off, classing the picture as "just another damned news story."

Those of the Tar Heel staff who saw the preview of "Young Man of Manhattan" last night can attest to the fact that the picture has plenty of life, a catching, well-developed plot, good acting, and a connected sequence of action and interest which combine to form one of the best pictures of the year.

The story as run in the Saturday Evening Post a few months ago proved one of the most popular novels of the year. Claudette Colbert, playing the feminine lead as Ann Vaughn, New York columnist and feature writer, meets Toby McLean, played by Norman Foster, at the Dempsey-Tunney fight at Philadelphia. Their fall is sudden and complete and the incident of the ring and bridesmaids follows shortly. Toby has ability as a writer and draws a good salary on a metropolitan newspaper but a lot of money goes in on drinks and bad debts among his fellow journalists and he soon finds himself in the embarrassing position of seeing his wife outstrip him in free-lance and feature work.

Puff Randolph (Ginger Rogers) sophisticated innocent of Broadway discovers Toby and proceeds to give him a run. Toby fails to succumb to Puff's charms but she draws him into several parties and puts him in a bad way with his wife. Ann, meanwhile, lands a big-pay job of writing a series of movie articles in Hollywood and retaliates Toby's inconstancy with an affair with Dwight Knowles, which is not so serious as she leads Toby to believe.

The breach widens and Toby goes to Florida to cover the Yankees' training camp. Ann returns to New York and a poisoning incident brings Toby to her on the run. She pretends indifference and Toby, striving to regain her lost respect and love for him, spurs himself to action and gets out some good stories, including a successful novel that bring a big money advance from his publishers.

The doctor tells Toby that Ann will recover her health, but he is still dubious about his position in her affections. Shorty Ross, a close friend of Toby's, pokes his head in the door of Ann's room and, finding Toby and Ann in a clinch, announces to Dwight Knowles, who is still hanging around Ann, that he might as well clear out for there's no use in his sticking around any longer.

STUDENT COUNCIL REPORTS CASES

Twelve Cases Are Tried and Sentenced; Freshmen Punished For Dormitory Disturbances.

The student council wishes to report to the student body its action since installation into office four weeks ago. The following cases have been dealt with:

Case No. 1—X and Y, freshmen, were convicted of disturbances in their dormitory and breach of conduct towards another student. They were both put on strict conduct probation until the winter quarter 1931.

Case No. 2—X, a freshman, guilty of disturbance in dormitory and serious damage to dormitory property, and also of breach of conduct in Carolina theatre, was sentenced to pay for the property damaged, to move ut of the particular dormitory mediately and to room in no dormitory during the next three quarters. He was also put on strict conduct probation for that time.

Case No. 3—X and Y, freshmen, guilty of serious disturbance in dormitory and breach of conduct toward another student, were sentenced to move out of the dormitory and to room in no dormitory until the winter quarter 1931. They were put on strict conduct probation for that length of time.

The faculty executive committee has reported through the student council the following cases:

YACKETY YACKS ARE DISTRIBUTED TO ONE THOUSAND

First Supply Is Exhausted in Two Hours; Second Supply Due Tuesday.

PRESENT NEW FEATURES

Yackety Yacks for 1930 were distributed yesterday afternoon to those who were fortunate enough to get them. From 1:30 until 4:30 long lines could always be seen in front of the window and door of the Yackety Yack office. By 4:30 the supply of the annuals was completely exhausted. One thousand books were distributed. The rest of the books will be distributed next week, probably Monday or or Tuesday.

This year's Yackety Yack consists of 392 pages, printed by the Queen City Printing Co. of Charlotte. It is more compact than its recent predecessors. Travis T. Brown is editor-in-chief and B. M. Parker is business manager. The cover of the book is particularly attractive. It is of green leather, with the words "Yackety Yack" embossed in gold in the center. About the title of the book is a diamond-shaped design with Bingham hall, the library, the "Y" and South building in the corners of the cover, according to their respective positions on the campus. The annual is pleasing to the eye, and presents a rather dignified appearance.

One feature of the Yackety Yack which gives it a good appearance is the colored introductory page for each of the ten sections. A picture in color of an historical character introduces the section, and the back side of the sheet has a quotation from the man whose picture is on the reverse side. The list of men whose introduce the sections is as follows: University section, Cardinal Newman; faculty, Francis Bacon; classes, Jean Jaques Rousseau; activities, Shakespeare; Kaleidoscope, O. Henry; fraternities and social orders, Lord Chesterfield; Vanity Fair, Thackeray; The Dance, Lord Byron; athletics, Alexander the Great; and advertisements, Benjamin Franklin.

Athletic Pictures

Due to an error, the wrong time for the distribution of athletic pictures was printed in yesterday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel. Pictures of members of the athletic squads and teams taken for the News Bureau or Yackety Yack during the year may be ordered this afternoon between 5 and 6 o'clock at the Tar Heel office. This will be the last chance this year to get the pictures.

Survey Shows Ex-Editors Adopt Varied Activities

(By J. M. Little)

Proposals for increasing the publications fee, with the campus vote necessitated thereby, focuses attention temporarily upon the history of the Tar Heel in its rise from the position of a struggling weekly to that of the only college daily south of Washington and east of the Mississippi. A factor of primary importance in this story has been the influence of the successive young editors, budding journalists who have since become famed in varied lines of activity.

The most popular fields of endeavor, according to the selections of by-gone collegiate journalists, are different phases of the newspaper game. Of a total of 51 editors, 14 have chosen to engage in writing in some capacity for new organs. They are as follows: James A. Gwynn, N. J., editor of various legal publications, including the Law Encyclopedia and Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure, and assistant sales manager of E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co.; Ralph H. Graves, New York, editor with Doubleday, Doran & Co.; Victor L. Stephenson, N. Y., journalist, editor of Suracuse Telegram; Quincy Sharpe Mills, Statesville, formerly editorial writer for N. Y. Evening Sun; O. J. Coffin, Chapel Hill, formerly newspaper editor, now professor of journalism at the University; Lenoir Chambers, Jr., journalist, editorial writer on Greensboro Daily News; Walter P. Fuller, Fla., editor and realtor; Thomas C. Linn, Jr., N. Y., journalist, staff of New York Times; Charles G. NOTED DANCERS DELIGHT CROWD IN STADIUM HERE

Distinguished Ruth St. Denis And Troupe Perform for First Time in Chapel Hill.

Ruth St. Denis and the famous Denishawn Dancers presented an interesting and effective program at the Kenan stadium last night before a large, appreciative audience. The program contained a varied selection of solo and ensemble numbers chosen to satisfy the taste of even the most severe critic.

Miss St. Denis was at her best last night, displaying the artistic skill which has made her an international figure in the terpsichorean art. Her solo presentations were a "Greek Veil Plastique" by Gluck, "Waltz" by Brahms, "Liebestraum" by Liszt, "Javanese Court Dance" by Vaughan, and the "Bas-Relief Figure from Angkor Vat."

Ernestine Day, a leading member of the Denishawn troupe, also rendered two solo numbers, a "Viennese Waltz" and the "Burmese Dancer," while Marion Chace and Lester Shafer combined to present the "Idyll."

The ensemble presentations were "Prelude" by Chopin, "Sonata Pathetique" by Beethoven, "The Batik Vendors," "East Indian Bazaar Dance," "Japanese Flower Arrangement," "Soaring" by Schumann, and "Valse Extase." In the latter dance Regina Beck, former Greensboro girl, was the leading figure.

Interspersed with the dances were several violin selections by Sol Cohen who was at the piano during the dances. While playing the violin he was assisted at the piano by Julius Cohen.

The rest of the company besides those already mentioned were Anna Austin, Hazel Kranz, Vivian Berman and Martha Hinman. The company was under the management of Edward Lowrey.

The Denishawn Dancers were presented here under the joint auspices of the Carolina Playmakers and the American Association of University Women.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I wish you could see my garden. I looked at it for nine weeks on end last summer when I might have been wasting my time on verses.—A. A. Milne.

Is It Worth The Cost?

The real question to be decided Tuesday is: does the Daily Tar Heel render sufficient services to the campus to justify an increase of 33 1-3 cents a quarter in the student publication fee? We think it does.

There are three distinct services rendered by the daily paper. It is without doubt the only suitable means of making announcements and informing the student body of current happenings. Although every one may not agree as to what constitutes an announcement of sufficient importance to merit a prominent display, we continue to believe that the Daily has proven satisfactory as a medium of information to the student body as a group.

More than fifty students find the work of producing the Daily sufficiently interesting to devote considerable time in the afternoons to the work. It is not and never will be a closed corporation. Any student doing work of a satisfactory nature is allowed to become a part of the Daily. It is essentially a student enterprise.

Finally the Daily Tar Heel has brought the University the distinction of possessing the only daily paper in the South Atlantic section proper. To produce a daily is no mean accomplishment. It is a tribute to the energy and initiative of the University's student body. Because the students are the owners of the Daily Tar Heel, whatever glory may be won by those doing the actual work reflects on the entire student body.

Is it worth the price? Answer the question yourself. Think back a year to the old tri-weekly. And remember that the daily is concrete evidence of what we are doing here. It is a record of our achievements and failures.

Nothing Like A Daily Paper

Next Tuesday the student body will decide by campus-wide vote whether the Daily Tar Heel is to continue as a daily or go back to its old tri-weekly form. If it remains a daily there will be an increase of 33 1-3 cents a quarter in the publication fee. If it reverts to a tri-weekly there will be no change in the fee.

We firmly believe that the Daily Tar Heel is in no danger. The student body realizes that as an experiment the publication has proven a success. Coming out six days a week it has been as punctual and its news quality has been as attractive as when it appeared only three times a week. Besides helping the reputation of the University outside the campus, the daily paper has added astoundingly to the welfare and happiness of the student body. It would be hard to do without a daily now that we have experienced having one.

That the Daily Tar Heel would not be self-supporting was a foregone conclusion. Not many student publications are. The remarkable part of it is that we are only being asked for a dollar increase to keep up the present standards of our publications. This will cause the fee to amount to six dollars a year, which is, as far as what we get for our money is concerned, the lowest publication fee we have heard of at any college.

Few things are more flat and tasteless than stale news; nothing is fresher than fresh news. That is the difference between a daily and a tri-weekly paper. Certainly it is worth eleven cents a month to every student on the campus to have fresh news at his door every morning—J. J.

Initiations

Since the days of savagery, down through the periods inflicted with such practices and institutions as the Roman gladiatorial combats, the Inquisition, the Ku-Klux Klan, and senatorial investigations, man has exhibited more or less futile efforts at times to control primitive nature. His overt actions, censored and prohibited in one direction, have reappeared with renewed vigor under some other guise. Although psychologists have fairly definitely proved that the actual desires of an individual never totally disappear, this fact has often been neglected by legislative bodies in the formulation of rigid and inflexible restraints.

A striking example of this well-known psychological principle of sublimation—i.e. the reappearance under a different aspect of some repressed internal drive—is to be observed in the initiations occurring on the campus from time to time. In spite of, or possibly due to, the strict regulations here regarding hazing, the instinctive love for administering physical or mental tortue to one's fellow man seeks this means of expression and results in elaborate, often disgusting, and sometimes even harmful, methods of reducing the ego of the unfortunate neophyte. Not only fraternities, but such supposedly dignified and august organizations as the Golden Fleece, Di Senate, and others are rumored to administer in most awe-inspiring ceremonies the privileges of membership.

Perhaps a certain amount of horse-play is to be encouraged, or at least tolerated. Yet, being unquestionably a relic of ages long past, it should become sooner or later obsolete since, in the words of Walter Lippman, "An American will endure almost any insult except the charge that he is not progressive." Initiations, as practiced at present, will eventually, and no doubt should, follow the Frosh-Soph Tug-o-wars and Snowfights into oblivion.—J. M. L.

Professors, Students, And The Weather

"It hurts me as much as it hurts you," says the irate father as he wields the hair brush. And so said his father before him and his before him and so on ad infinitum until we have harked back to the caveman and his club.

Daily we play leap frog down two flights of stairs, dash madly across campus and again scurry up two more flights of stairs to the tune of the last bell and occasionally we reach a class, that directly follows another one, on time. Sometimes we get to the door just on time to gasp here to roll-call and then sink into a seat across which a warm and yellow patch of sunlight is draped. One half of the hour is consumed in the process of cooling off and the remaining half is dedicated to the art of composing one's face into such an expression as is most approved by the professor. This is especially difficult in hot weather for while one's mind remains like a brown mud puddle, one's face must bespeak the activity of a bubbling brook.

Some professors very humanely permit their facial expressions to register what is the sum total of "it hurts me as much as it does you" and thus form a sympathetic bond between the different varieties of sufferers. The student is then almost willing to help maintain a degree of classroom dignity.

Not infrequently a professor's expression registers something which might be translated as: "It's all your fault." The students immediately retaliate with the same and before an hour is over a group of people see red. This situation is far worse than the event in which a professor is suffering from indigestion or the effects of a bad half-hour with the wife, since it is most probable that the other faction is not afflicted likewise.

Thus far, according to experimental observation (data not publishable) the "it hurts me as much as it hurts you" expression is the one which produces the best results since it is a known fact that misery loves company.

Ill Omens

One of the things that has long made the University village of Chapel Hill attractive to outsiders is the beauty of its immediate countryside. Almost completely surrounded by unspoiled woods, through which wind paths and streams, and with a sylvan air about its very streets, the town is more like some sort of dream village than the ones usually found in North Carolina.

But of late Chapel Hill has shown signs of losing her old charm. Many of its roadside pines and oaks and dogwoods have given way to filling stations, while the inexorable lines of dwelling houses each year march a little further into the prettiest parts of the woods. Trysting places are annually becoming back yards; fastnesses, once lovely and remote, are being marked off and sold as building lots.

Only a few days ago I saw a group of men driving stakes and running lines in the woods near Meeting of the Waters. This particular section is undoubtedly the most pleasant and secluded locality left directly adjacent to the campus. For an afternoon walk no better place can be found so near the University. It is unthinkable that such a spot should be made into a real estate development. Yet the thing would not be without precedent in Chapel Hill.

The signs are ominous.—J. J.

The president's report of 1907 stated that a student's annual expenses were about $250, while in 1900 it was only $150.

REMINISCENCES

* * *

By Howard M. Lee

Twenty-Five Years Ago—

The Tar Heel was not published on account of the nearness of commencement.

Ten Years Ago—

By an overwhelming majority, the Philanthropic Society went on record as disfavoring any form of co-education at the University except for graduates from other institutions, professional students, and resident girls.

V. M. I. defeated Carolina in a tennis tournament at Chapel Hill.

Andy Johnson, "Dean of the Medical School," and president of the University Janitor's Association, spoke before the student body in Gerrard hall at chapel period. He outlined plans by which closer cooperation could be obtained between janitors and the students. Andy was the first negro that has ever spoken to a University audience in Gerrard hall.

Four girls from Flora McDonald college rendered a musical concert in Gerrard hall.

Ten faculty houses costing approximately $50,000 were in process of construction.

Five Years Ago—

The student body voted by a landslide of 571 to 59 to have a permanent blanket fee for the Publication Union. It was also decided to reduce the fee from $5.50 to $5.00 and to add the Buccaneer to the list of publications which included the Tar Heel, the Yackety Yack, and the Carolina Magazine.

Dean D. D. Carroll returned from an eight month trip to Europe. Mr. Carroll's trip was made possible by the Kenan traveling professorship.

Venable hall, the best equipped chemistry building in the South, was completed.

The co-eds raised $100.00 toward the purchase of laundry equipment to be placed on the third floor of Spencer hall.

Virginia defeated Carolina 2 to 1 in the annual baseball game held at Greensboro.

ZOOLOGY COURSES GIVEN IN SUMMER

Dr. Robert E. Coker, director of the Alleghany School of Natural History at Quaker Bridge, N. Y., is now accepting registrations for that school during the summer. Courses received from this school will be accepted by this University.

The Alleghany School is located in a large forest in Alleghany State Park, where increasing numbers of native birds and beasts offer a rich field for the study of zoology. For field excursions the students have the 6,000-acre Alleghany State Park in the bend of the Alleghany river; and adjacent, over the Pennsylvania line, is the much larger Alleghany National Park.

Students at the Alleghany School live a healthy life, being housed in cabins with sides half walled and half screened, but closeable by shutters, provided with stoves and nearby running water, and electric lights.

LIPMAN'S TO REOPEN

Jack Lipman's store which was recently damaged by fire is to be remodeled and opened in time for summer school.

Several days ago a fire sale was started and it is hoped that by this Saturday week all the old merchandise will be sold. The store will then be closed for about two weeks while the building is being remodeled.

UNIVERSITY WILL LOSE DR. WILSON

It has been announced on good authority that Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, III, has been offered the position of head of the modern foreign language department of Henry Holt & Co., publishers. Dr. Wilson will soon turn in his resignation to President Chase. This will be the fourth loss to the romance languages department this spring. Messrs. Salley, Jennings and Barker will all leave the University at the end of the quarter. It is the ninth loss to the University at this time, and Dr. Wilson is the 28th person to sever his connections with the University in the past two years.

Dr. Wilson's work with Henry Holt & Co. will be of an editorial nature. He will examine, correct, and select books on modern foreign languages that are turned in to the publishers and will offer suggestions as to how they can be bettered. This work will require that Dr. Wilson and his family reside in New York City where the publishing house is situated.

Dr. Wilson received his college education in the University and has been associated with it ever since in the position of teacher. He was graduated from the University in 1921 and immediately received a position as instructor. At the same time he worked for his M. A. degree which he received in 1924. The high honor of being given a Rhodes scholarship was tendered Dr. Wilson and he went to Oxford University for three years. In 1927 he received his Ph. D. degree from Oxford and returned to this university as assistant professor of romance languages. At the present time he is assistant professor and secretary of the department. Dr. Wilson's loss will be severely felt by the romance language department.

THREE TAR HEEL CAPTAINS LEAD IN BATTING LIST

Captain-Elect Whitehead With .391 Average; Maus and Lufty Follow in Order.

Captain Jimmy Maus, Nap Lufty and Burgess Whitehead, Carolina's star trio of infielders, were the big boys with the bat for the University of North Carolina nine this year, according to the statistics just released for the season by Wallace Shelton, official scorer.

Whitehead led the regular batters with 36 hits for 91 tries and an average of .391, led the team in triples with 4, and also led all the Tar Heels in stolen bases with 22. Captain Maus was second among the regular hitters with an average of .357, led the team in doubles with 5, and stole 12 bases. Lufty was the homerun leader with 8, and hit fourth among the regulars with an average of .333.

Oddly enough, this trio of leaders is also a trio of captains. Third-baseman Lufty led the Tar Heels as a junior in 1929 and played again this year. Catcher Maus was captain this season, and the brilliant shortstop Whitehead is captain-elect next year.

Other leading hitters who played in nine or more games and their averages were Obie Davis, outfielder, .340; Paul Edwards, pitcher, .318; Billy Brown, first baseman, .304; Auburn Wright, pitcher-outfielder, .267; Frank Fleming, pitcher, .267; Cecil Longest, pitcher, .263; Piggy Potter, catcher-outfielder, .256; and Phil Jackson, first baseman-second baseman, .247.

The veteran Frank Fleming had the best record of the pitchers. Fleming worked in 12 games and had credit for 4 victories to 2 losses for a percentage of .667. Cecil Longest, a sophomore, worked in 11 games and had credit for 2 victories and 1 defeat for the same average, while Paul Edwards, another sophomore, who worked in the same number of games, won 4 and lost 3 for an average of .571.

The Tar Heels' team record showed them winning 13 games to 12 lost on 222 hits and 134 runs, with a team batting average of .264, to place second in the Big Five race and fourth in the Tri-State League campaigns.

Baseball Briefs

Babe Ruth hit three home runs again yesterday afternoon to help his teammates win a double-header from the Macks, and avenge their double loss of Wednesday. This brings the Bambino's total to 12 and places him in a tie with Wilson of the Cubs for first honors in circuit wallops. The Yankees, in winning yesterday's twin bill, again reached the .500 mark with 15 games won and lost.

Washington won a double-header from Boston yesterday while the Mackmen were losing two to the Yanks and increased their lead to three full games over the Senators.

The Caps found their batting eyes again yesterday to lick the Bulls 8-4 and come within half a game of emerging from the cellar.

The three leaders in the National league lost their games, but the Cardinals took a close one from Cincinnati to advance to third place in the standings and push the Giants back a notch.

As a protest to the method used in teaching French, members of the class of 1870 burned all their texts, and the method was consequently changed.

BETAS COME OUT FIRST IN TENNIS

Defeat New Dorms In Close Contest For Campus Championship.

The Beta Theta Pi No. 2 tennis team won a desperately contested and spectacular victory from the New Dorms team by the close score of three matches to two Wednesday afternoon. In the No. 1 singles match Huskins of New Dorms, playing a careful and accurate game behind a strong service, took advantage of Moody's errors to win 6-3, 6-0 for the most decisive victory of the day. The number two match developed into a hard fought see-saw struggle between Baley's chop strokes and Dressler's net attack. Dressler finally won 6-4, 4-6, 6-2, evening the matches at one all. The final singles match was won by Black of Beta over Pfaff after a close fight in which Black pulled a splendid comeback to win 1-6, 6-2, 7-5.

New Dorms found itself confronted with the desperate task of winning both doubles. With the championship at stake some of the most fiercely fought tennis that the writer has ever seen was the result. With the courts in almost complete darkness one of the kind of situations you read about in sport stories developed. Each New Dorms team was leading five games to four in the third and deciding set when there was a moment's intermission. When play was resumed Pfaff and House of New Dorms won the next game and the set 6-4. This left the issue up to the number one teams. In the meanwhile Moody and Dressler of Beta had pulled up to five all on Huskins and Baley. The New Dorms pair won the next two points in the key game then faded in the face of the Beta's fierce overhead smashing to lose the two games and the championship.

The scores were Pfaff and House (N.D.) over Black and Fenker 6-2, 2-6, 6-4; Moody and Dressler (Beta) over Huskins and Baley 6-3, 3-6, 7-5.

Charlotte To Play Raleigh Tomorrow For Class A Title

Charlotte and Raleigh high baseball teams meet on Emerson field here tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock for the Class A state high school baseball title.

The game will bring together for the first time the opposing mound aces, Captain Tom Gadd of Charlotte and Allen Bailey of Raleigh, and the pitching duel expected to ensue should make a great contest.

Captain Gadd's stellar hurling is reported to have brought the Charlotte youngster under close surveillance by the Big League scouts while yet in high school.

Holding Durham to three hits and striking out seven men as Raleigh beat Durham for the eastern title here Wednesday, Bailey showed once more that he has class and plenty of it, and that he is ready for a try at beating Captain Gadd.

Both the rival pitchers, oddly enough, hit in their respective lineups in the clean-up post, and Bailey drove in three of the five runs with which Raleigh beat Durham, 5-0, for the eastern title.

Both also have strong, well-balanced clubs built around them. Raleigh will probably start Paris, shortstop; Womble 3b; Rand, 2b; Bailey, p; Reeves, 1b; Scales, cf; Page c; Thompson, rf; and Massey, lf.

Charlotte's starting lineup will probably show Morris, 2b; Moore, cf; Bell, ss; Gadd, p; Daniels, c; Wilson, 1b; Shoupe, rf; Blue, 3b; and Funderburke, lf.

Dr. Lawson Overcomes Steene In Country Club Golf Match

Oh Boy! The big golf tournament and the over-sized barbecue gathering of the Country Club members is a thing of the past, and some of the departments of the University did certainly "plop" in their interpretation of how the various clubs should be wielded to secure par on the outside of the class rooms.

The Country Club golf course was congested on last Saturday afternoon when the physical department represented by its director, Mr. Lawson, led the field, followed by one of the club members whom we shall love for his beautiful paintings of art. But alas! his brush failed by just one stroke to complete his picture as a winner. Dr. Lawson finished with 72 physical strokes while our artist Steene used his brush 73 times.

It was just at this point that arguments were heard galore. These proved upon invesitgation to be lead by English Bagby, who thought the geology department was "soft" and disregarded a very large boulder lying quietly at ease but solidly on No. 7 fairway. So Bagby delivered some five vicious blows before he passed the Bynum Stone.

Then far up near the eight hole there seemed to be a rather unusual discussion: it was claimed by one member of the group that Latin was a dead language. Music, math, and Spanish departments were represented in this heated fermitus. It was quite lively and exciting for a short time but the math department won for the figures showed conclusively that Mr. Winsor had placed third with 74, and this left Spanish Leavitt, Latin Gwynn, Chyco Bagby, and Mr. Trabue hopelessly tied for fourth place with a rating of 77 each.

Dr. "Jim" Bullitt had to be called in to supply the medicine and smooth the rough places, and it is a fact that his knife left 84 incisions when he had finished dissecting Bond, Dr. Tommy, King, Schmidt, and Dyer.

Parson Moss and Dean Hibbard were greatly missed on this particular occasion, and the writer feels sure they could have settled many of the disputes and changed perhaps the rating of some of our large and round golfers.

So ended the final golf tournament for the year for the Presidents cup, which is a beautiful trophy given to the club by the Students' Supply Store to remain in its possession. The winner of each tournament has his name engraved on it. The club has ruled that the winner each year is disqualified for the next three years, after which he can again compete for the honor.

NEW DORMS WINS BASEBALL CROWN

Beats Lambda Chi Alpha for Campus Nine Championship.

With Wilcy Moore pitching three-hit ball and whiffing nine men, New Dorms avenged last year's defeat by trouncing Lambda Chi Alpha yesterday afternoon to the tune of 7-2 and cinched the intramural championship.

Lambda Chi Alpha started out in the first inning to repeat by marking up two runs on two hits and two bases on balls. But New Dorms came right back in its half to score four runs on two hits, two errors and a base on balls. New Dorms tallied one run in the fifth, sixth and eighth.

Moore hurled a good game after losing control in the first and did not allow the semblance of a hit after the fourth. Bullock, losing his first game in two seasons, was given poor support, his teammates being guilty of eight errors.

Williamson of New Dorms and Bowman of the losers each collected two singles. Fysal's double was the only extra-base knock of the game.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

By Jack Bessen

With the defeat of State's nine Tuesday, Carolina closed one of the most successful athletic seasons in its history. State championships were won in track, cross-country, boxing, wrestling, football and tennis; in addition to this Carolina sported southern champion teams in track and cross-country.

Although we did not have the pennant-winners in football, many sport writers and critics placed the Tar Heels on the top as having the best balanced and most powerful scoring machine in the South.

In addition to the fine records made by Tar Heel teams, the season was a distinct success financially. Boxing became so popular and drew such large gates that it was made a major sport. Baseball and basketball were also very well supported.

The major leagues certainly profited from their unwholesome raid of the southern campuses, the call of cash luring approximately 20 potential stars. Of this number Duke led, five of their graduates signing major contracts. Henry Kistler and "Lefty" Jenkins, whom Carolina will long remember, became the property of the world champion Athletics, "Boley" Farley goes to the Cards, Gene Belue to the Pirates, while Bill Werber will sport a Yankee uniform. Ogelthorpe was second, sending four men up for trial. "Hot" Holcomb, a pitcher, recently joined the Braves; Al Kimbrell was signed by Brooklyn; Asa Wall went to Buffalo in the International League, while Luke Appling, the best of the lot, refused to affix his signature to any contract yet. In a recent game Luke slammed out four circuit blows in the same number of times at bat.

Eddie Tolan, Negro flier of the University of Michigan, was officially recognized today as the world's record-holder for the 100-yard dash and the first sprinter in history to cover the distance in less than 9 3-5 sec. in a well authenticated race run without starting blocks.

The little bespectacled sprinter from Michigan was clocked at 9.5 seconds in the western conference championships at Evanston, Ill., May 25, 1929, and this performance was accepted by the International Amateur Athletic Federation as the official world's record.

Tolan's time, made in a memorable race in which he defeated among others, George Simpson of Ohio State, supersedes the 9.6 figure which several sprinters were able to equal but never to beat officially in the long history of the sport.

Charley Paddock once turned in a 9.5 but it was refused recognition because the I. A. A. A. F., did not approve of tenth-second watches at that time. A 9.4 performance by another Californian, Frank Wykoff, was too recent for submission to the present meeting of the international body.

Four other records made by Americans were accepted by the federations at its sesson recently but the application of Simpson for approval of his 9 2-5 mark made last year, was denied because starting blocks were used.

All told, 16 new world marks were inscribed upon the record books as the federation considered for the first time the great performances registered in the Olympic year of 1928 and in the period since then.

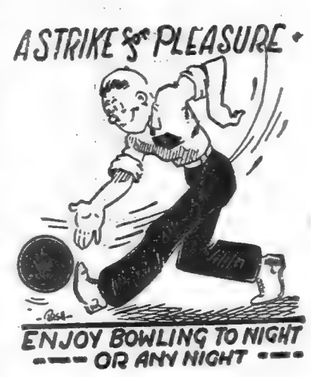
The four records set down to the credit of Americans in addition to Tolan's "nine-five" hundred were:

47 seconds flat for the 400-meter run, made by Emerson Spencer, a former Stanford university track captain.

163 feet, 8 3-4 inches for the discus throw made by Eric Krenz, of Stanford.



14 feet 1 1-2 inches for the pole vault, made by Lee Barnes, former University of Southern California athlete.

3 minufes, 13 4-10 seconds for the one-mile relay, made by an American Olympic quartet consisting of George Baird, Morgan Taylor, Ray Barbuti and Emerson Spencer in a dual meet with Britain shortly after the last Olympics.

Tolan also was credited with having equalled Charley Paddock's record of 10.4 seconds for the 100-meter dash on two occasions in his tour of Europe last year. De Hart Hubbard, former Michigan Negro star, was added to the list of those credited as having done 9 3-5 for the 100-yard event.

American hopes for world recognition for the broad jump mark made in the national championships of 1928 by Ed Hamm of Georgia Tech, were dashed when it was shown that Silvio Cator, of Haiti, had beaten Hamm's mark by an inch with a jump of 26 feet 1-8 inch, in a post-Olympic meet in Paris. Hamm's best was 25 feet, 11 1-8 inches in the Olympic broad jump championship. Hamm was first with Cator a good second.

The president of the National Phi Beta Kappa spoke at the initiation in 1909.

261 ENTRANTS IN ACADEMIC TRIALS

Greensboro Boy Is Winner In Math Contest; Pantego Places Second.

The Greensboro high school, with a paper submitted by Douglas Cartland, has been awarded the first place in the annual North Carolina high school mathematics contest for this year.

First honorable mention in the contest went to the Pantego high school, with the paper submitted by F. Harris, and second mention went to Charlotte high school, with the paper submitted by William Walker.

The committee judging the papers was composed of Dr. Archibald Henderson, chairman, Dr. J. W. Lasley, Jr., and Dr. A. W. Hobbs.

This contest brings to a close for the year the various annual academic contests for North Carolina high schools which the University extension division and the various University departments concerned conduct. In addition to the mathematics contest, high school contests have been held in Latin, French and Spanish.

E. R. Rankin of the University extension division yesterday gave a summary of enrollment figures for the academic contests: seventy-six high schools, represented by 1283 contestants, participated in the sixth annual high school Latin contest, which was held February 28, 1930. Durham high school, with the paper submitted by Miss Catherine Isenhour, won first place.

One hundred and seventeen high schools, represented by 2152 students, took part in the fifth annual high school French contest which was held on March 14. Greensboro high school, with the paper submitted by Bill Wedgerton, won first place in the contest.

Thirteen high schools represented by 190 students, entered the fifth annual high school Spanish contest on March 28. Albemarle high school, with Steuben Austin's paper, won first place.

Fifty-five high schools, represented by 1311 students, participated in the fifth annual high school mathematics contest conducted on April 25.

The total number of high schools entered in the various academic contests was 261. The total number of individual entrants from the various schools was 4,936.

OIL COMPANIES IN VENEZUELA KEEP CAROLINA GRADS

Due to a tariff revision on petroleum, the oil companies from the United States now operating in Venezuela have curtailed operations to a 50 per cent basis.

The decreased activity has been largely made in the prospecting and developing divisions. This decreased operation has necessitated the laying off of a large number of men in these divisions, and it is greatly to the credit of the department of geology of the University of North Carolina that of the three men now acting as geologists for different companies in Venezuela, all have been retained.

STATE FINALS TO LAST FOUR DAYS

Precede Carolina Dances; Roy Ingram Will Play.

Starting Friday, June 6, the German Club of North Carolina State College will give their final dances, which will last through Monday, June 9. There will be three formal night dances, two dansants, and a tea dance Saturday afternoon. Roy Ingram and his radio broadcasting orchestra from New York will furnish the music. Ingram's orchestra has gained quite a reputation throughout the country, and should draw good crowds.

William Garibaldi of Charlotte is president of the German Club which is putting on the dances.

With the Carolina final dances featuring Guy Lombardo, starting the day after the State dances end, a large number of students from the University will spend the four days that elapse between examinations and the dances here by attending the Raleigh festivities.

With the two dance sets coming so close together, a large number of the girls that attend the State finals will be at those on the Hill. With the majority of the girls schools adjourned for the summer, the attendance both on the Hill and in Raleigh shoulld be large, especially with two orchestras of the calibre of Lombardo and Ingram playing.

Playmakers To Hold Annual Caper Night

The Carolina Playmakers will cut their annual Caper on Saturday evening in their theatre, from eight o'clock on. This is an informal frolic in which all Playmakers, old and new, are invited to participate. The program, as usual, will be one of original sketches, songs, dances, and improvised comedy.

The Caper is not open to the public, but anyone who has ever had a part in the dramatic activities of the Playmakers in any capacity—acting, play-writing, stagecraft, or committee work—is invited. Milton Wood is chairman of the program committee.

One of the features of the Caper is the awarding of the Playmakers' gold Mask to those who have done outstanding work during the year in playwriting, acting, or stage arts.

After the program cakes and ale will be served in the Green Room, and there will be dancing on the stage.

NATIONAL EXAMS FOR DOCTORS TO BE OFFERED HERE

The National Board examinations for medical licenses will be held here June 24, 25 and 26. This examination has been held here several times before. It was led by Julian G. More (U. N. C. '16, U. of Pa. '17, '18) in 1919 and J. H. Wall (U. N. C. '25, Jefferson '27) manager to come eighth in 1928.

The examination will be given in three parts, the local med students being eligible for the first part only. There are several applicants who will take this examination among the local med students.

and it appeared from this time until 1923.

In 1923 the Tar Heel underwent a change in management. The Publications Union, just organized, took control, and the editor was to be elected by the student body. With this move, it left its parent of thirty years and, fostered by the Publications Union, became "the official newspaper of the Publications Union of the University of North Carolina."

In the spring of 1925, the students decided by ballot to make the Tar Heel a tri-weekly, appearing Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday instead of Wednesday and Saturday. Thus, in keeping with the growth of the University, the paper grew also.

No other change occurred until a year ago, when the students of the University voted to make the Tar Heel a daily. In addition to this the Carolina Magazine, which had welcomed thirty-six years before a brother publication, was absorbed and became a Sunday Supplement of the Daily Tar Heel.

During this year it has been much discussed whether the Tar Heel should exist as a daily. The Di Senate favored continuance last fall and now the student activities committee has determined that the Tar Heel should exist as a daily.

DAILY TAR HEEL WINS APPROVAL

Has Wide Circulation for College Newspaper; Receives Favorable Comments From Notables.

Attracted by the work of the Daily Tar Heel, many persons throughout the entire United States have sent in requests for copies of this paper. Dr. A. Herbert Gray of England, Governor Sweet of Colorado, and Kirby Page, editor of the "World Tomorrow" are only a few who have made requests for copies of the Tar Heel.

Dr. Herbert Gray, noted for his work with Ramsay McDonald, has visited probably all of the larger universities and colleges in this country. After seeing a copy of the Daily Tar Heel, Dr. Gray stated that of all the college papers he had seen he had never seen one with such mature thought and sound reasoning as the Tar Heel.

Another request came for a copy from ex-Governor Sweet, of Colorado. When here, Governor Sweet was highly impressed with the fine calibre of the Tar Heel, and before making one of his talks, he stopped long enough to comment on the paper itself. He spoke very highly of the work of the paper.

Kirby Page, editor of the "World Tomorrow," is another who has sent in requests for copies of the Daily Tar Heel. In a letter to H. F. Comer, general secretary of the local "Y," Mr. Page was also very much astonished at the fine brand of work that was being done by the

Robertson Says Today Is Last Day for Registration of Voters

Today is the last day upon which voters may register for the primary on Saturday, June 7.

Paul Robertson is the registrar. Today he will be at the public school building all day. The books close at sunset this evening.

Anybody who has already registered and was qualified to vote at the last election is not required to register again. In some communities in the state a new registration has been decreed, as allowed by law, but this is not true of Chapel Hill.

The primary contest of chief interest is that between F. M. Simmons and J. W. Bailey for the Democratic nomination for United States senator. Simmons has been a senator for about thirty years and until recently he was undisputed boss of the Democratic organization in North Carolina. His hold upon the organization was weakened by his bolting the ticket when Smith was nominated in 1928, and it is now said that most of the organization leaders, great and small, are supporting Bailey. Bailey was internal revenue commissioner for this district under Woodrow Wilson, and he ran against A. W. McLean as an anti-organization candidate for governor in 1924. He put up a creditable struggle in that contest but was defeated. Since then he has devoted himself to the practice of law in Raleigh. He took an active part in the 1928 presidential campaign in support of both the national and state Democratic tickets.

The contest of most local interest here is the one between John W. Umstead of Chapel Hill and J. Clyde Ray of Hillsboro for the Democratic nomination for the state senate. Mr. Umstead is well known and popular here, and there is no doubt that Chapel Hill will give him a rousing majority.

L. J. Phipps and Sam Gattis, Jr., are running for the state house of representatives, S. W. Andrews for register of deeds, W. T. Sloan for sheriff, A. W. Kenion for clerk of the court, and Dr. S. A. Nathan for coroner.

Chapel Hillian Signs Contract For Ferdinand Foch's Memoirs

Cable despatches from Paris bring the news that Ralph H. Graves, native of Chapel Hill and alumnus of the University, has obtained the American rights for the publication of the memoirs of the late Marshal Ferdinand Foch, generalissimo of the Allied armies in the World War. Representing Doubleday, Doran & Co., he signed the contract with Mme. Foch, widow of the marshal, last week in Paris.

The memoirs, about 150,000 words in length, will be published serially in several newspapers before appearing in book form.

Mr. Graves went to Europe several weeks ago. His friends, in Chapel Hill and elsewhere, understood that he had been sent there by Doubleday, Doran on some important mission, but they did not know what it was until they read the cable despatches about the Foch memoirs.

"The late marshal's design in writing his memoirs," says the New York Times, "was to make a book which would be interesting for the general reader and which would not be just a technical handbook or as dry recital of events. His style as in all his military orders, is clear, terse and brief. On the reader the impression left is one of perfect clarity and truth.

"The book is written dispassionately—it was done before other publications gave rise to the posthumous Clemenceau-Foch controversy—and is full of flashes of humor and anecdotes about all the leading figures of the war, such as King George, Earl Kitchener, Sir John French, who later became Earl of Ypres, Lord Roberts, Lord Milner, General Bliss, David Lloyd George, Colonel House, General Plumer, Marshal Petain, General Mangin, Marshal Joffre, General Pershing and General Sir Douglas Haig, later Earl Haig. As much attention is given to the operations of the American and British armies as to the French and Marshal Foch is generous and just to his colleagues and to the men who fought under his command.

"The Marshal's manner of writing was curious. The memoirs were almost entirely written in his own hand. Such parts as were retyped were carefully corrected and interlined. When a correction or addition was long the Marshal marked the place for the insert and wrote on the back of each sheet.

"The Marshal deals fully with all his controversies with General Pershing, Marshal Haig and Georges Clemenceau and it will be found that his own account differs in some cases from those which have already been given to the public—in each case he explains his decisions and tells why he stuck to his own view or yielded to the opposing arguments.

"The book will be illustrated with facsimile letters and orders not hitherto published on some of the crises of the war and the rivalries of the leaders. Marshal Foch's meeting with General Pershing, their varying opinions and plans, their compromise and conclusions and on the whole their united efforts are the subject of many pages.

"Colonel Bentley Mott, Military Attache of the American Embassy here, whose life of the late Ambassador Herrick was published recently, has consented to translate the memoirs. During 1918 he was a liaison aide to Marshal Foch."

Alumni Plan Banquets

Four of the 11 alumni classes convening here at commencement have decided upon a place for their reunion dinners, all of which are to be held at 6 o'clock on the evening of June 9.

At the Carolina Inn will be the classes of '98, with R. H. Lewis as official secretary; '97, with Lawrence MacRae as chairman of the arrangement committee; '14, with Oscar Leach as secretary. The class of '29 will hold its banquet at the Cabin; G. E. Sheppard is acting as the chairman of the reunion committee for this group.

Gift to Gimghouls

Italian Presents Hickerson With Fixture for Castle

A well-dressed and smiling stranger halted his car at T. F. Hickerson's gate one day last week, walked up the path, and knocked at the door. Mr. Hickerson, responding to the knock, saw that the man held in his hands an object made of iron.

"I have brought this to you—for a gift," said the stranger.

He was A. Germino, an Italian craftsman who lives in Durham.

"I came over here and saw your Gimghoul castle," he explained. "It reminded me of buildings in my own land, Italy, and I want to give you this for your big door."

The object was a cleverly fashioned wrought-iron fixture constituting a frame for a lock. The Gimghouls had been wanting just such a thing for a long time, and it was gratefully accepted by Mr. Hickerson.

Mr. Germino came to this country thirty-five years ago and has been living in Durham about three years. He is interested in art and literature as well as in his craft. One of his sons is named Romeo and the other Dante.

GRADY LEONARD RESIGNS FROM Y

Self-Help Secretary Goes to Greensboro; Has Secured Jobs For Hundreds of Students.

Grady H. Leonard, for three years self-help secretary of the University Y. M. C. A., has resigned his position, effective June 1. Mr. Leonard is to become a special agent of the Pilot Life Insurance Co. of Greensboro, and will have his headquarters here in Chapel Hill.

Mr. Leonard became affiliated with the local "Y" three years ago, coming here from Hickory where he was district secretary of the state Y. M. C. A. His work has been mainly in behalf of self-help students. He has also been advisor for the sophomore cabinet and director of the several deputation teams the Y. M. C. A. has sent out over the state.

Mr. Leonard during his connection with the "Y" has been instrumental in securing jobs for hundreds of students, who without working their way would have been unable to pursue their studies. During his tenure of office the position of self-help secretary has become one of the most important official positions on the campus.

Besides his official duties, Mr. Leonard has been manager of the Carolina Handbook, in which he has helped present the features of University campus life. He has also represented the "Y" at a number of conventions.

FLORIDA ALUMNI PLEDGE SUPPORT TO UNIVERSITY

On May 20, twenty alumni of the University pledged themselves to a system of annual contributions to the Alumni Loyalty Fund at a meeting in Jacksonville, Florida.

Felix A. Grisette, director of the fund at the University, was principal speaker at the meeting, and it was largely through his efforts that the University alumni living in Jacksonville were rallied in the love of their Alma Mater.

Besides the regular program, the Playmakers' gold mask will be awarded to those who have done outstanding work during the year in playwriting, acting, or stage arts. Cakes and ale will be served in the Green Room after the performance and a dance on the stage will end the hilarious evening.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The only advantage I can see in writing plays, is getting to see one's own play for nothing. —Ed Wynn.

A Question of Thirty-Three Cents

Is the Tar Heel to remain a daily? If the maintenance of the present status of the paper depends on the additional thirty-three cent contribution per quarter, the "ayes" should be in the majority. It is nothing short of amusing to argue against this additional fee on the grounds that "financial conditions in the state are prohibitive." The state of North Carolina will never feel the stress of the campaign of raising enough money to uphold the Daily Tar Heel, so quiet will the campaign be. If, on the other hand, it be suggested that the paper again become a tri-weekly due to a shortage of news material for the running of a daily, the argument would be irrefutable. But such has not been the case. The editors have made the paper a readable one. Smaller and less advanced universities than Carolina boast commendable dailies.

The fate of the Daily Tar Heel is incidental to the current problem of the reorganization of the University. Carolina will be viewed with a critical eye in all of her activities and endeavors from now on until her new machinery is well oiled. Any regression in University or student activity will be food for unwelcome thought and erroneous conjecture. Hence all steps should be forward and none backward. —P. S. L.

Education In The Honor System

At the recent convention of the North Carolina Federation of Students and again at the meeting last Tuesday of the University student activities committee the disciples of a new system of education in the honor system propounded their ideas, as yet indefinite in form.

Basically, their proposition is this: In order to instill in the students a proper respect for the system and thus to insure that it may be more generally observed, instruction in the ideals and principles of honorable conduct should be begun in the high schools and preparatory schools of the state.

It is popularly agreed that a major portion of the infractions against the University honor system occurs among the members of the first-year class, and so during the freshman orientation period a concentrated effort is made to instruct the newcomers in the traditions of the institution.

But, this system is found to be inadequate in that there is difficulty in teaching the new students something about which they have never been given any previous inkling.

And so, it has been concluded that a solution to the problem may be found in beginning education in the honor system among students of pre-college age, especially prospective University entrants.

Then there is the question as to what agency is to be created or what present means are to be employed in spreading such propaganda.

The first and best of all suggestions that have been offered is that the University Extension division through its bureau of high school debating and athletics carry on this work. This department is in an excellent position for activity of this type, having already established a direct and intimate contact with students all over the state.

For this reason, we suggest if any action is ever taken in this most important matter, that Messrs. Grumman, Rankin and Company be given the responsibility.

—E. C. D., Jr.

Readers' Opinions

EXPERIMENTAL COLLEGE DID NOT FAIL

Editor's Note: Misleading press despatches upon which the Daily Tar Heel editors have commented are corrected below by the dean of the liberal arts college.

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Twice within the past month I have noticed editorial comments in your columns regarding the failure of the Experimental College under Dr. Meiklejohn at the University of Wisconsin. In itself, a mis-statement of this kind is not, perhaps, very important, but since the college has not been closed and since it will continue next year, I feel justified in calling this to your attention. More important, however, than any misunderstanding regarding the continuance of this Experimental College is the impression that may have spread over the campus from your editorials to the effect that educational experimentation in college has received a setback. Since I believe that college education must move forward largely through one or another of the experiments now under way in America, I regret the spreading of false impression regarding one of these most widely advertised experiments. The Experimental College at Wisconsin will continue next year.

More important than the continuance of Meiklejohn's experiment is the fact that next year the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Wisconsin puts in several rather wide-reaching changes, changes which those who have watched the experiments of Dr. Meiklejohn must believe have come about through the work of his Experimental College.

The campus may not be interested in the details of these changes, but I should like to itemize for you some of the things which are to be done within the College of Arts and Sciences next year:

1. Students are to be promoted on the basis of actual attainment and growth rather than on mere attendance at classes and the meeting of routine requirements.

2. Specially capable freshmen to the number of some five or six hundred entering next fall will be excused from certain routine freshman requirements and allowed to enter immediately upon more advanced work.

3. Routine language requirements will be changed to allow a student to complete a requirement at any time when he can show sufficient proficiency in a language. It will no longer be a question of how many hours are taken, but how far the student actually is able to use a language he has studied.

4. Students who at the end of two years in college show themselves unable to bear up under the pressure will be excluded from the junior-senior years. The college plans to exclude 25 per cent of the sophomore class in this way. Students who satisfactorily finish the first two years of study will be given certificates entitling them to the rank of Graduate in Liberal Studies. Not all who receive the certificate will necessarily be admited to the junior year.

5. Correlation courses will be offered in several fields through the cooperation of different departments within the College. One such course, open to sophomores only and running throughout the year, will be administered jointly by the departments of economics, philosophy, and political science, the intention being to give the students a philosophic approach to individual, economic, and political life.

6. Comprehensive examinations will be required of all students before graduation.

7. It is expected that the new curriculum will permit exceptional students to speed up their work and secure both their bachelor's and master's degrees at the conclusion of four years. Under this new plan, high grade juniors and seniors will be allowed to select their own methods of preparation in their major subject.

8. Students who wish to enter the university without pointing towards a degree will be given the opportunity.

I think any one who scans the above will realize that experimentation, at the University of Wisconsin, instead of having received a death blow, has been invigorated. Since Liberal Arts Colleges throughout the country can expect continued life only through progress, and since progress can come only through experimentation and change, I have written this note of correction in the hope of off-setting the impression, created by your former editorials, that in at least one institution experimentation had failed.

Very sincerely yours,
ADDISON HIBBARD.

TAR HEEL SERVES THE CAMPUS

It would be absolutely impossible to sum up in one article all the things that the Tar Heel has sponsored in the last two years, but in a brief way I am going to point out a few of the most outstanding things. The Tar Heel has always endorsed the Carolina Spirit and upheld the honor system.

The Tar Heel began the drive for student entertainments and with much work succeeded in getting them. The Daily Tar Heel has continually backed the Carolina Playmakers.

At the beginning of last year the University band was very much in need of new uniforms. This was another thing to which the Tar Heel gave its full support. The paper soon started a drive to secure new uniforms for the band. During this same time the Tar Heel issued an appeal to the students to protect University property and in many other cases the Tar Heel has sponsored a drive for beautifying the campus.

The Tar Heel has also been back of a drive for a Fine Arts school. There are many North Carolinians who prefer to study art and they have to go to some school out of the state in order to do so. Therefore it is an entirely commendable thing to desire to create a Carolina Fine Arts center for Carolinians.

Years ago it was suggested to the Tar Heel that the University should adopt intramural athletics. The staff's aid was enlisted to bring this form of athletics here. Immediately after this drive was made the Tar Heel became interested in an Alumni Loyalty Fund.

The Tar Heel has always backed all University enterprises, the glee club, the different athletic teams on the campus, the literary societies and all other campus activities.

Two of the most important things which the Daily Tar Heel has been largely responsible for putting through in the last two years are the Dormitory Stores and the State Federation of Students. The students asked for dormitory stores three years ago and the Tar Heel had been working on the question up until it was put through this school year. The State Federation of Students movement was introduced by John A. Lang, a student here in the University. Lang soon had the Tar Heel behind him.

By the many things that the Tar Heel has sponsored for the benefit of the students, especially since it was made a daily publication, and because it is one of the college dailies in the south, we should strive to maintain it, and in doing this we should vote next Tuesday to keep it a daily rather than a tri-weekly.

$80,000 Subscribed For New Gymnasium By Deacon Alumni

A recent press dispatch from Wake Forest states that at a meeting of a joint committee of trustees, alumni and faculty it was reported that already $80,000 had been subscribed in the campaign that is being carried on among alumni to raise $250,000 with which to build a new gymnasium and student activity building.

Members of the committee, which represented every section of North Carolina, reported a whole-hearted loyalty of Wake Forest alumni, which should, if the first reports are correct, result in the early success of the campaign.

ALUMNI CLUB ENTERTAINS HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES

The Mecklenburg county alumni club of the University will entertain the graduates of the Charlotte high school at a barbecue in the Municipal park of Charlotte from 6 to 8 o'clock Monday evening, May 26.

From the University, Coach Bob Fetzer, Bob House, executive secretary of the University, and J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the University Alumni Association will attend the affair. George Thomas, '09, of former football fame, is president of the club, while John S. Cansler, '14, holds the office of vice-president and John R. Purser, Jr., that of secretary and treasurer.

Morrow's Views on Prohibition Similar to Woodrow Wilson's

An interesting point about Dwight W. Morrow's statement on the question of national prohibition is the close similarity it bears to Woodrow Wilson's last pronouncement on the subject. Of course Wilson is known to have been opposed to national prohibition and therefore it might be considered unnecessary to recall what he said about it. But the identical reasoning of Wilson and Morrow with regard to the difference in function between the federal and state governments, the emphasis which each places upon the divergences in popular beliefs and habits within the United States and upon the hopelessness of the federal government's attempt to change the habits of great populations in wide territorial limits—here is a parallel that seems to merit attention.

In March of last year Senator Carter Glass of Virginia contributed to the New York Times an article in which he included a "tentative platform" (hitherto unpublished) prepared by Wilson for submission to the Democratic convention of 1924. This draft, said Glass, was transmitted by Wilson to a select circle of friends but was not presented to the convention.

Its passages relating to prohibition are here placed alongside passages from Morrow's address of last week:

Dwight W. Morrow:

The habits and character of the people, the size of the community, the extent of the participation of the people in the exercise of their political rights, are all important factors in the determination of how far a community can go in restricting individual liberty for community good.

The peculiar characteristic of the government of the United States is its federal form. Under that form of government we look to our several states to perform certain governmental functions and to our federal government to perform other governmental functions.

With the coming into force of the prohibition amendment, a vast new criminal jurisdiction was assumed by the federal government. This involved not only the organization of a new police force, but—what is even more important—it involved a new attitude of the people toward their federal government and of the federal government toward the people. The extremely delicate and sensitive problem of interfering with the individual liberty of a man for the sake of the social good of the community was thereafter dealt with not in terms of small communities but in terms of a mighty nation of 125,000,000 people, with great climatic, racial, and social divergences.

In many states, where it is in accord with popular sentiment, national prohibition is generally believed to be successful. It is successful because of the active co-operation of the people and their officials. In other states, including those with the greatest populations, the system works badly because the people and their officials do not co-operate with the federal agents, and the federal agents alone are not able to exercise effective control. In these states there exists resentment against the attempt to oppose a control which the prevailing conscience of the people does not accept. Is it well that large portions of our people should conceive of the federal government as an alien and even hostile power? It is well to have as a result a lawless, unregulated liquor traffic, attended by a shocking corruption?

I believe that the way out of the present difficulty is to recognize clearly the fundamental difference between the nature of the federal government and that of the state government. I believe this involves a repeal of the eighteenth amendment and the substitution therefor of an amendment which will restore to the states the power to determine their policy toward the liquor traffic, and vest in the Federal government power to give all possible protection and assistance to those states that desire complete prohibition against invasion from the states that do not.

So long as the eighteenth amendment and the statutes thereunder are the law of the land, I favor generous appropriations for their enforcement. I favor the use of such appropriations in the first place, for that portion of enforcement which is pre-eminently the duty of the federal government. This means that the federal government would first direct its efforts to keeping liquor from coming into the country and to keeping liquor from passing into interstate commerce. While there is no doubt of the power of the federal government under the eighteenth amendment to perform, local police duty in the suppression of the liquor traffic, it should be remembered that it has a vast task in the purely federal field. Until it performs that task it might well leave all local police duty with the states who have concurrent power with the federal government in the local field. Such a method of enforcement would distribute responsibility where it belongs.

The solution will be found when we realize that the issue before us is a governmental problem. How can the control of the liquor traffic be divided between federal and state governments in a way that will recognize the habits and sentiments and moral principles of the people in the different parts of the country? I see no way of settling that question satisfactorily without a further change in the Constitution.

Woodrow Wilson:

The eighteenth amendment made prohibition the law for the nation. The Volstead act prescribed for the nation what liquor should be deemed intoxicating. But the people, when adopting the amendment, recognized fully that the law could not be enforced without the cooperation of the States within the nation. Hence it provided in Section 2 that "The Congress and the several states have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation." The intention was that each government should perform that part of the task for which it was peculiarly fitted.

The federal government's part is to protect the United States against illegal importation of liquor from foreign countries and to protect each state from the illegal introduction into it of liquor from another state. To perform that part of the task effectively requires centralization, unified action and the employment of the large federal powers and resources. Experience has demonstrated that to perform adequately this part of the task will require all the resources which Congress makes available for enforcement of this law. To this part of the whole task of enforcement the federal government should therefore devote its entire energies.

The protection of the people of a state against the illegal sale within it of liquor illegally manufactured within it is a task for which the state governments are peculiarly fitted and which they should perform. That part of the task involves diversified governmental action and adaptation to the widely varying conditions in and the habits and sentiments of the people of the several states. It is a task for which the federal government is not fitted.

To relieve the state from the duty of performing it violates our traditions and threatens the best interests of our country. The strength of the nation and its capacity for achievement is in large measure due to the federal system with its distribution of powers and duties.

There should be frank recognition of the fact that the prime duty of the federal government is to protect the country against illegal importation from abroad and from illegal introduction of liquor from one state into another, that the full performance of this duty will tax the resources of the federal government to the uttermost, and that for the rest the people of each state must look to their state governments. But the eighteenth amendment should remain unchanged. And the Volstead act should remain unchanged.

Now, Wilson's opinion (which is also Morrow's) that the federal government should confine its efforts to "protecting the United States against illegal importation from foreign countries and protecting each state from the illegal introduction into it of liquor from another state," is regular wet doctrine. Most of the wets ask nothing more than was proposed by Wilson: that the federal government keep its hands off in states where the prevailing sentiment is anti-prohibition. It was for holding this very view that Smith was denounced by the drys in the 1928 campaign. It is this view that is today vigorousl yand tirelessly opposed by all the dry leaders.

RALEIGH MEETS CHARLOTTE HIGH FOR STATE TITLE

Fast Mound Duel Between Bailey and Gadd Expected In Class A Championship Game This Afternoon.

Two of the best high school pitchers developed in North Carolina in years will be seen in action in what should be a corking good mound duel when Charlotte and Raleigh high teams meet on Emerson field here this afternoon at 3 o'clock for the class A high school baseball title of the state.

Reference is to Captain Tom Gadd of Charlotte and Allen Bailey of Raleigh, who are slated to oppose one another on the mound in this final championship battle.

Gadd, who is reported to be under close surveillance by the Big League scouts already, has been doing sensational hurling for Charlotte all season. Bailey in his last game, in which Raleigh beat Durham 5-0 for the eastern title, held Durham to three hits and struck out seven men to show once again his high calibre as a pitcher.

Both men, oddly enough, rank with their teams' best hitters and hit in the clean-up post. And indeed, Bailey drove in three of Raleigh's five runs in the victory over Durham for the eastern title. Their meeting here today will not only decide the much-discussed question of which is the better high school pitcher, but also of which is the better hitter.

Charlotte arrived at the Hill yesterday in time for a workout on Emerson field in the afternoon, but the Raleigh nine is not expected until today. Neither team last night had announced the lineups that would be started around the rival aces Gadd and Bailey.

DECATHLON FOR INTRAMURAL MEN MONDAY-TUESDAY

The decathalon, which is staged annually by the intramural department will be held Monday and Tuesday of next week. This meet will be divided into two sections, the open decathalon for all students in the University regardless of past athletic experience, and the novice decathalon for all those who have never made a numeral or a letter in track athletics at the University.

The events of the meet are to be the 100 yard dash, 120 low hurdles, quarter-mile run, three-quarters mile run, pole vault, high jump, broad jump, shot put, discus, and javelin. In order to make the meet run as smoothly as possible, it has been arranged that the events continue for two days.

Those events which will be staged Monday afternoon beginning at 3:00 are as follows: 100 yard dash, quarter-mile run, high jump, shot put, and discus. All of the remaining events will be run off on the following afternoon.

CAROLINA CO-EDS TENNIS VICTORS

The co-ed tennis team won a fast set from the Raleigh tennis club Friday afternoon, losing only one match. The game consisted of four singles matches and one doubles, of which the co-eds won three singles and the doubles. The high scorer was Evelyn Way, winning from Ann Lawrence of Raleigh by a score of 6-0; 6-1.

The results of the other matches were: Ida Currie (C) won from Martha Galloway 8-6, 6-3; Lillie Jackson (C) won from Mrs. Elms 9-7, 6-1, 6-4; Mary Lewise Carpenter lost to Mrs. Page 6-1, 6-0; Clyde Johnson and Mary L. Carpenter (C) won from Mrs. Page and Ann Lawrence 6-3, 6-5.

SPORTS CHATTER

By Hugh Wilson

It looks like the frosh baseballers are headed places with the intention of doing things in a big way next year. A record of twelve victories and five defeats, with the majority of the defeats in early season, should bring good cheer to Coach Ashmore's heart. He can use some of those speedy pitchers, and the whole club bristles with heavy hitters to fill the holes left in varsity ranks.

"Coach Bob" Fetzer will also have some good new material to draw on for his track team. Drane, Marland, and Wornom in the sprints, Davis and Stafford in the hurdles, Jensen and Jones in the middle distance runs, Cordle in the two mile, and Mitcham and Watkins in the 440 should certainly add to the strength of the Tar Heel cinder squad next year.

An odd reversal in the publicity tactics of the two leading candidates for the world's heavyweight boxing championship has occurred recently. Jack Sharkey has stepped out of his usual role of the "Garrulous Gob"—in fact he hasn't even named the round in which he will knock Schmeling out—and Schmeling, casting aside his custom of deep silence, has been announcing far and wide that he is going to take the title back to the Fatherland when "Der Max" returns home.

The people who said that Babe Ruth was through certainly ought to look for something to hide under. Six home runs in two days constitutes an all time record for major league boundary busters, and when the four baggers were made off the star pitching staff of the world's champions, it is surely to be doubted that Ruth is washed up as a major leaguer.

George Simpson will soon have a chance to prove to the I.A.A.F. that his mark of 9 2-5 seconds for the 100 yards, made with starting blocks, was not a fluke and should be given precedence as a world's record over Eddie Tolan's 9.5 second 100 yards, made without starting blocks, when he and Tolan meet in the sprints of the Big Ten track meet. Last year Tolan beat Simpson in the 100 in this meet in 9.5, but Simpson came back to win the 220 in the record time of 20.6 seconds. Since the questioning of the legality of several of the marks made by Simpson last year with the aid of starting blocks, Simpson has been waging a sort of vindication campaign to prove the authenticity of his marks. In the Penn Relays, he equalled his record of last year—which was still under discussion as to its approval because of the use of the blocks—covering the 100 in 9 3-5 seconds. He will run in the conference meet against the Michigan negro without starting blocks in an attempt to again cross the finish in 9 2-5.

Dusty Cooke, Yankee recruit and former star of George Whitted's Durham Bulls who was played up to high heaven by the pre-season dopesters, has become much more like a placid cow than a fiery bull. At the last reading, Dusty had the enormous total of three singles to his credit, and was leading Hines' 57 varieties in the batting averages by 12 points, having a percentage of exactly .069.

JENSEN BOASTS ENVIABLE RECORD

Carolina Freshman Holds Many National and State Prep School Records.

(By Dan Kelly)

In looking over the list of outstanding freshman performers on the Carolina track this past year, the author finds that Clarence Jensen is the fastest distance man on the squad.

Jensen comes from East Orange, N. J., where running is in style, and he truly shows that he is not to be trifled with as a competitor. Jensen began his track career four years ago while a student at Newark Prep School. While in school there, he competed in many major meets, winning the state championship in the cross country two-mile race in 1926. He was also one of the four trackmen who won first place in the mile relay for prep schools during the Ohio State relays. At the University of Chicago and at Yale, Jensen won first places in distance contests, in the prep school meets held there. He held the distance championship of his native county for three successive years.

Continuing his prep school track work in 1928, Jensen won all dual meet cross country events that he entered and defeated the state champion of New York prep schools. He won the eastern interscholastic two-mile run, and captured third place in the mile 15 minutes later. In the cross country race held at Columbia University, he placed third in a field of over 400 competitors from various eastern states. In the Middle Atlantic prep school championships held at Philadelphia, Jensen succeeded in breasting the tape in record time, defeating the best runners in the eastern prep schools. At Bowdoin College and at Boston U., he finished first in the distance runs, climaxing a successful prep school record.

Since entering the University of North Carolina last fall as a freshman, Jensen has continued his stellar performances on the cinder path and has been beaten only once, which defeat he avenged later. The race he lost was on a strange and difficult track with which his opponent was familiar. His opponent met him later and was beaten by a wide margin.

Jensen has been one of the representatives of the North Carolina freshman relay racers at the Georgia Tech relays and Greensboro freshman relays held recently. In those races the North Carolina freshmen won first place in record time.

In one of the most interesting races which was held this past season, Jensen defeated the former champion American miler and former University of North Carolina star, Galen Elliott, in a three-quarter mile race completed in 3 minutes 16 seconds.

MAJOR LEAGUES SIGN FIVE DUKE DIAMOND STARS

Coach Jack Coombs, former Big Time Star, Instrumental In Getting Attention Of Scouts; Two Sign With Minors.

Big league scouts who have trailed the Duke University baseball team ever since Jack Coombs, former big time star, took over the coaching reins, reaped the fruit of their efforts recently by signing five of the finishing Blue Devils for big time baseball. Two others were signed by minor league clubs.

The men signed, their positions and home towns follow:

Bill Werber, shortstop, Berwyn, Md., New York Yankees.

Roland Farley, third baseman, Danville, Va., St. Louis Cardinals.

Henry Kistler, first base, Charlotte, and Ernest Jenkins, pitcher, Gastonia, Philadelphia Athletics.

Gene Belue, pitcher, Gaffney, S. C., Pittsburgh Pirates.

L. A. (Nick) Warren, catcher, Durham, Baltimore Orioles.

Lee Hawkins, pitcher, Charlotte, Charlotte (Sally League).

Bill Werber, sensational shortstop for the Devils, signed a contract with the Yankees that any college ball player could be proud of. It is said that the young Duke star got a huge bonus as well as a good salary.

Werber reports to the Yankees at Chicago on June 3. It is reported that he got $2,400 for signing the contract and also that there was a "not to be farmed out" clause in the document. Werber had a batting record of an even .400 this season.

Farley, who signed with the Cardinals, has left to join the Cardinals at St. Louis. He is also said to have received a handsome figure for signing, a bonus and a good salary. He batted .486 during the past season.

Kistler, Duke's fence-busting king, and Ernest Jenkins, the star southpaw pitcher, were taken in by Ira Thomas, a former battery mate of Coach Coombs when the two played for the Athletics. Following examinations the two will report at Philadelphia. It is likely that they will be farmed out for further seasoning, but their destination was not learned. Kistler hit over .400 for the second consecutive season.

Warren, of Durham, captained the Duke team through the past season and has been varsity catcher for three years. The past year was perhaps the greatest of his career and he signed with Baltimore only after refusing another offer in the International League. He receives a bonus and will get a good salary. He batted .354 last season.

Lee Hawkins, hard hitting pitcher-outfielder, lives in Charlotte and had been assured the contract some time ago. His work on the pitching staff was a help to the Devils this year, as his list of victories by far outnumbers the number of defeats counted against him. He is a lefthander.

Belue, another southpaw, rounded out Duke's veteran pitching crew this year. He was approached by the Pirates before entering Duke and after four years here formally signed the contract last night.

Miss Margaret McConnell, of Gastonia, a student at N. C. C. W., came up last week end for the dances and was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Lear.

PUBLICATION FEE VERY SMALL HERE

Fee for Student Publications Is Smallest in State and Below Other Colleges.

According to reports received by the Publications Union board from some of the larger schools in the country, the publications fee of the University of North Carolina is lower than that of many of the other institutions in the country.

The fee for the students of the University of Chicago, probably one of the largest schools in the middle west, is $11 for the entire year. This sum pays for the yearbook, a comic, a literary magazine published only four times per year, and a newspaper published only four times per week. The fee for the yearbook alone amounts to the same as that paid for all of the publications combined here at the University of North Carolina.

Another report shows that the fee at Columbia University amounts to $12, more than double the amount paid here. Students at the University of Illinois, where Dr. H. W. Chase will go next year, are required to pay only $10 for their publications fee.

In comparing the fee paid here with that paid by the students of Harvard University, it is found that the Harvard students pay a little over four times the amount paid by students here. The publication fee there is $21.50.

Princeton also has a larger fee. The fee for publications for the entire year at Princeton amounts to $19.50—almost four times that paid here.

Comparing the publications fees in some of the schools in this state, that of the University continues to be lower. Both State College and N. C. C. W. have a fee of $6, and neither of these schools publishes a daily paper. Davidson's fee is still higher with $7.

CAFETERIA OPENS SUNDAY MORNING

The repairs at the Welcome In Cafeteria have been finished and the establishment will open tomorrow morning at breakfast. All students holding old meal tickets are requested to see the new manager, W. E. Trottman, this evening at 5 o'clock in the cafeteria.

Mr. Trottman will manage the new cafeteria while Mrs. Trottman, the old manager, will have charge of the kitchen and menus which will consist of the best food available. A special rate will be put on from now until the end of this quarter under which tickets for $2.50 will be sold for $2.

Enlarge District

New Territory Added to Special School Tax Area

The Chapel Hill school district is to be enlarged. Voters decided that Saturday when the ballots were cast at the special election. Included in the new territory taken in is the Coker development, the Pittsboro road development, and several families out toward the Durham road section.

This will mean that many school children are now entitled to the full nine months term who have been charged a special tuition fee in the past, and that the school tax is more equally distributed to everyone living in the district.

143 people registered. 99 voted in favor of the enlargement and 4 against it. Both white and colored people voted in the election, and both schools will be benefitted by the territory enlargement.

Morrow's and Wilson's Views

the people are particularly important. Wilson expressly advises "diversified governmental action and adaptation to the widely varying conditions in, and the habits and sentiments of the people of, the several states." Morrow says that the control of the liquor traffic must be "divided between federal and state governments in a way that will recognize the habits and sentiments and moral principles of the people in the different parts of the country."

Identical as are the two pronouncements in their recognition of the fundamental cause of the failure of national prohibition, they are exactly opposite in their final words as to what ought to be done about the eighteenth amendment. "The eighteenth amendment should remain unchanged," says Wilson, while Morrow says: "I see no way of settling the question satisfactorily without a further change in the Constitution."

How can a retention of the eighteenth amendment be reconciled with "diversified governmental action and adaptation to the widely varying habits and sentiments of the people?" Plainly, it cannot be. The very essence of the amendment and the Volstead act is that these measures shall apply uniformly throughout the country, in New York as in Georgia, in New Jersey as in Kansas. Anybody who proposes that the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act remain unchanged, and that at the same time the enforcement of prohibition be adjusted to the habits and sentiment of the people in various sections of the United States, is simply proposing a from of nullification. Probably Wilson believed that a repeal of the prohibition amendment would be forever impossible and foresaw that there must be some such compromise as now prevails in the South with regard to the fifteenth amendment, which guarantees Negroes the right to vote; a compromise which would be nullification but which had better not be frankly so named. Morrow's proposal for the repeal of the amendment is more straightforward and logical—and less likely to be fulfilled.

LOMBARDO WILL PLAY FOR ENTIRE FINAL DANCE SET

Rumor That Famous Orchestra Will Not Play June 10 Is Unfounded Says Yarborough.

"Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians will play here for our entire set of finals," stated Will Yarborough, treasurer of the German Club, when asked yesterday if there was any truth to the rumor that the famous orchestra would not play here Tuesday night. "We have a contract with Lombardo and George Race, president of the club, has been assured by both the Music Corporation of America and Lombardo that they will be here. We experienced considerable trouble in getting him for the finals as he is in demand throughout the country, and now that we have him we have no idea of changing the contract."

Rumors current on the campus during the past few days were to the effect that the German Club officials here had released Lombardo from his contract in order to allow him to play at the University of Virginia Tuesday night, June 10. Yarborough said that Virginia dance officials asked if it were possible for the orchestra to remain over for that dance if another orchestra could be secured for the Carolina dances. The request of Virginia was submitted to the German Club Committee. It was decided that in so far as the German Club had been expecting Lombardo it would not be wise to change the contract.

Rates for the dances will be $6 for members, $18 for new members, and $10 for visitors and alumni. The $1 increase in members' and new members' rates is due to the increased cost of this year's dances. In the past no standard rate has been charged for alumni and visitors' cards, each dance costing $2. However, this year it was decided to have a standard price for the entire set of $10. The rates for individual dances for visitors and alumni will remain the same except the evening dances will be $3 instead of $2 as in the past.

The Chapel Hill school board entertained all the teachers at an informal banquet at the school building Monday night.

THOMPSON HEADS ENGINEER GROUP

The final meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, held Thursday night in Phillips Hall, was featured by a lecture by Prof. R. F. Stainback, elections, freshman awards and refreshments.

Prof. Stainback's lecture was upon the "Cathode Oscillograph."

At the meeting Thursday Prof. J. E. Lear, of the school of engineering was re-elected faculty councillor of the society. George Thompson was elected president for next year and James M. Duls, vice-president. C. P. Hayes was made secretary and R. E. Hubbard treasurer.

Sliding-rules were awarded to two outstanding freshmen in the electrical engineering department. These men were J. R. Marvin and W. G. Miller. Refreshments were served after the business session of the meeting.

Howell Revising Code

At the recent Pharmacopoeial Convention in Washington Vernon Howell, dean of the University's school of pharmacy, was appointed a member of the committee of fifty that is to revise the Pharmacopoeia, the official drug code of the United States. He is one of thirty-three of the nation's leading pharmaceutical scientists assigned to the task; the other seventeen members of the committee are physicians.

The Pharmacopoeia is republished every ten years, and the revision is a long and tedious enterprise. The volume on which Mr. Howell is working will bear the date 1940. The preparation is divided among sub-committees, each being entrusted with a certain department of the study of drugs, and Mr. Howell has been appointed to several of these sub-committees.

While he was at the meeting of the Pharmaceutical Association in Baltimore, which preceded the Washington convention, he was a guest of Colonel Isaac Emerson at the celebrated Preakness horse race.

Bingham Debate

The tryouts for the selection of contestants for the Bingham medal from the Phi Assembly will be held next Tuesday night, May 27, in the assembly hall. Those who expect to compete for these positions will be present at the hall at 7:30 that evening.

GREENS TO TAKE OVER 'LANTERN'

Jones Gives It Up because He Is Going to the University of Michigan

ESTABLISHED BY HIBBARD

Howard Mumford Jones must give up "The Literary Lantern," the book-review column published in leading Southern newspapers, because he is to leave the faculty here and go to the University of Michigan. He is turning it over to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Green, and their first column will appear Sunday, June 8.

The "Lantern," which deals with books by Southerners and about the South, is now appearing every Sunday in papers having a total circulation of about 450,000. They are the Durham Herald, the Raleigh News and Observer, the Greensboro News, the Charlotte Observer, the Asheville Citizen, the Wilmington Star, the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, the Columbia State, the Charleston Evening Post, the Montgomery Advertiser, the Savannah Press, and the Wichita Falls (Tex.) Times.

Addison Hibbard established the "Lantern" in 1924. Like all syndicated features it had a modest beginning, being published for several months only in four or five papers. Among the first to take it were the Greensboro News, the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, the Columbia State, and the Charlotte Observer. It grew steadily in the esteem of editors, and gradually other papers were added to the list. The pressure of other duties compelled Mr. Hibbard to give it up after about three years. Raymond Adams ran it for a few months, and then it passed on to Mr. Jones.

Dr. Alexander, who delivered the Weil Lectures here, is also among those who have asked for back-numbers of the Tar Heel. He, too, praised the paper for its fine work, and stated that he had not seen such in any other college paper.

H. F. Comer, general secretary of the local Y, was also very complimentary of the Daily Tar Heel. He stated that throughout the entire year the editorial page of the paper had been one of the strongest in thoughtful, logical treatment of subjects as any editorial section that he had ever read in a college paper. "I am very well pleased," he continued, "with the whole tone of the paper, and I think that making the paper a daily was one of the biggest advancements that has been made on the campus in sometime."

Besides these numerous requests that come in, copies of the paper go daily all over the United States. One copy even goes as far as France, and a second is sent regularly to a subscriber in Oxford University, England.

Other copies of the paper are mailed to Boston, Schenectady, Long Island, Philadelphia, and one as far as Montreal, Canada. There are also subscribers for the paper in Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah; University of Denver, Denver, Col.; University of Montana; University of Washington, Seattle, Wash. Several other copies are sent to subscribers in Michagan, Illinois, and other states in the Middle West.

Cobb Entertains Visitors

Dr. Frank J. Wright, professor of geology in Dennison University, Granville, Ohio, made a visit to Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the department of geology, on Tuesday and Wednesday.

UNDEFEATED NET MEN CLAIM TITLE

The undefeated Tar Heel racquet wielders are the strongest claimants to the Southern team tennis' title. The University of North Carolina team, playing a 15-match schedule, 10 of which matches were against Conference opponents, won 14, lost none, and was tied only by Tulane, who would play the Tar Heels only on condition that they use a four-man team. No other Southern team could show such an impressive record as Coach John Kenfield's squad.

In addition to winning all matches, the Tar Heel team captured both singles and doubles titles in the North Carolina College tourney, Hinkey Hendlin winning the singles and pairing with Phil Liskin to win the doubles.

Members of the team are: Ed Graham and Captain Bill Merritt of Chapel Hill; Julian Palmore, College Park, Md.; Henry Baggs, Washington, D. C.; Hinkey Hendlin, New York City; Herbert Browne, Nashville, Tenn.; and Phil Liskin, New Rochelle, N. Y.

TAR BABY NINE SENDS UP GOOD VARSITY PROSPECTS

After a successful season which netted 12 victories to 5 losses, the Carolina freshman baseball team has ended its career as a freshman team and has graduated a number of good prospects up to the varsity for next year.

Lewis Riggs, shortstop, led the batting for the season with six home runs, followed by Lewis Whitehead, with five. Both are counted good varsity prospects. John Daniel and James Dixon form a fast, hard-hitting pair of fly-hawks to team with Whitehead, while "Smokie" Ferebee has looked good at second all season.

Several of the freshman mound staff are well above the freshman average, and should be a big help to Coach Jim Ashmore when he begins to groom the varsity next year. James Griffith, Sam Scarboro, John McNeill and Stuart Chandler are the best prospects. John Peacock, a clever, hard-working catcher and a good hitter, is the best of the backstops coming up.

New City License Plates On Sale at Town Office

The 1930 Chapel Hill license plates are now on sale at the town office.

These licenses run from June the first to January the first instead of a whole year as was the case heretofore. The reason for this change is so that the town plate will run along with the state license, and thus it will be more convenient for car owners to put both licenses on at the same time.

The cost of these plates is 60 cents for the seven months. The usual cost for the licenses was one dollar.

Visitors from South Africa

Mr. and Mrs. M. Boehmke of Oudtshoorn, Cape Province, South Africa, were in Chapel Hill last Saturday. Mr. Boehmke is president of a teachers' college in his native land, and he came to America to make a survey of educational conditions under the auspices of the Carnegie Corporation.

DOBIE OF TEXAS TO TEACH HERE

Author Of Stories of Southwest To Lecture During Summer School.

J. Frank Dobie of the University of Texas will give two courses here during the second session of summer school. According to a member of the English department here, Mr. Dobie is a very interesting character, having started life as a cowboy on a cattle ranch in southwestern Texas.

The American Mercury and several of the Curtis publications have carried stories by Dobie on the Southwest. In addition to contributing to magazines, Dobie has written a number of books on this country, where he spent his childhood, and has become quite well known as a writer and story teller of the Southwest. At present he is secretary of the Texas Folklore Society.

One of Mr. Dobie's most interesting books, A Vaquero of the Brush Country, is in the University library. The volume is bound in imitation rattlesnake skin, and its contents as well as its cover give one a good idea of this unusual personality who is to be a member of the summer school faculty. As a lecturer, the University of Texas professor has entertained many large audiences in his own state and others.

One of the courses which Dobie will give is English literature—a survey of English literature of the romantic period with especial attention to the greater poets. The other course is the literature of the south—taking up the development of literature in the South and Southwest.

President Hoover is expected to spend a month this summer in the West, mostly fishing in the Glacier and Yellowstone parks.

Tar Heel Meeting

The final meeting of the year of the Tar Heel staff will take place in the basement of Alumni building tonight. City editors and members of the editorial board will convene at seven o'clock, and the regular reportorial meeting will follow promptly at 7:15. Work of the past year will be reviewed briefly, and some plans for the coming year will be discussed. It is particularly important that all members of the staff be present.

SAVILLE WILL BE TAYLOR SPEAKER

Tuesday's Lecture On "Power Plant Management" Is Last Of Year.

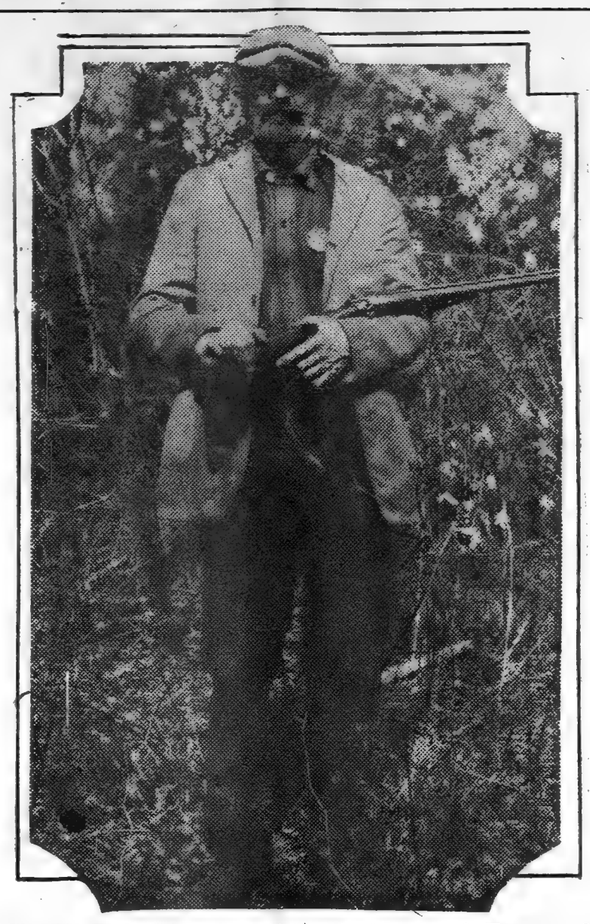
Thorndike Saville, professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering and chief engineer of the state department of conservation and development, will speak on "Power Plant Maagement as a Problem of Industrial Management" at the meeting of the local student branch of the Taylor Society Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock in Bingham hall.

In his talk Professor Saville will point out and briefly discuss some of the considerations entering into a decision on the power source of any industry.

There are two ways in which power can be furnished an industry: it can be purchased outright from a public utility or it can be produced at the plant. Because of the great increases in motorization during recent years, electrical power is becoming the greatest in the field, and only this phase of power will be considered in the discussion which Mr. Saville will present.

The decision on which source of power to use to obtain it in the most economical method is extremely complicated, requiring a detailed analysis of many factors on the part of the industrial engineer and the best available experts.

Professor Saville will present a brief impartial discussion of the merits of both types of super supply, purchase from a public utility and production at the place of consumption.



Professor Saville as chief engineer of the department of conservation and development has had supervision of about 20 power plant investigations that have been conducted by the department in the past ten years. He has also been retained as consulting engineer on power plants by various public utility companies.

The meeting Tuesday evening will be the last one which the Taylor society will hold this year. During the past two quarters the society has held regular meetings at which various phases of scientific management have been presented by outside speakers and faculty members.

Circle To Serve

The Laura Mangum Circle of the Methodist Church will hold a Brunswick Stew supper May 29. This meal will be served in the dining-room of the church from 6 to 7:30 o'clock. Reservations are to be made through Mrs. R. B. House.

SNAKE BITE DOCTORING REMAINS LUCRATIVE BUSINESS IN CAROLINA

Eastern Carolina Still "Swears By" "Old Doc" Liverman Who Has Received Calls For Aid For More Than Fifty Years.

(By Dick McGlohon)

Swamps—miles of black lagoons—tall cypress trees—boggy lowlands where copper headed moccasins crawl lazily about among slim reeds and bask upon cypress "knees."

Like another garden of long ago, the Eden that stretches along the Carolina coast has its serpents. But fortunately for many people in eastern North Carolina and Virginia, the old fashioned snake-bite doctor still works his ancient magic with herbs from the nearby swamps.

This is the time of the year when Sheriff Jack Liverman begins making his annual pilgrimage to the lowlands in search of a secret snake weed which he uses in his summer's practice.

It was exactly 50 years ago that Sheriff Jack took up snake-bite doctoring. During the half century that has intervened, he has won the gratitude and respect of hundreds of people in this section by his successful ministration to the suffering and afflicted.

"I have had more snake cases than I can ever count," says Sheriff Jack. "I have traveled all over this country to look after my patients. I even went a hundred miles to doctor one man. I tell you, there was plenty of snakes that bit folks in them days.

"But somehow there ain't as many snakes now as there used to be. When I was a young man, snakes was plentiful. Why, they was all a-lying out along the river banks in the sun and crawling under people's houses.

Knows His Snakes

"We've got more snakes in this town now than we want and then some. But, daggit, they just ain't as thick as they used to be. These new concrete highways and automobiles have brought lots of people into this section and the snakes have hit for the swamps where there is not so many people and noises. Civilization has sure run the snakes away from here.

"And these snakes that still hang around are naturally bad and dangerous. I tell you these are bad snakes we have to deal with nowadays and they don't fail to peck the kids when they gets the chance. No, Sir, not when careless boys are turned loose with careless snakes, and this town's got both. But, even at that, there was twice as many people bit by snakes thirty years ago."

Has Mid-Night Calls

The snake-bite business was so good in the old days that Mr. Liverman had a full practice the summer long and gathered herbs for his medicine during the springtime in order to be prepared for emergency cases and urgent calls. Frequently he was called out at the most unexpected hours ,sometimes at night, sometimes in the early morning.

"I have got my medicine satchel out at mid-night on several occasions and hustled off to doctor some person that was bit by a highland moccasin or a flat-head adder. I was called away at mid-night not so long ago to doctor a colored gal that was bit on the heel by a highland moccasin when she walked out in the yard in the dark. Lucky they called me when they did; I had her walking again in four days."

This case was comparatively easy to some that he describes. Many years ago a girl, who was bitten by a rattle-snake pilot, was turned over to him for treatment. The village doctor had pronounced her well and sent her back to school. But Sheriff Jack tells his own ending of the story. "You know, that gal's foot swelled up again and I had a terrible time with it. But I had her walking again in

Senior Week

All seniors are asked by the president of their class to take notice of the fact that this week, Monday, May 26, through Friday, May 30, is the official Senior Week.

Executives of the senior class request that all seniors do the following:—

2. Attend talks by various members of the faculty each evening at 7:15 under Davie Poplar. In case of rain talks will be made in Gerrard hall.

3. Attend the free show, starring Dolores del Rio, for seniors only at the Carolina Theater, 11 p. m., Thursday, May 29.

PROGRAM OF PHI UNUSUAL SUCCESS

Lang, Carr, And Albright Have Led Assembly In Record Year.

IMPORTANT BILLS PASSED

During the last college year the Phi Assembly, led by Speakers Lang and Carr and President Pro-tem Albright, has passed many important bills.

The Phi has promoted better friendship and understanding among the colleges of North Carolina. The Phi sponsored a measure to have the representatives from the two Duke societies discuss in a joint session better relationships between Duke and Carolina. This meeting was quite successful and resulted in a better understanding between these two neighboring colleges.

This start resulted in a statewide organization of colleges. This work was sponsored in particular by Speaker Lang of the Phi who is now president of the state federation.

Under Speaker Carr the Assembly has continued its work and manifested great interest in all bills submitted for approval. One of the bills passed by the Phi recommended Josiah W. Bailey for the senate. This bill was passed by an unusual majority.

The Phi also entered the Prohibition discussion but, failing to pass a bill in favor of it, voted down the bill presented by a large majority. Its next important step amazed many conservatives when a measure was passed admitting co-eds to membership. It failed to pass a measure submitted by Representative Nazareno of the Philippines asking for independence of the Philippines. This was the last measure to be considered.

The next meeting was devoted to the selection of new officers. Speaker Carr presided at the election. The Assembly selected Mayne Albright for its next speaker. Speaker Albright upon taking office expressed confidence in the officers chosen with him and predicted a great year for the Phi.

ANNUAL CAPERS LAST EVENT ON PLAYMAKER LIST

Thirty Receive Awards For Dramatic Endeavor In Midst Of Night Of Hilarity.

Fun, friendship and frolic marked the annual Carolina Playmaker Caper held last night at the Playmaker theatre. The large crowd in attendance was treated to a rollicking good time with the clever antics of the Playmaker performers. The audience was composed mainly of students, faculty and townspeople who have either this year or sometime in the past had some connection with the local dramatic group.

The Caper program contained almost every device known to the theatre, ranging from drama, melodrama, and comedy to the singing of ballads, tap dancing, and poem reading. Both the actors and audience lent themselves to the spirit of the occasion, creating an air of levity and gayety.

During the course of the evening 35 Playmaker gold masks were awarded to various members of the group for outstanding work during the year in playwriting, acting and stagecraft. Those receiving the awards were: for acting—Penelope Alexander, Richmond Bond, Holmes Bryson, Lois Buell, George F. Cole, Eveland

Regalia, Addresses Under Davie Poplar, and Free Movie Will Feature Events Of Graduating Class.

Although commencement does not begin until the class day exercises, June 7, the class of '30 will begin its farewell activities tomorrow, the first day of Senior Week. Senior Week will last officially five days, Monday through Friday, May 26-30. According to custom, those who are expecting to receive in the near future their hard-worked-for sheepskins will rule with dignified sway over the campus in general.

The opening event of the week will be an address by President Chase under Davie Poplar at 7:15 Monday evening. Only seniors are asked to attend this talk and those on the following evenings, and for them seating arrangements will be provided.

On Tuesday evening at 7:15 under Davie Poplar the second of the addresses to the seniors will be given by Dr. R. D. W. Connor. A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

It is in many ways far more easy to speak across the centuries than from generation to another.—Stanley Baldwin.

A Wise Regulation

According to a recent ruling of the undergraduate faculty in order to be eligible for readmission "a freshman must pass two courses in the first two quarters, and five courses in the first three quarters. After the freshman year, a student must pass at least one course each quarter, four courses in two successive quarters." The ruling does not become effective until the beginning of the winter quarter next year.

The rule is not another effort to "tighten up" scholastic requirements. During the past year that tendency has been noted in the several regulations passed. With one exception, we think the regulations wise and think they will tend to eliminate much of the waste material usually found in a University student body. In the rapid expansion of the University since 1920 there was little change in eligibility requirements, but this year with the building program practically completed and with little or no expansion a general overhauling of regulations has been underway.

The new ruling will not affect those seeking degrees or those really interested in getting an education. But those, who just go to college will be forced to toe the mark. Loafing through one quarter with the idea of making up the work the next quarter will be rather difficult.

But the greatest benefit to the University will be the elimination of those who are spending four years of idleness here.

Now or Never

One more day remains before the students decide once and for all the fate of the Daily Tar Heel. The undergraduate body holds in its hands the power to determine whether the steady climb of the campus news publication up the ladder of journalistic progress shall continue, or whether the position held for a brief year shall be lost, the work of building a daily that has gone on for four or five years shall come to naught, and that the Daily Tar Heel shall slip back a few notches to repose on the lower round which it attained a few years ago as a tri-weekly.

Progress in other branches of student activities has been continually forward—student government, class activities, athletics, both intercollegiate and intramural, scholarship and social functions—all of these have moved up, keeping pace with the advancing needs of the University and the idealistic aspirations fostered by a twentieth century move toward enlightment.

It would be entirely out of keeping with the spirit of progress traditional to one of the South's greatest institutions to let slip out of our hands even one degree of accomplished ambition, to see the loftiest framework of a sky-ward reaching building blown aside by a slight puff of pessimistic conservatism, and leave to be constructed anew the upper stories that have served us well for the past year.

Now is the time for the students to decide whether we shall keep ever upward with the work, or drop back to begin a second time something that is already accomplished in a very worthy manner. —B. R.

Breakfast and a Paper

Somebody remarked yesterday that if the Daily Tar Heel should go back to the tri-weekly plan he would have to subscribe to some other daily newspaper, because he couldn't enjoy breakfast without a paper before him as he was eating. This comment seems rather significant to us, however ridiculous it sounds as an argument in favor of the Daily Tar Heel and, incidentally, of the quarterly raise in the publications fees fee of the nominal sum of thirty-three and a third cents.

After all, isn't the beauty of breakfast enhanced as much by a newspaper beside a plate as by a cool glass of orange juice or a grapefruit? To scan the front page in search of news—and the Daily Tar Heel does carry, as a rule, the freshest of campus news—to pick faults with the editors, and to enter into arguments and discussions over the table on why this person did this or why that thing happened—these are luxuries (and really necessities to most people) which only a daily paper, and more particularly the Daily Tar Heel, can bring daily to the table. Even if the Daily Tar Heel does nothing more (and it does do more) than furnish stimulus to conversation at the early morning meal and to start off right the hardworking undergraduate's day, it is certainly worth the proposed raise in fee which necessity forces.

Having now become conditioned to a daily, we personally think an absence of the Daily Tar Heel would cause a bad taste in all our mouths on the mornings a paper does not appear. But this is a consequence we hope we shall not have to look forward to—B. M.

Readers' Opinions

FAVORS DAILY

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Please allow me to commend the action on the part of student activities committee to continue the Tar Heel as a daily publication. I have been a subscriber to the Tar Heel since the fall of 1910, and in these 20 years, I believe that the greatest single factor on the part of student activities, in putting Carolina out of the small school class into that of a great University, has been the issuance of a daily college paper. Indeed, "a successful editorial policy," as Mr. Meyer so aptly expresses it.

If four college publications, inclusive of the Yackety Yack, have been obtained by the student body for the small sum of five dollars, then there should be little trouble in meeting a financial deficit and in insuring against such a deficit in future years.

Sincerely your,
R. B. McKNIGHT,
M. D., '14.

Pen Points

By H. J. Galland

Prophecy for this week: Professors will be surprised at the unusual attendance on classes. Students will arrive for 8:30 classes at 8:30. Close attention will be paid to the lecturer in all classes. Exams will be given the following week.

The seniors will begin wearing their regalia tomorrow. Snappy white sleeveless sweaters will be the mark of distinction by which those who have yet to reach the eminence of the senior may recognize the more exalted ones. The absence of sleeves is to show that there is nothing up them, and that the trick of becoming and remaining a senior is really quite easy with nothing magical in it—bulldozing the faculty for four years isn't magic, its an art.

Echoes of the Playmaker production of "Romeo and Juliet" continue. Following the performance Saturday night, pictures of the cast were taken. Sunday afternoon Director Elmer Hall went Hollywood and took movies of Mercutio's death scene. The action calls for a duel with Tybalt, and Vidor DeMille Hall rehearsed his actors in the sword-play and death blow several times without mishap. When everything was ready, the scene was shot. Mercutio Koch registered his contempt for Tybalt Creuser, while Romeo Bailey stood by horrified. Swords were unshipped, and the fight started. Mercutio received the blade on his cheek-bone, and blood began to flow—real blood, not red ink.

Knowing that this was not in the script, Mercutio was surprised but undaunted and proceeded through his scene to the end. The blood was stopped with a handkerchief, and upon examination later it was found that the stains had taken the shape of fairly recognizable dog. Prof now shows his trophy to all and sundry who are interested. He calls it his bloodhound.

It is not generally known that the torches used in the third scene of the second performance caused a bit of unforseen trouble. They were filled with alcohol just before they were to be used. In the dark offstage they were filled a little too much, so that the excess liquid ran down Professor Koch's arms and over the hands of Grace Williams, who assisted with the properties. They did not know it until the alcohol was lit, when it flared up, but was quickly extinguished. The injuries were not in any way serious, and the scene proceeded at once, despite the surprise and pain occasioned. But Prof is well known to be a real trouper, and the show must go on."

This column pauses in its stride (generally a mere saunter) to salute Grady Leonard, Y secretary who is resigning to become the representative here of the Pilot Life Insurance Company. He has done excellent work, and has gone out of his way many time to be of service. We trust that he will be most successful, and that he will watch his avoirdupois.

Awards Night come tomorrow, and as usual, about 56 men will receive recognition of work done during the year, and 56 men will attend the exercises which are of interest to the entire campus and to which every one is invited. The Tar Heel will carry a story Tuesday morning decrying the fact that nobody not directly concerned was present, and things will go on as before.

Well, there's always Graham Memorial to stir up interest.

At The Carolina This Week

By H. J. G.

Another fine run of pictures is scheduled for the coming week, according to the announcement released by Manager E. Carrington Smith of the Carolina theatre.

Monday's feature is "The New Movietone Follies of 1930," featuring the famous Swedish character-comedian, El Brendel. Brendel has been in pictures only a few months, but he has attained immense popularity. With him in this latest edition of the Movietone Follies are Marjorie White, Frank Richardson, Noel Francis, William Collier, Jr., Huntley Gordon, J. M. Kerrigan, Yola D'Avril, Paul Nicholson, and a beauty dancing chorus of 300 girls.

Polly Moran and Marie Dressler will show the public what it means to be "Caught Short" on Tuesday. Miss Dressler, whose drunken antics on the screen have won her a place among the screen's foremost commediennes is an old war-horse of the cinema and stage. Her entire life has been spent in the theatre, the circus and on studio lots. This latest picture with her new teammate is as hilarious as any she has made.

Al Jolson is here Wednesday in "Mammy," a picture quite different from any of his earlier triumphs. He plays the part of Al Fuller, an end man who loves the daughter of the owner of minstrel show and has more or less serious squabbles on that score. Both story and songs are by Irving Berlin. The supporting cast includes Lois Moran, Louise Dresser, Lowell Sherman, Tully Marshall, Hobart Bosworth, and Ray Cooke.

For Thursday, Dolores Del Rio and Edmund Lowe in "The Bad One" will be shown. The problem of casting suitable characters for this picture was a more serious one than the director-producer, George Fitzmaurice has encountered in a long career. Because the story is laid in a vigorous background, the waterfront cafes of Marseilles, France, and later in an island penal institution, actors of decided force and ability were required. For the swash-buckling, two-fisted American sailor, whose boast was that he could make any girl love him, no other character in Hollywood fitted better into the role than Edmund Lowe. The rest of the cast is as well chosen, and a memorable and effective picture is the result.

"The Devil's Holiday" starring Nancy Carroll, is the feature scheduled for Friday. In this picture, the star of "Honey" and "Sweetie," both of which were popular in Chapel Hill, is a manicurist who wants to be independently wealthy and live her own life. But to do so, she must indulge in graft by pretending to be in love with certain men in order that she can persuade them to buy products from certain salesmen and thereby insure her a commission on the sales.

"The Texan," Paramount's second great romance of the West, will be shown at the Carolina Saturday. Gary Cooper and Fay Wray are the stars. O. Henry wrote the original story, "A Double-Dyed Deceiver," Deceiver," from which "The Texan" was adapted. It first appeared in a collection of stories, "Roads of Destiny," by the famous author, and popular acclaim singles it out as one of the most thoroughly human pieces from the pen of America's best-beloved writer. The story will be recognized as the one which tells of the adventures of the Llano Kid, a young bandit, who is persuaded to go to South America to pose as the runaway son of a wealthy and aristocratic widow. The picture is well done and rounds out a week of unusually fine entertainment.

Med Elections

The Medical Society held its annual elections Friday at chapel period. Wilkins was elected president; Kitchen, vice-president; Gay secretary and treasurer; and Victor Moore, chairman of the program committee.

CHARLOTTE BEATS CAPITOL CITY IN BASEBALL GAME

Gadd Beats Bailey In Mound Duel Resulting In 9-2 Score For Charlotte.

Pitcher Allen Bailey and the Raleigh infield had one bad inning yesterday, and Charlotte high scored seven runs and beat Raleigh, 9-2, for the class A high school baseball title of the state, here at Emerson field. A large crowd saw the triumph for Coach Walter Skidmore's fast, well-drilled nine.

Tom Gadd, ace of the Wildcats, hurled steady ball throughout, struck out ten men, held Raleigh to seven hits, and was never in trouble except in the sixth when Bailey's home run, singles by Reves and Page and an error by Wilson gave Raleigh two runs.

Bailey had given up but two hits and one run and was playing the other role in a stellar mound duel when the fateful sixth inning avalanche broke unexpectedly upon him.

Charlotte never hit him hard. The Wildcats, in fact, didn't got but one extra-base blow, and that was Funderburke's triple two innings later.

What they did was to launch an avalanche of cletver, well-placed infield blows, interspersed with pop singles to the outfield, that left all the Raleigh infielders except the star second-baseman Rand well up in the air as to how to handle.

Pitcher Bailey helped the cause by striking two batsmen, shortstop Paris chipped in an error, and before the din and confusion were over, seven Wildcats had crossed the plate, another was on third and there was only one out.

Reaves came over from first base and retired the side without another run, after which Bailey came back and worked the rest of the game without difficulty, yielding but two more hits and one more run, Funderburke's triple driving in Belue in the eighth.

Raleigh tried vainly to rally, but Gadd never let a Cap get as far as third again.

Funderburke, who hit a triple and single for three tries, led the Charlotte batters, seconded by Belue and Pitcher Gadd, both of whom bagged two singles. First baseman Reaves, who hit three singles in four tries, and Pitcher Bailey, who bagged a homer and single for four tries, were the Raleigh leaders at the bat.

Pitcher Bailey opened the eventful sixth by hitting Bell, Gadd beat out an infield blow, Bailey hit Daniels, and the sacks were full. Shortstop Paris took Wilson's grounder, corked a wild throw home, and Bell was safe. Second Baseman Rand made a nice play of Shoupe's grounder to catch Gadd at home, but Belue popped a single into center to score both Daniels and Wilson, Shoupe taking second.

Funderburke's bunt caught the Raleigh infield napping, and by smart base running Shoupe was safe at home, Belue made third, and Funderburke made second on the throw-in. Another infield hit by Morris scored Belue and put Funderburke around to third. Morris stole second, and Moore dropped a short-single into center to bring in both men. Moore made second on the throw-in, and took third on a passed ball, but Reeves came in to relieve Bailey and retired the side without further damage, causing Bell to ground out and Gadd to fly out.

GOLFING ANCIENT SPORT OF KINGS

Has Been Played For Centuries; Taking Colleges By Storm.

Today's game of golf was first known as Goff, Gouff, or Gowff which was probably derived from the German kolbe meaning club, or closer still, the Dutch word "kolf." "The Royal and Ancient Game of Goff" was the cognomen given our golf game by the old Scots. The exact date of introduction into Scotland is unknown but its popularity is shown in 1457, when a law was passed in the Scotch parliament against playing the game to excess. The founders of the game are unknown. The first known official course was St. Andrews Golf Club, Scotland which was in use as early as 1552. The club that bears this name today was not formally organized until 1754. Since its birth the St. Andrews Golf Club has become by virtue of seniority and prestige the arbiter of golf procedure and etiquette throughout the world.

The development of golf was slow until the last decade of the nineteenth century when its popularity started to increase and since then the game has developed into one of the most democratically played games in existence. Golf at first suffered many setbacks as a result of legislation blocking its advance. In 1491 an angry fulmination was issued on the general subject, with pains and penalties annexed. It runs thus: "Futeball and Golfe forbidden. Item, it is statut and ordainit that in na place of the realme there be usit Futeball, Golfe or other sik unprofitabil sportis," etc. This was an edict of James IV; and it is not a little curious to find the monarch himself setting a bad example to the people by the practice of this "unprofitabil sportis," as is shown by various entries in the accounts of the lord high treasurer of Scotland (1503-1506).

In 1760 golf was banned in Albany on the Sabbath. The interest in golf in England started with the Royalty, being made popular by the Stuarts. In 1834 William IV became patron of the St. Andrews Golf Club (St. Andrews being then as now, the most famous seat of the game), and approved of its being styled "The Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews." In 1864 the Royal North Devon Club was formed at Westward Ho, and this was the first of the seaside links laid out for golf in England.

In 1863 the Prince of Wales asked to become patron of St. Andrews and succeeded in becoming Captain. In 1869 the Royal Liverpool Club established itself in possession of the second English Course of this quality at Hoylake, in Cheshire. The progress of the game was slow but steady. The Royal St. George's Golf Club, near Sandwich, on the coast of Kent rose into immediate favor. In 1909 the exclusive links at Deal was opened. France has been of late a strong competitor in the realm of golf.

As early as 1907 Arnaud Massy won the British Open Championship. France has developed into one of the leading golfing countries. She has some of the finest courses in the world today at Cannes, Chantilly, St. Cloud, and Fountainbleau. Golf has even recently been taken up seriously in Japan. The United States has so developed her facilities for instruction and so spread throughout the lands the delightfulness of golf that she dominates the countries which originated the games and are inhabited by a leisure class. By leaps and bounds the scientific mastery of this game has spread throughout this country. Golf was first introduced into the United States about 1890 by a Scotchman by the name of Thomas Lockhart. Through his influence John Reid founded the St. Andrews Golf Club at Yonkers, N. Y., after which golf's success couldn't be stopped. Golf has become a major sport in many of the Universities in the United States today. It is a game which is rapidly augmenting its popularity among the individual students.

TAR HEEL BAT-BOY UNSUNG BY PRESS

"Sec" Most Rabid Follower Of Team During Past. Season.

Box scores and press accounts fail to give honor and praise to a very important person connected with the baseball team, or, rather, to a person who should not only be said to be connected with the team, but should be called a member of the team. While nominally he is not a member of the squad, he should be entitled to full membership.

The person slighted in press reports and box scores is "Sec," dean of the batboys and the mascot of the baseball team. "Sec," whose nickname is a shortened form for "Secretary," will inform a rigid cross-examiner after an interview of 15 minutes that his name is Wade Phillips. He will also tell the examiner that he is a member of the seventh grade of the local school, but hardly anything other than that will pass "Sec's" lips.

As a bat-boy, "Sec" keeps his bats arranged neatly and orderly. As dean of the bat-boys he directs others and examines the qualifications of all new applicants.

As Secretary, he cooperates

SPURTS IN SPORTS

By Jack Bessen

The method that the Southern Conference uses in determining the title winners in the various athletic activities—namely, the percentage system—has come in for an amount of criticism, some favorable and in other cases not so favorable.

Each team plays an average of four and at the most five football games with opponents within their circle; the exponents of the percentage system claim that teams which play seven or eight conference games have an unfair advantage over those teams that play only four or five and that the percentage system does away with this unfairness. That all may be true, but at the same time the chances that the latter incur of becoming defeated should also be considered. For example, Tulane, last year's football champions, played only five conference games; was undefeated and acclaimed as champions, while Tennessee played seven conference games, lost none, tied one; yet Tulane was given the flag. Therefore, if the Southern Conference officials wish to eliminate all unfairness, a new method of deciding the champions should be introduced.

If the Southern Conference were to adopt a new system of scoring, the method employed by the National Hockey League should satisfy just about everyone. For every league game won two points are awarded; for every tie, one; and no points are deducted for a loss. The highest total at the end of the season would justly deserve the championship.

Not only will this method do away with unfairness, but will cause the schools in the conference to draw up schedules composed primarily of conference schools.

In baseball there has been a great deal of discussion concerning the lively ball. Last year the criticism became so great that the baseball manufacturers decided to deaden the old "pill." They thought that by thickening the cover the ball would not have so much pep, but this only made the ball livelier than ever. Now with only five weeks gone of the major league schedule, there have already been some record breaking contests. Only last week the Yankees defeated the world champion Athletics 10-1 and 20-13.

In the second game there were ten home runs made off 14 hurlers, breaking the old record of eight. If such things are to continue, the national game is bound to lose prestige. The old timers are lamenting the apparent loss of pitchers' battles. They'll soon be calling 10-9 games pitchers' battles. Base stealing now seems to be a lost art. Why should batters gamble for every base when the probabilities are that he will be hit around. Playing the infield nowadays on a big league ball field has become almost as dangerous as living in Cicero, Ill. John McGraw has seriously considered the idea of equipping his pitchers with shin pads—they need 'em now.

The National League race again gives warning that it will be the hottest in recent years. All of the teams, even Boston and Philadelphia, have strengthened their clubs so much that there really isn't any room for cellar champions. Of course course some team has to have that honor, but they are not far below the leaders in calibre. Brooklyn, St. Louis and the New York Giants seem to take great pleasure in alternating at the top of the heap, and the other teams are not more than four games behind them—a small margin, considering the time of the year. Well, you know the old saying, "The hotter the better," so all we can say is "Go to it!"

Davis Captains Frosh Track Team This Year

At a meeting of the freshman track team held recently, Archie Davis of Winston-Salem was elected captain. Davis has been a strong member of the freshman team for this past season, having competed in both of the hurdle events, the shot put, and the discus. He showed up well in every meet and is expected by his coaches to be a big addition to the varsity team next year.

AWARDS NIGHT IS TO FINISH YEAR'S ACTIVITIES WEEK

Gerrard Hall To Be Scene Of Official Recognition Of Extra-Curricular Work.

Awards Night will come tomorrow in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock, at which time awards will be made for good work in athletics and for work on publications and in debating.

A summary of the year's progress and achievements in student life and the evolution of student government during the past year will be given by Ray Farris, retiring president of the student body.

Awards for Yackety Yack work will be made by Travis Brown, while the Carolina Magazine awards will be made by John Mebane, the Buccaneer awards by Cy Edson and the Tar Heel medals by Glenn Holder. Following these awards, announcements concerning the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity will be made by Gordon Gray, retiring president.

A cup to the best freshman scholar-athlete, and athletic awards will also be announced. These are to be made by Coach "Bob" Fetzer, athletic director. The presentation of the Patterson medal to the best all-round athlete will be the final award on the program.

with the managers in chasing foul balls and filling the needs of the players. In fact, he orders the freshman managers around; these, though they be rising sophomores, are not in the least resentful in taking orders from "Sec," who knows much more about the team than they do.

But being bat-boy and secretary is his least importance to the team. He supplies as much enthusiasm and cheerfulness to the team as anyone. He has to be restrained from razzing the opposing pitcher too much. He exhorts the players by their nicknames and knows as much about them as the most rabid fans and followers of the team.

At the annual Carolina-Virginia game two weeks ago, "Sec" received a ball autographed by the whole squad, a token he prizes highly. At the final Duke game he received a black eye accidentally by the Duke catcher flinging a bat at him without looking; it almost started a riot.

FACULTY RAISES STANDARD AGAIN

Scholarship Requirements Continue To Climb; All Persons Must Pass At Least One Course.

Another of a series of stringent regulations regarding scholarship requirements emanating from the councils of the undergraduate faculty this year was passed by that body at its meeting Friday afternoon. The new regulation will not change the readmission requirements for next September but will determine the eligibility of students for the winter quarter and all subsequent terms. The new rule as stated by the undergraduate faculty follows:

"A freshman must pass two courses in the first two quarters, and five courses in the first three quarters. After the freshman year, a student must pass at least one course each quarter and four courses in two successive quarters. Deficiencies may be made up by correspondence or in summer school, in which case only credits exceeding one course credit so obtained shall count for readmission."

Snake Bite Doctoring Remains A Lucrative Business In Carolina

a few weeks and, God daggit, you know after that she got married and had seven children.

Cured Some Bad Cases

"Now, take that worse case I ever had. That was a problem, too. I took that case when all the medical doctors had given it up. I went to see that gal twenty days 'fore I could make a cure. That was the worst case I ever had or want to have. But her folks made me a present of forty dollars for my trouble."

In spite of the fact that snakes are fast disappearing, Sheriff Jack's reputation as a snake-bite doctor has been steadily on the increase since at the age of 12 he cured his first patient. He learned the secret formula from Frank McGuire, a Confederate soldier who visited his home after the Civil War.

The following summer he had a half dozen cases and three years later, at the age of 16, he took a dozen patients and cured them all. Some had been bitten by moccasins while others encountered the dreaded adders and copper heads.

Although he has served the public as a blacksmith, as buggy maker, and more recently as auto mechanic and deputy sheriff, he has let nothing interfere with his snake-bite practice. He has had hundreds of cases and has never failed to make a cure. He is still widely known throughout eastern North Carolina, having had cases in Hertford, Bertie, Northampton, Gates, and in many Virginia counties.

Medical Doctors Aid Him

Doctoring snake bites, he says, gives him more pleasure than anything he has ever done. "It gives a man a great satisfaction to know he can be a help to the people of his state. I am glad when I look back on the years I've spent doctoring and see that I've done some good and have been a help to the people. I've enjoyed every minute I've spent helping my friends and the medical doctors."

Sheriff Jack went off for a stroll one beautiful summer morning and upon his return found the village doctors waiting for him with a patient who had been bitten by a poplar-leaf moccasin. "That man was stretched out on the office porch helpless. But, God daggit, I had him in his field plowing again in three days."

He has never tackled a rattle-snake bite and says that he'd rather leave "those dagged things" alone and let the medical doctors take care of such cases with "this here new serum."

Believes in Science

"This vaccinating business for rattle-snake bites is a good thing. I can cure any kind of bite from the snakes we have in this section, but I'd rather leave the rattle-snake bites to the medical doctors and their vaccinating needles.

"The scientist sure got the jump on me when it comes to curing snake bites that a way. But I'm glad. It's doing the world a lot of good and is carrying on the snake-bite-curing movement that I started as a pioneer. If it warn't for us old-time snake-bite doctors, there wouldn't be none of this here new vaccinating serium. No, Sir!"

He says no one else living knows the formula for this herb compound, and as yet he hasn't decided whether he'll tell the secret before he dies or not; but he intimates that it would take a lot of money to buy it.

"I might get lots of money with my medicine right now if I'd get some of these scientists to make extracts of it that I could sell in bottles. But I'm scared to trust these scientists. They'd just as likely test my medicine and find what it was made of. You know there's lots of crooked people in this old world today."

Is Active Deputy Sheriff

Mr. Liverman was sworn in as a deputy of Hertford county to serve under Sheriff Scull April 1, 1929. A few weeks later one of the home town boys came in from Atlanta Southern Dental College to find a large gold badge pinned on Sheriff Jack's wool shirt. When the young man asked about it, Sheriff Jack beamed proudly. "Why son, I've been sworn in. Who'd ever a-thought you'd be a doctor and me a sheriff?"

All last summer he was exceedingly active as an officer of the law, covering faithfully the village and the nearby beaches. The August term of superior court demanded some of his time, during which he served 24 papers and assisted in every way possible. "It kept me busy all right, but I like to see the courts come around, as I get to see my old friends who live away from here."

Much of his time was spent at Tuscarora, the local beach, where he represented the law and kept order among the youthful revelers. He says he has never had any serious trouble with any of the young people as he understands them thoroughly and knows how they should be treated.

"I can get along fine with these young fellows and college boys so long as they use common sense, but sometimes you run across these educated fools that can't be controled even by the law.

About Educated Fools

"You can give a fellow all the education you want to, but if he ain't got some common sense I wouldn't give you enough powder and shot to blow him up with. That's the trouble with lots of these educated boys today. They come back here to tear the world upside down. They talk like Bob Ingersoll and Thomas Paine. And these two fellows were crazy—insane—just like half of the people of America today. Still the boys laugh at us old fellows who are trying to help them along.

"What do some of them do—go out and get drunk, then say the old men are the sots. God daggit, there's just as much liquor drunk today as there was ten years ago, but there's a different class a-drinking it now, and that is our boys and girls. Ten years ago our girls warn't drinking it, but look what's happening now. Why, it's even got so bad now that any 12-year-old boy can buy all the liquor he wants for a one-dollar bill.

Offers His Panacea

"The whole trouble with our country today is that we have lost all contact with God and are worshipping Satan. It ain't nothin' else. God don't push Himself on nobody. If we want God we have got to look for Him. But it looks like this country don't want Him at all.

"Take Russia, now. Russia's gonna eat bark off'n trees and it's gonna happen 'fore I die. Russia can't go about tearing down God's churches and carrying out the holy vessels. There was old Belshazzar that did this very thing and his kingdom fell by the will of God, and so will Russia fall. Belshazzar had the vessels, that his father Nebuccadnezzar got from the temple in Jerusalem, brought to him, and he and his wives had a drinkin' frolic. God made the kingdom fall. That's exactly what's gonna happen to Russia. And God daggit, if America keeps on at the rate she's goin' filled up with ungodliness and idolatry, she can't make a success either.

PROF. SAVILLE TO ADDRESS TAYLOR SOCIETY TONIGHT

Engineering Professor To Present Paper On "Power Plant Management As A Problem Of Industrial Management."

At the meeting of the University student branch of the Taylor Society to be held this evening at 7 o'clock in Bingham hall, Thorndike Saville, professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering and chief of the state department of Conservation and Development, will present a paper on "Power Plant Management as a Problem of Industrial Management."

The paper to be presented this evening will be an impartial discussion of the merits of two methods of supplying power to any industry, purchase of the power from a public utility company and generation of it at the place of use.

The decision on which method to use in obtaining power for any given industry is extremely difficult and must be made only after a detailed analysis of many factors has been made. It is the purpose of this paper to present a summary of the advantages of each method and to show how each is best fitted for certain cases.

As chief engineer of the department of conservation and development, Professor Saville has had supervision of about twenty power plant investigations that the department has made in the past ten years, and has become well acquainted with the power situation in the Southeast. In addition to supervising these power investigations, Professor Saville has served as consulting engineer on the power plant projects of several public utility corporations.

Because of the great advances made in motorization during recent years, the discussion this evening will be limited to electrical power, the phase of power production receiving the largest attention at the present time.

The meeting this evening will be the last that the Taylor Society will hold this school year. During the past two quarters, the society has held regular meetings at which various phases of scientific management have been presented by outside speakers and faculty members.

The meetings of the local branch of the Taylor Society are always open to the public, and the officers of the group extend a special invitation to all engineers to attend the presentation of Professor Saville's paper this evening.

Chemical Engineers Hold Final Meeting

The student branch of the American Chemical Engineers will hold its last meeting of the year in the auditorium of the chemistry building tonight at 7:30. Dr. Vilbrandt will deliver an address at the meeting. His subject will be "Worlds Recreate."

The public is cordially invited to attend the meeting. A large crowd is expected at the meeting as it will probably be the last opportunity to hear Dr. Vilbrandt speak as a member of the faculty here, as he will soon take over his duties at Iowa State College.

The society will not send a representative to the Detroit meeting.

LYMAN B. STOWE ENJOYED RECENT VISIT TO VILLAGE

Grandson - Author Of Noted Writer Favorably Impressed By Town And Citizens.

Lyman Beecher Stowe, formerly of Doubleday, Doran and Company, who spent a week in Chapel Hill recently, was greatly impressed with the University and the town.

Speaking of Chapel Hill Mr. Stowe said, "When I get back to New York I am going to tell my friends that if they want to visit a spot where there are no prejudices and where kindness and friendliness abound in profusion they should come to Chapel Hill.

"As the grandson of Harriet Beecher Stowe, I might have expected an indifferent reception in the south, but it has been anything but that. I have found absolutely no prejudices of any sort. Many of the people on the street whom I haven't even met have bowed or spoken. It is quite a contrast with the villages in New England where the people are friendly but too inhibited to show it, or with New York, where people are friendly but too rushed to show it. Chapel Hill has the ideal climate. Before coming down I was in New England and New York, and it was very hot in both places. And, of course, Chapel Hill is a place of great beauty. In fact, this is where I should like to live."

Mr. Stowe came here to gather material for a series of articles he is writing on American universities for "World's Work." The articles are to be on the distinctive contributions of the American universities to American life.

"Before leaving New York I conferred with W. D. Howe, of Scribner's, formerly head of the English department at Indiana University, and others," Mr. Stowe said. "We made up a list of universities that for progressiveness and general enlightenment would be most likely to furnish material for a series of such articles. We placed the University of North Carolina at the head of the list."

The work in the University which impressed Mr. Stowe was that of Dr. E. C. Branson and his assistants in rural social economics; the researches of Dr. Howard W. Odum and his assistants in southern social and economic problems; the work of Dr. W. J. McKee of the school of education in going out into

MONEY IS SAVED BY P. U. BOARD

Efficient Management Makes Low Price For Campus Publications.

The introduction of the Publications Union Board into the University seven years ago brought with it many benefits to the publications and economies to the student body. According to the plan adopted at the beginning, the board consists of five members, two of the faculty and three elected by the students. This board appoints and dismisses business managers of the four publications, and the managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel, apportions money collected from the students, passes on contracts for printing and engraving, and acts as general overseer for the Daily Tar Heel, the Buccaneer, the Carolina Magazine and the Yackety Yack. In its few years of existence, it has gathered a sufficient surplus to keep them on a stable basis.

Due to the economics of the P. U. Board, fees paid by Carolina student are less than those paid at most other universities. Harvard, not having a P. U. Board to unite its publications, has students to pay $9 for the yearbook, $7 for the daily paper, $2.50 for the comic magazine, and $3 for the literary magazine, making a total of $21.50 for the four publications. The University of Chicago charges a total of $11, Columbia, $12, the University of Illinois, $10 (without a literary magazine), and Princeton, $19. All these universities have fees more than double those at Carolina. Most of the savings are due to the

FOREIGN POLITICS FORUM WILL MEET

Recently Organized Group To Conduct Exhaustive Study Into Question.

The Foreign Politics Forum will meet tonight at 9 in 213 Saunders hall for the purpose of discussing current issues in the consular service in the United States. The meeting will be presided over by Bob Graham, president of the organization, while Professor K. C. Frazer of the government department, will lead a discussion on "Foreign Affairs."

Plans are to be made for next year, and prospective speakers will be discussed. The club is at present planning to secure noted diplomats to appear on the program for the coming year.

This Foreign Politics Forum was organized this year for the purpose of stimulating interest among students of the University who are interested in foreign political and commercial problems. Discussions in the forum combined with the advice of the department of history and government should be of service to students who are interested in diplomatic work.

During the past year Sir Herbert Ames was brought to the campus under the auspices of this forum. While here Sir Ames gave a series of addresses on "The League of Nations." The forum plans to bring numerous other such men to the campus next year in an attempt to create more interest in foreign politics.

The officials of the organization invite all students interested in foreign politics both from an academic and professional standpoint, to attend the meeting.

TAFT ENDORSES WORK IN RURAL SCULPTURE DONE BY N. C. FARMER

W. T. Covington, Of Raeford, Develops His Hobby Into Work Of Permanent And Lasting Value; Unusual Material Used In Models.

The recent visit to the campus of Lorado Taft, world famous sculptor and architect, has brought to light a new and entirely original field of artistic endeavor in rural North Carolina which has been secretly flourishing for some time. This discovery is of very great interest to the state as a whole, and especially to the University of North Carolina, where an attempt is now being made to install a school of fine arts. It is especially romantic when it is considered that this movement in art is being led by an agriculturalist—a farmer of the soil. This pioneer in the field of North Carolina art is W. T. Covington, prominent Raeford farmer and member of a well known Hoke county family.

Mr. Covington never went to college, nor has he ever had any artistic training whatsoever, having devoted his time to farming from early youth. It was not to be expected, then, that he would ever develop any liking for, or knowledge of, sculptural art. However, many years ago, he became interested in sculpture and has been enthusiastically spending all spare hours in this field ever since.

Some time ago Mr. Covington, having read of the wide reputation of Lorado Taft as an excellent judge of sculpture and architecture, wrote to Mr. Taft, sending him photographs of some of his work and asking the authority's opinion as to its merit. At that time, Mr. Taft wrote Covington, expressing himself as being most pleased with some of the work, especially with a fountain which the Raeford man had erected in front of his home, and desirous of making Covington's acquaintance in the future. So when Mr. Covington heard that Taft was to lecture at the University, he drove up from his home to hear the lectures, and also brought with him several samples of his work.

Upon examining these samples, Mr. Taft and Dr. Harland, head of the department of archaeology at the University, were enthusiastic in the commendation of the simplicity and perfection of the work. The technique of Mr. Covington's sculpture is entirely original, and different from that generally in fashion for the day, as is his theme and subject matter, which is entirely composed of the local atmosphere of the farm and countryside — a line of thought never heretofore thoroughly developed. One of the pieces which he brought was the "Hog Caller." It consisted of four figures—the farmer, two pigs and a trough. This piece is very realistic. The farmer

RUTH ST. DENIS GIVES PLAN FOR ART EXPRESSION

Advocates Establishment Of Community Dancing Centers; System Is Used In California.

"Dancing is the fundamental expression of all the arts," Miss Ruth St. Denis, dancer and co-director of the famous Denishawn School of Dancing, said in an interview after she had presented a well-received program of dances in the Kenan stadium.

"Architecture and dancing go hand in hand, leading the arts. They are the basis on which all the others are built. For this reason, dancing is an important part of a nation's life."

In speaking of dancing in America, Miss St. Denis told of her own idea and ideal. Dancing, she said, should be for all people, not merely a few interested particularly in the art. Old and young alike can dance, and should be encouraged. The best and most practical means of achieving this end of spreading dancing to all is to establish community centers in the residential districts, where singing and dancing would combine to further the artistic life of the community.

Those too old to dance, whose bodies have become too stiff or are no longer beautiful, may be organized as a chorus. The younger members of the group may then interpret the music of the chorus, improvising where possible. A community interest in culture is thus aroused. Miss St. Denis' school in New York is not of this type, but she has started work along these lines in California, where it is being carried steadily forward.

While Miss St. Denis is heartily in favor of athletics, she decries the fact that huge stadiums on which fabulous sums have been spent are not utilized two-thirds of the year. Choruses, symphony orchestras, pageants and dance programs could be presented. Yet in many parts of the country the structures stand unused. The use of Kenan stadium to stage the program of dances given here was heartily endorsed by the dancer.

Miss St. Denis and her troupe left Chapel Hill for New York, where they will prepare for their appearance in August at the Lewisohn stadium with the New York symphony orchestra. Her appearance here was the last in a ten-day tour of the south.

Yackety Yack Notice

There will be an important meeting of the Editorial staff of the Yackety Yack tonight at seven o'clock. It is imperative that all members be present, and on time, since the purpose involves the formulation of next year's staff and plans for the 1931 Yackety Yack.

CONTINUANCE OF DAILY REQUIRES INCREASE IN FEE

Many Notables Favor Continuation Of Daily; Student Activities Committee Approves.

POLLS IN Y. M. C. A 10 TO 5

(By K. C. Ramsay)

Thirty-three and one-third cents per quarter additional publications fees or no Daily Tar Heel for next year is the question that must be decided by the students today at the polls inside of the Y. M. C. A. The polls will be open from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

At the meeting of the student activities committee on last Tuesday it was decided that this would be the only feasible plan by which a daily paper may be continued in the University. Numerous plans were proposed by both the faculty and student members of the committee, among which was a suggestion that the Buccaneer be abolished. This was unfavorably received by a large majority of the group.

Reports were made by the president of the Publications Union Board, Clyde Dunn, and by Professor J. M. Lear, treasurer of the board, and it was shown that a deficit of over $3300.00 would have to be carried over by the P. U. Board because of the losses of the Daily Tar Heel. Not one member of the student activities committee would hear to a suggestion that the daily be abolished. With one accord the group said continue the newspaper at any price.

Student Leaders Endorse Daily

During the past week discussion of the proposed raise in the publications fee has been heard in all parts of the campus, and the proposal has met with hearty approval. Some of the students having spoken in favor of keeping the Daily Tar Heel under the proposed plan are ex-President of the Student Body, Ray Farris; President of the Student Body, Red Green; Glenn Holder, past editor of the daily; Ed Hamer, President of the Y. M. C. A.; Dave Nims, captain of track; Strud Nash, captain of the football team. The entire staff of the Daily, editor to news reporter, is strongly in favor of continuing its work.

Many students have declared that the Daily Tar Heel has become a necessary part of their breakfast and that they would not know what to do without it.

Favored By Faculty Men

"The experimental year for the Daily Tar Heel closes with two facts clearly evident" stated Professor Harold D. Meyer in a Readers' Opinion last week, "one, a successful editorial policy and the other, a financial deficit.

"The Daily Tar Heel has been a source of pleasure and interest throughout the year. In fact, it has become a student necessity. Like breakfast, classes, study, the Carolina and many other habits we are now accustomed to having the Tar Heel as a daily necessity."

Dean F. F. Bradshaw says "I am in favor of continuing the Daily Tar Heel. It has proven a success, and should be contin-

A Question Of Values

Today the student body expresses its opinion of the Daily Tar Heel. The question isn't so much one of dollars and cents as it is one of the Daily's value to the student body and to the University.

Its value to the campus may be measured in terms of what it gives the student body. We aren't interested in the figures of the statistician who tells us that we get so many pounds of paper per year for our dollar but we are interested in just what the Daily Tar Heel brings to the students here. It is the only medium through which the University may reach all students. It is the sole means of making announcements to the student body or to a large part of it.

But of greater value is the aid it gives students in keeping abreast of current campus events. It is seldom indeed that an issue is "sent to bed" without an account of some event of interest to the student body.

And to a smaller group of students the Daily provides the means of accomplishing something in the way of extra-curricular activities. Both the editorial and reportorial boards are open for competition from the first issue of the year through the last.

We would not attempt to estimate its value to the University. It is, however, a symbol of the progress and initiative of the student body. The undertaking itself was one to be commended and admired. But the actual accomplishment of the Daily is to be even more commended. With the exception of the gradual evolution of our present form of student government, the process of raising the Tar Heel from a weekly as an organ of the athletic association to a daily paper as the organ of the student body is the most progressive step ever taken by the Carolina student body.

Today's issue is: Are we going forward or backward? The issue is clear and definite. The student body will decide.

Reckless Driving

While the University campus is just passing through a period of agitation over the problem of reckless and careless driving among students the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety is convening in Washington with the intention of solving this problem as it is presented in the cities and states of the nation.

According to news dispatches from the nation's capitol previous to the coming of the safety experts, a special committee selected from among the members of the conference has concluded that accidents are caused not so much by fast driving as by reckless driving at irregular rates of speed.

In the case of University students "reckless driving at irregular rates of speed" usually means a mixture of gasoline and Orange county "corn."

To North Carolinians the idea expressed by the committee is not exactly new. Since first construction was begun on the splendid road system that adorns the state, a steady movement in favor of raising the speed limit has brought the mark up to forty-five miles an hour—and even the head of the state highway patrol has said that responsible drivers in high-powered vehicles will not be apprehended when driving at a higher rate.

Now, in the state, there is a growing sentiment in favor of establishing a minimum speed limit in order to avoid the congestion, and consequent accidents, caused by "snail-pace" drivers. This plan has been successfully adopted on the thoroughfares of our larger cities and a recommendation on this subject is likely to come from the national conference.

Ringing Down The Curtain

Already the last intercollegiate event of the collegiate year has taken place. Football, basketball, and baseball uniforms are all safely tucked away until another year; the weary tongue of the debater is at rest, the Yackety Yack has been printed and the editors of the three other publications have laid plans for their concluding issues. All eyes are looking toward that final and hazardous event—examinations. For some of us, examinations are a matter of little difficulty; but to the vast majority who have fallen victims to the lazy call of springtime they mean cramming and sleepless nights.

But beyond this period of cramming and intense study there is promise of the pleasures of summer. Man, fickle and temporary creature that he is, must always have something to look forward to—something pleasing in the distance to lure him through periods of labor and displeasure. Indeed, we could not endure the moments of despair which are certain to come to us were it not for the spark of hope that is certain to come to us in the darkest hours of our earthly pilgrimage. The whole social order seems to be built on a system of counterbalancing good and evil, pleasure and displeasure. Now that we have enjoyed the budding springtime weather for a season, we must pay for it by studying for a period. If we fail to do so, the result will be more of a displeasure than study.

The curtain has already been rung down on a successful athletic year; the debating teams, playmakers, and publications have received much favorable comment. Let us rally to more serious things, therefore, and make the year a total success by "knockin' 'em cold on exams."

Readers' Opinions

A STUDENT COMPLAINS!

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

The traditional laziness of the average college professor is not wholly unjustifiable. At times the result is a marked inconsistency on his part, and an obvious unfair treatment of the student. To say the least, he is extremely inconsiderate, and seems to be entirely unaware of the fact that the student is entitled to some consideration.

In the majority of English courses in the university, a vast amount of written work is required of the student. He is forced to meet this requirement, or he becomes the sad and unfortunate victim of the professor's wrath. Through force and fear he meets his daily assignments.

Then what happens? The professor accepts the papers and takes them to his office. Nothing forces him to play his part, so he shows little concern about his obligations. Unless he is in the proper mood (which is quite seldom), he forgets his duties and allows batches of papers to accumulate upon other batches. Still he makes written assignments—entirely oblivious of the fact that he is a month or two months behind in his own work. The student is anxiously waiting to get his grades, hoping to estimate his standing and the type of work the professor desires. But he can do nothing about it; he must be contented and wait—wait indefinitely, and accept what comes. He is helpless. He is completely at the mercy of the professor.

It seems that a professor, of all persons, should be rational enough to realize that his own obligations are quite as strong as those of the student; and, knowing this, he should be fair enough to use a certain amount of discretion.

MISS SUSAN ROSE TO WED SAUNDERS

Mrs. Augustus Steele Rose of Fayetteville announced yesterday the engagement of her daughter, Miss Susan Murphy Rose to Joseph Maryon Saunders of Chapel Hill.

The wedding is to take place in the late summer. The announcement will be of wide interest. Both are well known and popular in this and neighboring states.

A native of Fayetteville, Miss Rose attended Agnes Scott College and the University of North Carolina, being graduated from the University in 1927. She is a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. She has taught in the Rocky Mount high school and in the Chapel Hill high school, where she now has a position.

Mr. Saunders was graduated from the University in 1925 and won his master's degree in 1926. He was instructor at the Georgia Institute of Technology for a year, and since then has been executive secretary of the General Alumni Association of the University of North Carolina. He is a member of the Chi Phi fraternity. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Saunders of Durham.

LOCKE-CHOPLIN NUPTIALS

Madalein D. Locke and J. P. Choplin were married Saturday, May 24, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. L. M. Brooks, by Rev. W. D. Moss. Miss Locke was for two years a student at N. C. C. W. and for the past two years has been teaching in Kinston. Mr. Choplin of Winston-Salem, retiring president of the student body of State College, is a member of this year's graduating class.

Y.M.C.A. ENDS YEAR HAVING A DEFICIT

Sixteen Meeting With Attendance Of 7350 Have Been Sponsored.

James W. Williams, retiring president of the Y. M. C. A., in his final report delivered at the Hillside Meeting Sunday afternoon prefaced his statement with high tribute to the one hundred or more cabinet men who have worked with him this year in executing the program. "I want to take this opportunity to thank those with whom I have been connected for the past year in our work in the Y. M. C. A. for your whole-hearted support and cooperation in this work. It is to you that I give all the credit for any success we have attained, and it is upon myself that I inflict the credit for any failures."

Mr. Williams injected at this point a strong recommendation to the effect that in the future the president of the Y. M. C. A. always come from the undergraduate student body, for the following and other reasons: Graduate work makes such heavy demands upon one's time the president cannot give the Y leadership the necessary personal attention; The work of the Y is more directly concerned with the life of undergraduates anyway; The undergraduate is in much closer and more constant contact with the student body than graduates; The undergraduate leadership is closer to the interests of all and can command much closer cooperation on the part of Cabinet members.

This report did not include details on the work of the employed staff, as that is made in a more formal manner to the board of directors at the end of the year. Yet there is naturally a great deal of over-lapping between the work of the cabinet and that of the staff, as in many things they work together. Tribute was also paid to the staff for the leadership and assistance which they constantly gave to Cabinet members.

A summary from the report of Ed Hamer, the treasurer, shows that the greatest single source of income is from the University appropriation which is applied to salaries for the employed staff. The second largest source is from student pledges, with the faculty, alumni, parents and friends as chief among the remaining sources of income. All of these sources together have not been quite sufficient to cover obligations, mainly due to a deficit incurred by the expansion of self-help service which the University was to have taken over but was unable to do because of a budget cut in Raleigh. For the present year students pledged $2564.00, of which amount $1602 have been collected, leaving a balance in uncollected pledges of $962.00. This shortage in collections is due to an unbusiness-like system of collection, making it impossible to reach all the students at the time when they have the cash to take up their pledges.

"We are pleased to announce," said Hamer, "that through an additional most generous act of cooperation on the part of President Chase, we will hereafter be permitted to have the pledges collected by the University Treasurer's office along with all fees and other moneys in the fall quarter. The new pledge form will read: I hereby authorize the University Treasurer to add to my fall quarter bill $—— as my contribution to the Y. M. C. A." This gives every student absolutely free choice each fall as to whether or not he will contribute to the Y. M. C. A. support, and at the same time puts it into the regular machinery of financing his university affairs makes for minimum inconvenience to him. It should be pointed out also that this system gives the Y its title funds at the beginning of the year enabling it to start off with much larger service to the needs of the student body

From parents and friends this year the Y received $540.00 and from the faculty $180.00 with contributions still coming in from faculty up to commencement time.

In addition to a prospect of much larger cash income, there has been effected a reorganization of the employed staff—taking effect September 1st.—which will save something over a thousand dollars on the present pay roll. All of this means that the Y should be able to pay out of its deficit and put about three times as much money into a building service and in programs. In another issue of the Tar Heel there will be an outline of a plan for improving the interior of the Y building to make a much more attractive atmosphere and to greatly multiply its facilities which make for comfort and usefulness. The old policy has been to spend nothing on the old building which it was hoped would soon be replaced by a larger and modern building. The general financial depression will cause us to remain where we are for about four or five more years, and hence the plan for improving the Y as a student center. It is hoped that the student body will cooperate with the pro-

DECATHLON GETS UNDER WAY WITH H. HOUSE LEADING

Brown Leading Regulars With 4,363 Points; Ranson Almost Knocked Out.

With much straining of muscles and anguished distortion of features, the intramural decathlon got off to a start yesterday afternoon amid many weird performances. The whole afternoon was one of fun—for everybody until they ran the 440 yard dash, that is! The meet nearly came to a sad and early finish when the wild heave of a shot putter came within an inch of clipping an ear off of Dale Ranson, track coach and director of the meet, without whom no track contests on the Hill are complete. However, Dale gave a fancy exhibition of the way in which he used to hop about when he was a member of Ruth St. Denis' troupe in his palmy days. Later, someone tried to shoot him with the starting gun and give the old excuse that "he didn't know the gun was loaded" but the gent was foiled, for the gun was filled with blanks, and Dale's second exhibition of high kicking was useless.

In the regular division of the decathlon, Theron Brown hung up a record of 4,363 points out of a possible 5,000 for the five events which were held yesterday. Archie Davis, captain of the frosh cindermen, followed close behind the varsity star with a total of 4,355.3 points. Ruble was third with 4,182.5 points, Goodwin fourth with 4,105.5 points, and Stafford fifth with 4,013.1 points.

In the novice division, closed to all lettermen and numeral men, Henry House, star fullback, was in the lead with 3,983.8 points. Second was Harper with 3,863.7 points, third was Saunders with 3,710.1 points, with Newcombe coming fourth with 3,599.3 points and Wilson fifth with 3,585.5 points.

The sensation of the meet was Henry House, who ran the 100 in 10.4 seconds and the 440 in 55.2 seconds, and, though in the novice class, turned in the best time of both classes for the 100 and was but .2 of a second behind Davis and Stafford, who tied at 55 flat in the regular division. The highest point score of the day in a single event was 981.5 points out of a possible 1,000, rung up by Theron Brown in the discus. The next best single event point scores were Stafford's 961.5 in the high jump and House's 940 points in the 100.

In the discus of the regular division, Brown took first, Davis second and Ruble third. In the 100 yard dash, Arnold and Koenig tied for first in 10.6 seconds, while Davis, Dry, Stafford and Goodwin tied for third in 10.8. In the shot put, Brown took first, Ruble second and Hodges third. In the 440, Davis and Stafford tied for first in 55 seconds, while Jones took third. In the high jump, Stafford was first, Shepherd second, and Goodwin third.

In the discus of the novice class, Newcombe took first, Saunders second and Wilson third. In the 100, Henry House won in 10.4 seconds, Wilson took second, Saunders and Dintsman tying for third. In the shot put, Harper took first, Newcombe took second and House third. In the 440, House took first, Dintsman second and Wilson third. In the high jump, Saunders, Harper and House tied for all three places.

The remaining five events—the broad jump, pole vault, javelin throw, 120 yard high hurdles and three-quarter mile run—will be run off today. Anyone who has not yet entered may do so today, running off the five events which the others have already completed tomorrow. The point scoring system is based on the school records. Anyone tying a record receives 1,000 points, points being deducted for each foot, second—or whatever unit of difference is used—less than the record. Points, thus, are based on performances and not in the order of finishing the event.

In the regular division, Archie Davis rules as a slight favorite to defeat Brown because of his superior ability in the hurdles, broad jump, and three-quarter mile run; however, Brown may make enough points in the javelin, one of his favorite events, to offset the freshman's advantage. Ruble must also be considered in the running because of the huge total he is likely to run up in the pole vault.

In the novice division, House is favored to defeat Harper, over whom he holds a 100-point lead. Harper's best events—the shot and discus—were run off yesterday, and House's speed should carry him in ahead of the big weightman in the hurdles and three-quarter mile. He is also said to be good in the pole vault.

Awards List

A formal list of the three-hundred and eighty-five men receiving awards last night upon the occasion of the annual Awards Night will be published in Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel.

FINAL STUDENT RECITAL GIVEN BY MRS. TROTT

Dyer's Pupil Offers Well Selected Program In Methodist Church.

Mrs. G. Richard Trott, soprano, gave the final student recital of the college year last evening in the Methodist church at 8:30 o'clock, under the sponsorship of the University department of music. Mrs. Trott, a student of Dr. Harold S. Dyer, was accompanied by Mrs. Ruth Sissom Bynum at the piano.

Her program consisted of four parts: (1) "When Blossoms Come" by Grey, "All for You" by Bertrand - Brown, "Floods of Spring" by Rachmaninoff, and "Joy" by Gaul; (2) "Obstination" by Homes, "Mon Desir" by Nevin, and "Faites Lui Mes a Veux" (from "Faust") by Gounod; (3) "Ships of Arcady" by Head, "Winds in the South" by Scott, "Iris" by Wolf, and "Butterflies" by Linn-Seiler; and (4) "Aria" (from Romeo and Juliet) by Gounod.

This recital represents the culmination of a long period of study, here as a student of Dr. Dyer and in the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. During the past year Mrs. Trott was soloist with the University orchestra.

VARSITY NETMEN LOSE TO FROSH AT SEDGEFIELD

Hendlin Downs Grant 6-4, 9-7, For Sole Varsity Victory As First Year Men Score 3-1 Win.

In a series of exhibition matches Sunday afternoon at the Sedgefield Country Club of Greensboro, the freshman racqueteers defeated the varsity players 3-1 in four thrilling duels. The matches were witnessed by a gallery of several hundred spectators who were treated to the best brand of tennis ever displayed on the club courts.

Hendlin was the only varsity player to come through, winning over Bryan Grant in two gruelling sets 6-4, 9-7. Hendlin showed a highly improved game to take the match, his forehand and backhand strokes working perfectly and his service zipping across the net with plenty of speed. Both men tried to take the offensive, but the lanky sophomore had the edge on Grant at the net and this finally decided the match in his favor.

Captain Bill Merritt succumbed to Wilmer Hines, star freshman player, in three hard sets 6-2, 5-7, 6-1. Hines was hitting everything in sight in the first set and allowed the varsity man only two games. Merritt got his eye on the ball in the second stanza and smashed his way through the set to take it at 7-5. Hines got going again in the last set, and ran it out with the loss of but one game.

Lenoir Wright of the freshman team took the measure of Phil Liskin by trimming him in easy fashion 6-3, 6-4. Liskin had his chance in the second set when he led at 4-3, but Wright tightened up his defense and prevented him from breaking through.

Grant and Hines won from Hendlin and Liskin in a match that had the gallery applauding every few minutes, the freshman pair winning by 7-5, 10-8. The freshmen started off fast by taking the first three games. Hendlin and Liskin then started hitting the ball and ran off five straight games. But on set point Liskin double faulted and the freshmen evened the score at 5-5. They then took the next two games to win the set.

The identical thing happened in the second set also when Grant and Hines ran off the first three games. The sophomore pair then took the next five games again, and on set point Liskin once more succeeded in dauble faulting, thus losing the game and making the score 5-5. The lead then sagged back and forth until 8-8, when the Tar Baby couple broke through to take the set.

SCOUT MASTERS' COURSE OFFERED

The scoutmaster's training course which is to be given at Camp Cherokee May 30, 31, and June 1 will major in First Aid training, instructed by W. L. Vaughn-Lloyd of the American Red Cross.

The Cherokee Council was able to secure regional scout executive F. D. Chadwick, of Atlanta, Ga., who will be given a place on the program.

BOXING TEAM HAS GREAT PROSPECTS

Loss Of Captain Allen Will Be Keenly Felt In Welter Division.

Carolina has prospects for a strong boxing team next year, as several men on this year's freshman team will probably be on the varsity lineup.

Since boxing was introduced here, Carolina has been represented by a successful team. The mitmen have not won the Southern Conference championship each year, but they have ranked among the leaders as close contenders for the title each year.

The squad will lose two regular men in Captain Allen and Koenig. Webb and Cohen, two strong reserves, will also finish school in June. This is a great loss to the team, but fresh material is expected to fill successfully the vacancies made by the graduation of these men.

The departure of Allen will be the greatest loss to the team, as he has done outstanding fighting for the past two years. In 1929 Allen won the Southern Conference lightweight championship, and this year he was runner-up in the welterweight division and also won all of his fights previous to the Southern Conference tournament. He lost a very close decision to Captain Rainey of Virginia in the final bout in the welterweight division.

There are several contenders for this weight, among whom are Farris, who has fought in the lightweight class for the past year; Gatlin, a sophomore; and Jackson, a member of the freshman team.

To fill Koenig's weight it is probable that Coach Rowe will shift John Warren to the heavyweight position, while Landis, a freshman star, will take care of the lightheavy-weight. It is not known definitely that this shift will be made but it is very likely.

Much interest has been shown in boxing since it was made a major sport. Many new men were out for the spring workouts who previously had not been active. A still greater number is expected out next fall when the fall practice begins. With much new material the Carolina team will have a good chance to regain the conference title, lost this year.

This year the team had great success in dual meets, winning six out of eight meets. The only teams to win over Carolina were Florida, with a score of 5-2, and Penn State which won a 6-1 card.

Carolina won over Washington and Lee 5-2; V. P. I. 5-2; V. M. I. 4-3; Duke 5-2; Virginia 4-3; and South Carolina 6-1.

The team was handicapped the latter part of the season by the absence of a bantamweight following the loss of Vaughan, and had to forfeit several bouts on this account.

Engineer's Luncheon

The local branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will finish this year's work with a luncheon at the Carolina Inn Wednesday.

All faculty members and students of the A. I. E. E. will attend this meeting. F. B. Kuykendal will be in charge.

FROSH TRACKMEN END SEASON WITH PERFECT RECORD

Stellar Collection of Varsity Prospects Sent Up To Next Year's Squad.

The undefeated freshman track team at the University of North Carolina is sending up a stellar contingent of varsity prospects to bolster the southern championship Tar Heels next season.

The Tar Babies took dual meets from Duke and State first-year teams, won their quadrangular meet with Wilmington, Greensboro and Charlotte high teams, won all three freshman relays in the state meet, setting a new record in the distance medley relay, and set a new record in the two-mile relay at the Georgia Tech relays.

The sprinters and distance runners were particularly strong. Drane and Wornam, sprinters; Mitcham and Watkins, quarter-milers; Jones and Jensen, half-milers; and Cordle, two-miler, appear to be especially good varsity prospects.

Other men who showed well and may push these boys hard are Geiger, sprinter; Brock and Evans, quarter-milers; Gabriel, miler; and Hubbard and Pratt, two-milers.

Davis and Stafford form a fast freshman pair on the hurdles, while especially good varsity prospects in the other field events are Martindale, vaulter; Stafford and Hamlet, high jumpers; Collins, shot putter; and Hodges and Redding, discus throwers.

Other good prospects for the varsity, on the basis of their freshman record, are Harrell and Sheppard, vaulters; Newland and Lindeman, high jumpers; Wornam, Lindeman and Drane, broad jumpers; Davis, shot putter and discus thrower; and Henry and Donnell, javelin throwers.

Dale Ranson, assistant varsity coach, who had charge of the team, regarded this year's outfit as one of the best freshman teams the University has had in several seasons, and thinks a large number of the men will prove valuable varsity competitors next year.

Y. M. C. A. ENDS YEAR HAVING A DEFICIT

posal for building improvements.

There was a reference to the work of the sophomore cabinet and freshman friendship council led by Jack Dungan and Jimmy Kufees, respectively, which was supplementary to that of the general report of the senior president. The reports show that these two sub cabinets have more than justified the vision of the group who a few years ago expanded the organization philosophy of the Y to provide for three cabinets, instead of one as practiced by the mapority of student associations.

This year there have been 56 members of the freshman friendship council, 28 members in the Sophomore cabinet, and 23 members in the junior-senior cabinet, making a total of 107 men who have served actively in cabinet organization. There have also been many students who have come in for short time service with the various committees to cover certain features of the program, but who were not regular members of the cabinet, the weekly cabinet meetings.

These student workers have participated in the work of some nineteen major divisions of the Y program throughout the year, such as building service, work for new students, public occasions, self-help service, special public meetings, conferences, community service, church cooperation, boys club work, discussion groups, deputation work, case work, interracial work, etc. Each of these divisions of the work breaks itself up into details that spread out over the year, such for instance as the special meetings for which outside speakers are brought in. The speakers for the year were as follows: Dr. F. N. Seerley, on sex problems, spoke at three meetings with a total attendance of about 1300 students; Eugene Barnett, on China and foreign relations, spoke at three meetings with a total attendance of 1800; Sir Herbert Gray of England, on philosophy of the British Labor Party, spoke five times mainly to more select groups, to an estimated total of 1100; Governor Wm. Sweet of Colorado, on International Affairs and Christian Standards, spoke twice to a total of 1200; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, on Nationalism and Religion, spoke twice to a total of 1400; and lastly there was a religious symposium at which there were three speakers, Rabbi Krass, of New York, Hon. Paul Douglas of Greensboro, and Dean Elbert Russell of Duke University, on Judaism, Catholicism, and Protestantism, one meeting with attendance of about 550. This makes 16 feature meetings during the year, with an estimated attendance of 7350. This work has been under the leadership of student committees, advised by the employed staff.

The record of the past year, coupled with the policies and plans of President Hamer for the coming year, resulted in a long list of specific recommendations looking to the strengthening of the work at many points. It was especially regarded as essential that the Y seek to render more service to the general social need of the campus mainly through a more attractive use of the building, and consistent contribution to the building of a better democratic atmosphere.

It was also especially pointed out that a greater personal service to individual students must be regarded as the direct responsibility of the Y staff and cabinets, this through what the cabinet calls the "case work and personal service committee."

There are other departments of the University working in this field also, but there is in it as well a unique responsibility for the Y. The recommendations also made plain that there is a demand and need for making it possible for a larger number of individual students to participate directly in Y activities, both from the standpoint of giving them a chance to help with community needs, and in getting practice in the High Art of Human Service.

Students To Vote On Addition To Student Council Today In Y

University students will be asked to vote an addition of one man to the student council during today's balloting for the continuance of the Daily Tar Heel. The council question will be placed on the same ballot with Tar Heel issue.

Since under the present system the student council has only one experienced man, elected from the old group by the incoming members, many students have suggested to President Greene that another man should be selected by the retiring council as its representative on the new body.

All of the present council members and a large number of campus leaders favor this plan since it will provide for two experienced and well-trained men on the council instead of merely one as before. Under this system the membership of the council would then be raised to nine members, avoiding the possibilities of frequent tie votes which might occur when only eight men compose the group.

President Greene asks that the student body give this matter due consideration before casting its vote today along with the Tar Heel ballot from 10 until 5 o'clock.

Geology Students Form Fraternity

At a recent meeting of the students and faculty members of the geology department, a resolution was passed to organize a local chapter of a professional geology fraternity to be named Sigma Gamma Sigma.

The following officers were elected: H. M. Gilbert, president, Darlington, S. C.; W. T. Holland, vice-president, Charlotte; E. R. Scott, secretary, Springfield, Mass.; and W. H. Hadley, treasurer, Siler City. Other charter members are F. M. Prouty, Chapel Hill; I. L. Martin, East Bend; W. A. White, Patterson, N. J.; P. W. Mattocks, El Dorado, Ark.; A. R. Monroe, Salisbury; and C. S. Maurice, Eagle Springs.

Dr. Collier Cobb, Dr. W. F. Prouty, Dr. J. H. Swartz and Dr. G. R. MacCarthy were elected honorary members.

the state to demonstrate teaching methods and learn the problems on the spot; the work of Professor Frederick H. Koch, who is developing a distinctive folk lore in this and other sections; and with the contributions of a number of other University faculty members.

"You are to be congratulated on the quality of your faculty, and no efforts should be spared to hold the men you consider valuable," Mr. Stowe said. "The work of the men I have mentioned above affords very vital and interesting illustrations of education beginning at home. They are doing what some of us like to call 'learning from life.'"

CHASE SENIOR SPEAKER

A crowd of about 150 seniors heard Dr. Chase speak on "The Accomplishments of the University" under the Davie Poplar in the first of the customary senior week meetings. R. D. W. Connor of the history department will speak tonight. No meeting in the future will exceed 15 minutes.

Bob Graham, who is handling the week, is committee chairman and Paul Scurlock was elected song leader for the rest of the meetings. The meeting last night was considered unusually large, considering the lack of advance publicity and that the meeting was the first for this year.

Students Will Vote On Tar Heel Issue Today

ued." Mr. R. B. House, executive Secretary to the President has expressed his opinion as being heartily in favor of the proposed plan for continuing the daily.

Notables Like Tar Heel

Many of the outstanding visitors to the campus during the year have favorably endorsed the Daily Tar Heel. Dr. Herbert Gray, noted for his work with the English Prime Minister, Ramsay McDonald; ex-governor Sweet of Colorado, Kirby Page, editor of the "World Tomorrow," Dr. W. W. Alexander, who delivered the Weil lectures, and many others have spoken favorably of the daily, and have asked for copies of the paper from time to time. These men have had the opportunity to be familiar with the leading college newspapers of the country and all of them think that the publication here compares very favorably with the best.

Burton Craige, member of the Alumni Loyalty Fund committee and noted Winston-Salem attorney, who is a subscriber to the Daily Tar Heel, says, "I enjoy the Daily Tar Heel very much and hope to see it continued." When told that the publications fees here were $5.00 and that the students were being asked to pay an additional 33 1-3 cents per quarter he said that if necessary, it would not be too much to raise the fees to $10.00.

In comparing the publications fees here with the fees at other leading Universities it is seen that all of them run from ten to twenty dollars higher. Harvard fees are $21.00. Others are $16, $19 and $20.

President Red Greene urges all students to go to the polls today and express their opinions on the matter. "It is a question of importance. Shall the University go back to a tri-weekly, or shall it continue to move forward by adding an additional 33 1-3 cents to the comparatively small fee now paid and keep the daily?" stated the student body head.

stands with his hand to his mouth calling the herd of swine, one of the pigs is awaiting the filling of the trough, and the other stands with head turned in the direction of the rest of the herd, as if anxiously desiring the arrival of his companions, so that the feast might begin. The very simplicity and truth of this piece is its most striking merit.

Another piece of the same kind which is extremely good is that of a mother saying prayers with her child at her knees. Mr. Covington's technique in developing these pieces and in the materials he uses are entirely original. He uses Vermont marble, which he crushes up into powder and then mixes with cement, which preparation results in a beautiful and easily workable substance. He invented this process himself, although others, unknown to him, had done it before. Perhaps Mr. Covington's best piece is that of the "Peasant Woman," a set containing three figures. These figures are those of a little boy, his dog, and a woman, plainly of peasant birth and occupation. The lifelike veracity of this piece is its outstanding feature. The woman's bent and toil-worn body, the face lined and serried with wrinkles, the boy's youth and freshness, all go to prove one thing about it —truth!

Mr. Covington has used another of his self-invented preparations in the perfection of this work, which enhances its value very much. It is a bronzing preparation which gives to the piece a hardness of outline and of "soul," which is so necessary to a piece of this general theme type.

This founding of a new school of sculptural art in North Carolina is in direct contrast to the opinion of the country and state that North Carolina is merely a rural district where people are interested solely in the tobacco business, in milling, and, in general, in the "Almighty Dollar." It proves that even on the farm and in the factory a man can develop a soul for art.

Mr. Covington has a son who is doing excellent work in the University's law school now. He is a graduate of Davidson College, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and also a member of Phi Beta Kappa; thence he went to Princeton University, where he took his M. A. in philosophy with honors, transferring to the Carolina law school afterwards.

Publications Union Board.

The required subscription of every student to the four publications assures the board a large circulation and a positive income. When the number of copies that will be sold is uncertain, a larger income must be assured to allow for a poor circulation. With the circulation known in advance, no leeway is necessary and fees can be kept at a minimum. A large circulation also means lower rates from the printer since the more issues published, the cheaper the cost per issue. It costs the P. U. Board $7 for each of the first 1000 Yackety Yacks, and $4 for the next 2500. Similarly, the first thousand Daily Tar Heels cost 5 cents apiece, while the next 2500 cost 2.4 cents apiece. The greater the sales, the lower the cost per issue.

Prior to the advent of the P. U. Board, it was the policy of the editor and the business manager of each publication to divide the profits between themselves. They received no stipulated income, and so the profits paid for their efforts on behalf of the publication. Often the quality of the paper was made poorer in order to include more advertisements and so increase the profits. As much as a thousand dollars per person has been known to have been gained from the publication of a student paper. This division of the profits is still taking place at Duke, State College, and at other institutions. The Publications Union Board here pays the editors, the managing editors and the business managers what their positions demand, and all profits are accumulated for the board. The quality of the publications is not permitted to be sacrificed for the sake of including many advertisements. As the P. U. Board receives all profits, the savings are made for the students and thus fees are kept at a minimum.

In accordance with a rule of the board, no non-paying organizations are given space in the Yackety Yack. The board has felt that every group represented should pay for its share of the cost of printing. In this way student fees are not raised to pay for expenses incurred on account of dead-head organizations. Thus in another way money is saved the student body.

A printing or engraving firm will make a lower bid on work if it knows full payment for the job is assured. Often, when a student publication is supported only by advertising and the possible income that is derived from the circulation (which may or may not be large), not sufficient funds are collected to pay the expenses of publication. With the P. U. Board signing the contracts for all printing and engraving work, those who apply for the jobs know full payment is assured. This, of course, is an important factor in lowering bids. Printers know that the surplus and constant income of the board stands ready to make good all contracts.

The surplus of the board tends to keep it on a stable basis and permits it to take advantage of all possible economies which otherwise would be unattainable. For example, a two per cent discount is given engraving if bills are paid in ten days. With the greater part of its income collected at the beginning of the year and with its surplus, the board constantly takes advantage of such discounts.

In all businesses, certain savings are accomplished, due to the experience of the leaders of the business. Instead of permitting a new group of editors to control the business of publications, letting them learn their errors through experience, and then having them pass on and be succeeded by new editors, the P. U. board has two of its members continue in office from year to year. In this way more experience is constantly being gained which aids in economical management. The entire business of the board is run in a hugely business-like manner. Books are audited yearly by certified accountants, the entire system of bookkeeping was devised by an auditing firm, and bids for printing are examined with a full understanding of the facts. Competitive bids are taken, and identical specifications are required for all bids so that it is easy to determine which is most advantageous. The members of the board make all contracts, so that the experience and knowledge of men who understand the work are used to handle the funds of the students. With its business-like methods, its absolute fairness, and its long experience, the Publications Union Board makes all possible savings for the student body.

From the very beginning it has helped reduce fees wherever possible. The yearly charge for the Tar Heel, the Carolina Magazine and the Yackety Yack, only three publications, was $5.50. Since then the fee has been reduced to $5 despite the fact that the Buccaneer was added, the Tar Heel was made a tri-weekly instead of a weekly, and Yackety Yack charges were reduced. The cost per page for the organizations represented was gradually reduced from $30 to $25. The cost of each individual representative among the seniors was lowered from $10 to $6. Despite all these reductions, the fees were not raised at all. It was only when the Tar Heel was made a daily that an increase of 33 cents a quarter was found necessary. It is to the credit of the P. U. Board that previous to its beginning students paid $5.50 for a weekly newspaper, an annual, and a literary magazine, while but a year ago students paid $5 for a tri-weekly newspaper, an annual, a literary magazine and a comic publication.

Student Body Overwhelms Opposition To Daily By 33-1

W. MEDFORD IS NEW LEADER OF DIALECTIC BODY

Literary Society Chooses Officers At Tranquil Meeting.

At the executive session of the Di Senate last night officers for the fall quarter were elected. Senator W. G. Medford was elected president to succeed Beatty Rector, the present incumbent. Senator J. M. Little was unanimously elected president pro-tem. Senator James Kenan received the position of sergeant-at-arms against no opposition. Henry Wood was elected clerk, and K. C. Ramsay was elected critic.

At a previous meeting Senator Jack Dungan was elected treasurer for the three sessions of the senate next year.

Previous to the elections, reports were received from the finance and ways and means committees. Senator Pat Patterson reported that the senate had a balance of $33 at the end of this year. Senator Medford, chairman of the ways and means committee, reported concerning the work of his committee. Senator Dungan reported for the constitution committee.

New members received their engraved membership certificates following their initiation last week.

BOOK BARREL IN LIBRARY LOBBY

A "conscience barrel" will be placed in the entrance lobby of the library during the examination period next week for the receipt of "outlaw" books, according to library officials. No questions will be asked concerning the return of these erring members of the library book family; guards and spies will not be posted behind pillars to watch the barrel.

"Library books have a way of disappearing from the shelves," said a member of the library staff. "Some are 'borrowed' with the intention of their being brought right back; others are deliberately stolen—a nicer and worse name for the same sort of thing. Many have been left about in the Y, fraternity houses, dormitories, and elsewhere, and have been picked up and appropriated. Books missing for years suddenly show up after being returned on the sly by a conscience-smitten 'patron.' On the other hand, for fear of embarrassing consequences many of the contraband books are never brought in.

"The barrel is not meant as an easy way for all borrowers to evade their library responsibilities. It is intended for the return of those books which are lost, stolen or strayed—and no questions asked."

ENGLISH CLASS IN EXPERIMENT

A novel experiment will be undertaken Thursday night by the class of Mr. W. A. Olsen in English 16. Instead of the usual examination for the quarter a banquet will be held at the Carolina Inn after which, since the class is one in public speaking, each member will be called upon for an after-dinner speech.

German Club Notice

German Club cards may be secured every afternoon from one-thirty to two-thirty and every evening from seven until eight from Will Yarborough at the S. A. E. house. All new members may secure their cards at the same time. A limited number of vacancies remain in the club and these will be filled in order of application. Those desiring to submit applications should send in checks for ten dollars immediately.

SIGMA XI SOCIETY TO HEAR POTEAT

Banquet Tomorrow At Inn To Be Annual Affair For Members And Associates.

The University of North Carolina chapter of the Sigma Xi society will meet Thursday evening, May 29th at an annual dinner. After a dinner at 6:30 P. M., at the Carolina Inn, the newly nominated candidates will be formally initiated. Among these will be Dr. Wiliam L. Poteat who is to address the meeting on a subject of particular interest to investigators in the natural sciences. It is expected that all members of the chapter in Chapel Hill and a number of Sigma Xi members from neighboring communities will be present.

Dr. Poteat, a native of Caswell County, graduated as a bachelor at Wake Forest in 1877, studied later at Berlin and Woods Hole and returned to Wake Forest in 1878. From tutor to professor of biology and President in 1905 his fame as a scientist steadily increased. As a divine of his church, as well as an authoritative biologist, he has been recognized by invitations to lecture at Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., Hamilton Theological Seminary, Colgate, Southwestern Theological Seminary, Texas, and the University of North Carolina. He is a fellow of the North Carolina Academy and was president in 1902; he was honored by Baylor in 1905 with the degree LL. D., and has served his state, church and scientific affiliations continuously, receiving wide-spread recognition and numerous distinctions.

GRAHAM SPEAKS TONIGHT

Professor Frank Graham will speak to the senior class and all others present under Davie Poplar at 7 o'clock this evening. This will be the third of a series of talks to the seniors by members of the faculty. President Chase and Professor Connor preceded Mr. Graham. After the talk, all seniors will be entertained by the Carolina theatre when "The Bad One" will be presented. In order to be admitted as a guest of the theatre, seniors will have to wear their senior regalia.

Greene Presides Over Meeting In Gerrard At Which Extra-Curricular Men Are Honored.

The annual awards night was held in Gerrard hall Monday night before a capacity crowd. Awards were presented to more than three hundred students for distinctive work on the athletic field, publication staffs and various other activities.

"Red" Greene, the president of the student body, was in charge of the meeting. At the opening Ray Farris made a short talk, and later in the program Coach Bob Fetzer made a speech before presenting the athletic awards.

The presenting of the Grail cups was probably the most important part of the evening. Donald R. Waugh got the intramural cup; A. K. Davis the freshman cup; Aubrey Parsley the football medal; R. J. Ruble the track medal; S. M. Cohen the boxing medal; and B. U. Whitehead the baseball medal. These awards are made to athletes with the highest scholastic standing in their respective sports.

The other awards were as follows:

Gordan Gray presented keys to the 39 members of this year's Phi Beta Kappa organization.

Debate council awards were made by Bill Speight to J. W. Baley, R. McB. Fleming-Jones, C. W. Mears, G. P. Carr, H. H. Hobgood, J. C. Wilkinson and J. C. Williams.

EIGHT CASES IN RECORDERS COURT

Murder Trial Is Feature Of Session; Minor Fines Imposed.

Eight cases were tried at the meeting of the recorder's court last Monday. The most serious case was one of attempted murder.

As the story goes, John Norwood, a colored farmer, had asked his son-in-law, Willie Alston, to go out and cut some wood. When Alston refused to obey the order, Norwood rushed at him with a chair and declared that he would kill him. According to a witness the leg of the chair was covered with blood. Alston appeared in court with a bandaged head. The case was found to have probable cause and was held over for the June term of the Orange county superior court.

Mrs. W. E. Trotman, proprietor of the Welcome In Cafeteria, was found not guilty for issuing a worthless check. It came out in the trial that she had informed the recipient that she would give him the check, but that there were no funds to cover it.

H. F. Comer, Y. M. C. A. secretary, was found guilty of violating the parking ordinance near the Y. M. C. A., and was assessed the court costs.

Cases pertaining to violation of the prohibition law predominated in the session. S. T. Wimberly, white farmer and laborer, was found not guilty on a charge of possessing intoxicating liquor.

Pete Pendergrass, colored employee of R. R. Benson, brought up on the charge of possessing liquor, was taxed the cost and

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING TO BE RENOVATED

Ceiling To Be Prepaired, Walls Painted, New Curtains, Rugs And Radio To Be Purchased.

The members of the Y.M.C.A. held a short call meeting Tuesday night at 7:15 in the Y building. The hillside meeting was the last regular meeting but a special meeting was called for the purpose of discussing plans for Blue Ridge and for building repairs.

The president called to the attention of the members again the importance of the Blue Ridge training in next year's work. The leadership training that the members get there will be very valuable to them when they return next year. During the last few years this organization has had a very good representation at the Blue Ridge meetings and have served as leaders at these meetings. This year it seems that they will not have as large a delegation. Twenty men have made definite plants for the meeting and several more are undecided. All men who are interested are requested to call by the Y office and get information.

The second part of the meeting was devited to the discussion of plans for making the Y building more attractive for next year. Because of the dangerous condition of the plastering on the ceilings the University repair department has thought it necessary to cover the ceilings with heavy board. They have also agreed to tint the walls with a prettier color. The next thing necessary is some rugs for the floors. Mr. Comer has agreed to held in this problem. A canvas of the dormitories, fraternities, and private homes is going to be made in which old winter clothes that are useless will be taken up. These will be sent to the Olson Rug Company where they will be made into rugs. Rugs made from old woolen materials are very good and will last a long time. A few years ago the seniors at V. P. I. gave their uniforms for this purpose and secured very fine rugs. No matter what condition the material is in it is useful, since it is washed and the dye is removed before it is made into rugs. The members are calling on all the students to give as much as possible. When you go to pack your trunks for home, just throw out all the old, worn, and soiled winter clothes or clothes that are mostly woollen and the Y. will be glad to send a student around to collect them. If you have any call the Y office, 5011, and give your address. This should not seem such a big request. You must surely have a few things which you will not have any use for this summer and which will only be a bother to you. It will not be so very

STUDENT COUNCIL PROPOSITION ALSO COMES THROUGH

Carries By Large Vote; Means Nine Members of Council.

The Carolina student body, yesterday, by means of the ballot box expressed itself as completely in favor of the continuance of the Daily Tar Heel. By an overwhelming vote of 438 to 13 the increase in the publication fee of 33 1-3 cents per quarter was passed. This is the most overwhelming triumph of any measure brought before the student body in the past decade and possibly the history of the University.

The second proposition voted upon, that of adding an additional member of the student council, was passed by a vote of 330 to 82. This, too, was carried by a decisive though not so overwhelming majority. In accordance with the plan, the ninth student councilman will be elected from their number by the retiring council.

The vote on the two questions was light, only about one-third of the students casting ballots. This was due probably to the fact that the students saw no clearly defined issue. Only one out of every thirty-three who cast ballots were opposed to the Daily Tar Heel. This showed a decided trend in the minds of students in favor of the daily, for last year, when no increase in fees was asked, more than 200 voted to retain the tri-weekly in place of having the proposed daily.

A week ago yesterday the stu-activities committee, representing all the activities on the campus, met at a banquet and decided to submit the Daily Tar Heel question to the vote of the students. Since then no campaigning has been done by anybody either for or against the continuance of the daily paper. The Daily Tar Heel, itself, conducted a campaign through its columns for its continuance and attempted to show the public that its value to it required that the increase in fees be passed. The student council, which submitted the question of its increased membership to the students also received hearty support in attempting to serve Carolina students better.

COBB TO ADDRESS KENTUCKY GROUP

Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the department of geology, leaves this morning for Lexington, Kentucky, where he will be the chief speaker at a memorial service to be held May. 30 for the late Professor Arthur M. The Daily Continues

Despite attempts to burn the Tar Heel office and despite rumors of additional resignations from the faculty and the reality of a 20 percent cut in the University's appropriation we still have the Daily. The announcement by President Greene that the student body had endorsed the proposed increased student fee was a relief. The attempts to destroy the publications' offices along with Alumni building was obvious. The rumors of additional resignations from the already depleted faculty threaten to become actualities. And the cut in the University's appropriation is too much of a reality. But somehow the Daily managed to survive the storm and will continue with the aid of an additional dollar fee.

We believe that with the increased fee the Daily Tar Heel will be of greater value to the campus. This year's paper was neither more nor less than an experiment. Whatever may have been the opinion of it as an experiment we believe that the Daily has a great future before it. Those publishing the Daily this year were trained in the field of the tri-weekly. Complete re-adjustment was necessary. But with a large number of freshmen working this year and with experience gained from this year's work the Daily should of necessity show great improvement. The work of the daily-trained men will naturally be superior to that of tri-weekly trained men.

The Daily is grateful to those whose support provided the means of continued publication. With the passage of the increased fee the Daily passes from an experiment to a reality. Its purpose is to serve the campus. How well it fulfils its purpose will be determined by the support given it by the student body.

Sanctity of the Classroom

"The human race develops by war and succeeds in war in proportion to its use of metal—Races perish in peace—Culture is increased by invention of new weapons—pacifists err in assuming that peace is desirable—We Americans are living in unpaid luxury and must pay in full in blood—."

The above extract from a syllabus by no less a personage than Theodore Jessee Hoover, brother of the President and Dean of the Engineering School at Leland Stanford University, though in itself of unusual interest, was the cause of a controversy which even more directly concerns us as interested observers of the policies and methods employed by collegiate news organs. For upon seeing his somewhat unconventional statements published in the campus paper, the Dean condemned in no uncertain terms the "flagrant violation of a long-established academic privilege—the inviolability of the classroom."

Difficult to define is, indeed, the exact position of a professor lecturing to a class. Faculty members, apparently differing in their opinions on the subject, range from those who exhibit such temerity in exposing their personal views as seldon to contribute any original thought to class discussion, to those willing and anxious to be publicized.

If, however, there exists at present any unwritten and "long-established inviolability of the classroom," it is evident that such a censorship is entirely superficial and useless. The incongruity of supposing that statements made to a class of forty students will be considered of a confidential nature is apparent. It is our belief, furthermore, that seldom are there valid reasons for suppressing opinions which may be considered newsworthy due to the prestige of the author.—J. M. L.

The Parting

In only a few more days a large number of the students will be leaving and going back to the "old home towns." Some will go to homes in other states, some down on the sea coast, others to the mountains, and still others "back to the farm." All of this mixed group, who have worked side by side for this whole year, will part, some never to meet again. As the doors open next year many vacancies and many more new faces will apear.

Some of the vacancies will be due to graduation, others because of financial troubles, and another group because of studies. Those who return will make friends among the newcomers, and will continue the "daily grind" as though nothing has happened. Some day old acquaintances will be run across in the daily run of life, and pleasant (?) "college days" will be recalled to mind.

Although a large number of the acquaintances will be forgotten, still others wil stand out through the years. Many students will go out into the world never to be heard of or seen again; but there will be a few, possibly, out of the present group who will make names for themselves such as this University will be proud of. Yet, no matter what occurs, as was said of the brook, "men may come and men may go, but the University goes on forever."

BRUTON TO LECTURE

Miss Margaret Bruton, graduate student in mathematics, will speak at a mathematics seminar today. Miss Bruton's report will be upon "The Lorentz Transformation in Special Relativity."

A novel advertisement noticed in the lobby of the Y yesterday ran: Wanted—a ride to Alaska at the end of school, willing to buy a gallon of gas.

Readers' Opinions

A WOMAN SPEAKS

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

By the action of the trustees in February, 1897, women were made eligible for admission to the graduate school of this institution. Almost immediately this action was extended so that women were eligible for admission to the two upper classes of this college. Thirty-three years ago the women were recognized by the trustees. Two years ago they were recognized by the faculty through the work of that intelligent and charming faculty member, Dr. Katherine E. Gilbert. The women are yet to be recognized by the men on the campus.

To our fellow students we are not University women but merely co-eds. We have come here not to take advantage of the opportunities offered us by the trustees thirty-one years ago, but to seek pleasure, not intellectual pleasure but the pleasure of indulgence in the thoughtless whims of youth seeking happiness in the forgetting of self, the merging with the herd.

In the eyes of our fellow students we are prof-booters, social climbers, husband seekers. They resent our presence on the campus because it restricts their freedom. They can no longer walk to the gym in bath robes, dress and act slovenly in the class room. But was not this type of freedom restricted in the public high schools from which they came? Was it not restricted in their homes by the presence of their mothers and sisters? Will it not be restricted in a few years by the business public with whom they meet, and later by their wives and daughters? Then why kick about it now?

Many boys say that the co-eds are not the type of girls with whom they wish to associate. Possibly so, but is it not their own fault? Is the type of girl they desire coming to a place where she is not recognized?

The women of this campus have tried to develop athletics, and with what success? Their basketball games are ridiculed, not supported. They have tried to form an Athletic Association. The state would give them no money, the boys would not support their games; so how could it continue?

There is a Woman's Association which efficiently handles the problems arising in the social life of the women. The Woman's Association is recognized in the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Governments. This association requires for membership an enrollment of 300 girls. We do not have that, but the officers of the association were considerate enough to invite us to send a visiting delegate to a convention recently held in Greensboro, and to extend to us an invitation to joint as soon as we had 300 members.

The Student Government of this campus gives us no such recognition. Its officers invited representatives from all over the state to attend the North Carolina Federation of Students held on our own campus. The Woman's Association of this campus was uninvited, yet the head of our dormitory was asked to break one of her most stringent regulations by inviting the representatives from N.C.C.W. to stay in the co-ed house. This was a slap in the face which can be overlooked by neither the head of the dormitory nor the officers of the association.

One-half an hour before the time set for the first session, a committee from the student government, realizing their mistake, came to invite us. It was like an invitation to become a third party on a private engagement. After such an insult the Woman's Association did not care to send a representative.

How can the men of this campus expect wholesome, intelligent, attractive young women to enter a University in which they are subjected to insults and ridicule? How can they expect 200 girls to compete with 2,300 boys and have any success when on every hand they meet with discouragement, ridicule, insults?

Not only are we insulted by this lack of recognition, but by slighting remarks at every turn from the "Carolina Gentleman" of whom we hear so much. We are considered nobodies, dumbells, passing our work only by efficient booting of kindly profs. Our home here is known among a certain group of these Carolina Gentlemen as the "Wench Works."

If it is not a "big week-end" on the campus, we are invited to Grails. We are asked to fraternity dances by our brothers or cousins—perhaps by someone else if his girl from home could not come. Sometimes a few of us are invited to Mid-Winters, Gimghoul dances or Gorgons Head dinners—only to have it rubbed in that we are merely co-eds. We are slighted for the wealthy society belles who come many miles for the dances. Who gives the University its social reputation? Is it the co-eds? No, the visiting girls return to all parts of this state and others with tales of boys, fraternities, house parties.

When the men here fail to recognize us, ignore, even insult our organizations and activities, and fling abroad slighting remarks about us, do they realize that they, the gentlemen of the University of North Carolina are slandering a part of their own Alma Mater?

BARTON EXPLAINS SENIOR'S WORRIES

Bruce Barton, widely known author and magazine writer, has written an article particularly designed for college students called "Sheepskin Blues," which appears in the June issue of Good Housekeeping.

Mr. Barton's story should be of especial interest to University seniors, as it deals with the problems of a future career that are facing all June graduates. "Every era seems to Youth to be too late," declares Bruce Barton. "Always the great things have just been finished—the great battle won, the great mergers completed, the great new industries started and brought to maturity. Always there is nothing great left to be done. Yet every age develops its unforeseen new problems, its new inventions creating new industries, its new opportunities for glory and for wealth.

"If these opportunities seem invisible or unattainable on the day that one stands, with his college years behind him, looking into a world that is already full, such an one may encourage himself with the reminder that Time has never yet failed to provide the openings. I think it is only fair to add that often those who suffer most severely from 'sheepskin blues' experience that greater suffering because they are gifted with greater imagination, which in the long run will carry them farthest.

"The heights of Commencement Day have been followed promptly by the valley of discouragement in some of the best and greatest lives. The valley is a normal feature of the journey, and perhaps a necessary one. But for those who do not lose their courage there is a firm foothold and a chance to climb, and it is only just a few steps farther on."

REGISTRATION IN COAST-TO-COAST TOUR INCREASES

Plans Are Nearing Completion; Expect An Eventful Summer, Beginning June 7 and 8.

Plans for the University of North Carolina transcontinental study tour are nearing completion, according to announcement received today from the office of R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension division. The party of student-travelers is to be divided into two sections, the first, or natural science section, leaving Chapel Hill on Saturday, June 7, the social science section following on Sunday, June 8.

There is every indication that the trip from North Carolina to the Pacific coast will be an eventful and a successful one. The combination of educational values with the advantages of travel offers unusual opportunity to teachers, students and others interested in spending a summer of travel and study. Courses in geology, botany and general science will be offered in the first section, with abundant opportunity for first-hand study and observation en route. In the social science section courses dealing with the study of modern social problems, physical geoghaphy and economics wil be open to registrants. Each course offered will carry University credit. For those desiring to raise teachers' certificates, each course offers four semester hours certification credit.

The itinerary of the tour includes the most interesting of the cities from North Carolina to the west coast, with frequent stops for sightseeing, field work and observation. There will be a stay of three days in the Yellowstone National Park; two days will be spent in the neighborhood of the Grand Canyon.

The two motorcades will reach California by June 28 and will return to Chapel Hill August 3.

Registrations for both sections of the party are coming in so rapidly that, for educational reasons, it may become necessary in a very short while to limit the membership. Those interested should communicate without delay with the extension division office to apply for reservation.

The majority of those composing the tour membership are from North Carolina. The following states are also represented: Virginia, Florida, Tennessee, New York, South Carolina, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and Georgia.

Novel Window Display

In the window of the Students' Supply Store there is a unique window display. Pictures of five children were taken in bathing suits, and enlarged by the photographers to about three-fourth life size. Odell Sapp colored them, and they are arranged in the window with a background of water and actual sand in the foreground. This arrangement was made by Herbert Ledbetter. By adding a few little things such as shells, small sand shovels, and sand buckets a very lifelike picture is presented. The display is an advertisement for the Kodak company.

Pictures were made of the following children: Bill, age three, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Pritchard; Walton, age five, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Andrews; June, age four, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cheek; Georgia, age four, daughter of Mrs. George B. Logan; and Baylor, age seven, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Henninger.

ODUM IS AUTHOR OF NEW VOLUME

"An American Epoch" Receives High Praise From Many Sources.

Dr. Howard W. Odum has just written a new book which is at present on the press, called An American Epoch: Southern Portraiture in the National Picture. It is being published by Henry Holt and Company and will be on sale soon.

The book has been highly praised by several prominent literary figures. Walter Lippman, editorial writer for the New York World, said of the book: "I congratulate you on the achievement of a difficult task. Your fairness and sympathy will establish the confidence of your readers in all parts of the country. . . . I'm delighted this book is to be published soon. It revives in me the feeling I have had for years: that the adventure of American life today is in the South."

Gerald Johnson, formerly connected with the University, wrote: "I find the book highly interesting, moderate in tone and therefore persuasive and, as far as I am able to judge, scrupulously accurate. . . . A fine book. an admirable book . . . a big job magnificently done."

"The book abounds in authentic pictures, sound history, beautiful writing, sincere feeling. honest criticism, with all-pervading sympathy," says Benjamin Kendrick.

Mrs. McCormick once boasted, or so Washington gossips say, that she has no manners. but Charlie Deneen dissents. He thinks she has manners enough—all bad.—Lynchburg News.

WARREN TO BOX MIDDLEKAUF AT DURHAM FRIDAY

Both Men Are Former College Stars; Middlekauf Under Management of Johnston.

Ad Warren, graduate of the class of 1927 at the University and a former captain of wrestling and star boxer here, will try to go up another step on the ladder to the "big money" when he fights Bill Middlekauf in the Durham Bulls' El Toro Park Friday night. Middlekauf is well known to southern sport fans, having been an all-southern fullback in 1927 and 1928 while a student at the University of Florida.

Middlekauf also received much mention for all-American honors during these years, because he was not only a skilled player along ordinary lines of play, but was equally proficient at kicking with left or right foot and at passing with left or right hand. After being graduated from college, Bill went into the ring game, in which he had gained some experience as a heavyweight on the Florida team. He put himself under the management of Jimmy Johnston of New York, one of the best in the game, and thus became a stablemate of Mike McTigue, former 175-pound champ; Pete Latzo, former welter champ, Yale Okun and Phil Scott, who were also under the management of Johnston. The former Florida gridiron hero soon became one of the best of the newest crop of pugs, having fought such good men as Lou Scozza of Buffalo, a prominent New York headliner, and Les Marriner, former University of Illinois football star. He is also said to hold a decision over Sully Montgomery, one time Centre College grid star who holds a decision over Jimmy Maloney, who, in turn, holds a decision over Jack Sharkey.

Recently, he acted as Phil Scott's sparring partner during the lanky Briton's training session prior to his fight with Jack Sharkey in Miami. At that time he boxed a four-round exhibition bout with Tommy Loughran, former 175-pound champion who fought in the semi-final to the Sharkey Scott fiasco.

At present Warren, Marriner, Knute Hansen and Middlekauf are the leading ex-collegian heavyweights in the ring game, with Marriner receiving first recognition now in place of Hansen, who has been knocked out frequently of late after having made a place for himself as one of the leading contenders for the heavyweight championship. All of these men are former football players—Warren at Carolina, Marriner at Illinois, Hansen at Nebraska and Middlekauf at Florida.

This fight with Middlekauf means much to Warren, for if he should eliminate the Floridian he will be able to get a bout with Marriner for the mythical collegiate pro championship, and should give him the opportunity to make a lot more money than he is at present.

Ox Shuford, another ex-Carolinian, and captain of the Tar Heel boxing team in 1929, is listed to fight Bill Suggs, Chapel Hill boy and a U. N. C. student during part of this year.

INTRAMURALS END WITH GREAT YEAR

Increase In Interest and Participation Marks Close Of Campus Athletics.

With the final championship definitely settled last week, intramural athletics closed its most successful year in the history of dormitory and fraternity competition. The past year witnessed a large increase in interest and participation, both by teams and individuals. More than fifty teams were entered in the various sports and the number of contestants in each event broke all previous records.

The teams have cooperated very well with the intramural officials and have shown a fine spirit of sportsmanship. Every championship has been closely contested. The introduction of coaches in boxing, wrestling, fencing, and track, and competent officials in all sports has considerably raised the standards of play, and it is expected that next year a larger number of athletes will be graduated to the varsity squads.

The intramural department under the direction of "Bo" Shepherd, with Wallace Shelton and Mac Gray as his assistants, has functioned very well; and these supervisors deserve special praise for their whole-hearted efforts and fine administration in making the past year the best one since the inauguration of intramural sports.

Shepherd is the director and general manager for this department. Shelton is the assistant director and is in charge of making up the schedule, looking after the equipment and compiling statistics. Gray is field supervisor and is at the head of several sports.

The Beta Theta Pi fraternity led the Greek lodges during the past year and took four championships to head the all campus list. New Dorms won four pennants in the dormitory conference to lead their league and took one all-campus award.

New Dorms and Beta Theta Pi met for the campus football championship, with the Betas winning in a spectacular game. Aycock met the Dekes in basketball with the former taking campus honors. In baseball Lambda Chi Alpha met New Dorms for the second successive year and avenged their loss of last year by taking the title in a fast game.

Tom Watkins won first place in the Cake race held last fall, and was closely followed by Joe Pratt. Ninety-eight finished this race out of a field of 106.

The Betas won from New Dorms in a close match for the tennis championship, and in addition won the titles in track and fencing. New Dorms won the wrestling cup, and the Dekes presented a fine array of amateurs to take the boxing trophy.

Don Waugh was presented with the Grail award for the individual high point scorer during the year. He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity and took part in nearly every sport. He was high point scorer in the track meet by a large margin.

The intramural program this year has furthered the purpose of the department by giving every student an opportunity to take part in some competitive sport. Indications point to an even more successful season next year with another record-breaking number of participants.

SYRACUSE RACER SETS OUTBOARD RECORD FOR CUP

Stewart Nunneley Wins Skaneateles, New York, Races To Average 41.76 Miles Per Hour.

The performance of Stewart Nunneley, one of the Syracuse entries in the Eastern Intercollegiate Outboard races at Skaneateles, New York, recently, has eclipsed the success of scores of other student drivers who have competed in the five speed boat regattas already sponsored this spring. Nunneley, pressed by the most expert young pilots in the east, drove his "Deke" to a new American record in the class D event, division I.

The Syracuse boy sped over the five-mile course in the remarkable time of 7.11 minutes, for an average of 41.76 miles per hour. His Brobeil boat was equipped with a Johnson 32 motor. Nunneley was also winner in the class C race, division I. Bill Crawford, captain of the Colgate University outboard team, was the high individual scorer. He was awarded two gold cups for first in class B, division II and class C, division II. Crawford was also second in two other events.

Twenty-three students from 13 different colleges and universities motored to Lake Skaneateles for the regatta. The schools represented were Colgate, Syracuse, Brown, Cornell, Princeton, Dartmouth, St. Johns, Rensselaer, New York University, St. Lawrence, Toledo, Hobart and Cortland. Colgate, Syracuse, Dartmouth and St. Lawrence finished in order in the team standings. The relay race, the first event of its kind ever staged, was also won by Colgate.

Seven colleges entered the Southern California Intercollegiate Gold Cup races at Los Angeles: Occidental, Southern California, U. C. L. A., California Tech, Glendale, Ventura and Long Beach. Joe Carver of U. C. L. A. and Art Kussman of Southern California were the most successful of the young coast drivers. The former was first in clas B and Kussman won the gold trophy in class C, but trailed Herb Stovall across the finish line in the class D race. Seventeen students took part in the meet. Kussman and Stovall drove Evinrude motors and Carver's craft was powered with a Johnson.

Eight boats from Purdue, Northwestern and Butler were driven over a five-mile course on the Wabash River at Lafayette, Indiana, in the Purdue regatta. Homer Van Meter, one of the Boilermakers' entries, defeated "Red" Woodworth of Northwestern in the free-for-all, and Art Reinking of Butler won the class C race.

Harold Bloomfield of Illinois, and Vern Wagner and Jesse Shufeldt of the University of the of the City of Toledo took firsts in the three races held on the Maumee River at Toledo. The Gold Cup race at University, Alabama, was over a ten mile course. Five students from the University of Alabama started, and the winter was A. E. Byerlein, who used a five-cylinder Cross radial motor.

GOLF TEAM ENDS TOUGH SCHEDULE

Tar Heels Finish Season With Eight Wins and Only Two Losses.

Carolina's golfers have made an auspicious beginning in their first year of official competition. The Tar Heel's advent into the realm of golf appears to be one of future leadership.

Carolina has gone through a rather difficult schedule turning out eight wins and only two losses in the dual matches. One of these losses was to Duke, who had been vanquished by Carolina earlier in the season by the overwhelming score of fourteen and one-half to three and one-half, while Duke beat Carolina by the very close score of nine and one-half to eight and one-half later.

Incidently in the last Duke match, June Adams was substituting for stocky Benny Goodes, who had previously defeated the Duke man, Taggart, winning three points from him while Adams lost three points to Taggart in the final match with Duke. Carolina won the State Intercollegiate Championship and came in fourth in the team championship at Birmingham, Alabama, in the Southern Conference Intercollegiate Tourney.

The low scores for the year were 147 for Meade Willis against Duke at the Hope Valley course, and 150 for Benny Goodes against Davidson at Sedgefield.

The men who played on this year's team were: Charlie Chatham, Meade Willis, Luther Steward, Benny Goodes, and June Adams who participated in the last two matches.

A brief of this season's dual matches is:

Carolina 14; Virginia 4
Carolina 12; William and Mary 6
Carolina 18; Wake Forest 0
Carolina 14 1-2; Duke 3 1-2
Carolina 8 1-2; Ga. Tech 9 1-2
Carolina 10 1-2; Vanderbilt 7 1-2
Carolina 15; Davidson 3
Carolina 15; State 3
Carolina 8 1-2; Duke 9 1-2
Carolina 10 1-2; Virginia 7 1-2

COFFIN WINS IN SECOND FLIGHT AT HOPE VALLEY

O. J. Coffin, head of the University department of journalism, came through the second flight finals in the annual Hope Valley Country Club tournament Monday afternoon with a four and three win over C. F. Williams of Raleigh.

Bill O'Connor won the spring golf championship in a closely contested one-up victory over George Lyon. Other winners were: Donald MacKay who defeated James DeHart three and two in the third flight, and N. B. Lockwood, who defeated H. G. Hedrick by the same score in the fourth.

Weather Forecast

Chapel Hill and vicinity: Cloudy and possibly showers. Little change in temperature.

Election Of Track Captain Postponed

Due to the inability of the track squad to reach an agreement, the election for captain was postponed indefinitely. It is possible that there will not be a regular captain next season, but one chosen by the coaches before each meet and an honorary captain elected at the close of the season.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING TO BE RENOVATED

much trouble to you, and think how much it will mean to the appearance of the Y building to have fine rugs to go with the repairs.

The University funds have made it impossible to get the long expected Y building and the present building will not last for ong without some repair. Along with the rugs and repair the repair committee have drafted into service some old furniture that has been stowed away in the store room. In addition to these things the Y members are going to persuade a certain radio company to install a radio in the building.

With the improvements mentioned above accomplished the Y.M.C.A. building will present a better atmosphere and will furnish a place for the students to gather. The Y members sincerely hope that all the students will give their hearty cooperation and help them succeed by giving what clothes you can to the boys that will be appointed to go to the various rooms to collect them. Cooperate and make it a success.

put on probation.

Frank Smith, a colored laborer, was found guilty of public drunkenness and sentenced to one month on the roads. On another case which was brought up against Smith and his friend, James Godwin, the two were found guilty of selling and transporting liquor. Each was sentenced to eight months. The men had a very fantastic story of how they started out fishing with a car and a sawed-off shot gun. It was night and before going far they had tire trouble. Just at the spot that they stopped, the headlights of their car showed several gallons of liquor hidden in the woods. This sight diverted them from their fishing intent and they decided to load the liquor on the car and take it with them. Soon two drunken negroes with a sawed-off shot gun had been arrested driving a car.

Roosevelt Guthrie, colored laborer, was found in a drunken condition and was fined $5 and the costs.

FINAL ISSUE SATURDAY

The final issue of the Tar Heel for the year will be distributed Saturday of this week. Announcements or news others than assigned stories by reporters must be in Friday at 4 o'clock.

D. K. E. FRATERNITY ANNOUNCES NEW HELLENIC AWARD

Cup Will Be On Display At Pritchard-Lloyd; Winner To Be Made Public Soon.

The D.K.E. fraternity announces the donation of an annual cup to be given to the fraternity most outstanding in scholastics and athletics on the campus. The qualifications upon which the award is given include the general average of the fraternity, and its athletic activities, with intramural competition and the number of members holding positions on major teams taken into consideration.

The fraternity to receive the cup this year has not yet been selected, but the cup will soon be on display in Pritchard and Lloyd's drug store. An announcement of the winner of the cup will be made in the near future.

The fraternity winning the award two years in succession will be entitled to permanent possession of the cup. Also, the D.K.E. lodge will not be eligible for consideration in selecting the winner of the trophy.

This award, being the first of its kind on the campus, is intended to promote better feeling between the campus fraternities and to provide for them an incentive for better scholarship and increased interest in athletics.

Wins Theatre Prize

Marjorie Bartholomew Paradis, mother of two children and author of two recent novels, won the $1,000 prize offered by Samuel French & Co. and the Theatre Arts Monthly Cup in the first annual National Long Play Tournament held last week at the Waldorf Theatre, New York, with her three-act comedy, "The New Freedom," presented by the Morningside Players of Columbia University. Mrs. Paradis' two novels, "The Caddis" and "A Dinner of Herbs," both deal with aspects of woman's freedom in modern family life.

EUROPEAN TOUR BEGINS JUNE 14

Dr. J. C. Lyons Announces Complete Plans For Sixth Residential Trip To France.

Dr. J. C. Lyons, director of the University Residential Tour to France, announced recently that those making the trip will sail June 14 from New York on a Holland-American line steamer. The group will return September 1, sailing from Southampton.

The purpose of the tour is to provide for very comprehensive travel in Europe for those who wish a wide travel experience, and to give to students and teachers who wish to use the summer for educational purposes, the opportunity to study in a European university.

This is the sixth tour of this type Dr. Lyons has directed and the third under the auspices of the University extension division. The group will arrive Boulogne-Sur-Mer on June 22 and will continue to Paris. A week will be spent there in sightseeing, including taking two motor trips out of the city.

From June 30 to August 3 those interested in studying will attend the summer school at the University of Grenoble, under the direction of Dr. Lyons. Grenoble, next to the Sorbonne at Paris, is the outstanding summer school in France attended by Americans.

During the stay at Grenoble, optional trips to the Riviera, to the Chateau Country, and to Southern France will be organized. Those who desire to get credit for their work at Grenoble will have to take courses given by Dr. Lyons.

For those who do not care to attend summer school, an Italian trip to include Genoa, Rome, Naples, Florence, Venice, and Milan will be arranged. On August 4, the two groups will join again and travel together to Geneva and will then climb Jungfrau, see the Passion Play at Oberammergau, and go down the Rhine by steamer. Those who are desirous of returning home early will then go to Rotterdam to return to New York on the S. S. Volendam. The rest of the party will visit England for three days and will leave for home from Southampton.

The group will be entirely collegiate and will consist of 17 students, Dr. Lyons and Miss Bain, counsellor of women. Those students who up to now have decided they will go are: R. V. Brawley, D. J. Craig, T. Craig, W. Draper, T. Wright, D. C. McCotter, J. M. McCotter and Miss Tabitha Hutaff. About ten girls not attending the University are expected to join the group.

TOURISTS SPEND MONEY AT BEACHES IN VIRGINIA

At least $3,624,260 is being put into circulation annually by tourists visiting the Norfolk-Portsmouth - Virginia Beach - Ocean View area, and this fact is more or less directly the result of the backing that has been given the Norfolk-Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce in its advertising schemes, according to a circular letter recently sent out by Francis E. Turin, advertising manager of the Chamber of Commerce, to the subscribers to the community advertising fund.

Mr. Turin's report states further, "Due to the work now made possible through the support given, the Norfolk-Portsmouth area is now recognized as one of America's great resort centers."

The advertising department is also issuing the third run of the folder on the attractions of the area.

RACKETS LEGAL; WORK IS FOLLY

Such Is Finding Of Sub-Committee For Industrial Democracy.

The choice of rackets in planning a life-work is fully as broad as the field of legitimate professions, in most cases equally respectable, and by far more remunerative. These are the findings of a sub-committee of the League for Industrial Democracy assigned to choose a subject for discussion at the 16th annual June Conference of the league.

With so many congenial and remunerative "rackets" to choose from, work has been found to be folly. Under the general heading of "The Folly of Work—Racketeering High and Low," twenty authorities on assorted rackets will address the four-day conference to be held at Camp Tamiment, Forest Park, Pa., from Thursday, June 26, to Sunday, June 29, inclusive. Stuart Chase, Heywood Broun, Norman Thomas and Professor Paul Douglas of the University of Chicago are among those who will discuss the rackets that beckon to every young man and woman.

Most Rackets Found Legal

In surveying the field of rackets, the program committee has found the substantial rackets largely within the law. Therefore, while the conference will give due consideration to the puny racketeering that places gang-murders on a stabilized cash basis, other sessions of the conference will consider what the committee feels are more exalted rackets: real estate, public utilities, insurance, mergers, advertising and politics.

Camp Tamiment, where the conference will take place, is located at Forest Park, Pa., in the Pocono Mountains. The camp is a few hours of travel from New York City and Philadelphia and is accessible by automobile over excellent roads. Particulars concerning reservations may be obtained from the League for Industrial Democracy, 112 East 19th Street, New York City.

EDITORS REVEAL LIFE WORK PLANS

Lawyers, Diplomats, Journalists, Predominate On Census List Of Tar Heel.

(By Hugh Wilson)

One naturally would think that a census taken of the chosen life occupations of the staff of the Daily Tar Heel would show that the mapority were budding journalists. On the contrary, such is not the fact. The census revealed that the daily paper's office houses a nest of embryo lawyers, most of whom believe that their training in hounding down news will be of use to them later in gathering up evidence, and also feel that what editorial writing they may have the opportunity of doing will help them in later years to draw up good arguments for presentation to juries.

The Editor, Will Yarborough, has no intention of being swayed by these up and coming upholders (?) of the law, being a newspaper man, heart and soul. Will intends to go into newspaper work somewhere, but has not yet definitely decided where.

The Managing Editor, Jack Dungan, is also an ardent "news hound." Jack intends to go into newspaper work, preferably a small town weekly in North Carolina, but as he is only a rising junior has lots of time to decide where.

When it comes to the Associate Editors, whose duty is to write editorials, a different story is found. Beverly Moore, chief Associate Editor, intends to go into the practice of law, as do K. C. Ramsay and J. C. Williams. They believe that the training they will receive in argumentative writing will aid them in the practice of law later.

The Sports Editor, Browning Roach, intends to continue his sports writing next year on one of the large Birmingham dailies if possible.

Among the City Editors and members of the Editorial Board approached, Holmes Davis declared for banking, Ed Yarborough, Alan Lowenstein, Henry Anderson and J. M. Little for law, Roulhac Hamilton for advertising, Ed French, W. A. Shulenberger, E. C. Daniel and Sherman Shore for journalism, and Henry Wood for the diplomatic service.

Jack Bessen, Assistant Sports Editor, is another embryo member of the country's legal talent.

Ten of the reporters are to enter the legal profession, while but two intend to be journalists. Two reporters expect to become merchantile magnates, two are future bankers, one will be an engineer, one a Wall Street financier, and one an educator.

Thus it is seen that there are 18 lawyers on the staff and but 9 journalists.

A census taken of the states from which the Tar Heel men come showed that 41 men are from North Carolina, 3 from New York, and one each from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and the District of Columbia.

INVENTION WOULD HAVE ENDED FILIBUSTERING

The first patent that Thomas A. Edison ever took out (the date was June 1, 1869) was for an electrical apparatus designed "to record and register in an instant and with great accuracy the votes of legislative bodies." In his newest and last book, "Short Talks on Science (Century) the late Dr. Edwin E. Slosson records the fact that when Edison submitted this invention to a committee of legislators at Washington, they turned it down with the explanation that it would do away with the practice of filibustering, and hence was undesirable.

FOREIGN POLITICS FORUM PLANNING GREATER ACTIVITY

A Group Of Leading Diplomats And Students Of Diplomacy To Be Invited To Speak.

Meeting in Saunders hall last night the Foreign Politics Forum discussed plans for next year. It was decided that a group of leading diplomats and students of diplomacy will be invited here to speak on the various phases of foreign policy.

The group decided to permit faculty men to join the group as well as students, so that a more varied discussion of this type of work may be had. Professor K. C. Frazer told of several men prominent in the field of international politics who may be secured for a series of lectures, and suggested means of getting them to the University.

Professor E. C. Metzenthin emphasized the importance of studying this subject, and urged the group to bring the most fitted men here for talks. He stated that speakers not definitely connected with the government would be able to give more unbiased discussion than officials of the government and urged the group to consider that fact.

Several of the student members made suggestions as to the means of financing the forum's affairs. It was decided that the club would meet regularly every other week, and at such times as outstanding speakers could be secured.

Bob Graham, president of the forum, appointed an executive committee to map out plans for the coming year.

BRUTON LECTURES UPON RELATIVITY

The final meeting for the year of the mathematics seminar was held yesterday afternoon with Miss Ruth Bruton as speaker. Miss Bruton gave a report upon the subject of "The Lorentz Transformation in Special Relativity."

The meeting yesterday closed a successful year for the seminar. A number of interesting reports have been given by the members of the mathematics department. There have also been addresses by members of other departments, which is particularly gratifying in the fact that other departments of the University are showing interest in the seminars.

Among those who have spoken this year are Dr. Archibald Henderson, G. R. Trott, R. L. Garrett, J. J. Slade, Jr., M. A. Hill, Dr. L. E. Mackie, Dr. Arthur Winsor, Mrs. J. C. Wilson and Miss Margaret Bruton, all connected with the department of mathematics. Professor Horace Williams of the department of philosophy, and Professor A. M. Jordan of the department of education, are men of other departments who have addressed the seminar.

A. I. E. E. ENDS YEAR

The student branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers terminated its work of the year with a luncheon at the Carolina Inn yesterday.

Several talks were given by members of the various classes represented. Professor John E. Lear, acting head of the electrical engineering department, gave the principal address.

Senior Talk

Bob House will speak at the meeting of the senior class tonight at 7:15 under the Davie Poplar. This talk will be the fourth of a series of talks that have been given to the class by members of the faculty. At 11:00 tonight all seniors will be admitted to the Carolina theatre free of charge to see the show Dolores del Rio in the "Bad One." In order for any member of the class to be admitted, it will be necessary that he wear his regalia.

FOURTH BIRTHDAY PUBLIX-SAENGER TO BEGIN JUNE 1

Carolina Will Offer Strong Programs For Next Month.

The fourth anniversary of the Publix-Saenger Theatres, of which the Carolina Theatre is a representative, will begin next week and last for a month.

The Publix-Saenger Theatres company was organized four years ago by H. F. Kincey and R. B. Wilby. At that time, the company consisted of eleven theatres located in Greensboro, Durham, and Fayetteville. It now consists of twenty-eight theatres housed in modern and imposing buildings, in the leading cities of the state, such as Raleigh, Greensboro, and Winston-Salem.

This organization was the first to install talking pictures in North Carolina. In keeping with the policy to give the public the best pictures at the smallest cost, the company has affiliated with the Paramount-Publix Company which enables it to buy films cheaper than an individual company; this affiliation enables the company to get films sooner than it would otherwise.

The Publix-Saenger organization has its headquarters in Greensboro, with Mr. Kincey as general manager. The company was fortunate in obtaining the services of M. S. Hill as field manager a year ago. Mr. Hill is now known as one of the biggest showmen in the country, and his personality has won for him many friends in this section as well as over the state.

According to E. Carrington Smith, manager of the local Publix-Saenger Theatre, the company will soon show the greatest line of moving pictures ever presented in any theatre during one month.

Some of the films listed for the anniversary month are: Clara Bow in "True to the Navy;" "Journey's End;" Buddy Rogers in "Safety in Numbers;" Billie Dove in "The Notorious Affair;" Richard Barthelmess in "Son of the Gods;" Buster Keaton in "Free and Easy;" and other of the best films.

It is now said that no boy should be denied the enjoyment of fishing. Spare the rod and spoil the child.

SAVILLE CLOSES TAYLOR SEASON

Speaks To Club On Power Plant Management As Industrial Factor.

Presenting a paper, "Power Plant Management as a Problem of Industrial Management," Thorndike Saville spoke before the University student branch of the Taylor Society Tuesday evening at its last meeting of the year.

In his paper Mr. Saville, who is professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering at the University and chief engineer of the state department of Conservation and Development, presented an impartial discussion of the merits of the two sources of power for industrial organizations, purchase from a public utility and generation in a private power plant.

Because of the rapid advancement of motorization during recent years and the growth in the use of electricity, electrical power was the only kind considered in the paper.

Professor Saville discussed the relative advantages of the two methods and described conditions under which it would be more economical to use one or the other source.

"The decision on which source of power to resort to is a matter which requires a great amount of careful analysis of many complicated factors by both the industrial manager and the most expert consulting engineers available," stated the speaker.

Many combinations of the two methods are available for use under different conditions, but the most economical combination can be determined only after a complete study of the conditions has been made.

In offering an analysis of the two methods of supplying power, Professor Saville discussed the factors which should be investigated before an organization decides to purchase its power from a public utility. In a like manner he spoke of the three sources of power that can be used in a private power plant of an organization which decides to generate its own power.

In conclusion, Professor Saville stated that the decision on which source of power should be used is one requiring much careful analysis of many complicated factors by men expert in this line of engineering.

The meeting Tuesday evening brought to a close the year's activities for the local branch of the Taylor Society, the international organization for the promotion of scientific management. During the winter and spring quarters a series of outside speakers have presented papers before the group on subjects related to scientific management.

Editor Apologizes

Boston, May 28—Paul Brooks, head of the Harvard Lampoon, which yesterday caricatured Mayor James M. Curley, has apologized in writing to the mayor, and Mr. Curley announced that in view of the extreme youth of the editor he had accepted the apology. Previously the mayor indicated that possibly he might sue the undergraduate publication for libel.

A cartoon had pictured the mayor as standing before a liquor-laden table, addressing an intoxicated audience.

RARE ZOOLOGICAL BOOK FOUND HERE

Miss Alma Holland of Zoology Department Is Responsible For Discovery.

While reading an apparently authentic biographical sketch of Dr. John Edwards Holbrook, a distinguished Charleston naturalist living in the early part of the last century, Miss Alma Holland of the clerical staff of the botany department noted the reference to Holbrook's North American Herpetology as a fine monograph well known to zoologists everywhere.

The first edition, said the eminent biographer, writing from the Smithsonian Institution to the National Academy, appeared in three volumes. Following her bent for meticulous care in verification, Miss Holland proceeded to the department of zoology where she found that Holbrook's North American Herpetology had been long held as a prized possession. But they handed her four volumes.

There was an obvious conflict between fact and statement. The four volumes were evidently of the first edition, but the fourth volume did not exist, according to what seemed the best bibliographical authority.

The problem was soon solved by correspondence with the Smithsonian Institution, from which source it was learned that the rare fourth volume had been unknown to the generally very reliable author of the biographical sketch at the time of his writing and that there was still no copy of it in the libraries in Washington; there was believed to be one in the library of the Academy of Sciences in Philadelphia.

BRECKENRIDGE TO UNDERTAKE LEGAL RESEARCH WORK

Employed By Interstate Commerce Committee In House Of Representatives.

Professor M. S. Breckenridge of the University of North Carolina School of Law has been employed to undertake extensive legal research on behalf of the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the National House of Representatives.

Professor Breckenridge is a specialist in the law of corporations and has always been particularly interested in the corporate angles of the business of railway transportation. On account of his experience in this field he has been selected by Dr. W. M. W. Splawn, counsel for the Committee and is one of the nationally recognized experts on railway transportation, to assist him in preparing a report upon the subject of railway holding companies.

Those who have been watching developments among railway organizations recently have noticed a marked tendency toward the formation of companies for the purpose of holding stocks in other railway companies. The possibility of indirectly bringing under one control many railway units in this manner is one that has been causing some interest.

Professor Breckenridge will devote the summer to this work establishing his headquarters during that time in Washington.

Hibbard Resigns Post Here To Accept Northwestern Offer; Ninth Man To Leave Carolina

To Head Liberal Arts College; Holds Same Position Here.

FACULTY HARD HIT

Hibbard Has Gained National Prominence For Literary and Educational Work.

HIS CAREER REVIEWED

It was announced yesterday that Dean Addison Hibbard, of the College of Liberal Arts, was resigning his position in the University to take effect at the end of this quarter. Beginning July 1, he will take the position of Dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Northwestern University. Mr. Hibbard is the fourth full professor to be lost to the English department next year. Twenty-nine professors have left in the last two years, and Mr. Hibbard is the ninth to leave at this time.

Mr. Hibbard received final word of his appointment to the deanship at Northwestern Tuesday afternoon. He will devote his full time to the position next year, and teaching will be optional. What makes the new position so attractive is that Northwestern has a retiring allowance for all professors. The University of North Carolina does not have such a fund and when a professor no longer teaches he is cut off from any further income.

In addition, Northwestern has shown a great desire to make progress in undergraduate instruction. Not only has it the desires, but its extensive resources give it the where-with-all to accomplish its undertakings. It is but recently that a gift of $8,500,000 was received by the University for improvement in instruction, particularly in the College of Liberal Arts. Large scholarship funds bring students from many sections of the country to Evanstown, Illinois, to attend Northwestern. Plans are now underway for building new dormitories and recitation buildings so that the University will be able to accommodate more students and have better facilities for teaching.

Mr. Hibbard's widespread experiences, his literary ability, his excellent work as Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, and his liberal views as an educator have gained for him a national reputation. It is because of this reputation, most of which has been gained in the last four years, that Northwestern picked him to head the most important unit of the University. Born forty-three years ago in a small town in Wisconsin, Mr. Hibbard attended the University of Wisconsin and graduated in 1908 with an A. B. degree. He then went to Japan and spent five years in the Orient. From 1909 to 1914 he was professor of English at the Imperial College of Commerce in Nagasaki, Japan. He returned to the University of Wisconsin in the position of instructor in English in 1916 and 1917, gaining, at the same time, his M. A. degree. For the next two years Mr. Hibbard was assistant professor of English at Miami University. When the war broke out he entered the service in the United States Navy. When the war was over, he came to the University of North Carolina as an

PLAN MEMORIAL TO J. F. ROYSTER

Former Students and Associates To Dedicate Volume of Research and Critical Studies; To Contain Studies By Leading Scholars of Country.

Former students and associates are planning a volume of research and critical studies to be dedicated as a memorial to the late Dr. James Finch Royster, who at the time of his death was dean of the graduate school and head of the English department in the University.

The volume as contemplated will contain important articles by some of the leading scholars in this country. It will be edited by a board consisting of Professor Louis B. Wright, editor, and four associate editors, Professors W. D. MacMillan, III, Raymond Adams, G. A. Harrer and N. B. Adams, representing the division of languages and literature in the University. Professors John M. Manly of the University of Chicago and Edwin Greenlaw of the Johns Hopkins University have been asked to serve as advisory editors.

In connection with the publication of this volume of studies, an association of former colleagues, students and friends of Dr. Royster has been formed. Professor George C. Taylor has been elected president of this association. Assisting him is a committee composed of Professor Hubert Heffner, Professor Ward Fenley and Harry Russell.

This committee is anxious to get in touch with all former students and friends of Dr. Royster who are interested in the publication of this memorial in his honor. Those with whom the committee has not communicated are asked to send their names to some member of the committee. A complete list of Dr. Royster's former graduate students or students who specialized in work under him is particularly desired.

According to present plans the proposed volume will be published by the University of North Carolina Press.

Old Rags

A final drive for woolen materials to be made into rugs for the Y.M.C.A. building will be made this evening. The committee collecting the materials requests that all students having clothes they wish to give are to have them ready when the collectors canvas dormitories and fraternity houses. Material may consist of: sweaters, old woolen blankets, winter suits of at least 50 per cent wool, overcoats, woolen golf hose, and old rugs of reasonably good material.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C. Subscription price, $2.00 local and $4.00 out of town, for the college year.

Again We Lose

News of Dean Addison Hibbard's resignation comes as no surprise. We cannot expect a man of his ability and accomplishments to remain here when he has such opportunities offered him as those which Northwestern University offers. Having had its inducements to teachers recently minimized by a seemingly short-sighted legislature, the University cannot hope to retain men of Hibbard's calibre when broader fields are opened to them. It gives us a feeling of pessimism in contemplating the University's future to think that the name of Hibbard must be added to a list which already includes such illustrious names—illustrious in the light of the University's past reputation—as Chase, Foerster, Jones, and Potter.

We shall feel keenly the absence from this campus of Dean Hibbard. Being vitally interested in improving the quality of teaching he has gained the distinction of being one of the few men in the University who are real teachers as well as scholars and men of research. During his entire stay here he has manifested an interest in academic life not merely from the professor's point of view, of which so many of our faculty men are guilty, but from the standpoint of the student. His friendly interest in the individual student has given him a reputation by reason of which he is generally known as the student's friend. To say the least, his presence and his work here have been a tremendous asset to this institution.

It has been said that we do not appreciate our great men until they leave us, and the type of man whom we are losing this year makes us all wonder about the future of the University of North Carolina. Perhaps we will not realize until the best men in the faculty have gone that a university to be great must have a faculty composed of great men. —B. M.

Many will agree with Candidate Shaw in hoping Wake will have only one primary.

Thugs, Yeomen, Countrymen?

It is reported that although there were only nine hundred Denishawn Dancers tickets sold there were about sixteen hundred persons in the audience the night of the performance. When the manager of the dancers discovered this he declared that he would never bring another troupe or act to Chapel Hill. He said that the handling of this University's audience was the worst he had ever seen anywhere.

More disgraceful yet was the disturbance raised by the crashers both before and after they had made good their forced entrances. The ones on the outside of the fence yelled and whistled and threw rocks against the tin score-sign; those on the inside sat on the grass directly in front of the reserved seats, laughed, jeered and made things generally uncomfortable for the dancers, the pianist, and the audience. Miss St. Denis herself afterward declared that she wished she and her dancers had performed at N.C.C.W. instead of here, because she was sure they would not have been given such a barbarous reception there.

Not much editorializing can be added to these statements. They are just accusations, and they make this student body look pretty black and hopeless.—J.J.

Again, The Negro Question

"It is said that about 400 Negroes have been registered in Raleigh to vote in the Democratic primaries. Every name should be taken off the books. Southern Negroes are all Republicans and have no right to vote in the party of White Supremacy," says an editorial writer in the Raleigh News and Observer —a needlessly antagonistic and prejudiced statement in support of the purely political editorial policies of that paper.

In the News and Observer again, this time on Wednesday, another statement on the above subject appeared: "The Negro is a Republican and those who advised the Raleigh Negroes to register as Democrats were enemies of Democracy and White Supremacy. This is true, no matter what they call themselves."

On the same day that the first of these editorials appeared in the Observer the Baltimore Evening Sun carried a featured news story and an editorial on the recent organization and appearance of a Negro symphony in that city. In addition there was published in the Baltimore paper a regular column devoted to the interests of the city's colored people.

In the near future the negro population of the nation must be given a definite answer to its demands for a place under the sun. It is inevitable that such a crisis must come in interracial relationships. The rapid development of the negro race and the appearance of capable leaders rising from this isolated and insoluble portion of the contents in the "melting pot" indicate this trend of affairs.

Shall the revolution be a peaceful and bloodless one, or shall it be marked with the outbreak of inner-corroding hatred and perhaps even race riots?

An outward display of hostile enmity and contempt such as the Observer editorial indicates may serve to drive the negroes to the latter alternative. On the other hand the sympathetic encouragement offered by the Baltimore writer can be a factor in helping the negro to work out his own plan of adaptation.

The music critic of the Sun hailed the interpretations of the Baltimore negro symphony as indications of the development of an individual Afro-American culture. That is exactly the direction in which the efforts of our negroes must aim. It can be done—but not while the existing anti-negro element continues to spread its uncompromising propaganda.

However, there is promise for a change in public opinion. The rising generation is still further removed from slavery days than the retiring one. Furthermore, it is being educated to consider the problem from a different point of view, and so is developing, paradoxically enough, an indifferent interest in the fate of the negro.

An example, brought directly home to the University: the annual Negro Issue of the Carolina Magazine. If we would be more progressive in this matter, we should have more of such things.—E. C. D., Jr.

The Laugh's On North Carolina

Again, North Carolina's hypocritical insincerity is the just object of ridicule. Maryland, and especially Baltimore, has recently enjoyed a sly chuckle at the expense of the state.

The Baltimore Evening Sun comments in a caustic and sarcastic manner concerning the probability of moving the prohibition headquarters from that city: "However, the next State to the South voted dry (referring to the wet votes of Maryland and Virginia), and it, too, is in this circuit. Why not move the prohibition headquarters down into North Carolina? Greensboro, for example, is not much farther South than Richmond, and the Tar Heels presumably would not object to having the spies, snoopers and agents provacateurs of the Federal Government quartered among them. Indeed, these gentry, whom Baltimore betrays a tendency to regard only as peculiarly objectionable, down there might attain the stature of heroes.

"To Tarheelia with the headquarters, by all means."

As long as the leaders and citizens of North Carolina lay themselves open to such scathing attacks by using old-fashioned, out-dated political tactics; until they desist from such unsophisticated and transparent attempts at moral integrity and political "saintliness," they may expect to be the laughingstock of the nation, known to the world as a bunch of bootlegging hypocrites. —E. C. D. Jr.

Personnel Paragraphs

By Henry Johnston, Jr.

What kind of men are business concerns looking for? What social background, personal qualifications and past experiences make a man a desirable prospect?

The employer answers these questions as best he can by the type of questions contained in his application blank for employment. In an effort to determine what information is of most general interest, I have counted the number of times that various items occur on 25 application forms, used by such firms as American Tel. & Tel. Co., Goodrich Rubber Co., United Fruit Co., General Electric Co., Montgomery Ward & Co., etc.

Listed below are some of the items which occur most frequently and the number of times of occurrence:

Work experience, 25; education (graduate? record? major? degree?), 24; married, 24; physical condition 23; personal description, 22; special training, 22; date and place of birth, 21; dependants, 20; position desired, 19; personal and business references, 19; salary earned in past positions, 17; nationality and citizenship, 16; relatives and their occupations, 15; church affiliations, 14; relatives in this company, 11; can you give surety bond, 11; foreign languages, 10; salary expected, 10; why apply to this company, 10.

Other interesting items which occur rather frequently are: memberships in societies, campus activities, self-help in school, private income, hobbies and recreations, use of tobacco or alcoholic stimulants, financial obligations, ever been "fired" from a position, etc.

* * *

The "personality" of a man and the general personal impression he makes on another person, of course, cannot be recorded on an application form. This consideration is so important that practically all employers require a personal interview before an offer of employment is made.

* * *

The man who has proved that he can work and do a good job is at a premium. He often gets a poise and confidence in his ability that can be had in no other way. The man who has never worked may be equally desirable in every respect, but there is no way for the prospective employer to tell how he will react under working conditions. The employers who have visited the campus this year have looked with favor upon the man who has "done something."

* * *

There is an increasing demand for college trained men in business today. The fact that a man attended college, however, does not necessarily make him a desirable man. The general manager of a large department store recently said to me, "Many people say that knowledge is power. I heartily disagree with this statement and say that power is the ability to apply this knowledge." He followed this remark by saying that the demand is for those men who have applied themselves and can profit by what they learn.

An employer always wants to know why a man is leaving school before graduation. Unless he has some good reason, such as financial difficulties, it is held against him.

In 23 out of the 25 cases considered above, the final acceptance of a man is dependent upon the outcome of his physical examination. If he cannot pass an examination about the equivalent of the one the average life insurance company requires, he may lose his opportunity at the last minute. How many students think of this point during their college days?

"When a photograph is asked for with an application, it should be a business-like one," says the Goodrich Rubber Co. representative. "When a man sends us his picture taken in a golf outfit or in a social group, it always creates a bad impression."

* * *

An application form should always be filled out completely, neatly and according to any directions that may be given on it. Students often hurt their chances by carelessness in these respects. In considering a doubtful case last year, an employer decided not to make an offer to one of our seniors who had failed to sign his name in the space set apart for it on the application blank.

Managers In 7 Sports Announced For '30-31

ATHLETIC COUNCIL MAKES SELECTIONS

Ruffin and Lindley Manage Football; Newman, Cross Country; Royster Basketball; Weeks, Boxing; Case, Wrestling; Sickles, Baseball; and Dunn Track.

At the meeting of the Athletic Council held lately, the managers, assistants and sub-assistants, were chosen for next year. This group will serve in the season of their respective sport for the year 1930-31.

These men are chosen each year on the merit of the work turned in during the previous season. Competition is usually fairly strong for all of these positions, and it is only by steady work that one is able to gain any of the jobs of the managerships.

At the beginning of each season competition is stronger for the managership posts than at any other time, but as the season progresses a big majority of the competitors drop out.

Following is an official list of the managers, assistants, and sub-assistants for the coming year.

Football—P. B. Ruffin and Jack Lindley, managers; Robert Schnell, Ward Thompson and Harry Finch, assistant managers; and Robert Mebane, E. L. Webb, Jr., H. A. Haines, Jr., J. D. Sloop, L. C. Skinner and W. E. Barnes; C. L. McCoy and S. W. Carpenter, alternates.

Cross country—G. L. Newman, Jr., manager.

Basketball—Chauncey Royster, manager; Lawrence Miller and John Ellison, assistant managers.

Boxing — Clarence Weeks, manager; Hubert O'Donell and Philip Alston, assistant managers; and C. E. Holcomb, L. A. Lane and J. T. Baker, sub-assistants.

Wrestling—W. T. Case, manager.

Baseball — Arthur Sickles, manager; Egbert Haywood, frosh manager; H. B. Benoit and Fred Jones, assistant managers; J. W. Lineberger, W. H. Wilson, G. W. Wilson, G. R. Vick; J. K. Taylor and R. E. Hughes, sub-assistants; D. E. Gray, Jr., and C. S. Forbes, alternates.

Track—William Dunn, Jr., manager; Haywood Weeks, J. P. Cooper and A. N. Daniels, assistant managers; P. P. Pelton, W. W. Walker, B. C. Prince, T. A. Glasscock, A. H. Snider, J. R. Shoemaker and Joe Zaglin, sub-assistant managers.

Paulsen Entertains Intra-Mural Winners

G. H. "Dean" Paulsen, superintendent of the University laundry and well-known local sports enthusiast, entertained the members of the winning basketball and baseball teams with a banquet at 6:30 last evening at his home on Ransom street.

This dinner given to the Aycock basketball team and the New Dorms baseball nine is one of the many such opportunities "Dean" Paulsen has taken to encourage various forms of athletics on the campus and in the village. He has entertained other University and high school teams with banquets, aided in financing the co-ed basketball squad and has furnished transportation for teams to out-of-town contests.

The earth is said to be speeding up. Probably it has joined in the pursuit of that new planet.

Shelby Challenges

Shelby high school, three times state baseball champions, and this year winner of the B class title, has challenged Charlotte, A class title holder, to a game to decide the state championship.

Charlotte and Shelby have met twice this year in exhibition games prior to the title series, Charlotte winning once and Shelby once.

In case Charlotte accepts the challenge, the game will probably be played on the Charlotte diamond.

BROWN SETS NEW MARK IN WINNING THIRD DECATHLON

Track Star Piles Up 8,724 Points; Ruble Is Second.

Setting a new University record and scoring 365.5 points more than his nearest rival, Theron Brown easily won the third annual intramural decathlon held Monday and Tuesday. Brown, incidentally, is second highest scorer for the year on the varsity track team, and seems to have cinched the title of best all round athlete in the University this year.

He piled up 8,724 points, as compared with the old record of 8,685.8 set by Jeff Fordham last year. He ran the 100-yard dash in 10.4, the 120-yard low hurdles in 14.4, the three-quarter mile in 4:12. He hurled the javelin 166 feet 2 inches for the best mark in this event, and got 10 feet 2 inches in the pole vault.

Raymond Ruble took second place with 8,358.5; Archie Davis third with 8,344.3; Arnold fourth, 8,081.7; Dry fifth, 8,018.5; C. G. Stafford sixth, 7,965.1, and Goodwin seventh with 7,872.5.

The highest number of points scored in any one event was Theron Brown's 981.5 out of a possible 1000 in the discus. Stafford scored 961 points in the high jump. Arnold got 976 points out of the pole vault.

Henry House won the novice division with 7,802.8. Harper was second with 7,162.7, and Sanders third with 7,085.1. House ran the 100 in 10.4 and pole vaulted 10 feet 2 inches.

The calibre of performances this year appears to have been higher than last year. Second place this year was 96.9 points higher than last year. Third place was 575.7 points higher; fourth place, 521.5 higher, and fifth place, 788.8 higher.

The decathlon was introduced as part of the intramural program year before last. Jeff Fordham won it last year and year before, the first year with a score of 8,499.1 points.

* * * *

By Hugh Wilson

We see that Lawson Robertson, coach of the Olympic track team, picks some western team, preferably Southern California or Stanford, to cop the I. C. 4-A track and field championship in Cambridge, Mass., this weekend. Robertson, by the way, is coach of the University of Pennsylvania's track team which took third to Stanford and S. C. last year. Penn is even stronger this year, and if the Penn coach sees no chance of victory for his charges, it may well be taken for granted that no eastern team will cop the laurels of victory. Harvard and Penn are touted to be the westerners' strongest competitors, but neither is conceded much chance for victory.

The real battle is expected to be between Leland Stanford and Southern California. The Trojans defeated Stanford earlier in the season in a dual meet, almost doubling the score on the Palo Alto boys. However, the Stanford individual stars are expected to shine brighter in the open meet than those of Southern California.

* * *

The meet should produce several interesting individual contests. Wyckoff of S. C. defeated Hector Dyer, giant Stanford sprinter, in the Southern California intercollegiate meet in both the 100 and 220, but had to break record time in the 100 to do so, and his time for the 220 was also close to the mark. Dyer later came back to defeat Wyckoff in the U. S. C.-Stanford dual meet in 9 3-5 seconds. Another outstanding entry in the sprints is Eddie Tolan, Michigan negro flier. Tolan held the world's record of 9.5 seconds for the 100 until Wyckoff's 9.4 erased that mark this spring. The victory in this event is almost a toss-up, when there is so little difference between the speed of the men. However, it is thought that Dyer's strength will carry him in to victory if the track is muddy.

Stanford's edge on the other schools lies in her brilliant weightmen, Eric Krenz and Harlow Rothert, who are expected to take first in the discus and shot respectively. Krenz is expected to take a second in the shot in addition, and Rothert is considered a good bet for a place in the discus. Together the two husky coast stars are doped to score about 15 points. Krenz has a discus throw of over 167 feet this year, while Rothert has propelled the shot over 50 feet.

The mile should be another hot contest. The three best known men in this event are Rekers of Penn State, whom Minor Barkley defeated this year; McKniff of Pennsylvania U., who has done 4:25; and Hudder Dawson of Princeton who defeated Barkley in a 4:21 mile.

* * *

Barney Berlinger's performances should give the University of Pennsylvania several points. The Olympic team's star decathlon man is entered in three events—the shot put, pole vault, and high jump. Last week Berlinger took first in these three events and second in the discus throw and javelin to score 21 points against Dartmouth. He threw the shot 48 feet 4 inches, high jumped 6 feet 2 inches—a remarkable feat for a 195-pound man—and pole vaulted 12 feet 6 inches. He has done 13 feet in the vault, and is expected to do so again under stiffer competition.

Medal Winner

The Patterson award is made to the man of the senior class who is judged by the committee to be the most worthy athlete of the senior class, and is granted on a basis of athletic ability, leadership, prominence in campus activities and general ability.

Farris, besides serving as captain of the 346-point football team last fall and rating a selection as all-American guard by many sports writers, has been president of the student body, president of the junior class, captained his freshman boxing team, played varsity baseball in his sophomore year, and is a member of the Golden Fleece, Grail, Daviens, Dialectic Senate and Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity.

Hibbard Resigns Post Here To Accept Offer From Northwestern

assistant professor. In three years he became associate professor and in 1926 he was made full professor and also Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, the two positions he now holds.

One of the chief activities of the dean which has brought him into prominence, especially in the South, was his work on The "Lantern" deals with books review column published in the leading Southern newspapers. The "Latern" deals with books by Southerners and about the South and now appears every Sunday in papers having a total circulation of 450,000. Mr. Hibbard established the "Lantern" in 1924. Like all syndicated features it had a modest beginning, being published for several months in only four or five papers. Among the first to take it were the Greensboro News, the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, the Columbia State and the Charlotte Observer. It grew steadily in the esteem of the editors and gradually other papers were added to the list. After writing the column for the first three years of its existence, Mr. Hibbard gave it up and Raymond Adams, Howard Mumford Jones, and now Mr. and Mrs. Paul Green have taken it in succession.

Mr. Hibbard has been greatly interested in Southern literature and its development. Due to his research and publications on the subject he is recognized as an authority on the literature of the South. One of his first writings on the question to be published was his Studies in Southern Literature, which was a program for women's clubs issued by the bureau of public discussion here at Chapel Hill in 1923. It was spread throughout the state by the University extension division. In 1926 an article entitled The South's Reading Public appeared in the Publishers' Weekly and was Dean Hibbard's second important writing on the subject. In the same year Aesop in the Negro Dialect was printed in American Speech.

Two years ago probably the dean's most important work was published. The Lyric South, an anthology of recent poetry from the South was published by the Macmillan Co., the large New York publishing house. Since the publication of this work, which received a large circulation, Mr. Hibbard has been working on a collection of Southern short stories which he intends to publish in the near future.

Last year Dean Hibbard was the editor of The Book of Poe, published by Doubleday, Doran & Co. This consisted of tales, criticisms, and poems by Edgar Allan Poe with Mr. Hibbard's introduction. In addition to books, the dean has had articles printed in some of the leading magazines of the country. Scribners, Outlook, Public Weekly, Current History and various book-review publications have carried his articles.

Recently, when booksellers of the entire nation wanted to present President Hoover with a White House library to consist of 500 volumes, Mr. Hibbard was appointed a member of the distinguished national committee which made the selections.

The dean's work in the educational field is known nationally. His ideas have always been liberal and he has written many articles in magazines expressing his views. Last year, 1928-1929, Mr. Hibbard's articles in the Outlook on his Utopian College gained much comment among educators. Among his liberal views expressed in those articles is his idea of a "Honors College" which he deems necessary. Mr. Hibbard feels that persons above the average ability are retarded when they are forced to do the same work along with the average student.

At Carolina Mr. Hibbard has been regarded as one of the big men of the faculty. Although he has ever claimed teaching as his first love, he has come to be regarded as an administrator of first rank. Professor Hibbard has been frequently mentioned for the University presidency, and the trustee committee now looking for a man to succeed Dr. Chase has before it a batch of testimonials urging Hibbard for the position.

Mr. Hibbard was largely responsible for placing student entertainments on an organized basis and charging a fee for each student in the College of Liberal Arts. He is an advocate of optional class attendance for all juniors and seniors in place of the present system. The establishment of a Fine Arts College has also held his interest. Mr. Hibbard has always been recognized as one of the most liberal-minded in the faculty, and as a close friend of the students.

Mr. Hibbard has made many friends among the students, especially, and many of them feel individual losses with the dean's departure. One of the prominent University professors expressed the sentiments of students as well as professors when he said, "Mr. Hibbard has long been the main champion of improved teaching at Carolina and in nearly every case he has supported the cause of the students. His popularity is justly deserved and his loss will be keenly felt. No man will quite be able to take the place Mr. Hibbard leaves vacant."

Cross Country Notice

For the past four years, North Carolina has won the Conference championship in cross country. Next year the ranks of the team will be sadly depleted by graduation, only one letterman being eligible for competition. With an eye toward laying plans for the 1930 season Coach Dale Ranson wishes all men in the University at all interested in cross country to meet with him at Emerson Field stadium Friday afternoon at a time which will be announced in a sports page box in tomorrow's issue of the Daily Tar Heel.

IN DEFENSE OF THE HOME TOWN BELLE

In a letter in yesterday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel, one of our charming (?) co-ed "fellow students" seemed to deplore the fact that she and her sister co-eds are sadly neglected on the campus, that they are not cherished as are visiting girls.

That is only human nature. Man has the privilege of choosing his own companions, and of choosing just with whom he will fall in love. Of course, as a rule, the Carolina co-ed is so pretty and so attractive that the poor male student is powerless to resist, but that does not alter the fact that he might want to occasionally have down the home town belle, in self-defense, if for no other reason.

The Carolina co-ed wants to be a part of the University. She votes with all the rest of the students, but at the same time she wants to have separate representation. According to this plan, she wants double representation. Wants to be represented equally with the male student, 200 women equal to 2400 men, and also wants to keep her vote.

Perhaps if the co-ed is not satisfied with the largest university in the state, she could get what she wants elsewhere at one of the number of schools to which only women are allowed to enter.

A. M.

VOX HOMINIS

Bravo! Girlies, it is a most noble exponent that you have in Miss "A. W." the Carolina co-ed who writes with such vigor in defense of the downtrodden women students of the University.

But, as an old hand at this controversy and publicity game, let me say that she has taken an unwise step. Unless she is a great deal different from her numerous brother and sister crusaders over the world, her efforts must come to naught.

Out of every hundred revolutions which are begun in the white heat of fury and indignation ninety-nine end in ash dumps. These failures may be attributed to anything from an outbreak of the measles to the inadvertant lack of supporters.

Miss "A. W." will fail because, if I surmise correctly, she won't get the backing of the "Carolina Ladies" (apologies to John Lang) in a move which threatens to drive off even one of the swarm of boys with which they are now blest (yes, blest). Furthermore, vacation is drawing near. Miss "A. W." selected a very strategic time to launch her campaign, since with the end of school, interest in this thing will die, only to be revived next spring quarter this time.

That is the error of her's to which I refer.

Little Rollo

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Dry your tears, A. W. You're going to get a big rush from now on, so long as your presence graces the campus. I have lined up my frat solidly for your cause and each and every one of my fraternity brothers has pledged himself to ask you for at least one date a week until your popularity has been firmly established and you have no cause to bewail the lot of the poor abused co-ed.

A LADIES' FRIEND.

AND A MAN TRIES TO ANSWER

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Perhaps the best solution to the problem would be to merge N. C. C. W. and Carolina. But, as this seems improbable—as far as the immediate future is concerned, at any rate—the present co-ed situation seems to be crying for attention. Let's consider it:

Despite the fact that Carolina was originally meant as a purely masculine institution, a girl registers at Chapel Hill on the same footing as a boy, with the same scholastic and social opportunities, except for certain restrictions which her sex necessarily puts on her. She has a fair amount of chance to forget herself and merge with the herd. This being a democracy, that is the way things are. But then, it would seem that she doesn't want to stay merged; she doesn't want equality; she wants distinction. Fair enough. Everyone has their ambitions. And she has a handicap towards realizing hers through the very fact that she is a girl, and that girls are few at Carolina. Then, too, she is here at Chapel Hill, and though distance may lend some enchantment, most boys would rather walk to Spencer hall than ride to Greensboro for their dates. Further distinction depends upon the girl herself. Popularity is an individual, not a class, matter. An unpopular co-ed, if there are any, has no more grounds for complaint than the boy who fails to make campus social organizations.

If Carolina co-eds rated better, there would be more attractive girls, without any doubt. On the other hand, if there were more attractive girls, the co-eds woud have a higher social rating. What is the diameter of that circle?

Girls say that they are accused of booting professors. If they are, it is undoubtedly unjust criticism; but anyone as conspicuous as a co-ed is sure to receive some criticism. That is one of the penalties of being in the limelight. And to a person who doesn't analyze the situation, to the average indifferent boy, any action except complete indifference, particularly unconscious little feminine mannerisms and courtesies must appear as booting.

The failure to invite a representative of the Woman's Association to attend the North Carolina Federation of Students was an unfortunate oversight, not an intentional insult. This was caused by the smallness of the Association and the fact that it is right here on the campus, for the same reasons that the most obvious of things are often overlooked. Certainly Carolina's Gentlemen extend their most sincere apologies and regrets.

The ridicule of the Women's Athletic Association was almost unavoidable. Boys will always laugh at girls trying to play basketball, whether at Carolina or Northwestern. It was not unkindly ridicule, but the attitude of condescension that comes from the male's pride in his own strength and athletic ability. Besides, social popularity and respect for a girl's talent for basketball are almost as opposed as masculinity and feminity. Not many boys want to "make" the Vassar basketball team.

When you consider the situation as a whole and look at both sides of it, I don't think that Carolina co-eds have such a hard time of it. And to prove that I have no particular prejudices—how about a date?

Paul Carroll

LANG WIELDS THE SWORD OF SARCASM

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

It seems by her epistolary attack in Wednesday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel that one of our friends of the gentler sex has grown a bit disgruntled at the treatment which members of her sex have been subjected to on this campus by the "Carolina Gentlemen." In her scathing attack on numerous organizations, clubs, and associations of this campus, our friend of the fairer sex makes a number of rather bold and condemning accusations against the "Carolina Gentlemen." In fact, it seems that the writer herself considered her epistolary remarks so bold that she chose to conceal her virgin name from such tainted and dirty remarks, and so she signs herself with an "A. W."

Now, in order that the public may not be misinformed by these unfounded remarks of Miss "A. W.," I think it is entirely fitting for we "Carolina Gentlemen" to answer at this time these false accusations that have been so unscrupulously hurled at us by the "Carolina Lady." Since I am more intimately connected with the State Student Federation than I am with the other assailed organizations of this campus, I shall confine my vindicative remarks to this organization and call upon my colleagues in this cause to defend their clubs and associations in like manner.

Miss "A. W." bemoans and bewails the fact that the "Carolina Ladies" were not asked to attend the recent State Student Congress on this campus and that they were further insulted by being asked to shelter in their place of abode a few of the lady delegates to this Congress. Now, my "A. W." friend is laboring under a most irksome illusion when she makes these accusations. She distinctly shows her unfamiliarity with the whole purpose, constitution and by-laws of the State Student Federation in making her accusations against this organization.

Being president of this State Student Federation, it gives me great pleasure to set this young lady right in her conception of purposes and practices of this organization. The Woman's Association of the University of North Carolina wasn't invited to the first State Student Congress because we invited only the officials of the student governments that had jurisdiction over the majority of the students of each senior college in this state. In the co-educational colleges and universities of the state we did not invite the student organizations that had lesser jurisdiction than their main student governments to send official delegates to this initial Congress. The woman's associations of Duke, State, Catawba, Lenoir-Rhyne and A. C. C. sent no delegates to this first Congress. Likewise, the men's association of High Point College sent no official delegates because the ladies are in the majority there. So, I hope that our "Carolina Ladies" will see by these facts that they haven't been unjustly discriminated against. Furthermore, our Federation officials obtained the consent of the chief-in-command at Spencer hall before we dispatched our lady delegates to the portals of this house. We thought this the only proper and necessary ordeal to go through with in order to have the honor of sheltering our lady delegates in this feminine sanctuary. So, we let this matter end there because we didn't think that it would be quite proper to offer our own dormitories to our friends of the opposite sex.

By the action of the first Student Congress, both of the student governments at every co-educational senior and junior college or university of this state are now permitted and urged to join in with the State Student Federation right away and to send delegates to the next Student Congress. We would have invited both of the student governments of every co-educational institution in the state to send delegates to the first Congress, but we thought that since this first Congress was a sort of an experiment we had better not involve too many student organizations in this matter at first. We wanted to give our organization a fair trial with the representative student governments of the state first; then, we intended if we were successful to extend our organization to every student government in this state.

We have tried out our experiment and have found it to be highly successful, and now we are extending to every student government of North Carolina an opportunity to join us in our glorious and noble enterprise. So, it is now incumbent upon the Woman's Association of this University to show the whole wide world that they wish to cooperate with the men of this University and with the men and women of other colleges and universities of this state in a great student movement to establish intercollegiate good-will, comity and reciprocity in this state. We have prepared an honored place in our State Student Federation for the Carolina Woman's Association, and we now call upon them to come and occupy this place in our midst and help us make of this organization a most serviceable and effective institution. Judging from her epistolary remarks, we believe that our good friend, Miss "A. W.," will render us valuable assistance in our effort to bestow the proper treatment and recognition to our lady-students of this the oldest of the state universities, the University of North Carolina.

ANOTHER MAN SPEAKS

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

I note from yesterday's issue of this paper that you have at last succeeded in your attempts to raise up some writers for your publication in the "wench works" area. I feel that I can hardly be too emphatic in extending my congratulations to you upon the ultimate success of your campaign — a campaign which has been regarded futile for a number of years.

The issue which "A. W." raised is an old one. Indeed, it is as old as the world itself. Men and women fussed and quarrelled before civilization began. But taking even this for granted, I find abundant food for speculation in such statements as "Many boys say that the co-eds are not the type of girls with whom they wish to associate. Is the type of girl they desire coming to a place where she is not recognized?" I merely wish to say in this connection that the type of girl which the men of the University desire to associate with is not going to be recognized until such time as she has duly arrived on the campus. The work of predicting that time is a fitting task for a prophet; not a journalist.

Quoting further—"There is a Woman's Association which efficiently handles the problems which arise in the social life of the women." I am backed by millions when I say that no association has ever been conceived which can efficiently handle the problems which arise in "wench" circles. Old Virgil was right when he said, "A thing of moods and changes is woman ever."

The truth of the matter is that the women of the Carolina student body are not interested in the functions of extracurricular organizations on the campus. Numerous efforts on the part of publications and debating officials have failed repeatedly. Even that time-worn body, the Phi Assembly, has accomplished nothing by opening its doors to women, except a loss of dignity.

It is a universal fact that men will choose the best women for dancing partners, strolling mates, etc., regardless of where they hail from. If the inmates of Russell Inn compared favorably with the girls which are invited to attend social functions on the campus, there is no room for doubting that the men of the student body would seize them with unabated zeal. The facts are, however, of another vintage.

PLANS PROGRESS FOR LOMBARDO'S ARRIVAL JUNE 10

Six Fraternities Plan House Parties And Dinners For Bevy Of Girls Expected.

EXCITEMENT IS EVIDENCED

(By Everard B. Shemwell)

With the securing of Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians to play for the final dances, the German Club of the University is planning a series of festivities that have never been surpassed in the south.

A number of fraternities on the Hill are to give houseparties, and an unusually large number of girls have been invited from all sections of the country. All available space at various hotels and rooming houses has been reserved for weeks, and the members of fraternities which are giving house parties are planning to give up their houses for their girls, and are now looking around for a place to stay themselves. Among the fraternities that will entertain with house parties are: Kappa Sigma, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, and Pi Kappa Phi.

There will be six dances: three formal dances the nights of June 10, 11, and 12. Three dances will be held Wednesday, June 11, one in the morning from 11:30 until 1:30, a tea dance from 4:30 until 6:30, and the formal dance at night from 9:30 until 1. A dance will also be held Thursday morning from eleven-thirty until one-thirty.

The executive committee of the German Club which is sponsoring this gala event is composed of the following: Gordon Race, president; Will Yarborough, secretary and treasurer; Gordon Gray, George Saunders, John Bulluck, Travis Brown, Mayne Albright, Bill Dunn, and Julian Palmore.

Commencement Marshals, under the leadership of Chief Woodard, will lead the final figure. Other marshals are: Ed Hamer, George Thompson, Claude Farrell, Ike Manning, Billy Lindsay, Chauncey Royster, and Paul Gilbert.

The Commencement Ball managers are: Leonard Hole, Chief, with Miss Maurine Forester; Tom Hunter with Miss Dorothy Kluttz; Jack Calhoun with Miss Catherine Fee; Archie Allen with Miss Annette Tucker; William Adams with Miss Henrietta Whisnant; Charles Price with Miss Dora Litale; Philip Jackson with Miss Mary Neal Wilkins; and Allen Boren with Miss Elizabeth Bowie.

The Tin Can, where the dances will be held, is being extensively decorated for the occasion by Frazier Glenn and Baron Holmes. It will be divided into sections, one large section for dancing, another to be used as a smoking room, and still another for various things.

In addition to the regular German Club dances there will be various other entertainments in the form of banquets, buffet suppers, teas, and swimming parties.

Girls invited from all sections of the south, and especially the state, and a large number of alumni and visitors will swell the population of Chapel Hill to a size seldom ever reached before.

The successful engagement of Guy Lombardo for the occasion

Hibbard Speaks To Seniors Tonight

Dean Addison Hibbard will be the last speaker on the Senior Week program tonight at 7:15. This talk closes an unusually successful period during which members of the class of 1930 have participated in various activities and forms of entertainment.

SUMMER SESSION OPENS JUNE 12

Many Courses Are Offered For Large Attendance That Is Expected.

Many preparations are being made for the University summer school, which will open here on June 12, and continue through August 29. There will be two terms of six weeks each. The first will close Tuesday, July 22 and the second will begin on July 23 and end Friday, August 29.

All students should be present to register Thursday, June 12, as classes will begin Friday morning at 8 o'clock. Extra fees will be charged for late registration and no one can register for credit courses after 5 o'clock Monday, June 17, except by action of the administrative board. Registration for summer school will be limited to those applicants who can qualify for admission under one of the following provisions.

1. Those who can satisfy the requirements for admission as given in the annual catalogue.

2. Teachers holding regular state certificates.

3. Applicants for state certificates who have graduated from schools accredited by the state department of education.

4. Special students who are neither candidates for degrees nor applicants for state teachers' certificates may be admitted under the University's general regulations covering such cases. They must be 21 years of age or over.

The University summer school is widely known and students attend from far and near. Courses will be offered for the following professions: primary grade teachers, grammar grade teachers, high school teachers, principals, teachers of special subjects, county and city superintendents and supervisors, college and university students who wish to earn extra credits towards their degrees, graduate students, and others wishing to pursue professional and cultural courses leading to advanced degrees.

The summer school is organized into a college division, a graduate division and a division of elementary education.

Firms Are Hosts To Departing Seniors

The Carolina Confectionary and Pritchard-Lloyd, Inc., in appreciation of the patronage of the members of the senior class for the last four years, are giving fountain drinks free to members of the class of 1930 wearing their regalia. The Carolina Confectionary was host yesterday, while Pritchard-Lloyd assumes the role for today. By courtesy of the Carolina theatre, members of the senior class were guests at a midnight show last night entitled "The Bad One," starring Dolores del Rio and Edmund Lowe.

LAST MAGAZINE OUT TOMORROW

Editor Williams Selects Several Short Stories; Fewer Book Reviews.

The last issue of the Carolina Magazine for the current collegiate year, and the second issue under the present editorial control, will appear Saturday morning with the concluding issue of the Daily Tar Heel. According to Editor Williams, the feature article has been written by Dr. E. C. Metzenthin of the department of Germanic languages. In addition to students who have been regular contributors to the magazine throughout the year, the issue Saturday will carry material submitted by new contributors.

In point of make-up, Saturday's edition will be noticeably different from previous issues. The content of the concluding number has been selected from a great mass of material which has been submitted of late. There will be fewer book reviews and more stories than usual. Editor Williams has attempted to get the cream of the short stories and essays which have been written in the advanced writing courses of the English department since the last number of the magazine appeared.

A tentative staff organization will also be printed in Saturday's edition. This organization is, however, merely tentative and is subject to change—both addition and subtraction—by the editor.

LIBRARY ISSUES LAST BOOK CALL

Having worn out its collective lungs singing "Where is my wandering book tonight?" library staff members think that it and a few of its prodigal brothers may find their way home via the "conscience barrel," which the Library will place inside the main entrance next week for the receipt of "freewill offerings."

When asked if he could get hold of a barrel by next Monday, Clark, janitor and general factotum of the Library, reckoned he could. "But what kind of a bar'l? Do it have to hold water?"

"No," was the reply, 'not water but books—books that have run off and haven't trickled back."

The excuses that might be offered for their being where they are might not hold water, but the barrel is not meant to hold excuses.

The barrel will be produced. A fatted calf will not be barbecued in honor of the returning books. But many students will have achance to relieve their consciences and clear themselves with the library—and no questions asked.

WARDLAW PLANS TO TOUR EUROPE WITH NEW BAND

The Blanks Travel Bureau of Charlotte is managing a tour in connection with this orchestra trip, which will cover five countries—France, Germany, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland—and include the Passion Play, the cruise down the Rhine and a tour of the Swiss lakes. This group will sail with the orchestra August 2, on the Volendam, and returning, arrive at New York September 2.

OFFICERS CHOSEN AT BAND MEETING

Plans Laid For Coming Season; Service Awards Presented.

The final business meeting of the University band was held last Wednesday night for the purpose of electing officers and presenting awards. It was the belief of the group that this past year has been one of the most successful in some time.

During the past year uniforms were provided for a large number despite the fact that general conditions made the financial status of the organization very difficult.

The incoming officers announced that it would be their aim next year to expand more along the line of concert work than was done this past year. This aim was strongly endorsed by members of the organization.

Although there is an urgent need for new instruments the organization is looking forward to a very successful season next year, according to the officers.

The officers chosen for next year are H. W. Jones, president; Bill Abernethy, vice-president; H. A. Brooks, secretary; John W. Clinard, manager; and C. H. White, Jr., student director. The retiring officers were J. H. Brunjes, president; P. R. Patten, manager; and J. W. Clinard, secretary.

Awards were made to 11 men who have completed three years of service with the band, under certain restrictions as to musicianship and general scholarship. Men receiving medals this year were: E. B. Aycock, L. B. Skeen, H. A. Brooks, P. R. Patten, R. C. Whitaker, H. W. Jones, W. C. Thompson, A. R. Monroe, F. J. Householder, Jr., W. A. Stringfellow, R. I. Wall and W. A. Biggs.

SWAIN TO CLOSE SUPPER JUNE 5

Reopens June 11 For Summer Session; Ends Successful Season.

Swain hall will close for the term with the evening meal on Thursday, June 5, according to an announcement made yesterday morning by J. O. Harmon, manager of the student dining hall. It will reopen for the first session of summer school with supper on June 5.

Although it closes what is thought to be the most hectic year in the boarding business within the last ten years, Swain hall has held its own in popularity with the students. The number of boarders this year has equaled the average number for the past three of four years, in spite of the fact that a number of students have dropped out of school for financial reasons.

In his announcement yesterday Mr. Harmon took the opportunity of thanking the students for the patronage and cooperation they have shown the University dining hall.

Included in the plans for summer school is the alumni luncheon, which will be held at Swain hall June 9. A number of self-help students who will work during the first session of summer school will remain over to take care of the luncheon. Other employment will be found for them during the interval from June 5 to 11.

Swain hall will reopen for the summer session with the evening meal of June 11.

Y.M.C.A. Wool Drive Will Be Continued

The final drive for woolen material for Y. M. C. A. rugs will not close this week as stated yesterday, but will continue until the end of the quarter. When the students go to pack up to go home next week they will come across old clothes that are practically useless and that are in their way. If these students will please leave the clothes at the dormitory stores, someone will be sent to gather them. Many of the seniors will perhaps have old blankets that will serve only to occupy space in their trunks; these will be greatly appreciated by the Y.

LAW PROFESSOR TO DO RESEARCH

M. S. Breckenridge Is Employed By The Interstate Commerce Commission.

A change in the faculty of the law school has been occasioned by the employment of Professor M. S. Breckenridge to investigate the legal aspects of holding companies in railway transportation on behalf of the interstate commerce committee of the house of representatives. This task will necessitate his presence in Washington during the summer.

The law school has secured in place of Professor Breckenridge, to teach the introductory course in procedure during the first term of summer school one of the outstanding teachers of that subject in this section of the country, Dean William Haywood Moreland of the law school of Washington and Lee University. Dean Moreland practiced for eight years in Norfolk, Va., and has been for the last seven years dean of the law school of Washington and Lee University.

The other visiting members of the law summer faculty are Judges W. J. Brogden and George W. Connor of the North Carolina supreme court, Professors Landis and McCurdy of Harvard, Professor Rundell of the University of Wisconsin, and Professor Dobie of the University of Virginia. Likewise, Professors Wettach and McCall of the regular faculty will give courses in their respective fields.

During the past several years the law school summer session has been attracting a large number of students from this school and from other states, who are interested in taking courses under men who are selected as the leading exponents of their subjects in the entire country. The unique opportunity of studying under distinguished appellate judges who bring directly from the bench their acquaintance with law and action.

The summer session also brings to Chapel Hill a goodly number of men who, by beginning the study of law in the summer and continuing their work winter and summer, can complete the regular law course for the degree in slightly more than two years instead of the usual three years.

Yackety Yacks

Yackety Yacks will be given out today at 1:30 p. m. All those who have not gotten theirs are asked to do so at once.

ALUMNI GROUP TO HOLD INDUCTION FOR GRADUATES

Special Junior Fee Is Offered For First Year Out Of The University.

ASSOCIATION IS HELPFUL

Arrangements have been completed for the induction of this year's graduating class into the University Alumni Association, it was announced yesterday by the senior class executive committee. In cooperation with J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, and W. T. Shore, president of the General Alumni Association, the committee has worked out a plan by which a special junior fee of $1 is offered for membership in the association for the first year out of college.

A series of letters has been sent to the seniors through the central administrative office of the association here, explaining the functions performed by the association and the opportunities it offers to members. All alumni of the University, graduates and non-graduates, are eligible for membership. Regular annual fees are $3, including subscription to the Alumni Review, but through the senior class executive committee the junior fee of $1 has been arranged for those who become alumni this year.

Mr. Shore recently sent the following message to the senior class: "As president of the General Alumni Association, I want to extend a hearty welcome into the ranks of the alumni to the class of 1930. Also I want to urge upon the members of the class the opportunity that membership in the association offers.

"Membership in the Alumni Association, it seems to me, should be regarded as an opportunity rather than as an obligation. In our student days we have all seen that the fellow who puts more into his studies or extra-curricular activities, usually gets the most benefit therefrom. And it is that group of students who leave Chapel Hill with the greatest store of inspiration and pleasant memories. These things last through life, and alumni are always ready to agree that they grow more precious as time goes on.

"Similarly, the graduates who keep in close touch with the University, and who participate actively in its alumni life, are the men who get the most out of it themselves. Fortunately, also, they constitute the group who render major help in guaranteeing that the future of the University of North Carolina shall be more glorious even than its past.

"The one primary organization through which participation in the alumni life can be carried out most naturally is the General Alumni Association. Through it effective assistance can be rendered in every major activity of the University. Through it, also, can be maintained association with other alumni, both your classmates and others of your college.

"The General Alumni Association has a fine tradition. It is strong and useful in the present. It can be even more so. Put your shoulder to the wheel with us. Your reward will come in real satisfaction to yourself, and through adding your share to

Admirable Restraint

It is rather unusual to have a senatorial campaign waged between the greatest speaker in this state and a once all-powerful machine which still maintains enough of its former power to muster an able array of speakers. But more unusual is the absolute silence maintained at the Bailey headquarters. Possessing the ability to utterly annihilate any speaker the Simmons machine might present, and having Judge Manning and others associated with him, Mr. Bailey might well use a speaking campaign to advantage.

Instead he has chosen to remain quiet. Each charge whether officially made by the Simmons headquarters or by friends of the Senator have been allowed to burn out. There was the charge that once Mr. Bailey was a wet. The charge was ridiculous in the face of the Raleigh lawyer's well known record. Then there were charges equally asinine as to Mr. Bailey's church affiliations.

And the attempt to link Mr. Bailey with John J. Rascob proved fruitless. Much of the opposition to Mr. Raskob was due to his church affiliation, and the nauseau of the recent whispering campaign which destroyed Al Smith in North Carolina is enough to prevent a recurrence in the present campaign.

Mr. Bailey's restraint is admirable. Whether it wins him the nomination or not, it serves to keep the campaign free from bitterness and will not furnish fuel for the Republican candidate's campaign in the fall. Likewise it serves to free the state from the stench of another sickening and hypocritical campaign such as that staged in 1928.

A Situation Demanding Action

During the past ten years the University of North Carolina has grown to where it is now one of the few leading universities in the United States. In every corner of the country the University has become known for its strong faculty, its equipment and its progressive tendencies in education. Many have called it one of the few Universities which is well balanced in all of its schools.

Right now the University is facing a crisis, a crisis far more serious than most of us realize. Almost daily some prominent member of the faculty accepts a position at another University with double the salary that he is getting here, and with better opportunities to carry out his policies. It has come to a point where one is almost afraid to read the Tar Heel for fear that he will see stories about the resignation of another full professor.

Why is it that so many of our faculty are leaving? No one can say that they do not like Chapel Hill and its environment. It is generally admitted that this is a location conducive to study and research in many fields. We may go so far as to say that those leaving hate very much to leave the University, but many other institutions are always calling for such capable leaders as we now have, and they cannot afford to stay here when offers come of the type received recently by some of our faculty members.

What are we going to do about it? Are we going to sit back and let the University of North Carolina drop to the level of the average college or are we going to maintain the fine standard upon which we have run during the past decade? Everyone says keep it on this high plane, but something must be done to do this. The board of trustees is doing all that it can do. It is searching the entire country for a president and such other men as are needed to fill vacancies, but it cannot get the best men, for everyone being considered for office would have to give up large salaries and more ideal working conditions to accept a position here. It is high time that the students take an active part in the fight to save the University from dropping to the ranks.

What can the students do about it? That is the question frequently asked. Every student in the University is able to talk for increased appropriations, which would include a higher salary scale, and a larger maintenance fund. We students scatter to every corner of the state during the summer, and we can talk to our loyal alumni, to candidates for the legislature, and anyone else who is able to affect the life of the University. Many of us are eligible to vote. Those who are should by all means find out what the candidates reaction is toward the situation here at the University, and he should work for anyone who favors taking steps toward increasing appropriations and maintaining the University on its present level.

This editorial is an appeal to everyone interested in the welfare of the University to do his or her part to stop the exodus of the faculty, to revise the salary scale, to increase the maintenance fund.—K.C.R.

Aiding The University

In the course of its last meeting, the debate council of the University hit upon a policy for next year which we believe will result in definite good to the University and the state. The group went on record as deciding to send debaters to various parts of the state next year to speak on behalf of the University's financial interests. Several members of the council were of the opinion that the rural sections of the state have a mistaken conception of the work of their state University. By speaking in public places next year the Carolina debaters hope to counteract this misinformation, and at the same time to present the pressing financial situation of the institution at present.

Such an idea immediately calls to mind the efforts of North Carolina's educational leaders of other years. Such ardent advocates of mass education as Vance and Aycock literally went out into the crooks and corners of the commonwealth and presented the case of secondary and collegiate education in such a forceful manner that all loyal citizens were forced to rally to the cause. It is to be hoped that every member of the Carolina student body will lend a helping hand to the movement which the debate council has decided to launch next year.—J.C.W.

Readers' Opinions

THIS THING OF DANCING IN STORES

When passing before a certain store in this town a few days ago, I was never so surprised in all my life. On the inside of the store were students and co-eds dancing for the benefit of on-lookers of all sorts. What do you think of a thing like that?

In my opinion it is the biggest "shine" ever pulled at the University, including initiations. This action shows that either those taking part have not been properly trained, or they are trying to be College Annas and Joe Colleges.

Of course, it's all right for a person to feel at home in a store, but do you think it proper to show off your great dancing ability to the public without even being asked for such an exhibition? I don't. Besides, this is not even business-like. If one is such a genius at this sport he or she should make a money making job of it. Genius should always show the world his ability. Am I right or not?

An Griped Person

CAROLINA CRUDITY

Are the students of Carolina really as crude as they appear to be? I have reference to their conduct at entertainments on the campus performed by women artists. Three times have women dancers come to this University only to go away embarrassed and disgusted with the student body for their lack of courtesy and apparent vulgarity of mind.

Why is it that when one or more beautifully formed women come out on the stage and execute a graceful and pleasing dance, a certain class of sensually minded boors have to whistle, laugh and hoot at them? Can they not see the difference between artistic, inspiring dancing and that executed on the burlesque stage by women who are internationally aiming to please the bestial passions of men?

Perhaps this conduct can be laid to human nature, but young men who come to a university are supposed to learn how to control and direct this nature, and not let it run riot whenever an opportunity presents itself. If the desire to whistle and laugh at a graceful dancer wells up in the breast of an onlooker, he should have the decency and manners to suppress it and not give audible expression to his lack of appreciation of what is fine and artistic. Thus he will not bring disgrace and mortification to the rest of the audience and, principally, to the University.

Carolina has a good reputation; but how long will it retain it if the artists who have been invited to perform here are ridiculed and treated with utmost discourtesy? These people are by no means unimportant actors of whom no one ever hears. They are world famous, and will carry their impression of Carolina with them from now on. What is more, they will report the conduct of their audiences at the University of North Carolina and warn other troups against performing here if they value their art and their self-respect. For to be unappreciated and misunderstood is one of life's greatest blows, and few people are more sensitive than actors and artists who feel and live their work.

It is to be hoped that this lack of manners and common courtesy, if not decency and appreciation of the worth-while, is to be found in the minority of Carolina audiences to dance programs, and it would be a deprivation to the rest of the aesthetically minded audiences of dancing troups ceased to be invited

By Joe Jones

For weeks they have been lying there, dozens of naked bodies stretched prone on the hot, bare concrete of Emerson stadium. The midday sun-heat of Carolina early summer smites them steadily and unceasingly. Through the sultriest hours of noon they lie exposed, some face downward, some with slim bellies upturned to the cobalt sky. All are still, with closed eyes.

They lie in puddles of sweat. It may be perspiration that drips from their faces, but it is sweat, copious and salty, that runs from their legs and thighs, that stands in shallow pools along their loins, that turns the hollows between their ribs into tiny trickling gutters.

The scene is a strange one to those who have never tried sun-bathing au naturel, the only real way. The very thought of it is astounding to many who have never sun-bathed at all. Men and women with skins under their clothing the hue of a dead fish's belly raise their hands in holy horror because a sensible young man or maid displays a hide whose velvet surface bears the splendid, rich color of mahogany. "Why on earth," they say, "does anybody want to lie out in the broiling sun and get all burnt up?"

The tanned sun-bather smiles. Should he deign to make reply he might say something like this: You'll never know until you try it. There are few pleasures equal to lying stripped up there on the stadium in the sun. The sensation is not easily described. The entire soul and body seem to drink in with the sun's rays a vast contentment and satisfaction. To know the deepest of this pleaure one must lie still and relaxed; any clothing, a bit of shade, a cloud across the sun, mar the effect. All the meanness and weariness of life seem to dissolve and flow out of the body with the drops of sweat.

It is a sort of tranquil intoxication, whose after-effects are strength and vigor. For a completely tanned person not only looks better than a pale one but he feels better. His muscles seem alive and eager; they look stronger, they feel stronger, they are stronger. The whole body feels freshened and cleaned throughout.

There is nothing mysterious about this. Sunlight is life; darkness is death. Look at the brass under a board, or a young calf shut up for several weeks in a darkened stall. Look at people buying all these violet ray contraptions; look at mothers feeding their babies cod-liver oil —substitutes for sunlight.

There's nothing the matter with the nude sun-bathing craze; nor is it the slightest bit uncouth. I remember that it was in full vogue at the Lido when I was there several years ago, and I now read that it has leapt Italy to find high favor from one end of the Riviera to the other. This is no short-lived fad; it is health dealing another blow to prudery. Emerson stadium looks forward to many years of service as one of the altars of the modern sun-worshipers.

GRAHAM SELECTED CAPTAIN OF 1931 VARSITY NETMEN

Sophomore To Lead Strong Tennis Team; Hines, Grant and Wright Eligible For Varsity Action Next Year.

E. K. "Sonny" Graham of Chapel Hill, sophomore, has been elected captain of next year's tennis team. Playing in the number four position, "Sonny" played a good game throughout this past season. In point of view of matches won and lost, Graham's record is hardly as impressive as some of the other members of the team, but his play and general attitude have been consistent enough to merit the honor of leading a team that promises to be one of the strongest in the country next year.

In addition to Graham, next year's squad will see Ed Yeomans, last year's state title winner, Hinky Hendlin, this year's North Carolina singles and doubles champ, Phil Liskin, holder with Hendlin of the doubles title, Bryan Grant and Wilmer Hines, southern senior and junior champs, Lenoir Wright, another rising star from the freshman ranks and several from the reserves.

The Tar Heel tennis team will lose Captain Bill Merritt by graduation. Julian Palmore and Henry Baggs also are slated to get their diplomas, but are eligible to compete for a varsity berth again next year in case they elect to continue their studies here.

DENNING DOWNED IN MIDGET GOLF

O. J. Coffin, head of the University department of journalism, defeated Elbert Denning, Carolina student, one up on the 18th hole in an exhibition match at the Midget Golf Course yesterday afternoon.

Denning made several rather brilliant putts, but was weak on his approach shots, and Mr. Coffin's all-round consistency of play enabled him to come through with a victory and lay claim to the settlement of a Coca Cola wager.

Mr. Coffin, being a more experienced golfer and professing not to be disturbed by the large gallery, granted Denning, who was slightly gallery shy and not in his best form, a handicap of ten in order to put the match on a more competitive basis.

Denning, with his handicap, held a substantial lead until the 16th hole, where Mr. Coffin took a three while Denning needed a six before he could sink his putt, and the cards were all-even. Both took four on the 17th, and Mr. Coffin eked out a victory on the last hole with a birdie two when Denning made a last desperate attempt to cop the match with a three.

Durham Gas Company Will Soon Open Here

A branch of the Durham Gas company opened in Chapel Hill last Tuesday morning. This company will supply the town with gas through a direct piping line.

Before the company would agree to extend their lines to Chapel Hill they had to get at least two hundred and fifty people in Chapel Hill and vicinity to register for the service.

The gas is artificial and is a mixture between water gas and coal gas.

The piping has been installed as far as the fork of the Durham road, and it is hoped that gas will be available by the first of July.

FARMER LEADING TAR HEEL POINT GETTER IN TRACK

Sophomore Sprint Star Totals Over 100 Points In Season; Brown, Barkley Follow.

The flying sophomore Charlie Farmer led the point-getters for the University of North Carolina's Southern Conference track champions during the highly successful season just closed, an official summary of season results disclosed yesterday.

Farmer scored 100½ points. He won the 100 and 220 dashes in every dual meet, won the 220 at the Southern Conference meet and placed in the 100, and tied both southern dash records.

Another sophomore was second honor man, Theron Brown rolling up 85 points on consistent work in the discus, javelin and broadjump. Minor Barkley, senior distance ace, came third with 65 points gathered on fine races in the half-mile and mile.

The season was considered one of the best of a number of fine track seasons Carolina has had in the nine-year regime of Coach R. A. Fetzer, who is generally regarded as the dean of southern track.

Besides winning the southern title, the Tar Heels took their ninth straight state title, and won by at least 25 points every dual meet except from the strong Princeton team. Their victories included the strong Penn State squad and Washington and Lee's southern indoor champions.

In the state meet the Fetzer legion triumphed by a tremendous margin, scoring 76.8 points while N. C. State came second with 26, trailed by Davidson, Duke, Wake Forest and High Point in order named.

In the southern meet the Tar Heels scored first on 40½ points, followed by Georgia with 28, and trailed in order by Mississippi A. & M., Tulane, Auburn, L. S. U., Tennessee, N. C. State, Georgia Tech, Alabama, Vanderbilt, Kentucky, Maryland and Duke.

Charlie Farmer and the Tar Heel relay teams also carried off principal honors at the Georgia Tech relays, where the Tar Heel entries set four of six new records.

Seven University records went down before their stellar work, and an eighth mark was tied. Farmer tied the 100-yard mark at 9.8 seconds and lowered the 220 mark to 21.2. Other new records were cridited to the half and mile relay teams and to Barkley, half-mile, 1:56.5; Neiman, broadjump, 22 feet 5¾; Bagby, high jump, 6 feet ¼; Arnold, vault, 13 feet.

The other leading Tar Heel point-winners, trailing Farmer, Brown and Barkley, were Slusser 54, Gay 45, Perry 41½, Arnold 33½, Baucom 33, Bagby 33, Neiman 32 1-3, Adkins 32, Weil 24, Lowry 22, Johnson 20½, Nims 18¼.

SELECTIONS MADE FOR ALL-CAMPUS BASEBALL TEAMS

New Dorms, Series Winners, Are Given Large Number of Posts By Intramural Umpires.

The honorary all-intramural baseball teams, including the 20 men who have been judged best for the entire season's play, was announced yesterday. These teams were selected by Jenks Hutchinson and Pap Harden, intramural umpires, assisted by Wallace Shelton, assistant director and statistician of the intramural department of athletics. Individual ability, general teamwork and sportsmanship all entered into the consideration of the judges in making their selections.

In the dormitory selections New Dorms, dormitory and campus champions, filled the greater portion of positions, placing a man on every berth except three infield posts and one pitcher, and landing a total of six men on the all-dormitory team. Carr placed men on first base, short and in the mound, while Aycock filled the tenth position left at third.

On the fraternity team, Lambda Chi Alpha, the frat champs and runner-up for the campus title, placed two outfielders and a pitcher, while Kappa Sigma, with two infielders and one outfielder, placed an equal number. S. A. E. ranked second with two men and D. K. E. and Phi Sigma Kappa filled out the quota with one each.

ALL-FRATERNITY TEAM

First base, "Beakie" Huger, S. A. E.; second base, George Waterhouse, S. A. E.; third base, Billy Satterfield, Kappa Sigma; shortstop, Joe Eagles, Kappa Sigma; outfielders, Long, Lambda Chi Alpha; Aaron Prevost, Lambda Chi Alpha, and Zeke Cozart, Kappa Sigma; catcher, Elliott Newcombe, D. K. E.; pitchers, Bob Bullock, Lambda Chi Alpha, and Jimmy Teachey, Phi Sigma Kappa.

ALL-DORMITORY TEAM

First base, G. C. Sanders, Carr; second base, Wallace Shelton, New Dorms; third base, Stud Wall, Aycock; shortstop: B. Witkin, Carr; outfielders, Pap Harden, New Dorms; Ellis Fysal, New Dorms, and Wade Hampton, New Dorms; catcher, Coley Williamson, New Dorms; pitchers, Bit Brown, Carr, and Wilcy Moore, New Dorms.

Plans Progress For Lombardo's Arrival

is quite a feather in the cap of the University, as he will play in Chapel Hill before touring any other part of the state. Lombardo is credited with having one of the nation's premiere orchestras. He has been recording for the Columbia Phonograph Company for several years, and has perhaps as wide a following as any orchestra leader in the country.

The special cooling system for the Tin Can will make the building quite comfortable even in the hottest weather. The size of the building indicates that the large crowd will be well taken care of at the dances.

Leaders of the German Club will conduct a figure at each of the formal dances, and at the last one, on Thursday night, the executive committee will formally turn their duties over to next year's committee at the close of the figure.

At present the entire student body of the University is busy making preparations for the string of activities that will mark the close of the school year, and the farewell to some 400 men who will graduate.

SPORTS CHATTER

By Hugh Wilson

It looks like Ad Warren is biting off the stiffest piece of cake Friday that he has taken on since his fights with Jake Denning. Middlekauf is a real fighter with a real reputation. He dumped Phil Scott on the canvas a couple of times while the Englishman was training for his fight with Jack Sharkey, and the Briton's manager, Jimmy Johnston of New York, was so pleased with the ex-U. of Florida boxer and grid hero that he took him under his management. And Jimmy is no manager of ordinary pugs! Yale Okun, Mike McTigue, ex-175-pound champ, Pete Latzo, ex-welterweight title holder, and Phil Scott, heavyweight champion of Europe, and a host of other well-known fighters are and have been under the management of "Loquacious Jimmy," as he is sometimes known. Ad appears to be in fine shape, presenting a hard, tanned and peppy appearance. The scrap should be a wow, with the men evenly matched, and possibilities for a knockout either way are not unlikely, as both pack a sleep-producing wallop and use it often.

In the semi-final to the main go, Ox Shuford and Bill Suggs will put on an all-U. N. C. affair. Both men have been students at the University.

And speaking of fights, that Sharkey-Schmeling setto will be coming along right soon. As usual, it is receiving all the "ballyhoo" that the promoters can induce the newspapers to give it, just like the Sharkey-Scott "Battle of the Palms" fiasco. However, we don't think that this fight will be such a bust, no matter who wins or how soon. At present, Schmeling seems to be using up just about all the cannon fodder in the way of sparring partners that can be found around New York and is issuing another call for more. Just another instance of the old "ballyhoo" artists' tricks! Schmeling looked bad in his first workouts, so it was necessary to build up an idea that he was shaping up better; to further that end, a carload of stumblebum, punch drunk fourth raters are being fed up to him to make him seem tough. No one hears much about the favorite, Sharkey, murdering any sparring partners; but just take a look at the men with whom he works out, and there's the answer! First raters, or near first raters, every one of them.

Another fight which is attracting much attention is that scheduled for June 23 between the two man-mountains of the fight game, George Godfrey and Primo Carnera. The fight is to be held in Philadelphia, where the largest crowd since the first Dempsey-Tunney fight witnessed the Italian giant knockout Ace Clark, another giant negro, in his hardest fight of the year. For five rounds Clark had given the Italian an awful pasting, the crowd having howled for the referee to stop the fight from the fourth on. Just as he was about to do so in the sixth round, Carnera put over a knockout punch and Clark was on the floor for ten. As Godfrey holds a knockout decision over Clark, gained in short order, and is perhaps the best fighter—barring none—in the ring game today, it is likely that Primo will take his first defeat since his invasion of America began, unless, as is quite possible and quite likely, the bout is "framed."

It seems like Godfrey will never get a chance at that world's championship. Weighing close to 245 pounds, possessing an 85-inch reach and more speed than many 190 or 200 pounders and infinitely more boxing science, he has been dodged by all the first rate white fighters except a few, and the opinion of fandom is that his bouts with those few were well decided in advance. In his bout with Risko, all during the early rounds of the fight the "Black Giant of Leiperville" scored Risko's body with terrific blows which lifted the Cleveland boy from his feet and hurled him against the ropes. The few of Risko's blows which landed seemed to slide off the negro's hide like water. Suddenly, near the middle of the fight, Godfrey ceased to hit Risko and clinched for the remainder of the fight! Although Risko won the decision, he paid dearly for it, for he has never been the same since in any of his fights.

Again, in his fight with the Spaniard, Uscudum, Godfrey took the early rounds and held on for the last half of the fight, receiving a draw this time. Uzcudum went on the down grade like Risko immediately afterwards, being chopped to pieces by Schmeling and generally showing up the effects of Godfrey's body punches.

Ad Warren put the finishing touches on his training in preparation for his fight with Bill Middlekauf tonight yesterday afternoon, doing no boxing but confining himself to road work and to a few exercises to keep the edge on his wind. He wound up his real session of training Wednesday afternoon, going

SCHOOL SALARIES ARE READJUSTED

Pay of Teachers Here Will Be Brought Nearer to the State's Basis

EXCESS OF TEN PER CENT.

The Chapel Hill school board has decided to readjust the teachers' salary schedule so as to bring it nearer to the official state basis. The salaries here will still be above the state basis but by a smaller margin that at present.

Under the state schedule a teacher holding a Grade A certificate starts off on $900 a year. This increases automatically until it is $1200 in the fifth year of service. In Chapel Hill the first year's salary henceforth will be 10 per cent higher, or $990. The 10 per cent margin would make the maximum $1,320, as compared with the state's $1,200, but here the annual increase will continue two years longer than under the state schedule, with the result that the maximum will be $1,400.

The margin does not apply to the superintendent. His salary will conform to state schedule.

The board's decision to make a readjustment came after an examination of the records of teachers' pay in several of the larger cities. Among four cities —Wilmington, Raleigh, Charlotte, and Asheville—it was found that only Asheville was above Chapel Hill in the differential above the state schedule that it allowed its teachers. Charlotte, Raleigh, and Wilmington were below Chapel Hill. The same was found to be the case with several smaller communities.

The effect of the readjustment will be a reduction in the total salary budget. How much this reduction will amount to is not yet exactly determined. Probably between $1,500 and $2,000. It may be that the school board will be able to restore one or more departments of instruction that it was compelled to abandon a year ago.

Mrs. Abernethy in A Motor Accident

Car Overturns and Catches Fire on Highway near La Grange

Mrs. Eric Abernethy barely escaped with her life from an automobile accident near LaGrange, on highway No. 10, last Saturday. Mrs. Frank King of Beaufort, who was in the car with her was killed. The travelers were on their way westward from Kinston.

With Mrs. Abernethy and Mrs. King in the car were her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Abernethy, who was driving, and her brother, W. A. Mace.

Something seemed to be wrong with the motor before the party set out from Kinston, but it was examined at a garage and declared to be in good order. After the journey had been in progress some time Mrs. John Abernethy became aware of an exceptional heat. When she tried to stop she found that the steering wheel was immovable. The car plunged off the road, overturned in the ditch, and a moment later burst into flames.

It was with great difficulty that Mrs. Abernethy, Mrs. John Abernethy and Mr. John Mace could extricate themselves. They tried their best to pull Mrs. King out, but they could not succeed. She had already become unconscious, and it is thought that she died of shock even before the efforts at rescue could be made.

Mrs. Abernethy, though not dangerously injured, is suffering from burns and severe bruises.

EMINENT BANKER TO HEAD SUMMER SCHOOL COURSE

University Alumnus Particularly Qualified For The Task; Was Campus Leader.

Dean Carroll of the school of commerce has announced that Mr. Edwin E. White, who is connected with the National City Bank of New York city and who has been stationed for the last five years at Shanghai, China, and at Manilla, Philippine Islands, will give a course in banking at the second session of summer school here.

Mr. White is an alumnus of the University, having graduated in 1920. While a student here he was quite active socially and otherwise. Among his honors were editor of the Yackety Yack, Golden Fleece, Phi Beta Kappa and membership in a number of social orders.

Among his business relations are connection with the International Banking Corporation of New York and England and with the International Banking Corporation of Yokohama, Japan. While in China Mr. White was president of the International Corporation at Shanghai.

The department of economics and commerce considers itself fortunate in securing a man of Mr. White's high scholastic standing and unusual practical experience to have charge of the banking course.

Peace Changes Title

The longed-for wish of students and of hundreds of alumnae of Peace Institute in Raleigh has been fulfilled. The historic Presbyterian institution will no longer be known as "Peace Institute." The board of trustees have officially decreed that the name of the school shall be changed to "Peace, a Junior College for Women."

It was hard to tell whether alumnae or students greeted with heartier approval the announcement of the change made by Mrs. B. R. Lacy at the annual alumnae meeting by Dr. W. C. Pressly, president, and to students at the luncheon hour.

ANOTHER ANSWER TO MISS "A. W."

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

It's a shame that our dear Miss A. W. is all fluffed up over the way the co-eds are treated at the University. To me it seems that the Carolina Gentlemen and not the co-eds should be protesting against the arrangement on the campus by which the co-eds are allowed to help elect our student councilmen when the councilmen have no jurisdiction over the co-eds. No co-ed should have the right to help elect an officer who has no control over her. As it now stands the women have a part in ruling us while we have nothing to do with governing them. We are granting the co-eds a favor for which we get no thanks. Still they say that they get no recognition.

The very fact that the co-eds are at the University proves that they are here because of a desire to mingle with men and meet prospective husbands. This does not apply to all of them but it does to more than most people would realize. Now, Miss A. W., we do not condemn you and your sisters for wanting to be married. We condemn your means of trying to get married. To so openly declare that you are a husband hunter by coming to the University greatly lessens your chances. Man likes to think that the dear sweet thing had no intention of getting married until he came along and changed her mind about the matter. By entering the University every co-ed places herself under suspicion. Many men feel as though she has a sign hung upon her saying: "Won't some nice man marry me before I become an old maid." Therefore, fair co-eds, go back to N. C. C. W. and pretend that you never thought of getting married. Then you will have better luck.

I once thought that men sought women instead of the other way around, but the persistence by which women try to invade every male institution certainly proves that I was entirely wrong. Women seem to try to get into everything that men are connected with. I don't hear anything about men clamoring to be admitted to N. C. C. W. or Meredith. But how different is it with women. They besiege us on all sides.

Ad's workout with Brother John was especially hot, both men tearing in and letting fly with both hands. His workout with Archie Allen was a footrace, with Archie as leader and Ad vainly purusing. At the end of the workout Ad seemed almost as fresh as at the beginning, appearing to be in the best of shape.

SIGMA XI HEARS DR. W. L. POTEAT AT FINAL DINNER

Ex-President Wake Forest College Speaks on Value of Research.

NEW MEMBERS INDUCTED

With Dr. W. L. Poteat, noted educator and scientist, as principal speaker, the University chapter of Sigma Xi, scientific fraternity, held its last meeting of the year in form of a dinner at the Carolina Inn Thursday night.

Dr. Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest College, spoke upon the value of research. According to Dr. Poteat, discoveries are made possible only by previous experiments and discoveries. As an example, the noted educator stated that the discoveries of Marconi would not have been possible except for the findings of Maxwell and Hertz.

Dr. Poteat showed the need for research men, who, he said, were usually poor teachers but invaluable in their work. He declared that discoveries so far were only a beginning and that at the present time generalization is needed.

Another point that Dr. Poteat brought out was the need of disseminating and popularizing scientific knowledge and the need for the use of popular language.

At the dinner Thursday night Dr. Poteat was made an honorary member of the society. At this time four associate members were granted active membership. The new active members are Dr. J. M. Valentine of the zoology department, Miss Velma Matthews, D. R. Eagles, and W. J. Mattox.

Fourteen persons were elected to associate membership at the meeting last Thursday. Those to receive this honor are Miss Nancy Eliason, M. W. Conn, T. L. King, W. F. Smith, W. W. Williams, E. S. Gilbreath, J. H. Sanders, Haywood Parker, Jr., E. E. Huffman, Miss Maud Webster, L. E. Warrick, Merritt Lear, T. C. Watkins and W. O. Prickett.

Famous Orchestra To Give Concert In Gerrard Hall

In connection with the German Club dances, Guy Lombardo will give a concert Thursday afternoon, June 12, from 4 until 5 in Gerrard hall. Lombardo's orchestra makes a specialty of its concerts and according to those who have heard him before, the concerts will be the feature of the entire final dances.

It was only after extensive negotiations with the Music Corporation of America that German Club officials secured permission to stage the concert, and they believe that those who do not wish to attend the dances will be well repaid by attending the concert. Cards for the concert may be secured from the treasurer, Will Yarborough, at the S. A. E. house next week, at the regular admission price of 75 cents each.

Cameron To Catch Fish

Dr. Cameron of the chemistry department will lay down his duties as University professor for a few weeks in June, going on a fishing trip to Minnesota. Later he will return to the University to start work on the Robert Ober scholarship.

ZETA PSI WINS NEW DEKE AWARD

Fraternity Trophy Given on Basis of Athletics and Scholarship.

Resulting from the completion of an intricate mathematical system of points, the Zeta Psi fraternity has been proclaimed the winner of the Deke trophy for the school year 1929-1930.

Due to the close competition between the fraternities on the campus, selecting the receiver of the award required a longer time than was at first contemplated. This being the first appearance of this trophy on the campus, a scoring system which would include both scholarship and athletics in their proper proportions had to be established.

The trophy, the first of the awards to be presented annually by the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, is also the first of its kind to appear on the campus. It is intended to promote interest in scholarship and athletics among the fraternities at the University. Every year the outranking fraternity in these two fields will be awarded temporary possession of the trophy, its name being inscribed on a silver tablet at the base of the pedestal. In order to gain permanent possession, a fraternity must win the trophy three times, two of which must be in successive years.

The basis for selecting the fraternity to win the award is divided equally between scholarship and athletics. The fraternity's average for the year furnishes half of the standard upon which its rating is judged. A scale of proportions determines the number of points won by members of fraternities holding positions on the athletic squads or competing in intramural sports; the total number of points won for athletic activities are divided by the number of members in the fraternity in order to counteract the handicap otherwise incurred by the smaller fraternities.

The trophy, a handsome piece of silver statuary representing achievement in mind and body, will be on display in the Pritchard-Lloyd drug store today.

MANGUM CONTEST PLANNED JUNE 7

Traditional Contest in Oratory To Be Held in Gerrard Hall on Class Day.

The most important single item in the Commencement program was for many years the contest for the Mangum Medal in Oratory. This medal was established in memory of Willie Person Mangum by his children in 1878 and is continued by members of his family.

As long as the number of degrees given at commencement remained at not over one hundred, the contest held its honored and designed place as a part of the final exercises; but when the number rose far beyond one hundred, the exercises became too long, and the contest was transferred to class day.

The list of winners of the Mangum Medal includes many notable names, among them being Professor Albert Coates of the school of law, Chief Justice W. P. Stacy of the North Carolina Supreme Counrt, and Judge J. J. Parker of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The contest this year will be held at 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

President's Message To Seniors

To the Members of the Graduating Class:

I am writing to call your attention to certain important matters in connection with the commencement exercises. Will you please give these individual items your careful attention, as a number of changes from the usual procedure are necessary this year. Of special importance is the provision explained further on in this letter regarding the securing of admission tickets for the commencement exercises for your families, due to the lack of auditorium facilities at the University.

First, there will be a rehearsal of the procedure of the commencement exercises, under the direction of Dr. C. S. Mangum, on Friday, June 6, at 2 o'clock in Gerrard hall. Attendance at this rehearsal is important.

Second, the baccalaureate sermon will be preached on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in the Methodist church. Graduates are expected to attend this exercise in cap and gown. The procession will form at the well and march to the church. In case of rain, seniors will assemble in the social rooms of the church in cap and gown. It is always understood that graduates attend this exercise unless prevented by some legitimate excuse.

Third, commencement exercises on Tuesday, June 10, will be held in the auditorium of the Methodist church. Graduates will assemble, in cap and gown, in places which will be designated by Dr. Mangum at the rehearsal on Friday, June 6. On account of the limited capacity of the Methodist church, the following instructions are exceedingly important.

1. In order to insure admittance of families to the commencement exercises, graduates must register at the business office on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, June 2, 3 or 4, making application for the number of tickets which they desire.

2. Beginning Thursday morning, June 5, and ending Saturday noon, June 7, tickets will be distributed at the business office as nearly in accord with the applications as possible. It should be emphasized that no person can, under any circumstances, gain admission to the commencement exercises without a ticket. The whole desire of the University is to give members of the graduating class priority for the admission of members of their families, and any graduate who does not comply with the foregoing provisions must realize that there is no method by which members of his family can be admitted to the exercises.

Wishing you all a happy graduation period, I am

Cordially yours,

H. W. CHASE, President.

Traditional Order Of Events Planned For Commencement

German Club Notice

All members of the German Club who do not secure their tickets for Finals before 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, June 3, will be required to present membership cards if they request cards after that date. Cards may be secured this afternoon from 1 until 1:45; and Monday and Tuesday afternoons from 1 until 2 and the same evenings from 7 until 8. No cards will be delivered after that date until Tuesday, June 10.

Three vacancies remain open and freshmen who wish to join are advised to see the treasurer, Will Yarborough, at the S.A.E. house this afternoon.

Library Is Given Ancient Clay Tablets

The University library has recently acquired, for the Hanes foundation for the study of the origin and development of the book, a collection of 20 Sumerian and Babylonian clay tablets.

They represent the type of document used in the business transactions of the time, practice tablets for the study of writing, directions for taxes, and various memoranda of this nature. Many of the Sumerian tablets date from before 2000 years before Christ, while the Babylonian tablets are from about 500 B. C. References in the statements on the tablets are frequently made to the cities of Babylon, Erech and Ur of the Chaldees.

These tablets will be exhibited, together with other materials from the Hanes collection, before and during commencement week on the first floor corridor in the main library.

FINLEY TO GIVE FINAL ADDRESS

Class Day Exercises To Be Held Saturday Under Davie Poplar.

LINGLE PREACHES SUNDAY

Beginning with class day exercises next Saturday and concluding Tuesday with the presentation of diplomas, the commencement exercises of the class of 1930 have been completely arranged.

The illustrious Dr. John Finley, editor of the New York Times, will deliver the commencement address in the auditorium of the Methodist church Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. O. Max Gardner, governor of North Carolina, is to present the diplomas.

According to the plans of "Red" Greene, the class president, the seniors will form their procession, according to the time-honored custom, and procede to the church from Alumni building attired in the universally traditional regalia—dignified caps and gowns. A rehearsal of the order of events for these long-to-be-remembered exercises will be held Saturday at 2 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

For many years in the past the seniors have marched, on class day, from the Old Well of the University to the venerable Davie Poplar and from there, having completed their annual exercises, down Senior Walk along the south borders of the campus.

Again this year, on Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, the procession will procede to the University's shrine. Again, in accordance with other ancient customs, they will hear the history of their class reviewed, this time by Johnson Alexander; they will

DRAMATIC GROUP ELECTS OFFICERS

Wex Malone To Head Wigue and Masque; Plans Announced For Winter Production.

At the last meeting of the Wigue and Masque for the current school year held Thursday night the following officers were elected: president, Wex Malone; vice-president, Arthur Sickles; secretary, Jack White; treasurer, Moore Bryson. Plans were laid for the production of a musical comedy sometime in the winter quarter of next year.

The play, which is practically completed, is the work of Moore Bryson. "Block," as he is more generally called, is an old trooper with the Playmakers, and has had several years of experience with dramatic production. He began work on this musical comedy with the intention of having it produced by Wigue and Masque this year. It was soon discovered that Wigue and Masque would have no show this year, so the play is to be carried over and produced next winter.

The music of the coming production is being done by Wex Malone. Malone is a veteran in the college musical comedy field, having had two years experience with the Blackfriars, the musical comedy club at the University of Chicago, and has been connected with Wigue and Masque for the past three years.

When Memorial hall was condemned last winter, the plans of Wigue and Masque for a production for this year were completely frustrated. A musical comedy production requires a large stage, and Memorial hall offered the only one available. There was some talk of using the Chapel Hill high school auditorium or the Playmakers stage, but it was soon decided that neither of these offered the much needed facility. The club adopted the policy that it would be better not to give a production than to attempt one that would not be assured the same success that the plays have enjoyed in the past. The erection of the new auditorium by the University will, of course, eliminate this obstacle. Wigue and Masque is to have special facilities in the new building, and prospects look bright for an unusually good show next winter.

HIBBARD GIVES FAREWELL TALK BEFORE SENIORS

Speaks in Gerrard Hall on "Ideals"; Maryon Saunders Talks.

Dean Addison Hibbard of the college of liberal arts spoke to the seniors last evening in Gerrard hall for his final appearance in Chapel Hill. His subject was "Ideals."

Dean Hibbard asked the question, "Can a college man keep his ideals through life?" In reply he said, "If he separates his illusions from his ideals, lives up to his ideals and lets his illusions go by, I think he can."

He grouped ideals in three classes: the integrity of thought, action and beauty. "Beauty should particularly be stressed," said Dean Hibbard. "America doesn't stress beauty enough."

And in conclusion he stated, "Unless a man lives up to his ideals, he is lost."

Following Dean Hibbard's talk, Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, urged the seniors to join the alumni association.

CLASS OF 1930 URGED TO JOIN ALUMNI SOCIETY

Campus Leaders Issue Statements Favoring Affiliation With Alumni Association.

Seniors have been invited to join the Alumni Association individually. The executive committee of the class has urged that members affiliate with the Association, and many members of the class have declared their intentions of joining. Below are printed some statements by several seniors. These were gathered about the campus, and show something of the feeling of members of the class of 1930:

"I'm eager to see the class of 1930 set up a permanent class organization, and affiliate itself with the Alumni Association. I believe that a high percentage of membership in the Association by individual members of our class is the best means of insuring us an active and functioning permanent class organization."—Red Greene, president senior class.

"Serving as it does as the connecting link between the University and the alumnus, I believe that the University Alumni Association deserves the hearty cooperation and support of the class of 1930. Through the Alumni Association the alumnus is enabled to continue what are probably the most valuable and enjoyable contacts of his entire life—those formed during his University days. Every member of the class of 1930 owes it to himself to become a member of the University Alumni Association."—Glenn Holder, editor the Daily Tar Heel.

"In every respect the Alumni Association renders effective assistance to the University in all its major activities. Through it, also, association is maintained with other alumni, and its work is vital to the University and to the alumni themselves. The association should have the wholehearted cooperation of every member of the class of 1930."—Ray Farris, president student body, captain football.

"I believe that the University Alumni Association provides the alumnus with the best and most beneficial means of keeping in touch with the University and with those who were his fellow students."—Jimmy Williams, president Y. M. C. A.

Readjustment

Apealing to the student body and those interested in the University to regard the present financial predicament as temporary, Dr. Chase points out that although the English department is the greatest sufferer by reason of recent resignations, a man "of national reputation in the field of English is perfectly willing to undertake the job of rebuilding the department, even at such a time of financial distress."

We agree with the President. The University has gone forward during the past eight years until today it heads all southern institutions in education. But we are halted temporarily. Shall we forget all that we have done and be pessimistic as to the future? Or shall we remember that as a state supported institution the University must share the progress and the conservatism of the state alike?

Carolina is not to be retrogressive now. We have advanced. We shall continue to advance. At the present time the University is adjusting itself to conditions within the state. Within the next few years we shall again be on the forward path. Our present financial dilemna will be remembered as the beginning of a new era in the history of a great University.

But in order that the Daily Tar Heel may prove a true prophet we must remember that many financial crises are the result of attitudes and not facts. Let us face the future with the knowledge that the University of North Carolina is an educational institution, a state supported institution, and that as such we shall share the state's prosperity and its privation alike—ever facing the future with knowledge that we are, after all, seeking to impart to the youth of the state the means of knowledge. The University is greater than the Budget Bureau or the legislature. It will continue to exist. We are halted temporarily, but we shall renew the struggle with renewed vigor in the years to come and carry on in the channels Dr. Chase, Dean Hibbard and others have hewn for us with the knowledge that although a college generation is soon to pass into the world of experience another is anxiously knocking at the door of opportunity.

The State, The University, And Hard Times

Hard times are upon us—that is a fact which cannot be doubted. Bankruptcies are commonplace in our most prosperous centers, and the general condition of business is admittedly bad, as almost anyone will testify. The farmers are more discouraged than usual, and even the capitalists are becoming anxious. Property valuation has decreased to such an extent that citizens of a certain county have taken steps to have the evaluations as listed in the taxbooks reduced. And it must be added that there is no indication of an immediate change for the better.

When its citizens are prosperous the state is prosperous, and when the population suffers the state and all its direct dependents must also suffer. Thus is North Carolina in the midst of financial woes, and the University, having had her appropriation severely sliced, cries forth. The Daily Tar Heel has lamented the situation, as have many professors and others intimately connected with the institution. In fact, most all of us here have an idea that the University has a prospect for the future which is very empty indeed.

But after all, these situations have occurred before. No later than 1920 did the University face a similar outlook. Because of the economic depression, a readjustment had to be made, and the progress of the University then may have been retarded temporarily. But in the period of prosperity which followed, the University shared in the good fortune of the state as she had shared in the state's reverses. So it seems that now, in a situation similar to that of 1920, we must bear with the taxpayers the burden of depression.

Of course the University must have sufficient funds if its activities are to be carried on in a manner which will be of credit to the institution, but we cannot afford to be pessimistic concerning the future. We can be optimistic without being foolishly so. Certainly in the period of prosperity which inevitably must follow, the University again will share, and because of this temporary condition we must not let the morale of the University be weakened. The situation, gloomy as it appears, must be faced, and we must realize that a readjustment must be made. Keeping our faith in North Carolina, we, as citizens and future citizens, believe that the first problem of the state lies in the way of economic stability.—B. M.

Readers' Opinions

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

It has occurred to me from several expressions in the Tar Heel that there is a good deal of unrest among the students as to the recent faculty losses which the University has suffered and the financial condition.

Naturally we would all wish most heartily that the situation were otherwise in both respects, but it is easy to overestimate the importance of temporary fluctuations both in departments and in financial support. The English department, for example, has suffered more heavily than any other University department in losses of men, yet only this morning I received a telegram of acceptance from a man who has been the first choice of a committee of the department to serve as its head. In other words, with a full knowledge of the situation, a man of national reputation in the field of English is perfectly willing to undertake the job of rebuilding the department, even at such a time of financial stress. Our other losses will be filled. The University is going forward on a sound foundation. There are fluctuations in the support of all state institutions from time to time. Men will come here and grow to maturity and fame as has always been the case.

I do not like to let this last issue of the Tar Heel appear without this sort of word. Every forward step of the University of North Carolina during the 136 years of its existence has been a struggle. Its upward journey will always be a struggle, but its reputation, its spirit and its courage have brought it through crises beside which the present disturbance is but a temporary cloud passing over the sun.

H. W. CHASE.

RIGHTEOUS INDIGNATION

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

I am not a co-ed but a temporary resident of Chapel Hill, an interested reader of the Daily Tar Heel, and one who loves the University of North Carolina as the Alma Mater of father, brothers and son. I must say that I have been shocked and indignant many times at the slurs and insults that have been given to the co-eds by some of the so-called "Carolina Gentlemen."

I have felt impelled to voice my sentiments ere this, but refrained from doing so until I read the communication "A Woman Speaks," and the ungallant answers.

I glory in the spunk of the co-ed who wrote in defense of the women of the Univesity, and I deplore the fact that there are men in this University who speak of the co-eds as "wenches."

Webster's definition of such is " a young girl; usually in an invidious or bad sense; female colored servant." Do you think a gentleman would so insult a lady as to speak of her in such a term? I can not think so. Would they not resent their mother or sister being spoken of in this way?

The University boys of my day were of a different mold, and I am glad to know that there are gentlemen here now, as I have had the pleasure of knowing them and I do not believe they have written any of the insulting articles that have appeared in the Daily Tar Heel this week against the co-eds.

Why should it be considered an affront for the girls to have the advantages of an University education? Do not the taxes of the women of North Carolina as well as those of the men help pay the expenses of the University? Why should their daughters be denied the privilege of "drinking deep of the spring of knowledge"?

It is so absurd that it is ridiculous for "R. L." to say the girls come to the University to try to get married! There is an abundance of egoism in this remark, and my advice to the girls here and elsewhere would be to steer clear of such a man.

As for the attractiveness of the Carolina co-eds, Mr. Carroll says, "if Carolina co-eds rated better there would be more attractive girls" (here I suppose he means). Whose fault is it that they do not "rate better" on this campus when such things are said of them by some of these gentlemen(?) in advertising a dance, "bring a girl, if you can do no better, bring a co-ed."

I also read in the Daily Tar Heel that one student bragged that he had never had a date with a co-ed.

I would like to know what "Ivan the Terrible" intended to convey by saying that "the type of girl which the men of the University desire to associate with is not going to be recognized until such time as she has duly arrived on the campus."

Now I do not know all of the co-eds of this University, but I do know many of them and the homes from which they come. And I say unreservedly they are worthy to compete with any "visiting girl." I care not from whence she comes, and Carolina students should feel it an honor to have them as their friends. Treat them with consideration, give them their just dues and recognition instead of insults.

A LOVER OF FAIR PLAY.

THIS THING OF JOY-KILLING

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

There is a certain class of people who take their keenest delight in joy-killing, which means suppressing or attempting to suppress the pursuits of happiness of others. This is really an abnormal pleasure and persons suffering therefrom should see a psychiatrist.

The foregoing has reference to the complaint filed in the Readers' Opinion column of the Tar Heel for today. This joy-killer says he got the surprise of his life when he passed by a store and saw some students and co-eds dancing in a local store. He accuses these people of dancing for the benefit of the onlookers, while as a matter of fact they did not know whether anyone was looking at them or not; and what's more, they didn't care.

As for the dancing's being the biggest shine ever pulled at the University, it could hardly be awarded that honor, since the insignificance of the matter would not warrant it. To drop in a music store after lunch and dance off a few records is no evidence of lack of training, etiquette, morals, or mental stability. It is no worse than hanging around a drug store; in fact it isn't as bad for dancing is a much more enjoyable pastime than loafing.

Those stopping in for a few minutes of dancing before going to a two o'clock class do not ask for public approval. In fact they do not consider the public in the least. And why should they? As long as the managers of the store do not object to a little innocent amusement for a short time, students and co-eds are not going to care whether or not some Puritanical faultfinder disapproves of their taking a little time out for recreation. The argument that the dancing isn't businesslike and the recommendation that the participants go into dancing for a living is veritably laugnable and smacks of the reasoning of a freshman taking English 1a and making D on the course. As an argument it is pitifully weak.

It is not the purpose of any student or co-ed to turn the store in question into a dance hall, but with the following points in view, who wouldn't take advantage of an opportunity to "hop" a little: the managers are very agreeable; the best victrolas are available to play the latest and snappiest records; the floor is excellent, and after-supper dancing at the woman's building has long since ceased.

In closing, it might be well to remark that possibly and very probably the "griped person" does not dance, himself, and therefore cannot appreciate how those who do feel about the matter. Usually this is the case when such complaints are voiced.

TRACK STARS TO ENTER NATIONAL CHICAGO GAMES

Brown, Barkley, and Farmer to Leave for Collegiates Next Wednesday.

Charlie Farmer, Theron Brown, and Minor Barkley, who led the University of North Carolina trackmen to their Southern title this year, are to carry Tar Heel colors in the fast National Collegiate Athletic Association Track and Field Championships to be held this year at Soldiers Field in Chicago June 6 and 7, Coach R. A. Fetzer announced today.

The national collegiates will draw the pick of the collegians from all over the country, and will give the flying Farmer, who proved himself better than any Southern sprinter this season, a chance to see what he can do in competition with such stars as Simpson, Bracey, Tolan and others.

The N. C. A. A. ,which holds the meet each year, includes the leading colleges and universities from every section of the country, including the whole of the "Big Ten," the I. C. A. A. A. A., and the Southern Conference, and this year's meet will once more draw the pick of the nation's collegiate record breakers.

Farmer, Brown and Barkley were selected to carry University colors at the select meet on the basis of their having led the Tar Heel scorers, in order, during the successful season just closed.

Farmer, high scorer with 100 1-2 points, won the 100 and 220 dashes in every dual meet, won the 220 at the Southern Conference Meet and placed in the 100. He tied both Southern dash records, the 100 at 9.8 seconds and the 220 at 21.2.

Brown, second high scorer with 85 points, participated in discus, javelin and broadjump events, but will probably be entered in only the discus at Chicago. His best competitive mark this season was 133 feet, but he has bettered the Southern record in practice throws.

Barkley, who will enter either the half mile or mile, set a new University half-mile record this year at 1:56.5 and a new State record at 1:57, and in the mile he conquered Paul Rekers of Penn State and ran Dawson of Princeton a great race to finish a close second in a 4:20 mile. Farmer and Brown are sophomores, and Barkley a senior.

alumni clubs and various other publications and organizations, the University Alumni Association performs an invaluable service to the alumnus and to the University. It deserves the support of the class of 1930."—Gordon Gray, president Phi Beta Kappa.

"In my opinion, the class of 1930 can at present take no step which will be more beneficial to itself and to the University than that of joining and supporting every undertaking of the University Alumni Association."—J. C. Williams, editor-elect, Carolina Magazine.

"I heartily approve of work of the University Alumni Association, and I believe that every member of this year's graduating class should become a member of it. The functions that it performs—those of preserving alumni records, keeping accurate lists of University alumni and their addresses, publishing the Alumni Review and keeping the alumni in close touch with one another and with the University—are of the greatest importance." — Marion Alexander, business manager, the Tar Heel.

"Class spirit should be kept alive always. The Alumni Association offers us a wonderful opportunity to do this."—Bill Speight, debater.

"Membership in the University Alumni Association offers a splendid opportunity for members of the class of 1930 to remain actively connected with the University after graduation, and to obtain the greatest benefits of association with it."—Puny Harper, three-letter man.

"After we have graduated, we shall realize the desirability of preserving close relations with and keeping outselves informed about the activities of the University and of our classmates. The University Alumni Association is the medium through which these things can be accomplished, and every member of the class of 1930 should become a member of it."—Cy Edson, editor, Carolina Buccaneer.

* * * *

By Hugh Wilson

Another of the University's stars in the athletic line has "taken himself out of circulation" and become a Benedict, it was announced yesterday. Dave Neiman, swift forward of the basketball team and star broad jumper and pole vaulter on the track team, is the happy husband. We'd like to say newly wed, but we couldn't bear to fool you. Dave was married to Miss Gertrude Briskin of Wilmington last Christmas vacation. It seems to be becoming quite a habit for the Tar Heel athletes to undertake the solemn vows. Evan Vaughn, speedy 115 pounder on the boxing team, Jimmy Ward, star half back on the football team, and Jon Jackson, freshman half back who showed up so well in winter practice as a prospect for next year's team, are others who have been married since entering the University.

Since track, baseball, tennis, and golf have all come to an end, the minds of the sports staff have been turned toward next fall and the crack of boot on pigskin. Upon looking over prospects for next year, all indications point toward a repetition of last years success, or even a greater record, even though the squad has lost some valuable freshman prospects through their dropping out of school. Those who dropped out are: Roy McDade, tackle; Ennis Robinson, guard; Sharkey, a tackle; Zovesus, another guard; and others less known. McDade was considered an especially fine prospect for a varsity berth next fall, and his loss was a heavy blow.

On the other hand, the number of star freshmen returning to school is much larger than the number dropping out. Among the best of these are Jackson, half back; Stewart Chandler, a quarterback of whom great things are expected in the future; Frank Smith, husky tackle; Erwin Walker, end; Herb Newcomb, guard; Archie Davis, guard and captain of the frosh track team; Hodges, a center converted into a tackle during winter practice; Allen, a center; Grier, a center; Ferebee, an end; Landis, a fullback; Peacock, quarterback; Nichols, end; Philpot, guard; Croom, Daniels and McNeil, backs.

The varsity reserves and ineligibles during the past season should furnish plenty of material next fall. Bob Blackwood, letterman in 1928 and ineligible in 1929, will be in there fighting for one of the guard posts. Other men who will be in the thick of the contest for a guard post are: Ellis Crew, Ellis Fysal and Jimmy Hudson. Fysal, a fullback in his freshman year, was converted into a guard last year and justified the coaches' judgment in shifting him by his fine work last fall, especially during the last part of the season. Ned Lipscomb will be back at center, capably understudied by Red Gilbreath. At the tackles, the positions left vacant by Adkins and Koenig will be capably filled by Thompson and Dortch. The ends should be well taken care of by Brown, Nelson, Parsley, and Fenner, if he returns to school. As to backs, who could want more than Carolina has! House, Branch, Wyrick, Magner, Erickson, Slusser, Nash, and a host of others, as well as the freshmen.

Tennessee looks like the toughest assignment on the Tar Heel card for next year. The whole schedule is plenty tough, especially at the start, with Tennessee, Georgia and Georgia Tech bunched close together at the start.

M. H. JONES GOES TO FAYETTEVILLE

M. Haynsworth Jones, coach of the Chapel Hill high school for the past year, left yesterday for Fayetteville to conclude arrangements preparatory to taking up his duties as coach at Fayetteville high school next year.

As a result of his successful work at the local high school this year Mr. Jones has had several offers from other schools in this state, but the Fayetteville position, being in the A class in high school athletics, offered him the best opportunity for advancement in his field.

Graduated from Clemson A & M College of South Carolina in 1928, Mr. Jones began his career as athletic director of the Whiteville, N. C. high school in the fall of the same year, and at a considerable advance in salary came to Chapel Hill last September.

Working with a paucity of material for his athletic teams, Jones has had marked success in coaching here. Last fall his football team lost only two games, one to Durham and one to an unusually strong Oxford eleven. His success in basketball was no less marked, his team going through a heavy schedule of games with only two defeats in B class contests, and reaching the second round of the state tournament at Raleigh only to be eliminated by a one-point defeat.

Mr. Jones is a native of South Carolina, his home being in Florence. Before going to Fayetteville he is planning to spend the greater part of the summer at Myrtle Beach, S. C.

Fight Results

Word was received last night as the Daily Tar Heel was going to press that Bill Middlekauf, who was scheduled to meet Ad Warren in the feature bout in Durham last night, would not fight and the bout was cancelled.

In the semi-finals, Ox Shuford knocked out Bill Suggs in the sixth round. Suggs put up a strong fight and was holding his own until the fourth round when Shuford launched a body attack which gave him the victory.

smile as their lawyer, Bob Graham, delivers his speech; perhaps they may become a bit pensive as the class poem is read by John Mebane, and even in their recently acquired worldliness may feel a lump of sadness rise in their throats, in the manner of past generations of Carolina graduates; and, as in bygone days, they will hear the class statistician, Bill Bobbitt, and the prophet, Cy Edson.

On the afternoon of Class Day the annual senior orations to decide the winner of the Mangum medal will be given in Gerrard hall at 3:30 o'clock.

The reception of the seniors and their guests at the president's home will be followed by the class banquet in Swain hall at 7 o'clock. At this time the class of 1930 will select its permanent officers, who at other commencements will appear on Alumni Day to speak for their class.

No doubt, as in the past, in strained and dignified silence, the graduates will hear the baccalaureate sermon, to be preached by Dr. Walter L. Lingle, president of Davidson College, in the Methodist church at 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

Sunday's program will be concluded with a concert at 4 o'clock by the University Band, on the campus, and vesper services, conducted by "Parson" Moss at 7:30 at Davie Poplar.

At 10:30 on Monday Alumni Day will start with a meeting of the alumni in Gerrard hall. There and at the alumni luncheon, at 1 o'clock in Swain hall, back-slapping and jovial solicitations will be the order of the day.

And then, on Tuesday, the big day!

NEW LAW REVIEW OUT JUNE FIRST

"Making Lawyers" Heads List of Valuable Contributions.

"Making Lawyers" is the title of the leading article in the June issue of the North Carolina Law Review, which will be ready for distribution on June 1st. In this article, Professor John Dickson, of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, makes suggestions toward the training of law students to meet the complicated business and social conditions of the present day. He would arrange the law school curriculum to meet the tendency to specialization in the practice of law by placing the fundamental law school courses in the first two years of study and permitting specialization in the third year in whatever lines the particular student desires to follow.

Mr. W. M. Hendren, prominent attorney of Winston-Salem, N. C., writes an article on "The Chief Justice of the United States" in which he shows the significance of the investigations by the United States Senate into the economic and social attitudes of nominees for the Supreme Court.

Allen K. Smith, Student Editor-in-Chief of the Law Review, contributes an article on "Nine Months of Workmen's Compensation in North Carolina" in which are discussed the decisions of the North Carolina Industrial Commission during the first nine months of their existence. The power of the Commission to compel witnesses to testify and other interesting cases are dealt with.

The recent holding of the North Carolina Supreme Court that a man may be convicted of the "purchase" of liquor under the Turlington Act gives rise to an interesting student comment. This holding is contrary to a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, but it happens that the North Carolina statute contains the word "purchase" in its list of offenses. Few people in this state realize that it is just as bad to "buy" liquor as to "sell" it.

Another student comment concerns equal and separate accommodations on busses and in bus stations for Negro passengers in North Carolina. The student comments include such other topics as Accord and Satisfaction, Agency, Bills and Notes, Carriers, Conflict of Laws, Public Utilities, Contracts, Corporations, Criminal Law, Damages, Mortgages, Municipal Bonds, Property, Taxation and Negligence.

In connection with the proposed constitutional amendment to increase the Supreme Court to seven members some statistics are computed to show the amount of work which the North Carolina Supreme Court does in comparison with the Supreme Courts of the other states in this country. If the statistics mean anything, they clearly demonstrate the need of some relief for the North Carolina Supreme Court, which in 1929 disposed of 429 cases or an average of 86 per judge. This is the highest record in the United States.

Announcement is made of the Hill Law Review Prize of Fifty Dollars to Harry Rockwell of Greensboro, N. C., and the Phi Delta Phi Law Review Prize to John H. Anderson, Jr., Chapel Hill. This issue of the Law Review brings to a close a most successful year in the history of the North Carolina Law Review. James H. Chadbourn, of Wilmington, N. C., has been selected as Editor-in-Chief for 1930-31.

Deke Trophy

The fast work of the Durham Engraving Company and the speedy driving of a certain interested young man are responsible for the appearance of the above Deke Trophy.

A very harassed young fellow appeared in the Orange Printshop last night, anxiously inquiring if this picture might be used today in the last issue of the Tar Heel provided that he returned by 9 o'clock.

"It can't be done," said the countenance of the foreman, but his reply was, "If you can get it here by that time."

The young man failed. He did not return by 9 o'clock. But at 9:03 he appeared as if by some miracle, beside the linotype machine, newly made cut in hand.

"Here it is," he said, "the man began it at ten minutes to eight, and finished at 8:30."

If you know anything about engraving, that's a record for making a zinc plate. On the other hand, thirteen minutes is too confound long for a drive from Durham.

Incidentally, Zeta Psi won the trophy. It is on display at Pritchard-Lloyd's drug store.

Hickerson Prepares Analysis Manuscript

The manuscript for a book entitled "Analysis of Continuous Beams and Frames," and including numerous original tables and illustrative drawings, has been prepared by Professor T. F. Hickerson, of the engineering school, for publication during the coming summer by the McGraw-Hill Book Company of New York.

This book will contain new and useful matter dealing with the design of buildings, bridges, and other structures, mainly in the field of monolithic, reinforced concrete construction.

COMMITTEE FROM RAILROAD VISITS CAROLINA CAMPUS

Laborers and Officials From Norfolk And Southern Inspect University.

Three hundred and fifty members of the Personnel Relief Association of the Norfolk and Southern railroad visited the University yesterday morning from 11 until 12 o'clock. Those making the trip to the University were officials of the company and laborers. They were met back of the library by a committee composed of Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Henry Johnston, Jr., Grady Leonard, Edward Scheidt, and J. M. Saunders, secretary of the General Alumni Fund. The party went to Kenan stadium, and there they were addressed by Mr. Saunders who told them of the history and future plans of the University.

After visiting the stadium they came to South building by way of the new dormitories, the arboretum and Davie Poplar. At South they were met by Dr. Chase, where they were extended an official welcome to the University.

From the University the members left for Duke to visit the campus there. They will return to Raleigh tonight and have a banquet which will end the trip.

WAR AGAINST MOSQUITOES

Starting next Wednesday the weekly mosquito eradication campaign is to be inaugurated by town officials. This is to be kept up all summer.

All the creeks and places of stagnant water are to be covered with a mixture of disinfectant, kerosene and used cylinder oil.

McIntosh Speaks

Mrs. C. E. McIntosh, executive secretary of the school of education, was the principal speaker at the commencement exercises of Pantego high school last night. Mrs. McIntosh accompanied him to Pantego, whence they will go on a fishing party with friends today.

Students in Old East dormitory received a sudden shock Thursday afternoon as a bolt of lightning struck a large oak tree near Alumni building, splitting the bark of the tree from top to bottom.

GERMAN CLUB FINAL DANCES JUNE 10-12

VOLUME XXXVIII | CHAPEL HILL, N. C., TUESDAY, JUNE 10, 1930 | NUMBER 185

Address By Dr. Finley Today Concludes 136th Commencement

GARDNER IS TO AWARD DIPLOMAS

Commencement Speaker Is Man Of National Prominence, Educator, Editor, and Author.

SOME 350 TO GRADUATE

The 136th annual commencement of the University will come to a close this morning when Dr. John H. Finley, editor of the New York Times, will deliver the final address and O. Max Gardner, governor of the state, will award diplomas to some 350 seniors.

Except in event of rain, this morning's program will be carried out in the shade of the venerable Davie Poplar. The seniors will form their procession at Alumni building, close by the Poplar. Should rain threaten to interrupt the exercises, the Methodist church auditorium will again be pressed into service.

Dr. Finley, the commencement speaker, is a man of activity and national prominence. During his career of educator, author, and editor he has been identified with innumerable institutions of nationwide scope and has held positions of responsibility and influence.

The list of honors that he has received in his rise to the editorship of the largest and most efficient news gathering agency in the world reads as a page from fiction.

After receiving his A.B. and M.A. degrees from Knox College he was given other honorary citations from fifteen institutions. As an educator he has taught at Princeton University, has been president of Knox Col-

Today's Speaker

Dr. John H. Finley, (above), distinguished educator and editor, will deliver the Commencement address here this morning at 11 o'clock. Dr. Finley, who is now editor of the New York Times, has served at different times as president of New York University, of the College of the City of New York, and of Knox College, and as Commissioner of the State of New York.

GEORGE COFFMAN HEAD OF ENGLISH DEPARTMENT HERE

Scholar of International Reputation Accepts Offer of University; To Leave Boston University.

Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the department of English at Boston University for the last five years, and a scholar of international reputation, has been elected to succeed the late Dr. James F. Royster as head of the department of English here, President Harry W. Chase announced recently.

A University faculty committee consisting of George Coffin Taylor, chairman, Addison Hibbard and W. F. Thrall has for several months been considering various scholars for the important post left vacant by the death of Dr. Royster, and Dr. Coffman was the first choice of that committee. Dr. Coffman has the unanimous endorsement of the English department. He was a member of the Summer School faculty here two years ago, and all who met him then were very favorably impressed.

The election of Dr. Coffman will come up for approval at the commencement meeting of the University's trustees, but in this instance that is regarded as a mere formality.

Dr. Coffman is regarded as an international authority on medieval drama. He is secretary of the Medieval Academy of America, and has been given chief credit for the organization of that famous institution. In research and administrative ability he is said to rank with the foremost scholars in the country.

Dr. Coffman is a native of Montana, is married, and is 48 years of age. He won his doctorate at the University of Chicago. Before going to Boston University he had taught at Harvard and at Grinnell. He has been spending the present scholastic year in Europe on leave of absence.

The new head of the English department has achieved considerable reputation as a writer and magazine contributor.

MOSS CONDUCTS SENIOR VESPER SERVICES SUNDAY

Advises Seniors To Be Wise As Serpents, Harmless As Doves.

"Be ye wise as serpents and as harmless as doves," was the admonition Dr. W. D. Moss, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church, gave University of North Carolina seniors in a special message he delivered to them at the annual Vesper Services under the venerable Davie Poplar Sunday evening.

Dr. Moss has conducted this feature of Commencement for many years, and it seems fitting that he should do so, for Chapel Hill has never had a pastor who has been held in more affectionate regard by students and townspeople alike than "Parson" Moss. He has served as pastor here for 20 years.

The service was made all the more impressive by the fact that it was held at twilight, just as the setting sun cast its shadow over the campus.

"The serpent has a head full of knowledge. The dove is interested in living," Dr. Moss explained. "In the injunction, therefore, of Jesus, the serpent stands for the process of education and the dove for the process of living."

Dr. Moss said that living, like that of the dove, divorced from knowledge, issues in all manner of foolish things. Knowledge like that of the serpent, divorced from the gentle art of living, becomes a hard and fast and formal thing. Hence the injunction of Jesus.

LANG IS WINNER MANGUM MEDAL

Oratory Contest, Class Day Exercises, and Senior Banquet Given Saturday.

Ideal weather prevailed and the University's 136th commencement got off to a fine start Saturday.

Following the senior prayers Saturday morning, the members of the graduating class gathered for class day exercises in Gerrard hall where the merits and foibles of the seniors were laid bare in good-natured humor.

Johnston Alexander, of Charlotte, gave the history of the class: Cy Edson, of Tampa, Fla., gave the prophecy; Bill Bobbitt, of Rocky Mount, presented the statistics, and John Mebane of Greensboro read the class poem. Ralph Greene, class president, presided.

Wins Oratory Medal

John Lang, of Carthage, was the winner of the Mangum medal contest in oratory which was held Saturday afternoon in Gerrard hall. The other speaker was G. P. Carr, of Teacheys. Mr. Lang's subject was "Whither Young America?" while Mr. Carr spoke on "World War Debts and the Present Economic Depression."

"Young America has problems to solve and difficult situations to meet which are just as vital and important to civilization as the problems of any other age," Lang declared. "The younger generation is being told by many of its elders to wait until better times before it tries to do much toward helping to solve these problems. Young America intends to face the world with open minds, resolute action and with a strong determination to bring about the most satisfactory settlement of every problem that concerns our age," he asserted.

The judges were Dean C. T. McCormick, of the law school; Prof. W. A. Olsen, of the English department, and Prof. S. A. Emery of the philosophy department.

History of Medal

The Mangum medal was established in 1878 by the Misses Mangum, late of Orange county, in memory of their father, Willie Pearson Mangum, class of 1815. The award is being continued by his grand daughter, Mrs. Stephen B. Weeks and his great grandson, Julian Turner.

STRONG FACULTY FOR LAW SCHOOL

Summer School Course to Have Many New Men as Teachers; Dean Moreland of W. & L. To Be Here.

Dean William Haywood Moreland of the Washington and Lee University law school has been added to the summer faculty of the law school, according to announcement by Dean Charles T. McCormick.

Dean McCormick has announced also that other members of the summer law faculty will be Judges W. J. Brogden and George W. Connor of the North Carolina Supreme Court, Prof. James M. Landis and William E. McCurdy of Harvard University, Prof. Oliver S. Rundell of the University of Wisconsin, Prof. Armistead M. Dobie of the University of Virginia, and Profs. R. H. Wettach and Fred B. McCall of the University of North Carolina law faculty.

Dean Moreland will take the place of Prof. M. S. Breckenridge, who as accepted a job with the government in Washington this summer.

Dean Moreland is to teach the introductory course in procedure in the first term of the summer law school. He is regarded as one of the outstanding teachers of that subject in this section of the country. He practiced for eight years in Norfolk, Va., and has been for the last seven years dean at Washington and Lee.

During the past several years the Law School summer session has been attracting an increasing number of students from this and other states, who are interested in the opportunity of taking courses under men who are selected as leading exponents of their subjects, chosen from the entire country. The summer session offers likewise the unique opportunity of studying under distinguished appellate judges who bring from the bench directly their acquaintance with law in action.

The summer session also brings to Chapel Hill a goodly number of men who, by beginning the study of law in the summer and continuing their work winter and summer, can complete the regular law course for the degree in slightly more than two years instead of the usual three years.

Commencement Dances Recall Interesting Events of the Past

(By Walter Creech)

On Tuesday night, when the music from Guy Lombardo's orchestra floats out upon the air as hundreds of happy couples take the floor in the first of six University Commencement dances, the setting will not be in the gymnasium, as for years past, but in that large athletic building known as the "Tin Can," which will be artificially cooled by refrigeration. To accomodate the record number of dancers expected, science has been called into service to keep participants more comfortable than in years past, when luck and the weather played a predominant part. This year the air in the "Tin Can" will be kept scientifically at the proper temperature.

A few years ago, such a suggestion would have been termed absurd, impossible, just as the payment of a fabulous sum for an orchestra would have been hooted as unheard of.

Dancing at the University has gone through many changes during its growth in popularity, until today the girls of this and many other states look upon the Commencement dances here as an outstanding event of the kind in the South. Dancing has had its set-backs also.

How They Began

Dancing at commencement runs back to the first few years of the University. It is true that "the first Commencement was a staid and dignified occasion without dancing and parties to appeal to young people," Dr. Kemp P. Battle says in his "History of the University of North Carolina." But it was only a few years later, in 1804, when the faculty allowed a com-

Trustees Select Frank Graham for Presidency

Elected President

Professor Frank Porter Graham (above) was selected yesterday by the board of trustees to succeed Dr. Harry W. Chase as president of the University.

POPULAR HISTORY PROFESSOR WILL SUCCEED CHASE

Prominent as Teacher, Scholar, Speaker, and Reform Leader.

TO BE 11TH PRESIDENT

(By Billy McKee)

At the meeting of the board of trustees in the pharmacy building Professor Frank Porter Graham was elected president of the University. Mr. Graham has been for the last sixteen years a member of the history department and has been connected with the University for twenty-five years altogether. He succeeds Dr. Harry W. Chase and is the eleventh president of the institution.

President Graham comes from a family of educators, and his cousin, the late Edward Kidder Graham, was a former president of the University.

He entered the University in 1905, graduating four years later with an A.B. degree. He war known as an all-round student, being secretary of Phi Beta Kappa, member of the Golden Fleece, Gimghouls and many other activities. Both during his student days and since he has had the peculiar knack of being able to associate with every element in the student body and win its confidence.

In 1914 Mr. Graham accepted an appointment as instructor in the history department of the University, and after returning to Chapel Hill after the war he was made assistant professor, also serving for two years as Dean of Students. In 1921 he was appointed associate professor and received a leave of absence to study.

He won the Amherst Fellowship entitling him to a year's study in America and one in Europe. Returning to the University he was made a full professor in 1927.

'OLD GRADS' HEAR SEVERAL TALKS ON ALUMNI DAY

Chase Delivers Farewell Address; Parker, Weil, Daniels Speak Also.

BINGHAM DEBATE HELD

(By Gabriel M. Cohen)

Respectable gentlemen of the 80's and 90's; proud middle-aged business men of the early 1900's; fledgling alumni of 1929; and the thrilled class of 1930; followed by their friends and relatives, thronged the University campus yesterday to rejoin hands in the ancient Carolina fellowship.

The ceremonies opened with a general meeting of the reuning classes in aged Gerrard hall. General information of the event of the day and joyous handshaking and renewing of "auld" acquaintanceships were the order of the meeting.

Sad because of his parting from the University, and reluctance to break the ties of friendship formed in his long career at the University, Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, retiring president of the University, made his farewell speech in a voice tinged with repressed tears. "I feared with reluctance this parting moment," President Chase said.

Interspersing a note of optimism with the regret over his departure, President Chase prophesied future greatness for the University. He thanked the alumni and the faculty for the co-operation shown him at all times while many in the audience touched their eyes with handkerchiefs.

An inspiring talk by Judge John H. Parker, immediately following the report of the Alumni Loyalty Fund by Leslie H. Weil, dissipated the feeling of regret left by Dr. Chase's farewell. "The adversity of this year may be good for the University," Judge Parker stated.

Subtly chiding the alumni for wishing a "god" for president of the University, Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the Navy, maintained that the good work of the University shall go forward regardless of who shall be chosen president.

The reuning classes met at class banquets last night with the majority of the affairs at the Carolina Inn.

RUSS BOLIN PLAYS FOR ALUMNI BALL

Affair in Tin Can Precedes President's Reception.

Russ Bolin and his Ohio Cotton Pickers played for the Alumni Ball here last night. This orchestra has been popular in this section in recent months, playing at a number of college dances.

The Alumni Ball is one of the high spots of the Commencement program each year. All alumni were invited to the ball, which followed President Chase's reception to the alumni. No individual invitations were sent out this year.

The ball was held in the Tin Can where the regular German Club finals will begin this evening. Cooling and ventilating devices are being installed there to make the indoor athletic field comfortable.

In charge of the Alumni ball were the alumni marshals, with Dr. Hubert Haywood, of Raleigh, chief marshal, directing. Assistant marshals include: G. Claiborne Royall, Jr., of Goldsboro; Henry P. Foust, of Greensboro, and James R. Patton, Jr., of Durham. Some of the State's most popular matrons accepted invitations to serve as patronesses.

The Daily Tar Heel

Greetings

To the alumni and friends of the University who are visiting Chapel Hill this week the Daily Tar Heel offers a belated welcome. To those who become alumni today we offer congratulations.

We see a great University here. The work of this institution will be revealed through the accomplishments of those to whom it has granted degrees. Your achievements will reflect glory on the University. Likewise, your failures will detract glory from it. As you have been to the University for the past four years, so will you be to it throughout your life.

Your college education will be just what you make it. When you receive your degrees this morning you will be rewarded for the preliminary training which you have received from Carolina. But your relationship to your alma mater does not end today. Henceforth you are Carolina alumni.

As alumni of the University you can do a great deal more for us than those who are students. But it will be for you to make the decision. Considering the present crisis, we await anxiously your decision.

Well, With Your Help

The new president of the University with these words, simply and feelingly delivered, has accepted the position of honor and responsibility for which he is well-fitted. The alumni and the students receive the news of Professor Graham's election with deepest interest and heartfelt appreciation for what he has done in the past. No single man comes to mind who has more endeared himself to the student body as a whole, who has given greater evidence of ability, or who understands the University and its needs more than Professor Frank Porter Graham. The Daily Tar Heel, speaking for the student body, welcomes President Graham and pledges itself to help him fulfill, insofar as it is possible, the promise and hope expressed in the simple words with which he accepted the eleventh presidency of the University. —H. J. G.

Carolina's Sons Return

For several days now the staid old University campus has been dotted here and there by alumni of various classes, chatting and reminiscencing concerning the pleasures of former days. Strange as it may seem to the present student body of the University, the things which linger longest in the minds of alumni are not "book larnin'" and frolics; most of them talk of the impressions which great teachers made upon them while they were young and tender. Such names as Battle, Alderman, Graham, Venable, and Williams are certain to be mentioned in any chat between the "old boys."

Many alumni see before them this morning a campus which bears little resemblance to that which they knew a seemingly negligible number of years ago. The small liberal arts college which was the University of North Carolina in other days has become the South's leading institution of higher learning. This transformation is due largely to the efforts of Carolina's sons who have gone out into the businesses of the state. Well may the class of 1930 consider these things and strive to effect equal advancement in the Greater Carolina of tomorrow.

J. C. WILLIAMS.

Pen Points

By H. J. Galland

Since this issue is the last one
And no more shall we appear,
This colyum is our swan song—
And we hope you'll shed a tear.

As we turn our sad gaze backward
At the bad stuff and the worse
That has appeared in Pen Points
We are moved to softly curse.

There have been some pretty bad cracks
And many not so wise,
But good or bad we've never socked
A fellow not our size.

Looking back upon the year, then,
With a jaundiced eye grown old,
We find there's much that's happened
That will often be retold.

When the Class of 1930
Gets together by the Well
In the dim and distant future,
There are many things they'll tell:

Ray Farris led a football team
That was mighty near to great,
And poor old doomed Memorial
Was reduced to sorry state.

The girls played basketball again
In abbreviated pants
While Gym and Inn were scenes of
Many a well-attended dance.

The firemen were busy
Fighting fires 'round the town;
What the flames didn't get at
They generally tore down.

Professor Koch played in a show
And for weeks thereafter told
Of the nasty way they cut him up
For being a duellist bold.

The President received a chance
To leave this ancient place
So the trustees met in Raleigh
To find another Chase.

The Tar Heel came out daily
Adding to the campus woe,
And Charlie Price looked mighty hard,
But couldn't find a foe.

The Golden Fleece elected,
And no one raised a howl,
While girls got in the famous Phi—
And still there was no yowl.

The Carolina price-warred,
And the Laundry got a shirt
From which they took the buttons
So the wearer wouldn't be hurt.

This colyumist wrote reams and reams
Of pretty awful stuff—
And—stop—we'll beat you to it,
He now has done enough.

No more the lance is levelled,
We turn the battle over
To some more worthy knight than we,
And lead our nag to clover.

Retiring President

Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase will be duly honored by the University at the final commencement exercises today for the admirable service which he has rendered the institution during the past decade. Serving for ten years as president of the University, he has brought it nation-wide prominence through his activity. So outstanding has been his work that the period of his administration has become known as the "Chase decade."

CHASE CONCLUDES SUCCESSFUL TERM

Retiring President Has Been Instrumental In Creating National Reputation For U. N. C.

This week brings to an end one of the most successful and progressive administrations in the history of the University of North Carolina. At the head of this institution during the past decade has been Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase.

The changes brought about during the "Chase decade" have been instrumental in placing the University of North Carolina among the leading institutions in the country. There have been growths in all phases of the University life. The student enrollment in 1920 was 800, and the faculty numbered 75. Now 2700 are registered as students in Chapel Hill, and there are 225 members in the faculty. The addition of the school of public welfare and the school of commerce and the reorganization of the law and engineering schools have all taken place since 1920.

When Dr. Chase took over the reins the University was getting $217,000 for maintenance and nothing for buildings and permanent improvements. A decade later the University was getting $880,000 for maintenance and $610,000 for permanent improvements.

Eight dormitories for men and one for women have been erected in the last ten years. Saunders, Murphey, Manning, Venable, and Bingham halls, all classroom and departmental structures, have been built. Besides, there is the new library, the largest and most beautiful building on the campus.

Perhaps the most significant advancement of this Chase decade has been the national publicity that this institution has received. In 1920 the University was only an average state institution, but today it is spoken of by practically all of the national educators as an outstanding university. Membership in Association of American Universities helps to show how this university is rated by the other universities in the country.

President Chase has been, probably more than any other person, responsible for this great advancement. Dr. Chase, who lived in Chapel Hill since 1910, was, prior to his election, dean of the college of liberal arts and later chairman of the faculty. Born in Massachusetts in 1883, he graduated from Dartmouth College in 1904 with the degree of A. B. and four years later from the same college he received his M. A. degree. In 1910 he was granted the Ph. D. degree at Clark University.

Dr. Chase was offered the position of professor of the philosophy of education at a salary of $2500 at this university. He took the place. In 1918 the death of President Graham forced Dr. Chase into the limelight. Dr. Stacy, then dean of the college of liberal arts, was appointed chairman of the faculty, and Dr. Chase was asked to take Dean Stacy's place. Then two months after the death of Dr. Graham, Dean Stacy died from the same influenza epidemic. The double loss of two great leaders staggered the University. The result was that the trustees elected the 35-year old psychologist chairman of the faculty. In June, 1919 the trustees elected Dr. Chase president, contrary to predictions.

PRESS RELEASES HOBBS' BOOK ON NORTH CAROLINA

Economic and Social Status of State Text of Recent Book By University Professor.

"North Carolina: Social and Economic" is the title of a 400-page book issued by the University Press last week.

For North Carolina readers it is regarded as the most important and pertinent book brought out by the Press this year.

The book explores every phase of North Carolina's social and economic life. The author is Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., of the rural social-economics department of the University, and his findings are based on 15 years of close study, observation, and teaching state affairs.

The conclusions are authentically substantiated by many tables, charts and official information of every description.

The volume is dedicated to Dr. E. C. Branson, head of the rural social - economics department, "The nation's outstanding regional social engineer," with whom Dr. Hobbs has been associated since the founding of the department.

"This book is, so far as we know, the first of its kind to appear in the United States," says the announcement of the University Press. "It is an unbiased and factual account and analysis of a single state: North Carolina.

"Everybody knows that it is the state that tobacco put on the map, that has some of the best motor highways in the world, that lures golfers, textile mills, power site seekers, furniture makers, collegians, cotton growers, and tenant farmers. But what else is known? Does the state—or the rest of the country, for that matter—know the extent of the tobacco industry, the highway system, the amount of horse power and kilowatt hours produced, how many pieces of furniture are turned out, what sort of education our young students find, how the cotton farmer lives and what happens to his cotton, how many men are landless in proportion to the number that work the land? Where North Carolinians came from—how many left—and why? How many read? How many can't? How many have money in the bank, a cow in the pasture, an automobile in the garage, and butter in the frigidaire?

"This book tells you all of that and more. It should find its way into public libraries, school libraries, into the hands of teachers, newspaper editors, and all those interested in knowing the facts about this state or in a position to direct similar study of other states. We cannot overemphasize the value of the book both as a mine of information and as a model of unprejudiced yet sympathetic approach to an analysis of the home state."

Dr. Knight's Book Given High Rating

Dr. Edgar W. Knight's recent book, "Education in the United States," was listed by the April issue of the Journal of the National Education Association among the 60 important educational books of 1929 and quoted as being among the best.

The list, which is prepared annually for the American Library Association and the Journal of the National Educational Association, was this year made up from nearly 600 books in the field of education from scorings and comments of more than 200 specialists throughout the United States.

Medal Winner

John A. Lang of Carthage was the winner of the Mangum Memorial Medal in the senior oratory contest held Saturday afternoon in Gerrard hall. His subject was "Whither Young America?" His opponent was G. P. Carr of Teachy.

Trackmen Close Season With Conference Title

FARMER LEADING SCORER ON TEAM

Tar Heels Take Conference and State Crowns; Lose Only One Dual Meet; Set Carolina and Tech Relay Records.

TAKE 9TH STATE TITLE

The flying sophomore Charlie Farmer led the point-getters for the University of North Carolina's Southern Conference track champions during the highly successful season just closed, an official summary of season results disclosed today.

Farmer scored 100 1-2 points. He won the 100 and 220 dashes in every dual meet, won the 220 at the Southern Conference meet and placed in the 100, and tied both Southern dash records.

Another sophomore was second honor man, Theron Brown rolling up 85 points on consistent work in the discus, javelin and broadjump. Minor Barkley, senior distance ace, came third with 65 points gathered on fine races in the half mile and mile.

The season was considered one of the best of a number of fine track seasons Carolina has had in the nine-year regime of Coach R. A. Fetzer, who is generally regarded as the dean of Southern track.

Besides winning the Southern title, the Tar Heels took their 9th straight State title, and won every dual meet except from the strong Princeton team by at least 25 points. Their victories included the strong Penn squad and Washington and Lee's Southern Indoor Champions.

In the State meet the Fetzer legion triumphed by a tremendous margin, scoring 76.8 points while N. C. State came second with 26, trailed by Davidson, Duke, Wake Forest and High Point in order named.

In the Southern meet the Tar Heels scored first on 40 1-2 points, followed by Georgia with 28, and trailed in order by Mississippi A. & M., Tulane, Auburn, L. S. U., Tennessee, N. C. State, Georgia Tech, Alabama, Vanderbilt, Kentucky, Maryland, and Duke.

Charlie Farmer and the Tar Heel relay teams also carried off principal honors at the Georgia Tech relays, where the Tar Heel entries set four of six new records.

Seven University records went down before their stellar work, and an eighth mark was tied. Farmer tied the 100-yard mark at 9.8 seconds and lowered the 220-mark to 21.2. Other new records were credited to the half and mile relay teams, and to Barkley, half-mile, 1:56.5; Neiman, broadjump, 22 feet 5 3-4; Bagby, high jump, 6 feet 1-4 inch; Arnold, vault 13 feet.

The other leading Tar Heel point-winners, trailing Farmer, Brown and Barkley, were Slusser 54, Gay 45, Perry 41 1-2, Arnold 33 1-3, Baucom 33, Bagby 33, Neiman 32 1-3, Adkins 32, Weil 24, Lowry 22, Johnson 20 1-2, Nims 18 1-4.

Looking Them Over

by

Browning Roach

The recent fiasco of the Warren-Middlekauf bout scheduled at Durham leaves ring authorities still in the dark as to the relative standing of the ex-collegiate pugilists. The four outstanding ex-college boys in the ring game are Marriner of Illinois, Middlekauf of Florida, Warren of North Carolina and Hansen of Nebraska, all of whom fight in the heavyweight division.

Hansen having been knocked out several times in recent bouts, Marriner's record carries a trifle more prestige than any of the others of the college quartette, while the winner of the Warren-Middlekauf fight—had it taken place—would have been advanced a notch or two in his professional standing.

Besides Add Warren, the card for the light at Durham carried the names of four other Carolina men. Ox Shuford, class of '29 and football star, scored a decisive knockout over Bill Suggs, another Carolina man and a fullback in football, while Add Warren's brother John, and Obie Davis, both class of '31 and lettermen in boxing, saw action in the preliminaries. Carolina men almost had a corner on that ring program.

A glance over the records shows that Carolina's performances in athletics for the past year were not at all bad. In football the Tar Heels made it nine out of ten games, scoring four shut-out victories, allowing only one team to register more than one touchdown against them while they themselves scored more than 40 points on half their opponents and never scored less than twice in any game, and piling up 346 points to be second in the nation in scoring while letting their opponents get an average of six points a game.

In basketball the Tar Heels did a little better than break even with ten wins and nine losses. In baseball they turned in a similar record of 13 games won and 12 lost. In boxing, Carolina had a successful season, losing only two of eight matches to the strong Penn State and Florida boxers.

Out of seven track meets Carolina came through six of them with large-score victories and lost only to the Princeton Tigers, who boast an unusually strong squad of individual and collective stars. In addition, the Tar Heels captured the state and southern conference crowns and set four new records in the Georgia Tech relays. Carolina records in the 220, half-mile run, broad jump, high jump and pole vault were set by members of the 1930 track team and the 100 yard dash record was equaled.

For the fourth consecutive time Carolina annexed the Southern conference title in cross country, and won two out of three dual meets. The tennis team went through a very successful season, winning 12 dual matches and tying one and holding within its ranks the state titles for both singles and doubles. In golf, men representing Carolina won seven out of nine matches played, with the margin of victory in both matches which were lost being 9 1-2 to 8 1-2.

This year, more than ever before, intramural athletics has reached a point of interest in which it actually rivalled varsity competition in off-seasons for major sports. In the fall dormitory and fraternity leagues had teams representing them in tag football, cross country and track. In the winter intramurals consisted of basketball in the main, while in the spring interest in intramural athletics reached a climax as competition grew keen in boxing, wrestling, track, baseball, tennis, fencing, horseshoes and decathalon. It is estimated that nearly forty percent of the men at the University this year took part in intramural athletics of some form.

Kay Kyser Returns For Southern Tour

Kay Kyser and his popular dance orchestra, which has just finished a 10-month engagement at the Bamboo Garden in Cleveland, Ohio, are now on a tour of the South during which they will play 18 engagements.

Kyser will wind up his tour with the June German and Country Club dances in Rocky Mount, June 20 and 21, and then take his orchestra back north into New England.

TAR-HEEL-TEAMS-WIN-TEN-CHAMPIONSHIPS

Winning 10 athletic championships in one year is no ordinary feat, but teams representing the University of North Carolina during the collegiate year 1929-30 have done just that.

The Tar Heels lay claim to three Southern Conference titles, namely, the track and cross-country championships and the tea mtitle in tennis, and to seven state championships, namely, football, cross-country, boxing, wrestling, track, tennis, and golf. That makes the total of 10.

The record is believed to be as good as any in the South for the year 1929-30 and to rank with the best in the country.

It is the second consecutive year that the Tar Heels have won ten championships. Last year they won the Southern Conference titles in cross-country and boxing and eight state championships.

Pictured above are the captains of the championship teams and two men who have been chiefly responsible for directing the University's successful athletic policy—Charles T. Woollen, Graduate Manager of Athletics, and Robert A. Fetzer, Director of Athletics.

The captains are Ray Farris, of Charlotte, football; Minor Barkley, Statesville, cross-country; Archie Allen, Raleigh, boxing; Wayne Woodard, Bryson City, wrestling; Dave Nims, Mount Holly, track; William Merritt, Chapel Hill, tennis, and Charlie Chatham, Elkin, golf.

Farris led the football team to a 346-point season and to second place in the nation's scoring. He was unanimously chosen All-Southern guard, and was named on some All-American selections.

Barkley led the cross-country team to a fourth consecutive Southern title, and set a new State record for the half-mile.

Allen led the boxers to another State title and to a fourth place in the Conference tournament. He was Southern Conference 135-pound champion year before last and a 145-pound finalist last year.

Woodard captained the wrestlers to a State title, wrestled 135 pounds and did consistently good work, although handicapped part of the season by injuries. He is one of the few juniors who have captained Tar Heel teams.

Nims holds the University quarter-mile record, was leader of the State and Southern championship track team.

Merrit led the tennis team through an undefeated season to a Southern team championship.

Chatham led the Tar Heel golfers to another State title and to a season which allowed but two losses.

Southern Education Conference Will Be Held Here In Fall

The Rosenwald Fund has given the University $3,000 to enable it to hold the Southern Conference on Education again next fall.

The conference has been held here for the two past years, but the recent reduction in the Univrsity's budget threatened its suspension.

Wardlaw In Europe

Jack Wardlaw will take his five-piece orchestra to Europe for the month of August. This will make the fourth year that Wardlaw has taken an orchestra to Europe. The group has not been completed as yet, but will be composed of boys of musical ability registered in the University.

Vulgarity, not rusticity, is the opposite of good manners.—Dean Inge.

BEARD AWARDED HONORARY DEGREE

Professor Grover J. Beard, of the school of pharmacy, was awarded the honorary degree of Master of Pharmacy by the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science. This college is the oldest and in point of enrollment the largest college of pharmacy in America.

Dr. Beard has been a member of the faculty since 1909 and was this year elected president of the national conference of Pharmaceutical Association Secretaries, after having served a year as president of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy.

"Growing Larger by Serving Better"

DR. W. L. LINGLE DELIVERS SERMON TO SENIOR CLASS

New President of Davidson College Speaks Sunday On "Service."

Preaching the baccalaureate sermon at the University's 136th Commencement here Sunday morning, Dr. Walter Lee Lingle, who this past week was inaugurated as president of Davidson College, took the much overworked theme of "service" and presented it from such a fresh and original viewpoint that his message was declared one of the most inspiring delivered at University finals in years.

The services were held in the large auditorium of the new Methodist church which was well filled. Dr. Harry W. Chase, retiring president of the University, presided. Dr. Lingle took less than 40 minutes to deliver his message.

He told the 350 outgoing graduates that the best way to attain immortality was through unselfish service to others.

"Cultivate the will to work for men," he urged.

Dr. Lingle took his text from the 36th verse of the 13th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles: "For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers."

Dr. Lingle urged the University graduates to emulate the life of David. The seniors had come to the cross-roads of life where they must make a very important decision, he said. He showed how one road pointed to a life of selfishness and self-aggrandizement and how the other led to service to mankind, David chose the way of service, "and that's the way all great men and women have chosen," the Davidson president asserted.

The difference between the two roads is the difference between pagans and christians, he said. Jesus judges men and women by the service they render their fellowmen, and the greatest service that a human being can render another is to bring him to Jesus Christ, he said.

Dr. Lingle told of reading an epitaph which said: "He loved God and served his fellowman." Dr. Lingle said he would rather have that sort of inscription as his epitaph than the most high-sounding one in Westminster Abbey.

The life of John Randolph, about whom Gerald Johnson has just written a notable biography, was cited as that of a man who was able to serve others utterly without thoughts of self. Randolph, therefore, will never be forgotten. Through service he achieved his own immortality.

"The greatest temptation of people of this present age is to think only in terms of our own little world," Dr. Lingle declared. "Let the world be your path," he urged.

Seated in the pulpit with Dr. Lingle were President Chase, Rev. C. Excell Rozzelle, pastor of the Methodist church, and Rev. W. D. Moss, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Reverend Rozzelle offered the invocation, and Reverend Moss read the scripture lesson.

Several excellent vocal selections were rendered by a community choir under the direction of Prof. Harold S. Dyer, head of the music department.

Commencement Dances Recall Events of Past

mencement ball as an official part of the program. At that event, according to Dr. Battle, two students fought with knives and were seriously cut after one of the two had trod upon the toes of the other. The first Terpsichorean activities of the University community in those primitive days, prior to 1804, were confined to cotton picking parties, which ended in hilarious frolics with reels danced to the strains of a fiddle played by a lone negro. Students were prohibited from attending such frolics. In fact, the first student to be expelled from the University was sent home due to attendance at one such event. Even that time, however, the objection was not to dancing but to the frolic, as a dancing instructor was allowed to teach students the Terpsichorean art at that time.

Secret Duels Fought

The first dances at the University were held at commencement only, never during the rest of the college year. Commencements then were real occasions for the tiny village, with many a belle of those days coming from long distances, a hundred miles or more, in a four-horse stage-coach over roads which would be considered impassable in this day and time. Back in that gay past, the belles of the state attended and actually listened to every word of the Commencement program, for the ball came as a grand finale in the dining room of Stewart's hall, a big residence where the present Carr building now stands. In those days, the student body was made up of half a hundred students, French wines were served and secret duels fought.

And so for years, the Commencement ball grew in popularity, in numbers of attending girls and state dignitaries, until the building would not accomodate the crowds, when the Eagle hotel, situated where the incompleted Graham Memorial stands today, became the scene of the Commencement dances. It was about that time, somewhere in the forties, that the program was broadened and three dances were given at Commencement

Back in those days, too, the position of dance manager called for many activities. Such posts were highly sought after. These men saw to it that all beauless damsels were provided with partners, and spirited contests were conducted to gain votes for such positions. One young man spent, so the story goes, over $2,000 for whiskey to obtain votes and left the University when he could not pay that amount.

Darkies Furnished Music

At that time in the history of this institution, there were no high priced orchestras, brought in from out of the village. Negro slaves performed for the cotillions, waltzes and occasionally a reel. In 1850, upon the completion of the Smith hall, then the new library, later the law building and now the Playmakers Theatre, dancing was revolutionized. The dances were held there until 1895, on an adequate floor and between brick walls with space enough for the increased number of attendants. Dancing waned when the Civil War drew the students from the University to the battlefronts but, with the war over, Commencement dances again became even more popular. Up to that period, a supper went into the discard and the hour for ending such events was lengthened into the wee small hours.

However, sentiment in the state gradually grew in disfavor of the dances, resulting finally in enactment of a law against the holding of such events on state property. This was in 1885. But the dance went on when President Battle obtained money from alumni and a temporary structure was built just six inches outside of the campus. It was about this time also that the German Club was organized, with a fall German dance on University Day, October 12, and a Spring German.

Late Dates Then

The idea of late dates is not necessarily a modern trend, for back before the Spanish-American war it became the custom to begin such dates at daylight, after the dance was over. Back about the same time also, at many of the Germans, girls did the "breaking," an innovation which modern dances might otherwise claim as only a very recent "special stunt."

In 1920, another big step forward was made when the Order of the Grail instituted its policy of giving numerous dances during the year, open to all students. The Grail system has broken down the social barriers which had been built up and has eliminated feeling between fraternity and non-fraternity students.

Very Orderly Now

Although the history of dancing here has been checkered, it has been glorious in tradition from the time, when the devotees of Terpsichorean held forth in what the modern belle would consider shabby and ill suited halls, up to the present, when a scientifically heated building will be elaborately decorated and cooled for the enjoyment of hundreds. The dances, which began almost with the University's starting, when wine and whiskey and brawls were not uncommon, have progressed until complete order is maintained through the cooperation of the various organizations interested, with the cooperation of the faculty.
